MUST ENFORCE THE LAW.

Assistant Provincial Secretary Mulvey stated yesterday that the magistrates would in the future be requested to enforce the law respecting automobiles. The law requires that they shall be decorated with a tag in front and behind. Many automobilists have been allowed to go because the department was unable to secure the numbers fast enough, but a large supply is now on hand, and any automobilists can have no excuse for not having them. About 2,300 have been issued to date in Ontario. The license and tag costs $4, but the amount received in this way does not pay the cost incurred in the license system. Fines will be imposed on all automobilists who have not tags and licenses.

THE WICKED CURVE

The Virtue of the Straight Line in Art Is Almost Puritanical.

In art straight lines and right angles mean virtue, while curves are sinful. There does not appear to be any particular reason for this, but an example can be found in comparing the classic propriety of a Greek temple with the voluptuous curves of the Petit Trianon. The Court of Louis XV. did not tread the straight and narrow road, therefore, it is not surprising that in the furniture of that period the curve was pre-eminent. A right angle was much too proper to feel at home in such society. Still there is no particular reason why the beauties of the curve should be considered as allied to crime. For that reason one can exclaim over the Louis XV. Gourlay piano, which has just reached the warerooms of Gourlay, Winter & Leeming, and will be displayed at the Canadian National Exhibition. The piano is a perfect example of the art of the period. Rich carvings decorate its convex ends, the pillars supporting the keyboard are the soul of elegance and the only place where the straight line dwells is in the music desk, where a curve would be impossible. The polished mahogany is magnificent and the complete effect is one of luxuriance and magnificence. As for the instrument within this splendid case, all that can be said is that it is a Gourlay. This means that it is the best upright piano on the market today. Altogether the piano is one well worth going a long way to see.

THEY'RE ALL COMING

The People of Western District Looking Forward to the Fair.

Mr. A. D. Holman, advertising agent for the Western Fair Association, who has for some time been on the road with advertising matter for the great exhibition, reports people throughout the country as very enthusiastic over the Western Fair of this year.

"Of course, we are all coming," is the common expression heard by Mr. Holman in answer to his usual question: "Are you coming to London this year to the Fair?"

Everything seems to indicate a large attendance from the surrounding country. Cheap rates will prevail on all railroads leading into the city, and special arrangements are being made with regard to late trains, which will certainly be a great accommodation for visitors to the Fair, as they will have the privilege of remaining at the evening performance, and still reach home the same night.

The reserve seat plan in connection with the grand stand ought to relieve the crowding of other years, as the tickets will be for sale at some convenient place, which will soon be announced, and the public will have the privilege of reserving their seats for any particular performance, afternoon or evening, during the week. Mail orders will be received for the same in order that people living outside the city may not be at a disadvantage.

Information of all kinds regarding the Fair will be given on application to the secretary's office. Entries should be sent at once, as they close on Sept. 6th.

THE SINCEREST FLATTERY

The Envy of the Man Who Knows Your Whole History.

Pity the curious man as much as you will; he needs it. With what a grieved feeling the Man of Envy speaks of your success, disparaging your ability the while, for he knew you when you were young, knows all your history, in fact. Envy never has any praise for others. But envy is really the sincerest flattery.

The hammering of the Semi-ready tailoring has been the favorite pastime of many envious people. That which one can surpass, one does not envy, but that which is beyond one's power to approach either inspires to effort or condemnation. The hatred of the envious one is praise, and the Semi-ready tailored garments at $15 has awakened peons of praise. The Semi-ready Company take some pride in their achievements and they are broad enough to welcome those who strive to equal their tailoring.

SUPT. MOORE SEES 415,000 GALLONS ADDITIONAL WATER DOWN RIVER

Report Made to the Water Commission Yesterday—Allowed to Lay Over.

The water commissioners met yesterday afternoon, but owing to the absence of the mayor a number of important matters, including the increasing of the water supply, were left over until a special meeting to be called at an early date.

Superintendent Moore presented his report, referred to in yesterday's Advertiser. It was to the effect that something over 400,000 gallons of additional water per day can be secured down the river, but the report was not discusssed. It was as follows:

"As requested by your board, I have taken the gauges of the principal springs along the River Thames, between the present Springbank property and Kilworth, as follows:

"Morden's spring, situated on lot 28, con. 1, London Township.

"Summers' or Lawrey's springs, situated on lot 27, con. 3, London Township.

"Hobbs' spring, situated on lot 31, con. 3, London Township.

"Blizzad spring, on lot 32, con. 2, London Township.

"Kilworth Creek, situated on lot C, north of the River road, township of Delaware.

	Gallons. Per day.
Morden's spring	21,528
Summers' spring	34,473
Lawrey's spring	18,662
Hobbs' spring	157,507
Blizzard spring	52,416
	284,586
Kilworth Creek	130,636
Total	415,222

Still Further Increase.

"There is considerable wet land in the vicinity of the springs," Mr. Moore went on to say, "and by constructing intercepting drains and collecting the seepage, it is my opinion that the quantity at present showing would be increased considerably over the above measurements. All these springs can be collected and will flow by gravity to the collecting ponds at Springbank."

