Toronto, march 21.—Four fancy steers brought $6.12½, but the great bulk of the sales in butcher cattle was between $5.25 and $5.75. There were no cows sold over $4.90. Good, sound lambs from 90 to 110 lbs. are quite firm at $7, but the fat ones are not wanted. Sheep and hogs are unchanged. Calves are still dull.

LABRADOR FOLK STARVING

Have Been Cut Off From Supplies by Great Ice Fields For Months

A despatch from North Sydney, C. B., says: That the rigorous winter just closing has caused extreme suffering and probably many deaths among the hardy inhabitants of the barren Labrador peninsula, who have been cut off for months by great ice fields from the possibility of securing food and clothing, is the fear felt here and in Newfoundland. The last reports from the bleak country to the north, which were received late last fall, said that the food supplies were almost exhausted and that hundreds of the natives, mainly fisherfolk and their families, were on the verge of sarvation. Months have passed since the stricken Labrador people have secured help, nor has word come to the outside world as to how they are faring in their extremity.

Repeated efforts have been made to carry succor to the starving people. Vessels laden with supplies of food and of clothing have failed repeatedly to pierce ice floes which choke the strait of Belle Isle, the narrow stretch of water which separates Labrador from the northern coast of Newfoundland.

The present misfortunes of the Labrador people had their beginning in the failure of last season's fishing catch. A blizzard which swept over Newfoundland and Labrador last week is believed to have further accentuated the suffering. A blanket of snow reached in some places a depth of from 20 to 30 feet deep. It is said that a large band of trappers who were operating in an interior section of Newfoundland are missing.

PERPETUAL PEACE ASSURED

Treaty Now Being Arranged Between Great Britain and the United States

A despatch from Washington says: The negotiation of a new arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain will probably be taken up shortly by Secretary of State Knox and James Bryce, the British Ambassador. For some months President Taft and Secretary Knox have been anxious to begin negotiations for a new treaty to include every dispute between the two Governments. Drafting of this treaty will be an important step toward perpetual peace between the United States and Great Britain. The present treaty excepts questions relating to the national honor, the "vital interest" and the rights of third countries. President Taft and Secretary Knox believe the Senate would ratify a treaty for the arbitration of all disputes between the two countries. In recent speeches the President has referred to this subject and expressed the hope that such an arangement would be consummated.

The actual negotiations for the convention have been delayed until information could be obtained of the attitude of Great Britain on the question. The speech of Sir Edwardf Grey, Minister of Foreign Affairs, in the House of Commons on Monday night, in which he said the British Government would welcome such a proposal, has, in the opinion of officers of the State Department, cleared the way for a convention along the lines indicated.

A despatch from London, England, says: Enquiries along the route of the Coronation procession on June 22 from Buckingham Palace to Westminster show that the prices of windows commanding a view are increasing instead of decreasing, as had been expected. Westminster Hospital, which overlooks the west part of the Abbey and will afford a splendid view of the arrival and departure of the King and Queen and their suite, is arranging to erect a stand, and will charge from $25 to $100 for a seat. These prices will include breakfast and luncheon.

DIAMONDS FOUND IN CANADA

Mr. Chas. Camsell Discovered Them in British Columbia Rock

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Director of the Geological Survey announces that diamonds have been discovered by the survey in a British Columbia rock, the first recorded discovery of diamonds in Canada. The rock carrying the crystals is a peridotite of the variety known as dunite, consisting of olivine and chromite. The rock specimens in which the diamonds were found were collected by Mr. Chas. Camsell on Olivine Mountain, near the Tulameen River, where Mr. Camsell has been making a geological examination for the survey. Samples of the rock were submitted to Mr. R. A. A. Johnstone, mineralogist of the survey, to ascertain the nature of the minerals. In the course of his examination Mr. Johnstone secured some insoluble fragments of crystals, which appeared to be diamonds. More of this material was separated and a series of tests conducted by Mr. Johnstone, which established beyond doubt the nature of the material. The individuals so far extracted from a number of samples are small, none of them being larger than an ordinary pin-head, but many appear under the microscope to be clear and bright, and of good quality, though some are yellowish or brownish.

Householders should guard the well during the spring sedson. When the break up comes and the snow melts, care should be taken that none of this surface water containing the winter accumulation of dirt and filth gets into the well. If the top of the well is higher than the surrounding ground, and the water runs away from the well and not towards it there will be little contamination from this source. But if the well is not properly guarded in this respect and the surface water flows toward the well it will find its way into it and to pollute the well to the extent it is polluted. Then there is also the danger of having the well polluted by filth that may have accumulated on the surface, and as the frost goes out percolates through the soil to the well. To guard against this, all dirt and filth in reaching distant of the well should be moved and the frost goes out. One cannot be too careful about these little things. Impure water is a menace to the health of the family, and anything that endangers health is of sufficient importance to merit first attention.

The Opposition has been demanding that the Government dissolve Parliament and go to the country upon the reciprocity issue. If the people are in favour of reciprocity they are entitled to express their opinion and to have their way. The Conservatives insist that no two or no thirteen men have a right to sew up eight million people by a bargain concerning whose terms they have not been consulted. That political party which is anxious to consult the people and abide by their mandate is certainly the party most in accord with our democratic institutions. The trouble with any Government is that after a while the members of it become impressed with the notion that the people are all underage and are not competent to look after themselves. The deference paid to ministers by office holders, office seekers and contactors gradually fills them with the idea that they are superior persons; they dread an election like a tramp dreads a bath. The members of the Opposition are brave and unselfish in their offer to get their own seats in jeopardy by a general election. That they believe they are right and that the people are behind them is evident.

GOOD ROADS;—From an economical standpoint a system of first-class country roads is a necessity. In this section of our country roads are pretty good, but there is room for improvement. If the roads are in good condition the farmer can get his produce to market at less cost, which will benefit both seller and consumer of that produce. It has been carefully calculated that the average cost for haulage per ton mile on the country road, taking them good and bad, was 28 cents. The average cost on a good road is from 9 3-4 cents to 10 cents per ton per mile. On very bad roads the cost will run up to 65 cents per ton mile. On this basis it should take little figuring to find out the advantage of a good road in getting the farmer's product to market. Anything that adds to the cost of getting that product to market, lessens the net return to the farmer himself, and adds to the price which the consumer will have to pay for it. Farmers have not yet learned to figure out to a nicety the fine points in the cost of production, but it is good business to do so.

Let everyone keep hustling to improve the appearance of their streets and lots Keep all kinds of rubbish off the streets and sidewalks, and see that your house fences, etc., are neatly painted. There is nothing that helps the looks of a town and induces newcomers to settle in it more than neatly painted houses and fences, neat and tidy streets and sidewalks and fruit and shade trees on your lots. Let us see what you will do for the benefit of our progressive little town.

The big head" is a popular way of expressing a common and very frequent ailment. It arises from various sources but the real foundation is a lack of sense. A little money develops it in some people; a few good clothes gives it to others; a little office, where a chance is given to exercise a little authority, is often the cause of it, while others get it having a little better job than their associates. The truth is no sensible person gets the 'big head." The ones who become stuck up and stiff-necked from sources of any kind, are weak in the intellectual caliber.

The late Hon. David Mills once said on the moral questions you will find the majority of local papers are on the right side. To-day the editors of the local papers do the most work for the tion to his means, does more for his town than any other ten men, and in least money of any men on earth. Subscribe for your local paper—not as a but because a local paper is the best investment a community can make. It may not be brilliant or crowded with great thoughts, but financially it is more of a benefit to a community than a preacher or teacher. Understand us now; we do not mean morally nor intellectually, but financially; and yet it is fairness, man with man, he ought to be supported; not because you happen to like him or admire his writings "Each year every local paper gives from $100 to $5,000 free lines for the benefit of the community in which it circulates." No other agency can or will charity, but as an investment.

Presentation and Address.—On Tuesday evening, March 14th, a pleasant event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. W. Baker, the occasion being the gathering of the Ladies and Sir Knights of the Maccabees to do honor to their worthy associates prior to their removal to Exeter. The evening was spent in social chat and harmless games, a pleasing feature of the evening being the presence of "Lord and Lady Minto." Everybody enjoyed themselves immensely until about 12 o'clock when luncheon was served, after which the floor was taken by Mrs. Ed. Shortt, who read an address, and Mrs. R.Hill, in behalf of the Ladies, presented Mrs. Baker with a beautiful jardiniere and jardiniere stand, while Mr. D. Mawhinney, in behalf of the Sir Knights, presented Mr. Baker with a beautiful gold watch fob. Following the presentation all joined in singing, "Blest be the Tie that Binds." Following is the address;—

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Baker;—We, the Ladies of Emerald Hive, No. 286, and Sir Knights of Crediton Tent, No. 53, have met in your home to say good bye Your association with us in our Maccabee gatherings have enshrined you in our hearts; your devotions, zeal and sacrifice for our fraternal interests have helped to bind us together, and inspire us with loyalty to our organization; you have been kind neighbors and true, and your immediate removal forcibly reminds us how fleeting and changeful is life. We ask you to accept this jardiniere and stand and gold watch fob, as tokens of affection and fraternal regard, and we wish for you both, and your family, many happy years, and trust when the earthly tents shall fall us we may all gather again in the Tabernacle not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.—Signed on behalf of the Ladies and Sir Knights, by Mrs. R. Will Farmers Gain or Lose When Canada's Door is Open?

Is the United States Market Worth the Price that We Must Pay for it under Reciprocity?

A QUESTION FOR FARMERS

From the Canadian Century

When we allow vast quantities of food from Australasia and the twelve favoured foreign nations to come freely into Canada how are we going to prove to American customs officials that the farm products we are trying to send across the United States boundary were really produced in Canada?

Ask your neighbors this question.

We may be sure that the farmers of the United States will insist upon customs regulations that will prevent Canada becoming the back door entrance to the United States for all the great food exporting countries of the world. The enforcement of these regulations will be very annoying. The necessity of proving that every consignment of food imported into the United States from Canada is actually Canadian will scare American buyers. They will naturally pay lower prices for Canadian farm products than for American farm products when they have to take the risk of disputes with customs officials as to whether they are genuine Canadian or come from countries overseas.

Prices are always fluctuating in the United States, and while a consignment of Canadian butter or eggs is being held up at the United States customs awaiting proof of genuineness the price may go down.

AUSTRALASIAN FOOD FOR CANADA

During the fiscal year ending March 31, 1901 there came to Canada from Australia and New Zealand 568,989 pounds of butter, 1,149,979 pounds of fresh mutton and lamb, 107,283 lbs of canned meats and small quantities of other meats. In view of the fact that such quantities are imported under the present tariff, what may be expected when the duties on butter and cheese are abolished and the duties on meats greatly reduced as a result of the Reciprocity Compact with the United States.

Farm products from Australia and New Zealand come in by way of both the Pacific and the Atlantic. New Zealand frozen lambs coming in by way of Vancouver have been sold as far east as Winnipeg. A large consignment of lamb carcases from New Zealand has just reached St. John, N. B.

The New Zealand steamship "Aorangi" is now on its way to San Francisco with 5,000 carcases of New Zealand mutton and large quantities of butter. They cannot pass into the U. S. without payment of high duties. It is not probable that such cargoes will be diverted to Canadian ports when the Reciprocity Agreement goes into effect. There is nothing in the Reciprocity Compact binding the U. S. to admit farm products free or at reduced rates from Australia, New Zealand and the twelve foreign countries that have favoured nation treaties with Canada.

HE LOSES HIS BET

A New Brunswick farmer writes to The Canadian Century as follows;—"There may be something is what you say about the danger of competition from great food exporting countries like Australia and Argentina, but I'm willing to bet that not one pound of food will come to Canada from Switzerland, which is one of the twelve countries you mention as entitled to the privileges of Reciprocity Agreement. What do you say to that.

You lose your bet. During the fiscal year ending March 31, 1910, 227,854 pounds of cheese were imported into Canada from Switzerland. The Canadian customs tariff on cheese was three cents per pound. It is not reasonable to suppose that when Swiss cheese can come into Canada free the quantity imported will increase rather than diminish.

PRICES IN UNITED STATES

Even if the Reciprocity Agreement did not let in Australia, New Zealand and twelve foreign nations besides the U. S., even if the favoured nation treaties could be got rid of so that Canada could open its markets to the United States alone, the majority of Canadian farmers would gain nothing by Reciprocity, while they would take very great risks.

Anyone who makes a careful study of the markets in the United States will note that the prices vary in different sections of the country. Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, St. Paul, St. Louis, New Orleans and San Francisco all have diffent prices, and there is a still greater variation in prices in small cities, towns and villages throughout the country.

The Canadian farmer should compare the prices he obtains for his products in a small village near his farm, not with the prices in Boston, New York, Chicago or some other large city in the United States, but with the prices obtained by farmers in small villages in the United States equally distant from the great centres of population. He must take into consideration not only the cost of transportation to the big cities of the United States, but also the middlemen's profits.

A table of of comparative prices in Montreal and Boston the week the Reciprocity Compact was made was compiled by The Montreal Herald, a Liberal newspaper, with the assistance of a number of prominent produce dealers and food experts. Cheese, eggs, live poultry, carrots, celery, lettuce, onions squash, tomatoes, beans and cranberries all commanded higher prices in Montreal than in Boston. The best creamery butter was 1-1-2 cents per pound higher in Boston than in Montreal, while storage creamery butter was one cent higher in Boston. Dressed poultry averaged about the same in the two cities. Hay and oats were considerably higher in Boston.

Since then butter prices have declined in most of the markets of the United States. A leading produce dealer of Montreal received the other day a telegram from Chicago offering him 300 tubs of September creamery butter, cold stored, at 18 cents, Chicago. At the time this telegram was received the same kind of butter was worth 24 cents to 25 cents in Montreal.

Product—	Toronto price	New York price
Best creamery butter in prints, wholesale	... —26c	...—26½
Prime chickens	18 —20	...—15
Prime turkeys	20 —22	...—18
Ducks	18 —20	15—16
Geese	15 —16	...—14
Bacon	16 —16½	...—16½

SKIN SUFFERER TRIED EVERYTHING—THEN D. D. D. CURED

This was the experience of Mrs. Geo. Newman of orangeville, Ont. She wrote in January, 1910,

"I was terribly troubled with eczema on my face, neck and hands for four years. I tried everything I had heard tell of, then saw your advertisement in the paper, sent for a trial bottle of D.D.D., used it on my face and got well. It is now two years and no return of the eczema. I consider I am cured and it certainly was a blessing to me."

No matter how terribly you suffer from eczema, salt rheum, ringworm or any other skin disease, you will feel instantly soothed and the itch relieved at once when a few drops of this compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, Glycerine, etc., is applied. The cures all seem to be permanent, too.

WOMEN SUFFER. MORE THAN MEN.

Women have more than their share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity. They must "keep up," in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, etc. Mrs. Edward Calwood of 128 S. Harold Street, Fort William, Ont., says;

"I suffered with dull, miserable pains, soreness across my back and in my sides for months. They would catch me so badly at times that I could scarcely move around. I would have dizzy spells and altogether, felt generally run down. After using a number or remedies without finding relief, I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and found them an excellent remedy. They not only relieved me of the miserable pains and soreness in my back but cured me of my kidney trouble."

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE;

OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER X.—(Cont'd)

As she met the glance of those black eyes, she shivered, then pride gave her strength. With a bow she was passing him, when Thomas Crawshaw stopped her.

"Wait a bit, Nancy, I want a word with you, if you please."

She turned pale as death.

Was this the fulfilment already of her vague presentiment!

"You seem to have something on your mind, Nancy," Crawshaw went on, fixing her with his eyes; "have you had bad news from home!"

The last sentence roused her anger.

"I have business indoors, Mr. Crawshaw; you will pardon me if I leave you, I——"

"Your business can wait," he said, quietly, and at his tone she shrank back.

There was a nasty air of determination about him; she felt a sudden loathing and fear spring up anew for this man.

"I have waited for this opportunity, Nancy," Crawshaw went on, slowly, "and I am not going to lose it, now I've got it; I have a good deal to say to you, my girl."

He paused, and Nancy, weakened from her long, anxious mental struggle, and faint with the heat, leaned her hand on the top of the rustic seat to support herself.

But though she was physically weak, her mental courage was strong.

"You can have nothing to say to me to which I care to listen," she said, in quiet, forcible tones.

A flash of auger shot across Crawshaw's swarthy face.

"I've got a question to ask you," he replied, shortly, "and I want an answer!"

Nancy turned her eyes upon the roses nodding near. Oh! if they were but human, and could help her to escape this man! She felt a curious sensation, as though a net were suddenly flung about her, and she was being gradually drawn toward her old life.

She passed one cold, trembling hand over her eyes, while Crawshaw watched her carefully.

"You know what it is, Nancy," he remarked, coming a step nearer.

She shook her head and shrank away from him.

Crawshaw's face darkened.

"Your memory must be bad, then," he said, curtly. "There is only one question I am likely to ask you, Nancy, and you've heard it before."

She was trembling in every limb now.

"Then I have but to give you the same answer as I have always done," she replied, in a voice that would tremble.

"I think not."

Crawshaw spoke in ominously calm accents. He paused, and then said, with great deliberation:

"Will you be my wife, Nancy Hamilton?"

She retreated from him with a shudder.

"No—no—never!" she murmured, overwhelmed with fear and disgust: "I—I would sooner die! Let me pass. I——"

But Crawshaw was not to be dismissed so easily; he caught her arm, and drew her back.

"Die or not, you shall be my wife!" he muttered, furiously. His face was pale to his lips, and the effect was horrible, with his coal-black eyes and hair. "I have sworn it, and I mean to stick to my oath."

Nancy wrenched her arm from his grasp.

"I am not the lonely, friendless girl I was," she answered him, though she was trembling in every limb. "I have friends who will protect me from such vulgar threats. I——"

"Friends!" he repeated, passionately. "Yes, I know your friend—your lover, Nancy—the man who gets the kisses that belong to me. Well, go to him, and see if he will protect you, and keep your uncle, Henry Chaplin, out of a prison cell."

Nancy was rushing impetuously away, when his last words stayed her; the hot flush of anger died from her face.

"A prison cell!" she repeated, slowly, yet with growing horror. "My uncle what—what do you mean?"

"I mean," said Crawshaw, speaking very quietly, "that your uncle has very foolishly occupied himself with forging my name to the tune of a couple of hundred pounds; that's what I mean, Miss Nancy. This old scoundrel confessed it to me with his own lips only yesterday."

"And—and—it rests in your hands!"

The girl's lips could get no further.

Mr. Crawshaw took out a gorgeous case, and without an apology lit a cigar.

"Yes," he said, carelessly, flinging away the match, "it rests in my hands whether I will prosecute him or no; or, rather, I should say it rests in yours, Nancy."

"In mine!"

The two words were whispered faintly.

"Yes, in yours. Marry me and I'll say no more about it, though the old chap has done me out of two hundred quid. But you refuse me, and—well, Henry Chaplin will son."

Nancy paused; her brain reeled. Her uncle, her mother's beloved brother—the only creature in the wide world who had given her love and tenderness in those old miserable days—her poor, broken-down uncle in a prison cell!—it was horrible—it——

"I do not believe it!—I do not believe it!" she cried, fiercely, turning on him.

"Then your uncle's own hand must prove the truth. Miss Leicester entrusted me with some letters for you that have arrived by the second post. Unless I am mistaken I see Henry Chaplin's scrawl among them."

He took the letters out of his coat pocket and handed them to her.

Despite herself she took them. She let the others fall to the ground; they were only invitations to garden parties, etc., in the neighborhood; and sinking onto a seat, she opened her uncle's. Her eyes were dim with growing horror and pain, but she read enough to know that Crawshaw had indeed spoken the truth.

"Nancy, for God's saks," the poor creature wrote, "save me! I have seen him. He tells me it rests in your hands, child. By your mother's memory, I implore you, save me from a felon's shame—a felon's cell! I was mad—mad with trouble; but I am sane now. I will work to repay him, but he will give me no time. You can alone save me, Nancy—you!"

She crushed in her hand the written cry of the broken-hearted man, her head sank on her breast, while Crawshaw, standing close beside, watched with breathless eagerness the agony she was enduring.

She lifted her eyes, and gazed at the flowers shedding their fragrance on the air, and some words of the poet came back to her in a vague, strange way:

"I shall never again be friends with roses."

Never again would she feel the tumultuous happiness, the exquisite delight, that had grown with their scent only a few short hours ago. It was gone, never to be returned, never to come again!

A lover's dream, short as a midge's life, had been born beside those roses; and now a tragedy—for what else could such a sacrifice be called?—was in progress beneath them.

She was silent so long that the man grew impatient.

"Well," he said, roughly, "what is it to be? I am waiting for your answer, and I must write to my solicitors by this afternoon's post. Have you thought it all out, and are you going to stick to your lover?"—how his eyes glowed as he spoke of Darnley—"and see your uncle——"

Nancy put out her hand with a shudder.

"No—no—not that—I—I consent to—help him."

"You will be my wife?"

Crawshaw flung his cigar away, and approached her closely.

Nancy could hardly breathe; her strength seemed to leave her suddenly; she shut her eyes to hide his face from her sight.

"Yes," she said, in choked, strained tones, "if—it is—to save him, I—will be your wife."

With an exclamation of triumph, Crawshaw had her in his arms, and kissed her pale, cold lips.

"At last!—at last!" he muttered. "I've vowed it should be, and it has come. I've loved you from first to last. Even now, when I could marry any woman I chose, I've come back to you, Nancy."

He kissed her again, but she made no response, she lay like an image of stone in his arms. Her apathy angered him. He loosened his hold so that she staggered back and nearly fell; but as he came near her all her misery awoke, and she felt as though she would go mad if he touched her.

"Go—go—leave me!" she whispered, shrinking farther away from him.

With a savage exclamation, yet with an exultant heart, Thomas Crawshaw obeyed her.

"I have won," he said, triumphantly, to himself; but as he was moving away he turned. "Understand," he said, curtly, "you've not to utter one word of this to a living soul. Let the world know nothing, except that you are my wife of your own free will. If I find out you have spoken to any one of them, I shall put your uncle's case in the hands of the proper authorities without delay."

If Nancy heard, she made no sign, and as she walked away, glorying in his cowardly conquest, she fell prone on the ground in silent agony and unfathomable despair.

And still the sun shone and the roses nodded, heedless of her broken heart and ruined life, heedless that her joyous spirit is lowered, her loving nature.

"All bereft,
As when some tower doth fall,
With battlements and wall,
And gates, and bridge, and all, the long summer day which heralded the evening of Derrick's return; and she expressed such a decided wish for Miss Leicester's companionship, that despite herself the little mistress of Ripstone Hall had to throw up her own inclinations and attach herself to her aunt, who was also her guest.

CHAPTER XI.

Luncheon was but scantily attended, for Lady Burton and her two daughters, with Capt. and Mrs. Fairfax, had driven over to another lawn-tennis meeting some miles off; and although Lord Merefield was present, and Mr. Crawshaw also, the meal was only a dull affair.

Dorothy struggled hard to join in her aunt's chatty conversation; but she was depressed with the heat, and distressed at Nancy's sudden and most unusual attack of illness.

"If she is not better in an hour's time," she said, in a low voice, to Lord Merefield, whom she felt understood and sympathized with her anxiety, "I shall send for Dr. Knowles. I have never known Nancy to be ill like this before."

"It is the heat," Lord Merefield, of course, hastened to suggest. "'Pon my word, Dolly, my head has been aching like anything all the morning."

"Oh, yes, your head would," Dorothy replied, thoughtfully, glancing at that very boyish object as she spoke. "But Nancy is so different."

Mrs. Darnley caught the last words, and a slight frown came on her face—for an instant; but it vanished as she poured out some more claret and lifted it to her lips.

"Doubtless Miss Hamilton was bored, Dorothy," she said, with a gentle smile and drawl. "I have often found a headache a convenient excuse when I wish to be alone."

Dorothy bit her lip.

"Then I hope you have not suffered as poor Nancy is suffering now, when you made such an excuse, Aunt Anne," she answered, hotly.

Mrs. Darnley elevated her brows in a manner that aggravated her niece beyond description.

"I have just come from Nancy's room," Dorothy went on, hurriedly and angrily; "and if you had seen her, poor girl, I don't think you would have been inclined to doubt her illness. She is as white as a sheet, and her eyes look as though some one had struck her two blows, they are so black all round. She tried to get up and speak to me, but she cannot even open her lips. I am quite determined, Merefield"—turning to her cousin, and addressing him alone—"I am quite determined to have Dr. Knowles here, if she is not better soon."

"I will ride over at once," Lord Merefield offered, eagerly. "It won't take me long, Dolly."

"I shall be very happy to accommodate Miss Leicester," Mr. Crawshaw broke in, blandly. He had been lolling back in his chair, very silent, but with a curious smile hovering about the corners of his mouth, a smile which had vaguely irritated and annoyed Miss Leicester.

BRITISH AMERICA ASSURANCE COMPANY.

Annual Report Shows Good Year's Business.

The report of business done by this Company during 1910, as shown by annual report printed in another column, shows net profits of $163,812.51 after deducting all expenses. The Company's assets are now well over $2,000,000, and surplus to policyholders considerably over $1,000,000. The losses paid by the British America since incorporation in 1833 total the tremendous sum of $34,470,308.91. This splendid record of 78 years continuous business is gratifying to those interested in this Company whether as a policyholder or otherwise.

The re-elected President, Hon. Geo. A. Cox, and Vice-President, W. R. Brock, are well known to Canadians in this as well as in various other administrative capacities.

FORTY POUNDS TOO MUCH.

To be really fat is to be unfortunate, not only on account of the physical discomfort the condition brings with it, but also because the fat are not, and cannot be, either well or long-lived. Furthermore, in spite of these facts, fat persons get little sympathy from their fellows, who are apt to class them roughly as either lazy or gluttonous; and unhappily they are often, although not always, both.

There is good evidence that fat persons themselves are not at all pleased with their fate, for antifat remedies fill the advertisement sheets, with their offer of things to take, or to wear, or to rub on, and one must suppose that here, as elsewhere, supply and demand go together.

It cannot be too definitely understood that "quack" medicines which claim to reduce fat rapidly are dangerous things, and can do their work only by robbing the patient of health and strength faster than they rob him of his fat.

Equally ill-advised is the sufferer who evolves a method of treatment for himself, and without an iota of real knowledge of his own constitution or its needs, starts in to starve or purge or exercise himself into a condition of semi-invalidism. It is true that by this method a few pounds may be lost, but as there is no scientific principle underlying the treatment, the patient either finds the routine too hard and abandons it, in which case the lost pounds rapidly come back with many more, or—as in the case of quack remedies — health and strength go with the flesh.

Medical men to-day are fully aware of the drawbacks and dangers of obesity. They know, as one of them has significantly stated, that "a fat person lives on the brink of a volcano," and the only safe course for the overcorpulent individual is to place himself for treatment in the hands of a good physician, who will make it his business to study the constitutional fault or faults which cause the fat before he outlines the treatment.

This treatment will almost certainly be dietetic, because almost all people who grow stout in middle life are sufferers from gout, and gout cannot be defeated except by strict regulation as to eating and drinking. But the kind of diet will differ with different persons, and most postively be laid out by a medical man, and not by a layman.

Exercise is of next importance after diet, and must also be under scientific control. It is natural for the fat to be disinclined to exercise, and dangerous for them to undertake too much or in too violent a form.—Youth's Companion.

AUSTRALIAN BEE-KEEPING.

The bee-keeping industry in South Australia has made rapid progress during recent years, as the farmers and gardeners generally are realizing the benefits to be derived from possessing a number of hives and working them in conjunction with their other business. In districts where cultivation has not displaced the native timber large apiaries of from 500 to 800 colonies are to be found, and in many instances they constitute the sole occupation of their owner.

A society is being formed at Quilchena, B.C., to promote the importation of marriageable young ladies to that district.

SPRING REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM

Raw, Damp Weather Starts the Pain, but the Trouble Lies in the Blood

Spring weather is bad for rheumatic sufferers. The changes from mild to severe weather, cold, raw, damp winds following mildness start the aches and twinges, or in more extreme cases, the tortures of the trouble going. But it must be borne in mind that it is not the weather that causes rheumatism, the trouble is rooted in the blood—the changeable weather merely starts the pains. The only way to reach the trouble and to cure it is through the blood. The poisonous rheumatic acids must be thrown off and driven out. This is a solemn medical truth every rheumatic sufferer should realize. Liniments and outward application may give temporary relief, but they never did and never can cure rheumatism. Any doctor will tell you this is true. The sufferer is only wasting time and money with this sort of treatment, and all the time the trouble is becoming more firmly rooted—and harder to cure. There is just one sure, speedy cure for rheumatism—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They act directly on the weak, impure and tainted blood. They purify and strengthen it and thus root out the cause of rheumatism. Here is a bit of proof out of thousands of similar cases that might be given. Mrs. F. X. Boisseau, St. Jerome, Que., says:—"For almost two years I was a terrible sufferer from rheumatism. The trouble first located in the right leg, making work about the house impossible, and walking very difficult. I tried to cure myself by means of all sorts of liniments and lotions, but with no result—it was only money wasted. The trouble constantly grew worse and the pains more unbearable. Finally it attacked the other leg, and I was all but helpless and completely discouraged, thinking I would be a sufferer for the rest of my life. At this time I read in our home paper of the trouble being cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them. After using the pills for several weeks I could see that they were helping me, and I continued taking them until I had used nine or ten boxes, when every symptom of the trouble had disappeared and I could walk as well as ever I did. Had I known of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills earlier I would have saved myself much suffering and much money spent in other useless treatment as well."

Whether you are ailing or not a few boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will increase your vitality and give you increased strength to withstand the torrid summer weather coming, when even the strengest feel easily fagged out. You can get these pills from any dealer in medicines or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WHEN SAVAGES DIE.

Cattle, Slaves and Relatives Slain to Accompany Departed.

By many savages the dead are supposed to be only asleep, so the departed spirit must be provided for any contingency. The Tongous races of the South Pacific places weapons on "the grave," etc., to be ready for service the moment the dead man awakes from his temporary repose. "And a like course," says Herbert Spencer, "is followed by the Kalmucks, the Esquimaux, the Iroquois, and by tribes, savage and semi-civilized, too numerous to mention."

The dead man needs not only his inanimate, but also his animate possessions; so his slaves—even his relatives—are slaughtered. "With the Kirghiz chief, says Spencer, "are deposited his favorite horses, as also with the Yakut, the Comanche, the Patagonian; with the Bedouin, his camel; with the Toda, in former times, his entire herd."

"The custom of sacrificing wives and slaves and friends develops as society advances and the theory of another life becomes more definite. Among the Fuegans, the Andamanese, the Australians, with their rudimentary social organizations, wives are not killed to accompany dead husbands. But it is a grace-ice shown us by more advanced peoples."

It was in ancient America, however, that immolation to the dead was carried to its greatest extent. "In Mexico every great man's chaplain was slain that he might perform for him the religious ceremonies in the next life as in this. Among the Indians of Vera Paz, when a lord was dying they immediately killed as many slaves as he had, that they might precede him and prepare the house for their master."

CANCER IS NOT HEREDITARY

DR. HERBERT SNOW EXPLAINS THE SCOURGE.

Purely Local Disease Brought On Largely By Modern Trouble and Worry.

"Mere baby talk, fit only for the nursery and unworthy of scientific men," were the terms in which Dr. Herbert Snow, of London, England, characterized assertions made by vivisectors for results in cancer research obtained by experimenting on living animals. The noted physician delivered a lecture in New York on the subject of cancer and pleaded for the adoption of more intelligent methods in the treatment of the disease.

"One of the greatest bubbles of this generation and one of the greatest frauds is what passes at present for cancer research," said Dr. Snow. "Not a single particle of knowledge has been added by these ridiculous experiments to our comprehension of cancer. The propagation of mouse tumors constitutes a perfectly monstrous bluff on the part of the gentlemen who indulge in this form of research."

DUE TO WORRY.

After reviewing the various forms of cancer, Dr. Snow related his experiences in treating the disease. One of the most common forms, carcinoma, the most frequent cause of fatal results, he said, was induced primarily by worry, care and trouble.

"Cancer," said Dr. Snow, "differs from all other diseases in that it cannot possibly be diverted by hygiene or sanitation. It is caused by the wear and tear of modern civilization. All cancer is local, and begins in a single cell extending itself by a multiplication of the cells."

The physician expressed the belief that alcohol was productive of certain forms of the disease. The use of opium in moderate but continuous doses, he said, had beneficial results in curing or retarding the ravages of the growth. He placed no faith in theories of hereditary cancer, and stated that another fallacy was the belief that it had some relation to the soil or to certain forms of food, such as tomatoes or pork.

HOW TO CHECK ITS RAVAGES.

"The mortality from this disease has increased all over the world. In Great Britain and Ireland it killed 16,813 in 1880; the deaths advanced to 32,941 in 1900 and 37,641 in 1905. How can this great mortality be checked? The answer is extremely simple. A great many of these cases should be arrested. The answer is to educate the doctors to understand cancer scientifically and educate them as practical surgeons.

"There is no disease to which less attention is paid in medical schools. There ought to be special cancer licenses and special examinations on the subject. By such simple means as that you would in a short time greatly retard the terrible ravages of cancer."

DELICATE BABIES NEED BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. H. L. Boone, Tay Mills, N. B., writes:—"I think Baby's Own Tablets are an excellent remedy to keep in the house and I would not be without them. My baby was not exactly sick, but was very delicate, and I gave him the Tablets and they have made him strong and healthy." Such is the testimony of thousands of mothers. Baby's Own Tablets always do good—never harm. They can be given with absolute safety to the youngest child, as they are guaranteed by a government analyst to contain no harmful drugs. Never give baby "soothing" stuffs—that only dopes him. Give him a medicine that will act right on the root of his trouble. A medicine that will strengthen his stomach; regulate his bowels; sweeten the breath and make him bright, healthy and strong—such a medicine is Baby's Own Tablets. They are sold by medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Always Serviceable.—Most pills lose their properties with age. Not so with Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. The pill mass is so compounded that their strength and effectiveness is preserved and the pills can be carried anywhere without fear of losing their potency. This is a quality that few pills possess. Some pills lose their power, but not so with Parmelee's. They will maintain their freshness and potency for a long time.

CARRIED GLADNESS TO HIS HOME

MRS. ANNIE VANVORST'S HEART DISEASE CURED BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

She found quick relief in the old reliable Kidney remedy, and advises all her friends to use Dodd's Kidney Pills.

St. Benedict, Sask., March 20 (Special).—Gladness has replaced the anxiety that reigned in the household of Mrs. Annie Vanvorst of this place. For some time past Mrs. Vanvorst had suffered from Kidney Trouble and palpitation of the heart, and fears were entertained of those terribly sudden fatalities that so frequently accompany affections of the heart. But relief from both ailments was quickly found in the old reliable remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills. In an interview Mrs. Vanvorst says:

"I had palpitation of the heart and my Kidneys were out of order. I took one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and found great relief. For a Kidney pill Dodd's Kidney Pills cannot be beat. You may publish what I say as it may be the means of benefitting others who suffer with Kidney Trouble or Heart Disease."

Pure blood is the basis of all health, and you can't have pure blood unless your Kidneys are in good working order. Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to put the Kidneys in perfect working order.

A 60,000 RUBLE REAPING JOB.

Russian Girls' School Built by Work in a Field of Oats.

M. Maxim Kolibaba, a provincial commissary of the Russian province of the Tauride, had for years attempted to found a girls' intermediate school at Kamrat, but the 60,000 rubles necessary for the building and foundation were not forthcoming. He complained of this to M. Tsanko, a local millionaire, who retorted that he did not believe in education, as what Russia wanted was good agricultural laborers, and sneered at M. Kolibaba as a type of educated good for nothing.

M. Kolibaba retorted that, despite his education, he could reap his own twenty-three acres of oats with a hand sickle and without help, and he undertook to do this in twenty-eight days. The incredulous millionaire declared that if this were done he would subscribe the whole 60,000 rubles needed for the school.

M. Kolibaba thereupon set to work and, despite a temperature of forty degrees Reaumur, reaped the whole twenty-three acres before the term expired. The millionaire fulfilled the terms of the bet, and paid over the 60,000 rubles for building the school.

M. Kolibaba, who lost fourteen pounds during the operation, is now being bombarded by other localities which want schools and expect the commissary to get money for them by further reaping exploits.

It is Wise to Prevent Disorder.—Many causes lead to disorders of the stomach and few are free from them. At the first manifestation that the stomach and liver are not performing their functions, a course of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills should be tried, and it will be found that the digestive organs will speedily resume healthy action. Laxatives and sedatives are so blended in these pills that no other preparation could be so effective as they.

FACE SORES AND ERUPTIONS.

Zam-Buk Will quickly Heal.

The approach of Spring finds many people with unsightly face sores, eruptions, boils, etc. In this connection Zam-Buk is invaluable. Mr. R. H. Barker, of Glencairn, Ont., says:

"I never could have believed that any remedy could cure so quickly and at the same time so effectively as Zam-Buk cured me. My face began to be covered with a kind of rash, which itched and irritated. This rash then turned to sores, which discharged freely and began to spread. I first tried one thing and then another, but nothing seemed to do me much good, and the eruption got worse and worse until my face was just covered with running sores.

"Apart from the pain (which was very bad), my face was such a terrible sight that I was not fit to go out. This was my state when someone advised me to try Zam-Buk. I got a supply, and within a week I could see that the sores were rapidly healing. A little longer, and Zam-Buk had healed them completely, and my skin was as clear as if I had never had a sore."

Zam-Buk is unequalled for Spring rashes, eruptions, children's sores, scalp diseases, ringworm, ulcers, abscesses, eczema, tetter, piles, cuts, burns, bruises, and skin injuries and diseases generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price Zam-Buk Soap, (25c. a tablet) should be used instead of ordinary soap in all cases of eruptions and skin diseases.

Mr. I. B. Carling was in London Monday.

Last week we mentioned in these columns that Mr. John Mitchell had gone to Grand Rapids, Mich., to consult a specialist regarding an operation for the removal of an internal trouble. Mr. Mitchell made the trip and returned from that city on Thursday morning without having accomplished any results. The specialist made a thorough examination of his case, pronouncing it an intestinal growth and advised that Mr. Mitchell go at once to Rochester, Minn., for operation. Mr. Mitchell has suffered much of late from the trouble and in fact his condition is fast becoming critical, consequently he decided to go to London for examination and if deemed advisable will go to Rochester for operation, leaving yesterday (Wednesday) for London. As in the other case Mr. Wilson Anderson of Crediton accompanied him.

The Tercentenary of the Authorized version of the Bible, commonly known as the King James version, was commemorated in Trivitt Memorial Church last Sunday. Appropriate hymns were selected and special prayers authorized to be used for the occasion. The rector, Rev. D. W. Collins, reviewed the growth and development of Bible translation from the earliest days of Christianity. At the morning service the early manuscripts, versions and quotations of the Fathers, the sources of our English Bible, were given due historical consideration. In the evening the translation of the bible as affecting the English people was dealt with. He showed the influence of Celtic, Danish and Norman thought, the monumental work of such men as the Venerable Bede, Alfred the Great, John Wycliffe, William Tyndal, Erasmus and Luther in connection with Bible translation proved very interesting to the large congregation at both services. The wonderful story of the preservation of Holy Scripture, often at the sacrifice of life, cannot be too generally known, and its many truths too firmly held.

BROKE HIS WRIST.—Mr. Matthew Finkbeiner of Stephen sustained a broken wrist on Wednesday morning, the result of falling on the cement floor, feeding his pigs.

A LONG WINTER.—Undoubtedly we forget many things from year to year, but it is not imagination alone that makes this seem like the longest winter we have had for many years. It commenced the last week in October and that is just five months ago. This is a pretty long time of continued snow and ice and cold, and should mean that spring is not far distant. To balance up for this long winter we may reasonably expect an ideal April and May.

CONGREGATIONAL TEA.—A pleasant evening was spent by a large number of the people of James street church on Tuesday, when the ladies served a congregational tea, which was followed by a program. The tea was served from 5.30 to 8 o'clock and was an enjoyable one, there being no lack of the choicest eatables. About $60 was realized by the ladies, who nade a canvass of those present to buy chairs, with which the ladies have reseated the basement. Rev. Hobbs presided at the program, which consisted of an address by Dr. Oaten of Brussels, who was visiting Mr. Hobbs, two choruses by the catachumen class, recitation by Miss Lola Taylor, violin selection by Miss Delight Hobbs, instrumentals by Mr. Phillips, and selections by the Orchestra, which consisted of Messrs. Ed. Treble, Geo. Easterbrook, Willie Birney, Clark Fisher, Miss Hobbs and Mr. Phillips.

DEATH—An Exeter Old Boy passed to the Great Beyond on Wednesday last, March 22nd, in the person of Fred. Brook, who died at his home in Ridgetown, at the age of 40 years, 6 months, and 18 days. Deceased had been ill of lung trouble for some years, and had gradually failed in health until the last few weeks, when it became certain that the grim messenger would soon call him away. Deceased was born in Exeter North, and spent his boyhood days in Exeter, learning the trade of tailoring with the late Alonzo Snell. He worked later in St. Thomas, afterwards going to Ridgetown, where he followed his trade in late years. A wife and one son aged 14, survive him, besides one brother in the West, George, and two sisters, Mrs. Charles Northcott and Miss Mabel of Exeter. The remains were brought here for interment, the funeral taking place from the depot on Friday morning to the Exeter cemetery. The relatives have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

TESTING INVENTION—Messrs. Connor Bros., who have been for sometime manufacturing a gasoline velocipede, an invention of their own, for the G.T.R. superintendent of water service, C. Bugg, for use on the railway, have the machine completed, and on Wednesday morning made a test of the same, Mr. Bugg and Mr. Walter Connor leaving from the Exeter station for London on the trial trip. Before leaving a photo was taken by Mr. Luther Penhale. The invention is a good one and demonstrates once more the genius of the manufacturers. The motor, which is a five and a half horse power, air cooled, was especially designed for marine and traction purposes, and is admirably adapted for the class of work for which it will be used by the railroad. The air-cooling device which the firm has patented has solved the difficulty of cooling which prevented the use of water cooled engines in the frosty weather. The engine is solidly set in a steel truss, also designed and built by the firm, and presented a model of neatness and compactness when on the rail. Mr. Bugg expressed himself as entirely satisfied with the power and efficiency of the motor and the perfect adjustment of the gear. The machine will be inspected by officials of the road in London and Toronto.

BOWLERS RE-ORGANIZE.

SANDY BAWDEN WILL PRESENT A TROPHY.

The annual meeting of the Exeter Bowling Association was held in the Town Hall on Monday evening, when the annual reports were read and received. The bowling fee for members of the association and others was fixed at $5.00, the same as last year. The election of officers resulted:—President, W. J. Heaman; Vice, W. D. Clarke; Secretary, R. N. Creech; Treasurer, N. D. Hurdon; Chap., Rev. D. W. Collins; Auditors, I. B. Carling, J. A. Stewart; Membership Committee, President, Vice-President, Secretary and G. E. Anderson and S. G. Bawden; Tournament Committee, President, Vice-President, Secretary, W. W. Taman and J. G. Stanbury. Mr. Sandy G. Bawden stated that he was offering a trophy for competition by rinks of several clubs in the neighborhood, and he desired that a committee be appointed to confer with him regarding the drawing up of rules and conditions to govern the playing for the trophy. A committee consisting of the President, Secretary and L. H. Dickson was appointed for the purpose. Mr. Bawden was warmly commended by those present and received the thanks of the Association. We have reason to believe that the trophy is a most worthy one, and will go a long way toward boosting the good old game of bowls in the district. In a later issue a description of the Bawden Trophy, and conditions governing the competition will be published.

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE;

OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER XI.—(Cont'd)

Patrician in every fibre, Dorothy's whole nature was jarred by this embodiment of vulgarity, and the strange, sinister look which flashed occasionally from his glittering black eyes, seemed to warn her that not only was the parvenu objectionable, but he could be dangerous, also.

"Thank you," she replied, coldly. "I will not trespass on your kindness, Mr. Crawshaw. My cousin, or one of the grooms, will satisfy me, I know."

Crawshaw's brow contracted, and the smile turned to an ugly expression, but he said nothing; and Miss Leicester, feeling an irrepressible sensation of satisfaction in that she had snubbed him, turned again to Lord Merefield, and to his intense delight, entered into a brisk conversation.

"I should hate to let that man do anything for me or for Nancy," she thought to herself. "I should have a horror that, instead of doing her good, Dr. Knowles would make her worse, if Mr. Crawshaw went to fetch him. How I wish he would go home! I can't bear to see his swarthy face and black eyes about the place. I feel sometimes as if I could strike him, when I see him patronizing dear old dad in the horrible way he does. What on earth has come over Aunt Anne that she should be so civil to him. Brute! I suppose I am very unladylike; but I can't help it if I am."

And having arrived at this conclusion, Dorothy arose from the table.

"You will excuse me, Aunt Anne; I am going into the grounds to ask Murdock to cut me some grapes for Nancy. Come along, Merefield, I want you."

Mr. Crawshaw looked across to Mrs. Darnley as they were alone.

"Miss Leicester don't exactly cotton to me yet," he said, with a sneer.

Mrs. Darnley gave a shiver at the words and tone, but made no reply.

"However," continued the millionaire, as he poured out a strong dose of brandy and water, "that don't trouble me much. I can do without her. Perhaps she'll be a little more civil to me in the future."

He laughed a hard, triumphant laugh as he spoke.

"You have succeeded admirably."

Mrs. Darnley's voice was soft, and now she rose from her seat and moved to the open window, with her usual haughty air.

"I suppose you do not intend to risk any delay or——"

"Or, don't be feared, your son is safe!" sneered Crawshaw. "His reign is over, for good and all, and I don't mean to delay any longer than I like."

Mrs. Darnley was silent for a moment.

"You gave her the letter?" she asked, hurriedly, after a pause.

Crawshaw nodded and smiled once again.

"That was a clever thought of yours," he said, coolly. "'Pon my word, you're a born conspirator!"

Mrs. Darnley's handsome face flushed; she bit her lips, and looked out of the window. Then, as if a sudden and unpleasant thought had just come, she turned to him.

"What if she should go up to town, and——"

Crawshaw strolled across to her, his hands plunged deep in his pockets.

"She can go, if she likes; she won't get no satisfaction from her journey."

"You mean?"

"I mean that by this time Mr. Henry Chaplin and his wife are well on their way to Australia at my expense, bad luck to him!"

"To such love as yours, what matters a few pounds more or less?" observed Mrs. Darnley, sneering in her turn now, and with that she stepped out on to the terrace and sailed majestically away.

Crawshaw muttered something, then lounging through the window, went off to the stables. He felt more at home there than in the house, and he could pose as a great man over the grooms, who a few weeks before would have barely considered him an equal but who now bore with his rough, brutal ways with patience and equanimity, though, perhaps, Mr. Crawshaw would have been not very well pleased—and amazed—if he had heard a few of the remarks passed on him when he had safely disappeared.

"I shall take these up to Nancy," Dorothy said, as she retraced her steps, bearing a huge bunch of exquisite grapes—a trophy of her brisk encounter with Mr. Murdock—"and then I can come down and tell you if I want you to go for Dr. Knowles, Merefield. You will wait for me here."

Where and when would not Lord Merefield have waited for his cousin? He was overwhelmed with his good fortune, and felt almost inclined to bless poor Nancy's illness, for Dorothy had rarely been so sweet to him before.

"If Aunt Anne asks for me, say that you don't know where I am," she commanded, as she moved away. "Thank Heaven," she communed with herself, "Derry returns to-night. I am always afraid of Aunt Anne when he is not here!"

She smiled to herself as she went up the broad, old-fashioned staircase, and then the smile died away as she came to Nancy's door and knocked at it softly. There was no sound from inside, and putting her hand on the knob, she turned it slowly and gently, only to find that the key must have been turned in the lock, for the door would not yield.

Her first feeling was one of alarm, her second one of pain. Nancy had never barred herself from her in this way before. Dorothy's loving heart was vaguely hurt, and altogether there was something strange about the whole affair which she could not understand.

As she stood there hesitating, her maid came out of an adjoining room.

"I beg your pardon, Miss Dorothy," she said, in a whisper, "but I fancies Miss Hamilton have dropped off to sleep. She said as how I was to give you her love, and say she should try and get a hour's rest if she could."

"Oh, very well Baines; see that there is no noise made outside the door. I do not want her to be disturbed," and Dorothy, giving the grapes to the maid, turned and retraced her steps slowly.

Something very like a tear grew in each eye. She had become so linked to Nancy—their simple lives had been drawn so close together during the last few months—that she felt strangely rebuffed and sorrowful at the first break in their affectionate intercourse.

"I know I don't know anything about nursing as she does," she said to herself, "but I—I think I could have done some little thing for her if she would only let me go in."

Then, as she went downstairs, she cleared the shade from her brow, and brushed any reproachful thought from her heart.

"She does it because she knows I would fret if I saw her ill; and, after all, she is best asleep, dear Nancy. She will probably be quite her old self to-night."

If Dorothy could have penetrated the thickness of the door that divided her from her friend, the feeling of anxiety and pain she had suffered at the bare suggestion of illness would have been intensified beyond all description.

Nancy was not asleep; she was not even on the dainty, white-hung bed where of late she had passed such happy nights, visited by girlish, joyous dreams.

She was sitting on a low chair, her red-brown tresses strewn in rough disorder on her shoulders, her two small, cold, trembling hands supporting her aching head; her two large, lustrous eyes fixed on the carpet at her feet with an expression so strained, so unnatural, that at one glimpse the bluntest intelligence might have read the despairing agony that crowded her breast.

How she struggled from the rose garden to the safe haven of her own room Nancy never knew. She hoped to have escaped detection, more especially from Dorothy's loving eyes; but to her sorrow that was not to be.

The first free moment she had from Mrs. Darnley's strangely persistent claims on her courtesy, Dorothy flew up to Nancy's room, and arrived just in time to see our poor heroine stagger, rather than walk, up the stairs, with her white, fixed face, and horror-stricken eyes.

Her dismay, as we know, was more than great; and Nancy had to curb her agony to try and soothe the golden-haired girl, who had never seemed so dear to her as now, in this, the most supreme sorrow of her young life.

But once Dorothy was gone, and the key was turned securely in the lock, Nancy had no further need of restraint, and with one broken moan she flung herself into the low chair, trying in vain to still the pain in her burning throat and temples, and to steel herself for the night and Darnley's return.

Derry! Ah, what a world of misery was written in that word!

"Thou hadst thy short sweet till of half-blown joy."

The line rushed to her mind. Sweet, indeed, indeed it had been, and short! Born for one day, and killed the next!

Why had she ever known that he cared for her? Why had she not been left in ignorance? To have known the exquisite joy that his passionate vows, his tender kisses, had awakened, and to realize she must lose them now was an anguish immeasurable.

At one time she felt with a wild, tumultuous throb, that the task was too great, that she could not carry the sacrifice out; then her uncle's pale, worn face flashed to her mind, the memory of all he did for her returned to clamour in her ears; and Crawshaw's cruel black eyes shone before her, speaking only too plainly that he would give no mercy, and that on her, and her alone, the verdict rested. And then another vision would rise; a stern, handsome face, whose lips melted into a smile of tenderness, whose deep-gray orbs gazed into hers as though to search into her very heart itself. Ah! how dear that vision was—how inexpressibly dear—graven on her soul for ever! It was her lover's countenance; her hero—her ideal—hers!—no, no; he was hers no longer; she must shut out the memory of these eyes, she must wipe away the image from her heart—henceforth he was nothing to her—she belonged to another.

