TELEGRAPHIC.

DUBLIN, Sept. 1.—Over three hundred members of the Metropolitan police force have been dismissed.

Hundreds of members will resign.

Great excitement prevails in the city and all the police stations occupied by strong guards of military.

Rioting broke out on College street at 9.30 o'clock this p. m. The mob was very violent, and some policemen who remained on duty at College street station were brought out in a body, but were obliged to retire before the mob. Additional troops have been sent to the scene of the riot. As there are no police or special constables in Dublin, the mob has complete possession of the city.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—The News Dublin despatch at nine p. m. last night, says: Many ex-police, in citizens clothes, are moving about in bodies, and are harangued occasionally by ex-policemen. A number of persons not connected with the police are taking advantage of the occasion to deliver orations to the populace.

Ten p. m.—Roughs are assembling in force. The mob has assailed a tram car, and has broken the windows of the police station on College street.

DUBLIN, Sept. 2.—At 10.30 to-night the mob in Brunswick street threw stones at the troops and one man was wounded. A magistrate read the riot act, the troops charged, and the mob fled. At 11 p. m. a bayonet charge was made in Sackville street, where the soldiers were hotly pressed and badly stoned. The troops are stationed before the Bank of Ireland. Many of the constabulary have returned to duty at the Kevin street police barracks.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—The Times' Dublin despatch states that the emergency committee in a special consultation. Difficulty, however, was raised in regard to the form of oath to be taken, which obliges the person taking it to swear that he is not a member of a secret or political society. Earl Spencer then stated that the emergency committee was not a political society. The committee was directed by the Lord Lieutenant to communicate to-day. If it is favorable, about 1,000 men will be at once available. The whole police force, comprising 885 men, and including the 234 who were dismissed yesterday, have left the twenty-five remain.

DUBLIN, Sept. 2.—The decision of Lord Spencer not to interfere with the course of the law in the case of Hynes, convicted of murder, was communicated to the condemned man to-day. The day of execution was fixed for Sept. 11th.

Dunnin, Sept. 3.—Two hundred policemen, at which all dismissed men and those who resigned were present, was held this evening. Canon Pope spoke. He urged the police to submit to the authorities and advised those who had resigned to return to duty and petition for reinstatement of the dismissed men. The men unanimously refused this advice and said they were willing to return to duty the moment the dismissed members were reinstated, and assurances given them that their grievances would be considered. If any disturbances occurred, the responsibility would be with the Police Commissioners. Serious disturbances occurred to-night in Stephens street, where a number of special constables, who had a drunken mob in charge, were attacked and one man was badly maltreated.

Fifteen mounted policemen have resigned and refused to do duty.

In George street to-night a tram car in which a special constable had taken refuge was wrecked by a mob.

The gunboat Forester has arrived at Kingstown, where disorders are apprehended.

The authorities will advertise to-morrow for recruits. This action is believed to disease that the dismissed policemen will not be reinstated.

At 11 o'clock to-night the streets are much quieter.

DUBLIN, Sept. 3.—About fourteen persons wounded in the street fights are in hospital. Five hundred special constables were sworn in here to-day. The mob has day attacked a special constable; the latter fired three shots from his revolver and wounded one man dangerously. The mob thereupon attempted to lynch the constable and handled him so roughly that he is not expected to recover. To-night the mob became very violent and was charged by troops. Several persons were charged. Government officers are in charge of the troops.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—A despatch from Dublin on Sunday p. m. says: "The police strike is virtually ended. The Superintendents in an interview with the dismissed men advised them to drop up a memorial, asking that they be reinstated and acknowledging that they had committed a breach of discipline. This memorial will be submitted to the authorities this evening, and there is little doubt that the men will be reinstated with the understanding that their grievances shall be investigated. Several street robberies were committed last night. Outrages have been reported in different parts of the country. Two wounds to several parties injured in street fights have been dressed at the hospital, but no serious injuries are reported.