The report on electrolysis of mains, which has already appeared in the press, was accepted as read, and allowed to stand over.

Engineer Moore recommended that a six-inch main on Duchess avenue, and a four-inch main on Marley Place, be laid. The recommendation was adopted.

A resolution was put through to the effect that in future the newspapers shall be notified of all meetings of the commission.

Tearing Up Roads.

The London Drug and Chemical Company made application for a service at the new warehouse to be built on York street, between Richmond and Clarence streets.

Commissioner Saunders moved that the request be granted, on condition that the company pay for the repairs to the pavement.

Secretary Ellwood pointed out that the bylaws now read that a half-inch service will be put into any premises twenty feet free of charge. Under the circumstances the commission could make no stipulations regarding the pavement.

"It appears time the bylaws were changed," Mr. Saunders said.

He also suggested that on paved streets one large pipe should be run to the main, and half-inch services should be fed from it. Thus the pavements would not be continually torn up.

Secretary Ellwood said the department had looked ahead on Dundas street east, and had put in a large number of connections in front of places which have not now city water, so that when applications for services are made it will not be necessary to injure the permanent pavement.

The application of the drug company was finally left to the engineer and the chairman to deal with.

It was shown that before a permanent pavement is laid City Engineer Graydon notifies all the property owners to get in their water and gas, but that many people neglect the warning. It was the opinion of the commission that such people should be made to pay for the repairs to the pavement when they ask for a water or gas service.

Another Report.

Engineer Moore was instructed to make a report as to the presence of springs immediately west of the present intake, and to present the report at the next meeting of the commission.

The commissioners will make a trip of inspection down the river probably the first of next week.

The Grand Trunk made application for a one-inch supply at the roundhouse and a three-quarter-inch supply at the freight sheds. It was decided that both supply pipes shall have meters attached. Also that a three-inch meter shall be put on the supply pipe at the car works on Sept. 1.

A WONDERFUL OLD LADY

Lady Macclefield, Aged 85, Going in for Frivolity.

London, Aug. 21.—Perhaps the most wonderful woman in England just now is the Countess of Macclesfield. In the United States one is said to be too old at 40 for the strenuous life; in England of late, men have cut the age down to 35. Yet Lady Mac., as the aged countess is familiarly called, deems 85 young enough to start a new whirl of excitement in her life. She has just learned bridge, and is rapidly becoming as ardent a player as any in her own special social set.

The countess' huge family are not quite sure that they like it, for bridge devotees usually start playing after luncheon and keep it up until the early hours in the morning. Sessions of ten or twelve hours, with mere half hours for meals or refreshments, are not an unusual thing. But the countess is not worrying. She is going on merrily with the fascinating craze.

She has had a remarkable career, this octogenarian noblewoman. She was Lady Mary Frances Grosvenor, second daughter of the second Marquis of Westminster, who later was raised to a dukedom. She was, luckily for herself, the second wife of the Earl of Macclesfield. One of the strangest legends in the history of British peerages is woven about the Earls of Macclesfield and their brides. Young women, who know the tradition, fight shy of being the first bride of the earl or the heir of the earl. It is the "fatal wedding," and as the family history proves, is courting death. For the first wives, even down to those of the present earl and his eldest son and heir, Viscount Parker, have died soon after marriage or within a year or two. The descendants of the long line of Parkers have been the children of the second wives. The present countess has had fifteen children, of whom eleven sons and three daughters are living.

The countess was married in the early forties, and was appointed lady of the bedchamber to the then Princess of Wales on the latter's marriage in 1863. She, of course, relinquished the post a score of years ago. She is still a great favorite at court, however. To compensate her for not being included in the entourage of her royal mistress at the coronation she received a magnificent miniature of the Queen set in brilliants and inscribed, "To Dear Lady Mac., from Alexandra."

The countess is a sister of Eleanor, Duchess of Northumberland, aunt of the Duke of Westminster, and a relation to nearly half the peerage through the marriage of her many sons and daughters. She retains all her mental powers, as is proven by her extraordinary skill at bridge, and talks well and wittily. She lives at her town house in Eaton Square during the season, but is mostly at Shirburne Castle in Oxfordshire, a moated stronghold of the middle ages.

MUTINY ON A LINER

Revolvers Figure in Fight on Big Lake Passenger Boat.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 21.—The story of a mutiny and riot on board the big passenger steamer Northwest was told before the United States commissioner today, when the Great Northern liner reached port on its return trip from Duluth. Everything on board from revolvers to kitchen utensils, figured in the action between officers and the mutineers when the Northwest was four miles from Sault Ste. Marie.

The scene of the fight was the decks and then into the cabins, endangering the lives of passengers. Testimony as to the cause of the riot was conflicting, but it appeared that the firemen and oilers demanded the same fare that was served to the passengers, which is claimed in the folders of the company, to be "as good as Delmonico's." The demands were refused and they went to the kitchen, intending, it is said, to throw Chief Day and Storekeeper Huet overboard. The chief and storekeeper objected to going over the side of the ship, and defended themselves first with pistols and then with the crockery of the kitchen.