A shuddering sigh broke from her poor, pale lips, a wan smile played for an instant over them.

"But Dorothy loves him; I—I shall have saved her pain, whatever comes; that must be my comfort."

Then the pent-up agony broke at last—she flung out her arms with a gesture of desperation.

"Oh, Derry, Derry! My darling!—my darling! I cannot let you go; I shall die if I lose you now!"

The words sank away into a moan, and, crouching on the floor beside her bed, Nancy hid her face on the silken quilt, and wept such tears as had never come to her eyes before, even though all her early share of life's sorrows; tears that sprang from a broken heart; a heart brave, strong, noble, yet crushed beneath the burden that had fallen upon it.

CHAPTER XII.

The rest of the house party arrived at the Hall in good time for dinner; the Misses Chester were in marvellous spirits, but Lady Burton was blandly annoyed, and Mrs. Fairfax downright irritable, and the cause of this was not very difficult to determine; neither Lord Merefield or Mr. Crawshaw had exhibited the faintest wish to attend as escort to Lady Burton and her fair Amazonian daughters; and in the absence of Derrick Darnley Mrs. Fairfax had been left without an available cavalier, which was as unusual as it was annoying to the pretty faded little matron.

Dorothy was out on the lawn with her father when the guests returned; she had been pouring out her anxiety to him about Nancy's illness, and both of them were rejoicing at that very moment, for she had just shown herself at her window, and waved her hand to them.

Sir Humphrey's good-natured face wore an expression of vexation so new to it that Dorothy, twining her arm in his, and her mind freed from further care on Nancy's account, determined to know what it meant.

"It is nothing, my darling," her father replied, hastily, but that did not exactly please Dorothy.

"You don't look like that for nothing, dad," she observed; "quick, before the others come!"

"Well," Sir Humphrey said, slowly, "I have been a trifle ashamed and disgusted, that is all!"

"You!" Dorothy's tone was pride itself. "You ashamed, daddy!"

"I was in the stable yard just now; I rode Cherry in there to save Foster the bother of coming to fetch her at the steps, and I arrived just in time to see Mr. Crawshaw behave like the brute he must be; he had chained his collie up all this long, hot day. Foster tells me he has been itching to let the poor beast go, and then, because she happened to jump at him, to welcome him, no doubt, he kicked her so severely, and so savagely, that I am much afraid it will be all over with her."

HEALTH

A POUND TOO MUCH.

In a former article we spoke of the dangers that lie in wait for the overcorpulent, and especially the danger of self-treatment or quack treatment. The advice of a reputable physician is as much needed in this condition as in one of acute illness. The reason for this is that the treatment is largely dietetic, and must be based on individual needs, but it does not follow that the victim of oncoming flesh is powerless to do anything for his own relief. On the contrary, his destiny lies largely in his own hands.

To begin with, flesh-making, like most bad physical tendencies, cannot be attacked too early. If a determined fight is begun on the first extra pound that appears,—begun and kept up,—the engagement will be comparatively easy. But it must be remembered that the first attack of fat is a very insidious thing.

It seems quite safe to wait a little before stopping candy and pastry and sweets. Your friends tell you it is very "becoming." You hear round you the pleasant words, "comfortable," "plump," "well-covered," and a bland and fatal ease envelops you, till one day you catch sight of yourself in a glass, and lo! you are fat!

Then you wish in vain that you had started to fight when there were only a few pounds arrayed against you, instead of forty. But it is never too late to mend—or to unmend.

If really and truly fat, make a bee-line for your doctor. Implore of him a diet list and an exercise sheet, and live by them. If, on the other hand, you are wisely taking things at the start, a little determination and restraint may serve you.

Cut off ruthlessly your candy, cakes, pies, puddings and sweets, generally. Do not touch a crumb between meals, and learn to take your tea and coffee—if you must take them—without sugar. Sugar in beverages is only a habit, anyway.

As you cut down your diet you must add to your exercise. Most people credit themselves with taking exercise whether they do or not. They hear so much about it that they are convinced they must be doing it. In many cases it is a mere farce—languid movements about the house, deliberate strolling outdoors. That must be changed. Move briskly, walk fast, breathe deeply if you would reduce your flesh. Follow up the daily bath with vigorous rubbing with a rough towel, take a course of exercises before dressing, and then all day long treat yourself as the policeman treats the tramp—with the order to "move on."—Youth's Companion.

WHEN EXERCISE IS HARMFUL

"Office workers should not take exercise after their day's work," says Dr. E. A. Walker of Boston. "The root reason is that though headwork is not exercise in the sense that it develops the body, it most decidedly is exercise in that it quickly induces fag and physical lassitude. So it is almost pathetic for a man to expect any good to come from taking more exercise when the exercise involved in the day's work has already tired him out.

"One takes it that young people have had sufficient outdoor exercise reasonably to develop their frames before beginning office work. So when once they have started in the office in earnest it is much better for them to realize at once that their days of hard physical strain are over and that henceforth they must confine these efforts to week ends and holidays.

"The body and system easily attune themselves to circumstances even to overcivilized and consequently rather unnatural circumstances, and indoor headworkers will soon find that a good state of health can be maintained with little or no exercise."

SPRAYING.

Two classes of enemies attack fruit trees and plants, viz: insects and fungous diseases. The application of substances, usually liquid, to the tree or plant for the purpose of preventing or destroying these constitutes spraying.

We spray to destroy insects and to prevent fungous diseases. Spraying is no longer an experiment. It is an established fact that intelligent and persistent spraying always pays. The effects of spraying are cumulative. The effects of spraying last year and this year may result in an increased yield next year. An instructive bulletin issued by the Wisconsin Horticultural Society, has the following to say regarding spraying: The insects affecting fruit may be divided for convenience into two classes, which are distinguished by their mode of feeding, viz.: eating or chewing insects and sucking insects.

Eating insects consume the affected tissues, commonly the leaves, and thereby hinder the functions of the plant. The common example is the potato bug or beetle. Insects of this class are destroyed by poisoning their food. Sucking insects do not consume the external tissues of the plant, but feed only on the sap. In order to accomplish this the insect thrusts its proboscis through the external coverings and sucks the juices in the same way as a mosquito sucks blood. As these insects do not consume the tissue of the leaf or branch, poisons are of no avail. We must therefore attack the insects. This is done by covering them with some substance which will penetrate their bodies, or with substance which closes their breathing pores. To repeat:

1—Biting or chewing insects are destroyed by placing poison on the parts on which the insects feed.

2—Sucking insects are destroyed only by attacking the insects, and for this class poisons are of no avail.

Apple scab, brown rot of plums and peaches, potato rot, blight, rust and other destructive plant diseases are commonly ascribed to weather conditions. Indirectly this is often true, but neither rain nor drought nor any other atmospheric condition is ever directly the cause of plant diseases.

Rainy weather does not directly cause plum rot, but provides conditions favorable to the development of the fungus, and probably unfavorable conditions for the development of the plum and its ability to resist the invasion of the disease.

Fungi (plant diseases) are propagated by spores, minute bodies which may float in the air and are usually too small to be discerned singly without using a compound microscope.

These spores alight on leaf or fruit and under favorable conditions of heat and moisture germinate, giving rise to threadlike projections which penetrate the plant's tissues.

The main fact to be borne in mind is this: The spores which may be present in innumerable numbers may be destroyed or their germination prevented by the application of certain substances known as fungicides, while existing as spores on the outside of plants, but after these have penetrated the tissue of leaf, stem or root, spraying is of no avail. In other words spraying for plant diseases must be wholly prevention.

The following formula for Bardeaux Mixture is used as a preventive of fungous diseases, as potato blight, apple scab, etc. Various formulas are quoted, but the following is now accepted as safe and reliable:

Copper sulfate, five pounds; fresh lime, five pounds; water, 50 gallons.

Either arsenate of lead or paris green may be safely combined with bordeaux mixture. In fact, in all orchard spraying operations it has come to be a common practice to add either paris green or arsenate of lead to bordeaux at every application. By this means biting insects and fungi are controlled at a single operation. No other fact is more important than this in spraying.

Arsenate of lead is a poison for biting insects and is less liable to injure foliage than Paris green. It remains longer in suspension. It adheres better to foliage. It may be used for any purpose for which paris green is employed in liquid sprays. The formula is: Arsenate of lead, two to three pounds; water 50 gallons.

FISH RECIPES.

Oyster Pie.—Line a deep baking dish with a good pie crust. One quart of oysters, the small kind will do. Put a layer of the oysters on the bottom. Season with salt and pepper and a little parsley or use a little celery seed, then a layer of sliced potatoes, then add a layer of pie crust up in small pieces, then another layer of oysters, until the pan is nearly full. Add the liquid. Cover with a crust on top, make several holes in top, and bake about one hour. This is a good dinner with little work and wil iserve a family of six.

Baked Oyster Loaf.—One and one-half pounds of round beefsteak and the same quantity of fresh lean pork, ground fine. Add to the ground meat one quart of fresh oysters, three eggs, and eight soda crackers rolled fine. Salt and pepper to taste. Mix all together into a loaf and bake one hour, with one pint of water. Baste frequently.

Lobster Patties.—One cup cream sauce, one cup lobster meat, a slightgrating of nutmeg, one teaspoon lemon juice, salt and pepper to taste, one egg yolk. Puff paste patty shells: Make cream sauce by blending in a saucepan two tablespoons of butter with the same quantity of flour; then when smooth add half a cup each of milk and thin cream. Stir till boiling, cook five minutes, and then put in the seasoning and lobster cut into dice. Heat thoroughly and just before serving, add the yolk of the egg. Fill the shells and serve.

Fish Chowder.—For a party of six, three pounds of fish, cut into small squares, one dozen potatoes, and six onions, sliced. Fry one-fourth pound salt pork, cut in thin strips; put all into a stewpan and cover with water. Cook slowly until tender. Add one quart of sweet milk and one pound of milk crackers, and let it remain until it comes to a boil. Serve hot.

Sauted Oysters.—Wash and pick over one pint oysters, add one pint stale bread crumbs, salt and pepper to taste, add one egg lightly beaten; let them stand fifteen minutes, then lay by tablespoonfuls into a frying pan with a little hot butter. Brown well on both sides, serve as soon as possible.

Fish Salad.—Break cold cooked halibut into convenient pieces, removing all skin, bone, and fat; marinate with terragon or spiced vinegar and set to one side for an hour; arrange on lettuce leaves and serve with mayonnaise or sauce tartare.

Shirred Oysters.—Chop twenty-five large oysters fine, add the beaten yolks of two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of cream, sufficient dry bread crumbs to thicken, and salt and pepper to taste. Fill the cleaned shells with the mixture. Put little pieces of butter on top and bake in a quick oven until lightly browned.

APPLES.

Gateau of Apples.—Stew five or six large apples, peeled and cored, with one cup sugar, juice and grated rind of a lemon; stir until they are a thick, dry marmalade; turn into a mold and leave till cold. Serve with boiled custard and whipped cream.

Buttered Apples.—Pare and core some apples without breaking them; put half a pint of water and a cup sugar on to boil; let boil up once or twice, then simmer the apples carefully until tender; lift out gently and arrange on a dish; place a small piece of butter on each and a little apricot jam on top; pour the syrup round.

Apples a la Paysanne.—Butter a pie dish, peel as many apples as will go in the dish, core them and put a little butter in each; pour one-half pint water and one glass cherry brandy. Bake one-half hour and serve with powdered sugar.

Apple Cream.—Peel and core six large apples, stew with a little water two ounces of raisins and the grated rind of a lemon till quite soft. When cold add a glass of sherry and put in a pie dish; beat the whites of three eggs very stiff, add a little sugar, spread it over the apples, and bake in a slow oven.

Apple Souffle.—For this pare and slice six or seven good juicy apples and stew in a closely covered jar without a drop of water, then beat to a pulp and add two tablespoonfuls of fresh butter and one cup sugar. When cool whip in the yolks of three eggs; whip up the whites (an extra white is an improvement) very stiff and whip into the pulp along with one cup of fine bread crumbs; flavor with nutmeg, cloves, or grated lemon rind; beat all lightly until it looks like frothed cream; bake in a buttered dish in a moderate oven for nearly an hour; keep dish covered until within ten minutes of serving to prevent crust forming. Serve hot in dish it was baked in. Serve with lemon or custard sauce.

THE SEWING ROOM.

If you wish to freshen a faded yoke of an evening dress which may be used for the remainder of the season, try painting the figures with oil paints or dyes. A sheer white dress may be treated with a setn-cil design in roses.

A sailor's bag of white [illegible] makes an excellent laundry [illegible] a boy's room. Besides being s[illegible]ng and washable, it will prove attractive to the boy and an inducement to keep his room shipshape.

When children's waists become too small or short or too small in the armhole, rip the shoulder seam and set in elastic webbing. This will not only make the waist comfortable again, but will give added length to the petticoat.

When making pieces of hand embroidery try adding a mark of your own. Small cross stitch designs are pretty and not too noticeable.

When sewing one the sewing machine, if the thread breaks easily, soak spool and all in water for about two minutes. This rule applies to any quality of thread.

In making dresses of silk or any light weight material, instead of French seaming them simply baste the seams up in the usual way, then hem them on the foot hemmer. This makes a smaller, neater finish than French seaming, and you have the seam sewed up and finished with one stitching. When one has a number of dresses to make, especially skirts with many gores, this will be found to be an immense saving of time and energy, and will be much nicer than French seaming or overcasting, as the seam will not draw.

VALUABLE HINTS.

If a quick dessert is wanted, use popovers. As the batter is poured into the tins, add a piece of fruit to each; served with a simple syrup; these popovers are delicious.

Kid gloves may be cleaned, when slightly soiled, with a small piece of oiled silk wound tightly about the finger and rubbed vigorously over the surface of the glove.

When the head of a hatpin comes off if it is of glass, porcelain or wood, melt a bit of resin, stick the pin into the resin, insert it in the ornament, and it will hold well.

A delicious hard sauce is made with the usual tablespoonful of butter, creamed with a cupful of sugar and two tablespoonfuls of whipped cream beaten in at the last.

For starching muslins, ginghams and calicoes, dissolve a piece of alum the size of a hickory nut for every pint of starch. This will keep the color bright for a long time.

When your hot-water bottles leak do not throw them away, but fill with hot sand. Make the sand hot in the oven and pour into the bottle. It will keep hot much longer than water.

When dusting ceilings and walls it is a good plan to fit the broom-head with a bag, provided with a string to draw it close. With this the ceiling and walls can be conveniently dusted.

A good silence cloth for the dining table can be made wiht a double thickness of white flannel laid with the soft side on the inside and quilted on th e machine; edge with a binding of white tape.

Mutton dripping will not set hard and suety, as it usually does, if directly the fat is poured from the baking tin, the vessel containing it is put at the back of the stove and allowed to stay there until the stove itself cools.

When oysters are left over from stews or creamed mixtures they can be chopped and used as salad or croquettes. For the former the tye must be removed, and it is better to do so for any cooking where the whole oyster is not essential.

Celery Relish—Chop in tray with chopping knife all parts of celery not usable on the table as sticks. Pack in pretty bowl and sprinkle over it a sugarspoon of granulated sugar and dash of salt. Press down and nearly cover with pure cider vinegar. Let stand one day before using.

A good wal to save eggs which have been broken through accident is to press the edges of the shells together, then cover with parafin. If the shell is too badly broken to save in this manner, beat the eggs well, put in a dish, and cover over with parafin, set in a cool place, and they will keep fresh for a long time.

Pastry Help—To make flaky pie crust save a portion of the thoroughly mixed flour and lard (or butter) to use instead of flour when rolling out the pastry for pie or tart crusts. The crust when baked will always be light and flaky. This is an old and tried recipe.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, APRIL 2.

Lesson I. — Elisha Heals Naaman the Syrian, 2 Kings 5. Golden Text, Isa. 45. 22.

Verse 1. By him Jehovah had given victory unto Syria—Naaman is unknown to history except through this story, and we are uncertain whether victories over Assyria are meant, or conquests of Israel. Either is plausible. Syria had already felt the power of the expanding kingdom of the Assyrians, while Israel, on the other hand, had suffered from the depredations of the Syrians. A well-founded tradition, supported by Josephus, makes Naaman the soldier who, at the battle of Ramoth-Gilead, "drew his bow at a venture," thereby killing king Ahab.

But he was a leper—This more than offset his rank, the honor in which he was held by the people, the favor he had won from Benhadad, and his great courage. The strange thing about his affliction, however, was the fact that it did not cause his isolation, as would have been the case in Israel.

2. The Syrians had gone out in bands—Being little encumbered, it was easy for them to make a raid upon an unprotected section of country and make off with plunder before they could be followed.

3. Would that my lord were with the prophet—This is a commentary upon the attractive character of Naaman, which made a little girl fond of him, and a king furnish extravagant sums for his cure, and the servants solicitous of his welfare (verses 5 and 13).

5. A letter unto the king of Israel—He took it for granted that the king could command the services of this man of God. Little did he know of the independent spirit of the prophets. The gift which he sent along with the letter was an immense one, no less than $50,000 of our money.

7. The king . . . rent his clothes—Nothing was said in the letter about the prophet, and Jehoram could see in the message only an occasion for a quarrel, and there was nothing he dreaded more than the hostility of his warlike neighbor. It seems strange that the thought of Elisha did not occur to him, for the invasion of Moab had brought him into special prominence before the king, and even a little maiden knew about his works of wonder and believed he was equal to an incurable disease like leprosy.

11. Naaman was wroth—His pride and patriotism had both been hurt. First, he was made to stand as a suppliant at the door of the house of Elisha (9). Then, instead of being received by Elisha in person, as his rank would seem to demand, he was greeted by a messenger (10). But the prophet was determined to humble still farther this man who came with such show of worldly pride (compare verses 5, 6, 9). Let him bathe in the Jordan if he would be clean. This was a climax of offensiveness. Why was it necessary to take this long journey of thirty miles and to wash in a muddy stream like Jordan, when his own Damascus was famous for its clear and beautiful streams, its Abanah and Pharpar (12)? Naaman had expected to be received with great deference and cured by some sort of magic (11).

13. My father—An unusual term of affection and respect. Surely, they reasoned, a man of such courage would not have shrunk from some great and difficult test. Why, then, should he refuse this easy and humble one?

14. His flesh came again—There was no thaumaturgical power in the waters of the Jordan, but there was power in God, and that power became available to Naaman, because he obeyed in humility of spirit.

15. The cure had two immediate results: (1) Naaman's acknowledgment of Jehovah as the true God, and his remarkable decision to give himself to the service of Jehovah. (2) His gratitude which impelled him to return the entire distance and urge upon Elisha the acceptance of a present. And now, thoroughly humbled (notice his words, thy servant), Naaman is admitted into the presence of Elisha, and the latter's hope is realized, that this warrior should know that in Israel was a prophet, a man of God, and not a mere cunning necromancer like those in Damascus (compare verse 8).

16. He urged him to take it, but he refused—Such gifts were customary at heathen oracles, and were not prohibited in the case of the prophets (2 Kings 4. 42). But Elisha, living as he did a life of few wants, could afford to abjure all rewards in the solemn language, As Jehovah liveth before whom I stand, I will receive none. This would impress Naaman with his superiority to the sorcerers, as well as his disinterestedness.

17-19. These verses present two points over which there has arisen some controversy: (1) The meaning of the two mules' burden of earth. It seemed to Naaman that even the soil presided over by such a God must be sacred. It was a universal belief that the god of each land could be worshipped only on his own soil. Similar semisuperstitious feelings are not uncommon to-day. (2) Naaman's wish to be forgiven when he attended his king as heretofore in the temple of Rimmon to worship there. This was a real difficulty. The captain of the king's host had made up his mind to serve only Jehovah, and yet, in the prosecution of his official duties, it would be necessary for him to follow the king's example and bow down before the image of the Syrian god of thunder. The answer given by Elisha shows that he took the correct view of this request, looking upon it as the sign of a fine conscience rather than as a compromise with evil. There is a warning here, however, that we must beware of an external conformity to a system in which we do not believe.

20. My master hath spared this Naaman the Syrian—The words are uttered in contempt. The foreigner had received an enormous boon for nothing, and the narrow, covetous spirit of Gehazi rebelled against such fanatical sentimentality.

As Jehovah liveth—By using the same religious symbol which his master had employed in refusing the present, he adds blasphemy to meanness. Sacred words become degraded when uttered lightly to no purpose.

21-24. Having stifled the voice of reason and of conscience, it was not hard to pass on to lying and fraud, and a treacherous act that compromised his master and friend and did much to annul the high-mindedness which had prompted him to spurn the offer of money.

25. Stood before his master — Once more the servant of Jehovah confronts the evildoer like an accusing conscience (compare the case of Elijah and Ahab).

27. He went out . . . a leper—The punishment was terrible in its appropriateness, but it has supplied a lesson for all time of the wretched results of a base cupidity.

THE TWO BRITISH SPIES

TRENCH AND BRANDON IN GERMAN FORTRESS.

They Have Been Assigned to Agreeable and Comfortable Quarters.

With the exception of the organs of the Pan-German League, the German press is trying to make the four years' sentence meted out by the Leipsic court to Capt. Bernard Frederic Trench and Lieut. Vivian Ronald Brandon as pleasant as possible. One writer, Herr Reinhold Cronheim, even gives his own reminiscences of his incarceration for three months at Glatz, where Capt. Trench has been assigned to "agreeable and comfortable quarters, from which he is able to enjoy the magnificent view offered by the surrounding mountains."

Meanwhile, Lieut. Brandon, from the window of his apartment at Wesel, "has a beautiful view of the Rhine, which flows past the town." Both English prisoners have plenty of room for outdoor exercise in their respective fortress prisons, while they are privileged to enjoy the pleasures offered by the library, gymnasium and other conveniences at Glatz and Wesel.

Here is Herr Cronheim's interesting account of his three months' "honorable custody" in Glatz:

EXCELLENT HOTEL.

"I arrived at Glatz from Berlin and went to an excellent hotel, where I slept before presenting myself to the commanding officer of the fortress, Gen. ———. Next morning I expected to meet a 'fire-eater,' but instead of that I saw before me a benevolent-looking, chivalrous old man, who looked at me through his eyeglasses. The General said to me: 'Your arrival was announced, but I cannot yet put you up in the fortress. I thought you would come to-morrow or the day after, and have not yet had your room heated. It is extremely cold in the fortress now. Just wander about the town to-day meanwhile I will have all preparations made for your reception, and toward evening everything will be ready for your visit.' The General then mentioned several regulations, saying that whenever allowed leave beyond the fortress boundaries prisoners must not go beyond a radius of two miles.

"Toward evening I ascended a steep hill to the fortress, and knocked at the heavy portal, whereupon a sentry appeared, I said: "I am a new prisoner,' and the sentry replied, 'I know everything; your room is well heated, and the lamp is lighted.' I was ushered into an immense room lighted by a petroleum lamp suspended from the ceiling. In the background was a camp bed, and near it a stove, a small table, two chairs and a washstand. Since that time the conditions have changed radically, and now prisoners in the fortress have much more luxurious quarters. A few minutes later another soldier entered the room, saluted, and reported himself for service. Up till this moment I had not fully realized the luxuries of 'honorable custody' in the fortress. This soldier had come to place himself at my disposal and to act as my valet during my period of detention.

THE FIRST EVENING.

"That first evening I sent my visiting card by my soldier valet to all the other gentlemen in 'honorable custody' in the fortress, and begged them to return my call personally, and without delay. It would be improper for me to mention the names of my guests at the banquet which ensued, because many of them are to-day occupants of high offices and have been recipients of notable marks of distinction, but that liberal measure of freedom allowed us by Gen. ———. Certainly the fortress is not an ideal place of residence, but since I was there I have often been seized with a longing once more to be there and to enjoy that magnificent outlook over the mountains which presents itself to the lover of nature. In winter and spring one can have a fine time at Glatz, even if one be a British captain convicted of espionage."

MAKING A GARDEN.

It was the busy hour of four
When from a hardware store
Emerged a gentleman who bore
1 hoe,
1 spade,
1 wheelbarrow.

From thence our hero promptly went
Into a seed establishment
And for these things his money spent:
1 peck of bulbs,
1 job lot of shrubs,
1 quart of assorted seeds.

He has a garden under way
And if he's fairly lucky, say,
He'll have about the last of May
1 squash vine,
1 egg plant,
1 radish.

THE CATTLE MARKET

Many farmers are beginning to find out that they made a mistake last fall and during the winter in buying feeding cattle at high prices. The buying was done largely because feed was very plentiful. It is said that the recent decline in prices is going to last, and when the selling time comes all the farmer will be ahead of the game will be the increased weight of the cattle, if he is even that. The farmer who puts up cattle for finishing for market a few months hence, always takes a chance. He stands to make a good thing on his investment or to lose money on the deal. So long as conditions governing the market when his finished cattle arrive are influenced only by the law of supply and demand, no one is to blame if the feeder is in a losing game. But the rumor is current indicating that the cattle market just now is not to be allowed to work itself out in a normal way. These may be only rumors, and have little foundation in fact. At the same time one cannot but feel a little sympathy for the farmer who paid out hard earned cash for high priced feeders last fall and spent time and good feed in fitting his animals for market, only to find rumors floating around that he is not to have clear sailing in getting the price which the normal condition of the market warrants him in expecting.

Good roads will lead to the general improvement of the countryside. The farmer who drives to and from town over a spacious, smooth, well-cared-for road will unconsciously come to effect corresponding improvements in the management and operation of the farm.

The State Agricultural College of Missouri has a cow that produced 17,008 pounds of milk in six months, or an average of 46.7 quarts per day, which is equal to a large glass of milk for two hundred children. She is milked four times a day. For a year her milk will produce a revenue of $1200 to $1500.

The Globe stated recently.—"John Middleton and his three sons are Conservative farmers of Goderich Township, who are in favor of reciprocity." In a letter to the Clinton News-Record Mr Middleton states that they were never interviewed by the Globe, and that they are not in favor of reciprocity. If that is a fair sample of the supposed interviews being daily published in the Globe its readers are being badly deceived as to the sentiment of farmers on the reciprocity question.

From every view point the farming class of this county is in better shape now than ever before. More people own their own homes and farms; more are free from the yoke of bondage inflicted by burdensome debts; more are becoming independent each year by making a comfortable living for their families; more are waking up to the necessity of giving their children better educational advantages, and withal prosperity and contentment seem to prevail throughout the country. May it continue so.

GLOBE TROTTER IN ONTARIO.

Julius Rath is now walking through Southern Ontario, on his fourth circuit of the world. He is on a 500,000-mile walk for a prize of $30,000, and has to have the distance completed by 1915. He has 25,000 miles yet to cover.

Rath has already covered 475,000 miles. He started when he was fourteen years old for a prize of $30,000 put up by the St. Louis Club, and if he is not overtaken by sickness, he expects to capture the money without difficulty. When travelling the ocean he has to walk twelve hours on the steamer. He left St. Louis in 1897, and in his travels he has filled 250 books of signatures from the officials of towns and cities he has visited, and 500 books on his experiences. He has worn out 400 pairs of shoes, and discarded his 431st pair in Chatham. He says that with all his walking he does not even know what a corn is, and his feet never trouble him. Rath leads by a chain an odd looking dog which is half wolf and half husky and it was given him in Alaska. He has had four dogs for company since he started. The feet of one dog wore off, another died from fatigue and two others took sick and had to be left behind.

HICKS' FORECASTS—A reactionary storm period is in progress as we pass from March into April. Storms of rain wind and thunder will culminate on and touching Sunday the 2nd, winding up with possible snow in northern extremes Rising barometer, fair weather and frosty nights will visit most parts of the country between the 2nd and 5th. A seismic period, which is central on March 30th, will reach three or four days into April. A regular storm period covers the 4th to the 8th, having its centre on the 6th. Falling barometer, change to much warmer, with growing cloudiness and storms will begin in the West by the 4th and 5th. During the 6th to 8th, storms of rain, wind and thunder will make their transit from west to east, touching most parts of the country. These storms will be in the form of heavy April showers, breaking into severe thunder squalls and hail storms in many localities. Fair weather and cool nights, with possible frosts northward, will follow these storms.

Conrad Kuhn arrived home on Friday from St. Joseph's Hospital, London, at which place he went through an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Kuhn is to be congratulated upon his rapid recovery. His many friends are indeed glad to see him home again and we hope his strength and good health will return in the very near future.

Chas. Zwicker and Albert Morlock on Tuesday made a business trip to London.

Word was received here on Monday that Albert Brown, eldest son of John F. Brown, died in Paynton, Sask., from an attack of pneumonia. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family.

Fishermen from the Bend made their first appearance in town on Tuesday.

Large quantities of maple syrup and sugar have been made by our farmers during the past two weeks. The few warm days made a good flow of sap.

During the past week a Prof. Johnston has been entertaining our people with concerts in the Town Hall. He is an artist in the slight-of-hand tricks and ventriloquism. On the side he sold medicine for a Toronto firm. On Saturday night he got rid of a large number of boxes of herbs, and now we may expect the doctor of this town to be an idle man and pull in his sign.

John Cornish moved his household effects to the farm he bought from F.W. Baker on Tuesday.

The special anniversary services of the Evangelical church were held last Sunday. The morning service was conducted by the Rev. Bean, resident pastor. In the evening Rev. Hobbs of the James Street church, Exeter, occupied the pulpit and preached an eloquent sermon.

On Monday evening Rev. Hobbs gave his very interesting lecture, "The Manly Man," to a large audience. All enjoyed the discourse very much. Miss Lillian Elliott of Centralia sang two beautiful solos, which were well rendered.

CREDITON EAST.

On Tuesday night, March 21st about sixty of the neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Baker to spend a social evening before they left for Exeter, where they will reside. The evening was spent in games, music and other amusements. In the course of the evening a handsome dinner set and the following address were presented to the worthy couple:—

To Mr. and Mrs. Baker and Family—

Dear Friends,—It is with feelings of deep regret that we have learned of your intended departure from among us and we meet here to-night to bid you farewell. While with us you have always shown forth the true spirit of friendship and neighborliness in your unselfish lives and thoughtfulness for others, always exhibiting an interest and sympathy in all that made for the happiness and well-being of the community. We have always felt and realized that we could look to you as friends, ready, not only to share the joys, but also the deepest sorrows we were called upon to pass through.

We ask you to accept this present not for its intrinsic value, but as a remembrance of your association with us as a token of the esteem in which you are held by the neighborhood. We trust that in your new home you will find true friends and that your lives may be all that God's greatest gifts both temporal and spiritual may make them.

Signed in behalf of the neighborhood.

A suitable reply was made by the host and hostess.

Parsons secretary for the evening. The following officers were elected:—Chairman, S. Davis; Secretary, W. J. Parsons; Treasurer, Harold Duplan; Manager; William Boyle; Captain, Harold Swann. The club starts off with excellent prospects this year. Financially they are strong, the boys having got up a good subscription list. Karki suits trimmed with red have been ordered and should give the boys a first-class appearance on the grounds. We have good material for a first-class team and with practice the boys will no doubt give a good account of themselves The enthusiasm runs high and we trust that all the good citizens will come out and help the boys along.

Canadians Eat Eggs from Many Countries

We Bought over Nine Million Eggs from the United States Last Year and Large Quantities from China.

Canada imported 898,324 dozen eggs during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1910. From the United States alone 757,816 dozen eggs came to Canada. China sent us 87,075 dozen, and Hong Kong 41,245 dozen, while small quantities came from Great Britian, France and Japan.

Our egg exports amounted to 164,835 dozen, but only 39,917 dozen went from Canada to the United States, so that we bought from the Americans 717,399 dozen more eggs than we sold to them. Canada sold 33,465 dozen eggs to Great Britain, 20,947 dozen to Newfoundland 10,700 dozen to Bermuda, 2,196 dozen to British West Indies, 44,100 dozen to Cuba, 12,555 to St. Pierre and a few dozen to British Guiana, Mexico and China.

Deducting our total exports of eggs from our total import of eggs it will be found that Canadians consumed 728,489 dozen more eggs than the total production of eggs in Canada.

The duty on eggs coming into Canada is three cents per dozen. If the Reciprocity Agreement goes into effect this duty will be removed and the importations of eggs will greatly increase.

A board of tariff experts, recently appointed by the United States Government to compare Canadian and American prices, has reported on the price of eggs at Buffalo, Toronto, Burlington, Vt., Montreal, Lancaster, N. H., Sherbrooke, Que., Ogdensburg, N. Y., Prescott, Ont., Bangor, Eastport and Calais, in Maine, and St. Stephen, N. B.

The statement of prices prepared is for the month of January, 1911, and and the result of the inquiry is shown in the following table:

Place	Wholesale Price per doz.
Buffalo, N. Y.	$ .36
Toronto, Ont	.40
Ogdensburg, N. Y.	.30
Prescott, Ont.	.32
Lancaster, N. H.	.27
Sherbrooke, Que	.32
Burlington, Vt.	.27
Montreal, Que	.35
Bangor, Me.	.30
Calais, Me.	.28
Eastport, Me.	.26
St. Stephen, N. B.	.33

It will be noted that the prices in Canada were considerably higher than in the United States.

Reciprocity will give Canadian farmers the privilege of selling their eggs in the United States at lower prices than they can get them in Canada, and it will give farmers of Australasia, the United States and twelve other foreign countries the right to send eggs into Canada free of duty.

The report of the United States Government experts also deals with the prices of other farm products in the two countries. The Canadian Century will publish the figures in future issues and those who read them will be convinced that Canadian farmers have nothing to gain by Reciprocity with the United States.

ECZEMA WAS SPREADING TILL D.D.D. CURED IT

This is a translation of a letter written us in French on April 16, 1910, by Mr. Dan. Babineau, Cap Lumiere, N.B. "I had been suffering with eczema for about 6 months, and had consulted several doctors who did not do me any good. The disease was spreading and I was most uncomfortable. I thought I would go crazy. All my friends were telling me I would lose my hands unless I found the right treatment.

One day I read in the Messenger about your D.D.D. treatment and asked for a sample. It did me so much good that I immediately ordered two large bottles. It took eight bottles altogether to cure me of this terrible disease. I shall never be without a bottle of D.D.D. in my home."

The records of ten years of complete cures of thousands of the most severe cases show that D.D.D. stands to-day as the absolutely reliable eczema cure.

Write to-day for free trial bottle to the D.D.D. Laboratories, Dept. E.A., 49 Colborne St., Toronto. It will give you instant relief.

For sale by all Druggists.

Do You Care For Your Hair!

Of course you do—every man and woman does. That's why no one likes to lose his hair.

One of the greatest enemies of the hair is dandruff.

Dandruff is not merely an unsightly nuisance—its a real menace. It indicates a diseased scalp. And a diseased scalp can't nourish the hair properly. When the hair falls to get proper nourishment it dies and falls out. Its perfectly simple when you understand it.

And still people say "I can't see why my hair comes out.

Dandruff—a sluggish circulation of the blood through the scalp—Impaired vitality of the hair follicles and the hair dies.

Nyal's Hirsutone gets at the root of the trouble, by overcoming the dandruff. After a few applications, according to the explicit direction accompanying each bottle, the dandruff it seen to be very much diminished in quantity and continued use banishes it entirely.

At the same time the use of Nyal's Hirsutone stimulates the scalp and promotes the vitality of the roots of the hair, causing a more healthy growth.

We do not claim that this will restore hair in cases of complete baldness, but it will keep you from losing what hair you have.

Besides that, its a delightful toilet article, and very agreeable for daily use in dressing the hair. It does not become sticky, neither does it make the hair harsh and dry. On the contrary by regulating the natural flow of oil from the scalp it keeps the hair soft and glossy.

It's made from a good old formula—so good that after years of use the people prefer it to any other sort of hair tonic.

Sells in 50c. and $1. bottles.

An Enormous Sundial

A curious phenomenon is reported in the columns of a geographical publication. It is a large promontory in the Aegean sea, known as Hayon Horoo, which extends 3,000 feet above the level of the water. As the sun swings around, the shadow of this mountain touches one by one a circle of islands separated by regular intervals, which act as hour marks. It is the largest sundial in the world.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of the death of Leonard Kellermann, who passed away at Dashwood, on Sunday, March 5th, at the age of 17 years, 4 months and 5 days.

The evening of the fifth of March
Brought news that many a tongue did parch;
It was the news that Leonard K.
Had passed from this cold earth away
Seven and ten years was his age,
When his young soul did leave its cage;
And very sad it is to know
That one so young has had to go.
He was a boy with virtues rare
That never would his troubles air;
So many friends were drawn to him
And now their eyes fill to the brim.
By all he knew he was adored
And many hopes on him were stored;
But now all that is gone and past
And he is in his rest at last.
What e'er he did, he did with might
And always looked that it was right;
No matter whether playing ball
Or answering to labor call.
Around the fire the family sit,
And near them there the lamp is lit;
All of them feel very meek
For one there is who cannot speak.
I wish to comfort the bereaved
In the great sorrow they received;
They can have comfort in the thought
That everything by God is wrought.

BRUCEFIELD.—At the annual football meeting the following officers were elected for the ensuing year;—Hon. president, Alex. Mustard; President, Peter Brown; 1st Vice, A. T. Scott; Sec'y-Treas., W. D. Swan; Manager, George Turner; Capt., Walter Layton. W. D. Swan was appointed representative to attend the meeting of the W. F. A. in Woodstock on Good Friday. The following motion was unanimously carried;—"That Brucefield be represented in the W. F. A. by a team or teams." The local "Rovers" entered the finals last season, and lost to the "Colonials" of Niagara Falls on a sudden death game at Berlin.

CLANDEBOYE—An agent for the English Orchard Syndicate has been endeavoring to obtain leases of orchards in this vicinity. From fifty cents to one dollar per tree per year has been offered, according to variety and condition of the orchard. The contract is for ten years. The company undertakes to prune spray and cultivate the orchards. As the amount offered is in excess of what the average farmer in this vicinity makes from his orchard, the agent of the syndicate should be successful. The spraying and cultivation would result in a lessening of the insect and fungus pests at present existing. It is safe to say that at the present time ninety per cent. of the orchards in this part of Middlesex are unsprayed, and a very large number of them are even unpruned and allowed to stand in stiff sod. Hence the quality of the apples suffers, and poor prices resulting, the farmer concludes there is nothing in the orchard, and still further neglect is the result.

SURE SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

If your back is constantly aching and if you experience dull shooting pains your kidneys are out of order. If your urine is thick and cloudy or your passages frequent, scanty and painful, your kidneys and bladder are out of order. Neglect quickly brings on rheumatism, diabetes, lumbago, sciatica, etc.

Mrs. John Wagner of 110 Hollis St., Halifax, N. S., says,— "Dull shooting pains would catch me across the small part of my back and extend into my shoulders and neck, often causing me to suffer with severe headaches and spells of dizziness. Spots would dazzle before my eyes and everything would turn black. I would fall to the floor, and be unable to get up again without assistance. A friend told me of Booth's Kidney Pills and I began their use. The first box gave me relief and I am now well and strong."

Mr. Jos. J. Roy, a prominent tinsmith of Bathurst, N.B., july 16, 1909:

"I cannot let this opportunity pass without letting you know what benefit I received from your Liniment. I would advise anyone suffering from Rheumatic pains to give your liniment a trial, for I cannot praise it too highly."

ONE KILLED, TWO WOUNDED

Highwayman Held Up Three Lumbermen on Way From Camp to Port Arthur

A despatch from Port Arthur says: To get possession of three woodsmen's time checks, a man, whose name is not yet known to the authorities, held up a party of three woodsmen, all Finlanders, on their way out from the Pigeon River Lumber Company's camp, near Silver Mountain, killing one of them and very seriously wounding the others, using a revolver and a hunting knife. One of the victims has nine cuts about his body. The men were on the road leading from the camp to a railroad, intending to take a train to Port Arthur, when they were met by a stranger who offered to direct them to the railway by a short cut. His offer was accepted, and at a convenient moment the stranger opened fire on the three, killing one and incapacitating the others. He took their time checks, which are of no value to him because he cannot cash them. Leaving his victims to their sufferings, the assailant made off. The two laid out wounded and bleeding beside the dead body of their companion all night, and on Wednesday one managed to reach the railway and get the news to Silver Mountain, whence it was forwarded to Port Arthur.

SIX FIREMEN WERE KILLED

Several Others Injured Through Collapse of Roof at Milwaukee

A despatch from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, says: Six fire-fighters are dead, four others are dying in the emergency hospital, and several others are suffering from injuries, the result of the caving-in of the roof of the building of theMiddleton Manufacturing Company, wholesale hatters, here on Friday. The dead: Capt. John Hintz, Fred. L. Eichorn, Richard Burke, Lieut. John Hoolihan, Capt. Frank Cavanagh, Edwin Hagiel.

The dying: Vincent Marchesi, Paul Fenske, Peter Jansen, — Hammond. The fire had been burning half an hour and between fifteen and twenty men had been fighting the flames from the roof of a four and a half story structure when suddenly the roof collapsed, carrying them through the flames. The men were buried in the debris. Others escaped by the basement windows. Ambulances were hurried to the scene and as quickly as possible the dead and injured were dug out of the ruins. The coats and badges of the victims were torn away and their helmets missing, so that the work of identification was slow. The monetary loss is placed at $100,000; fully insured.

Last year there were a number of prosecutions, and farmers were heavily fined. All dairymen in this section will be urged to send in a better quality of raw material, so that the best possible cheese may be manufactured.

MINERS REFUSE PROPOSALS

Operators Make Several Offers, But All Are Rejected

A despatch from Calgary, Alta., says: On Thursday the operators in a joint conference with the mine officers offered an open shop, and, failing that, arbitration. Both proposals were turned down, the miners contending that they wanted to settle their own business and not have it done by outsiders. The operators asked that the miners agree to go on with the conference, taking up the agreement clause by clause, casting aside such clauses as could not be decided on, these clauses to be later taken up and settled by a Board of Arbitration, composed of two representatives of each party, with either the Chief Justice or some Justice of the Supreme Court. While the board was sitting the mines were to be operated under the present agreement. The miners also turned this down.

The west-bound Toronto train with Ontario settlers and effects from the vicinity of Markdale had orders to meet the east-bound extra with empty passenger coaches at Blue Jay, four miles east of Schreiber, but for some reason did not stop, and one mile west of Blue Jay met the east-bound train head-on with frightful impact, scattering the cars in splintered heaps along the track. NEW YORK FIRE HORROR

One Hundred and Fifty Workers Killed in a Factory Conflagration.

A despatch from New York says: One hundred and fifty persons—nineteen of them Jews and Italian girls—were crushed to death on the pavements or smothered in the smoke in a factory fire on Saturday afternoon in the worst disaster New York has known since the steamship General Slocum was burned to the water's edge off the North Brother Island in 1904. Mothers, fathers and other relatives, literally mad with grief, stormed the police lines at the Morgue all Saturday night and Sunday shrieking, sobbing, and in some cases fighting with the officers in their frenzy.

Nearly all, if not all, the victims were employed by the Triangle Waist Company on the eighth, ninth and tenth floors of a ten-story lofty building at 23 Washington place, on the western fringe of the downtown wholesale clothing, fur, and millinery district. The partners of the firm, Isaac Harris and Max Blanck, escaped unscathed from the office on the tenth floor, carrying with them over an adjoining roof Blanck's two young daughters and a governess. How the fire started will perhaps never be known. A corner on the eighth floor was its point of origin, and the three upper floors only were swept. On the ninth floor fifty bodies were found. Sixty-three or more were crushed to death by jumping, and more than thirty clogged the elevator shafts.

The loss to property will not exceed $60,000. Wayfarers on the opposite side of the street shaded their eyes against the setting sun and saw the windows of the three upper floors of the building black with girls crowding to the sills. The only fire escape was in a small court yard of the building. "Don't jump; don't jump!" yelled the crowd. But the girls had no choice. The pressure from maddened hundreds behind and the urging of their own fears were too strong. Four alarms were rung in within fifteen minutes. Before the engines could respond, before the nets could be stretched or the ladders raised five girls had fallen from the eighth and ninth floors so heavily that they broke through the glass and iron roofs of the sub-cellars and crashed through the very streets into the vaults below. In an hour the fire was out. In half an hour it had done its work. Probably the death list was full in twenty minutes. Seven hundred hands, five hundred of them women, were employed by the shirtwaist company.

WESTERN BANK WAS ROBBED

Safe Was Rifled and There is No Clue Yet to the Perpetrators

A despatch from Prince Albert, Sask., says: Northern Saskatchewan has a bank robbery mystery on its hands. The branch of the Bank of Ottawa, at Kinistino, about 45 miles from Prince Albert, has missed nearly $6,000 from the safe and there is absolutely no clue to the identity of the robber. The feat was perpetrated some time between one o'clock on Saturday afternoon and 8 o'clock the following Monday morning. The officials of the bank evidently have a suspicion, but they refuse to make any statement. The circumstances surrounding the case are most mysterious, and the robber was evidently familiar with the bank premises, and had working knowledge of the safe and the time lock. Saturday afternoon the manager of the bank closed the safe after placing in it the money and documents. The time lock was then set to open at 8 o'clock Monday morning. Mr. Wood came to Prince Albert to spend Sunday. On Monday morning he received a wire from the bank saying it was impossible to open the safe. It was thought that it was the fault of the time lock and the controllers of the device in New York were wired to for advice as to the action to be taken. The company wired back several suggestions, which, when acted upon, finally opened the safe. It was then found that it had been rifled and currency and gold to the amount of almost $6,000 taken.

U. S. CALLS FOR RECRUITS

Two Urgent Messages Sent to Chicago by the Adjutant-General.

A despatch from Chicago says: Two telegrams from the War Department in Washington were received at the headquarters of the Chicago recruiting stations on Thursday urging that the officers take immediate steps to enlist all possible recruits promptly. The first telegram said: "Large number of infantry recruits required. Make special efforts accordingly. By order of Adjutant-General."

The message was telephoned to the various sub-stations with instructions to send out handbills in all districts. Hardly had the telephone order been communicated when a second telegram came from the Adjutant-General's office, declaring the call urgent and advising that the stations be kept open day and night if necessary. It read:— "Use every effort to procure recruits for the infantry without delay. Urgent. If necessary, open day and night."

Men were sent out with 10,000 handbills, across the tops of which were printed in large red letters: "Men wanted." Printers were ordered to produce fifty thousand more of these bills and they were distributed throughout Chicago on Friday.

USING PURGATIVES INJURES HEALTH

What You Need in Spring is a Blood Building Tonic

A spring medicine is an actual necessity to most people. Nature demands it as an aid in carrying off the impurities that have accumulated in the blood during the long winter months of indoor life. Unfortunately thousands of people who recognize the necessity for a spring medicine do not know what is best to take and dose themselves with harsh, griping purgatives.

This is a serious mistake. Ask any doctor and he will tell you that the use of purgative medicines weakens the system, but does not cure disease. In the spring the system needs building up—purgatives cannot do this—they weaken you still more. The blood should be made rich, red, pure and only a tonic medicine can do this. The best blood building, nerve restoring tonic medical science has yet discovered is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose of this medicine actually makes new, rich blood. This new blood strengthens every organ, every nerve and every part of the body. This is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure headaches and backaches, rheumatism and neuralgia, banish pimples and eruptions, and give a glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. Men, women and growing boys and girls who take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills eat well, sleep well, and feel bright, active and strong. If you need a medicine this spring—and most likely you do—try this great reviving tonic and feel the new life, new health, and new strength it will put into you.

THE MAYOR OF OLDHAM.

Third Englishwoman to be Given This Office.

Mrs. Lees, lately appointed Mayor of Oldham, Eng., is the third Englishwoman to be given this office. The reason why in her case is not far to seek, for all accounts of Mrs. Lees unite in unstinted praise of her. The newspaper accounts said of her installation: "The ceremony of her installation is a scene that will never be forgotten by those who witnessed it. A small room is usually all that is required on these occasions, but this time it was the big Town Hall, and it was crowded long before the hour. Behind the seats people stood, packed like sardines, and they seemed to be clinging like flies around the walls. The nomination and election take place before the future Mayor enters, and a rather regrettable scene of party bickering and recrimination was witnessed. But it was almost worth it for the contrast, when, with the woman Mayor, harmony seemed to enter—and abide. The tall, dignified figure entered, with the calm, beautiful humorous face, crowned with hair, upon which the black velvet bonnet was a graceful substitute for the ugly, three-cornered hat which the Mayor usually wears.

Her entrance was the signal for an outburst of enthusiasm. The robe and chains were donned, and Mrs. Lees rose to speak. Then she thanked her colleagues for the honor they had done her, with a little allusion to those who disapproved of the election of a woman. "They have a perfect right to their opinion, and they also have a perfect right to change that opinion." When her speech was ended the whole audience rose to their feet to cheer and applaud. There was a beauty in the spirit of the whole thing which must be felt to be understood. One can only say that she seemed like the mother of a great family, before whom her children rise up and call her blessed.

A BOOK FOR MOTHERS.

Every mother is naturally anxious for information that will enable her to keep the little ones in good health. The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., have issued a little book which contains a great deal of information on the care of babies and young children that every mother ought to know. AS THE KING DECIDES.

In Spain Every One Must Do As the King Does.

When the Spanish provinces entertain guests from the court, provincial society is at its best. Secure in their traditions, the provincials make even royalty welcome with a beautiful symplicity which no doubt royalty enjoys very much. Mary F. Nixon-Roulet gives the old adage, "The King is my cousin," in "The Spaniard at Home," as explaining the very simple Spanish way of looking at the situation. One thing only must be strictly observed according to Spanish etiquette, and that is, that every one is compelled to do exactly as the king does. Amusing situations sometimes appear as a result of this, as in the case of a banquet given in an Andalusian town.

The late King, Alphonso XII., was a great jester. But his jests were such merry ones that even those who felt the point forgave and laughed. A banquet was given in honor of the king, and to it were invited the mayors of all the neighboring villages.

There were on the tables olives stoned, and stuffed with pimentoes, the first ever seen by one of the local officers. The king tasted them, putting one into his mouth and swallowing it with evident enjoyment. The mayor's eyes opened wide with horror. Etiquette demanded that he do the same, but he hesitated. His majesty had swallowed a stone. He himself would die were he to do such a thing. His majesty saw the man's hesitation, and in an instant had grasped the situation.

"These olives, they are most delicious," he said. "From your province, I believe, senor," and he popped another into his mouth. The mayor was forced to follow suit. Horrible! He felt the stone going down his throat.

"Another of these excellent olives!" How his majesty's eyes twinkled as he praised them! The corregidor saw himself a dead man!

"I have four olive stones in my stomach, and I am a dead man!" he moaned to himself. "Well, I may, then, as well enjoy my last meal on earth," and he fell to with a will to eat and drink. The wines of the province were excellent. Of them he drank more freely than usual, hoping to drown the terrifying thought which assailed him. Then he went home to be received both skeptically and unsympathetically by his wife.

But thereafter he would never taste an olive, and to this day he wonders at his majesty's digestion. He is wont to relate the tale of the dinner in the evenings when his cronies gather round his fireside.

"His Majesty Alphonse XIII. is a fine King, yes, but his father! There was a man! I assure you I have never seen his like. A man with a smile in his eye and a jest on his lips, even with death in his heart," and always he concluded, "and the stomach of an ostrich."

HIS CRIMES.

An old plasterer was called upon to give evidence in a law case. The opposing counsel tried to bully him.

"Your name is John Dobbs?"

"Yes."