Sir John Pope Hennessy, the Governor of Hong Kong, received on the 28th ult. at Claridge's Hotel, a deputation representing 135 Chinese merchants and residents in London, and 72 in Manchester and Liverpool. The address presented by the deputation expressed the sympathy of the Chinese for the Governor's troubles and for the uniform attention and courtesy with which representations had been received. Reference was made to Excellency's endeavors to give the Chinese a voice in the government of the colony, and a hope was expressed that he would long remain to carry out the work he had commenced. The spokesman of the deputation said that he had been instructed by the Chinese Club in London, which numbered more than a hundred members, to say that the loyalty of the Chinese to the Governor's own and the Chinese administration, and that he would be as a "just judge and father." The speaker concluded by expressing a hope that during his absence this policy would be steadily maintained. In reply, Sir J. P. Hennessy said that he found the Chinese, on his arrival, very respectful, easier to govern. He promised to do what he could to remove certain grievances mentioned, especially their complaint of the reduction of the Chinese inspector in the colony. Hong Kong to the grade of sergeant since the recent Golden Jubilee, that the Governor's departure, he stated in the speech of a Chinese merchant, his Excellency expressed his conviction, his Excellency expressed his conviction that the presence of Chinese merchants in London was a healthy symptom of trade, and that the merchants and manufactures of England would be glad to have the Chinese, funity of dealing direct with the Chinese.

The Hon. A. S. Hewitt is a well-known public man in the United States, who thoroughly understands the business of making steel rails. He states that the price of steel rails has been reduced from $100 profits on the capital in 1880 they must make $20,000,000, $25,000,000, as prices were higher. Great vast sum has been divided among the dozen firms. The twelve men who made these concerns dictated the prices of the speaker of the House of Representatives and committee of ways and means, through which all tariff bills must go. They have taken $125,000,000 out of the pockets of the American people by this single tax. They maintain a "north western tariff bureau" at Milwaukee for woodwink western men, and a larger bureau at Philadelphia, to hoodwink eastern men. They pay lower wages to their workmen than any other iron manufacturers do; their net profits are four or five times what they pay in wages. Then they point to the poor English railmakers, who pay in wages at least three times as much as their total profits, and denounce them as enemies of the public. This showing is in advance of what we have done in Canada, but our cotton and sugar interests are making it rival their American London Advertiser.

THE O'CONNEL STATUE.

It is twenty years since the movement for a national monument to Daniel O'Connell was started, though at different periods there had previously been many public memorials of the Liberator set up in various parts of Ireland. The great services he rendered to his country were commemorated in the magnificent round tower and chapel in Glasnevin Cemetery, designed by Petrie, and under which his remains repose; by Hogan's noble statue in the City Hall; by a statue by the same artist in Limerick, and another splendid figure in Ennis, the chief town of Clare; by Haverty's wonderful portrait, painted for the National Bank, of which O'Connell may be said to have been the founder, and by Catterson Smith's lifelike figure, painted for the City Hall collection. In 1863 a public subscription was started, and the appeal was answered by subscriptions from all parts of the globe wherever men of Irish birth or blood dwelt. It was not till April 8, 1870, that a design was approved and selected, the committee selecting the one submitted by H. Foley, B. A., for which they agreed to pay £12,500. In August, 1874, the foundation stone for the monument was laid under circumstances of great pomp and magnificence by the then Lord Mayor, the Right Hon. P. F. Sweeny. The expectation had been formed in Dublin, that this inauguration would be effected in connection with the centenary celebration of August 6th, but the hopes were doomed to disappointment, for the contention of the "cloak" or "no cloak" sections greatly retarded the completion of the work. The former partly prevailed, however, and the Liberator spent years in the traditional garment of the Irish gentleman.

The monument consists of three distinct parts—the square, solid base or podium, which includes two gradients; the celtic or allegorical figures in the base, with 50 feet of granite, with the pediment in the form of a centre of each of the four provinces in the arms of each of the four corners. Projecting from the four respective uprights at the base are the winged Victories at ready mentioned as not yet completed. They are seated figures, representing Victory by patriotism, who grasps a sword in her right hand and holds a shield on her left arm; Victory by fidelity, holding the mariner's compass—True as the needle—and caressing the staff; Victory by courage, straighten its writhing body under her foot, and in her hand the sword, symbolizing the bound power of materials affected by union and strength of the by eloquence, holding in her left hand the roll of documents by which she supports the arguments by which she supports her cause, with the right is gracefully outstretched in the attitude of oratory. The wings of these figures are considerably elevated, and the part great symbolic boldness to the lower part of the monument. The "drum" or cylinder which surmounts the base is, perhaps, one of the most striking and expressive features ever imparted to any public monument. It contains no less than fifty figures, fourteen of which are almost distinct statues. On the front of the drum is a figure of Erin, eight feet in height, trampling under foot her old enemy, the Penal Code, represented by a coarse, degraded female figure, with its face and hands, and the other holding a roll of the Act of Emancipation and discussing the merits of the question with the representatives of the Irish Church, represented by a group representing the Church, Following round the drum, are the historian with his volume, the painter with the materials of his art, and the musician. Here Foley has given the highest evidence of his precisation of the fitness of things which characterized his best productions, and in the hand of the musician he has placed a scroll of the music on which are legible the words and score of the air of Moore's spirited melody, so frequently quoted by O'Connell:—