Cups and saucers, plates and tureens flew in all directions. From the kitchen the battle drifted into the dining-room, and from there into the cabins. Everything movable was flying through the air. In the end, the mutineers did not get the Delmonico fare, but instead, warrants were issued for their arrest when the steamer reached Buffalo this morning. Four firemen were arrested, and two escaped. Another is locked up in Duluth.

The Northwest left on time, and the crew is not yet eating Delmonico fare.

REST CURE FOR BUSINESSMEN

Horseback Tours Recommended by One Who Has Benefited by Them.

London, Aug. 21.—"For that tired feeling take a horseback tour." That is the maxim of John G. Patterson, an American captain of industry of Dayton, O., and he ought to know, for his holiday in each of the last four years has been spent in touring foreign parts on horseback.

Mr. Patterson, with a small party, is now in London en route to the continent. He has already spent six weeks of this year's holidays on the road. He has a suite of rooms at that uncommonly exclusive hotel, Claridge's, and there he told your correspondent of his experiences.

"The business man needs his holiday every year," he said. "We have to work at high pressure and unless we take care of ourselves, there is bound to be a breakdown. But the average man of business usually makes a mistake of his holiday. He rushes off to Europe at express speed and when he arrives, rushes all over the place sightseeing. He is more tired out than ever when he boards the steamer for home. When he isn't in an express train, he is whirling over the country in an automobile, seeing nothing except at stopping places. I know. I have tried automobiles and everything else. Now I must recommend horseback touring as the greatest and most enjoyable rest cure on earth. Some years ago, my health gave way from overwork and my physician ordered horseback riding. I came to the south of England and with my secretary, toured the picturesque highways and byways of Devonshire and Cornwall to Land's End.

HAS MADE MANY SUCH TOURS.

"It did me so much good that next year we toured southern Europe to Biarritz and Bucharest. Then we went to northern Africa, and did everything, including some of the desert, on horseback. The following year we went further afield and toured Japan and China and part of India. The roads in China are bad, yet one day we managed sixty-five miles. This year we are doing England, France and Germany. We will return home in September, better in mind and body, and freshened up for another year's rush of work. I cannot too strongly recommend every tired and worried business man to follow my example. It is the only perfect rest and health cure."

In Mr. Patterson's party are his 14-year-old daughter, Dorothy, his son, Fred, 12 years old; his secretary, Chas. Palmer; his children's tutor, Charles Plessinger; and a maid, a groom and a valet. The party, on arrival in England, went by train to Windermere and visited the lake region, made historic by Walter Scott. They could not get suitable horses, so toured in an automobile. This did not please them, and so they engaged a four-in-hand coach and tallyhoed for a week. They brought up in Edinburgh and there bought seven good horses, and a two-horse omnibus. The groom drove the bus, on top was piled the baggage and inside rode the maid and valet. The others rode horseback on saddles which Mr. Patterson brought over.

COVER THIRTY MILES A DAY.

From twenty-five to thirty-five miles a day was averaged. A fortnight was spent in Scotland and four weeks in England, journeying southward to London. The party stopped for beds or meals at 45 inns and found them all as good as the famous inns of the good old coaching days. They visited the show places of England—saw stately avenues of ancient trees, miles of velvety lawns, hundreds of years old, gorgeous and beautifully kept gardens, and historic castles, halls, and manor houses. They saw the provincial towns of England, the great cathedral cities, the rivers, fields and woods at their best. They rode bareheaded, without a care in the world. There was no mapped out routine. They stopped when they wanted to and went on when they felt ready. And so they came to London. Here the horses and bus have been sold.

The party leaves in a few days for Paris. There more horses will be bought and another bus. France will be toured and the lakes of Switzerland and then on into Germany with Berlin as the objective point. The party is in no hurry. There is only one fixture and that is the sailing date for home.

The party is well bronzed and each is a picture of health.

HAVOC BY RAIN AND BOLT

Considerable Damage Done in Vicinity of Petrolea and Inwood.

Petrolea, Ont., Aug. 21.—The great electrical storm which passed over this part of the country did a lot of damage that will be expensive to the farmers.

Dougall Reader's barn on the 4th concession was wholly destroyed, the loss amounting to $5,000. Dougall McKellar's, on the 7th concession, was burnt, with a loss of $5,000.

In both instances a great deal of produce was destroyed, together with farm implements.

The country lying between Inwood and Petrolea has been flooded, in some places to a depth of over two feet. Oats in shock are under water and the roads are almost impassable. The rain was especially heavy, and that portion of the district being low, proved a veritable receptacle for the streams that came from the hills.

The farmers are in a quandary just how to prevent further disaster. The extent of the losses resulting from crops being ruined amounts to a big sum.

The clay ingredients in the soil causes the water to stay on the surface for a long time.

JOE CANNON'S BOOM.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 21. — The Republican state convention today nominated a ticket, headed by John F. Smulski, for treasurer. The political boom of Joseph G. Cannon for 1908, which was launched last week by his own congressional district, was given an enthusiastic support. Outside of the indorsement of Speaker Cannon for president, and Senator Cullon for speaker, there was little of general interest in the proceedings.