"Are you the same John Dobbs who was sentenced to eight days' imprisonment for using bad language?"

"No."

"Are you the same John Dobbs who was sentenced to a couple of years' hard labor for theft?"

"No, that wasn't me, either."

"Then you have never been in prison?"

"Yes, twice."

"Ah! and how long the first time?"

"One whole afternoon."

"What!—and the second time?"

"Only one hour."

"And pray, what offence had you committed to deserve so small a punishment?"

"I'm a house decorator, and I was sent to prison to whitewash a cell to accommodate a lawyer who had cheated one of his clients."

Father (after a long search for a book)—"Well, here it is. I wonder why one always finds a thing in the last place in which one hunts?" Son—"I expect it's because when we find what we're looking for we stop hunting."

FORCE WOMEN TO WORK.

Compulsory Domestic Service Proposed in Germany.

Compulsory domestic service for girls and women as an equivalent to the universal military service incumbent upon man is a novel proposal put forward by Fraulein Pauline Worner, a leading German feminist, in the current number of Die Deutsche Prau of Berlin.

Fraulein Worner points out that compulsory military training has contributed enormously both to the mental and physical development of German manhood, and declares that similar benefits would be inevitable if the women subjects of the Kaiser were compelled to undergo the training for which nature best fits them.

She explains that it could be enforced without burdening the national Budget, and that it is man who would benefit most from the system, because the state would thus assure them competent and experienced housewives. Fraulein Worner thinks the marriage institution would also become more popular if men knew they could select wives who had done service with the "colors" in kitchen, laundry, nursery and sewing-room."

"When it became necessary through the stress of war," concluded Fraulein Worner, "to introduce compulsory military service there were many protests against such a 'limitation of personal liberty,' but Germans have lived to appreciate the incomparable blessings of male conscription. Would it be otherwise in the case of girls and women?

"There might be less of the craze for higher education for women, but fewer girls of our lower classes would be compelled to enter industrial occupations."

Faultless in Preparation.—Unlike any other stomach regulator, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of long study of vegetable compounds calculated to stimulate the stomachic functions and maintain them at the normal condition. Years of use have proved their faultless character and established their excellent reputation. And this reputation they have maintained for years and will continue to maintain, for these pills must always stand at the head of the list of standard preparations.

GIBRALTAR'S CAVERNS.

Wonderful Stalactite Cave Over 200 Feet Long.

Gibraltar is the only place in Europe where monkeys live wild. But apart from the monkeys, Gibraltar has wonderful attractions, as in her fossils and her great stalactite caverns, opening into recesses of the rocks a thousand feet above the sea. One of these caverns is over 200 feet long and 70 feet high, and, as the stalactite pillars extend from floor to ceiling, the effect resembles the interior of a cathedral. The name of the rock has undergone a change since that distant day in 711 when Tarik the Moor first built his castle on it in order to begin the conquest of Spain. It was then Gebel el Tarik (the rock of Tarika). But the change to "Gibraltar" is not serious if one pronounces the Moorish name quickly.

CANADA'S CHAMPION DANCER

Cured of Piles by Zam-Buk.

Mr. Thomas J. Hogan, Champion Clog and Pedestal Dancer of Canada, who resides at 59 Chambord St., Montreal, writes: "It gives me much pleasure to let you know my opinion of your wonderful Zam-Buk. For some time past I have ben troubled with piles, but this year I suffered so much that I was obliged to cancel a number of engagements. I tried all the so-called remedies that were recommended, but they seemed to do me no good. Having been advised to try Zam-Buk I purchased a box, and after applying it a few times I felt marked relief. I continued with the Zam-Buk treatment, and the relief was extended into a permanent cure. I gladly permit you to use my experience as an illustration of the great value of Zam-Buk."

Mr. William Kenty, of Upper Nine Mile River, Hants Co., N.S., says: "I suffered terribly from piles, the pain at times being almost unbearable. Zam-Buk was recommended to me. So I procured a supply, and after a very short time Zam-Buk effected a complete cure."

Zam-Buk is also a cure for ulcers, abscesses, eczema, cold sores, chapped hands, varicose ulcers, rashes, blood-poison, ringworm, cuts, burns, bruises, children's abrasions, tetter, salt rheum, etc. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Zam-Buk Soap, which may be had from any druggist at 25c. per tablet, should be used instead of ordinary soap in all cases of eruptions and skin diseases and for baby's bath.

HIS FIRST $24.—John Wanamaker, one of the most successful storekeepers that has ever lived this year celebrates his jubilee year. He began 50 years ago on practically nothing and it is a well-known fact to all what he has accomplished, and this is how he did it.—The first day's receipts of the little store which he opened in Philadelphia in 1861 were $24.67. He "kept the 67 cents for making change next day," and immediately spent the $24 for newspaper advertising. That investment took courage—a bigger amount of courage than the expenditure of ten thousand times the amount would cost him now. It meant, too, a big confidence in his goods and a big knowledge of human nature.

Bless the man who is to a reasonable amount, uneasy as long as he owes a dollar. If you are at some time compelled by unavoidable circumstances to request your merchant to extend you credit for a time, in making your application to him for it, don't tell him you will pay the first of the month when, in your opinion, it will be the tenth of the month before you will meet the obligation.

During 1910 the Independent Order of Odefellows of Ontario paid out in sick and other benefits $137,964.12, averaging for each day of the year $377.98. According to the last returns there are in Ontario 380 lodges of Odfellows, with a membership of 44,400 members.

Pots and pans are the bugbear of the housekeeper, and cleaning them is hard work at the best. It is an easier matter, however, to keep a supply of old papers in the kitchen and as soon as a skillet is emptied pour in a little boiling water, then throw the water out and rub the skillet with a large piece of paper. If the drying pan is not clean add a little more water and polish dry with a piece of fresh paper and hang away before the other work is attempted. When leaving the pots and pans to the last they are likely to become a burden. The Advocate can supply old papers at the small price of 5 cents a bundle.

THE EXETER COUNCIL

A special meeting of the council was held Wednesday, March, 29th. Members all present. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Messrs. Gladman and Huston were a deputation from the School Board by order of the Council with a view to having a long standing balance between them and the council adjusted. The whole matter was amicably settled and we now begin the year with a clean sheet.

Rivers—Day—That the clerk write the London Foundry Co. to ascertain the price of the following,—4 in. water piping, 6 inch hydrants, 4 to 6 inch Tees, 4 inch. guage valves.—Carried.

Levett—Day—That an order be passed in favor of Dickson & Carling to the amount of $42.60, being due Goold, Shapley & Muir Co., part payment of account for water tower.—Carried.

Levett—Walper—That the clerk prepare a form of agreement to be used in connection with the water works system.—Carried.

Adjournment to meet Friday Mar. 31.

The council met Friday evening, Mar. 31st. All members present. Minutes of the last meeting read and approved.

Messrs. Davis and Pickard, auditors, presented their report and the same was approved on a motion of Levett—Day.

Rivers—Walper—That the treasurer's bond be accepted.—Carried.

Levett—Day—That we wish to place on record our high appreciation of the services of our late treasurer, Mr. S. Sanders, who has held the office for the past eighteen years. During all these years he has been a faithful, painstaking, obliging, and a very trustworthy and honored servant, true to the cent, for which the municipality has great reason to be thankful. Such men are at a premium, as is evidenced when we read of so much crooked work of men holding like positions throughout the country. But owing to ill-health Mr. Sanders has been compelled to resign. Trusting that his health may improve and that he may yet be spared for for many years of usefulness, we hereby tender him this appreciation of his faithful services to the Corporation of Exeter.

Rivers—Levett—That the Reeve and Treasurer be authorized to borrow $700 on the credit of the Corporation for current expenses.—Carried.

Levett—Walper—That the Reeve purchase rooter plow (Verity make) through Mr. Murphy at the lowest figure.—Carried.

Levett—Walper—That the hours of the Clerk be from 10.30 o'clock a. m. to 12.30 p. m. and 7 to 9 p. m., in the evening, Wednesday and Saturday.—Carried.

Levett—Day—That the Clerk write the Ontario Government to send us book on approval for the use of the Treasurer.—Carried.

Rivers—Day—That the Commissioner take the measurements of the different boulevards that are now constructed; also the required width of road bed and report to the Council at their next meeting.

Adjourned to meet Friday evening April 7th.

T. H. Carling Clerk.

HICKS' FORECASTS.—A reactionary storm period marks the closing days of Earth's vernal equinoctial, central on the 11th, 12th and 13th. Low barometer and very high temperature on and touching the 11th and 12th will bring severe thunder, rain and hail to many sections. Hot, muggy conditions, with very low barometer and angry, electrical storms and tornadoes are probable in this period. This also is a period in which seismic disturbances will be heard from, within three days of the 13th.

THE BAWDEN TROPHY.—Mr. S. G. Bawden on Monday night received the trophy which he is presenting to the bowlers of South Huron, and, to say the least, it is a mighty handsome piece of silverware, in the form of a cup, and with the mahogany base stands 21 in. in height. The rules and regulations to govern the competition have not yet been arranged, but in all probability the clubs to be invited to join in play for the trophy will consist of Crediton, Mt. Carmel, Dashwood, Zurich, Hensall and Exeter. The cup may be seen in the window of Mr. Bawden's Clothing Store.

THE OLD TIME.—Referring again to the celebration of the sixtieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dew of Grundy Centre, formerly of Usborne, the following facts are of interest to our readers.—William Dew was born Nov. 5, 1830, at Upper Ayford, Oxfordshire, England, and Ann Downie was born Oct. 15, 1832, at Arbroath, Scotland, and they were married in Usborne Township, on Riverside Farm, the home of Mrs. Dew's parents, on March 17th, 1851, Rev. Edwards performing the ceremony. The marriage took place in a log house containing one room, in the presence of a few relatives and friends the minister coming ten miles on horseback through the forest. Nine children came to bless the union, two of whom died in infancy. The children are, Geo. and Benjamin of Alberta; John of near Grundy Centre, Iowa; Martha, now Mrs. John Hunter of Exeter; Ann, now Mrs. John J. Armstrong of Gilmore City; Amy, now Mrs Wm. Murray of Alberta Elizabeth, now Mrs. A. McQuarrie of Gilmore City. There are twenty-two living grand children and four great-grandchildren.

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE;

OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER XII.—(Cont'd)

Dorothy stared straight at her father, and her lips trembled.

"Kicked that dear, beautiful collie! Oh, daddy, how could he do it?"—her face was crimson with disgust and anger. "What did you do?"

"I confess, my darling, my fist all but met Mr. Crawshaw's head; fortunately, I restrained myself sufficiently to remember that I was his host, but I think I let him see something of my contempt; and I gave Foster orders before him to let the poor creature loose, and take her into the paddock."

"And—and was she really hurt, papa"

Sir Humphrey's brows met.

"Yes, she was," he said, almost shortly; "she ran lame, and moaned at every yard. On my life, Dolly, I was never so near thrashing a man in the whole course of my career!"

"I wish you had done it!" Dorothy cried, with flashing eyes. "Let Mr. Crawshaw kick his dog, or show off any of his brutal ways before me, and ——"

But here Miss Leicester had to compose her feelings and her face, and meet her guests as they came across the lawn.

"I feel as if I shall never be able to touch his hand or welcome him here again. I always distrusted and hated him, now I loathe him—coward and brute!" she said to herself, as she listened to the Hon. Ella's glowing account of the match, and watched Crawshaw saunter, in his peculiarly insolent, offensively pretentious manner, toward them.

"I know if I stay I shall be rude to him, so I had better go before he comes," she mused, and, with a hurried excuse, she went up to Mrs. Fairfax, and strolled with her to the house. "I will wait till Nancy is quite better, and then I will tell her," she said to herself, as she ran hastily upstairs to dress for dinner.

"I know she will hate him even more than I do. Oh, dear! I wish to Heaven it was permissible to speak out one's mind to one's guests! I should not spare Mr. Thomas Crawshaw!"

She tapped at Nancy's door and peeped in, but no one was there.

"Gone down to meet me, no doubt," Dorothy conjectured, with some disappointment. "I wish I had seen her, dear thing! Well, at any rate, she is better, and that is all I care about."

She questioned Baines carefully as to how Nancy had looked, and was very much cheered by her maid's good report.

"Of course she is sure to look pale, that is only natural. Do you know, Baines, I fancy Miss Hamilton must have had a slight attack of sunstroke; she will run about without anything on her head."

"Yes, miss; I think you're right, miss," was Baines' reply; but, while she brushed and arranged the soft, golden curls, the maid was thinking to herself, shrewdly and quietly. "It weren't no sunstroke, more like a heart stroke. There were a look in the poor thing's eyes as she smiled at me just now, that give me quite a turn. I wonder what has happened to her? She's a sweet young creature, as don't deserve any misfortune, that she don't!"

And while Dorothy was chatting on lightly to her maid, Nancy was making her way slowly to the farther end of the garden, that quiet nook that had been her one trysting place down by the lower lake.

"I must get strong, I must have courage to meet them all," she said to herself over and over again, "they—they must not see that anything is wrong or——"

She dreaded everything. She had gauged Crawshaw to his uttermost depths; she knew if she broke one letter of her bond that her uncle—that sole surviving link to her dear, dead mother—would be disgraced, dishonored, perchance even killed by the result of his shame. And as if to make assurance still more sure, Crawshaw did not fail to remind her of her vow.

As she was leaving the pleasaunce, as the flower grounds were called, and about to enter the wilder and rougher part, she met one of the grooms, who was evidently bent on finding some person, and yet whose attention was drawn every other moment to a dog who crawled feebly beside him.

As he saw Nancy his face cleared and he touched his hat.

"You want me," she said, stopping and thinking vaguely how faint her own voice sounded in her ears; and then her eyes fell on the collie whose laborious breathing betrayed its sufferings, and whose handsome, pathetic eyes solicited her pity.

In an instant her own misery was forgotten, and she was on her knees beside the animal.

"What has happened? Oh! what has happened to her?" she cried, sharply; her great, tender heart could never bear the sight of a dumb creature's pain.

The groom shifted his foot uneasily.

"She's only a bit lame, miss," he answered, hurriedly.

"Lame! She is ill, dying; look at her eyes, they are asking us to help her. See, she cannot stand upright; something has happened to her—what is it? Foster must doctor her; he is so clever and good with dogs. Oh, poor Zoe! poor Zoe!"

Her little white hand caressed the collie's sleek head, while a pang shot through her heart afresh at every short, hard breath that came from the poor animal. Everything was forgotten at that moment but pity for the dog, who had grown to know and like her even in the few short times it had been over at the Hall.

"She should not be out here walking," Nancy said, coldly, to the man; she thought him heedless and cruel. "She must go to the stables at once."

"Begging your pardon, miss, Mr. Crawshaw made me bring her out here."

"He—he could not surely know she was in such a state," she murmured, in faint, low accents.

The groom answered her rather gruffly:

"He ought to, then, miss, seeing as it's all through him she's like this."

Nancy's blue eyes were turned upwards; for many a day their look of uncontrollable horror lived in the man's memory.

"Through him?" she whispered, faintly.

"Yes, miss; she did something as vexed Mr. Crawshaw, and he kicked her. I don't suppose he meant to hurt her really, for she's a valuable dog; but Foster says she's injured internally, miss, and he fears she'll have to be poisoned."

Nancy bent lower and still lower over the dumb, suffering creature, till her pale lips touched the dog's head; a great bond of sympathy was suddenly riveted between this animal and herself; both were plunged from sunshine to gloom, both their hearts were riven in twain, to both the bitter end had come.

"Poor Zoe, he might have spared you!" was the unspoken cry on Nancy's lips as she rose slowly to her feet—her face was ghastly pale, her hands trembling.

"You—you must do something for her," she pleaded, rather than said, to the groom, "she cannot suffer like this."

"I'll fetch Foster to her, miss, and we'll carry her between us to the stable. Perhaps she'll be better to-morrow, miss."

To-morrow! Nancy shuddered. What depths of horror were expressed in that word! With bent head she was turning away, when the man stopped her.

"I beg your pardon, miss, but Mr. Crawshaw told me I was to look for you and give you this."

He held out a note as he spoke, and Nancy took it mechanically.

"Go—go, and bring Foster quickly," she said, as a moan from the dog broke on her ear. "I—I will wait here till you return."

The groom obeyed her quickly, and she was left alone with the suffering animal stretched at her feet, fit emblem of her own shattered, ruined life.

With stiff, cold fingers, that seemed to belong to an arctic clime, not a hot summer night, she opened the letter, written in the flourishing, clerky hand that she knew well.

"In case any lingering doubt remains in your mind, I send this to tell you that if you breathe one word of the truth about your uncle to any individual here or hereafter, I will at once commence proceedings against him. Understand me plainly, not one word of the news I brought you, or of the motive that has prompted you to be my wife; do this, and you know the consequences—your uncle will be convicted and imprisoned, first on a charge of forgery, then on robbery. He is not strong nor young, and so, if you care to have the onus of his death—for he is sure to die—upon your conscience, you——"

She could read no farther. With a gesture of intolerable pain, she crumbled the paper in her hand, then tore it into a hundred shreds, and cast it to the soft summer breeze, to be carried away to the uttermost corners of the earth.

"Oh, Zoe, Zoe," she moaned, crouching down by the dog, "what have we done that we should be tortured like this? I may have committed some wrong, but you—"

The poor creature tried feebly to lick her gentle hand, and at the touch a flood of hot tears broke from her eyes, while a shiver of dread and repugnance passed through her frame; as if a shadow of the future that crept near to make her misery greater.— Was it a grim prognostication of what was to come? She did not know; but she was faint and ill when the two men came back through the trees.

"Carry her carefully, Foster," she said to the old head groom, who had lived at the Hall for nearly half a century; "and, Foster, do not let Miss Dorothy know if you can help it; she—she will be so grieved. Poor Zoe! Good-bye—good-bye."

She bent and kissed the dog again, and then she turned and walked steadily away down to that dear, well-remembered spot at the lake's edge.

"Oh, love—oh, life!" she cried, to herself, as she stood alone beneath the low-hanging branches of the trees. "You will never know what I am enduring—you will never know. Pray God you may never be given such agony as has fallen on me!"

The episode of the wounded dog had unnerved her—her strength and courage were fleeting fast. In a few short moments he would be returned—he would rush to seek her—he would call her name. Nancy covered her pale lips with her hands to still the bitter cry that escaped from them.

Yes, he would come—love's knowledge is almost infinite; he would trace her here, and then—Then what? How would she greet him? What words could she use? What manner could she bear? An icy band stole round her heart. What explanation could she give? How could she tell him the horrible truth?

Her breath seemed to stand still; not till now did the full hideousness of her position come upon her. She was bound by affection, gratitude, honor, to seal her lips, and yet——

She stared suddenly; upon the breeze came the sound of her name, uttered in a soft, musical voice.

It was Dorothy's—she was seeking for her.

"Nancy—Nancy, where are you—where are you?"

She paused an instant, then pain gave her strength.

"I cannot meet her yet," she said to herself, and she stole down to the water's brink and crouched below the bushes.

"Nancy—Nancy!"

The voice came nearer—then nearer.

How Nancy longed to spring forward and cling to that dainty form, kiss that lovely face, and nestle close to the loving heart!

"She is not here. Oh, dear," murmured Dorothy, dispiritedly; "it's no use, Merefield, she must have gone back to the house by some other path. I do hope she is not ill again."

"Shall I look farther this way?" asked Lord Merefield, eagerly.

Dorothy shook her head.

"No; no; dinner has been kept waiting as it is. I must hurry back. She is not far; but I do wish I could see her. I shall certainly send for Dr. Knowles if she is not better to-morrow. I feel uneasy about her."

"Oh, don't worry dear. You know——"

The voices died away, and Nancy was safe to emerge from her hiding place when she cared.

Stunned, amazed, overcome with horror as she had been ever since her interview with Crawshaw, she had not realized one half the difficulties, the mental sufferings that lay in store for her.

"What will they think of me?" was the bitter cry that broke from her heart, as she stood with bent head and arms hanging nerveless at her sides. "What will Dorothy say? How—how shall I explain to her my strange conduct? She has seen that I loathe this man; she will think I am tempted by his money, that I am a hypocrite; and Derry—Derry, who is my very life!—Derry, who has given me the whole of his great, noble heart; Derry who spoke of his poverty, and, oh God! I can't bear it—I can't endure it—it will drive me mad!"

She crouched on the ground in her abject despair, while the leaves fluttered in the evening breeze, and the lake murmured serenely at her feet. Stretch her hand out where she might, there was no help for her, no haven, no refuge—the sacrifice had fallen to her share, and she must go through with it alone to the end!

AN INTERESTING REPORT.

Published elsewhere in this issue is the Annual Report for the past year of the Board of Directors of the Canada Cement Company, as read by the President, to the Shareholders, at the Annual Meeting held in Montreal on the 21st of February.

The frank statement of the policy and the general attitude of fairness evidenced by this address, are such as to warrant more than passing comment. Any lay member of the community reading the Report must surely feel disposed to echo the hope expressed by the President, that the increased demand and increased output in the year to come will result in further savings in the cost of manufacture; and it further cannot be but felt by the public at large that any such reductions that may be obtained will, according to the broad-minded policy of the Company, be used as an advantage to the customers of the Company—the concern depending for their profits upon increasing volume of business.

Especially interesting is the statement that the policy of the Company is such as to tend towards equalization of the price of cement throughout Canada so far as possible.

Another noteworthy feature of the Report is the provision made for employes to become possessors of stock. This is, as pointed out, a policy already in force in some of the largest institutions, and shows that the Canada Cement Company are quick to appreciate any means of stimulating interest and confidence upon the part of the staff.

The strong financial position of the company is a well known fact, and all that is necessary to ensure the continued success of the concern is continued prosperity of the country, together with an increased realization of the importance and economy of cement as a building material.

CARE OF THE LAMBS.

At eight to ten days of age lambs will begin to eat. At that time a creep should be built which will give them access to a feed box containing grain and a trough with hay. Box, trough and feed should always be be keep sweet and clean.

A good grain ration for lambs is made as follows: Mix one-third of oil-meal with one part each of bran, oats and fine cornmeal. Red alfalfa hay or the second cutting of alfalfa hay are the most desirable form of roughage. Of the two alfalfa is to be much preferred.

It is a good idea to keep up the grain feed right along until the lambs are sent to the market. By so doing the lambs are kept fat all the time and are ready to be turned into cash on short notice should the market take a sudden rise.

CANADA CEMENT COMPANY LIMITED

Annual Report of the Board of Directors

TO THE SHAREHOLDERS:

Your Directors beg to present herewith the annual statement of the affairs and financial position of the Canada Cement Company, Limited, as of the 31st December, 1910.

In presenting the Balance Sheet, we call attention to the Company's strong financial position as disclosed by the large amount of cash on hand, and other quick assets, and the comparatively small amount of current liabilities. After providing for interest on our Bonds and Dividends on our Preferred Stock for the year, we have been able to set up reserves for depreciation, extraordinary repairs and renewals, bad debts, etc., and carry forward a substantial balance to Surplus Account

The consumption of cement during the past year was not as large as anticipated. Our business also suffered on account of the Railways not being able to meet our full requirements for cars during the heavy shipping season; consequently, we carry over from last year 781,116 barrels of cement.

Early in 1910 the price of our product was fixed at a lower price than cement had ever been sold for in Canada, excepting for a short period in 1909, but your Directors are pleased to state that the anticipated savings in manufacturing and distributing our products were such that they were able to still further reduce this price.

We trust, when you consider the above mentioned conditions, and also the fact that during 1910 our plants were only operated to 57.6 per cent. of their capacity, the profits shown will be satisfactory to the Shareholders.

During the current year, we look for a larger natural demand, which demand will be stimulated by continuing to manufacture a strictly high grade article, and by selling it at the lowest possible price. This anticipated increase will enable us to operate our plants to better advantage than in the past, but we do not expect that the demand will be sufficient to enable us to put into operation either of the two plants which have been idle since the organization of this Company. However, it is confidently expected that the increased demand, and increased output, will result in further savings in the cost of manufacture and distribution, and it is the policy of your Directors to give your customers the benefit of these reductions.

The Shareholders' profits will depend on the increased volume of the Company's business, the policy of the Company being the maintenance of such a stable position as will insure regular and uniform payments of interest on its bonds and dividends on its Preferred stock, and at the same time be in a position to withstand any unforeseen emergency that may arise consequent on business depression or otherwise, which condition naturally necessitates the accumulation of, and the maintenance of, a large cash reserve.

It is also the policy of the Company to equalize the price of cement throughout Canada in so far as the physical conditions make such possible, and in furtherance of this policy, your Directors have arranged to purchase a site near Winnipeg, on which they will erect, this year, a mill to grind clinker, which will be shipped from one of our Eastern mills. The buildings, machinery, etc., will be planned so that, should it at any time in the future be advisable, a Burning Department can be added, and the clinker produced on the property.

And further, an agreement has been entered into whereby this Company expects to acquire, in the near future, a property at Exshaw, which, added to our Calgary plant, and the projected plant at Winnipeg, will put us in the position of anticipating any extraordinary growth in the consumption of cement in the Great West.

With the view of educating the public, and popularizing the use of cement, in addition to the ordinary advertising, the Company has published a small book illustrating some of the many uses to which cement may be put, for which book there has been a great demand, 25,000 applications for same having been received during the past six months.

For the purpose of stimulating interest in the Company on behalf of the Employes, both in efficiency and cheapening production, as well as creating a feeling of mutual goodwill, your Directors deem it expedient to introduce a system, already adopted by several large industrial corporations with beneficial results, viz., to enable employes to become the possessors of Preferred and Common Stock at prices which will be attractive to them, the employes paying a fixed amount per share per month out of their earnings, and the Company carrying the stock for them, charging a rate of 5 per cent. interest. If the plan is put into effect, all dividends will be credited to the employes applying for the stock. Said stock will be held in trust for the employe for a term of five years, excepting in exceptional cases, such as death, when his heirs will receive what benefit a deceased employe has derived from subscribing to the stock.

Your Directors feel that the policy, as herein outlined, will, as nearly as possible, make the interests of the consumers, the employes, and the shareholders identical, and will inure to the most enduring and beneficial results for all concerned.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

On behalf of the Board of Directors,

WILLIAM C. EDWARDS,
President

WATERY BLOOD IN THE SPRING

How to Get New Health and New Strength at This Season

Even the most robust find the winter months trying to their health. Confinement indoors, often in overheated and nearly always badly ventilated rooms—in the house, the office, the shops and the school—taxes the vitality of even the strongest. The blood becomes thin and watery or clogged with impurities. Some people have headaches and a feeling of langour; others are low spirited and nervous; still others have pimples and skin eruptions; while some get up in the morning feeling just as tired as when they went to bed. These are all spring symptoms that the blood is out of order, and that a medicine is needed. Many people rush to purgative medicines in the spring. This is a mistake. You cannot cure these troubles with a medicine that gallops through your system and leaves you weaker still. What you need to give ou health and strength in the spring is a tonic medicine that will enrich the blood and soothe the jangled nerves, and the one always reliable tonic and blood-builder is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills not only banish spring weaknesses and ills, but guard you against the more serious ailments that follow, such as anaemia, nervous debility, indigestion, rheumatism and other diseases due to bad blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new, rich, red blood, which strengthens every nerve, every organ and every part of the body, and makes weak, ailing people bright, happy and strong. Mrs. Jas. McDonald, Harcourt, N. B., says: "In my opinion Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do all that is claimed for them. My system was run down, and I was so weak I could hardly do my work, and taking care of my baby added to my difficulties. I used a few boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they made me feel like my own self. I very cheerfully recommend the Pills to all who are weak or ailing."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DANGER IN CLEANLINESS.

Odd Opinion of Distinguished London Physician.

Somewhat novel views of the subject of bacteriology and hygiene were advanced by Sir Almroth Wright, M.D., F.R.S., in an address recently.

There was a belief, he said, that by washing, people washed off microbes. We did take off a certain amount of microbes, but we also destroyed the protective skin, which was all around our bodies, like the tiles of a house. If one had a skin like a tortoise, microbes would never get through. To have a turkish bath was to take away one's horny protection.

A great deal of washing increases the microbes of the skin, he declared, so he did not think cleanliness was to be recommended as a hygenic method.

With regard to the belief that in cases of consumption, fresh air would make things right, he asked why it was this principle only applied to tubercular disease. He held it to be dreadful superstition. The whole doctrine of fresh air required to be revised.

Rich people, he asserted, surrounded themselves with all sorts of luxury, and took absolutely no interest in getting rid of the microbes that surrounded them. He had been in consultation with twenty-one doctors around a rich man's bed, and none of them knew anything about him.

MEANT WELL.

The old folks had had three days together.

"You have a pretty place here, John," remarked the guest on the morning of his departure. "But it looks a bit bare yet."

"Oh, that's because the trees are so young," answered the host comfortably. "I hope they'll have grown to a good size before you come again."

CURED OF LAME BACK WHEN 84.

Mr. Samuel Martin, of Strathroy, Ont., passed twenty years of his life in misery, suffering tortures from lame back. He tried nearly all advertised remedies and household recipes, but received no benefit from any of them.

Some months ago, seeing Gin Pills advertised, Mr. Martin purchased a box. The relief which Mr. Martin experienced after he had taken one box, was so great that he knew he had found the right remedy at last. He used two more boxes and is now completely cured.

Dunant, "The Gentleman in White," Conceived the Idea.

During the Italian War of 1859, young Juan Dunant was travelling in that country. After the battle of Solferino, he visited the field, and, seeing the terrible sufferings of the wounded soldiers who lay around untended, he, with the assistance of several peasant women, formed an ambulance service, with its headquarters in a little church at Castiglione. He helped with his own hands to bind up the wounds of Frenchmen, Italians and Austrians alike. "They are all brothers," he said. "A wounded enemy is an enemy no longer." And he and his corps of helpers brought water and medicine and smoothed the pallets of straw, and cheered the unfortunates, and closed the eyes of the dead, and performed the last kind offices for the dying. Dunant was regarded by the hundreds of wounded as a miracle of goodness—little less than an angel. "The gentleman in white," was the way in which the officers spoke of him, as he moved around among the sick, his light clothing making him conspicuous on the field.

His experiences at Solferino, where he saw that the willing hands of a few untrained helpers actually saved many lives, and comforted hundreds of others, inspired him with the grand idea of an organization—the Red Cross.

BAGDAD FROM A DISTANCE.

Oriental City Looks Its Best From Afar Off.

Those of us who can think of Bagdad only as the magnificent city of Haroun-al-Raschid can hardly be expected to welcome the new international railway scheme. Let Bagdad remain forever inaccessible, except in dreams. But should the worst happen to Bagdad and the tomb of Zobeide become the shrine of British tourists the old city will have to undergo a few repairs. For it is safe from neither plague nor food. In one of the disasters of the last cenury the plague carried off 4,000 people daily for many days, and jealous Tigris overflowed its banks and destroyed several thousand houses and drowning 15,000 people. Like most Oriental cities, Bagdad looks her best from a distance. You miss the filthy, narrow streets, where two horses can hardly walk abreast, and behold a vision of luxuriant date groves, out of which rise little islands of green domes and graceful minarets. In the days of its splendor the East India Company maintained in the ancient city of the Caliphs a Resident, with a generous establishment; nowadays we are content with the usual modest Consular service.—London Chronicle.

"I said you haven't paid for that lemonade."

"Did you pay for it?"

"Certainly I did!"

JUST ONE WOMAN IN THOUSANDS

WHO CAN SAY "DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS MADE ME WELL!"

Mrs. Louis Delorme who was always tired and nervous and suffered from Backache, tells how she found a cure.

St. Rose du Lac, Man., April 3 (Special)—The story of Mrs. Louis Delorme, a well known and highly respected resident of this place, is identical with that of thousands of other women in Canada. It is all the more interesting on that account. She was tired, nervous and worn out. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

"I suffered for five years from Backache and too frequent urination, which destroyed my sleep," Mrs. Delorme states. "My head would ache, and I was always tired and nervous. My limbs were heavy, and I had a dragging sensation across the loins. Dodd's Kidney Pills made me well. I used in all ten boxes, but they fixed me up."

Thousands of other Canadian women who have not used Dodd's Kidney Pills are in just the condition Mrs. Delorme was in before she used them. Thousands of others who were in that condition and who used Dodd's Kidney Pills, are now well and strong.

We learn from the experiences of others, and those experiences teach us that the weary and worn women of Canada can find relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

KING AND SPORT.

Has No Hankering After Reputation of Being a Sporting Man.

Although King George intends to bestow his formal encouragement upon the social aspect of the Turf, it is an open secret at the Court that he does not mean to elevate the sport of horse-racing to a supreme place in his personal interests. King George is a firm believer in physical recreations for the nation at large. He desires to make it clear that, so far as he is concerned, personal effort in recreation deserves a higher place in the estimation of the people than mere attendance at spectacular sports. He is very proud—and does not hesitate to say so to his intimates—of the title of "sportsman," but he has no hankering after the reputation of being a "sporting man." While, therefore, he will go down to Epsom for the summer meeting, and drive from Windsor to Ascot in traditional state, King George intends to give every special encouragement to other forms of sport as opportunity serves.

CUTTING!

Private Doolan, the regimental barber, was well known for his carelessness. One day, while shaving Pat Dougherty, he had the misfortune to cut his patron's cheek several times.

Pat took all these gashes in grave silence, but when the shave was over he walked over to his water-bottle, which he had filled with water, took a mouthful, and, with compressed lips, proceeded to shake his head from side to side.

"What's the matter? You ain't got the toothache?" asked the barber.

"Whist! I was only trying if my mouth would hold water without leaking!" replied Pat.

PASSED ON.

Mr. Lammemwell believed that to spare the rod spoilt the child, therefore he kept in a certain closet a leather strap with which he administered punishment to his offspring when they committed any misdemeanor.

A few days ago he had occasion to need the strap, but it was missing from its usual place, and a thorough search of the entire house failed to discover it. Then he offered a reward of five cents to whomsoever of his olive branches could tell him what had become of the lost article.

"Gimme the five cents," cried four-year-old Tommy. "I know where it is."

When the coins were safely stowed away in his trousers' pocket he said, with much pride:

"I gave it to Willie Wilkin's father."

BABIES SORES

Every mother should realize that the skin of her baby is so tender that the secretions of the body often lead to rashes, eruptions, etc., all of which may be removed by Zam-Buk and the use of Zam-Buk Soap. Scores of restless, crying babies, upon examination, are found to be suffering from some form of skin irritation or "heat." Use Zam-Buk Soap for the bath and apply Zam-Buk Balm to the sores, and the trouble will soon vanish.

Mrs. L. Hood, of 416 Alexander Ave., Winnipeg, says: "Some nasty sores broke out around my baby's mouth, and despite all the preparations used, they refused to heal. I took him to St. Boniface Hospital and he remained there for two weeks. At the end of that time he was no better, and we again took him home. I was then advised to try Zam-Buk and obtained a supply. The effect of the first few applications was very gratifying and I continued with the use of the balm. A little perseverance resulted in a complete cure."

Zam-Buk Soap is sold by all Druggists at 25c per tablet and Zam-Buk Balm at 50c box. The Zam-Buk treatment quickly cures eczema, ulcers, sores, ringworm, eruptions, pimples, heat rashes, piles, cuts, burns and all skin injuries and diseases.

FARM IMPROVEMENTS

There are some pretty strong arguments against the present method of of taxing farm property. In taxing improvements, the farmer who is endeavoring to improve his property by the erection of good buildings, is placed at a disadvantage as compared with his neighbor who invests his profit from the land in mortgages and the like. And the irony of it all is that the man who does not erect good barns and a commodious dwelling house, profits by the expenditure of the man who does. The farmer who erects good buildings not only enhances the value of his own farm, but also that of his neighbor. The system is wrong in principle. A farmer should be encouraged to improve his property in the way of buildings and not made to feel that if he erects a bank barn, or a new house, his taxes will be advanced. A tax on the land only would work out in the same way in the end, with this difference that not one or two individuals in a neighborhood who are endeavoring to improve their buildings would have to bear the brunt of the increase. If by their investment in new buildings all the farms in the neighborhood are increased in vaule, then all would share alike in the increase taxation. This seems fair. Moreover a land tax only would encourage all to make improvement in the farm buildings It may be true that a farmer who contemplates erecting a new barn is not deterred from doing so because of a fear of increase in taxes. Nevertheless, the principle of taxing improvements is not right, and in some cases does stand in the way of progress.

Let every farmer try to secure the very largest production of farm yields. Clean seed, well-prepared land, early sowing, if land and weather conditions are suitable, are essentials, and if carefully attended to will almost invariably result in large yields.

Parents who are about to start children to school for the first time should do so immediately after the Easter Holidays. Not a few days after the school re-opens, but on the first day after the holidays. It means much more satisfaction for the teachers, an even start and consequently better results for the little ones. When children come straggling in through the spring months the work in the commencement classes becomes demoralized and but a slight progress can be made. Then when once started have the children attend regularly and punctually.

The Toronto Telegram of a recent date had a reporter take a trip to Brucefield and write up the Farmer's Bank failure from the viewpoint of the depositors and the story is an interesting and pathetic one. The losses there amount to about $25,000, and nearly every person in the neighborhood seems to have been affected to a greater or lesser degree, children who deposited their savings of a few dollars, young men and girls who had a hundred or two, middle aged farmers who had worked a life time to save a thousand or so and the wealthy man who lost $10,000. School and church trustees, lodge treasurer's and even the lone widow, and orphan had their losses—in some cases meaning their little all.

CREDITON.

The cold, wet weather of the past week has made it very disagreeable.—Our people are anxiously awaiting the coming of spring and in the meantime are making daily trips to their coal bin to see how their fuel is lasting.—The first issue of our paper, The Crediton Star, made its appearance last Thursday. It is a newsy sheet and if the first edition is a sample of subsequent issues we shall be proud of it. Emmerson and Lorne Brown have been engaged to work in the type setting department.—On Easter Sunday, the 16th inst., Bishop Wm. Horn, D. D., Cleveland, Ohio, who will preside over the sessions of the Canadian Conference in Zurich the week following, will occupy the pulpit in the Evangelical Church in the morning. The Bishop is a very able speaker and all those who attend will be sure to appreciate his sermon.—Last Wednesday evening the annual meeting of the Evangelical Church was held in the basement of the church. On account of the unsettled weather the attendance was not very large. Rev. Bean occupied the chair and B. Brown acted as secretary of the meeting. The treasurer, Mr. Holtzmann, reported the finances of the church to be in good shape, there being a surplus on hand. Mr. Conrad Kuhn, the retiring trustee, asked to be excused from re-election. John Sweitzer, Herman Oestreicher and Chas. Kienzle were nominated. The election was a close one and required several ballots before Mr. Kienzle was declared elected. Daniel Oestreicher and Ezra Faist were elected as trustees of the Cemetery Board. The trustees are about to draft a constitution, whereby persons who own lots in the cemetery are given the privilege of bequeathing a certain sum to the Board in trust and thereby receiving the assurance that their lots and monuments will be kept in permanent repair. The idea is meeting with the approval of quite a number of resident as well as outside lot owners. Herb. Elber was re-elected organist of the church, with Miss Lillian Gaiser as assistant. Sam Kuhn, Christian Trick, Daniel Oestreicher, Ezra Faist, Ira Brown, Harry Beaver, John Sweitzer and Christian Fahner were appointed ushers.—William H. Wenzel, who has been conducting a wagon shop in our town for the past thirty years, has disposed of his business to Albert Morlock, who is now in sole possession of the business. At present Mr. Wenzel has not decided what he will do, but we trust he will not leave this town as he is a valuable citizen and has always taken an active part in the town's welfare. Mr. Morlock intends to remodel the shop to make it more convenient for his increasing business.—Mrs. Oestreicher is at present ill of pneumonia. We are pleased to state, however, that in spite of her increased age she is resting easily.—Robt. Dinney, who has been living in Dr. McCue's house moved into the one lately occupied by B. Clark on Monday Mr. Clark having moved to Exeter.—Miss Ada Beaver left for Pt. Huron last week, where she is visiting her brother Michael.—Jacob Finkbeiner, who has been hostler at the Commercial House, Exeter, for a number of years, has started work here at Hill's Hotel. This being Jake's former home his many friends are glad to see him. We like to hear him say "Lucky man" as of old.—Miss Bertha Finkbeiner, who has been undergoing treatment in the Alexander Sanaterium in Byron, was brought home on Monday not much benefitted.—Wm. Bowman has moved onto the farm of his father-in-law, Mr. Godfried Weln, Sr., from London. We welcome Mr. and Mrs. Bowman into our midst.—The Sewing Circle spent a very pleasant evening at the home of Miss Della Brown on Monday evening.

At the council meeting held on Monday, A. Hill & Co. of Mitchell were awarded the contract to erect the steel superstructure of the bridge over the river at Fred Haist's and Joseph Lawson the contract to construct the concrete abutments and floor. These two contractors built the two steel bridges at Crediton East and at the Side Road two years ago and gave good satisfaction. —William Anderson has taken the agency to sell fertilizer for a Detroit firm. He has disposed of a car-load and is still taking orders. Our farmers find they derive good results when using something like this on their lands.

Rev. J. G. Yelland preached two excellent sermons here Sunday in the absence of Rev. Butt, who preached missionary sermons at Granton.—Mrs. Jas. Weld, who has been very ill for some time, is able to be out again.—Mrs. Murkley has found her husband, our public school teacher, and they have started house-keeping in the house recently occupied by Alex. Hergott. —The anniversary of the Epworth League is to be held on Easter Sunday and Monday. A fine cantata will be given Sunday evening and a social and choice program on Monday evening.—The Methodist Sunday School is increasing in numbers and interest, the attendance on Sunday being 117, while Mrs. Butt's Bible Class numbered 42, and Mrs. Evan's primary class was made up of 26 little tots.—Miss Martha Butt, Hensall, is visiting her cousin, Rev. W. H. Butt.

Mr. John Wilson returned on Saturday evening last after spending a couple of weeks visiting his daughter at Strathroy.—Mr. E. Oliver of Peterboro spent a few days last week with his cousin, Mr. Thos. Oliver.—Rev. Yelland of Exeter occupied the pulpit on Sunday last, Rev. Butt taking the work of Rev. Wells at Granton, who has been seriously ill.—Mr. and Mrs. Hodgins of Crediton were guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. Colwill on Monday last.—Mr. Thos. Willis of Exeter spent a few days the past week visiting his son, Thos. Willis, jr.—Mr. W. T. Colwill and Mr. Bert Mitchell left on Monday for the West, each taking a carload of horses, wagons, plows and other farm implements, and will be ready to do a big season's work after their arrival. Mr. J. Smith and Percy Webber went with the Colwell car. Mr. Colwill is going on the Express on Tuesday morning and will accompany the boys from Toronto. Mr. Colwill made an important deal recently, selling 450 acres of land for $10,000 —Our section men on the Railroad are busy the past week unloading gravel, getting ready to improve the road bed when the warm weather comes. It is reported that heavier Steel will be laid this summer owing to the heavier amount of freight that has to be handled, requiring heavier engines to do the work. Hence the new rails.—Quite a large number have been on the sick list with colds and LaGrippe, owing to the very changeable weather.

Will Reciprocity Increase Farm Values?

(From the Canadian Century)

Advocates of reciprocity are making statements to the effect that the adoption of reciprocity will immediately increase the value of Canadian farm lands 25 per cent. or more. Instead of making wild guesses let us get at the facts. Since the reciprocity negotiations began the United States Government has had a report prepared by experts showing the comparative value per acre of improved farm lands in 1900 and 1910 in various border states and in the Canadian provinces adjoining them. This report states that between 1900 and 1910 the value of improved farm lands increased 67 per cent. in Maine, 37 per cent. in New Hampshire, 33 per cent. in Vermont, 181 per cent. in Nova Scotia 120 per cent. in New Brunswick, 70 per cent. in Prince Edward Island, 80 per cent. in Quebec, 43 per cent. in Ontario, 39 per cent. in Michigan, 77 per cent. in Minnesota, 123 per cent. in Manitoba, 201 per cent. in Saskatchewan and 185 per cent. in Alberta.

The great influx of settlers in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta accounts for the rapid increase in farm values in those provinces; but what is the explanation of the extraordinary increase in farm values in the three Maritime Provinces of Canada Why did Nova Scotia farm values increase 181 per cent. while farm values in the neighboring state of Maine only increase 67 per cent.?

Undoubtedly the great increase in values in the Maritime Provinces is due to the establishment of manufacturing industries in recent years. The establishment of great iron and steel industries in Nova Scotia has revolutionized conditions throughout the three provinces. A profitable home market has been created for everything the farmers produce. These industries have been equally beneficial to the fisherman. As the steel industries are located in Nova Scotia the influence on the price of farm lands has been most marked in that province, but Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick have been greatly benefited. The developement of St. John as a winter port has also helped to increase farm values in New Brunswick.

It will be noted that the increase of farm values is considerable greater in Quebec than in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, and the improvement has been greater in Ontario than in the adjoining state of Michigan.

In the face of such facts how foolish it is to indulge in wild dreams of a sudden increase in Canadian farm values as a result of reciprocity.

THE PRICE OF BARLEY.

From October 1, 1890, to August 27, 1894, the United States customs duty on barley was 30 cents per bushel. From August 27, 1894, to July 24, 1897, the duty was thirty per cent. ad valorem, equivalent to a little over ten cents per bushel. On July 24, 1897, the specific duty of thirty cents per bus. was restored and it has been continued ever since. Of course during a period of 21 years there would naturally be considerable variations in prices, but for purposes of comparison it will be fair to take the three years previous to the reduction of the duty, the three years during which the low duty prevailed and the first three years after the duty of thirty cents per bushel was restored. Accordingt o reports of the Unites S. Department of Agriculture the farm prices of barley average 44.26 cents per bushel during 1892, 1893 and 1894 under a specific duty of 30 cents per bus. In 1895, 1896 and 1897, under a duty of about ten cents per bushel the farm prices averaged 34.53, while for 1898 1899 and 1900, under a specific duty of thirty cents per bushel, the prices averaged 40.8 cents per bushel. Thus, instead of the Canadian farmer getting an increased price for the barley he sent to the United States as a result of the reduced duty the price came down in the United States.

It is reasonable to draw the conclusion that if as a result of reciprocity large quantities of Canadian barley, wheat and oats go into the United States, it is more probable that the American prices will come down than that the Canadian prices will go up.

McGILLIVRAY.

A very quiet wedding was solemnized on Wednesday evening at the manse, Parkhill, when Miss Bella Glendenning and Mr. John Wright, both of McGillivray, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. A. Graham.

Mr. John Reid at his home in Lieury March 23rd. He was born in 1831 in Scotland, coming to Canada in 1831, the trip over the Atlantic taking eight weeks. The family settled near Montreal where they remained some time and then went to Bruce County. He married Elizabeth Woodward in 1870 and moved to 16 con. McGillivray in 1884, where he resided till last year when he made his home in Lieury. He was a consistant Presbyterian, and a staunch Liberal in politics. He is survived by his widow one daughter and six sons, Mrs. Walter Stokes, 19th con. McGillivray, John at Lieury, William and Thomas on the homestead, Alexander, 8th con. McGillivary; James R. Strassburg, Sask., and David G. in Winnipeg.

The late Oscar Looms died very suddenly at his home on Con. 18, McGillivray, on Tuesday. He was apparently in his usual health at noon on Monday and went to the barn to help with feeding the stock. While there he felt ill and on going to the house became almost immediately unconscious. He regained consciousness after about an hour, but it was only temporary and after relapsing he remained unconscious until the end which occurred the following morning. He was born in the State of New York in 1850.

Dr. Chas. M. Stewart, of Toronto, and son of Arch'd Stewart, of 7th concession of McGillivray was killed by a street car on Young St., Toronto on Saturday, 25th. Dr. Stewart in company with two other gentlemen were out for a ride on horses. The doctor's horse was struck by the car throwing him over its head onto the track. The front wheels passed over him badly mangling his body. He was 38 years old. The body was brought to Allan Craig on Monday.

BRINSLEY.

SAD DEATH—The death of Lillian Kent, beloved wife of Frederick Morgan has caused much profound regret throughout this community, which sad event took place on Friday last, March 31st. Mrs. Morgan gave birth to a child a few months ago, since which time she has been in very poor health, and complications setting in her condition soon became worse and gradually sinking the end came. Deceased was of a bright and happy disposition, beloved and respected by all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance, and her premature death has saddened the hearts of all. Deceased was born in McGillivray, being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Kent of this place. She was aged 30 years and 7 months. Besides her parents, two sisters—Mrs. James Mitchell of Stratford and Mrs. Young of London—and her sorrowing husband, she is survived by two children, all of whom have the sincerest sympathy of the community. The funeral took place to the Ebenezer Cemetery on Sunday and was one of the largest that has taken place in the community.

COVERED WITH ECZEMA

Cured by Two Bottles of D. D. D.

On March 21st, 1910, Mr. Angus McMillan of Port Hood, N.S., wrote us,—

My little boy, three years old was covered from head to foot with eczema. I tried over twenty different kinds of salves and washes but could not see any improvement—in fact it seemed to be getting worse.

I was about discouraged and had lost faith in all kinds of so-called eczema cures, when I saw an ad. telling about D. D. D. Prescription. I sent for sample bottle and the third application convinced me that I had at last a sure cure."

What D. D. D. did for this little boy it will do for any skin sufferer. A mild, soothing liquid made up of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, Glycerine and other ingredients, it penetrates to the root of the trouble and washes the disease germs out.

Why not get relief? Simply write to-day to the D. D. D. Laboratories Dept. E. A., 49 Colborne St., Toronto, and they will send you a free trial bottle.

WHALEN

Sugar making so far has been a slow procedure, owing to the cold and snow.—We have been served with a very long winter. Snow to the depth of six inches was here on Nov. 7th, and on Sunday the 13th people had their cutters at church, while on Friday night last some of our young people drove in a cutter to a party at Mr. Agnon Davis' at Saintsbury. The snow has never entirely gone, making in all from start to finish 145 days of snow and sleighing.—Your correspondent forgot to mention last week that Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Morley are the proud possessors of a young son.—Clarence Wilson entertained the choir at their weekly rehehearsal, and spent a pleasant time together.

Obituary.—The grim reaper death has again visited our community and claimed for its victim a fond wife and loving mother, in the person of Mrs. William Denham, who was called home from this world of cares and duty to that realm whence no traveller ever returns. Deceased, who was 39 years of age, has always enjoyed good health up to Friday last when she was taken ill and despite all that medical attention and skillful nursing could do she gradually grew worse and on Tuesday evening she passed away. Mrs Denham was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Batten of Zion and was well-known here, having many relatives and friends in this vicinity and at Zion. She and her husband having resided here for a number of years, and also near Ilderton, from which place they moved to their present home near Granton, where she died. Besides her parents eight sisters and four brothers, she leaves her husband and five children, the youngest being only a few days old, when she died. The family have the sympathy of their many friends in their sad hour of sudden bereavement. The funeral took place on Friday to Zion cemetery, conducted by Rev. Watson, and was attended by a large number of sorrowing neighbors and friends.

'Tis hard to break the tender cord,
When love has bound the heart;
'Tis hard, so hard, to speak the word—
We must forever part.
Dearest loved one, we have laid thee
In the peaceful grave's embrace,
But thy memory will be cherished
Till we see thy heavenly face.
Do we forget? Oh, no,
For memory's golden chain
Has bound our hearts to the heart that's gone,
Till we meet to touch again.
—J. Wright.

