PEPALL CASE MUST GO TO JURY, JUDGE RULES

Drury Gov't Paid High For Stocks

Special to The Advertiser.

Toronto, Nov. 13. — Arthur Slaght, K.C., counsel for Andrew Pepall, today spent considerable time at the assize court before Justice Wright and jury, showing that the Drury government had paid more than par for several parcels of inscribed stock of the same class as that which had been bought in the Jarvis-Pepall-Smith transactions for 90. In the aggregate these transactions at par and over amounted to $2,000,000 worth of inscribed stock. W. N. Tilley, K.C., suggested that the evidence which Mr. Slaght was submitting concerning the Provincial Securities, Browning, Harris, Northey & Company, Dominion Securities Corporation and similar transactions, was not helpful to the case now being tried "unless we try out the other transactions and find out whether they were done honestly."

E. C. Drury, Former Premier, Says Jarvis' Profit Never Expected.

SMITH RESPONSIBLE

Treasury Department Wanted To Watch Deal, Witness Tells Court.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Nov. 13.—On conclusion of the crown's case in the assizes today against Andrew Pepall, charged with theft, conspiracy and corruption in connection with provincial bond transactions, the accused's counsel, Arthur Slaght, K.C., moved for a non-suit, arguing that none of the four specific charges against his client has been proved. Mr. Justice Wright, however, held that there was some evidence applicable to each of the charges, and that they must go to the jury.

The last witness for the crown was A. E. Nash, expert accountant, who related his investigation of the account of Peter Smith, former provincial treasurer, in the Stratford branch of the Bank of Toronto. Prominent witnesses for the defence were E. C. Drury, former premier of Ontario, and Manning Doherty, former minister of agriculture for Ontario. The court sat until late this afternoon, and adjourned until Monday morning to enable out-of-town jurors to spend the week-end at home.

Wanted Some Advice.

Mr. Drury told the court that Peter Smith first called his attention to the possibility of buying in the government stock in England, and, believing that the matter was of considerable complexity, suggested that someone be called in for advice.

As a result, Aemelius Jarvis called at his office, and the question was raised as to whether the bonds should be bought on commission or at a fixed rate. A loss to the government was feared in the commission project, he said, although Mr. Jarvis expressed a willingness to buy on these terms. Finally the cabinet decided to fix a rate. Mr. Jarvis was to bear all the expense and get the bonds for what he could.

A question by Mr. Slaght as to whether it would not have been legitimate under the terms for Mr. Jarvis to have made as high a profit as 10 per cent was considered by Mr. Justice Wright as being for the jury to decide, but Mr. Drury said that frankly "we did not anticipate that he was going to make as much as he did."

Answering W. N. Tilley, K.C., crown prosecutor, in cross-examination, Mr. Drury said that he knew nothing about the arrangements for the depositing of treasury bills as collateral security on the temporary credit to be raised in London by Jarvis for the purchase of the bonds. His understanding of the arrangement was that the buying of the bonds was to continue until the price reached the limit set.

Smith Named Pepall.

Peter Smith, continued the former premier, suggested sending a representative of the treasury to England, and named Andrew Pepall. He thought the suggestion reasonable.

"I should have thought that if you were trying to save expense you would have asked Mr. Smith why he wanted Mr. Pepall," said Mr. Tilley. "You were buying only from Jarvis."

"You must leave some responsibility to a minister," replied Mr. Drury, who added that Mr. Smith was of the opinion that the matter should be watched from the standpoint of the treasury. His understanding was that Pepall was to get his expenses, and was not to be paid for his services. He considered Papall's bill for $80 a day expensive.

Mr. Doherty said he did not know that Pepall was interested in the Jarvis firm. He would not have approved Pepall obtaining commission on bonds sold by Jarvis to the province if he had known it.

WOMAN COLLAPSES FROM POISONING AFTER TAXI RIDE

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, Nov. 13.—When a taxicab driver, Fred Taylor, opened the door of his taxi to permit his fare, Annie Gibson, aged 23 years, to alight at her distination on St. Patrick street tonight, the woman cried, "I have been poisoned!" and collapsed, according to a story Taylor told a policeman whom he called to his assistance. The police officer accompanied the woman in the taxi to the General Hospital, where examination showed that she was suffering from the effects of having swallowed salts of lemon.

Taylor said he was sent to a house on Dupont street in response to a call for a taxi, and was met by the woman, who told him to drive to an address on St. Patrick street.