"Oh! where the slave so lowly,
Condemned to toil at others' will,
His heart so crushed, his spirit so broken,
But bends at first,
Would pine beneath them slowly?"

Next in the group come the artisan with his kit of tools, the soldier and the sailor side by side, the peer and the commoner on equal footing, discussing the merits of the question, the man of science, the merchant, the representative of municipal rights, and the peasantry of various types. Upon the shaft itself, in very slight relief, are indicated the heads of the multitude, eagerly pressing forward to learn the full meaning and operation of the Act, while the summit is encircled by a rich cornice, displaying the shamrock, leaves and blossoms being placed alternately. Towering above this graceful structure will stand the statue of O'Connell, habited as he appeared during the long emancipation struggle, one hand in the breast of his broad cloth coat, and the other holding a roll of papers; the cloak, which was his constant companion, unobtrusively yet suitably adorning the typical Irish features, bearing with the smile of confident purpose which endeared the Liberator to his followers. The dimensions of the monument are in keeping with the grandeur of the design, as will be understood when it is stated that the under-fest, and the figure of Erin measures twelve feet in height; each of the four winged Victories measures ten feet, and the whole structure rises to an altitude of forty feet. The statue, the cylinder of figures, and the Victories are cast in bronze, while the architectural portions are in granite and limestone. As a work of artistic merit this great effort of Foley's may be said to be unrivalled, the artist having brought to bear on the work the results of careful historical study, an appreciative insight into the national character of the memorial, and a high poetic genius. The whole conception displays a sympathetic grasp of his theme worthy of the subject, O'Connell's greatest, struggles being elaborately represented in the sculptor's design.

YOKOHAMA, Aug. 11.—On the evening of July 26, an organized body of insurgents took possession of the main thoroughfares of Zoul, the capital of Corea, and attacked the Royal residence of the Japanese legation. The Japanese Envoy followed, and made their way through Falses for protection, but found it in possession of the rioters. They then retreated to Jensun, a port 15 miles distant, being repeatedly assailed; four were killed and three wounded, and several are missing. The survivors, among whom were the Envoy, and Consul, reached a British surveying ship. A Japanese ship of war was ordered to Corea to rescue the imperilled Japanese and obtain information as to the cause of the outbreak, but to avoid a dispute the vessel returned on August 4th, announcing that the Japanese at Zoul had probably been slaughtered and the capital was in a state of anarchy. Of the Royal inmates of the Palace the King alone was spared. The Queen was murdered; the Queen's heir was poisoned; both children, and the latter's betrothed, both Ministers of State, and other high dignitaries were killed. The proceedings are said to have been directed by the ex-Regent Tai In Kun, by some pronounced the father, by others the uncle, of the King. He has always been a violent opponent of foreign intercourse. Whether he assumed control of Government is not known. The ports of Government is not known. No disturbance. Japan has established a naval military rendezvous at Shimonoseki, the nearest port to Corea, as has dispatched to the scene of war and troops are gathered to enforce reparation must be exhausted.

absolute and unconditional or war will ensue.

A telegram from the Navy Department at Washington has been received by Admiral Olete, commanding the United States naval force in Asia, announcing that Schufeldt's treaty with Corea has been rejected, requesting that a ship of war be sent to Corea and stating that Mr. Young, Minister to China, would assume diplomatic control of the question. The German treaty with Corea has been signed, an attempt to negotiate a French treaty has failed owing to the agents in stating that missionaries be allowed to pursue their calling in the Kingdom.