6 YEAR OLD GIRL CURED OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Mrs. Alex Moore, of James St., Oxford, N. S., says: Booth's Kidney Pills cured our little daughter, Christian, age six years, of many symptoms of kidney weakness. She complained of a sore back, the kidney secretions were frequent and uncontrollable, especially at night. Her stomach was weak and her appetite poor. This caused her to have frequent headaches, and the least exertion would tire her. We had tried many remedies but she did not improve. Finally we learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and procured a box. In a short time she was well and does not now complain about her back, the kidney secretions have become normal, and she plays around the house with no apparent fatigue. We always recommend Booth's Kidney Pills."

THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS

BEFORE TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the NEW METHOD TREATMENT and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

Hints for Busy Housekeepers.

Recipes and Other Valuable Information of Particular Interest to Women Folks.

BREAD.

Whole Wheat Bread.—Eight cupfuls whole wheat flour, one cake yeast foam dissolved in one cup of luke warm potato water, one teaspoonful salt, one tablespoonful melted butter, three tablespoonfuls sugar. (This makes three medium sized loaves.) Mix all together with enough luke warm water to make a stiff batter (don't get it thin); place in a warm room to rise over night. In the morning stir down, cover breadboard with white flour, turn out one-third of the sponge, pat lightly into shape (don't knead), so you can just handle, and place in well greased tins; let it stand until it rises to top of tins. Bake in moderate oven an hour and a half. Watch closely at first and when the loaves begin to brown cover with heavy paper. When done butter tops of loaves to soften crusts. This bread is easily made, and is most healthful and nutritious.

Nut Bread.—Two cupfuls graham flour, one and one-half cupfuls white flour, two cupfuls milk, one cupful sugar, one teaspoonful soda, one teaspoonful baking powder, one teaspoonful salt, one-half cupful broken nut meats, pecans best. This makes two loaves. Bake one hour in not hot oven.

Colonial Bread.—Three cups flour, three level teaspoons baking powder, one level teaspoon salt, one mixing spoon sugar; sift these all together, then add one-half cup chopped raisins, one-half cup chopped nuts (English walnuts), one and one-half cups sweet milk. Stir well, place in an ungreased bread pan, and bake slowly one hour.

DESSERT.

Danish Pudding.—One cupful sago, one cupful chopped walnuts, one quart fruit juice (grape or raspberry juice preferred). Wash sago in several washings of cold water and add to the boiling fruit juice, cook slowly, stirring often for about one hour, or until the sago is as clear as gelatin. Add the chopped nuts and set aside in a cool place until time to serve. Serve on sliced oranges and bananas, with whipped cream.

Date Pudding.—One pound dates, one-fourth pound walnut meats, one-half teaspoon baking powder, one-half teaspoon baking powder, one cup sugar, one tablespoon flour, two eggs. Beat this mixture about five minutes. Add enough hot water to make moist. Bake slowly, but not hard. Serve with cream.

Fruit Pudding.—Two quarts water, 5 cents' worth of sago, one-half cup raisins, one-half cup currants, one-half lemon, one apple, one-half pound prunes, one wine glass of raspberry vinegar. Wash the sago in several washings of cold water and add to the two quarts of boiling water. Add the raisins, prunes, currants, and the half lemon cut in thin slices. When this has all boiled for a matter of twenty minutes add the peeled and quartered apple. When nearly done, which is a matter of one and one-half or two hours, add the vinegar. The best way to know when it is done is when the fruits are nice and soft and the sago is clear like gelatin. This is an old fashioned Dane pudding and is generally made for holiday desserts. This has the advantage of being very nutritious as well as pleasing to one's palate.

CAKES.

Orange Shortcake.—One egg, one teacup sugar, one tablespoonful butter, one cup of milk, two teaspoons baking powder, two cups flour. Bake in dripper. Six oranges sliced fine with one cup of sugar. When cake is done lay on platter and split (or better bake in two pans), spread oranges on inside and top, and cover the whole with whipped cream. This makes a most delicious desert.

Black Joe Cake.—Two egg yolks; save white for icing; two cupfuls brown sugar, two-thirds butter and lard mixed, two one-half cupfuls flour, one-half cupful sour milk, into which dissolve one teaspoonful soda, one-third cake bitter chocolate; dissolve in one cupful of hot water; let melt on back of stove, put in dough last and bake in layers; put white icing between layers.

Spice Cake.—One and a half cupfuls of sugar, one and a half cupfuls of sour milk, one cupful of raisins, one-half cupful butter, three cupfuls of flour, one taspoonful of soda, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon and one-half teaspoonful of cloves. Method: Cream the butter, add sugar and cream again, mix and slit the dry ingredients; cut raisings and dredge with flour, add milk, then flour, until both are used. Add raisins and beat well. Bake in a well greased pan in a moderate oven about forty minutes.

TASTY DISHES.

Apple Omelet.—Stew six large apples; beat very smooth while hot, adding one tablespoonful of butter, six tablespoonfuls of sugar, a grating of nutmeg and half teaspoonful of rose extract. When quite cold add four eggs, first the beaten yolks, then fold in beaten whites. Put in deep dish which has been warmed and buttered. Bake in moderate oven to a delicate brown.

Hot Salmon.—Set a pan of salmon in a saucepan of boiling water over the fire and let simmer fifteen to twenty minutes. Open can close to the edge, and after draining off liquid turn the fish on to the center of a serving dish. Surround with potatoes cut in lengthwise quarters or balls, cooked tender and drained. Garnish with quarters of hard boiled egg. Serve with egg sauce, in a sauceboat, rather than covered with it.

RAISIN RECIPES.

Raisin Pudding.—One cupful of finely chopped suet, one-half cupful of sugar, two eggs, one-half cupful of milk, one cupful of entire wheat flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one cupful of floured raisins, steam three hours, serve with any kind of sauce.

Raisin Pie.—One cup raisins, one beaten egg, three fourths cup of sugar, one cup of thick sweet cream, one teaspoon of vanilla; bake in one crust.

SPRING CLEANING HINTS.

To Clean Holland Blinds.—Holland blinds which are only slightly soiled can be easily dry-cleaned at home. Remove the blind and roller from the brackets, and brush the blinds on both sides with a soft brush. Spread the blind on the kitchen table and rub it hard with the white part of a thick slice of stale bread.

Soiled Paint.—The mistake is often made of cleaning white painted lintels, doors, and wainscoting with hot soap and water. The heat of the water has the effect of destroying the outer coating og varnish, the result being that the paint soon wears away. For this reason a lather should be made with hot water, and the suds then allowed to cool till just lukewarm, when it may be safely used.

Cleaning Delicate Fabrics.—The most delicate fabric can be successfully washed at home by using soap jelly with a little ammonia and rainwater. A clear day must be chosen for this operation, and colored articles must be dried in the shade to prevent fading.

Oak Furniture.—Dust the furniture thoroughly, wash it well with vinegar and water, and, when dry, rub them with a little paraffin oil on a cloth, and finally polish with a clean dister. It will then look like new.

A Good Cleaner.—Looking-glasses may be cleaned by first washing the glass all over with clean lukewarm soapsuds and a sponge. When dry, rub it bright with a buckskin and a little prepared chalk finely powdered.

Removing Chemical Spots.—White spots which are formed on furniture bw dropping certain chemicals upon it, and which are almost more unsightly than any other defect, can be removed by the application of camphorated oil. This must be vigorously rubbed in to take effect, and should be left to dry, the spots being treated some little time later to an equally careful application of olive oil. A polish with seluet or leather will finally be required.

Soot on Carpets.—If soot is spilled on the carpet it should never be wiped up with a cloth, for it is sure to smear over the carpet and make an ugly mark difficult to remove. Scatter salt thickly over the place and sweep it and the soot together. By so doing the spot will come up quite cleanly without leaving any mark at all.

Wicker Furniture.—This should be cleaned with a strong solution of salt and water. Scrub it well, and rinse with fresh water. Soap should not be used to wicker as it encourages a yellow tint. When very shabby-looking, wicker may be "freshed by being painted. The paint used should be well mixed and thinned to the proper consistency. If too thick it is apt to remain on the wicker in lumps.

Dirty Ceilings.—When a whitewashed ceiling has become blackened, apply a layer of starch and water to it with a piece of soft flannel. Allow it to dry, then brush off lightly with a brush. The blackness will have disappeared, leaving no marks whatever.

Damp Floors and Carpets.—Moth-eaten carpets are often the result of covering the floors while they are still damp after scrubbing. The floor should be absolutely dry before the carpet is relaid, and it is a good plan to sprinkle a little insect powder between the carpet and the boards by way of protection.

When Spring-Cleaning Rooms.—When "turning out" a room it will be found a good plan to rub over the polished wooden surfaces of chests of drawers, tables, etc., with a cloth wrung out in vinegar and tepid water, the proportion being half a gill of vinegar to two quarts of water. This has the effect of cleansing the wood effectually without injuring the varnish, a good polish with ordinary furniture-cream being, however, a necessary sequel.

WHAT IMAGINATION WILL DO.

Doctor's Mistake Almost Put Young Man in His Grave.

Dr. Charles K. Mills, of Philadelphia, told at a dinner an amusing story of the influence of the imagination on the health.

"A young bank clerk," he said, "feeling fagged from the excessive heat of a trying summer, consulted a physician. The physician questioned him, sounded his lungs, and then said, gravely:—

"'I will write you to-morrow.'

"The next day the bank clerk received a letter from the medical man telling him that his right lung was gone and his heart seriously deranged, and advising him to lose no time in putting his affairs in order.

"'Of course,' the doctor wrote, "you may live for weeks, but you may do well to leave nothing of importance unsettled.'

"Naturally, the young bank clerk was very much depressed by this sad letter, nothing less than a death-warrant. He did not, of course, go to work that morning, and before noon he was having trouble with his respiration, while severe pains shot rapidly through his heart. He did not get up all day, and on towards midnight he had a sinking spell that caused his people to send post-haste for the doctor.

"The doctor, on his arrival, was astounded.

"'Why,' he cried, 'there were no symptoms of this sort yesterday! What on earth have you been doing to yourself?'

"The patient's face screwed up with pain, he pressed his hand to his breast, and said, feebly:—

"'It's the heart, I suppose, doctor.'

"'The heart?' said the doctor. 'There was nothing yesterday the matter with your heart.'

"'My lungs, then,' the patient groaned.

"'What ails you?' the doctor shouted. 'You don't seem to have been drinking.'

"'Your letter, doctor—you told me I had only a few weeks to live.'

"'Nonsense! Are you crazy? I told you take a month's vacation at the seaside and you'd be as good as new again.'

"The patient drew the fateful letter from a drawer beside his bed.

"'Well,' said the doctor glancing at it, 'this is a pretty mess. This letter was intended for another man. My secretary mixed up the envelopes.'

"The patient laughed. He sat up in bed. His recovery was rapid. That night, in fact, he was well again.

"And what," ended Mr. Mills—"what of the dying consumptive who had got this young man's letter? The consumptive, delighted with the prediction that a month at the seaside would make a sound man of him, packed his trunk and took the first train for New England. That was ten years ago, and to-day he is in fair health."

TAMING ELEPHANTS.

Experiment Now in Progress in the French Congo.

In ancient times, as is well known, the African elephant was domesticated by the Caraginions, who employed it in their wars with Rome. No African race has since succeeded in reclaiming this highly intelligent and naturally docile animal, a fact which has often been cited in proof of the general inferiority of the Negro race.

A successful experiment in taming the African elephant was made some years ago in the French Congo, while out of eight captured in Kamerun in 1900 three were successfully tamed. European officers generally, however, have been very unsuccessful in their attempts at taming the beast. But the Belgian officials in the Congo now seem to have succeeded where so many have failed.

Although no details are available as to the methods employed, there seems to be no doubt whatever that African elephants are now daily engaged in hauling carts containing mails and goods between Buta (on the Rubi River) and Bambili (marked in some maps as Bomocandi), on the Welle, a distance of about 100 miles.

Polite Shopman (showing goods)—"Here is something I would like to call your attention to, madam; it is the very latest thing out." Mrs. Rounder (absently)—"If there's anything out later than my husband I'll take it, if only for a curiosity."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, APRIL 9.

Lesson II.—Elisha's Heavenly Defenders, 2 Kings 6. 8-23. Golden Text Psa. 91. 11.

Verse 8. The king of Syria was warring against Israel—The reign of Jehoram was continually interrupted by the marauding expeditions of the warlike king of Damascus, Ben-hadad. Often these campaigns were nothing more than forays, such as the one in which the little maiden who later served in the household of Naaman was captured. Then there would be short periods of peace.

9. Beware that thou pass not such a place—How Elisha knew of the movements of the Syrians we are not told. It is enough that he was a man of God. More than once (10) he was able to put the king of Israel on his guard, and thus foil the plottings of Ben-hadad, who doubtless purposed to seize this royal person while he was hunting or on some other chance journey.

11. Which of us is for the king of Israel?—He suspected that his plans went amiss because of treason in the camp.

12. Elisha . . . telleth the king of Israel—Apparently it was common report among the attendants of the king. The prophet's fame must have spread greatly with the notable cure of Naaman, and it would not be difficult or unnatural for the captain's friends to think of Elisha as reporting the most secret counsels of their king.

13. Go and see where he is—It was a forlorn policy to think he could surprise a man who divined his most carefully guarded secrets. The place where he happened to be living, Dothan, was so near the capital (less than a dozen miles in the same plain, through which ran the great caravan route from Egypt to Damascus), that it shows how thoroughly at the mercy of the Syrian power the Israelites were that they permitted the enemy to approach so close with the expectation of getting away unmolested.

15. The servant—Some other, of course, than Gehazi, who, it will be remembered, brought about his own undoing through covetousness.

Alas! . . . how shall we do?—This is ever the question of desperation upon the lips of the world in perplexing straits. There is little help for those who cannot see beyond their own shadow.

16. They that are with us—To the man who walks not by sight but by faith there is a world of ever-real and omnipotent defense. We are not dependent alone upon psalmist and prophet for this assurance. The church of God has never been without evidence of it, and any man may test for himself the reality of unseen divine procection.

17. The mountain—Dothan commanded a pass which crossed the ridge of Mount Carmel. It was all ablaze with the spiritual forces with which God surrounded his servant Elisha. In like manner he shelters every believing soul. This may not mean a guarantee of freedom from the various ills of this world ("In the world ye have tribulation"), but it does mean spiritual security in the performance of God-given tasks. The outward man may perish, but the man himself, his soul, his inviolable.

18. Smite this people with blindness—The word for "blindness" is very unusual, being found only here and in Gen. 19. 11. The context seems to show that the Syrians were visited with a kind of illusion, so that it was easy for Elisha to deceive them as to their whereabouts, and to hold them under the spell of this delusion until he had guided them into the very stronghold of their enemies.

21. My father—A term of intimacy and affection. It does not, however, fully describe the relations between Jehoram and the prophet. Elisha was unlike his great predecessor in the close connection which existed between his work and the political and military fortunes of his people. For the most part, this particular king, though greatly indebted to Elisha, was lacking in courtesy to him, and their relations at times were far from cordial. The desire of Jehoram to smite these foes is doubtless a true picture of the man—an ungenerous, temporizing person, who was ready to fawn on anyone who was able to do something to his advantage, but who would turn upon that one the next moment.

22. Wouldest thou smite?—It was probably in accord with the rude ethics of that time to act as the king eagerly suggested. But Elisha was there as the prophet of God, and he showed that there was a better way to treat enemies. Even in those days it was a rule of warfare that captives taken in battle should not be unmercifully smitten down. A sense of justice, therefore, would suggest the sparing of these men taken by deception. Elisha's command to set bread and water before them is in the spirit of Him who centuries later said, "Love your enemies."

23. The bands of Syria came no more.—Such merciful treatment made a profound impression upon Ben-hadad, who temporarily (compare next verse) abandoned his campaigns of plunder and rapine.

THE HUMAN MACHINE.

Gives From 25 to 35 Per Cent. Profit on Expense of Keeping Up.

Prof. Jules Amar recently submitted to the Academy of Medicine in Paris the results of his study of the man machine. He proceeded upon the principle that a man who eats liberally ought to recuperate in weight every twenty-four hours.

If his weight lessens he works to excess, if his weight increases he has not expended the maximum effort. Amar found that the human machine gives a profit of 25 to 35 per cent. on the expenditure; but that the best artificial machine returns only 14 per cent.

It would seem from these experiments, says the Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette, that man is, indeed, superior to all mechanisms; with the very slight exception that he always wastes energy during the first five minutes of work before regaining his equilibrium.

It would seem that Monday's human labor is the most inferior and Tuesday's the most superior, owing to the curious action of Sunday as a rest day; the Monday lassitude of the French workingman is proverbial. And it is found that the workman who does not rest gradually loses his energy, and this is now a subject of keen interest among scientists.

The relation between fatigue and accidents receives much more attention in Europe than here, as do all matters relating to the conservation of human energy and the safety of the workingman. The relation between fatigue and accidents has, indeed, been noted in practically all forms of human energy. Bank clerks make most of their mistakes late in the afternoon, and this is said to have something to do with the early closing of such institutions. Bankers, at any rate, have had the sense to note that the mistakes of their employes are likely to prove expensive.

GERMAN SOCIAL LIFE.

Sunday a Real Holiday and Day of Relaxation.

Sir Henry Johnson is contributing a series of interesting articles to the Westminster Gazette on German social life. "The Germans," he says, "contrive to enjoy life and—as a nation—to look very happy, with fewer official holidays than are allotted to us, and this partly because of their jolly Sunday, which is a real holiday and day of relaxation occurring every seven days."

But Sir Henry says there is much to criticize and amend in Germany still. "The abuse of alcohol still strangles the physical and mental efficiency of a large proportion of German men in the upper and lower classes," A hopeful sign is the indignation shown by the bourgeois and professional classes against the "senseless eighteenth-century traditions of German studenthood."

Sir Henry finds the salvation of Germany in its high type, mentally and physically of womanhood. "The German woman, with the spread of education and new ideas of physical development, is becoming in the middle and upper classes a fine creature, as willing as before to be wife and mother, though proving herself an attractive and inspiring companion to an educated man." And that men are, after all, what women make them is a maxim handed down to us by philosophers.

FOR DISINFECTING.

Vessels Have a Sanitary Machine That Reaches Every Crevice.

For the disinfection of vessels on the Thames, the sanitary authorities of the Port of London have adopted an apparatus known as the Clayton Dilute-Gas Disinfecting Machine. This is usually fitted in the hold of a barge and taken alongside the vessel to be fumigated, but about 200 vessels are equipped with machines as permanent fixtures for their own use.

This apparatus includes a sulphur furnace generating sulphur dioxide, a gas cooler and a Root blower. About 1,000 cubic feet of air per minute is drawn along the suction pipe by the blower, dividing into two streams as it reaches the mixing valve. One stream of about 200 cubic feet per minute passes through the generator, becoming charged with fifteen per cent. of sulphur dioxide, and is then led through the cooler to the base of the blower, where the other stream of 800 cubic feet per minute is met.

The resulting mixture, containing three per cent. of sulphur dioxide, is forced along the delivery pipe to the pressure orifice of the blower. Suitable hose leads to the compartment to be reached, and the ten horse-power steam engine, electric motor or gas engine forces the mixture, as it is generated, into every crevice.

FOLLOWING THE CUSTOM.

All Queens Except Alexandra Had Lady Train Bearers.

The fact that Queen Alexandra's train was carried at her coronation by pages has caused many people to think that Queen Mary is making an innovation by having hers carried by ladies. As a matter of fact, it was Queen Alexandra who departetd from custom.

All records of the coronations of queens and queen consorts show that it was the custom to have ladies to hold the train. Queen Victoria had eight lady train bearers, dressed in white satin and silver tissue, with wreaths of silver corn ears and pink rose trimmings. Queen Mary will, no doubt, decide what her ladies shall wear, but Queen Victoria, on account of her youth, left all this to her Mistress of the Robes, the Duchess of Richmond.

The Duchess seems to have consulted the young ladies themselves, for she said to Lord Melbourne: "One thing I was determined about, that I should have no discussion with their mammas about it."

LOSS OF $100,000 AT KELSO

Explosion of Lamp in Miller's Hotel Started a Costly Blaze

A despatch from North Bay says: Fire which broke out at Kelso at 2 o'clock on Thursday morning assumed large proportions. The Miller Hotel, of three storeys with 200 rooms, was destroyed, as were also: The Prospect House, Bank of Ottawa's office, Davis and Dunn's general store, and several other stores. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

The fire started in the Miller Hotel, from a lamp explosion, the flames spreading very rapidly. Efforts to save goods and effects from flames resulted in many narrow escapes from death. Several minor accidents occurred, but nothing serious.

Northerly winds saved the property of the T. and N. O. Railway. Lack of water prevented the fire being combated, but a railway engine was rushed from Iroquois Falls, and moved the freight cars, loaded with goods for Porcupine camp, out of the danger zone.

LARGEST CUSTOMS REVENUE

A Gain of Twelve and a Quarter Million Dollars for the Year.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Customs revenue of the Dominion for the fiscal year, closed on Friday, shows the unprecedented gain of $12,280,930 over the fiscal year ending March 31, 1910. For the twelve months ending March 31, 1911, the total revenue was $72,343,866.07, as compared with $60,061,926.56, the year just ending being the biggest in the history of the country.

The month of March, just closed, shows the largest revenue of any one month also in the lifetime of the Dominion, being over a million dollars greater than the previous largest month, which was August, 1910.

The figures for March, 1911, are $7,445,474.52, as compared with $5,980,989.02 for March, 1910, an increase of $1,464,485.20.

SAVED HIS FAMILY.

But Man Residing Near Haileybury Was Severely Burned.

A despatch from Cobalt says: A woman and five children had a narrow escape from being burned to death in a house near Haileybury on Tuesday night. A lamp fell over and exploded at the foot of the stairs in the house of Joseph Ross, thus cutting off all escape. The father jumped from the upper window and got the children by means of a ladder, but not before they had ben severely burned. There then remained a month-old baby in the house, and Ross went through the flames for it and brought it to safety, wrapped in blankets, but his face was a mass of blisters, and flesh was hanging from his hands Mrs. Ross broke a rib in jumping from the bedroom window.

UNPRECEDENTED REVENUE.

Britain's Gross Income for the Year Was £203,850,588.

A despatch from London says: John Bull is able to boast of a record income for the financial year which ended on Friday. The gross revenue for the year reached the unprecedented sum of 203,850,588 pounds sterling. Nevertheless the net result is somewhat disappointing, the surplus being only £5,606,766. The explanation of this is that £31,500,000 sterling are arrears of 1909-10, the collection of which was delayed by the Lords' rejection of the Lhrad rdla hrdlaaldrhaa hadr than £26,000,000 of the total was earmarked to meet the deficit of 1909-10.

UNION JACK SHALL FLY.

Flag to be Displayed on Public Buildings Every Week Day.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Minister of Public Works has issued an order, in accordance with the decision of the Cabinet Council, directing that the Union Jack shall fly over every public building in Canada on every day except Sunday during the year. At present the flag is flown only over public buildings in seaports or ports of entry along the international boundary.

AN ERA OF PROSPERITY.

Prediction of Newfoundland's Governor to Legislature.

A despatch from St. John's, Nfld., says: After a session lasting but seven weeks, the shortest regular session on record, the Newfoundland Legislature was prorogued on Wednesday. In his closing speech the Governor, Sir Ralph E. Williams, expressed his belief that the colony is entering upon an unprecedented era of prosperity.

FALL WHEAT WINTERS WELL

Large Increase in Average Under Grain--Snow Helped It Along.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Careful investigation by local grain exchange members, by mill men, and reports from Minneapolis, and Chicago show most satisfactory agricultural conditions in the Canadian West to-day. Fall wheat is reported in excellent shape in both Northern and Southern Alberta, having come through the winter well. There is a considerable increase in acreage. Experiments with fall wheat in some parts of Manitoba are also promising.

The open character of last fall resulted in a big amount of fall plowing, though this would have been still further increased had it not been for continued drought. But heavy and frequent snowfalls, which have had a chance to soak well in, have removed this danger.

It is difficult to estimate how much new land was broken last year ready for seeding this spring, but the area must have been very considerable, especially in Saskatchewan, where entirely new districts have been brought under the plow. Estimates of increased acreage to be seeded to spring wheat are from 10 to 50 per cent.

FARMERS MUST BE CAREFUL.

Government Says Mangel Seed Must be Carefully Watched.

A despatch from Ottawa says: George H. Clarke, seed commissioner for Canada, has issued a proclamation to farmers generally throughout the Dominion advising the greatest diligence generally with respect to the mangel and beet seeds which they this year propose to sow. In the European countries, from which mangel and beet seeds are usually obtained, the climatic conditions in 1909 and 1910 were most unfavorable, and it is feared that the percentage of vitality will be very low. The department of agriculture advises farmers to sow from at least one-half more mangel seed to the acre than originally intended or generally done. The department also strongly advises the buying of seed from reputable firms, and the bags or packages of which are branded with the percentage of vitality.

TRAFFIC DIVERTED.

Leading Line Has Placed Two Extra Vessels on Canadian Route.

A despatch from Antwerp, Belgium, says: The diversion of European emigration from the United States to Canada is said to be seriously affecting the Atlantic steamship lines. The Red Star on Wednesday gives up to the America-Canada line two of the best special emigrant steamers afloat, the Gothland and the Samland. These vessels heretofore in the Antwerp-New York service are now to be operated from Rotterdam to Canadian ports. There are now 1,500 emigrants bound for Canada held up here by a lack of transportation facilities. There is a proportional decrease in the emigration to the United States.

SUBSTITUTE FOR WOOD-PULP.

Trinidad Planter Claims to Have Discovered New Substance.

A despatch from Washington says: Another substance from which paper may be manufactured has been discovered by a manager of a sugar estate at Trinidad, according to the United States Consul at that place. The new substance is ground sugar cane, to which is added bamboo fibre. The combination of these two, the discoverer believes, produces a substance of which the fibre is the right length to make a cheap and excellent paper. He has made paper by this process without the use of chemicals. The quality of the paper, according to the report, can command the market against any wood paper now being manufactured.

SPEECH OF FUTURE KING.

Prince of Wales Performs His First Public Act.

A despatch from London says: The boyish Prince of Wales performed his first public act and made his maiden speech on Wednesday at Dartmouth. The occasion was the observing of the ancient custom of presenting to the Town of Dartmouth a silver oar symbolizing its traditional guardianship of that harbor. The chief impression left upon his huge crowd of future subjects by the Prince was the youngster's modesty, but notwithstanding his nervousness, which he showed by blushes, by biting his lip frequently and casting frequent supplicating glances at his tutor, the Prince came through with flying colors and the women were unanimous in pronouncing him "a dear." His younger brother, Albert, who accompanied the Prince, evidently enjoyed his own lack of responsibility and laughed happily at the crowds.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. James Dearing of the Lake Road, Stephen, has been saddened by the death of their youngest son, Carl James, who died on Tuesday last after five days illness from brain fever and spinal trouble, at the age of 8 months and four days. He was a bright child and will be much missed in the home. Mr. and Mrs. Dearing will have the sympathy of their many friends in their bereavement. The funeral will take place to-day to the Exeter cemetery.

The Crediton Star made its appearance last week. The Star is a creditable sheet in point of appearance, and is published by Mr. F. J. Wickwire, late of the Times. The odd thing about the matter is that anyone should imagine that South Huron should need another paper. Twenty-five years ago there were but two papers south of Clinton and Seaforth, and now we are to have a fifth—in the face of the fact that the population of the county has decreased one-third.

Five Dollar counterfeit Bank of Montreal bills are in circulation. The bill would easily pass inspection of the casual observer, the printing and engraving being of a particularly high order. A close scrutiny of the bill, however, reveals several defects, especially in the printing of the heads of Sir Edward Clouston and Sir George Drummond. The profiles are somewhat blurred, and the lines very indistinct. The counterfeit bears the date of the series of Jan. 2, 1904. So far it has circulated mainly around Buffalo and in Toronto.

SUDDEN DEATH.—Mr. C. Sparling of Toronto, Ont., traveller for Wilson Lytle and Badgerow, of Toronto, was stricken with paralysis at Port Elgin, on Wednesday morning last while riding from the hotel to the station, and was immediately taken to the hotel, but died a few hours afterwards. Deceased formerly lived in St. Marys where his mother and two sisters reside. Frank Sparling, who travels for the same company, is a brother, and is well known here. Deceased was a cousin of the Carling, McDonell and Acheson families of Exeter.

A SPILL.—An accident in the way of a collision happened on Main street Saturday night about 8 o'clock which for a time threatened serious results. It appears Mr. Theodore Walper of Exeter North was driving down town and Mr. Richard Blatchford and Mr. Dan. Dew of Usborne were returning home from town and when in front of Mr. W. J. Heaman's hardware the two rigs collided, with the result that Mr. Blatchford's rig was turned upside down and both occupants hurled into the road with considerable force. Fortunately, however, they escaped without much injury, but the rig was considerably damaged. Mr. Walper also escaped without injury, but things looked bad for a time.

V. Wor. Bro. Stewart and Wor. Bro. Taman introduced the D. D. G. M. of South Huron District and the visitor being received in the usual manner, thanked the lodge for their kindly reception, and then directed the W. M. to proceed with the work of initiating a candidate. The work of the degree and opening and closing of the three degrees being done, and the Wor. Master, Bro. Fred. Kerr, and the officers complimented on its excellence, the work of the evening was concluded by a hearty vote of thanks being tendered to the distinguished visitor. Then followed the exemplification of the "Fourth" degree, which was a most enjoyable affair. The Wor. Master in a brief address appointed V. Wor. Bro. J. A. Stewart toast master, who, after a few pertinent remarks, proposed the toast of The King, which was heartily honored by all and an appropriate verse sung by Bro N. D. Hurdon. The Grand Lodge was responded to by Rt. Wor. Bro. F. Holwell, and his address was a grand tribute to the Craft. The Dominion was cleverly replied to by Bro. Weidenhammer, in which he extolled the vastness, the immense possibilities and the great advantages of this fair Canada. The response to the toast of The Empire by Wor. Bro. D. W. Colline was a most able one. The address was punctuated and illustrated with items of the world's history, and was listened to with deep interest. The song by Bro. Hurdon was well rendered as was also that sung by Bro. W. R. Elliott. The toast of Visiting Brethren fell to Wor. Bro. McIntyre, who did it ample justice. The toast of The Ladies received response from Wor. Bro. Davis and Bro. Murray, while Lebanon Forest was responded to by the Wor. Master, Bro. Fred. Kerr, the Senior and Junior Wardens, Bros. W. D. Sanders and R. G. Seldon. With the singing of Auld Lang Syne concluded one of the most interesting events in the history of Lebanon Forest.

They resided in Usborne until twelve years ago, when they retired to Exeter. Deceased was a most estimable lady and highly esteemed by all who knew her. The organization of South Huron was then taken up and accomplished. During the afternoon session Mr. J. Elgin Tom, I. P. FIRE AT GODERICH

GODERICH, April 6.—The Kensington Furniture Company's Factory here was almost entirely destroyed by the fire to-night. The plant consisted of four separate buildings—two frame and two brick structures. The total loss is estimated at between $50,000 and $60,000, about 75 per cent. of which is covered by insurance.

The fire originated in the top flat of the three story frame building, which was used as a packing room. The two story building was also burned. Despite the efforts of the town's fire brigade a third building, one of brick, was also partially destroyed, but the 4th, block was saved, as were also the Goderich Wheel Rims Company, the Doty Boiler Works and the North American Chemical Company.

The property is owned by ex-Mayor Rumball, of London, and his son, John Rumball, has been in charge of the plant.

WINCHELSEA

Death of Mrs. Clements.—Last week another of the pioneer residents of this community passed to her reward. We refer to the demise of Jane Wilson, widow of the late Isaac Clements, who died on Wednesday of last week, at the age of 73 years and 19 days. Deceased had been in poor health for four months or over, suffering from an attack of jaundice and the nature of the disease being of a malignant type her constitution gradually gave way under the strain until death released her of her sufferings. The deceased's maiden name was Jane Wilson, being a native of Ireland, and came to this country about 40 years ago, since which time she continuously resided in this township. Her late husband predeceased her about six years. Mrs. Clements was highly respected as a citizen and neighbor, a kind mother and true friend and her demise will be much regretted by a large circle of friends. She is survived by two sons and four daughters—John of Mt. Forest; William, Mrs. Winer, Miss Minnie and Miss Eliza at home and Miss Sarah, New York. The funeral took place Friday to the Elimville cemetery.

All those who understand the German language should attend as the Bishop is an eloquent speaker and well worth hearing.—The remains of the late Mrs. Sophia Wichert, who died in the Old People's Home, in Ebenezer, N. Y., were interred in the Evangelical Cemetery here on Tuesday. Some four years ago, after her husband's death, the deceased went to Ebenezer, where she was well taken care of in her old age. She and her late husband lived at Crediton East for quite a number of years and were highly respected. She leaves a niece, Mrs. Wm. Smith of Shipka and a number of relatives near Greenway, Ont. to mourn her loss. —Mr. Stoneman of Hensall spent last Sunday in town.—Some of the summer hats are making their appearance. We notice, however that Albert doesn't sit too firmly for fear that he won't have time to jump if his driver should get frisky.—Are we going to have a Victoria Day Celebration? Last year it was thought best to postpone it for a year. How would it be if our town father's called a meeting to discuss the matter? A crossing is badly needed between the crossing at Morlock's and the corner. People will take the shortest way across regardless of mud and thereby bring in a lot of the dirt into our places of business.—Messrs Hewitt and Steer of Exeter were in town last Sunday evening.

Dinner progressed very well, notwithstanding that the little hostess was rather quiet and somewhat engrossed in her own thoughts. The Hon. Maude was seated next to Mr. Crawshaw, and improved her opportunities in a manner worthy of her mother's daughter.

Mrs. Fairfax sat beside Lord Merefield and yawned audibly, but every now and then her face brightened as the clock chimed the quarters, and she remembered that Darnley would be with them directly.

Dorothy, too, began to awaken as the hour of nine approached.

"Derry should be here by this time; but then Derry was not like any one else; perhaps, for aught they knew, he might have come in quietly, without saying a word, and was now sitting comfortably in his own room."

Dorothy said this to herself, half pettishly, little thinking how near the truth she had guessed, for Derrick Darnley was at that very moment passing outside the dining-room window, from when, carefully hidden himself by the shrubs and terrace, he had a good view into the room.

He laughed softly to himself as he quickly scanned them all, but his laugh soon died away.

"Old Williams at the lodge must be right, and she is ill," he thought to himself; "my poor darling. I must find out and satisfy myself; perhaps she will grow better when I am near."

He smiled tenderly to himself as he went very noiselessly into the hall, and fortunately met Baines, who at that moment was coming downstairs.

"Miss Dorothy is anxious about Miss Hamilton; is she in her room, Baines?" he asked, careful not to arouse any curiosity by inquiring for her on his own account.

"Lor', no, sir; Miss Nancy went downstairs hours ago. I've just bin in her room, sir, and I know she ain't there. I see her go into the garden, but I thought she was at dinner now, sir."

Mr. Darnley muttered his thanks, and, waiting until Baines had disappeared, then strode into the garden, and turned off resolutely in the direction of the lower lake.

"She will be there—there, where our love-dream was born — my darling!—my darling!—my eyes hunger to see your face again!"

The soft, tender look crept over his features, his heart was thrilling and beating with his love; all nature seemed to harmonize with his feelings; there was music in the soft rush of the night air, the burr of the insect world seeking its rest; there was balm and powerful fascination in the fragrance wafted to him by the nodding flowers; it was the very place, the very night, for love's witchery. And there, just before, lay the corner which he knew by intuition sheltered the woman whose heaven-blue eyes made the world his world, whose sweet lips were his own, whose love surrounded him with peace, happiness and delight, such as rarely comes to man.

The pale summer moon had just broken through the dusk as Derrick Darnley reached the well-remembered spot by the lower lake.

His quick, eager eye had caught the gleam of a white gown through the trees, and his heart beat quicker in triumph and glad array.

He saw the slender figure but dimly, for the light was dying fast, and her silent attitude, born of suppressed agony, did not strike on him as it would have done at another time. He had walked fleetly—he had almost run—now he paused.

She had not moved; she had not turned; perhaps she had not heard, he crept so softly.

"Nancy."

He called it gently, but she started back, started like a frightened deer that saw its doom approach and no aid near.

"My darling! my dearest heart, did I frighten you?"—he was beside her in an instant, and had clasped her in his arms. "Nancy, it has seemed a century since I left you; has it been long to you, sweet? Ah! I need not ask—I need not ask," he laughed joyously, and his hold tightened on her trembling form, "for you have faded and drooped away from me; you have been ill, my darling—ill—what ill dare come to you, my own, my sweet?"

Ah! if he could but have guessed—if he could only have known!

"They do not know I am here; I stole off at once to find you; am I not clever, eh, little one?" He stopped suddenly. "Kiss me," he whispered, tenderly, passionately; "kiss me, dearest, and welcome me back again."

With a sobbing cry she drew abruptly from him, just as his lips touched hers.

"No, no," she muttered, hoarsely, "no, you must not."

The words died away in a moan as she covered her face in her hands.

Darnley stood rooted to the spot.

"What is it?" he asked, hurriedly; "have I really frightened you?—forgive me, darling, I forgot you had been ill. I am a brute; come to me again, Nancy, and I will soothe you, dearest."

She made no sign, only stood with her face covered up.

A sudden cold pain struck at his heart.

"Nancy!—Nancy!" he cried, huskily, "what is it, what has happened; tell me quickly, what has come to you, dear one?"

She put her hand as if to ward off a blow.

"I am your—dear one—no longer!"

Each word was uttered sharply, keenly; then rang on his ear with exquisite and horrible pain, so curt and hard did they sound. He passed one hand over his brow.

"I—I do not understand," he said, vaguely, then, seizing her by the two arms, "Speak!—speak!" he cried, "do not torment me; you are not the same Nancy I left; something has changed you, I do not know what; tell me, am I wrong?"

Her breath was coming short and fast, like that of a person in acute pain, yet she knew she must not fail now; she had to act, and it was not a moment to deliberate, or her strength would go, and she would have told all and betrayed her uncle, her guardian, her relative, her friend.

She dared not lift her eyes to his face as she answered, curtly:

"You—you are not wrong."

"You are changed," he repeated it over and over again, his gaze burning her palid face. "Nancy, for God's sake, don't trifle with me, tell me the worst! You—you don't love me! it was a mistake?"

She paused, his fingers were clenching her fair young arms, but she did not heed the pain. What was it to the agony that lived in her heart

"It was a mistake," she said, deliberately, in a dry, choked voice.

His breath came in a panting sob from his lips.

"You do not love me!" he cried, brokenly. "You do not love me!"

She made no answer. She checked the moan that rose from her tortured heart. She could not bear much more.

"You do not love me!—you, my darling!—my promised wife!"

She raised her eyes to his; the moon's pale light shone placidly down on them.

"I can never be your wife."

He bent forward to look at her, but did not release his hold.

"Go on," he muttered, hoarsely; "go on, there is more to know and I am not good at waiting."

Nancy bent her head as a flower droops under the hot heat of the sun.

"I—I have been very wrong. I—deceived you. I was not—not free to listen to you."

"Not free?" The man repeated the words three times, then he bent nearer to her. "His name? Give me his name, I say!" he asked in a hoarse whisper.

She paused only an instant.

Then two faint words passed her lips:

"Thomas Crawshaw!"

Derrick Darnley gripped her till he forced a cry of pain from her; then, with a short, hard laugh, he flung her from him and stood alone.

"You hypocrite! God forgive you, you have done an awful thing, for you have ruined my life!"

He stood silent for a moment, then he strode forward and drew up her trembling form from the ground, where she had fallen when she staggered back.

He clasped her in his arms, and strained her to his heart; then, bending his head, kissed her passionately—fiercely.

"Oh! sweet, false, cruel lips!" he cried, his voice hoarse and altered. "You may smile on happily, for you have spoken my doom!"

Once more he kissed her, then, releasing her suddenly, he turned aside and strode away.

The girl's form faltered, her two hands went out feebly towards him.

"Derry—Derry, my love!" she moaned, but as the sound of his dying footsteps reached her ear she fell prone to the earth, lost for a time to remembrance in merciful oblivion.

CURED OF CONSTIPATON

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes:

"For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment never comes single-handed, and I have been a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. Medicine after medicine I have taken in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the one ailment that caused so much trouble, yet at last I read about these Indian Root Pills.

That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box. 2

CHAPTER XIII.

"It is very odd," Dorothy Leicester said to herself.

Dinner was over, and every one was scattered about the grounds and lawn. She could just catch a glimpse of her father lying back serenely asleep in his cosy chair. Mrs. Fairfax was chatting to Lady Burton, deep in some fresh and delightful bit of scandal. Over to her right strolled Mr. Crawshaw with Maud Chester in persistent attendance; while her sister endeavored, without much success, however, to follow her example with Lord Merefield, who was all eager to join his dainty cousin's side, and was, therefore, not a very interested listener to the Hon. Ella's loud-declaimed accounts of her own and her sister's prowess with the tennis bat.

Dorothy was alone; she might have joined her aunt, Mrs. Darnley, who was sweeping to and fro majestically in her long black satin robe, her diamonds glistening in the moonlight, and an air of undisguised pleasure sitting on her handsome face, but Dorothy infinitely preferred to be alone.

"It is very odd," she said again.

She was thinking about Darnley and his non-appearance.

And where was Nancy — what could be keeping her all this time—it was so unlike Nancy to hide herself in this way?

Dorothy bit her pretty lip, and tapped her foot impatiently on the ground.

Her aunt sailed up to her at this moment.

"Something has detained Derrick, I suppose," she observed, slowly, "it is too late for him to come now."

Her cold eyes were fixed on a form emerging in the distance as she spoke—a form which moved slowly and languidly as that of a man weakened by illness and suffering, and at the sight a tinge of color crept into her cheeks.

"They have met—we have won!" was the quick thought in her mind—a thought full of triumphant delight, ignorant of either a woman's pity or a mother's sympathetic love.

She put her long, slender hand on Dorothy's shoulder.

"I think we must reconcile ourselves to the fact that he will not come to-night," she said; and then she gave a start of surprise. It was marvellously done, and deceived Dorothy immediately. "Talk of the angels, etc, etc.," Mrs. Darnley said, hurriedly: "here is Derry at last! He must have walked from the station."

Dorothy jumped up at once, all annoyance gone.

"Here you are," she cried, extending both her hands in greeting. "You naughty man you! We have been imagining you lost or drowned, or attacked by brigands."

"While all the time it was only a common, everyday headache that made such a furious onslaught on me."

The man spoke languidly. His hands felt hot and feverish to Dorothy's touch; his face was strangely haggard in the moonlight.

She looked at him anxiously.

"I hope you are not going to be ill, too, Derry."

He passed his hand over his aching eyes.

"Why? Have you other invalids, Dorothy?"

"Nancy has been very ill all day. I have been quite alarmed about her. But come in and have some food; you must be hungry and tired. Whatever induced you to walk such a hot night as this?"

"A whim—a mere whim, pretty cousin."

The man let his hand linger in Dorothy's. Her simple, unaffected delight at seeing him vaguely soothed and pleased, even while it pained him. There was such a difference in this greeting from the one that he had just experienced under the trees by the lake edge.

"Don't you see Aunt Anne?" whispered Dorothy.

Derrick Darnley had seen his mother plainly enough, but he shrank from speaking to her then. He felt that her keen, cold eyes would pierce into his heart, and read the sorrow written there. Besides, he had a grievance against her—a grievance that was augmented by strange doubt.

OF THE "OLD SCHOOL."

Examples of Discipline in the British Navy of Long Ago.

A little incident related in the "Reminiscences of Admiral Montagu," of the British Navy, gives one a vivid notion of what discipline must once have been. The strict old gentleman of the story was esteemed and loved by all,—says his son-in-law,—despite the fact that he commanded his ship and his household in much the same fashion.

Writing about my father-in-law, Lord Hardwicke, has reminded me of what was told me by one of my coast-guard men attached to a station I once commanded on the south coast.

I had driven my wife out with me to inspect this division, and soon after the inspection was over a gray-haired old man, one of the crew, asked to be allowed to speak to me.

"Certainly," I said, "but what about?"

"Please, sir," he replied, "that 'ere lady as was along with you this morning—I am sure I knows her face. They tells me, sir, as she is your good lady."

"Yes," I said, "what about her?"

"Well, sir," he went on, "as sure as my name is Johnson, I was bowman of Lord Hardwick's galley when he commanded the Vengeance up the straits. One day, sir, when we was a-lying off Genoa, the ship was ready for sea, and the accommodation ladder was hoisted in.

"Well, sir, you knows Lord Hardwicks was a very strict officer, and very particular that all hands was to knock off everything, come what may, whenever the bell struck twelve o'clock, when the ship's company went to dinner. He always wore a pipe in his coat, and used to pipe to dinner himself along with the boatswain's mates.

"Well, we were going to take the family to Malta, and had hoisted all the other ladies and children in out of the galley, and had got the lady as was along with you this morning, sir, up the main yard-arm, when eight bells went.

"The lord, he was piping to dinner, with the boatswain's mates, so they catches a turn with the whip, and leaves the lady a-hanging at the yard-arm!

"I thought it cruel, sir, to see the child left hanging there, sixty feet in the air, and I was immediately under her in the boat. God forgive me, but it was a cruel sight!

"But after a bit the commander, the officer of the watch and the boatswain's mate eased her in, and lowered her on the deck, when, Lor' bless you, sir, she was all of a cry!"

I thought this such a delightful story that I asked my wife about it, and she verified it, remembering it all quite clearly, although it had happened a matter of forty years before.

BRITISH MARMALADE,

Something About This Familiar Part of John Bull's Breakfast.

The manufacture of marmalade and other jams and preserved fruits is an important industry in the United Kingdom. Fruit jams, and especially marmalade, are found upon every British table, private and public, and are always served with breakfast and afternoon tea. In addition to the vast home consumption, considerable quantities are exported. Preserved fruits are imported into the United States to the value of about $2,000,000 per annum.

British marmalade is produced from sour oranges and sugar. The best known firms use almost exclusively the Seville (Spain) bitter orange, which has comparatively little pulp and consists mainly of rind, the substance most desirable for the making of good marmalade. Messina and Pelermo bitter oranges, although not considered as good as those of Seville, are also used, but command a much lower price.

Oranges being perishable and their attractiveness and freshness continuing for so short a time, the brokers accept the highest bids made on the day of sale and never reserve the fruit for future offerings. The sales are held regularly on what are known as market days. The character, quantities, qualities and nativity of the fruit are made known to the trade by catalogue several days in advance, consequently the auctions are always well attended and the bidding is spirited.

The London Fruit Exchange is located in the eastern section of the city in a large structure known as the Monument Building. More than $12,000,000 per annum is the amount required to pay for the oranges sold in the English market, the great bulk of the sale being by public auction.

Apples are sold in like manner, the aggregate annual sales averaging in value $10,000,000. The great Covent Garden market, in the heart of London, buys its supplies of fruits at the regular auction sales held at the London exchange, and in turn the retail dealers are supplied from Covent Garden.

Corks are rarely if ever used now by English jam manufacturers. The jars are invariably covered with a vegetable parchment, which not only is considered more cleanly but keeps the preserve in a better condition. This refers to both jam and marmalade.

Preservers employ their regular staffs continuously during the year and pay them the prevailing price for labor, which 5 to 15 shillings (1.22 to $3.65) a week for lads and girls and 3 to 7 shillings (73 cents to $1.70) a day for men. Preservers generally make their own packing cases. Preserving is taken in turn by season. When the orange season is finished the fruit whose season follows is taken up, and so on till the orange season is again reached. Pears and similar fruits are not preserved nor packed in England, such preserved fruits coming almost exclusively from America.

FAVORITE RECIPES.

Lily Salad.—Remove the shells from as many hard boiled eggs as there are persons to be served. Begin at the small end of each egg, cut the whites lengthwise in five sections. Cut almost to the base, taking care to leave the yolks whole. Turn back the petals thus formed so as to make each egg simulate an apen lily. Roughen the surface of the yolk with a fork. Place these imitation lilies, not too near together, on small crisp lettuce leaves spread on a shallow flat dish of clear glass. Serve with mayonnaise and bread and butter crisps.

Lemon Sandwiches.—Mash the yolks of five hard boiled eggs, add one tablespoon of butter, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one teaspoon of chopped parsley, and grated rind of one lemon. Mix into a paste with three tablespoons of lemon juice. Spread upon slices of whole wheat bread and cut into fancy shapes or fingers. Fix with narrow yellow ribbon.

Yellow Cream Soup.—Cook three carrots until tender. Press through colander. Beat two egg yolks well and add a cupful of condensed cream. Into this mixture stir four cups of boiling water and the carrots. Add one level teaspoon of celery salt, a pinch of salt, two tablespoons of oyster cocktail dressing and serve hot.

Bunnies.—One small cupful of light brown sugar, one tablespoonful of butter or lard, one pint of pastry flour. Rub the butter and sugar into the flour with the fingers. With beaten egg flavored with vanilla wet to a paste, sufficient to roll out thin. Cut into shape with cardboard form, insert bits of raisins for eyes and bake to a light brown.

Croquettes.—Take some fresh mashed potato, well seasoned, fry to a golden brown in hot fat, croquette shaped. Remove carefully to a hot platter. With a tablespoon make a deep depression in each one and fill with highly seasoned minced chicken. Strew the grated yolks of hard boiled eggs over the tops.

Sunshine Cream.—Rub one can of apricots through a sieve into a basin, add one cupful of sugar, one and one-half heaping tablespoonfuls of dissolved gelatin and one cupful of whipped cream, one-half cupful of cold water. Pour into individual molds. Turn out when set and garnish with yellow flowers. Place a large spoonful of whipped cream on top of each mold just before serving.

Rhubarb Short Cake.—Cut one small bunch of rhubarb into small bits. Cook in a stone crock with one cupful of sugar and half a cupful of water. Make a dough of one quart our, one-half cupful water, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoon of sugar, two teaspoons of baking powder, and milk to make a soft dough. Lay on a greased baking tin and bake in a hot oven for twenty minutes. When cool, separate into two parts (upper and lower) without cutting; spread with the rhubarb sauce. Place together and serve with cold sweet cream.

Pork Tenderloin.—Select thick tenderloins and place in roasting pan with a little bacon fat or butter. Have in readiness the sweet potatoes, pared, and parboiled, and place them around the meat. Bake in a hot oven for nearly an hour, basting frequently with hot water and butter. Season well and when done make a gravy in the pan with milk instead of water, and thicken it with flour. Boil five minutes and then pour around the meat.

Chicken Dumplings.—Use plump year old fowl if possible. Cut up as for boiling. Put plenty of butter or, if you have it, chicken grease, into a hot double roaster. Roll each piece of chicken in well salted flour and put in roaster in rather hot oven. Brown each piece, turning once, and then cover well with boiling water. Put on roaster lid and cook about two hours. To make dumplings: One cup flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one heaping teaspoon baking powder, sift well; add one teaspoonful butter, work well into flour; add enough milk to make a soft dough. Remove chicken from roaster to covered platter. Now drop into the broth a spoonful of dough at a time. Cover tight and cook in oven about twenty minutes. Dumplings will be light and chicken tender and juicy.

BISCUITS AND BUNS.