SIR ADAM'S MEMORY LAUDED AT TORONTO

Memorial Fund Luncheon Hears Speeches Urging Work For Endowment.

Special to The Advertiser.

Toronto, Nov. 13.—With team and division captains in full attendance, final arrangements were complete at the Beck memorial luncheon today for the commencement of the drive on Wednesday next for $500,000 for the Queen Alexandra sanatorium, the fund being called the Beck memorial endowment. The work will be a monument to the name of a great Canadian citizen.

"Some men become distinguished through their eccentricities, but Sir Adam Beck was not an eccentric man," said John O'Connor, the chairman. "Distinction came to him, not through eccentricity of manner or of impulse, but he became distinguished in a great effort. The future ages, gaining perspective from their distance, will appreciate him even more than we do now.

"He gave his energies to the lightening of burdens. He eased from toil and pain the fingers of the mothers who labored in heavy drudgery. He accomplished many things to make better the lot of all those who labored, so that, whatever his methods, we at least agree that he accomplished a great deal, and therefore we are proud to be lined up with a movement which will mean the perpetuation of his memory."

Mr. Allan Ross, a close associate of Sir Adam, was another to pay tribute.

"For many years I was associated with him," he said, "and in my opinion Sir Adam Beck was the greatest citizen this province has ever produced. My opinion is that his name will go down to posterity as one of a greatness which very few achieve. To measure what he has done for the industrial development of Ontario, what he has done for its social and its political life, is almost beyond words to express."

Macwell, George Geddes, R. N. Price, M. B. Johnson, Wm. Trott, and E. A. Horton. Of this number, George Geddes has signified his intention of running this year. AYLMER WOMAN DIES FOLLOWING ACCIDENT

Returning From Hospital in Car Which Crashed Into Truck.

Special to The Advertiser.

Aylmer, Nov. 13.—Prudence Bottrill, wife of Albert Bottrill, died at her home here early this morning in her 63rd year. While returning home from the hospital in St. Thomas, where she underwent an X-ray examination on an injured arm last Saturday morning, November 7, she was thrown out of the touring car driven by her husband when the car crashed into the truck owned by the H. M. Hambidge Company of Aylmer. The accident happened on the Aylmer-St. Thomas highway just west of New Sarum. When the truck went to turn off the pavement on the Sparta road, Mr. Bottrill, who was following close, evidently did not see it and drove into it. The car was overturned and Mrs. Bottrill was carried for some distance beneath the machine. She was removed to her home here, but died from her injuries this morning.

Deceased was born in Hinckley, England, and has been a resident of Ontario since 1911, her last ten years being spent in Aylmer. Three sons and two daughters survive, George Bottrill of Chicago, Stanley Bottrill, Aylmer, Arthur Rising, Aylmer, and Mrs. George Warner, London, and Mrs. Huron Sears, Aylmer. She has one sister, Mrs. Charles Wilbur, of Chicago.

The funeral will take place from her late residence on Sunday at 2 p.m., Canon Miles officiating. The service will be strictly private. Interment will be made in the Aylmer cemetery.

An inquest was held at 4:30 this afternoon. The coroner's jury viewed the remains and adjourned till Wednesday evening.

OPPORTUNITIES OF CANADA BOUNDLESS, SAYS MAGRATH

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—"When I undertake to talk about hydro, it will only be after I have satisfied myself that I know something about hydro," Charles A. Magrath, newly-appointed chairman of the Ontario hydro-electric power commission, told the members of the Engineering Institute of Canada at a luncheon given today in his honor.

"I do not think we Canadians really appreciate the heritage we possess," declared Mr. Magrath, in commenting on his early experiences in Western Canada. "As long as we put up the target and look into the distance," he continued, "I believe we can make this country anything we want to make of it."

Sir Robert Borden paid striking tribute to Mr. Magrath's early parliamentary career and the services rendered by him as chairman of the international joint commission and fuel controller and in other public capacities.

Cloverdale, the beautiful home of A. J. MacVicar, South Dorchester, was the scene of a very pleasant gathering on Thanksgiving day, when the members of the John MacVicar family met to celebrate their second annual reunion. Members came from Toronto, London, St. Thomas and Centralia, though the greater number are settled in the nearby districts.

Thirty-seven members sat down to a most enjoyable thanksgiving dinner. The afternoon was spent in music, games and cards, as the weather was too cold for outdoor sports. After a light luncheon all retired to their several homes, well satisfied with the day spent pleasantly together. Perhaps the happiest thought of all was, "We were all there, not one absent."