The ill-feeling among the American residents in Japan was started by repeated to the U. S. flag on the part of the British officers. The American ship Swatara left Yokohama homeward bound on July 27th, saluted, according to custom by warships of every nationality except the English. The British fleet at Yokohama saluted away on the 27th July last and remained at sea over the 4th, avoiding the necessity for a salute. It is claimed on behalf of the British that their conduct is regulated by orders from London.

The final instalment of Japan's first foreign loan, contracted in England ten years ago, was paid on July 21. The foreign indebtedness is only a few million dollars.

The census office at Washington has issued a bulletin giving some interesting figures showing the estimated amount of merchantable pine and spruce standing in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont May 31, 1880. The statistics for Maine show that 475,000,000 feet of pine and 5,000,000,000 feet of spruce, board measure, were standing in the census year, 301,020,000 feet of spruce were cut that year, including 6,000,000 feet of pine and 49,000,000 feet of spruce on St. John River, but sawed in New Brunswick. Considerable areas in New Brunswick are covered with second growth pine not included in the above estimates, furnishing a large proportion of the pine sawed in the state. Pine has been cut in every township, and the largest spruce has been removed from the state, except from the inaccessible region about the head waters of the Allagash River. The head waters of the Allagash River, protecting the large trees and Maine and allowing the remainder, carefully cutting only the finest, prevent fires from fifteen to twenty-five years. Their permanence is thus insured.

A gentleman from this section, who has gone up to the Tugaw Hills in Manitoba, is up there upon a rented farm and is cultivating it. He writes: "I have not got any land yet, and the way that this country is handled, it is a difficult thing to get land. He travelled 200 miles to find land fit for settlement. He says: "Should you advise me to settle in Manitoba? Would you advise men to come out? Shall I send my boys? Is it a good country for any one to come out—on them? Are the land regulations fair and improved? Are the land regulations of the Government are in the North-west. From all accounts squatters are going to have a hard time of it.—London (Ont.) Advertiser.

It is a practical commentary upon the thorough uselessness of the present uniform of the Household Cavalry that the regiments proceeding to Egypt have shown almost entirely reclothed. The showy accoutrements of foreigners have long delighted the eyes of which have been purchased by the nodding plumes, brass helmet, with one of drab felt, encompassed by an glittering cuirass of white linen. The breeches, and the long, shiny jack-boots. The dress adopted is less ornamental, although far more serviceable. The red tunic has been retained until it has been converted into pantaloons, and with the knee a broad strip of webbing is wound round the top of a stout pair of leather. The boots of the foot-guards have been converted into a pair of shoes, or blucher boots of a high-heel, the horse equipment comprises a hay-net, the horse, headstall and a certain percentage of men in each troop carry rope harness, so that the horse may be readily employed in drawing guns or commissariat carts. The equipment paraded on Monday in Hyde Park for the inspection of the Commander-in-Chief; and as they passed through the streets were a source of much curiosity and some amusement to Londoners, who scarcely recognized their familiar friends and protectors.

Of the 1518 cases of small-pox in Chicago last year, 1,116 proved fatal. These statistics suggest an important field for scientific investigation.

PATENTS
obtained for inventors, in the United States, Canada and Europe, at reasonable rates. With our principal office in Washington, directly opposite the United States Patent Office, we are able to obtain patents in less time than other parties who are at a distance can obtain them. Inventors residing at a distance may rely upon receiving the same attention and skill as if they were personally present at the Patent Office. We are able to prosecute rejected claims, and to obtain patents on application to the Commissioner of Patents, after the Patent Office has refused to grant them, in many cases, etc., of our own accord, without charge, upon receipt of our printed instructions. Our Printed Instructions and Forms contain Diagram Tables of Fees, Specimen Claims, Rules in Patent Cases, Decisions of Commissioners of Patents, and other matter of value to inventors. Our Digest of Patents issued to Canadians, with a Table of Patents issued to Citizens of the United States, and our Manual of Patents, are sent free to any address, and contain valuable information and advice to persons who are interested in obtaining patents, or who are interested in patents, patents, and patent rights generally. We refer to the Postmaster, the Hon. Commissioner of Patents, Washington, D. C., to our Bankers, Messrs. Riggs & Co., Washington, D. C., to the Ch