Biscuits.—One quart of flour, one level teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of butter or lard, milk or milk and water to mix (about one and one-half to two cupfuls). Stir together the flour, salt, and baking powder. Rub in the pan lightly with the fingers, working until it is well blended with the flour. Then mix to a soft dough with the milk or milk and water. Always use a knife for mixing, as it cuts the dough more thoroughly. Turn the dough on to a well floured board and par with hand until about three-quarters of an inch thick. Cut into biscuit and bake in a quick oven twelve or fourteen minutes. The chief requirements for good biscuit are a soft dough, almost sticky, little handling, and a quick oven. If not allowed to touch each other in pan they will be lighter and more delicate than when they are placed close together.

Buns.—One and three-quarter pounds of flour, one ounce of compressed yeast, one ounce of mixed spice, four ounces of butter, four ounces of brown sugar, four ounces ogf sultanas or currants, two ounces of chopped mixed peel, two eggs, three-quarters of a pint of milk; the spice into a bowl, mix the yeast and a teaspoonful of sugar together with a wooden spoon until both are liquid; heat the milk until it is just lukewarm, then mix it with the yeast; make a well in the middle of the flour, then gradually strain in the milk, etc., stirring it in smoothly with the wooden spoon. Cover the top of the bowl with a piece of paper and put it in a warm place for half an hour or until the top of the "sponge" is covered with bubbles. Sift the rest of the flour into a large bowl, rub the butter lightly into it, then add the chopped peel, cleaned fruit, and sugar. When the "sponge" in the first bowl is ready, that is, when the surface is covered with bubbles, begin beating some of the ingredients from the second bowl into it. Use the hand for this. Continue this mixing and beating until all the dry ingredients are mixed with the sponge; add the beaten eggs gradually as the mixture seems getting dry. Beat vigorously until the dough can be pulled right out of the bowl in a thick, ropy mass. If it crumbles, add a little tepid milk. Now cover the bowl, put it in a warm place until the surface is covered with little cracks; it will probably take one and a half hours. Have ready some greased baking tins. Flour the hands, take small pieces of the dough and form into small balls. Put these, well apart, on the tins. With a knife cut or mark the shape of a cross on the top of each. Place the tins in a warm place for the buns to rise for twenty minutes. Then bake them in a quick oven for about half an hour. This quantity makes about two dozen medium sized buns.

LAUNDRY HELPS.

Starch Making.—One-half cup good brand box starch (never use bulk or flour), three-quarters cup cold water, mix with starch; three-quarters teakettle boiling water, stir constantly while mixing and while cooking. Boil slowly for twenty minutes. Teaspoonful of shaved paraffin should be added while boiling. While the starch is cooking prepare a blueing water to add when the starch comes from the stove. Make one starch thinner than the other for articles needing but a little stiffness. Cover both vessels with cloths to keep out the cold air, as this prevents caking on the top which will be sure to spoil your starch.

For linen articles, table linen, dresser scarfs, or sheer linen waists add a tablespoonful of starch to two gallons water, and they will iron with a stiffness like new; remember always to iron linen on wrong side first. Wash starch vessel in hot suds, never cold water; use pieces old underwear with a few buttons on to save finger nails from bruises.

For scorched articles use peroxide. Wet two cloths; place one beneath and one on top and watch the space become clear in fifteen or twenty minutes. Let stand this long without disturbing.

Removing Grass Stains—Before wetting rub the stain with molasses and wash in the usual way. Use on either white or colored material.

Removing Any Obstinate Stains—Place tablespoonful of sulphur on plate, moisten with pure alcohol, and ignite; cover with tin funnel, wet the stain, and hold over small hole in funnel; rinse in clear water with a little ammonia added.

Cream of Tartar for Rust—Boil the article with the rust stain for about an hour in three gallons of water. To each gallon add one tablespoonful of cream tartar. The stain will disappear, no matter how old.

Cornstarch for Iodine Stains — Cover the stain with the cornstarch, wet in cold water or milk. Let stand until stain disappears. Change cornstarch if necessary.

"Men worry more than women." "Yes; they not only have everything to worry about that women have, but they also have the women to worry about, too."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, APRIL 16.

Lesson III. — The Resurrection Morn, John 20. 1-18. Golden Text, Luke 24. 34.

Verse 1. The first day of the week . . . early—The women had reverently watched the burial late on Friday. The near approach of the Sabbath had made possible only a temporary embalming, and they had had time on the Sabbath to prepare spices and ointments, and with these they returned at the break of dawn on Sunday. Besides Mary Magdalene, from whom, as Mark reminds us, Jesus had cast seven devils, there were the two women mentioned by Mark, whose presence is indicated by John in the next verse (we). It is characteristic of John to pass over what has already received ample attention from the other evangelists, and to bring out in strong light what they have omitted or somewhat slighted. His purpose here seems to be to thrust the Magdalene into prominence.

2 Simon Peter—The tomb was in a garden, near the cross, and therefore outside the city gates. It is to be presumed that Peter and the other disciple (John) were in the city.

They have taken away the Lord—Either she had not seen (which is more likely) what convinced John so quickly, or else she was too bewildered to make any interpretation for herself. Apparently, the sight of the stone rolled away was immediate evidence that the enemies of Jesus had borne his body to some other place.

4. They ran—The excitement of these followers of Jesus is written upon the face of the story (compare Mary's running in verse 2). John, being a younger man, would naturally outstrip Peter. But his excitement does not invalidate his testimony. His stooping and looking in is in the temper of a thoughtful man who misses none of the details. The impetuosity of Peter, entering at once into the tomb, is in marked contrast, but exactly like the irrepressible disciple who drew his sword in the garden, and was ever eager to make bold confession of loyalty to his master.

6. The linen clothes lying — The minuteness of destignation here is impressive. John seems to be insisting that there are no signs of haste and stealth, but everything indicates deliberation. The napkin (7), which had been bound around the head of Jesus, had been carefully folded and laid in a place by itself, "suggesting the leisurely manner of a person changing his clothes."

8. He saw, and believed—What did he believe? The report of Mary? Then why this care in describing the exact position of the graveclothes? Plainly, no human hands had removed the body of the Lord. There was only one conclusion, that here had occurred a miracle, a resurrection. Up to this time the words of Jesus about his rising had had no meaning for them, and the scripture, which he had quoted concerning the necessity of his rising from the dead (9), had been received into dull, irresponsive hearts. But now all was clear. Even though as yet he has made no revelation of himself to them, they are convinced, and, without seeking further, they depart quietly to their own home (10) in the city. If they had seen nothing more in the succeeding days, their confidence would doubtless have been shaken, and John proceeds to describe how their faith in the resurrection was made impregnable.

11. Mary was standing without at the tomb—The two disciples had come and gone, and she had probably missed them in the streets of the city.

12. Two angels—John is particular to describe their exact posture and position. To ascribe this appearance of the angels and the appearance of Jesus to some mental vision is to overlook the fact that Mary was in no state of expectancy such as would make a vision natural. She was weeping. She believed her Lord's body had been taken away, and she was overwhelmed with grief (13). Her loving intention to perform those last kindly offices upon the dead body had been thwarted. In the self-absorption of her grief she fails to show any astonishment at the presence of these angelic messengers, and even takes it for granted that they and the "gardener" know instinctively to whom she refers in her sorrow.

15. Supposing him to be the gardener—There was something about our Lord's resurrection body that made it both possible and impossible for his most intimate friends to identify him. It was the same body, but there was about it a mystic wonder, and it was given a strangeness of powers, that made it altogether different (Matt. 28. 17; Mark 16. 12; Luke 24. 16 and 37; John 21. 4).

16. Mary—She had not waited for a reply to her anxious question, but had turned again toward the empty tomb. One word was sufficient to cause her to turn herself about, for that was not the voice of a mere acquaintance. Only one voice could pronounce it with that never-to-be-forgotten tenderness. Her answer, Rabboni, conveys more of reverence and affection than is found in the word Teacher. No doubt we should interpret it literally, "My Master."

KING GEORGE'S MUSIC.

Handel Manuscripts in the Library Lent to British Museum.

King George has consented to lend to the British Museum the whole of his private musical library, which contains, roughly speaking, about 1,000 manuscripts and about 3,000 printed books and music, says the Queen. As regards numbers, therefore, it is a comparatively small library, yet in it are to be found not a few priceless treasures, and of these the Handel autographs claim first mention.

They consist of thirty-two volumes of operas, twenty-one of oratorios, seven of odes and serenatas, twelve of miscellaneous sacred music and eleven of cantatas and sketches. Handel promised to bequeath all his manuscripts to John Christopher Smith, his faithful amanuensis, but afterward proposed a sum of money in lieu of the autographs.

Smith, however, earnestly begged for the fulfilment of the promise, and Handel kept his word. Had Smith accepted the composer's proposition all the manuscripts at the death of the latter would have gone to the University of Oxford. Smith, who, by the way, refused an offer of £2,000 made by Frederick the Great for them, bequeathed them to George III. to show his gratitude to the King for continuing the pension which had been granted to him by the Princess Dowager of Wales. These volumes were used by special permission of Queen Victoria by Dr. Chrysander for the critical edition of Handel's works published by the German Handel Society.

There are also two splendid volumes of virginal music which belonged to Benjamin Cosyn and William Forster, both written during the first quarter of the seventeenth century. Then there is a most interesting volume of "Aires and Phantasies" for the organ, composed for Charles I. by John Cooper, who having Italianized his name was known as Coperario. He was the master of Henry and William Lawes.

But a still older book of music is in the library, namely one by John Baldwine, "a singing man at Windsor." This not only contains compositions of English music of the sixteenth century but music by Henry VIII. Coming down to a later period mention may be made of the very copy of Mozart's early sonatas for violin and pianoforte which the none-year-old composer presented to Queen Charlotte in 1765. Of Mendelssohn there are many volumes containing autograph inscriptions. The trustees of the museum will place the collection for the present in a separate room. On the completion of the new galleries in Montague place it will be put into a specially constructed room, where it will be available to students under the conditions which now apply to valuable works in the departments of printed books and manuscripts.

INVENTIONS AND WAR.

It has been said that there is no invention which has ever been made, which would not have some bearing on the art of war. A few recent examples are balloons, airships, aeroplanes, automobiles, motor-bicycles, condensed foods, and wireless telegraphy. And the wireless telegraphy and telephony bid fair to be the most important modification of the nerves of the fighting brain ever made.

AEROPLANE CHICKENS.

"When I order poultry from you again," said the man who quarrels with his grocer, "I don't want you to send me any of those aeroplane chickens." "What kind do you mean?" "The sort that are all wings and machinery and no meat."

MENDING A MISTAKE.

"Ma, in ancient times, did the men do the mending?"

"Why do you ask that, child?"

"Well, my Bible teacher was reading about husbandmen sewing tares."

Many a man grasps on opportunity to make a fool of himself.

Consider the silent man and the reputation he has for being wise.

Vocal teachers are always howling about their work.

Orange Juice.—Orange juice can be made to serve as a most delicious drink for luncheons if only a little thought and time be spent upon it. Serve chilled in tall glasses with some diced banana, a grape cut and seeded, a bit of pineapple or any seasonable fruit is an agreeable drink to sip throughout a luncheon in lieu of wine.

POPULATION OF COUNTRIES

VITAL STATISTICS FOR TEN YEARS ENDING 1909.

European Countries Show an Increase—Figures of Large Cities.

A British blue book has been issued giving vital statistics for the principal foreign countries for the ten years ending 1909. The figures relating to population are particularly interesting. They show the following total populations of the countries named, in 1909:—

Germany	63,879,000
France	39,276,000
Italy	34,270,000
Spain	19,945,000
Belgium	7,452,000
Netherlands	5,911,000
Portugal	5,340,000
Switzerland	3,584,000
Sweden	5,476,000
Denmark	2,692,000
Norway	2,370,000
Austria-Hungary (1908)	49,163,000
Russia (1908)	157,079,000
United Kingdom (June 30, 1909)	45,006,000

For some of the countries outside Europe the following figures are given:—

United States	88,566,000
Japan	49,905,000
Argentina	5,884,000

WORLD'S GREAT CITIES.

The population of the world's great cities show some interesting comparisons with London, the figure for which at the last census 1901) was over 6,500,000:—

New York (1900)	3,437,000
Paris (1906)	2,763,000
Tokio (1908)	2,186,000
Berlin (1905)	2,040,000
Chicago (1900)	1,699,000
Vienna (1900)	1,675,000
Philadelphia (1900)	1,294,000
St. Petersburg (1897)	1,265,000
Osaka (1908)	1,227,000
Moscow (1897)	1,039,000
Buenos Ayres (1905)	1,026,000

Perhaps one of the most interesting features is a comparison of the respective growth of populations in the ten years, 1898 to 1908, which works out as follows:—

	Increase in 10 years.
United Kingdom	4,166,000
Germany	8,574,000
France	522,000
Russia	28,614,000
United States	14,222,000
Japan	5,048,000
Austria-Hungary	4,054,000

TO PROLONG LIFE.

Happy Marriage, Daily Bath, Certain Foods, Rest, Fresh Air.

To prevent old age coming on too soon, the first condition necessary is the possession of healthy glands (chief among them being the thyroid, the adrenals, the pancreas, and the liver), and this depends upon heredity.

Marriage is an invaluable aid in the struggle against old age. If married life is one of the best means of resisting the approach of old age, on the other hand, it is positively certain that unhappy marriages are the surest means of hastening its oncoming.

To avoid premature old age and early death we have to follow these rules:

Wear loose collars, because a tight collar prevents obstacles to the free circulation of the blood through the thyroid.

Do not take too much meat, because abundance of meat alters the ductless glands.

Take large quantities of milk, this being the extract of various glands, and especially that of the thyroid.

Be as much as possible in the open air, and especially in the sunshine; and take plenty of exercise, taking care to breathe deeply and regularly. c

Take a bath daily, and, in addition, once a week or every two weeks take a Turkish or vapor bath.

Wear porous clothing, light hat, and low shoes.

Go early to bed and rise early.

Sleep in a very dark, very quiet room, and with a window open; and do not sleep less than six or more than 7 1-2 hours.

Have one complete day's rest in each week, without even reading or writing.

Avoid mental disturbances or worries.

Be temperate in the use of alcohol and also in the use of coffee and tea.

Avoid places that are overheated, especially by steam, and badly ventilated.

Replace or reinforce the functions of the organs which may have become changed by age or disease, by means of the extracts from the corresponding organs of healthy animals. But, of course, the application of this precept must always be adapted to the individual case.—British Medical Journal.

TAKING CHANCES.

Some men are just as reckless with their money as other folks are with their automobiles.

USES OF CARRIER PIGEONS

HAVE BEEN USED IN WAR AND IN PEACE.

Italy First Developed the Birds as Messengers for Military Purposes.

For centuries good and bad news, prayers for help, secrets of state, tidings of war's victories and defeats have been sent under a pigeon's wings. Egyptian records show that they were used in the land of the Pharaohs thirteen centuries before Christ: Ovid tells us that they carried the news of the Olympian games to the distant friends and relatives of the victors.

First-class carrier pigeons are very expensive, some "stud" birds costing as much as $300, and they can attain the remarkable speed of nearly 1,500 yards a minute. The birds were trained all along the coast and intercommunication between dockyards was maintained by this means.

A few years ago the Japanese Government obtained all possible information on the subject of pigeon breeding and purchased a large number of birds from English fanciers. Although to Italy belongs the credit of having first recognized the utility of training pigeons as messengers of war, France, Germany, Russia and Denmark were not slow to take advantage of this mode of sending news in time of strife.

USED IN WAR TIME.

It was during the Franco-German war that pigeons proved their utility as Government letter carriers. When Paris was invested by the enemy and all the ordinary channels of communication with the outside world were cut off the attention of the authorities was directed to the fact that the carrier pigeons in the city could be brought into service. At first the suggestion was ridiculed, but the practicability of the plan was soon demonstrated and in a very short time birds were conveying news into and out of the besieged city almost hourly.

During the South African war, when Sir George White was beleagured at Ladysmith, a few pigeons belonging to English fanciers, which had been taken into the town before the siege, proved of inestimable value to the gallant commander in conveying messages to the base at Durban.

The organization of pigeon posts for military purposes in Germany is of an extremely practical character. In addition to the various Government lofts in the fortresses and at important stragetic points most of the homing clubs place their birds in case of need at the disposition of the State, and in return for this the same protection is afforded their pigeons as to those which are the property of the Government. They bear an official mark and it is a criminal offence to trap or shoot them or to detain them should they stray into a private loft.

A MILL MESSENGER.

A Manchester firm of mill owners is reported to be possessed of a pigeon which has been employed as a messenger from one mill to another for over ten years. During that period it has made over 2,000 journeys and travelled over 29,000 miles. It is calculated that to have sent the messages by wire would have cost $1,500.

Homing pigeons are not only endowed with marvellous speed, but with great endurance. A few years ago a bird belonging to the late King Edward, who was a great pigeon enthusiast, as is King George, won the national race from Lerwick, covering 510 miles at a velocity of 1,307 yards a minute.

This stands in the records of the English Flying Club as one of the best performances ever accomplished in connection with its races. The speed naturally depends largely on atmospheric conditions. With a strong wind behind a speed of 1,500 yards a minute is fairly common. Whether pigeons return to their homes by means of sight or instinct is a disputed point, but as long as life lasts the bird will seek to reach home.

ARTIFICIAL DAYLIGHT.

In an address before the Society of Illuminating Engineers in London, Mr. A. P. Trotter said that the only practical production of "artificial daylight" with which he is acquainted has been achieved by Mr. Cooper in the experiment room of the Brighton Railway. It is done by passing the rays from an acetylene-lamp through a bright-blue screen. The resulting light gives a spectrum that cannot be distinguished from that of daylight. It is not economical, because the screen absorbs half the light of the lamp, but it solves the problem so far as effect on the eyes is concerned. Where economy is no object, says Mr. Trotter, a similar result may be obtained without regard to the source of the light, provided that a suitable screen is used.

'Tis said that the Americans are calculating how many years hence they will be able to engrave on their coins, "From the Pole to Panama."

Now it has come to clean-up time. The refuse accumulated during the winter usually amounts to considerable, and early disposal of it is necessary to cleanliness and good health. Let all the citizens unite in cleaning up their premises to the rear as well as in front, that Exeter may retain its good name as the neatest and cleanest town in Ontario.

An important order has been issued by the Post Office Department, whereby the amount in the post office savings bank may be increased from $3,000 to $5,000. Formerly only $1,000 could be placed to the credit of any account yearly, now the amount is increased to $1500 in any one year, and the maximum limit of an account is fixed at $5,000, exclusive of interest.

HAIR BEAUTIFIER

REFINED WOMEN THE WORLD OVER USE IT.

Every woman knows that there is nothing so good for hair and scalp trouble as Parisian Sage. If Parisian Sage is used two or three times a week it will keep the scalp nice and clean and remove dandruff. It makes the hair lustrous and fluffy, and keeps it from falling out.

We urge every woman who loves radiant and fascinating hair to go to W. S. Cole to-day and get a large 50 cent bottle of Parisian Sage. He guarantees it to cure dandruff, falling hair and itching scalp, or money back.

SKIN SUFFERER TRIED EVERYTHING—THEN D. D. D. CURED

This was the experience of Mrs. Geo. Newman of orangeville, Ont. She wrote in January, 1910,

"I was terribly troubled with eczema on my face, neck and hands for four years. I tried everything I had heard tell of, then saw your advertisement in the paper, sent for a trial bottle of D.D.D., used it on my face and got well. It is now two years and no return of the eczema. I consider I am cured and it certainly was a blessing to me."

No matter how terribly you suffer from eczema, salt rheum, ringworm or any other skin disease, you will feel instantly soothed and the itch relieved at once when a few drops of this compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, Glycerine, etc., is applied. The cures all seem to be permanent, too.

For free trial bottle of D. D. D. write the D.D.D. Laboratories, Dept. E. A., 49 Colborne St., Toronto.

NATURE WILL CURE YOU

Of Kidney Disease, Aided by Father Morriscy's No. 7.

Kidney trouble is one of the most distressing ailments of mankind, and leads to backache and rheumatism. This is because of the importance of the work done by the kidneys,—work which must proceed normally to insure good health.

A very large proportion of civilized people have some form of kidney trouble, sometimes without knowing that their malady is of that nature. Many obscure pains can often be traced to diseased kidneys.

These organs are the filters of the body. Their function is to strain out of the blood and eliminate through the bladder the worn out tissue and other impurities gathered by the blood in its course.

When the kidneys become congested and sluggish, these impurities, including the irritating and poisonous uric acid, are not entirely removed from the blood. The result is that the uric acid is deposited in the joints and tissues, causing the agonies of rheumatism and frequently affecting the liver and other organs.

Father Morriscy, the famous priest-physician of Bartibogue, N.B., after much research compounded a remedy which worked hand in hand with Nature. His doctrine, justified by thousands of cures, was that the need is not a patchwork relief, but a treatment that will enable the forces of Nature, working through the kidneys, to accomplish their intended work.

His famous prescription, No. 7, assists the kidneys to work vigorously and eliminate the harmful uric acid from the whole system. In the form of tablets, No. 7 is easy to take, and will effect cures where other remedies have failed. Do not trifle with kidney disease, but take No. 7 Tablets, the treatment that has proved so successful with other sufferers.

Robertson, a farmer of Transcona, Man., was found walking into the city on Wednesday evening with his throat cut, and the constable who met him took him to the General Hospital, where he may recover. He told a rambling story of having lost his place at Transcona by fire, the damage being $2,000. He says he started to walk to the city at 11 o'clock in the morning and on the way went into an empty house and tried to cut his throat with a pocket knife. SEVENTY MINERS KILLED

The Victims Mostly Foreigners, but Include Several Mine Managers

A despatch from Scranton, Pa., says: At least 70 mine workers lost their lives in the Dunmore vein, also China vein of the Pancrost colliery at Throop on Friday. Most of the men in the mine are foreigners. Seven mine officials, however, are among the victims.

The Dunmore vein of the mine is 750 feet below the surface, which greatly impedes the work of rescue, making fire fighting difficult. The colliery is owned by the Scranton Coal Company, affiliated with the New York, Ontario and Western Company.

The fire which caused the mine horror, broke out from some unknown cause in the engine-house at the foot of the shaft at about 10 o'clock on Friday morning. It is attributed to spontaneous combustion. At the time there were 300 men and boys in the various veins and chambers of the mine. The flames set off accumulations of gas which increased the difficulty and doubtless increased the loss of life. The scene at the mine is heartrending. About the head of the shaft were gathered thousands of people including the relatives and friends of the men entombed. Ropes had to be stretched to keep back the crowd and to prevent a stampede when the bodies were brought out.

EASTER

SOME FUN FOR EASTER.

Mothers who are planning Easter parties for the younger members of the household will find the description of this "bunny party" practical and capable of being carried out with very little labor.

There was a quaint old German legend of the Easter rabbit, and this party was planned to give the rabbit the prominence it has with the children of the "Fatherland." All grocers keep animal crackers, and will doubtless order a couple of pounds "all rabbits" for the occasion. Hide these all over the rooms and provide baskets or bags for the spoils. Allow twenty minutes for the hunt. For prizes award a book about rabbits or some one of the Easter novelties with which the shops are filled.

The next thing on the programme is a rabbit race. The children were told to stoop down like "bunnies," and when the bell rang to start to hop to the goal, which was a spot at the other end of the room. This is very amusing and gives a chance to award some more prizes.

Then each child is given a half-yard of ribbon, with which to make a bow to pin on a rabbit's neck. This may be a good-sized toy rabbit or it may be managed like the old-fashioned "donkey" party; only instead of pinning on the tail, the bow is pinned on the neck after the children are blindfolded.

If there is a blackboard the guests may be allowed to show their artistic talents by drawing a rabbit, each artist signing his or her name to the masterpiece. This will afford amusement for another thirty minutes. Slips of paper and pencils will answer if there is no blackboard.

Next arrange chairs as for "Going to Jerusalem," and place in the four corners of the room four rabbits. When the music stops the children make a dash for the bunnies, those securing the rabbits retiring from the game. The refreshments should consist of hard-boiled eggs, each one in a nest of watercress, plain sandwiches, cocoa and cookies in the shape of rabbits.

THE MEANING OF EASTER.

There is a beautiful superstition which is believed by many, that on Easter morning the sunrise is more brilliant than on any other morning in the year—that he who rises early enough shall see a peculiar radiance upon the Easter sunrising.

This may not be literally true, but the meaning of the fancy is true—that the brightest glory of our lives is shed upon them from the first Easter morn.

And what is the source of the Easter glory?

It is not the conquest of earthly conquest, such as that for which the Jews were longing—the victory over their stern Roman rulers, which should overthrow the haughty alien power, and leave the Jews once more the dominant nation, intolerant of all others.

Nor is it for us the glory of triumph over our human enemies, though such triumphs may come, nor the gratification of our selfish desires, but the greater glory of self-renunciation, the victory of life over death; of life—real life—over the death of self; of victory over sin—sin, which is but selfishness in its multitudinous forms.

When Christ died on Calvary—when Christ determined to die on Calvary—the victory was complete, though not apparent to the world until He rose again upon the Easter morning free, perfectly free, no longer even to be tempted by any selfish human feeling.

Through this death and victory He makes it gloriously possible that we shall attain to victory over self, shall rise superior to self, that we may shine as lights in the world holding forth the word of life.

And if our lights are feeble, if self still holds us down, the Easter morning tells us that it need not be so, that greater things are in store for us, even the fulfilment of our highest ideals.

"Who doth himself in Christ's grave lay,
Shall rise with Christ on Easter Day.
Who conquers self for others' need,
Hath risen with Jesus, risen indeed.
Who selfishness at the cross lays down,
Shall share with his Saviour the robe and the crown."

EVER TASTE A TANSY?

Easter was once the great cake-eating festival of the year, and even now the custom survives to a certain extent, as witness the Good Friday hot cross bun.

This is really a relic of pagan times. Before the Christian religion was introduced into England, our Saxon forefathers ate little cakes in honor of their goddess Eastre, and the clergy, unable to prevent the people from following their old custom, sought to expel the old paganism by marking them with a cross.

Tansy cakes are still made and eaten in some parts of England, but not to anything like the extent they once were. Two or three hundred years ago the poorest table was piled high at Eastertide with "tansies," as they were called for short, and it was customary for the lads and lassies to compete for the tasty morsels.

An old verse commemorates this custom:

At stool-ball, Lucy, let us play,
For sugar, cakes, or wine;
Or for a tansy let us pay,
The loss be thine or mine.

Tansies were merely ordinary cakes flavored with tansy flowers, which gives them a peculiar bitter-sweet taste.

Simnel cakes, another ancient Eastertide dainty, partake something of the nature of both a cake and a pudding, with a slight suggestion of pie added. The outer crust is of fine flour, mixed with sufficient saffron to stain it a deep yellow color, while the inside resembles a very rich plum-pudding. The cakes are first boiled for several hours, then baked.

GIFTS FOR THE DAY.

Easter is now observed almost as universally as Christmas, and it is quite the custom to send gifts mostly in the way of flowers, plants, candy or a novelty egg containing a little gift. Books done up in white paper tied with white and yellow ribbon making very acceptable tokens. In Europe Easter is the most widely celebrated of all the many festival days. The people of Paris "make to themselves the duty of being happy," which we can all surely try to do, and the best way will be to try to remember some one of whom no one else will think. Easter is the one day in the calendar that calls for unqualified praise:

It is a pretty fashion to be glad;
Joy is the grace we say to God.

FOR AN EASTER LUNCHEON.

The table was round and the centre-piece most attractive, being a basket of individual boquets of violets, from which a ribbon of violet hue ran to each plate. Little egg-shaped booklets with violet-colored pencils attached were passed to the guests before going to the dining-room. A transposed menu was written as it is given below, and the one who first transposed it received a prize of a violet stick-pin:

O Maul Castor Poet.
Had Basked Ma's Troupe Bade To.
Lamps Boar String In Creased Moon.
Serge Van Halo.
Ten Cols Cheer Quick. Yard Sell Sea.
I meant a Crane Police Spoken Cage.
Cache Tool.

The correct menu is:

Clear Tomato Soup.
Baked Shad, Bermuda Potatoes.
Roast Spring Lamb. Creamed Onions.
Orange Halves.
Chicken Croquettes. Celery Salad.
Neapolitan Ice Cream. Sponge Cake.
Chocolate.

At the finish of the repast the ribbons were drawn, bringing each guest a bouquet of violets. The bottom of the basket contained Easter eggs of white, on which appropriate sentiments were inscribed with gold ink.

RIOT AT PRINCE RUPERT.

Strikers and Force of Police in Fierce Conflict.

A despatch from Prince Rupert, B. C., says: A mob of strikers and a force of police clashed here on Thursday, and a sanguinary fight followed. Pistols, stones and clubs were freely used and the rioters were finally subdued. One of the strikers was killed by the police and many were injured on both sides. The situation is serious, and it is feared that further conflicts will follow. Forty arrests have been made.

LATER.

On Friday morning law and order reigned in Prince Rupert again. With over fifty of their leaders in jail, the strikers on the city grading contracts have disbanded. All night the streets were patrolled by gangs of special constables armed with rifles and revolvers. The strikers' headquarters have been closed by the police and the books confiscated. McInnes and Kelley, on whose work Thursday's battle was fought, were working a big gang of strike-breakers on Friday, and on several other contracts, where the men quit, work is again going on.

GOVERNOR OF AUSTRALIA.

Lord Denman Will Follow the Example of the King.

A despatch from London says: Lord Denman, the new Governor of Australia, speaking here, said, while going new to the work, he had the advantage of having been for four years in the personal service of King Edward, also having personally served King George, who knew the Britons overseas as no previous King knew them. Australia strongly believed in her own future as a nation, and, above all, was loyal in her attachment to the King and the Empire.

WESTERN COAL MINE STRIKE

International Executive Assist the Men in Western Canada

A despatch from Fernie, B. C., says: Secretary Carter, of the district local, received the following telegram from Vice-President Stubbs and C. Garner on Thursday morning:

"International executive board fully endorse the position taken by the district. Representatives will be sent at once to co-operate with district officers in carrying out the work in connection with the suspension. Deny absolutely rumors regarding non-support. International will support to the full extent."

This message signifies that a long struggle may be looked for. All movements on the part of the miners indicate preparations for fighting at every point.

The attempt at Passburg to have miners turn out 100 tons of coal per day was the cause of a little excitement at that place, but no violence has been offered and this is true of all places where men have quit work.

A visit to Coal Creek on Thursday morning revealed a state of absolute quiet. Nearly all the single men have left that camp. One boarding house which usually feeds 75 to 80 men is now feeding only 25 or 30. The drives have been cleaned and now that the International Board seems to have endorsed the action of district eighteen, the next move is hard to predict.

NEW STRENGTH IN THE SPRING

Nature Needs Aid in Making New, Health Giving Blood

In the spring the system needs toning up. To be healthy and strong you must have new blood, just as the trees must have new sap to renew their vitality. Nature demands it, and without this new blood you will feel weak and languid—you may have twinges of rheumatism or the sharp stabbing pains of neuralgia. Often there are disfiguring pimples or eruptions on the skin. In other cases there is merely a feeling of tiredness and a variable appetite. Any of these are signs that the blood is out of order—that the indoor life of winter has lessened your vitality. What is needed to put you right is a tonic, and in all the world of medicine there is no tonic can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills actually make new, rich, red blood—your greatest need in the spring. This new blood drives out disease, clears the skin and makes weak, easily tired men, women and children, bright, active and strong. You can prove this by your neighbors, for there is not a nook or corner in this great land where some weak, ailing man or woman has not been made well and strong by this great medicine. Mr. H. Wilson, Stonewall, Man., says: "Some years ago I was run down, languid and depressed and felt as though I was only fitted for life's scrap heap. A friend who had great faith in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills gave me a box. Before they were all used I felt some better, and thus encouraged, got a further supply, and it was not many weeks until I was again enjoying my former good health. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a boon to every weak person."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail, post paid, at 5 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CHARGED WITH BAYONET.

Soldier's Deadly Choler Caused Unusual Stir in Barracks.

A remarkable affair took place recently at the Infantry Barracks, York, England. A private soldier was taken before Col. King for a minor military offence and admonished, but not punished. When commanded to leave the room he drew a bayonet from one of the guards and made a determined rush at the colonel. He was stopped by Captain Peel (adjutant), who had a desperate struggle for the possession of the weapon. It was not until several members of the Guards had interfered that the man was overpowered. Colonel King and Captain Peel were uninjured, but the man had a finger broken in the struggle. He was confined in custody.

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

"My mistress isn't at home, ma'am," said a domestic to a caller. "Oh, indeed," was the sweetly sarcastic response. "Will you please tell her that when I saw her peeping from the front window as I came up I felt very much afraid she was!"

Sore Throat is no trifling ailment. It may carry disease germs to any part of the body through the food you eat. When you feel sore throat coming on, use Hamlins Wizard Oil.

CANADA'S BUFFALO PRIZE.

Largest Herd in the World Thriving in Immense Enclosure.

The largest herd of buffalo in the world is now owned by Canada. They form a picturesque group, as they roam over the new national reserve set apart for them near Wainwright, a city that has sprung up 125 miles east of Edmonton on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

Canadians recognized the need of action if the bison were to be preserved, and before the Americans realized it, says the World Today, they had purchased practically the entire herd of 600 or 700 from Michael Pablo of Montano, who had carefully gathered them together and protected them on his great ranch near Ravalli.

In the Wainwright National Park were placed more than five hundred buffalo, which were transported across the international boundary line by train from the Pablo ranch. The rounding up and loading of the cars of this large number of untamed animals and their young was no light task, and after a long period of hard work more than a hundred and fifty of the most unruly had to be left behind, having stampeded every time an attempt was made to drive them toward a corral.

An especially well organized effort will be made to ship these a little later. In addition seventy-five buffalo now confined in a park at Banff will be sent to the Wainwright reserve. The natural increase of the herd has brought up the number to nearly a thousand. In the present favorable environment it is expectetd that they will multiply rapidly.

Although kept within the boundaries of the reserve, the bison can hardly be said to be in confinement. Their stamping ground covers an area of 107,000 acres—105 square miles. It is twenty-five miles in an air line the longest way across. A wire fence eight feet high and seventy-three miles long enclosed it.

When the fence was completed it was found that twelve wild deer and one wapiti had been fenced in. Eighteen small lakes and a number of streams are within the park. Prairie chickens, ducks and other game find a resting place here undisturbed by the hunter.

The park is truly a buffalo paradise. The grounds bear every evidence that in other days they have been a favorite haunt of the lords of the plains. Everywhere are outlines of old buffalo trails and wallows.

These wallows are being reopened by the new denizens and once again the trails are being marked by the hoofs of the bison. The grasses are the kind that the buffalo specially like. As the ordinary span of a buffalo's life is a hundred years it may be that some of the herd are revisiting scenes of their youth.

Michael Pablo, from whom the Canadian overnment purchased the herd is a pure blooded Indian, and one of the wealthiest of the red men. He received $200,000 from the Dominion for 600 head of buffalo.

Aroused by the loss of these buffalo, the United States has established a national bison range in the Flathead Indian Reservation, in Montana, comprising twelve thousand eight hundred acres near the towns of Ravalli and Dixon, and it will be stocked by the American Bison Society. Some animals for a nucleus may be obtained from a herd of about eighty, owned by the Conrad estate near Kalispoll.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS CURE CONSTIPATION

Few other troubles afflict the little ones as does constipation. Every change of diet seems to bring this trouble on and baby suffers from headaches, fever, disturbed sleep and often vomiting. No baby who suffers from constipation can thrive well. Constipated babies are cross all the time and give mothers constant worry. The one sure relief for baby constipation is Baby's Own Tablets—they never fail to cure this trouble and can be given to the little one with absolute safety. Concerning them Mrs. W. S. McKenzie, Prairie Grange, Alta., writes: "I used Baby's Own Tablets for my baby who was constipated from birth and they rapidly helped her and left her bowels in a natural condition." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE REAL TROUBLE.

Native—"Why did you leave the civilized east and come out here to the wild, unsettled west to live?"

Newcomer—"Because the folks around where I lived slandered me and said mean things about me."

Native—"Why didn't you make them prove what they said?"

Newcomer—"They did."

Complete in itself, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator does not require the assistance of any other medicine to make it effective. It does not fail to do its work.

Little Ikey came up to his father with a very solemn face. "Is it true, father," he asked, "that marriage is a failure?" His father surveyed him thoughtfully for a moment. "Well, Ikey," he finally replied, "if you get a rich wife, it's almost as good as a failure."

In its initial stages a cold is a local ailment easily dealt with. But many neglect it and the result is often the development of distressing seizures of the bronchial tubes and lungs that render life miserable for the unhappy victim. As a first aid there is nothing in the handy medicine line so certain in curative results as Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the far-famed remedy for colds and coughs.

CURED THE WIFE AND HUSBAND TOO

GREAT WORK DONE BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS IN ONE QUEBEC FAMILY.

Thomas Lauriault had Kidney Disease and his wife Bright's Disease, and Dodd's Kidney Pills made them both well.

Lac Cayamont, Que., April 10 (Special)—There is a world interest in the simple story of Madame Thomas Lauriault of this place. In her own words, it is as follows:

"Dodd's Kidney Pills cured my husband of Kidney Disease and myself of Bright's Disease. We recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to all who suffer from Kidney or Bright's Disease."

This is a splendid example of the grand work Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing among the plain people of Canada. Kidney Disease is the commonest of all ailments among those who have to work hard, because the kidneys are the first part of the body to feel the wear and tear of heavy work.

When the kidneys go wrong the blood goes wrong, and the whole body goes wrong. Rheumatism, Dropsy, Diabetes and Bright's Disease are the usual results. Dodd's Kidney Pills cure these by simply curing the kidneys.

WOMAN TRAVELS AFRICA.

Her Only Escort Was Her Black Bearers.

Mrs. Roby, wife of an American brain specialist now residing in Japan, is the first white woman who has ever travelled the wilds of Central Africa without a white escort.

Mrs. Roby, who has just returned to London, went to Australia in October, 1909, then to New Zealand, the South Sea Islands and thence to South Africa, arriving at Durban last May.

She followed the route taken by the Duke of Connaught in her tour of South Africa, but continued right up to Equatorial Africa, making an especial study of native conditions in the Congo.

"For hundreds of miles," says Mrs. Roby, "I was alone except for black bearers. When the bearers became mutinous I would deal with them unaided.

A WEALTHY CABINET.

Six Members of the New French Government are Millionaires.

France's new Cabinet has an interesting personal side. There are six millionaires in it—millionaires n francs. They are M. Monis, M. Berteaux, M. Cailloux, and three of the minor Ministers. A curious peculiarity of the new Ministry is that seven of the Ministers and three Under-Secretaries of State have never been in power before. Another peculiarity is that there are eight representatives of the south of France, five of the centre, one of the west, and two of the east, in the Cabinet, and that the north of France is not represented at all.

All Paris is laughing at the narrow escape of M. Masse, the new Minister of Commerce. Just before he received the offer of his portfolio from the new Prinme Minister, M. Lasse wrote an article for The Lanterne, in which he was extremely plain spoken about M. Monis and his attempt to form a Cabinet. In the evening Mme. Masse arrived in great haste at the office of The Lanterne to ask for her husband's article, which, for private reasons, he did not wish to be printed. Since writing it M. Masse had been offered a portfolio in the Cabinet he had attacked so eloquently and he has accepted it.

"WHY BE SO THIN?"

Thinness is Embarrassing, Unhealthy and Not Natural—Formula Now Used Which Adds From One to Three Pounds a Week.

Everyone ought to have some extra flesh on the bony structure of the body, both for the sake of health and self-esteem.

Most thin people are sensitive to the harsh, unfeeling criticisms which are constantly being hurled at them by the more fortunate well-figured persons.

Everyone pities a thin, bony horse, but horses don't know it—while thin people are both pitied and ridiculed. It ought not to be so, but it is.

A well-rounded figure, be it man or woman, excites admiration; not only for the figure but for the bright eyes, pink cheeks, red lips, and vigorous carriage which accompanies a well-nourished body.

Strength, health, beauty and sound flesh abound, if the blood and nerves get enough nourishment out of the food eaten.

This prescription aids nature; helps absorption, digestion and assimilation; helps distribute the blood and nerve elements which make sound flesh. Get the ingredients and make it at home, and see how very fast you gain in weight.

In a half pint bottle, obtain three ounces of essence of pepsin, three ounces syrup of rhubarb. Then add one ounce compound essence cardiol, shake and let stand two hours; then add one ounce tincture cadomene compound, (not cardamom). Shake well and take a teaspoonful before meals and one after meals. Also drink plenty of water between meals and when retiring. Weigh yourself before beginning.

PROBABLY WOULD.

Useful in Camp.—Explorers, surveyors, prospectors and hunters will find Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil very useful in camp. When the feet and legs are wet and cold it is well to rub them freely with the Oil and the result will be the prevention of pains in the muscles, and should a cut, or contusion, or sprain be sustained, nothing could be better as a dressing or lotion.

SNIPS OF WISDOM.

Men who have never failed don't believe in luck.

Hard work is the best antidote for hard luck.

It's as useless to worry as it is to tell people not to worry.

Flattery is the tribute that vanity exacts from friendship.

A liberal-minded woman is'nt always giving her husband a piece of it.

HOW TO SAVE MONEY.

A Pointer to Housekeepers.

Look at the financial side of Zam-Buk's use. A cut sustained in the home, the store, or the workshop, results, say, in festering or blood-poisoning You have to lay off a day or two. What does that mean when pay day comes round? Zam-Buk insures you against that loss! A little Zam-Buk applied to such an injury prevents all danger of blood-poisoning, takes out the smarting and heals.

Heads of families know how costly doctoring is. Be wise and act on the preventive line. A box of Zam-Buk in the home is so all-round useful. The baby's rashes, the older children's cuts and bruises, the inevitable burn, cut, or scald—for all these, as well as for more serious ailments, such as piles, ulcers, eczema, ringworm, etc., Zam-Buk is without a rival.

Dangers of Shaving.—You get a cut at the barber's shop. A little Zam-Buk smeared on the wound prevents all danger. If any ailment has been contracted, Zam-Buk cures.

Zam-Buk Soap is as good as the balm, but in a different way. Washed in Zam-Buk Soap the skin is disinfected and disease germs lying upon it are killed. Mothers will find it unequalled for baby's bath.

Zam-Buk Balm and Zam-Buk Soap are sold by all druggists and stores at 50c. for the balm and 25c. tablet for the soap.

To Men Who Live Inactive Lives.—Exercise in the open air is the best tonic for the stomach and system generally; but there are those who are compelled to follow sedentary occupations and the inactivity tends to restrict the healthy action of the digestive organs and sickness follows. SOME REMARKABLE NESTS.

In Australia are to be found the largest, heaviest and most peculiar nests in the world. These are the nests of the jungle fowl, so called, and are built in the form of a great mounds, the average measurement in height being fifteen feet and the circumference one hundred and fifty feet. The nests are erected in secluded, sheltered spots; and, as in the case of the small nests of birds, they are skilfully interwoven with leaves, grass and twigs, and such other suitable material as the fowl may be able to procure. Large families of jungle fowl inhabit these strange nests.

HICKS' FORECASTS—A regular storm period extends from the 16th to the 21st. We will designate the 18th, 19th, and 20th as the crisis of this period. On and touching these dates, expect many active April storms and squalls, attended by hail and followed by change to much cooler. Not only this period, but the entire month of April seems exceptionally free from great and general disturbances, but the storm periods will bring normal and regular phenomena such as are common to this season of the year. A reactionary storm period has its centre on the 24th and 25th, on and about which dates the barometer will fall, and threatening weather will appear. This period will, most likely, not reach into high barometer and general anti-storm conditions, but run into a series of daily April showers, over most parts of the country, reaching into the next storm period.

Gun Club Shoot on Good Friday

SILVER TROPHY WON SECOND TIME BY GLOVER OF LONDON, AND IT BECOMES HIS PROPERTY.

The sixth annual tournament of the Exeter Gun Club, the Huron Indians, was held on Good Friday. Rain in the morning and wind in the afternoon made the weather somewhat unfavorable, however some good scores were made.

The program was of two parts, the first of five event and a total of 95 rocks, and the second of four events and 80 rocks. In the first part Glover of London and Kerr of Crediton tied for high average, while Jennings of Torgot high in the second part. The third event was for the silver tankard and the amateur championship of Western Ontario. This trophy was put up in '07 and has been won successively by R. Day of London, 20 straight; Glover of London with 20 straight; S. Fitton of Exeter with 18; D. Brintnell of Chiselhurst and again by Glover with 20 straight, the cup becoming his property

JARDINE TO HANG JUNE 16

GODERICH, April 14—"The sentence of the court upon you Edward Jardine is that you be taken hence to the place from whence you came, and from there on Friday, the 16th of June, be taken to the place of execution and there be hanged by the neck until you are dead May God have mercy on your soul."

In the solemn words of the death sentence, Chief Justice Falconbridge this afternoon announced the fate of Edward Jardine, while the prisoner sat leaning against the back of the dock with absolutely no sign of any emotion He appeared to be slowly chewing gum.

The case of Jardine, charged with murdering Lizzie Anderson in a lonely spot near the fair grounds on September 20, last, was given to the jury at noon. When court re-opened at 1.15 the jurymen were again in their places.

When asked their verdict there was a moment's pause and in a deep silence throughout the room, George Andrew of Elmville, arose no foreman having been named, and announced. "We found the prisoner guilty."

Chas. Camn of Usborne was also on the jury.

VANSTONE GETS LIFE IMPRISONMENT.

GODERICH, April, 14.—The sentence of the court is that you be confined in the penitentiary at Kingston for the term of your natural life."

With these words Sir Glenholme Falconbridge pronounced sentence on George Vanstone, promptly at eight o'clock this evening. At five minutes to eight the jury filed in and gave the verdict, "Guilty of manslaughter," after over two hours deliberation. The prisoner started nervously as he heard this, but when asked; Have you anything to say why the sentence of the court should not be passed upon you, he answered firmly, No. sir. It will be remembered that the crime was beating his six-year-old son to death some months ago.

HICKS' FORECASTS—A regular storm period is central on the 29th, extending from the 26th to May 3rd. On the 28th, new moon, or Moon's conjunction with earth and sun, is at a total solar eclipse node, within one day of moon's perigee, or closest approach to the earth, on the 30th. From the date of this eclipse of the sun, the 28th, to the end of April, there is a combination of astronomical causes, which is certain to excite phenomenal disturbances in the atmosphere, and in the terrestrial globe. From the 25th of April to the 4th of May is one of the most positive seismic periods of the year. Mark this prediction and note results. Violent electrical and magnetic manifestations, in earth currents, auroral lights, electrical storms, volcanic unrest and earthquakes will reach maximum disturbances within and about this period. The total phase of the sun's eclipse on April 28th will fall in the southern hemisphere, hence the seismic disturbances will first be most general and severe in that part of the globe. But the opposition of Jupiter, and the conjunction of Saturn, within two hours of each other on the 30th, together with the perihelion of Venus on the 29th, will create a seismic strain that will be felt severely all round the globe.

TRIVITT MEMORIAL VESTRY.—The annual Vestry meeting of the Trivitt Memorial church was held in the School Hall on Monday night last. The rector, Rev. D. W. Collins, filled the chair. After the usual preliminaries the Wardens' report was read, showing the finances of the church to be in a good, healthy condition, and probably the most successful year in the history of the church. The total receipts amounted to $2064.52, while the expenditure was $1923.11, thus leaving a balance of $141.41. The following officers were elected for the current year;—C. H. Sanders, People's warden; L. H. Dickson, Rector's warden; N. D. Hurdon and W. H. Collins, Auditors; Jos. Davis, Vestry clerk; Select vestry, Thomas Boyle, Dr. McGillicuddy, W. H. Collins, N. D. Hurdon, Thos. Sanders, Frank Sweet, Thos. Hawkins, L. Day; Sidesmen, Geo. Atkinson, Jos. Davis, Thos. Boyle, S. Sweet, Thos. Sanders, Thos. Case, P. Rowcliffe, E. Elliot. The Vestry was adjourned to meet two weeks hence, Monday evening, May 1st. The meeting was later resolved into a congregational meeting. John H. Markham and Thos. Case were elected Lay delegates to the Synod.

Mrs. Magee of Wallaceburg visited in Exeter and Dashwood during the holidays.

Mrs. B. Dyer of Brantford attended the funeral of her aunt, Mrs. R. Fisher here last week.

Mr. James Sanders, Exeter North, left Tuesday last for the West, where he will remain for the summer.

Mr. John Charlton was to Ailsa Craig this week owing to the dangerous illness of his brother, George, of pleuro-pneumonia. Mr. Charlton has returned home, but his brother is still in a dangerous condition.

Being Easter the services in the Trivitt Memorial church on Sunday were of a special and interesting character. The sermons by the Rector, Rev. D. W. Collins were of a deep spiritual nature and were listened to with marked appreciation. The music by the choir was of a high order and the anthem in the evening was beautifully rendered and much enjoyed by the large congregation.

JENNINGS.—MOYLE.—A very pretty wedding took place at the Trivitt Memorial church on Wednesday afternoon last, when Miss Caroline Honor Moyle was united in marriage to Mr. Henry Jennings. The ceremony was performed at three o'clock by the Rector, Rev. D. W. Collins in the presence of a number of friends of the contracting parties. The ceremony over the young couple were driven to the depot, where they took the evening train for London, to spend a short honeymoon. On their return they will take up their residence in the dwelling on Gidley street, east of Mr. Jas. Dignan's. We with their many friends hope for the young couple that they will realize the old ideal of married life as the first year joy, the second comfort and all the rest content.

GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES.

The address given by R. D. Cameron of Lucknow on the Canadian Government's system of Old Age Annuities in the Town Hall Tuesday night is worthy of more than passing notice. Mr. Cameron is a fluent and convincing speaker, and as he was dealing with a subject with which he has made himself thoroughly familiar and which should be of interest to every person, who is not possessed of affluence, he received the choicest attention of the audience, which was not as large as it would have been under more favorable circumstances. Reeve Taylor occupied the chair and introduced the speaker, who gave a very clear and concise account of the scheme. What the government proposes to do is to receive deposits from any person of any age between 5 and 85 years and convert them into annuities, payable at age 55 or later in life, as the applicant desires. The cost of promoting and managing the annuities is borne by the government.

The government pays 4 per cent. compt interest on all premiums or investments fixing the annuties on that basis. In case of death before the annuity becomes due a return is made of all moneys paid with 3 per cent. compound interest to the heirs. The lowest annuity is $50 per annum and the highest $600. There are no forfeitures or lapses. The applicant gets credit for all that is paid in. Deposits may be made weekly, monthly, quarterly, half-yearly or yearly in amounts of 25c. and upwards in any money order P. O. in Canada.

If the amount paid in with interest compounded at 4 per cent. is not sufficient to give the lowest annuity of $50, all payments with 3 per cent. compound interest are returned to the applicant at the annuity age of 55 yrs. The amount laid aside for annuties is immune from attachment for debt. It is payable only to the applicant, he receiving it every three months as long as he lives. The applicant may, by paying an additional sum, guarantee his annuity for 5, 10, 15, or 20 years so that it would be paid to his heirs in the event of his death during the guaranteed period, and should he survive the guaranteed period it would still be continued to him as long as he lived, without additional charge.

Example; A man aged 20 purchasing an annuity guaranteed for 10 years of $100 to begin at 60, would pay in 22c. a week or 11.1/4 a year for 40 years or a total of $445.60.

If he should die at any time before the annuity fell due, all that he had paid in with 3 per cent. compound interest would be returned to his heirs.

If he should die after the last premium had been paid and just before the annuity fell due, the Government would return to his wife or heirs the sum of $865.17.

If he died after receiving one payment of annuity the Government would pay to his wife or heirs $100 every year until the whole of the $1,000 guaranteed had been paid.

If he survived the 10 years, the $100 a year would be paid to himself so long as he might live if he should live to be 100 or over.

THE SOVEREIGN BANK

Shareholders here of the Sovereign Bank of Canada have this week been receiving circular letters from the President, Aemilius Jarvis, in which those at the head of the defunct institution propose a scheme which they believe will relieve shareholders from the possibility of their double liability. The bank practically owned the Alaska Central Railway. When the bank became insolvent one of their biggest assets was the Alaska Central, but its value was doubtful. Amelius Jarvis proposes to form a new company, capitalized at $3,000,000, to acquire the railway and operate it for the benefit of the shareholders of the defunct bank. They will be practically given the option of going in for the new company or facing double liability. The new company would take over all the assets of the bank. The call to put up the amount of the double liability is a most unwelcome one to many people in Exeter and vicinity, as there are numerous shareholders here, and some of them to a very large amount. To lose it once was bad, but a double crack takes it bad, indeed, and in many cases very bad. Shareholders are of various opinions as to the value of the scheme proposed.

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE;

OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER XIII.—(Cont'd)

Mrs. Darnley put out her hand, and offered her cheek to her son.

"You are a tardy traveller, Derrick," she said, with a cold smile.

He just touched her fingers, but did not bend his head to kiss her cheek.

"A tardy traveller on a useless journey. I suppose you had some good reason for sending me to transact your imaginary business, mother; but I confess I don't see it so clearly."

"I don't understand you, Derrick."

Mrs. Darnley's voice was surprise and hauteur combined.

He gave her a sharp look, then, without another word, turned aside.

"I will sit here for a little while, Dolly," he said, wearily, as he saw that he could not, must not, try to escape indoors yet, if he would prevent awakward speculation about him. "And then, dear, after I have been refreshed by the night air, and your sweet company, I think I will go to bed."

"You shall do exactly as you like," Dorothy answered, of course, drawing up a tiny chair, and sitting close to him. "But tell me, Derry, what did you mean just now by saying that there was no real business to take you away?"

"I meant that I had been made a fool!"

He spoke so hotly, so bitterly, that Dorothy started. She had never seen him in such a mood before, and she was a little frightened; but the young man seemed to have forgotten her very presence; he was gazing to his right hand, at that other man who had robbed him of all that made life dear and sweet; for whose sake he had been pushed aside, jilted, despised! For whom his whole love had been trampled under foot as the dead leaves of autumn are crushed into the mire.

For an hour he had been wandering about the grounds, trying to school himself to meet the others, to grow calm, and act as though this horrible thing had never been.

Had he but known! If she had sent him one line, one word of warning, he would never have come back! But now he was here, and he must go through the ordeal, at least, this evening. On the morrow he would go. But the morrow was not yet born, and the night was only new.

What he had suffered no one but himself could ever know. The blow had a double effect; it struck at his heart and at his pride.

Love, that levels all things, had erased from his generous mind all question of inequality between himself and Nancy. It was nothing to him that she had passed years of her childhood in a common home, that her surroundings had been vulgar, her connections plebeian.

He had loved her, that was enough; against all the world he would have upheld her; she was pure, good, a true gentlewoman; it was sufficient for him, and he loved her. It seemed to him, looking back now, that he had loved her from the very first—from the moment when she had clung to his arm that bygone January night, and he had struck her cowardly tormentor to the mud. Had not her sweet eyes haunted him, and could he ever forget the quick rush of pleasure that filled him when she had put her small hand in his that celebrated evening in Sir Humphrey's "den," and whispered she would be his friend. Friend! ah! how could her lips have been so false—so cruel?

Darnley ground his nails into his clinched palms. What act of friendship was it that broke his loyal heart and cast aside his tenderness and love! He could not believe it at first.

He recalled every trait in the girl's character, he had watched so closely he thought he knew it well; how pure, how gentle, how full of womanly swmpathy; yet what a treasure of human passion had seemed to him there!

And now she was giving herself willingly, nay, eagerly, to be the wife of such a man as Thomas Crawshaw! His wife! Derrick Darnley bit his lips to keep back the groan that would have escaped them. Never more would her lips meet his—never more should he clasp her slender form to his heart—never more would her eyes smile up at him—she was no longer his, she belonged to Thomas Crawshaw—to that vulgar brute, whose very presence near her seemed a desecration.

The sight of the men sauntering to and fro, with the glow of triumphant possession shining over his [illegible] face, was more than the [illegible] man could bear.

With a smothered oath he started to his feet, forgetful, heedless that Dorothy was gazing at him in startled surprise, and without another word he strode away to the house.

"If I stay longer I shall kill him! I shall not be able to restrain myself," he muttered, fiercely, madly.

He reached the Hall and made his way to Sir Humphrey's "den," he knew he would be safe here from intrusion; but, nevertheless, he took the precaution of carefully locking the door, and once alone, he flung himself in a chair, and buried his face in his folded arms on the table.

He felt faint and sick from the violence of the anger he had experienced, and now came the dull, dead ache of despair to take its place.

Strong man as he was, he trembled in every limb; love, that had been so sweet, had turned to such bitterness as he had never dreamed of. He recalled the brief ectasy that had come to him. As he sat there alone in the empty room and the gray dusk, he remembered with a wild throb at his heart the indescribable joy that had run through his veins as his arms first enfolded her, and he caught her whispered love on her sweet, fresh lips. Love! no, no, it had never been love. He flung out his arms suddenly, and started to his feet.

"I can't stay here," he said to himself, hoarsely. "I must go at once—where? What does it matter where? One place is as good as another now my hope is gone—my ambition dead. Why need I work for the future—why struggle? Everything is base and false and miserable!" Then his mood changed.

"How white she was," he said, hurriedly, to himself; "her face was drawn as if with pain. Did she really suffer? or—— Pshaw! it was acting. If she felt anything, it must have been shame—shame at her wrong, her cruel deception." He passed his hand over his brow, it was wet with perspiration. "Yet," he mused, as he paced on, "there is something in the whole affair I do not understand. Why should my mother have sent me on that useless journey Is there some mystery here?" Unconsciously his heart beat quicker. "Can there be any connection between this and—"

He paused, then shook his head.

How could his mother have anything to do with Nancy's affairs? She had spoken the truth with her own lips; she had told him she did not love him!

In his excitement he forgot that poor Nancy had never uttered such a falsehood.

"Ah!" he cried, passionately, "I am rightly punished for humbling my pride to the dust that bygone night in this very room, and entreating her to forgive me and remain at the Hall; had I been firm, she would have gone, and I should have been spared this misery."

The vision of her face rose before him; he saw her as she had stood under the rose-hued umbrella in the early morn; he felt again the fascination steal over him as his eyes met the fancied gaze of her marvellous blue ones. Even in imagination he could hear her soft breathing, and see the delicate color come and go in her face

Then, with a gesture of passionate despair and defiance, he started upright again.

"I will be strong," he said; "she shall see that I can laugh and bear it. She is no longer the woman I love—she is my enemy—I hate her—I hate her!"

He unlocked the door and walked steadily into the garden, knowing nothing, seeing nothing, only wrapped about in a hot flood of passion that was born of his recklessness and despair!

CHAPTER XIV.

The summer moon was at its full height as the young man emerged from the house and went slowly on to the lawn.

"What, not gone to bed, Derry?" cried Dorothy, rising alertly and going to meet him. "I thought you were in dreamland by this time!"

"I suddenly remembered an important letter I had to write," he replied, with a faint smile playing over his face for an instant.

"Could you not have done that in the morning, eh, sir?"

"I did not want to risk losing any of the delicious moments I shall indulge myself in to-morrow."

Darnley laughed shortly; his eyes went slowly round the lawn, but she was not there—he felt it, rather than saw it.

"What a lovely night," he said, abruptly; he must say something, and this came mechanically to his lips. Dorothy gave a soft little sigh. The beauty of the night had certainly been lost on her up to now; but now she mentally agreed that he was right; it was lovely. He turned to her suddenly.

"Why are you sitting alone?" he asked.

"I prefer to," Dorothy answered, truthfully; "there is no one here, except you, now, that I care to talk to. Nancy has disappeared; I can't find her high and low; I should not be the least surprised if I suddenly discovered she had walked to see Mrs. Wortley all alone—she has been so strange all day—but then she has been ill, poor dear."

"Has she been very ill?"

Derry's voice was only faintly interested.

"Very. I saw her just before luncheon, and she looked awful. I really was alarmed, but she must be better, or she would not be out of her room, would she?"

"I—I should imagine not."

Derry passed his hand over his hot eyes. His sore heart felt a pang pass through it as he heard of her suffering; and once again came that curious doubt—a doubt that was mingled with strange hope and pain; but it was so vague, so unsatisfactory, he dismissed it almost immediately from his mind.

"Shall we go for a stroll?" Dorothy said, laughingly.

"Merefield will slay me," Mr. Darnley replied, echoing her laugh, in a hollow, forced way.

Her face flushed.

"Merefield is so foolish."

"Take care; he has a title."

Despite his efforts, Derrick could not yet be quite natural.

Dorothy looked at him nervously.

"I think, after all, you had better go to bed; you seem thoroughly knocked out, Derry."

But the man made no answer, for at that moment he saw a slender, white-robed form coming toward them in the moonlight.

"It is Nancy," cried Dorothy; "let us go and scold her, naughty girl!"

She ran away swiftly, and Derrick Darnley set his teeth and clinched his strong hands.

So she had come to brave him, and she! The comedy was about to begin! Well, with all his heart! She would play her part to perfection, of course, but if she thought to see him flinch and falter she was mistaken.

How pale she was; and were those deep, black marks beneath her exquisite eyes, or did the moon throw queer shadows across her face and bring them there?

How strange it seemed; here she stood, the woman who had filled his dreams with such unspeakable beauty: he had but to stretch out his arms and he could touch her, yet she was lounging there quietly, to all appearances as indifferent as though she were a block of stone; it was very strange; she had clung to him, nestled in his arms, and now a chasm stretched between them, and to clasp hands across the gulf was impossible—to murmur his love-vows a dishonor.

How fair and girlish she looked in the moonlight! The power of her beauty stole into his brain and awoke his passion.

"She is mine—she belongs to me!" clamored his heart. "I will not give her up!"

He heard Dorothy's voice gently chiding her, and he listened hungrily for her reply.

How dull and heavy her tones were! She whose voice had been as light and joyous as a bird's notes! But he was forgetting! Of course this was acting; she had seen him on the terrace, and she was playing for his benefit. He was roused suddenly from his troubled thoughts.

"What are you staring at, Mr. Darnley?" laughed the Hon. Maude from below.

He looked down, and his brow darkened; he had not noticed that any one was near, far less that Crawshaw was at hand.

"Looks as if he had seen a ghost, don't he?" observed that gentleman, without troubling to remove his cigar from his mouth.

His head was adorned with a soft slouched hat, his hands were plunged in his trousers pockets; he looked even more vulgar and pretentious in his spick-and-span evening dress than in his rough riding attire.

Darnley's right hand clinched itself, but he made no reply to this, though Miss Chester evidently found it so witty that she laughed immoderately.

"Oh! but there are no ghosts here, are there, Mr. Darnley?" she cried.

"There's some one who looks like one, anyhow."

SMALLEST HONEY BEES.

In some of the East Indian Islands and on the mainland of Hindustan are found the smallest honey bees in the world. Their honey combs are no larger than a child's hand, and the cells are about the size of a small pinhead. In the same land there is a race of giant bees as large as field crickets. These bees build honey combs that are from six to seven feet in length, four or more feet in width and weighing from 300 to 400 pounds each.

$3,600 in Cash Prizes for Farmers

ARE you one of the thousands of Canadian farmers who have used or intend using Canada Cement for the construction of some farm utility? If you contemplate building anything whatsoever of concrete, make up your mind right now to build it with a view to winning one of the prizes we are offering. Read the rest of this announcement and you will learn how you may try for a share in the $3,600 we are giving away, to encourage the use of cement upon the farm. Throughout Canada the farmers have taken such a keen interest in our campaign that it has inspired us to go further along these educational lines. We have decided, therefore, to offer a series of four $100.00 prizes to each of the nine Provinces, to be awarded as follows:

PRIZE "A"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who will use during 1911 the greatest number of bags of "CANADA" Cement for actual work done on his farm.

PRIZE "B"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who uses "CANADA" Cement on his farm in 1911 for the greatest number of purposes.

PRIZE "C"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who furnishes us with a photograph showing best of any particular kind of work done on his farm during 1911 with "CANADA" Cement.

PRIZE "D"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who furnishes the best and most complete description of how any particular piece of work shown by photograph sent in, was done.

In this contest no farmer should refrain from competing, because of any feeling that he may have little chance against his neighbor who he thinks might use more cement than he does.

For it will be noted that Prizes "C" and "D" have no bearing whatever on quantity of cement used. The man who sends us the best photograph of so small a thing as a watering trough or a hitching post, has as much chance for Prize "C" as a man who sends a photograph of a house built of cement—and the same with Prize "D" as to best description.

Canada Cement is handled by dealers in almost every town in Canada. Should there not happen to be a dealer in your locality, let us know and we will try to appoint one.

Contest will close on November 15th, 1911, and all photos and descriptions must be in our office by that date. Awards will be made as soon as possible thereafter. The jury of award will consist of: Prof. Peter Gillespie, Lecturer in Theory of Construction, University of Toronto; W. H. Day, Professor of Physics, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph; and Ivan S. Macdonald, Editor of "Construction."

Now, you cannot hope to do concrete work to the best advantage unless you have a copy of our free book, entitled, "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete." This book tells how to construct well-nigh anything on the farm, from hitching post to silo. Whether you enter the contest or not, you'll find this book most helpful. A post-card asking for the book will bring it to you promptly. Send for your copy to-night. From your cement dealer or from us, you can obtain a folder containing full particulars of contest. If you send to us for it, use the coupon provided in this announcement.

FOREIGN DISHES.

German Coffee Cake.—Set a sponge with one-half pint of blood warm milk, one cake of compressed yeast, dissolved, and enough flour to make a sponge a little thicker than for bread. Set in a warm place to rise. When light add one-half cup of sugar and three well beaten eggs and one teaspoon of salt. Beat well and stir into it enough flour to make a soft dough, just stiff enough to allow handling. Now with the hand knead into the dough about three-fourths cupful of melted butter or butter and lard and when well kneaded set aside to rise. When it has doubled its bulk tip out on a well floured board, pat it out and sprinkle over it one-half cupful of sultana raisins, one cupful of chopped dates, and a few currants. Roll up and put into a large cake pan with a funnel which has been well greased with butter and over which a layer of light brown sugar has been strewn and a few shredded almonds. Set aside until light or until almost double its bulk. Put into a moderate oven and bake about three-quarters of an hour, being careful not to burn. An aluminum pan is the best, as it will keep the bottom from burning. Grease the top of the cake before setting into the oven and take it from the pan as soon as taken from the oven, as the brown sugar will harden and then it will be impossible to get it out.

For cinnamon rolls use half of the amount of above dough after it has risen for the second time. Roll out on a board until one-half inch thick. Grease with melted butter and sprinkle with about one-fourth cupful of sugar, scant teaspoonful of cinnamon and a small cupful of sultana raisins or currants. Roll up and cut into lengths of about one and one-half inches; lay in a shallow pan which has been treated as the above for coffee cake or just a greased one, and in that case ice with vanilla icing on top of rolls. Set aside until light and bake in moderate oven for about thirty minutes. If brown sugar is used in pan turn on to a plate as soon as removed from the oven and in the other case turn out and ice the top while hot with an icing made of confectioner's sugar and cream with a little vanilla.

For breakfast twists use the other half of the dough. Break off pieces about the size of a large walnut and roll on the board until about five inches long and one-half inch thick, twist and lay on greased pan one and one-half inches apart. Let rise. When light grease and sprinkle with the following: Take one-half cupful of sugar and one-quarter cupful flour and one teaspoonful of cinnamon; mix these ingredients and rub into them one teaspoonful of butter. Sprinkle the twists with this and bake in moderate oven until a golden brown.

For low coffee cake take a shallow pan and roll dough one-half inch thick, let rise and grease and sprinkle over it the above mixture. Bake in a moderate oven about twenty minutes. An endless number of good things may be made from this dough and treated in different ways.

Rolled thin it may be used for apple cake with apples sliced on it and a few currants sprinkled over it. For breakfast rolls it can't be surpassed. I bake them on Saturday and reheat them for breakfast and for Sunday evening tea. I usually use double the amount in the recipe.—Mrs. F. W.

Hungarian Goulash. — Into the bottom of a well battered casserole put one pound of round steak cut in three inch squares. Pare and slice three medium potatoes, two parsnips, one large carrot, and one large onion. Put them on top of meat, season with salt and pepper, cover with warm water, and cook, closely covered, in a slow oven for three and one-half hours.

DESSERTS.

Nut Pudding.—Two cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, and one-half teaspoonful salt, sifted together. Then add one-half cupful of granulated sugar, add one cupful of milk to two eggs well beaten. Stir this into the dry mixture and add one-third of a cupful of melted butter, beat well. Stir into this one and one-half cupfuls of nut meats of your own choice. (Hickory nuts preferable.) Steam three hours. Serve with a sauce as follows: One and one-half cupfuls of sugar and three-fourths of a cupful of water, dissolved and boil to a thread as for icing. Have ready the well beaten yolks of three eggs. Then add gradually the hot syrup over the eggs, stirring briskly. Set aside in ice water to cool, stirring constantly. Add flavoring to taste. Before serving, on the pudding blend carefully two cupfuls of whipped cream.

Prune Pudding.—Wash one-half pound of prunes, add two cupfuls of cold water, and let stand one hour. Let simmer until prunes are soft. Remove stones, obtain meat from the stones, and add to prunes. Add one and one-fourth cupfuls of boiling water and a cupful of sugar; also stick cinnamon to taste. Let simmer five minutes. Dissolve one tablespoonful of cornstarch in three tablespoonfuls of cold water, add to prunes, and stir till thick, about five minutes. Remove cinnamon, turn mixture into mold, and chill. Serve with whipped cream.

CLEANING HELPS.

Irish Crochet.—Shave one ounce of white laundry soap into a bowl; pour over it one quart of boiling water and stir until dissolved. When lukewarm, put the lace in. Let soak three hours, swishing it about occasionally. At the end of the time remove it, rinse it two or three times in clean water, then squeeze out the moisture, but never wring lace. Hang it in the sun and, when nearly dry, place a cloth wet with raw starch on a soft ironing board; put the right side of the lace on this and iron until perfectly dry. Pull the little picots into shape with the fingers. Lace treated like this invariably looks like new. Pendants and buttons should be washed in the same manner.

Beaded Waist.—Put two cupfuls flour into one quart gasoline and stir well; leave the waist in this for a couple of hours; shake and stir around, but do not rub; give a second bath of clear gasoline; put a clean corset cover on a form or pillow, stretch waist on this to dry; then brush with a soft brush to take out any remaining flour. You will find your waist like new and the beads safe and bright. The seams only need pressing.

To Clean Wallpaper.—The following is a most excellent and simple method of cleaning wall paper and can be used with confidence in every house: Take one quart of flour and stir in five cents' worth of ammonia and enough water to make a stiff dough; work and knead until smooth, then wipe the paper with this batch of dough, working it so that a clean surface will be presented with every stroke. Go over the paper in this way and your paper will be clean.

SEASONABLE HINTS.

For Gardeners.—When using eggs, break off the tops, empty contents and fill with soil. Plant in each shell a seed of cabbage, tomato, pansy or anything you want to start early, and set in egg case fillers in a warm, sunny window. The long egg boxes (one dozen carton) will set nicely in window sills. When plant is large enough, break shell and set in garden.

Overshoe Help.—How to dispose of overshoes in wet and muddy weather is a serious problem to a hostess. If not removed before going to the dressing room the carpets and rugs soon become damp and dirty, over which surface the handsome gowns of the guests are later dragged, and often ruined. A convenient and inexpensive way of solving this problem is for the hostess to buy at her grocery paper bags large enough to hold a pair of overshoes. One of these is handed to each guest, with a word of explanation, by the maid as she opens the door. There is then no excuse for any one wearing her overshoes to the dressing room. The names may be written on the bags before handing to each guest. This method prevents the loss and mismating of overshoes.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

When darning certain kinds of material — knitted underwear, among other things—it is a good plan to baste beneath any large hole a piece of soft net, and darn over and through this until the net is concealed. The net adds to the firmness of the darned piece.

To free the hands from disagreeable odors, such as that of onions, cod-liver oil, etc., mix a little ground dry mustard with warm water and wash the hands well with it. The saucers of scales, or vessels used in cooking, can be freed from odors by the same method.

Brushes and brooms would last much longer if they had an occasional bath. Four tablespoonfuls of household ammonia in two quarts of lukewarm water are the proper proportions. Let the brushes or twigs stand in the water for about half an hour; then rinse thoroughly and hang them in a cool place to dry.

The busy housewife is often called upon to attend to a pinched finger-nail, either of her own or of some member of her household. She should apply cold water, and cause the injured finger to be held upright for at least half an hour, not letting it hang down for one second. If this rule is adhered to there will be no unsightly black mark left on the nail afterwards.

A piece of wire gauze makes an excellent iron cleaner. A piece of old gauze window blind answers the purpose admirably. Run the iron to and fro across it, and you will be delighted and surprised at the result. The iron cleans perfectly. The dust from its surface falls through the meshes of the wire, instead of being ground between the iron and the cleaner as it is when sandpaper is used.

When potatoes are inclined to go black after boiling, the following is a good plan to improve the color and make them floury: Pare them an hour before cooking, and put them into enough cold water to entirely cover them. At the right time put them into fresh cold water, with some salt and a tablespoonful of milk; let them come to the boil, and then simmer for the rest of the time required for cooking.

If you wish your clothes to be of a dazzling whiteness try this easy way of laundering them: Put them to soak overnight in lukewarm water to which has been added one cup of soap jelly and one cup of melted paraffin. In the morning look over the clothes and rub any soiled spots lightly with the hands. Have ready a boiler of hot water to which has been added a cup of melted paraffin and one of soap jelly, put the clothes in, and boil twenty minutes; rinse through two or three waters, and hang on the line.

NURSING THE NEW CRAZE.

Fashionable Society at London Has Taken it Up.

The fashionable craze of the hour in London, England, is nursing. A good deal is being made of the fact that "Nurse Grimston," who has entered a training home at Bow in the East-end of London, happens to such force that she reeled, tottered, and then fell.

Backward she went, turning heels over head, and making several complete somersaults, but still holding on to her precious burden with both hands. She was soon landed in the cold and swift-running waters at the base of the cliff, and there she was compelled to let go of the hatboxes, which floated down stream be the Earl of Verulam's daughter. As a matter of fact, the peerage has supplied a good many recruits to the profession of nursing in the last few years.

Lady Esher's first aid classes have given an impetus to the movement, while the practical interest in nursing institutions which Queen Alexandra has repeatedly shown is also largely responsible for the hold which the vocation has taken on the minds of women who are prominent socially. One of the best known society nurses is Lady Annesley, who became deeply interested in hospital work and spent much of her time in the wards of the City of Dublin hospitals. But for her marriage she would have adopted nursing as a profession, and in the end she founded a village hospital in the grounds of her home in County Down.

Lady Hermonie Blackwood, a marquis' daughter, and sister of Lord Dufferin, is president of the Irish Nursing Association, and among earls' daughters who have been to the fore in the nursing movement are Lady Katherine Stanhope, Lady Rosalind Northcote, Lady Griseldo Cheape, and Lady Maud Keith-Falconer.

CHILDREN ON THE STREETS.

Bill to Prohibit Trading by Boys and Girls.

Lord Shaftesbury has drafted a bill which will prohibit any street trading by boys under 17 years and by girls under 18. The idea underlying the bill is that street trading destroys the potential capacity of children to become good citizens, turning the boys and girls who engage in it into hopeless unemployables, whose ultimate destiny is the prison and the workhouse.

The London County Council, which tried registration of juvenile street traders, has decided that the system of badges has not been a success, and it has just adopted new by-laws to deal with the evil. These by-laws will have the effect of taking off the streets 10,000 boys and 1,000 girls who are at present engaged in street trading. Among the changes are the following:

No boy under 16 to be employed to be employed in street trading.

No boy or girl under 14, liable to in street trading before 6 a.m. or after 9 p.m.

No bay or girl under 14, liable to attend full time at school, to be employed for more than three and a half hours a day.

No boy or girl under 14 to lather customers or do other work in a barber's shop.

"Here!" shouted the railway official; "what do you mean by throwing those trunks about like that?" The porter gasped in astonishment, and several travellers pinched themselves to make sure that it was real. Then the official spoke again: "Don't you see that you're making big dents in this concrete platform!"

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, APRIL 23.

Lesson IV.—Joash repairs the Temple, 2 Kings 11. 21 to 12. 16.

Golden Text, 1 Chron. 29. 9.

Chapter 11, verse 21. Jehoash — Popularly known as Joash. He was the eigth ruler of Judah, his grandmother Athaliah's brief usurpation being the only break in the Davidic line in the history of Judah. The revolution by which he was placed on the throne is the only one record in Judah's long history. There were more stirring times in Israel.

1. Jehu—He will ever be remembered as the effective instrument in bringing to an end the house of Omri, according to the prophecy of Elijah. He was, with Bidkar, close to Ahab, and witnessed the official murder of Naboth, and heard as well the doom pronounced upon Ahab by the prophet. As commanding officer in the army of Jehoram, in the siege of Ramothgilead, Jehu was selected by the revolutionary party under Elisha to succeed the king who had been severely wounded and removed to Jezreel. Hastening thither, he slew Jehoram, as well as Ahaziah, king of Judah, who was present, and, riding up to the palace, ordered the ruthless assassination of Jezebel, who had survived her husband, Ahab, twelve years. This bloodshed was followed by the destruction of all the princes of Ahab's line, and the slaughter of the Baal worshipers at Samaria. Jehu then reigned for twenty-eight years.

Beersheba—A village in the extreme south of Israel, famous as the residence of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

2. Jehoash did that which was right—After the death of Jehoiada, who for some years after the coronation continued as guardian for the young king, Jehoash is said by the chronicler (2 Chron. 24) to have departed somewhat from the way in which he had been instructed at any rate, the revolution was not complete from a religious point of view, for Jehoash still permitted the high places (hilltop sanctuaries of Baal), and leniently winked at the heathen sacrifices of the people (3).

4. All the money—There were three sources from which this was drawn: (1) current coin; (2) assessments, for the redemption of personal vows (see Lev. 27. 2); (3) free-will offerings in coin. According to 2 Chron. 24, the principal source of revenue was the half-shekel appointed by Moses to be paid by every Israelite for the maintenance of the tabernacle (Exod. 30. 11-16).

5. Every man from his acquaintance—The priests were in addition (according to the Chronicles) to raise a personal subscription from among their friends throughout the country, each priest having jurisdiction among certain of his own kin.

Repair the breaches of the house—Jehoash had been brought up secretly in a part of the temple, and it was natural for him to wish to restore its beauty and neglected worship. Under Athaliah the sacred treasures had been transported to the house of Baal, and both the walls and the foundations of the temple were sadly in need of reconstruction.

7. Jehoash called for Jehoiada—The plans of the boy king had miscarried because of the shiftlessness of the priests. But now he had grown to full maturity, and he proceeded to take the whole matter out of the hands of those who had done nothing, for it pained him to see the house of God falling into such rank decay.

9-12. How Jehoash got together the money necessary to repair the temple, and how he disposed of it. The priest was ordered to place a chest at the entrance to the temple, beside the altar of burnt offering which occupied a commanding place in the midst of the outer court. Whenever the chest was filled the contributions were gathered into bags and carried into the palace and there counted by the high priest and the king's private secretary. The money was then carefully weighed out to the architects, and by them paid to those who were to do the work and provide the material.

13. The vessels necessary for the proper conducting of the sacrifices of the temple were not made with this money, it being devoted exclusively to the repairing of the fabric of the house. But there must have been a surplus of some sort, for Chronicles tells us (2 Chron. 24. 14) that "of the rest were made vessels for the house of the Lord."

15. Reckoned not with the men—There were no specifications, the laborers and overseers being of the ideal sort that can be trusted to deal squarely.

16. Trespass-offerings — This money, and that received for guilt (sin) offerings (Lev. 5. 1-6), belonged to the priests, being paid to them, according to the Jewish regulation, for fines, and, possibly for the purchase of sacrifices

GERMAN SAVINGS.

People of the Fatherland Put by One Billion Dollars a Year.

When the German Reichstag a few weeks ago discussed the introduction of foreign securities in that country there was general surprise at the amount of German capital which was shown to be invested in foreign paper.

But the Secretary of the Interior, Dr. Delbrueck, stated that the people of Germany are saving every year about $1,000,000,000, and that necessarily a large part of this amount must go abroad to find profitable investment. These savings go into other avenues besides the mere purchase of securities.

In 1905, according to a writer in Moody's Magazine, German investment in foreign countries, outside of holdings of securities, amounted to about 9,225 millions of marks (2,201.6 millions of dollars), in which the United States and Canada were represented by at least 2,750 millions of marks ($658,300,000).

The holdings of foreign securities were estimated at more than sixteen billions of marks or some millions less than four billions of dollars. The real aggregate of all investments, however, is higher still than these figures express, as not all German participation in commercial or financial enterprises in foreign countries could be taken into account,

Scarcely anywhere in the world is a large issue brought out without the German capitalists being invited to participate. Only a short time ago a large Hungarian loan was placed in Germany and oversubscribed for several times, a Turkish bond issue of large amount was willingly taken, and just when "the emigration of German capital," as they used to call it over there, was being discussed in connection with the proposed listing of St. Paul shares on the Berlin exchange papers reminded the banks that they had to be in readiness for the Chilean loan soon to be expected.

The large German banks have been repeatedly blamed for their assisting this emigration of capital, and the present situation, ostensibly directed against listing of some American papers, but really aimed at not keeping available funds at home, again is an attack on the banks.

WHY NEGROES ARE BLACK.

Food Determines Color, Says a German Professor.

What makes the Caucasian white, the negro black and the Indian red? One explanation is that the black races are made so as a result of continuous exposure to sunlight, but this theory does not seem to hold good throughout.

A German professor, Dr. A. Bergfeld, has just written a book in which he attempts to prove that it is all a matter of feeding. He points out that in the animal and insect world color is often determined by food, and he argues by chemical process the same results are shown in the different human races.

He thinks that the original man was black, as his principal diet must have been vegetarian. Fruit and vegetables contain manganates which ally themselves with iron, making a dark brown combination. Dr. Bergfeld says that negroes who add meat and milk to their vegetable fare are never as dark as those who only eat vegetables.

Indians are red because they have absorbed for generations hemoglobin, the red substance in the blood of animals killed for food. Mongols are yellow because they descend from dark fruit eating races who penetrated into the plains of Asia, became shepherds and lived to a great extent on milk, which contains chlorine and has a bleaching effect.

The Caucasians were another branch who became still whiter through adding salt to their dietary. Common salt is a strong chloride, and is a powerful agent in bleaching the skin. The effect, he declares, can be seen on negro children who have been brought up on a white dietary. They are never as black as their kindred who have not abandoned vegetarianism.

THURSDAY, APR. 20, '11

A school fair was held in connection with Clinton Public School during three days of last week. We do not know the exact nature of the affair, but the idea sounds good as a means of bringing parent, teacher and child together; the parent to see and learn to appreciate the efforts being made by the teacher, the teacher to meet and discuss with the parent the work and characteristics of the child, and the child to learn that parent and teacher are one in their efforts to advance the interests of the child.—In short, that all three may meet on common ground and get acquainted. We believe it is a progressive step and must be of great benefit to the school interests. It would be well worth while for our trustees and teachers to interest themselves in finding out the precise nature of the "school fair."

Spring is opening up slowly, and farmers are becoming just a bit irksome under the continuation of cold weather. As compared with the general average of spring seasons, this one is somewhat late. But it is not so late as to cause any unnecessary worry. The probability is that when it does open it will be for keeps. Two years ago spring came on, (what everyone thought was spring, with a rush with about the beginning of April. Farmers got busy immediately, and rushed the seed into the ground. But the busy season only hung out for a week or two, to be followed by cold, wet weather, which delayed the completion of seeding operations until well on May—nearly the end of the month for not a few farmers. The result was a rather unsatisfactory harvest, spreads out over a longer period than usual, and a general depletion in yield. It is ture that in that year the early-sown grain averaged up better than the late sown, though there were exceptions, but it was generally an off year for most spring grains, especially in Ontario. Taking one season with another, a medium opening up of spring is the cost and it looks as if this is what we are going to have this season. If the farmer can get to work on his land by the middle of April and can get the bulk of his seeding operations over with early in May, he will not care badly, provided suitable growing weather prevails. Get everything ready to begin as soon as the land is fit. There never has been an absolute crop failure in this land of plenty yet.

ECZEMA WAS SPREADING TILL D.D.D. CURED IT

This is a translation of a letter written us in French on April 16, 1910, by Mr. Dan. Babineau, Cap Lumiere, N.B. "I had been suffering with eczema for about 6 months, and had consulted several doctors who did not do me any good. The disease was spreading and I was most uncomfortable, I thought I would go crazy. All my friends were telling me I would lose my hands unless I found the right treatment.

One day I read in the Messenger about your D.D.D. treatment and asked for a sample. It did me so much good that I immediately ordered two large bottles. It took eight bottles altogether to cure me of this terrible disease. I shall never be without a bottle of D.D.D. in my home."

The records of ten years of complete cures of thousands of the most severe cases show that D.D.D. stands to-day as the absolutely reliable eczema cure.

Write to-day for free trial bottle to the D.D.D. Laboratories, Dept. B.A., 49 Colborne St., Toronto. It will give you instant relief.

Because it contains so much gluten.
Manitoba wheat is wonderfully rich in sturdy gluten.
And, think of it, FIVE ROSES is milled exclusively from the very cream of the Manitoba wheat berries.
So FIVE ROSES must be awfully thirsty, don't you see.
In your mixing bowl it greedily absorbs more water.

Your flour lasts longer, doesn't it?
Less trips to your dealer.

Cured His Rheumatism In Three Weeks.

James LeB. Johnstone, a prominent member of the Citizen's Band, of Chatham, writes:

"I contracted Rheumatism by exposure, five years ago, and was ailing for two months and in great pain all the time. I got Father Morrisey's No. 7 Tablets and took them for about three weeks, when the Rheumatism all left me and I have had no return of the pains since."

Rev. Father Morrisey

Father Morrisey's "No. 7" Tablets have cured thousands of this terribly painful disease.

Rheumatism is generally brought on by exposure, but is really caused by Uric Acid in the blood. This Uric Acid is an irritating poison, formed from the waste matter of the body. The kidneys should remove it, but when they fail it poisons the blood, and, settling in the joints, causes Rheumatism.

"No. 7" Tablets clear out the clogged-up Kidneys and stimulate them to perform their task of filtering the Uric Acid out of the blood. When this is done the Rheumatism simply and naturally vanishes.

"No 7" Tablets cost 50c. At your dealer's. 28

AN ITALIAN WAS MURDERED

Two Others Wounded in a Stabbing Affray at Toronto

A despatch from Toronto says: Jealousy over a woman was the cause of a row on Friday night at the rear of 40 Agnes Street, which ended in one man being killed and three others badly wounded. The dead man is John Russello, laborer, who lived at 40 Agnes Street. He had his throat badly gashed with a large butcher knife, and the man who is under arrest charged with the murder is Donato Panzini, of 93 Elm Street. Vincent Acciaioli, who also lives at the Agnes Street house, is under arrest on a charge of carrying firearms. Andy Male, who had his head badly cut, is being held as a material witness. Frank Russello, the brother of the murdered man, is in St. Michael's Hospital. He has a bad cut in the head and the thumb of his left hand is almost severed.

It appears that Panzini and the dead man were infatuated with the same girl, a young woman by the name of Fratorti, whose father has a boarding-house at 40 Agnes Street. A number of people had gathered at the Agnes Street house, and, according to the story told the police by Anthony Fratorti, Panzini, with some others, came to his place on Friday evening with the intention of making trouble.

The question of their affections for the one lady naturally came up and it was decided to fight it out in the back yard. This is one of the versions the police were able to obtain on Friday night, and they think it is correct in many details. The Italians are loth to speak on the subject and it was a considerable time after the murder before the correct name of the dead man was found out.

JARDINE WILL BE HANGED

Last Chapter in the Murder of Lizzie Anderson at Goderich

A despatch from Goderich says: Edward Jardine will be hanged on Friday, June 16. He was found guilty by the jury on Friday afternoon of the murder of Lizzie Anderson, after a trial lasting two days and a half.

Except for a slightly heightened color, the prisoner displayed no signs of agitation. He stood in a slouching attitude in the prisoner's box during the passing of the sentence by Chief Justice Falconbridge and afterwards walked from the courtroom, unfalteringly, ahead of and unsupported by the constable. He was taken to the jail. The jury returned shortly before noon, and when the court met again at 1.15 they were ready with their verdict. The foreman simply announced that they had found a verdict of guilty. Jardine, sitting in the box with George Vanstone, the other man to be tried for murder, was ordered to stand up.

"It is not my practice, under these circumstances, to dwell upon the enormity of the crime. If you have not by this time realized the terrible nature of your offence, it is impossible that any words of mine could make you do so. In passing sentence on you," the Judge said to him, "I warn you not to have any hope of commutation of the extreme penalty of the law for the crime you have committed. I would, however, recommend you to spend the rest of your days on earth in preparation for your entry into the world to come. On Friday, the 16th of June, you will be taken to the place of execution, there to be hanged by the neck until you are dead. May God have mercy on your soul."

SOUTHERN TORNADO.

Buildings Blown Down and Many Persons Injured.

A despatch from Leavenworth, Kansas, says: A tornado which struck this city at half-past five o'clock on Tuesday did thousands of dollars worth of damage to buildings and growing crops. Hailstones, as large as pigeon eggs, practically ruined every greenhouse in the city and broke out hundreds of windows in residences. Scores of sheds and outhouses were overturned and telephone wires blown down. Reports from west of the city and from Platte County indicate that great damage was done to farm buildings and crops. The storm lasted about half an hour. At Whiting sixty houses were blown down and thirty persons injured.

SLAYER OF SON.

George Vanstone Found Guilty and Sentenced for Life.

A despatch from Goderich says: George Vanstone was on Friday night found guilty of manslaughter in connection with the death of his son, whom he beat to death with a stick because he was either slow or obstinate in making figures on his slate when the father was seeking to instruct him. He was sentenced by Mr. Justice Falconbridge to life imprisonment. The prisoner's wife burst into tears when she heard the sentence. The trial lasted less than four hours, the defence being insanity. The lawyers of the prosecution and defence left the address to the jury in the hands of the judge.

WESTERN ELECTRIC LINES

Transportation Enterprise to Operate From Niagara Falls to London.

A despatch from London, Ont., says: Mr. Malcolm J. Kent, a director of the London Electric Railway Company, on Wednesday afternoon gave the first definite statement regarding a merger which may mean a change of management for the London Street Railway Company. Mr. Kent stated that an option had been given on the street railway. This has not been taken up as yet, but the deal, he said, will likely be closed one way or the other, within a week.

Mr. Kent did not feel himself in a position to state definitely the purpose of the proposed change, but he gave this general idea:—The movement here is one of many which aim to bring street railways and radials under one management. When this is done the districts between here and Niagara, which are not already served by radials, will have such lines constructed. These and the street railways brought in will get their power from the main company.

The merger, it is believed, is but the widening of the movement which started in Toronto during the past few days. It will give the power companies, behind which are Mackenzie & Mann and a number of New York capitalists, a market for their power, and will enable the companies to serve the people along the transmission lines which will be erected.

MATTHEWS ACQUITTED.

Not Guilty of the Murder of Johanna Brimacombe.

A despatch from Cobourg says: Henry I. Matthews, jun., was acquitted on Saturday night of the charge of murdering Miss Josephine of Johanna Brimacombe. The Court assembled shortly before 11 o'clock, and the court room and the halls leading to it were crowded. The jurymen almost noiselessly filed into their places, and they all looked haggard. One or two were visibly affected by emotion. The prisoner preserved a quiet demeanor and appeared unmoved in countenance. Only the deeper lines about his face revealed the ordeal of suspense which he has undergone. He glanced at his counsel, the Crown Attorney, and the representatives of the press, and then looked straight at the foreman of the jury.

"Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed on a verdict?" asked the Clerk of the Court.

"We have," answered the foreman.

"And it is?" "Not guilty," was the answer.

The throngs in the rear of the court room behind the prisoner's dock and at the entrance broke into cheers that were echoed to the streets, and told the waiting crowds outside of the happy outcome of the trial for the accused.

CUT OFF HUSBAND'S HEAD.

Woman in Hospital for Months from Wounds He Inflicted.

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says: Peter Napolitina, an Italian, living near James street, Little Italy, known here as Peter Naplesik, was killed on Sunday evening by his wife, Margery. The woman admits having committed the murder and is now in jail. Napolitina was employed on the night shift at the steel plant, and was asleep in bed when his wife attacked him with an axe. The first blow struck him on the forehead and nearly severed the crown of his head. Four blows followed, the last one all but severing the head from the body. The woman then proceeded out on to the street and told passers-by what she had done. The murder is the echo of the case last Fall, when Napolitina returned home unexpectedly, and stabbed her several times. She was for some months in the hospital. It seems she had awaited the opportunity to get even.

SPRING OPENING IN THE WEST

Telegram From Immigration Commissioner Gives Strong Facts

A despatch from Ottawa says: The following are extracts from a telegram from Mr. J. Bruce Walker, Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, to the Superintendent of Immigration at Ottawa:—

"Seeding is general this week throughout the whole of western Canada. The seed bed is in fine condition, while the moisture is everywhere abundant.

"Five thousand overseas immigrants, most of them from England, arrived in Winnipeg during the first three days of this week.

"The Canadian Northern Railway is calling for tenders for the construction of the mountain section in British Columbia, running through the Fraser and Thompson canyon, its cost approximating fifteen million dollars.

"During the year ending March 31st last 33,853 head of live stock entered Canada from the United States. Of this number 12,853 were horses. During the first ten days of April of this year one thousand cars of settlers' stock and effects passed through the gateway at North Portal, destined to Saskatchewan and Alberta. New settlers are entering western Canada during March and April at the average rate of fifteen hundred per day. These are being absorbed by western communities rapidly and satisfactorily.

"Real estate values in farm and city property in the Province of Manitoba have advanced materially during this month. The increase in western lands in the prairie provinces runs from two to three dollars per acre since the first of March.

"Five special trains have passed through Emerson during this week, travelling via Chicago and Winnipeg, thence by Grand Trunk Pacific to Edmonton, carrying overseas immigrants and a large number of repatriated French-Canadians from the New England States.

"The Grand Trunk Pacific is calling for tenders and is ready to commence the erection immediately of a new palatial hotel in Winnipeg city.

"Building permits in Winnipeg, Vancouver, and Calgary during the month of March aggregate three million dollars.

"The work of reconstructing the Brandon Asylum for the Insane, which was burned down in the early part of last winter, has commenced. The contract has been let to a local firm and the new structure will cost one and a half million dollars."

HAT PIN COSTS HIM AN EYE.

Woman Passing Gateman at Station Maims Him for Life.

A despatch from Omaha, Nebraska, says: Henry Pepper, a gateman at the Union Station, lost an eye as a result of coming in contact with a hat pin on Tuesday morning, and came near losing his life. He was punching tickets at the gate when a fashionably dressed woman pushed her way through the crowd, and as she passed the gateman the pin in her hat pierced his eye and, dragging across his temple, tore an ugly gash. The eye was badly mutilated and the sight destroyed. The police tried to find the woman, but failed.

WHAT DID HE MEAN.

Mrs. Blenkinsop—"Poor man, perhaps you have seen better days?"

CHAMPAGNE RIOTS IN FRANCE

7,000 Men March on Epernay—Troops Charge With Bayonets

A despatch from Chalons-sur-Marne, France, says: The rioting in the wine district threatens to assume the proportions of the widespread disorders in the champagne districts four years ago which resulted in the proclamation of martial law. Wine presses and wine cellars in several towns have been demolished, and hundreds of thousands of bottles of champagne destroyed.

At Damery six wine houses were wrecked, and the streets so littered with broken bottles and a mixture of mud and wine that traffic has been impeded.

At Ventuil the rioters destroyed several large wine presses, and the troops were forced to charge with fixed bayonets before the mob could be dispersed.

Seven thousand wine-makers, well organized, were marching on Epernay, the champagne entrepot, from Damery with the intention of destroying the Epernay wine cellars. Several thousand troops have been concentrated at Epernay and at other threatened points in that vicinity. The troops are awaiting the advancing manifestants and have received orders to use every endeavor to preserve order and prevent the destruction of proporty.

A despatch from Damery, Department of Marine, France, says: The "champagne" riots, which began in this department on Tuesday, were continued on Wednesday morning by the excited populace. Wine cellars are being destroyed and the disorder is spreading in spite of the presence of troops called out to preserve order. During the progress of the advance they sang revolutionary hymns and waved red standards. This they did to disown the Government, which they affirm has abandoned them to ruin. They declare the Government acted as a result of the steps taken by the makers of inferior grades of wine. The column had reached the town of Ay at noon. Co-operating with another band, which had reached Ay from a different direction, the rioters proceeded to Ventuil, where they destroyed the huge wine presses. Troops, which had hurriedly been despatched to Ventuil, charged and dispersed the mob, but not until the manifestants had accomplished their purpose.

SPRING IMPURITIES IN THE BLOOD

Make the Use of a Tonic Medicine a Necessity

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an all year round tonic blood-builder, and nerve-restorer. But they are especially valuable in the spring when the system is loaded with impurities as a result of the indoor life of the long winter months. There is no other season when the blood is really so much in need of purifying and enriching, and every dose of these Pills helps to make new, rich, red blood. In the spring one feels tired and weak—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give strength. In the spring the appetite is often poor—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills develop the appetite, tone the stomach and aid weak digestion. It is in the spring that poisons in the blood find an outlet in disfiguring pimples, eruptions and boils—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills speedily clear the skin because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. In the spring anemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, and many other troubles are most persistent because of poor weak blood, and it is at this time, when all nature regains life, that the blood most seriously needs attention. To improve and fortify the blood is the special mission of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and that is why they are the best spring medicine in existence. If you feel the need of a medicine this spring give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial and you will rejoice in new health, new strength and new energy, and will be especially fitted to stand the torrid heat which comes a little later.

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CORONATION FILMS.

An invention has been made making it possible to transmit cinematograph pictures by wire and an experimental trial is to be made on coronation day. An attempt will be made to send views of the great event from London to Paris, and if it is successfully accomplished the films will be exhibited at the Parisian picture theatres a ftw hours later. The inventor of the "Cinotelegraph," as it is termed, has been ten years completing his apparatus, and has but lately succeeded in trasmitting overland a film two hundred feet in length over a distance of thirty miles. The coronation film, which it is the inventor's intention to transmit to Paris, will show the progress of the King and Queen from Buckingham Palace to the entrance of the Abbey.

WIDOWS AND WIDOWERS.

The proportion of remarriages shows an almost continuous decrease, says the British Registrar-General in his report on the births, deaths and marriages in England and Wales during 1909. The number of widows, he states, is always much greater than that of widowers, because in the first place men marry later in life than women; secondly, because the duration of male life is shorter than that of female life, and thirdly, because the proportion of widows who remarry is much lower than the proportion of widowers who remarry. Marriages of persons described as divorced have steadily increased and in the year 1909 were the highest on record.

THE BEST MEDICINE SO MOTHERS SAY

Mothers say Baby's Own Tablets are the very best medicine they can give their little ones. It is the happy experience of one mother that helps others to keep their little ones well. Thousands of mothers have found the Tablets a never-failing cure for the ailments that afflict their little ones. Mrs. E. Sandwell, Coldwater, Ont., says:—"I find Baby's Own Tablets the best medicine any mother can give her little ones. I tried "soothing" mixtures, but they did not help my baby, but as soon as I began giving him the Tablets they made his teething easy and I would hardly know he was cutting a tooth. I would not be without the Tablets, and always recommend them to my friends." Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CAVES IN EAST AFRICA.

Discovery of a Great Cavern 3,300 Feet in Length.

A remarkable system of subterranean caves in German East Africa has been discovered and partly explored by Father Ambrosius, a Roman Catholic missionary, and Herr Thurmann, a German official.

The caves are situated in the Matumbi Mountains and natives never ventured further than a small grotto, the first one encountered, as they said an evil spirit dwelt within. The two explorers discovered a hole at the end of this grotto which led to a great cavern 3,300 feet in length, filled with deep pools in which strange eellike fish lived. Stalactities and stalagmites 25 feet in length were plentiful here.

Further searches resulted in the discovery of other huge caves at deeper levels. A second level lay 150 feet deeper, a third 60 feet below the second, and a fourth 90 feet below the third. From this the explorers had to retreat, as thousands of bats attacked them, and their lantetrns were in danger of being extinguished by these creatures.

AN UNREDEEMED PLEDGE.

An incident not without pathos occurred toward the end of last week at a sale of unreedemed pledges at the Mont de Piete, Paris, says the London Globe. There were sold by auction a child's drinking cup, plate, spoon and knife and fork. Fifty-one years ago these souvenirs were deposited in the Paris municipal pawnshop. Every year since the interest has been paid regularly and the right of redemption secured, but the family never seem to have possessed the necessary 15 or 20 francs to resume possession. Evidently the poor people are either dead or have become more needy. Two years ago the interest ceased to be paid, but, the department, to their credit, abstained from selling these "lares and penates." Several letters were addressed at the last known residence and to other places where the pawners have lived, but they have come back marked "Inconnu." The sands of the glass have run out and the objects so carefully guarded for half a century have been sold.

UNNATURAL THINNESS EASILY CORRECTED.

By Clever Prescription Which Can Be Filled at Any Drug Store.

No Need to be Thin Now as Reports Show This Method Effective.

People who are very thin and scrawny ought not to be so. Undoubtedly they are more subject to disease and contagions than the normally fleshy. Thinness is usually accompanied by weakness, and weakness subjects anyone to colds, coughs, consumption, pneumonia, etc. It has been discovered, almost by accident, that tincture cadomene, when combined in a prescription with proper accelerative medicines, becomes one of the most valuable, effective, and reliable nutritive or flesh making medicines known to science. It is especially beneficial to men and women between the ages of sixteen and fifty-five, who from lack of proper nerve force and digestion, remain undeveloped in body, limbs, arms and bust. A well rounded symmetrical figure in man or woman indicates health, magnetism, stamina and happiness.

The reader who wishes to add from ten to forty pounds should not fail to begin with this valuable prescription.

First, obtain from any well stocked druggist, three ounces of essence of pepsin and three ounces of syrup of rhubarb in an 8 oz. bottle. Then add one ounce compound essence cardiol. Shake and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardomom). Shake well and take one teaspoonful before each meal, one after each meal. Drink plenty of water between meals and when retiring. Keep up this treatment regularly and of a certainty from one to three pounds will be added to the weight each week, and the general health will also improve.

FOOLHARDY SNAKE KEEPER.

The only fatal case of snake bite on record in the London Zoological Gardens was directly due to the foolishness of the victim. He was in charge of the snakes, and coming in one morning with some friends began to boast of his power over the creatures and the extent they would submit to be played with by one whom they knew. This led to practical experiments, the over-confident keeper taking an Indian cobra from its comfortable sleeping place, and declaring he was a snake charmer proceeded to swing it about his head and play other tricks with it. A native snake charmer would have known there was no certain way to rouse the snake's temper than this, for the race abhors rough handling or sudden movement of any sort. The result of the exploit was that the keeper was bitten on the nose. He was hurried off to the hospital, but died in a few hours.

U. S. TIMBER FIGURES.

Last year over 55,000,000,000 feet of timber were cut in the United States. More than 18,000 acres of timber are cut in the United States every working day. At the present rate of consumption the desirable and accessible timber of the country will be exhausted in between twenty-five and thirty-five years. To supply a paper like the Chicago Tribune with paper for one year requires over 2,000 acres of timber.

SUFFERED SINCE HER CHILDHOOD

BUT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS MADE MRS. LAPRAIRIE A NEW WOMAN.

Nipissing Lady gives an experience that should prove of immense value to the suffering women of Canada.

Laprairieville, Nipissing District, Ont., April 17 (Special).—After suffering from various forms of kidney ills since she was a child, Mrs. O. Laprairie is a well woman and once more it has been proved that no case of Kidney Trouble is too severe or of too long standing for Dodd's Kidney Pills to cure.

Interviewed regarding her cure, Mrs. Laprairie said:

"Since I was twelve years of age I have suffered from Kidney Disease. I was always tired. My back would ache and I always had a sharp pain in the top part of my head. My heart also troubled me.

"Hearing of Dodd's Kidney Pills, I gave them a trial, and now I feel like a new woman."

Thousands of Canadian men and women are feeling just as Mrs. Laprairie does—as if life had started all over for them—just because they have cured their kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills. For the kidneys are the mainspring of life. If they are clogged or out of order the whole body is wrong. Dodd's Kidney Pills always put the kidneys in good working order.

"Ah! So that is the oldest inhabitant?" said the city man. "How do you account for his having lived all these years?" "Well," a trifle acidly replied the landlord of the Skeedee Tavern, "I guess it's b'cus he's never done anything else."

Hope for the Chronic Dyspeptic.—Through lack of consideration of the body's needs many persons allow disorders of the digestive apparatus to endure until they become chronic, filling days and nights with suffering. To these a course of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is recommended as a sure and speedy way to regain health. These pills are specially compounded to combat dyspepsia and the many ills that follow in its train, and they are successful always.

It is in Demand.—So great is the demand for Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil that a large factory is kept continually busy making and bottling it. To be in demand shows popular appreciation of this preparation, which stands at the head of proprietary compounds as the leading Oil in the market, and it is generally admitted that it is deserving of the lead.

LIMITATION OF ARMAMENT.

Exchange of Information With Germany Will Tend That Way.

Replying to a question in the British House of Commons the other day, Sir Edward Grey, secretary of foreign affairs, said that the Imperial Chancellor, Von Bethmann-Hollweg, in his speech in the German Reichstag on disarmament, expressly accepted the idea of an exchange of information between Great Britain and Germany on the subject of naval construction.

Sir Edward thought that such an exchange was not only practicable but desirable. He added that, in so far as an exchange of information tended to allay suspicion, it would have an effect on the expenditure of the two countries for armament.

CHINESE BOY EMPEROR.

An American doctor recently visited the palace at Pekin to examine the baby Emperor, who, it was found had gorged himself with a meal of swallows' nests (a sort of glutinous material) and thus provoked a raging thirst. The indisposition yielded easily to the doctor's treatment. The Emperor, he says, sleeps in a gigantic bed, big enough for six people. He rises at six o'clock, at once has a meal of rice, and then goes to pay his respects to the Dowager Lung-yu, who is on most affectionate terms with him. Even his own father and mother have to kneel to him when they visit him. A Chinese nurse named Mrs. Chang, aged 45, carries him about all day, and sleeps in a small bed by the side of his. The Emperor's rooms are full of expensive toys.

No one need suffer a day from debilitated digestion when so simple and effective a pill can be got at any drug store.

Policeman—"Do you have to take care of the dog?"

Nurse Girl—"No; the missus says I'm too young and inexperienced. I only look after the children."

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia.

If the world isn't better for your having lived in it, it ought to help some when you get out of it.

A pin scratch may cause blood poison, a rusty nail cut is very apt to do so. Hamlin's Wizard Oil used at once draws out all infection and makes blood poison impossible.

IMPOSSIBLE.

"Do you love your papa?" asked the minister.

"Yes, sir," replied Willie.

"And do you obey him?"

"Yes, sir."

"And now comes the most important question of all. Do you honor him?"

"How can I if he is the kind of man ma keeps on telling him he is?"

CURED IN ONE MONTH.
If every woman, who has Kidney or Bladder trouble, could go to Davisville, Ont., and talk to Mrs. A. Simpson, they would do just as she did, take Gin Pills and save themselves. "For 14 or 15 years I had Kidney or Bladder trouble, suffering at times intense pain. I doctored continually but nothing gave me permanent relief until I was persuaded to try Gin Pills.
"Within a couple of days I received great relief, and after taking one box was completely cured."

DEFECTIVE.

Little Madge is only five years old, but she has such a large experience of dolls that she feels herself to be something of a connoisseur in children.

Recently there came a real live baby into the house. When it was put into her arms, this real live baby, the five-year-old surveyed it with a critical eye.

"Isn't that a nice baby?" cried the nurse, with the joyous pride with which a nurse always regards a new baby, in which she feels that she has a proprietary interest.

"Yes," replied the little girl hesitatingly, "it's nice, but its head's loose?"

SPRING SKIN TROUBLES

Pimples, Eruptions and "Spotty Complexions."

At this season, scores of people—girls and young women especially—find their faces disfigured by pimples, dark spots, eruptions, etc. The skin needs attention—needs renovating after the trying time it has passed through during the winter.

Just think what it has gone through! You have been out in rain and sleet and snow. You have been at one moment perspiring from skating, or some other exertion. Then you have stood to "cool off." You have spent hours of the day indoors at a temperature equal to summer heat. Then you have covered up your skin—except your face—and gone out into a temperature away below zero! No wonder that, with all these changes, the skin of the face and neck shows signs of needing attention.

Zam-Buk and Zam-Buk Soap are the remedies. Smear Zam-Buk lightly over the spots, the eruptions, the sallow patches, at night, and wash with Zam-Buk Soap (only 25c. per tablet). Then notice how quickly your appearance improves.

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for skin injuries and diseases. Eczema, ulcers, ringworm, yield to its use. For cuts, burns, bruises, children's rashes, etc., it is unequalled, and for piles. Mothers will find Zam-Buk Soap best for baby's bath! All druggists and stores at 50c. box for Zam-Buk and 25c. tablet (or 3 for 70c.) for the Soap. If you have any difficulty in obtaining, order from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, and send price.

Charitable Man (to former blind beggar)—"What, have you recovered your sight?" Beggar—"Well, you see, it's this way—I've lost my dog, and as I cannot be blind any longer, I've become a deaf mute."

Some persons are more susceptible to colds than others, contracting derangements of the pulmonary organs from the slightest causes. These should always have at hand a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the present day sovereign remedy for coughs, catarrh and inflammation of the lungs. It will effect a cure no matter how severe the cold may be. You cannot afford to be without a remedy like Bickle's, for it is the best.

"Why do ye look so sorryful, Dennis?" asked one man of another. "I just hear-r-rd wan man call another a liar. And the man that was called a liar said the other man would have to apologize or there would be a fight." "And why should that make you look sad?" "The other man apologized!"

I consider MINARD'S LINIMENT the BEST Liniment in use.
I got my foot badly jammed lately. I bathed it well with MINARD'S LINIMENT, and it was as well as ever next day.
Yours very truly,
T. G. McMULLEN.

You wonder why you have more trouble than other people, and they wonder why you have less trouble than they do.

ADMITTED HIS ERROR.

One of the neatest of parliamentary apologies, says a writer in the London Chronicle, was that of an irate member of the House who described another as "not having the manners of a pig."

At the cry of "Withdraw!" he did so. "I withdraw and apologize, and beg to say that honorable member has the manners of a pig."

Suitor—"Why do you object to my marrying your daughter?" Father—"Because you can't support her in the style she's been accustomed to all her life." Suitor—"How do you know I can't? I can start her on bread and milk, the same as you did."

Richard Hill of Stephen sold a horse last week to Mr. M. Doyle of Exeter for $245.00. It certainly pays to raise good horses.

Mr. T. E. Handford and family are occupying rooms in Mr. Jas. Gould's residence for a short time before leaving for the West.

When an old bachelor marries his women acquaintances all wonder that he didn't do it sooner and his men friends wonder how he happened to get caught.

Mr. Jas. Gould, Huron Street, was taken suddenly ill on Monday last and for a time it was thought the end was near, but he rallied, and while in a very low state of health he has somewhat improved.

A pleasant event took place Monday morning when Mr. Allan Brown was married to Mrs. L. A. Evans by Rev. J. Kennedy at the parsonage. They left on a trip to London and other points followed by the best wishes of their many friends.—Ailsa Craig Banner. Mrs. Evans was formerly a resident of Exeter.

Mrs. Jane Dearing received the sad news Monday of the death of her sister, Mrs. Krouse, which occurred at West Point, Nebraska, on Friday last, at the age of 78 years. Mrs. Krouse has been in poor health for some time, suffering from an internal growth. The deceased's maiden name was Mary Mitchell, being a sister of Mr. John Mitchell, who is now in St. Joseph's Hospital, London, suffering from a similar disease to that which carried away Mrs. Krouse. For many years deceased resided in Crediton with her late husband, Foranda Krouse, and will be well remembered by the older resi- of that place. Since leaving these parts deceased has resided in the States.

An old and highly esteemed former resident of Wingham passed away at Emo, on April 8th, in the person of Alexander Bethune, M. D. The deceased was born in Fifeshire, Scotland, in 1833, and came to Canada when eleven years of age. He graduated from Queen's College at Kingston, and commenced the practice of his profession in Mount Hope, near Hamilton. In the spring of 1877 Dr. Bethune went to Wingham and was there some years when he moved to Seaforth and remained there for a few years. Returning to Wingham some seven years ago he remained there until two years ago when he went to reside with his son at Emo. Mrs. Bethune died in 1905.

The synod of Huron, which opens this year on June 13, and likely will convene in Stratford instead of London. For years the gathering has been held in London, but the bishop has the power both to the time and the place of meeting, and owing to the fact that the general synod is to be held in London in September, he has considered it wise to move the gathering of the Diocese of Huron, to Stratford, if the residents of that place can arrange to billet the clerical delegates.

Mr. Peter Bawden of town narrowly escaped severe injury, if not death, on Monday last. He was engaged in putting in the brickwork in front of Mr. Thorn. Baker's machine shop, when Mr. Elwin White, who was engaged in cutting away some timbers from above, when a long joist was released and fell to the sidewalk below. Mr. White noticing the timber on the move yelled to Mr. Bawden, who had barely stepped to one side when the heavy piece of timber came crashing down within an inch or two of his head. The escape was a narrow one.

DEATH OF JAMES TOM.—At his residence on Main street, Exeter, Ontario, there passed away on Monday, April 24th, in his 91st year, Mr. James Tom. Born at Padston, Cornwall, England, of a long unbroken line of Norman blood. He received his education at Boscastle and being a younger son, at the age of twenty-four he came to the Western world to seek his fortune. He located at Hampton, Durham County, Ont., where in the year 1851 he married Mary A. Kemick. In 1853 they came to Huron County, where he bought a farm and began the formidable task of clearing the immense forest which only the indomitable courage of the British pioneer would attempt. There were born to them four sons and three daughters,—John E., inspector of schools, Goderich; Gregory H. Principal of Strathcona school, Vancouver, B. C.; James K., deceased, and Frank W. K., merchant of Toledo, Ohio; Mrs. (Dr.) Sweet, Nancy J. and Mary A., all of Exeter. In 1883 he retired from active life and took up his residence on Main street. Mr. Tom was a Conservative in politics and a member of the congregation of James street Methodist church. In his early days in Huron Mr. Tom took an active interest in school, municipal and political affairs. He was well read and had an accurate knowledge of affairs pertaining to Canada and the Empire. Everyone who knew him was his friend and he was generally beloved. Always a man of peace, beloved by his neighbors. The end found him full of years and he passed away as peacefully as he had lived. "Surely the last end of the good man is peace. How calm his exit, the nightly dew falls not more gently to the ground, nor weary worn out winds expire so soft."

The team, which was hitched to the wagon, became frightened at Mrs. Smith's umbrella and made a dash for liberty. The tongue became loose and finally the horses broke away from Mr. Quinton, and dashed up street with the whiffletrees dangling at their heels, and the wagon with the projecting tongue a-racalong behind, stopping in front of the Commercial, with the occupants little the worse for their rough and rocky ride. The team got tangled up in front of Carling's store and were caught. The principal damage was the breaking of the wagon tongue.

FORECASTS FOR MAY.— A Regular Storm Period, having its beginning in April, will reach its culmination, in eastern parts of the country the first two or three days in May. A seismic period also reaches into the same days. A wave of higher barometric pressure will follow from the west and north, bringing cooler weather behind the storms. The Mercury Period causes prolonged cloudiness and intensifying regular and reactionary storms which fall under its influence. A reactionary storm period will culminate on and touching the 4th and 5th, and this period being under the influence of the Mercury equinox, will bring storms of thunder and rain, with continuation of cloudy, threatening weather for several days. Under stress of the Mercury period, and solar conditions peculiar to this month, very severe storms are probable at this and other May periods. High barometer, very cool weather, with probable frosts northward, will be the natural order from about the 5th to the 8th—first to the west and north, advancing eastward and southward.

MORALS AND HEALTH IN SCHOOLS

Important paragraphs from the discussion at Toronto last week at the Teachers' and Trustees' Conventions.—

"The schools must do what the homes have neglected to do. Either the parents could not or would not do their duty and tell their children all about the mystery of life and the sacred laws of reproduction, and the ignorance which has resulted has led to the prevalence of the devil's half truth instead of God's whole pure truths."

"The schools are not the aid to public morals that they should be. Immorality is more prevalent in the schools, and consequently out of the schools, than it ought to be, and the time for education in this regard is not fully taken advantage of."

"The school too, is not the aid to public health it ought to be. Teachers do do not know enough about these matters or, if they do know, they do not impart it to the young mind when it is most likely to receive and assimulate it."

"I would like to say that the scarcity of male teachers in public schools is not alone due to insufficient remuneration, but also to the fact that our school work lacks in breadth and interest to such an extent as to make life too monotonous to be endured."

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE;

OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER XIV.—(Cont'd).

Mr. Crawshaw jerked his head in the direction of Nancy, and then, with an evil look in his black eyes he turned and lounged towards the girl just as Mrs. Fairfax glided up to Derry's side.

"Here you are at last," she said, with a sigh of relief; "where have you been to? Oh, there is Miss Hamilton, also. Shall we join them?"

"I prefer to remain here, if you have no objection."

To all appearances Mr. Darnley was only very languid, very tired, and rather dull.

"I am delighted—delighted!" cried Mrs. Fairfax, with enthusiasm, and speaking the honest truth. "I have been dying for some congenial society all the day."

"Scarcely flattering to my cousin and her guests."

He was smiling, but his ears were listening for those tones once again. She was surely very silent. He did not dare look, for if he did it meant fresh torture.

"Oh, you know what I mean," cried Mrs. Fairfax, setting herself in a luxurious chair and glancing up at him coquettishly, feeling that her complexion must look well in the moonlight; then her smile went, and she frowned.

"Oh, they are coming to disturb us, just when we are so comfortable! How grave they all look!" She leaned back in the chair and unfurled her fan. "Are you discussing state secrets, you four young people? How silent you are!"

They, none of them, answered her, though Miss Chester evinced a desire to giggle, which she managed to check with difficulty.

As they reached the steps Dorothy turned to Crawshaw.

"You must forgive me, Mr. Crawshaw, if I spoke rudely to you," she said, coldly, drawing Nancy's trembling hand through her arm; "but please understand that Miss Hamilton is my dearest friend, and I resent an insult to her as I should resent an insult to myself."

Mrs. Fairfax shut her fan and sat bolt upright. This was going to be amusing with a vengeance!

Derrick Darnley only leaned still closer against the marble pillar; his face had grown curiously set and stiff, and his eyes were fastened on that slender, shrinking form before him.

Acting or no, there was such a look of pain and anguish written visibly on her white cheeks and quivering lips, that it awoke his pity.

Crawshaw smiled almost insolently.

"You are young and hasty, Miss Leicester, and so I will pass it over this time," he observed. "Wait," he added, as Dorothy drew herself up with flashing eyes, "we shall come to a more satisfactory conclusion if we refer to Miss Hamilton herself, as being the supposed aggrieved party."

He threw away his cigar, and, with great deliberation, he turned to Nancy.

"Did I insult you just now?" he asked, shortly.

She tried to speak, to meet his gaze. Surely he would spare her the pain of this publicity! She lifted her eyes to his, but at the determination and triumph written in his they fell again.

Dorothy broke in hurriedly before she could find her voice:

"Miss Hamilton does not desire to hold further conversation with you, Mr. Crawshaw," she said, with trembling lips.

"Does she?" Crawshaw gave a short, sneering laugh. "Is that correct, Miss Hamilton? Come, don't be shy. Why not speak up, and tell Miss Leicester as you don't find fault with a man taking a kiss from his future wife," and, with a flash of his black eyes, and another short laugh, he bent forward deliberately and touched the girl's cheek with his lips.

Dorothy started back.

"Nancy!" she cried, and a whole volume of astonished horror was expressed in that one word, her hand slipped from Nancy's arm, she seemed positively stunned at this blow.

Nancy stood alone, for the Hon. Maude had run away, overcome with sudden jealousy, surprise and disappointment.

Dorothy's eyes were fixed on her downcast face.

"Nancy, is this true?"

Mrs. Fairfax was intensely interested, she had not been so much amused for years. She forgot Mr. Darnley for the instant as she leaned forward eagerly.

The moment had come—the fatal moment for which her long vigil during the past few hours was to have prepared her. Dorothy's voice seemed to scatter all her strength, to crush out all her courage; she could not speak or move.

But if she were feeble, Crawshaw was not; with an air of proprietorship he took Nancy's hand.

"Miss Leicester seems to doubt my word," he said, in a voice that betrayed his anger, yet in which his triumph still rang, "perhaps she'll believe you, Nancy."

Dorothy pushed him on one side, and snatched Nancy's two cold hands in her own.

"I will not believe it! I will not!" she said, in tones of such pain that pierced Nancy to the quick. "Nancy—Nancy, say this is not true!"

The girl rested her hands in those two gentle ones for one instant. There comes a limit even to suffering, and her limit had come. A sense of numbness was creeping over her aching heart, a dignity born of despair slowly filled her every limb; the happy past was dead; she had cried for help, for deliverance, and none had come, now she must rivet the chains that were to bind her henceforth to one whom she knew to be beneath the very beasts of the field—a man without heart or honor.

She dimly felt that Darnley was near her, and, unconsciously, this gave her strength, she let her eyes meet Dorothy's, and her pale lips opened.

"I can't deny it, dear," she said, quietly, "for—for it is true."

"You—you are not going to marry this——"

"Oh, don't mind me!" sneered Crawshaw, as Dorothy's voice broke. "You don't seem pleased at Miss Hamilton having chosen me, Miss Leicester."

"Pleased!"—Dorothy forgot everything, her duty as hostess, the ordinary conventionalities of society, everything but this hideous fact—that Nancy, her dear, true Nancy, was about to give herself to such a brute as Thomas Crawshaw. "I cannot—will not believe it!"—tears were coming to her eyes, and a lump rose in her throat. "Nancy, you must be mad! What has come to you, darling—don't we make you happy—do you want to leave me? No, no, it is only a joke, or"—Dorothy turned suddenly to Crawshaw—"or, if it is true, you have made her promise by some unfair means. Yes, yes, I feel it; I know it. She would never have done this of her own free will!"

Crawshaw's face darkened.

"I thank you for your good opinion of me, Miss Leicester!" he said, savagely; then he put his hand on Nancy's shoulder. "Speak out!" he muttered. "Don't stand there like a dog! Don't you hear what is being said, Nancy Miss Leicester gives me one insult after another, and you must set her right."

"Don't listen to him, darling, listen to me!" cried Dorothy, throwing her arms round the girl's trembling form. "Is—is this awful thing forced upon you, or do you mean to marry him of your own free will? Nancy, you must answer me."

Nancy reared her head, her eyes went across to those of the man she must call master. At the cruel, wicked look in his face she flinched; she seemed to see her uncle alone, deserted, perhaps dying, for she knew Crawshaw would give him no mercy.

"I marry him of my own free will," she said, slowly and deliberately.

Dorothy's arms slackened in their hold, and she stepped back.

"Then," she said, in trembling tones, "then there is nothing left for me to do but to offer my sincere apologies to Mr. Crawshaw, and—and to wish you happiness, dear."

Derrick Darnley had not moved through this short, strange interview, but at Nancy's cold, curt words he started, and moved forward.

As she was unmerciful in her strength, so he would show her he had no mercy.

"Of course you do, Dolly," he said, speaking very easily and clearly; "and so do we all. Come, Mrs. Fairfax, where are your congratulations?"

"Here, and at Miss Hamilton's service," was the prompt reply. "My dear, I congratulate you most sincerely. You will be the envy of half London, and the manor house is a positive dream. While as to Mr. Crawshaw"—the keen-witted little matron held out her hand with a graceful gesture—"it is fortunate for me that I am a married woman, or there is no saying what injury I might not have done Miss Hamilton for forestalling me in his affections!"

Mrs. Farfax was well versed in tiding over awkward moments, and her tact certainly did good service now; but though she was outwardly so easy and unsuspicious, she was inwardly consumed with curiosity.

"Something very like a tragedy. I don't particularly like the girl. She is too outspoken, and much too pretty; but she is also much too good for this brute."

She kissed Nancy with a show of warmth, and then it dawned on her that perhaps she had better go indoors.

"Nearly half-past eleven!" she cried, with a little shriek, as she glanced at her watch. "We shall get no beauty-sleep. Good-night, dears," to Dorothy and Nancy. "Good-night, you lucky man," to Crawshaw. To Darnley she gave a coquettish smile.

"Good-night, Sir Derrick," she was beginning, when he interrupted her:

"I will escort you to the foot of the stairs, fair lady, with your permission. Dorothy, what are you going to do?"

"I will accompany you," answered Dorothy, and without a glance, a word, to Nancy, she mounted the steps to the terrace, and then passed into the hall with the other two.

The girl then felt understood her action only too well. It was the outward expression of the hard thoughts that every one would harbor against her henceforth. She stood branded in the world's eye as a manoeuvring, mercenary adventuress, who would sacrifice her youth, beauty, everything, for the sake of the luxury Thomas Crawshaw's money would bring.

She stood with her head erect, and her arms hanging nerveless by her side, and Crawshaw gazed at her with savage joy shining in his black eyes.

"So we're quits at last, Nancy, are we?" he said, with a sneer. "I swore to bring you to my feet; I swore I'd make you my wife; and you see I've kept my word."

And then turning on his heel, he lounged to the room which Sir Humphrey, with his boundless hospitality, had placed at the disposal of the millionaire whenever he felt inclined to use it.

Nancy watched him go with dry, hot eyes, then with a shudder she walked across the lawn.

She could not go indoors yet; she could not bear to meet Dorothy's face, full of pain and undisguised contempt.

Just as she reached the edge of the lawn she saw two forms coming toward her, carrying something between them, and evidently making for the plantation.

She stopped till they came. She had guessed their errand.

"The dog is dead, Foster?" she said, questioningly, her voice cold and constrained.

"Yes, miss, she were in such agony we was obliged to give her poison. Poor Zoe! Well, she's out of all further hurt, miss. She can't get no kicks now. You'll forgive me, miss, but I'd sooner serve under a savage nor be a servant of Mr. Crawshaw's."

Nancy made no reply, and the men passed on. For an instant she stood motionless; then she stretched out her hands with a gesture of despair.

"If—if I could only die as Zoe has died!" she moaned.

Alas! for her the end of her misery was not to come yet.

* * * * *

The tidings of Miss Hamilton's engagement to the millionaire were received first with incredulity and then with amazement, tempered in some cases with excessive annoyance. Lady Burton could not control herself sufficiently to offer her congratulations to either party; while as for the Hon. Maude, a severe and very unusual headache kept her confined to her room for many hours.

The Countess of Merefield was disagreeable about the matter, Mrs. Darnley indifferent; while as for Lord Merefield and Sir Humphrey, they were, to use their own terms, "simply flabbergasted!"

But every one kept their opinions to themselves when either of the affianced couple were present, and in a very short time Nancy found that she was treated with a marked show of deference by the very people who had tried previously to snub her and taunt her with her dependency on Sir Humphrey's bounty.

Derrick Darnley had been called away to London on private and sudden duty early the morning following on his return from transacting his mother's business.

No one knew why he had gone save one person, and she had the knowledge buried deep in her heart of hearts, never to be revealed.

The Grand Trunk Building One of the Finest Hotels on the Continent.

The "Chateau Laurier," Ottawa, Ont., which will be owned and operated by the Grand Trunk Railway System, will be, without doubt, the finest hotel on this continent, not only architecturally, but also in regard to its general appointments.

Situated in Major's Hill Park, it faces to the west the Parliament Buildings and grounds, to the north the Ottawa River, and the Grand Old Laurentian Hills in the Province of Quebec. It can truly be said that the location is unsurpassed on this continent.

It is built in the French Chateau style, in the most approved method of fireproof construction. The frame of the building is steel, the walls are of Bedford limestone, surmounted with copper roof, and the whole building presents a majestic as well as picturesque appearance from every viewpoint. The possession of such a structure must prove to be not only a valuable asset to the City of Ottawa, but a credit to the Dominion of Canada.

The hotel will contain, in addition to its regular dining-room and cafe, a Ladies' Dining-Room, Banquet Room, Ball-room, a State Suite, and a number of private dining-rooms, as well as three hundred and fifty bedrooms with two hundred and sixty-two private bathrooms. Each bedroom will have a front outlook, for there is no courtyard to this hotel, and upon three sides it fronts the beautiful Major's Hill Government Park.

Every feature of drainage, heating, ventilation, lighting, and cooking arrangements have received the most detailed consideration, and will be of the most modern form and appointment.

Besides the ordinary entrance to the "Chateau" from the street, it will be connected with the Grand Trunk Railway's new Central Union Passenger Station by a private passageway.

Mr. F. W. Bergman, the Manager, has had a wide experience in hotel management, both abroad and in this country, and has been selected to make the "Chateau Laurier" the favorite hotel in America.

The hotel will be opened for business next fall.

THE FOX'S CUNNING.

Why His Efforts to Bewilder Hounds Are Often Successful.

When foxes find themselves beaten they often resort to peculiar means to endeavor to bewilder their pursuers. I do not for one moment wish to rob the species of one bit of their traditional cunning, but it always seems to me that legend has surrounded them with a greater brain power and thoughtfulness than they really possess, says a writer in the Court Journal.

It is usual to place to the credit of the fox every accident which occurs in a run which turns out in his favor, whereas in seven cases out of ten it has no connection whatever with the scheming of the hunted animal. The other day a Goathland fox, after a sharp burst, found himself too close to the hounds to be safe, so he scrambled onto the roof of a dwelling house in Sleights village. The probability is that had hounds been alone they would have thrown their heads up and have been beaten, for they rarely look for the unexpected.

The foxhound essentially relies upon his nose. They may course the fox for the last few hundred yards of the hunt when they run from scent to view, but this is unorthodox and belongs to greyhounds. The same applies to the use of their brains. There are hounds which think, but they are the exception, so that when they have overrun or lost the line and have cast themselves unsuccessfully, they invariably give up and wait for the assistance of their huntsman.

This Goathland fox was seen on the housetops, and he knew it, for whatever powers the species may or may not have they undoubtedly do know by some mysterious means when they are discovered during a run. He therefore continued his journey, jumping from roof to roof, till misjudging the distance he fell some twenty feet into the roadway below. Despite this the fox ran on for half a mile or so before hounds ran into him.

THE BREED TO BUY.

Most men who now raise sheep and those who are about to make a start want a breed that will produce both good mutton and good wool—a rather difficult combination.

There are some breeds, however, that produce both, but like the dual cow they are not in favor with the men who believe that one must breed for milk and butter, or for beef, and not for all.

The following breeds of sheep are probably better fitted by Nature and improvement to produce wool and mutton:

The Shropshires are much thought of throughout the West. The ewes weigh from 125 to 180 pounds, are very early maturing, producing very excellent carcasses and shearing from seven to ten pounds per head.

The Hampshires are a large sheep, not quite so early maturing, but producing very large lambs at an early age. They shear approximately the same as Shropshires.

The Oxford are very similar to the Hampshires in size and character.

The Southdown is particularly a mutton breed, producing a fleece somewhat lighter than the breeds mentioned above, but, nevertheless, producing a good fleece and a most excellent carcass of mutton.

The Dorsets, when mature, weigh from 130 to 180 pounds, and are very prolific. They shear a fleece of medium weight, and yield a good carcass. They are particularly valuable because of their extreme prolificacy, producing frequently three times in two years.

The Rambouillettes and Delaine Merinos are fine wool sheep, and produce fleeces which will yield from ten to sixteen pounds per head. They also produce good carcasses of mutton; however, more emphasis has been placed upon the fleece in the case of these two breeds than in the breeds mentioned above.

The greatest difference between the Rambouillette and the Delaine Merino is in the greater size of the former.

The Cotswold, Lincoln and Lester are known as the long-wooled breeds, producing fleeces weighing from eight to twelve pounds, and producing good carcasses before the lambs reach the age of one year. These three breeds are comparatively large.

But breed is not everything in the selection of breeding rams and ewes. After one has made up his mind as to the breed he wants then he must know how to select the best individual of that breed.

There are some mighty poor specimens of the best breeds, and the trick is to know enough to let these alone.

THE EXPERIENCE OF MANY.

A man who has gone into the poultry business in the right way recently received a jolt that surprised him. He paid a good price for eggs guaranteed to be from hens that had scored 100 points, and when his first flock of birds were about a year old he had them scored by a local judge. He was delighted when several of his best pullets and cockerels scored 100 and the rest ran up above 95. He was sure he had champion prize-winners until he sent about a dozen of his best ones to poultry show. Then came the jolt.

His birds were judged by men who knew their business and play no favorites, and the result showed none of his stock to be better than 92, while more than half of the flock ran down below 85. Of course, his birds are pretty good at that, but not good enough to bring fancy prices, while the eggs will bring little, if anything, above store prices.

This man's experience is too often repeated. The whole trouble lies in amateurs expecting too much of their flock, unscrupulous fanciers misrepresenting their stock and local judges being incompetent or too anxious to please.

WEAKNESS IN YOUR PIGS.

When any weakness is discovered in the pigs it is time to change the boar. He should be disposed of at once and a new boar, not related to your sows, should be introduced. When the pigs are weaned they should be fed on something that will give them blood and muscle. Corn is extremely fattening and should be fed very lightly if at all, during the first two or three months of the pig's life.

Feed the youngsters bran, wheat middlings and a little dry blood meal occasionally. This ration, with plenty of exercise, clean water and a dry, well ventilated place to sleep, will produce sound animals that will take on fat readily when the time comes to pour corn into them.

A NASTY ONE.

"Now, sir," began the smart K. C., "you say you discharged the plaintiff from your service because he was somewhat addicted to liquor. Is that correct?"

"It is," answered the defendant.

"Good!" said the G. C. "You do not consider it advantageous to yourself that your employees should be devotees of Bacchus?"

"That is so."

"Now, kindly tell the gentlemen of the jury—do you drink yourself?"

"That is my business!" retorted the defendant angrily.

"Quite so!" assented the K. C. suavely. "And have you any other business?"

MADE HIM THINK.

He was her "very best young man," and she was doing all she could to encourage him.

"Did you know," he asked, "that I passed your house last evening?"

"Of course I did!" she answered promptly. "Did you think I wouldn't know your step?"

And the young man grew thoughtful and grave, for he had passed in a cab.

Hints for Busy Housekeepers.

Recipes and Other Valuable Information of Particular Interest to Women Folks.

TESTED RECIPES.

Lemon Butter.—Grate the rind and squeeze the juice of two lemons, one-quarter pound sugar, one-quarter pound butter, five eggs, beaten; cook in double boiler till it thickens. This quantity makes two glasses delicious filling for cakes.

Date Pudding.—One cup white sugar, two eggs, beaten, one cup dates, seeds taken out, one cup English walnuts cut in half, two tablespoons flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one teaspoon vanilla; steam one hour; serve cold with whipped cream.

Cheese Relish.—One half-pound cheese, one small green pepper, one small onion, one-quaretr teaspoon salt; put all through food chopper; then make smooth with cream; makes fine sandwich.

Rhubarb Jelly.—This vegetable is not made into jelly as often as should be done. Rhubarb makes a delicate pink fine flavored jelly. Cut one large bunch into fine pieces without peeling, add a large chopped apple, peel and seeds included. Cover with hot water and cook until done. Mash fine and strain through jelly bag. To every cupful of juice add one cupful of hot granulated sugar. Boil juice until it begins to jell or about twenty-five minutes. Turn into scalded jelly glasses and seal with paraffin.

Roast Beef.—The roact beef of old England is presumably the finest in the world and has been celebrated in both song and story, but we seldom hear of the many other excellent ways in which English cooks prepare this meat. One of their most pleasing dishes is beefsteak stewed without the additions of water or any other fluid. To prepare this have three of four pounds of rump steak cut about an inch thick. Put one tablespoonful of butter in the frying pan and let it melt without browning. Wash the steak quickly in cold water and put it in the frying pan, cover closely and let it slowly become hot. As soon as it is thoroughly heated add one teaspoonful of of salt and a saltspoonful of white pepper, then keep it just simmering (never allowing it to boil) until perfectly tender. It should be closely covered all the time. It will require about an hour and a half to cook it just right. When done place the steak on a heated platter and add half a teaspoonful of walnut or tomato catsup to the gravy in the pan; let this get hot and pour over the steak. Sometimes a slice or two of onion or carrot is added to impart a delicate flavor to the steak, but it is quiet delicious without.

SANDWICHES.

Peanut.—One-half pound shelled peanuts, mayonnaise, butter, white bread. Chop fine by running through meat chopper one-half pound of shelled peanuts. Add to this one-half parts each of butter and mayonnaise dressing. Mix thoroughly and spread between thin slices of buttered bread.

Bacon.—Six slices breakfast bacon, three stalks celery, six stalks lettuce, mayonnaise dressing. Run bacon through meat chopper, then place in frying pan and fry brown. When cool add celery and lettuce stalks finely chopped; mix with mayonnaise and spread between thin slices of buttered bread on which has been placed a fresh, crisp lettuce leaf.

Raisin Brown Bread. — Two loaves Boston brown bread, one-half pound seeded raisins, one-quarter pound pecan meats, mayonnaise dressing. Chop alternately in meat chopper a handful of raisins and one of the nuts until all have been run through the meat cutter; mix with mayonnaise and spread between thin well buttered slices of Boston brown bread.

Salmon.—One-half pound can salmon, six sweet pickles, one pimento, three stalks of celery. Spread salmon and mix with pickles, celery, pimento, and mayonnaise dressing. Spread between thin slices of white bread well buttered.

Baked Ham.—One pound boiled ham, one pimento, one-half cupful pecan meats, two hard boiled eggs. Run all through meat chopper and mix with mayonnaise. Cut thin slices of bread, butter and spread with mixture.

Cheese.—Mix finely grated cream cheese with one pimento and one-half cupful pecan meats. Add mayonnaise dressing and spread between well buttered slices of rye bread.

Olive.—Use thin slices of white bread, buttered, cut in heart shape. Between each two slices place a layer of Neufchatel cheese mixed to a paste with equal quantities of cream and salad dressing and cover with chopped olives.

FRUIT RECIPES.

Cherridale Dessert. — Put one pint of cherry juice (either from fresh or canned), one teacupful of hot water, the juice of one-half lemon, and one cupful of sugar over the fire in a saucepan. When boiling add two level tablespoonfuls of gelatin which has been dissolved in one-half teacupful of hot water. When slightly thickened, wet a mold and put the gelatin mixture in alternate layers with one heaping teacupful of stoned dates. Set on ice to chill. Turn out in a flat dish at serving time and add a border of whipped cream. The combination of the flavors of cherries and dates is new, novel, and exceedingly delicious.

Pineapple Dreams.—Small can of sliced pineapple, 5 cents' worth marshmallows, 5 cents' worth English walnuts. Chip walnuts, split marshmallows, cut pineapple in small pieces. Alternate layers of pineapple and marshmallows, and sprinkle walnuts between. Put in the ice box one to five hours. Dish and cover with whipped cream.

Strawberry Sherbet.—Two boxes strawberries, mashed; add two pounds of white sugar and juice of one lemon; let stand one hour and strain. Measure juice and add as much water as you have juice. Pour in freezer and as it begins to freeze add whites of two beaten eggs.

Strawberry Pie.—Make nice, rich pie crust, put over the bottom of pie pan turned upside down on table; put three or four fork holes in the crust to keep from raising up from the pan. Bake by itself. When baked light brown take the crust, turn on to a plate, then the crust is ready to fill. Have ready one quart fresh picked strawberries, sweetened to taste, fill the crust with the strawberries, cover the top of the berries with the whites of two well beaten eggs, sweetened with sugar. Put in the oven just long enough to light brown the whites of the eggs.

LAUNDRY HELPS.

Tack a piece of oilcloth over the bottom of your clothes basket to keep snow and dirt from clogging the wicker work and soiling the clothes.

Never wring linen from a clothes wringer. It makes wrinkles that are hard to iron out. Starched clothes are easier to iron if sprinkled with hot water half an hour before ironing.

Starch for a black lawn or organdy dress, that will make it look like new and will not show on the surface of the dress goods, can be made in this way: Take black dye, dissolve as you would for coloring, and keep it bottled. Make the starch quite thin, strain the dye and mix a little of it with the starch. Proceed as usual and the dress will look like a new one when laundered.

Do not pad the ironing board with wool blankets, which hold moisture and make your clothes hard to iron dry. Cover the top with a thick layer of cotton batting—one pound will be sufficient—then cover with one thickness of cotton flannel, drawing the cloth tightly and sewing or tacking on the under side. Cover this in the same way with one thickness of smooth muslin, and you will find an excellent surface for ironing.

For a handy and convenient clothes stick to lift boiling clothes from the boiler to the tub, have one made as follows: It is two and a half feet long, round, and one and one-quarter inches in diameter through most of its length, but the end used to lift the clothes is widened to three and one-quarter inches, and made thinner so that it is like a paddle. A "V" shaped cut is made in the end of the blade leaving two prongs which are also "V" shaped, with blunt points about one and one-half inches thick. A thrust and a slight twist into the boiler will draw something out easily and quickly.

THE SEWING ROOM.

When your corset steel breaks make a slit near the bottom of the broken steel, on the inside, insert a steel taken from the side of an old corset. This strengthens the broken steel and does the same service as a new one.

Upholsterer's Linen. — Upholstering linen makes desirable suits for children. It comes mostly in the tan shades, either tan or striped, and is not expensive. The more it is laundered the better it looks.

Plait Help.—After the skirt is completed turn it wrong side out and sew a tiny seam down the back of each plait within an inch of the bottom of the skirt. The plaits will always hang straight and require one-half the pressing. This is a great help in wash dresses as it makes the ironing of the plaits very easy, as they will be perfectly straight and easily put in.

Skirt Help.—When making a child's new dress or even your own wash dresses, make the skirt longer than required, to allow for lengthening. Make a deep hem, take up what you allow for lengthening by small tucks, or one or two large ones, on under side of hem. When skirt is too short let a tuck or two out. Your skirt is longer with small labor and you won't be able to see there had been a tuck, which is the case when tucks are placed above the hem and let out.

Buttonholes in Lace.—The owner of a white waist with a lace yoke is sometimes at a loss to know how to fasten the yoke, as it is hard for a person to pin her own yoke in the back. Baste small squares of lawn underneath each place where you wish to make a buttonhole, then cut the buttonholes and work them. Cut away the surplus lawn around the buttonholes, leaving them firm and strong. Also put tiny squares of the lawn under the yoke as you sew the buttons on.

"MIND YOUR P'S AND Q'S."

One Theory Is That the Saying Originated in Printing Office.

Several explanations have been given of the origin of the phrase, "Mind your P's and Q's." One is that it is derived from an old custom of hanging a slate up in an alehouse on which was written P or Q—that is, pint or quart—against the name of each customer according to the quantity which he had drunk; to be paid when the wages were given on Saturday night.

Another explanation given in the Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette is that the sentence originally was "Mind your toupees and queues." The toupee was an artificial lock of hair and the queue was the pig-tail of olden time.

A riddle used to be in vogue as follows: "Who is the best person to keep the alphabet in order? Answer: A barber, because he ties up the queues and puts toupees in irons."

Charles Knight gives the most plausible explanation, as follows:

"I have always thought that the phrase 'Mind your P's and Q's was derived from the schoolroom or the printing office. The forms of the small p's and q's in the Roman type have already been puzzling to the child and the printer's apprentice. In the one the downward stroke is on the left of the oval; in the other, on the right.

"Now, when the types are reversed, as they are in process of distribution they are returned by the compositor to his case, the mind of the young printer is puzzled to distinguish the p from the q. In sorting pi or a mixed heap of letters, where the p and the q are not in connection with any other letter forming a word, I think it would be almost impossible for an inexperienced person to distinguish which is which upon the instant."

Cost of Living in Berlin, Germany, Now and Ten Years Ago.

Dr. Friedel publishes in the Berlin Tageblatt, as the result of exhaustive enquiries in shops, stores, etc., an interesting comparison between the expenses of a Berlin household of to-day with its expenses ten years ago. He carefully allows for the increased demand for luxuries and the improvement in the quality of the articles sold, but, after making all allowances, arrives at the conclusion that there is an average increase all round of 25 per cent. in the cost of living.

If the ladies of Berlin were willing to dress in the simpler manner, and in the perhaps poorer materials of ten years ago, say the ladies' outfitters, they would still have to pay from thirty to forty per cent. more than they did then.

Furniture costs 25 per cent. more than it did ten years ago and in the last year has risen nearly ten per cent. The price of the coal briquets, with which the German porcelain stoves are heated, has risen from 22 cents per 100 to 31 cents. Meat, as the housewife buys it is on an average, 25 per cent. dearer. The price of bread is about the same, but even burlais have become more expensive. A funeral which cost $125 ten years ago now costs $175.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, APRIL 30.

Lesson V.—God's pity for the heathen, Jonah 3. 1 to 4. 1. Golden Text, Matt. 28. 19.

Verse 2. Nineveh—A city with a great population and one of wonders of the ancient world. It was situated on the upper Tigris, capital of Assyria, noted for its temples, palaces of marble and gold, hanging gardens, libraries, broad walls, and elaborate water system. The city proper was about nine miles in circumference, but beyond its walls lay miles of common dwellings, making a great city some sixty miles around. It was to this greater Nineveh (an exceeding great city meaning, literally, "great from God's point of view"), a city whose diameter was a three days' journey (3), that Jonah was called a second time (1) to go.

4. Into the city a day's journey—The distance a man could go in a day, of course, varied. Probably through the crowded sections of a populous city, preaching as he went, Jonah would go no more than six or seven miles.

Nineveh shall be overthrown—This was the message which Jehovah had bidden him to proclaim the first time, and Jonah had refused, not so much because of fear as because of his presentiment that God wished him to be something more than the agent of Nineveh's destruction, to be, in fact, nothing less than the channel of the divine grace (Jonah 4. 2) to these heathen, whose wickedness (see Nahum) he believed called for a speedy doom. The actual overthrow of Nineveh took place in B. C. 606.

5. Believed God.—That is, they accepted the preaching of the prophet of God as direct from heaven, and believed their city was doomed. So they organized a public fast, reaching from the king to the lowest subject. Their putting on sackcloth was the outward sign of mourning and penitence. The custom probably grew out of the ancient habit of wearing merely a loin cloth, woven from goats' and camels' hair, for a daily covering of the body. From this it became the garb of religious ceremony. The reality of the repentance is further evidenced by the people's sitting in ashes (6).

7. The decree of the king—A national rather than an individual repentance is the only kind a writer of this period could conceive in such a case. The inclusion of the beasts is intended to give a heightened effect to the picture of a people prostrate in sorrowful supplication. This is in keeping with the temper of Orientals, to make every possible outward expression of their sorrow. They believed God would not overlook the sight of their sackcloth and ashes, and their cries and the cries of the neglected cattle. Perchance, when he saw these works (10), he would repent of his harsh purpose

And so he did. But the change was not so much in God as it was in themselves. Just as he had suited his warnings to the moral state in which they were (compare Jer. 18. 8), so now he suits his actions to the moral state indicated by their sorrow for their evil.

Chapter 4, verse 1. It displeased Jonah—He was jealous. It did not set well with the Israelites that God should postpone the doom of the heathen while the world seemed to wait with groanings for justice. And that they should repent was particularly offensive to them.

2. Tarshish—So far as Israel was concerned, this represented the ends of the earth, for, it was a country in the extreme southwest corner of Spain. Taking ship to Tarshish was a kind of proverb for a long journey. By fleeing to this distant port, Jonah hoped to put forever behind his back the odious commission of God. The magnitude of his sin is measured by the fact that he knew God to be gracious, merciful, slow to anger, and, in spite of this knowledge, evaded the duty of making this known to the hated heathen. And now that he saw at length the unfolding of this abundant loving kindness of God, and his willingness to repent upon condition of the heathen's turning from their evil, he thought it hardly worth while to live (3).

4. Doest thou well to be angry?—Here he gives no answer, for he doubtless is silenced by the sting of the rebuke. But later, he concludes (9) that it is well for him to be exceeding angry, even unto death. He felt that it was right that his prophecy should be absolutely fulfilled, and he could not tolerate any divine forbearance with the foes of his people. In this he was a true type of Israel, for even after the exile they continued to chafe at the prosperity of the Gentiles. In their pride as the chosen of God they nourished a fear that others than themselves might be the objects of the infinite grace.

6. A gourd—Like Elijah, Jonah, thwarted in his purpose, withdrew to a solitary place where he could be alone with his distress. And there God came to him, as he did to Elijah, in compassion. The gourd was a fruit of a vine that grew very rapidly and spread its broad leaves as a protection from the sun, when planted by such booths as that of Jonah, or near the trellises of houses.

10-11. Thou hast had regard for the gourd—The meaning of this part of the story is clear enough: If Jonah's care for the poor gourd is so great as to excite his pity and even anger when it withers away, shall not God show pity to the thousands of people of Nineveh, especially the helpless little children (these that cannot discern between their right hand and their left), and the innocent cattle? So the closing impression of the book is one of a compassionate heavenly Father who has regard for all the works of his hands.

CHINESE SPORTSMEN.

Fishing With Unbaited Hook—Long Guns for Bird Shooting.

As we passed through the townlet of Houkou on the Nadoo Creek a crowd was on the bank watching the manoeuvres of two fishermen who were reaping a harvest of mussels and winkles. These fishermen were dressed in fowling costume—a cowskin coat and stocking all in one piece, with the hair turned inside, says the North China Mail.

The only apertures in the garment into which the wearers worked their way feet foremost were at the neck and the cuffs, which were securely tied before entering the water, into which the men waded up to their necks. As soon as their feet came into contact with any of the shellfish, which seemed to lie in beds, the fishermen loosened them as well as they could from the muddy bottom of the creek and then brought them up the "take" in a grasp net.

The men were eminently successful during the short time we stopped to watch them and piled up a big catch on the foreshore.

Another sight which interested us was a novel way of fishing. Two small boats were moving parallel with one another about thirty feet apart. The ends of a line about sixty feet long to which small, unbaited hooks were attached about four inches apart to two sticks were held respectively by a man in each boat. As the boats moved slowly along, first one man and then the other would give his stick a jerk.

Immediately that the hooks struck anything the line was gradually hauled in and invariably with success. We certainly saw fish struck four out of five times, many of them running apparently from a half pound to two or more pounds. It may be that China is the only place in the world where fish are caught with unbaited hooks.

The third incident we witnessed occurred at the well known Shapa, or, lower barrier. A native shooter had his gingal with him—a most uncanny looking weapon. That there should be no question as to its length, it was placed upright alongside myself and towered above my head two feet two inches (measured), which would make the piece of ordnance over eight feet in length.

We foreigners sometimes growl at the 6 1-2 to 7 1-2 pounds our guns usually weigh. Fancy having to carry a twenty-four pounder which was what this man did all day long and for every day in the week.

He was accompanied by a small, weird looking animal, a most unpresentable little wonk, on whom he laid great store. Curiosity impelled us to look at man and dog at work, and what we saw made such an impression upon us that we thought some little record of it might interest others.

A hen pheasant happened to drop into a furrowed field at feeding time. The native took her bearings, crept up as closely as he safely could, deposited his gun on a bit of higher ground and kept it trained on the bird. Meantime the dog lay down across the barrel of the gun as a screen for his master. The psychological moment had arrived, the gun was fired, the bird was killed upon the ground and the dog remained on the barrel until his master took the gun up to reload it.

VICTORY.

"I am truly sorry to give you pain, Mr. Hankinson," said the young lady, "but please do not allude to this subject again. I can never be your wife."

"That is your final answer, Miss Irene?"

"It is."

"Nothing can induce you to change your decision?"

"My mind is finally and unalterably made up."

"Miss Irene," said the young man, rising and looking about for his hat, "before coming here this evening I made a bet of five dollars with Perkins that you would say 'No!' to my proposal. I have won. It was taking a risk, but I was dead broke. Miss Irene," he continued, his voice quivering with emotion, "you have saved a despairing man from the fate of a suicide, and won the life-long respect and esteem of a grateful heart. Good-evening."

WHERE THE SEA IS DEEPEST.

One Place in the North Pacific Has 31,039 Feet of Water.

The ocean has been sounded in nearly all directions with modern appliances and these soundings show that the floor of the ocean consists of vast undulating plains lying at an average depth of about two and a half miles beneath the surface of the waves. In some places huge ridges and cones rise from these submerged plains to within a few hundred fathoms of the sea surface, or they may rise above the surface as volcanic islands and coral atolls.

The greatest depth hitherto recorded is in the Challenger (or Nero) Deep in the North Pacific—5,269 fathoms. If Mount Everett were placed in this deep 2,000 feet of water would roll over the peak of this, the highest mountain in the world.

The greatest depth in the Atlantic is in the Nares Deep between the West Indies and Bermuda—4,662 fathoms. The greatest depth in the Indian Ocean is 3,828 fathoms, in the Wharton Deep, between Christmas Island and the coast of Java. We have now fifty-six of these deeps where the depth exceeds three geographical miles, ten areas where the depth exceeds four miles and four places where it exceeds five miles.

The sea is saltest where strong winds blow across the surface, as for instance, in the trade wind regions and in the Mediterranean and the Red Sea. It is less salt, says Harper's Magazine, toward the poles and in the deeper layers of the ocean. It has long been known that the very salt water of the Mediterranean flows as an undercurrent outward through the Strait of Gibraltar and thus affects the salinity of the deeper waters of the Atlantic over a wide area.

Although the amount of salt in sea water varies the composition of sea salts remains very constant; slight differences have, however, been noticed along the continental coasts, in the polar regions and in the water in direct contact with deep sea deposits.

The temperature of ocean water varies at the surface from 28 degrees Fahrenheit at the poles to over 80 degrees Fahrenheit in the tropics. The cold water toward the poles has an annual variation of less than ten degrees Fahrenheit at any one spot and the warm water of the tropics also an annual variation of less than ten degrees Fahrenheit in a band that nearly encircles the earth; this is the region of coral reefs and atolls. Between these regions of small annual variation there are two bands surrounding the earth where the annual variation is greater and may exceed in certain regions 40 degrees Fahrenheit at any one spot.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT.

Novel Combination of Fresh Mushrooms With Sausages.

"Have you ever tried broiled sausages with mushrooms?" asks a correspondent of the Epicure.

"As a matter of fact the sausages are not broiled at all, but the smallest of breakfast sausages are laid in a sizzling hot frying pan and cooked brown on one side, then turned and taken out to drain on paper when sufficiently cooked.

"Some fresh mushrooms that have been peeled are then set cooking in the sausage fat, and are served with the sausages on slices of toast which have been buttered. For a change add a few slices of bacon to the dish of sausages before cooking the mushrooms.

"A certain egg dish that was invented in a Latin Quarter studio in Paris is delicious. Butter some little earthen dishes such as are used for shirred eggs and break one or two eggs into each. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, grate on a liberal quantity of dry Gruyere cheese, add some bits of butter, pour over cream to cover and bake in a hot oven until the eggs are set.

"For another dish: Put a sweet Mexican pepper or Pimento morrones—the tinned variety—in the bottom of a custard cup or earthen egg cup, break in a fresh egg, add salt, pepper and butter, and bake until the egg is sufficiently cooked. Serve with fingers of crisp buttered toast."

HE KNEW A THING.

Irritable Father—"Want to marry my daughter, hey? I suppose she thinks I am idiot enough to take such a young man as you are into my family, does she?"

Young Man—"No, sir. She didn't think it would be of any use for me to ask you. She said you were so cross and so contrary you would order me out of your office the moment I spoke to you about it."

Irritable Father—"Oh, she said that, did she? Well I'll show that impudent young thing she doesn't know what she is talking about. You can have her, sir, any day you please!"

Practice is the best of all instructions.

All the world's a stage, and all the men and women want to be stars.

Every reputable newspaper in Canada sacrifices large sums of money every year in the pursuit of its editorial policy or by refusing business propositions which it holds to be not in the interests of its readers. The newspaper which adopts in the interests of the public a policy to govern its editorial and business columns must expect to pay the price in loss of revenue. It should have a right to look to the public for at least a measure of appreciation and compensation.

After all there is a heap of excitement in a grafter's life, to say nothing of the investigating committee.

A man may not love his mother-in-law but he is mighty glad to see her when the baby has measles.

It is a shock to a man when his local paper refers to him for the first time as "one of our old citizens."

The man who tells all he knows is easy to understand. It is the man who says nothing who has you guessing.

A GOOD SUGGESTION

Friends of the Advocate will advantage themselves and all concerned if they study its advertising columns. They are worth reading regularly and it will please the advertisers and very greatly benefit The Advocate if on responding to an advertisement our readers state that they saw the advertisement in its columns, and all who particularly value the Advocate will naturally appreciate those who advertise in its columns and give them the preference.

CREDITON.

Quite a number of our people have been attending the sessions of The Canadian Conference of the Evangelical church in Zurich the past week. Rev. E. H. Bean, who has been the pastor here the past five years, has been transferred to Tavistock and Rev. Bern, who was stationed there for a like term, will come here. It is expected that Rev. Bean will preach his farewell sermon next Sunday.

Samuel Brown has purchased an automobile from Mr. Krug of Chesley. They autoed to Bright on Tuesday. This makes three for our town.

When the railroad comes we will make the natives sit up and take notice)

A telephone has been installed in the printing office.

We are pleased to learn that Gottfried Wein's health has improved and he is now able to walk around out doors.

Last Sunday morning and evening the people of this village were given the opportunity to listen to two of our Crediton boys, who have entered the ministry, and are making their mark in the world. In the morning Prof. Thos. Finkbeiner, D. D., of the North-western Naperville, Ill., preached a very eloquent sermon on the "Prodigal Son," and dealt particularly with the father's erring child. In the evening Rev. Ed. Brown of the Michigan Conference preached on the "Hidden Sin." Both sermons were very impressive and we may justly be proud of the fact that Crediton can claim the honor of sending forth such able men.

Rev. Millyard of Hensall visited at the Methodist parsonage on Tuesday.

Hodgins & Trevethick are getting in quite a number of buggies this season. They are meeting with a ready sale.

Dr. and Mrs. Orme were in London on Tuesday.

This fine spring weather has started house-cleaning. If you see a man walking around looking care-worn, sad and wearing shabby clothes, you may depend there is something doing at his house. He takes his meals on the back door step and is mighty glad of even that privilege.

Now is the time to clean up your back yards and get rid of all the rubbish which has accumulated during the winter. If our people are energetic in this particular line, their homes and yards will look neat and clean and there by our village will be favorably commented on by strangers.

(From Another Source.)

Congratulations are extended to Mr. Fred Young and bride who was formerly Miss Mae Williams. The marriage took place in Wyoming on Wednesday of last week, at the home of the bride's sister. They will reside in Crediton.

Rev. R. Hobbs of Exeter called at the Methodist parsonage on Monday morning.

The teachers of the Sunday School are holding weekly meetings for the study of the Sunday School lessons.

The boys have been putting their diamond in good shape for the season's sport. Challenges will soon be issued to teams in the surrounding country to test their skill with our lads, who will surely show up to advantage.

Complaint has been lodged against F. Abbott's apiary which may necessitate his removal from our village. We are loath to lose a good citizen, even though his bees may cause annoyance at some quarters.

The Trustees of our village have decided to spend $1200 in cement sidewalks this summer. A by-law for the carrying out of the same was voted on last Monday with the result that not a solitary vote was cast against it. When these walks are completed Centralia will then be one of the neatest and cleanest villages in Western Ontario.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

COVERED WITH ECZEMA

Cured by Two Bottles of D. D. D.

On March 21st, 1910, Mr. Angus McMillan of Port Hood, N.S., wrote us,—

My little boy, three years old was covered from head to foot with eczema. I tried over twenty different kinds of salves and washes but could not see any improvement—in fact it seemed to be getting worse.

I was about discouraged and had lost faith in all kinds of so-called eczema cures, when I saw an ad. telling about D. D. D. Prescription. I sent for sample bottle and the third application convinced me that I had at last a sure cure."

What D. D. D. did for this little boy it will do for any skin sufferer. A mild, soothing liquid made up of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, Glycerine and other ingredients, it penetrates to the root of the trouble and washes the disease germs out.

Why not get relief? Simply write to-day to the D. D. D. Laboratories Dept. E. A., 49 Colborne St., Toronto, and they will send you a free trial bottle.

SALE OF DEADLY WEAPONS

Cannot Buy Pistol or Dagger Without Permit From Police.

A despatch from Toronto says: As a result of the Italian murder in Toronto on Good Friday evening and the increase in the number of crimes among foreigners in the province generally, the Ontario Government has decided that the sale of offensive weapons in the Province is to be strictly regulated, and in some cases entirely prohibited. Commencing with last Saturday, every person who exposes for sale or sells any bowie-knife, dirk, dagger, stiletto, metal knuckles, skull-cracker or slingshot, or who sells a revolver, pistol or air-gun to any person other than the holder of a certificate from the Provincial or other police stating that he is entitled to purchase any of those things, is liable to a fine of from $20 to $200. The purchaser is equally liable under the act. Records must be kept of all sales made, with name of purchaser, and failure to comply involves a fine of from $25 to $200. A further penalty of $50 is provided for failure to report sales every three months to the Provincial Police. Officers are given power to search people whom they have reason to believe are carrying concealed weapons, and regulations are included looking to the deportation of foreigners upon whom such weapons are found.

TERRIBLE RAILWAY WRECK

Train Plunged Through a Bridge and 32 Persons Lost Their Lives

A despatch from Grahamstown, Cape Colony, says: According to the latest estimates 32 persons were killed in the wreck of a passenger train on the Kowie Railroad when it plunged to destruction into a gorge 250 deep, through the collapse of the Blaaukkrantz bridge on Saturday. In addition, many were injured, some of them fatally. It was the most appalling wreck in the history of South African railways. The rescue work involved heart-rending experiences, and extricating of the injured and dying from the debris was accompanied by terrible groans and cries. A large mass of wreckage lodged on a ledge 120 feet down, and it was many hours before all were removed from the difficult crags and hoisted in sacking to the lip of the gorge. One little girl had a miraculous escape. She was caught in a fork of the bridge and held by one foot over the ravine. The rescuers had to scale girders to the height of 200 feet to bring her down.

AT THE GREAT REVIEW.

King George Bars Old Vessels From Coronation Function.

A despatch from London says: It is King George's wish that only effective ships be paraded in the Coronation review at Spithead June 24, so there are being made no attempts to swell the numbers with ancient obsolescent hulks that are fit only for harbor service, as sometimes occur on these occasions. The probability is that merely the four divisions of the Home and Atlantic fleets, with the attached cruiser squadrons, the destroyer and submarine flotillas, with their attendant auxiliaries, will be assembled. That would total over 300 vessels. There would be 33 battleships, 36 armored cruisers, 7 protected cruisers, 14 unarmored cruisers, 31 auxiliaries, 116 destroyers, 36 torpedo boats, 47 submarines. The battleships are all less than ten years old, except seven of the Majestic class.

A despatch from Kingston, Jamaica, says: Disturbances have been going on here for two days between the soldiers of the West India Regiment and civilians, and the police have had serious difficulties in handling the rioters. Serious fighting occurred in various parts of Kingston on Wednesday night, the soldiers using razors with deadly effect. Many persons were treated at the hospitals and one death is reported from injuries inflicted. For a time the residents in certain quarters were panic-stricken. Order was restored on Thursday.

STABBED IN THE BREAST.

Austrian Lies at Point of Death in Port Arthur Hospital.

A despatch from Port Arthur says: With a big wound in his left breast, Martin Marran, an Austrian, is in the hospital here hovering between life and death, and Jexano Maurizi is in the police station charged with the wounding. It is alleged that Maurizi called at 462 Algoma Street on Sunday morning, under the influence of liquor, and stabbed Marran.

LABOR LEADERS ACCUSED

Los Angeles Times and Other Outrages Charged Against Them

A despatch from Indianapolis, Indiana, says: After months of investigation, directed by William J. Burns, the San Francisco graft investigator, now head of a detective agency, John J. McNamara, International Secretary of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers of America, the headquarters of which are in Indianapolis, was arrested here late on Sunday charged with complicity in the dynamiting of The Los Angeles Times on October 1, 1910, and the plant of the Llewelny Iron Works in Los Angeles. Four hours after McNamara was arrested the detectives found two quarts of nitro-glycerine and seventeen sticks of dynamite in a barn three-quarters of a mile west of Indianapolis. The barn, the detectives say, was rented by McNamara from T. H. Jones, the owner. A later investigation of the offices of the union disclosed in a storeroom of the basement of the building sixty-four sticks of dynamite, 200 feet of fuse, 500 dynamite caps, one dozen small alarm clocks, and a leather case made to carry a ten-pound can of nitro-glycerine. Detective Burns took possession of all the explosives.

WAS TOO MUCH "COLLAR"

German Saloon Keeper Jailed for Selling Froth Instead of Beer.

A despatch from Munich, Germany, says: Serving short measure in beer, and the deception of the public by filling the "steins" and "seidels" with froth so as to form what is popularly known as a "collar," has just been judged an offence punishable by imprisonment by the Criminal Court here. The tenant of a gigantic beer house, who was arraigned on a charge of defrauding the public in this way, was sentenced to six weeks in jail and a fine of $750, and five of his waiters to terms of from one to three weeks in jail. Evidence showed that it has become customary to serve glasses of beer in which the liquor did not reach the legally stamped mark indicating the proper measure, the drinking vessels being filled to the top with a large quantity of froth. In this way the profits of the house were greatly increased. The public, however, indignantly demurred, and to such an extent that a virtual beer strike was brought about, and many hitherto most popular drinking resorts have been practically deserted. The suit, instituted by several customers, lasted more than five months.

THROAT GIVES HIM TROUBLE.

A despatch from Parry Sound says: Another attempt to burn the old Seguin House property here on Wednesday morning failed through the prompt action of the fire brigade. This hotel is one of the old-time landmarks of Parry Sound, and in the early days was the only stopping house and sheltered nearly all the old-timers. Some time ago there were two fires in the house in one day, and the building was left in a partly-burned state. At 5 o'clock on Wednesday morning fire was again discovered in the unoccupied part of the house, but after a two-hour fight was extinguished.

Toronto, April 25.—There was a strong demand for good butchers', several extra well finished steers selling at $6.25 to $6.37½; another lot realized $6. These were exceptions, as the average price for the best butchers' on offer was from $5.30 to $5.85. Cows sold freely at last week's levels, but bulls were much easier. Several choice milch cows at $75 to $85 each. Sheep, lambs and calves steady and unchanged. Hogs were quoted at $6.15 to $6.25 f.o.b., and $6.50 fed and watered at the market.

COAL OIL STOVE EXPLODED.

Montreal Woman Killed and Husband Severely Injured.

A despatch from Montreal says: Mrs. Alfred Bergeron, aged 41, is dead, and the husband seriously burned, as the result of the explosion of a coal oil stove at their home, 671 Demontigny Street, early on Friday morning. The burning oil was thrown all over the woman, who rushed to the street, accompanied by her husband, whose clothing also caught fire. Mrs Bergeron succumbed to her burns after several hours of agony, she having been burned almost to a crisp. The house caught fire and was destroyed.

POPULATION OF PARIS.

Is Now 2,856,986, Increased Only 125,000 in Five Years.

A despatch from Paris, France, says: The population of Paris, according to the census completed March 5 last, is 2,866,986, which shows an increase of 124,255 compared with the census of 1906.

ENVOY OF KING AT JUBILEE

Prince Arthur of Connaught Received Enthusiastic Reception at Rome

A despatch from Rome, Italy, says: Prince Arthur of Connaught arrived here on Thursday, the representative of King George and the British people at the Italian Jubilee. He received an enthusiastic welcome. King Victor Emanuel and Queen Helena met the guest at the railway station, where a great crowd had gathered. When the Prince appeared he was cheered heartily, and thousands followed the carriages in which he and the Italian sovereigns and their attendants were driven to the Quirinal. At the palace the popular demonstration was so persistent that the Prince, yielding to insistent demands, later appeared upon the balcony and acknowledged the greetings.

A GOOD MEDICINE FOR THE SPRING

Do Not Use Harsh Purgatives—A Tonic is All You Need

Not exactly sick—but not feeling quite well. That's the way most people feel in the spring. Easily tired, appetite fickle, sometimes headaches and a feeling of depression. Pimples or eruptions may appear on the skin, or there may be twinges of rheumatism or neuralgia. Any of these indicate that the blood is out of order; that the indoor life of winter has left its mark upon you and may easily develop into more serious trouble.

Don't dose yourself with purgatives as so many people do in the hope that you can put your blood right. Purgatives gallop through the system and weaken instead of giving strength. Any doctor will tell you this is true. What you need in the spring is a tonic that will make new blood and build up the nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the only medicine that can do this speedily, safely and surely. Every dose of this medicine helps to make new blood, which clears the skin, strengthens the appetite, and makes tired, depressed men, women and children bright, active and strong. Mr. B. Martin, Deux Rivieres, Que., says: "About a year ago I was all run down. I was pale, weak, and had but little appetite. I also suffered from a severe pain in the back, and though I tried several medicines nothing helped me until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and these soon fully restored my health. I can strongly recommend these pills to every weak person."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DANGER IN CHATTER.

Italian Nerve Specialist Investigates American Women.

Representative American women of the working classes, the well-to-do and the rich, have been investigated by Dr. Enrico Serafini, an Italian specialist on nervous diseases, who states that chatter and mental excitement are responsible for 90 per cent. of the neurasthenic cases in America. He has traveled as far as the Pacific coast and will soon tabulate the result of his findings.

Dr. Serafini says he intends to write a book on the subject for the benefit of the medical fraternity. It has been a generally accepted fact by doctors that rest and mental relaxation are the two states necessary before a cure can be expected for any illness, but Dr. Serafini will set forth the constructive reasons for restful requirement. He will explain the physical make-up of the various races, with their relationship to the nervous system. Why Britons are phlegmatic under circumstances that would interest Americans, excite Latins and have different effect on other peoples will be a point he will try to simplify.

According to his observation, wealthy persons are more nervous than poor ones, because it is said that the greater the education the keener the mental activity, with corresponding nervous debilitation.

BABIES WHO SUFFER FROM CONSTIPATION

The little ones who suffer from constipation, colic, indigestion, or any of the many ills that afflict children, will find prompt relief in Baby's Own Tablets—a medicine that is guaranteed absolutely safe and free from all injurious drugs—in fact the only medicine for babies sold under the guarantee of a government analyst to contain no opiate, narcotic or other "soothing" stuff. Concerning them Mrs. Ernest Plamondon, Ste. Julie Station, Que., writes: "It is a pleasure for me to let you know what your Baby's Own Tablets have done for my children. My baby suffered terribly from constipation and although we had a doctor there was no change in his condition till I began to give him Baby's Own Tablets, but since then he is enjoying good health." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE T PIN.

Which Has a Crossbar in Place of the Knob Head.

A novelty in pins is the T pin, which in place of the age long familiar little knob at the top has at the head end of the shaft and set at right angles with it a short crossbar, making it a T pin.

Often it is difficult to thrust an old style pin through a number of folds of paper or through fabrics or other materials; and the head of the pin sinks into the finger tip and hurts that; and when the pin has been finally set into place the material pinned is apt to work up around its head.

All these things are avoided by the use of the T pin, which with its crossbar head gives a surface upon which greater pressure can be exerted, making the pin easier to use; while when it has been set in place the material cannot work up over it; and finally this pin can be more easily pulled out.

T pins are made in various sizes and finished in various colors, for all sorts of domestic uses; and there is also made a T pin that is called a wryneck; this for bank and office use.

The wryneck T pin has at the top the head end of the shaft, a little curve, the crossbar being at the curve's end. A pin with this little curve in it can be thrust through a bunch of papers to lie flat in them, horizontal with them, while the cross head does not stick up above the top paper but lies close and flat upon it, across the opening where the pin was thrust through.

It might have seemed that the age long familiar pin was just a pin and that so it would always remain, in the future as it had been in the past, always just the same; that nobody would ever think of such a thing as trying to invent a new pin; but here now in the T pin is a novelty in pins.

HOW THIN FOLKS CAN GET FLESHY.

New Accidental Discovery Gives Startling Results—Puts Flesh on Thin People and Rounds Out Imperfect Figures.

Simple Prescription Given.

For women—and men, too, for that matter—who can never appear stylish with anything they wear, because of abnormal thinness and angularity, this remarkable prescription is destined to solve the problem. As a beauty maker for the figure it is simply wonderful while it adds brightness to the eyes, and color to the cheeks and lips. It requires no particular dieting, but acts as an aid to nature by its peculiar action on the nerves and blood supply. The blood and nerves distribute over the body all the nourishment or flesh building elements obtained from the food. The trouble with thin people has always been that they do not absorb or retain enough of the fleshy matter to make them gain in weight, even to a normal extent; but this new discovery of blending certain harmless drugs is a revelation to science, and hundreds have gained from ten to forty pounds in a few weeks. There is no danger of becoming too fat. When you get the right weight then stop using.

The general health and strength is greatly improved in anyone from the age of sixteen to sixty. Women soon get plump, with well rounded arms and full bust, and men become straight, strong-looking and healthy.

In a half pint bottle get three ounces of essence of pepsin and three ounces syrup rhubarb. Then add one ounce compound essence cardiol, shake and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardomom). Take a teaspoonful before and after meals, and weigh before beginning.

WAYS OF CROSS-EXAMINERS.

How Two Famous Irish Lawyers Handled Perjured Witnesses.

Two famous cross-examiners at the Irish bar, says Francis L. Wellman in "The Art of Cross-Examination," were Sergt. Sullivan, afterwards Master of the Rolls in Ireland, and Sergt. Armstrong. Barry O'Brien in his "Life of Lord Russell" describes their methods.

"Sullivan," he says, "approached the witness quite in a friendly way, seemed to be an impartial inquirer seeking information, looked surprised at what the witness said, appeared even grateful for the additional light thrown on the case.

"'Ah, indeed! Well, as you have said so much perhaps you can help us a little further. Well, really, my lord, this is a very intelligent man!'

"So playing the witness with caution and skill, drawing him stealthily on, keeping him completely in the dark about the real point of attack, the little sergeant waited until the man was in the meshes and then flew at him and shook him as a terrier would a rat.

"The 'big sergeant' (Armstrong) had more humor, and more power, but less dexterity and resource. His great weapon was ridicule. He laughed at the witness and made everybody else laugh. The witness got confused and lost his temper, and then Armstrong pounded him like a champion in the ring."

SHE LEARNED FROM HER LITTLE GIRL

DAME BOUCHARD FOUND RELIEF IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

They cured her Daughter's Kidney Disease and she tried them herself, with the result that her backache and heart trouble are gone.

Jonquieres, Chicoutimi Co., Que., Apr. 17 (Special).—Encouraged to use Dodd's Kidney Pills by the fact that they completely cured her little girl of kidney disease, Dame Jos. Bouchard of this village, is satisfied she has at last found permanent relief from the heart trouble and backache that have troubled her for so long.

"Yes," Dame Bouchard says, in an interview, "I am happy to tell you Dodd's Kidney Pills have made me well. They completely cured my little girl, twelve years old, of kidney disease, so I made up my mind to try them for my backache and heart trouble. I have taken twelve boxes and feel sure that they will completely cure me."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing a great work in this neighborhood. They have yet to find a case of kidney disease they cannot cure. Whether the disease takes the form of Backache, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Urinary Trouble or Bright's Disease, it is all the same to Dodd's Kidney Pills. They always cure it.

"Perkins looks very happy these days." "He has reason to be," Brown replied. "After his wife and children had been fitted out with their summer costumes, he found there was enough money left to buy a new straw hat."

SLEEP, RESTFUL SLEEP.

"Yes," murmured the man who suffered from insomnia, "some fellow told me that if I drank three glasses of milk before going to bed I should be asleep before half an hour was up.

"I did as he suggested, and now for the benefit of others who may be afflicted with insomnia, I feel it to be my duty to report what happened, so far as I am able to recall the details.

"First, let me say my friend was right. I did go to sleep very soon after my retirement.

"Then a friend with his head under his arm came along and asked me if I wanted to buy his feet. I was negotiating with him when the dragon on which I was riding slipped out of his skin and left me floating in mid-air.

"While I was considering how I should get down, a bull with two heads peered over the edge of the wall and said he would haul me up if I would first climb up and rig a windlass for him. So as I was sliding down the mountain side the ticket-collector came in, and I asked him when the train would reach the station.

"'We passed your station four hundred years ago,' he said calmly, folding the train up and slipping it into his vest pocket.

"At this juncture the clown bounded into the ring and pulled the centre-pole out of the ground, lifting the tent and all the people in it up, up, while I stood on the earth below watching myself go out of sight among the clouds above.

"Then I awoke, and found I had been asleep almost ten minutes."

WORDS OF WISDOM.

A judge who is never worth criticism is probably never worth anything at all.

The bad writing of signatures is affectation of the worst form.

Beware of that terrible expression, "I keep myself to myself." A self is not worth much if it is kept to itself.

The busier a man is, the better able is he to throw his energy into other work.

A very little originality goes a long way.

In our busy present we are apt to forget our past and those who helped to make it for us.

It is easier to give a direct negative answer than a plausible evasive one.

The man who dodges the problems of life often has a better time than the man who tries to solve them.

One of the greatest mischiefs of the present day is the spirit of go-as-you-please which prevails.

IN THREE ACCIDENTS.

A report sent by Mrs. E. Davey, 786 Ellice Ave., Winnipeg, will illustrate the value of Zam-Buk. She says: "My little boy, of three, while playing, fell from a high verandah to the ground, cutting his forehead badly. Instead of calling a doctor who would undoubtedly have put in a number of stitches, I bathed the wound well, and applied Zam-Buk. The little fellow, although suffering keenly, soon got relief from his pain. In the course of three weeks, by applying Zam-Buk daily, the wound was nicely healed.

"Since then I have also used Zam-Buk for a boil which came on my cheek, and which proved very painful and looked unsightly. Zam-Buk soon drew the boil to a head and it then quickly banished it.

"Another time my baby was scalded on her left thigh and calf of leg with boiling water. Directly it was done I thought to use Zam-Buk, and spreading some on lint I wrapped up the baby's limb. Next morning she rested much easier and I applied a fresh bandage with Zam-Buk. I kept this treatment up daily, and was rewarded by seeing a great improvement each time I dressed the wound. In a very short space of time the scalds were all nicely healed.

For all skin injuries and diseases, piles, eczema, salt rheum and face sores, Zam-Buk is absolutely unequalled. 50c box all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Try Zam-Buk Soap! Only 25c tablet.

A Safe Pill for Sufferers.—There are pills that violently purge and fill the stomach and intestines with pain. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are mild and effective. They are purely vegetable, no mineral purgative entering into their composition and their effect is soothing and beneficial. Try them and be convinced. Thousands can attest their great curative qualities because thousands owe their health and strength to timely use of this most excellent medicine.

"Are you feeling very ill?" asked the doctor. "Let me see your tongue, please." "What's the use, doctor?" replied the patient. "No tongue can tell how bad I feel."

THE MULES OF CHINA.

North China is noted for rearing the best mules in the Middle Kingdom. In Peking one will see mules quite as good in every respect as the Missouri and Kentucky product. The finest are employed by Chinese officials and other wealthy men to draw their "Peking carts." These Peking carts have been until recently the only vehicle used by the Chinese to correspond with pleasure carriages in this country. Now the more progressive of the wealthy Chinese are beginning to use modern carriages. The latter, however, can only be used in city streets. The country roads are worse than any dirt road that can be found in this country and no carriage built could make a journey over them without breaking down.

Only a small attendance greeted Rev. Dr. Scott on Monday night in James street church, when he delivered his lecture on "The Cross of Gold." The lecture was a good one and deserving of a much larger patronage.

Mr. John Mitchell, who left here last week for St. Joseph's Hospital, London, underwent an operation on Monday, which was a complete success and there is every prospect of the patient being greatly benefited as a result.

A horse belonging to Mr. John Preszcator narrowly escaped a broken leg on Saturday morning by the earth giving way beside a sink in front of W. J. Carling's store. A number of men assisted the animal out of the hole.

We are in receipt of a copy of the North Battleford News of April 13th, published by an Exeter Old Boy, Mr. Jos W. Bawden. It is a newsy sheet and has a very extensive advertising patronage,—extensive enough to make an Ontario editor turn green with envy, and wonder why he remains in the Old Province when the fields look so green far away.

About twenty of the boy and girl friends of Viola Rowe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rowe, met at her home on Thursday to spend the evening with her, prior to their leaving for Wallaceburg to reside. A very pleasant evening was spent, in the course of which Miss Viola was presented with an address and a beautiful manicure set, as a token of their regard for her and regret at her departure.

A bullet from a 22-rifle broke a pane of glass in the window of a room in which were sitting the Misses Carling at their home on Saturday, and the bullet was afterward found in the room. There is a by-law against shooting inside the corporation, so beware boys.

The throwing of missiles about on the streets is pretty hard on plate glass windows. We notice a hole in a plate glass in the Johns block, besides those previously mentioned.

The Bell Ringers of the Trivitt Memorial church recognized in a very happy and pleasing manner one of their number, Mr. Harry Jennings, on Tuesday night last. Accompanied by their wives they went to Mr. Jennings home and presented him with a handsome silver mounted carving set. After the presentation a very pleasant evening was spent the new host and hostess proving themselves excellent entertainers.

Large congregations attended the services on the second Sunday of the reopening of James street church, when Rev. Dr. Carman, general superintendent of the Methodist church, occupied the pulpit and delivered very able sermons. A feature of the services was the beautiful solos rendered by Miss Lillian Elliott of Centralia, which were appreciated very much. Miss Elliott has a very pretty voice and always pleases her audiences.

The following taken from the London Free Press has reference to the son of Mr. John Broderick.—"J. M. Broderick, for the last five years assistant accountant of the National Drug Company of London, has been appointed accountant of the Regina Office, and has gone to take up his new position. Before his leaving the members of the staff met him in the office and presented him with a trunk and umbrella, accompanied by an address. While he has been connected with the firm Mr. Broderick had made many friends and all will hear of his future success with pleasure."

ALL NIGHT SERVICE.—For some time negotiations have been in progress to establish a night telephone service in town and arrangements have at last been completed whereby the service will be commenced on June 1st. This is an advantage that has long been sought after by the local doctors and others and the service will fill a long felt want, more particularly in communcating with surrounding towns and villages. To Dr. Hyndman much credit is due for his unceasing efforts in bringing about these much desired privileges.

Miss Vera Rowe came up from London Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Rowe left Monday for Wallaceburg to reside, Mr. Rowe having purchased a furniture and under taking business in that town. Their many friends here regret their departure but wish them every success in their new home.

McBRIDE—LAMBROOK—A pretty wedquiet wedding took place at the Methodist parsonage at Oregon, Ill., where Miss Lauretta Lambrook, a former resident of Exeter and Mr. Russell Boyd McBride of Fort Wayne, Ind., were united in marriage by Rev. Will Collins, on April 24th. The happy couple will leave within a few days for Jamesville Wis., and expect to travel all summer. The happy bride will have the best wishes of her many friends here for a long and happy wedded life.

HICKS' FORECASTS—A regular storm period covers the 9th to the 14th, with moon on the celestial equator on the 9th and full on the 13th. High temperature, falling barometer and electrical storms will appear about the 9th in western extremes, and from Wednesday the 10th, to Sunday the 14th, these conditions will progress to the eastward causing general and violent storms in many localities. From the 10th to the 16th constitutes a period of seismic strain that will very probably cause earthquake shocks and shivers in many parts of the globe. A marked change to high barometer and cooler with probable frosts at night northward should be no surprise from about the 13th to the 16th.

ADJOURNED VESTRY MEETING.—The adjourned vestry meeting in connection with the Trivitt Memorial church was held on Monday evening in the School Hall. The Rector presided. After opening the meeting with prayer he called on the Auditors, Mr. N. Dyer Hurdon and Mr. W. H. Collins, to read the report of the audit for the past year. The total receipts amounted to $2308.92, while the expenditure amounted to $2235.53, leaving a credit balance of $73.39. The auditors complimented the Wardens and congregation upon the excellent financial showing of the year, this being the most successful financial statement in the history of the parish. The various organizations of the church in every instance showed substantial balances. Hearty votes of thanks were tendered the Ladies' Guild Teachers and Officers of the S. S., W. A. M. A., Choir, Bell-ringers, Vestry Clerk, the Wardens; also the Rev. D. W. and Mrs. Collins. At the close of the meeting the ladies served refreshments. A pleasant and satisfactory meeting was concluded with the Doxology and benediction.

A mighty cold snap struck us on the evening of May 1st, accompanied by a little snow and quite a heavy frost. It is feared that considerable damage has been done to fruits and grains.

DEATH OF JAMES GOULD.—There passed away at the family residence, Huron street, Exeter, on Monday last another of our old and respected residents, in the person of Mr. James Gould. Deceased has been a long and patient sufferer from acute rheumatism, during the greater part of which time he has been almost totally incapacitated. There was, however, no noticable change in his condition until a little over a week ago, when he suffered a stroke, and while showing signs of improvement at times it was clearly manifested that the end was not far off.

Mr. Gould was born at Meeth, Devonshire, England, in the year 1841, consequently he was in his 70th year. He came to Canada about 38 years ago and first settled in Exeter, where he has continuously resided ever since. He was a peaceable and good, honest citizen and was respected by all who knew him. His wife predeceased him about seven years. He leaves a family of six—one son and five daughters—Fred. of Strathroy; Mary at home; Mrs. McDonald, Wallaceburg; Mrs. Sidney Sanders, Exeter; Mrs. Hilderley, Brooksdale, and Mrs. John Kellett, Usborne; also one brother, Mr. Richard Gould, of town. The funeral took place to the Exeter cemetery Tuesday.

PRESENTATION

At the close of the service in James street Methodist Church on Sunday evening last the choir presented Mr. S. W. Rowe and daughter, Miss Viola, with a leather back hymn and tune book each and an address in recognition of their services in the choir, and expressing best wishes for the future. Mr. Rowe made a suitable reply. The address was read by the leader, Mr. F. Ruse, and was as follows,—

To Mr. S. W. Rowe and daughter, Viola

Dear Friends,—Having learned of your intention to leave town, we take this opportunity to express our regret at your removal, and to show our appreciation of your services as members of our choir We regret losing you from our town and especially from our choir, where you have always been faithful and valued members, cheerfully and earnestly singing the praises of our maker. Our associations together have at all times been most pleasant, and we could not let you leave your home town and our choir without testifying to the high esteem in which you are held by all and showing our appreciation of your services in the choir. We take pleasure in asking each of you to accept a hymn book, and trust that you may be spared years in which to enjoy the blessing of song. That God may prosper you and the other members of your family in your new home is the wish of the members of James Street Methodist Church Choir, F. Ruse, leader.

I. O. O. F. AT CHURCH.

About eighty members of Exeter Lodge of Oddfellows met at their hall on Sunday morning last and marshalled by P. G., Bro. Thos. Boyle, marched to the Trivitt Memorial Church, where they listened to a very able sermon by the rector, Rev. D. W. Collins. The service over they returned to the lodge room, where a vote of thanks was passed, thanking the rector, wardens and congregation for the privilege of attending divine service in their beautiful church.

Rev. D. W. Collins took for his text the twenty-seventh verse of the ninth chapter of St. Mark, "But Jesus took him by the hand and lifted him up, and he arose." After announcing his text the rector welcomed the members of the society and expressed the hope that their meeting together would be a blessing to all. In the course of the sermon he said in part,—

"The words of the text were spoken at the time of a memorable instance in the Lord's life. Christ and the three apostles had been on the Mount of Transfiguration, where his body took on the spiritual form. We ordinarily regard the Transfiguration as a miracle, but if we wish to understand the life and the teaching of Christ we must understand this as the fulfilment of our hope—to take on the heavenly body.

While they were on the Mount another scene was transpiring at its foot, where a father had brought his epileptic son to the disciples to be cured; but they had stood about helpless. When Christ came down he spake the word and the boy was cured, as stated in the text.

Christ came to the earth to form a society with human beings the members, He the head, friendship the heart, and the extended hand the symbol. I wish to dwell on one or two phases of this idea, especially as regards the thoughts that surround the word betterment. We see in all conditions of life how men are striving to better things. In modern methods the unenviable position of leaders of labor unions in U. S. was commented upon and condemned.

In the Older and Middle Ages the conception of the church's mission was to the soul only, hence faith was often the expression of theological statements, and not the product of the heart; believing was of more importance than reasoning. These distinctions formed the world into two great classes, the secular and the sacred. In art the figure of a mother and her child with the head encircled by a halo was sacred, without the halo it was secular. In music harmony set to Scriptural words made the music sacred, while great national melodies were secular. In architecture the building of a cathedral was sacred, but the building of sanitary and proper houses for the poor would be secular. While office in the church was regarded as more important than office in the public domain. The church forget that every calling that is honorable is divine.

Christ came with a mission to the whole man, the body, the mind and the spirit. Hence he was social. He attended a marriage feast, he fed the five thousand, he entered the home, he laid his hands on the heads of the children. He met disease and death, purity and shame, oppression and neglect, and in every instance conquered. Man is not merely an animal. He has a mind and spirit and his nature demands the social side. Christ came to help, and this is the work of to-day—the work of your society

First, then, we are to make men better, and, second, we are to strive to keep them better. An old idea was that there were the rich and the poor, and that there must always be such. There was no effort to change the condition—the poor content to remain such, and the rich making no attempt toward their betterment. As a society you are confronted with the question of what we are to do for the man who is down, socially and morally. Much good work is being done by what is called the settlement, or work in the slums, and this should be the work of the church and our fraternal organizations. Just as Christ gave his hand to the boy we should give ourselves to the work of betterment by personal help to the individual, as well as sympathy with the cause or principle. The hand of fellowship must be held out to assist the less fortunate brother. Not only are your sympathy and prayer needed, but we must be ready with the extended hand. Giving time and money and sympathy is good, but it is much better to give yourself to the work of bettering the condition of our fellowmen.

Be assured that "in that day when a cup of cold water given to a disciple in my name shall not lose its eternal reward" every unselfish act, every helpful word and attitude will bring its true and legitimate reward.

LETTER FROM THE WEST

Regina, April 25, '11

To The Exeter Advocate

Dear Friends,—As I promised to drop you a few lines after arriving at my destination, I thought I would be as good as my word. Well, as you know, I started from Exeter on the morning of April 10th, and arrived in Regina at 3 a.m. on the 14th, and to my glad surprise the first one I met at the station was W. H. Jones. He escorted James Jewell and myself to his home. His wife got up and gave us something to eat; and then to bed for ours? and you can bet I was not sorry, for travelling on a Colonist car from Toronto to Winnipeg is no dream, I can assure you. The accomodation on these cars is something ridiculous. We were crowded for room, and to get water on the train even for drinking and toilet purposes was next thing to impossible; and to get hot water, there was none. You could get about three cups of water at some of the places we stopped at for 10c. or you could get a cup of tea, minus the milk and sugar, for 10c., two hard boiled eggs 10c., one sandwich, about two good mouthsful 10c. Pretty high living, I think I hear you say. Still we did not have to buy as our good wives had made ample provision in that line. We arrived in Winnipeg about 1 p.m. We only had twenty five minutes to stay there, before we left for Regina. On the cars from the 'Peg to Regina we had good accomodation, lots of room for ourselves and baggage and room to sleep, that is, if you could; lots of of chance to make tea on the train; but cold, the cars were like ice houses, so Brother Jewell and I simply put on our overcoats and walked up and down the car to keep from freezing; however, we didn't freeze. Regina is a fine City. There are some of the finest buildings in it that you can see anywhere, and there are hundreds more now in the course of erection. I secured a job at the fair grounds on Saturday and started to work on Monday. There are about 150 in our gang. My wages are 40c. per hour. It is quite a long piece to walk to our work so that I really have not seen much of the city. Will drop you a few lines again when I get a little better posted Give my love to all enquiring friends, and accept the same yourselves. Yours truly,

JAMES BEER.

Recipes and Other Valuable Information of Particular Interest to Women Folks

TESTED RECIPES.

Coffee Moss.—Yolks of five eggs one cupful sugar, one-half cupful strong boiling coffee, one pint whipped cream. Beat the eggs light, then add strained coffee and sugar, when perfectly cold add whipped cream. Mix well, pour in mold and pack on ice for four hours.

Perfect Sunshine Cake.—Use the one-half pint cup to measure with, the egg beater, and sifted cake to mix with and bake in a tin with tube in center and removable slides, and perfect cake will result. Measure everything level. Unless one can use both hands at the same time, which can be learned to do readily, two persons are required to mix this cake, one to beat yolks while the other is beating the whites, as the former must not be allowed to stand a moment after they have been sufficiently beaten. Herein lies the secret of perfect sunshine cake. Use the whites of seven large eggs and the yolks of only five, one and one-quarter cups fine granulated sugar sifted once, one cup ordinary wheat flour sifted ten times, one-half teaspoon cream tartar (level), and one teaspoon vanilla. Whip whites to a foam in a large cake bowl, add cream tartar, and whip till stiff. At the same time and with the left hand, if possible, whip yolks in a small bowl with a fork, then add them to the whites, then the sugar beaten in with egg beater, then vanilla, and last fold in the flour with the cake spoon. Adjust the slides in cake tin and pour in cake mixture. Bake in moderate oven from twenty to thirty minutes. Invert cake as soon as removed from oven and leave in tin until cold.

Cream Waffles.—One cup flour, three heaping tablespoons cornstarch, two cups sour cream, one scant teaspoon soda, one teaspoon salt, one egg. Beat egg, then add cream into which soda has been previously beaten, then the flour, previously sifted, with salt and cornstarch. Bake in hot waffle iron and eat with butter and maple syrup.

CAKE.

Favorite Cake.—This cake is a great favorite in any family, equals sponge cake in texture and is more economical. Sift one cupful of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one and one-half cupfuls of flour and one-half teaspoonful of salt into a bowl. Add one-half cupful of shortening and work into the dry ingredients as in making pie crust. Beat two eggs and add gradually with one cupful of milk. Make into a stiff batter. Spread about one-half inch deep in buttered pans. Sprinkle top with granulated sugar. Bake one-half hour in moderate oven. If desired may be iced with chocolate or orange and nut icing. Makes a delicious cake.

Fudge Cake.—One-third cup butter, two cups sugar, one cup sweet milk, two and one-half cups sour, one-half cup cocoa, three eggs, whites and yolks beaten separately, two level teaspoons baking powder, pinch salt, vanilla to flavor, cream, sugar, and butter, then add well beaten yolks, sift flour, cocoa, baking powder, and salt together, milk and flour alternately, then add well beaten whites. Any good icing can be used.

Irish Cake.—One cup of butter, two cups of sugar (creamed); add yolks of four eggs, beaten. Tablespoonful of cloves, tablespoonful of cinnamon, one-half nutmeg, one-half cup chopped English walnuts, one-half cup chopped white seedless raisins, one-half cup sweet milk, one-half cup of granulatel chocolate, one teaspoon of vanilla, one cup mashed potatoes seasoned as for table, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder sifted in two cups of flour, and whites of four eggs beaten and added alternately. Bake in layer and ice with caramel icing, or bake in loaf cake.

STARCHING.

Flour Starch—Mix first with cold water the flour. Then pour on gradually boiling water and boil till clear. Strain through cloth. Add bluing. For table linen add few tablespoons to rinse water. Clothes keep stiff longer and more satisfactorily than by using regular starch.

Starch Making Recipe.—Two tablespoonfuls of best lump starch, one tablespoonful of powdered borax, one cup of cold water. Stir until starch is dissolved. Two quarts of hot (not boiling) water; stir well while pouring water on the starch. Have the starch as hot as you can bear your hands in it. The clothes to be starched should be dried first. Dip in the starch and wring as dry as possible; wrap in clean damp cloths. They can be ironed at once or set aside over night if desired. When taking an iron from the fire dip it quickly into cold water, wipe off and see how smoothly it glides over the starched clothes. By this process of starching and ironing wax and worry are banished from the home laundry. Wring napkins out of warm water and when ironing them iron on both sides, then fold. They will be like new. For scorched articles, even white silk ties, use clear water and a clean cloth; rub the starch carefully, and while still damp place in the sunshine. The scorch will entirely disappear. By placing an iron pan over the irons the latter will heat better and you will save the consumption of fuel.

LEFT OVERS.

Beef Loaf.—Take one pound of hamburger steak and one-half pound of pork ground. Season with salt, paprika, and onion to taste—make into a loaf and put in a baking pan over which pour a can of tomato soup, basting occasionally and adding a little water. It takes about an hour to bake loaf well. Just before serving add a little flour thickening to tomato sauce and serve. Garnish with parsley. Will serve six people.

Left Over Lamb.—Take the scraps of any leftover lamb, put through the chopper and add a ground green pepper; then put in pan, heat with butter. Heat a rich cream gravy, season with salt and paprika and serve hot on toast.

Take a piece of round steak an inch in thickness. Score well and dredge with flour, pepper, and a pinch of granulated sugar. Have a tablespoonful of lard smoking hot in a frying pan. Sear the steak well until done. Remove to a hot platter, dot with bits of butter, fine bread crumbs, tomato ketchup, and a sprinkling of salt. Add last a tablespoonful of good clear, fragrant coffee. Place steak in hot oven until crumbs are browned. Have ready some crisp parsley. When dish is removed from oven garnish with the parsley greens and serve at once. While steak is browning in oven put a tablespoon of flour in frying pan, stir until blended with fat. Add a cupful of rice milk, stirring fast until well blended. Let come to boil. Salt and pepper. Serve in gravy boat.

LITTLE HELPS.

To Keep Furs.—Every housewife knows what a great worry furs and woollen garments are during the summer months, when moths are so ready to destroy any within their reach. Take a five gallon crock and after sunning and brushing the furs place them in the crock, then cover with a heavy piece of wrapping paper which is glued fast to the crock, making it absolutely air tight and there are no cracks or crevices for moths to enter. This can be kept in a dry cellar all summer, or if you have no cellar or clothes press get a large tin lid to fit the crock and make a cover of cretonne and use for a corner seat in any room, and save all worry over moths for the summer.

Mothproof.—In packing away furs for the summer, and to avert danger from moth, air the furs on a cloudy day. Do not hang them out in the sunshine. If soiled, sprinkle with cornmeal and rub with a cloth the way the fur runs. Shake well, place them in large paper flour bags. Tie tightly and hang them in a closet or put them away in a chest and you will never, never be troubled with moths. No need to pack away with the odorous camphor, moth balls, or tar paper. Experience has proven that the above method is the only safe and satisfactory method of preserving one's furs.

When cooking wild ducks they are often found to taste "fishy." This may be taken away by skinning the ducks before they are cooked. If you would rather not skin them, boil them for fifteen minutes in soda water.

To clean white woollens and have them look white and also keep their shape add a teaspoonful of ammonia to every gallon of water that is used to wash them in.

White Kid Gloves.—Wash gloves with gasoline and ivory soap, using gasoline as you would water. Wash the same as you would a silk glove. Repeat this process three tiemes, using clean gasoline each time, omitting the soap in the last process, using that for rinsing. Let dry, then sprinkle with cornstarch and wrap in a towel for a half a day. They will turn out soft and white as new.

A MANICURE PARLOR.

The Blaine public school in Minneapolis, which was the first school to instal a bathroom, now has a manicure parlor. By order of the board of education a corner of the bathroom has been partitioned off and here the pupils may repair to brush their hair and manicure their hands. The board employs an attendant to take charge of the baths and instruct the children in the art of manicuring and toilet-making.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, MAY 7.

Lesson VI.—Uzziah, King of Judah, humbled; 2 Chron. 26. Golden Text. Prov. 16. 18.

Verse 1. The people . . . . took Uzziah—We are led to infer that there was some dispute over the succession, inasmuch as the people were not ordinarily the determining factor in the selection of a king. As the new king was only sixteen years old, and his father Amaziah was fifty-four at a time of his assassination, it seems likely that there were other claimants, by the chronicler unmentioned. In the King's Uzziah is called Azariah. The two names in Hebrew are much alike, and mean, one, "Jehovah his helper," and the other, "Jehovah his strength."

2. Eloth—A seaport in the extreme south of Edom. In the reign of Solomon it was an important naval station. Later on, in the time of Jeboram, Edom became independent, but the port once more passed into the hands of Judah in the reign of Amaziah, who, however, left it unfortified. Half a century later it passed over to the possession of the Syrians.

4. He did that which was right in the eyes of Jehovah—This is a generalization taken from the older account in Kings, and, when there is added, according to all that his father Amaziah had done, the statement seems incongruous, as Amaziah's degeneracy was pronounced. The verse must be taken as a sort of formula, and interpreted according to the judgment of the reader, in the light of all the facts.

5. Zechariah—A prophet otherwise unknown. There are no less than twenty-nine persons in the Old Testament with this name. The statement that he had understanding in the vision of God is also rendered, "gave instruction in the fear of God," either one of which indicates that he was a man rich in spiritual things and an able teacher.

6-15—The military and industrial prosperity of the reign of Uzziah. These verses, as well as the five which follow, are peculiar to the Chronicles.

6. The Philistines—They were Semitic immigrants into Palestine, whose origin is uncertain. The best estimate makes them out to have come into the lowlands of the Mediterranean from Crete or Cyprus. From earliest times they were in conflict with the children of Israel. Four times they oppressed Israel (compare Judges 3. 31; 10. 11; 13-16; 1 Sam. 7; 13). With the death of Saul, the Philistine power became supreme in Israel. But David threw off the yoke, and even reduced these ancient foes to vassalage. Then, with the disruption, the Philistines regained their independence, but they never regained their lost glory. There were five chief cities in Philistia, of which Gath and Ashdod were two. Jabneh, better known by its Greek name, Jamnia, lay twelve miles south of Joppa, four miles from the sea. After the fall of Jerusalem the Jewish rulers removed there, and it was for a while the center of worship for the Jews.

7. The Arabians—These "people of the desert," in the Chronicles, were the strong kingdom south and southeast of Judah. Gurbaal has remained unidentified. The Meunim, or last people, were an Arabian people from Mount Seir.

8. The Ammonites—A specially cruel people dwelling on the east of the Jordan.

To the entrance of Egypt—Probably not more than 150 miles from Jerusalem.

9-10. Built towers—These were for the protection of the cattle, and husbandmen and vinedressers. The cisterns were something more than wells. From early times artificial reservoirs were hewn out of the rock for the storage of water.

11. Went out to war by bands—This may refer to the custom of attacking an enemy by means of marauding expeditions, but more likely it describes the careful organization of the army.

12. The heads of fathers' houses—That is, the troops were assembled by families. The whole number, three hundred and seven thousand and five hundred, was about the same as that of his father's army (2 Chron. 25. 5), but smaller than the armies of Jehoshaphat and Asa. But this army was superior to Amaziah's, since Uzziah did not rashly depart from his own people to hire troops from Israel, as his father had done.

14. Shields—The enumeration of fighting implements used in the army of Uzziah is more detailed than that of any previous king. The invention of war engines marks an advance in military science. The chronicler speaks of them as "engines engineered by the ingenious" (15). By means of them the Hebrew soldiers were as well equipped as the Assyrians with their battering rams and catapults.

16-23—The tragic conclusion of Uzziah's reign. The book of Kings tells us simply that "Jehovah smote the king," but remains silent as to the sin thus punished. The chronicler, however, many years after, adds what he believes to have been the cause of this catastrophe; namely, the presumptuous exercise, on the part of Uzziah, of the sacred prerogative of the priests, of burning incense, and the anger with which the king withstood them.

16. His heart was lifted up—Of how many of the kings of Israel was it true that they could not stand up under the terrible temptations that came with prosperity!

To burn incense upon the altar—An especially sacred act, and belonging exclusively to the seed of Aaron (Exod. 30. 1-10). Anyone usurping these functions was liable to the penalty of death. The rest of the story speaks for itself. Azariah the priest is not mentioned in any other connection (17). The suddenness of the outbreak of the leprosy reminds us of the case of Gehazi.

21. A separate house—Like all lepers, the king was consigned to a place of absolute isolation, being deprived of royal functions and the privileges of the house of Jehovah.

22. Isaiah the prophet—His relation to the reign of Uzziah comes to view in the next lesson. This reference may be to some fuller record of the reign than the meager statement in the present Isaiah.

23. They buried him with his fathers—Not in the tombs of the kings lest these should suffer defilement from a leper's body, but in the adjoining field.

Jotham—He reigned as coregent during the fourteen years his father remained a leper, and then continued two years as sole king, pursuing the aggressive policy of Uzziah.

THE DOLL'S FESTIVAL.

Annual Holiday Dedicated to Them in Japan.

The familiar saying that "he who makes the people's songs has greater power than he makes their laws" may with justice be parodied by putting "dolls" in the place of "songs." In Japan there is an annual holiday dedicated to these miniature playfellows of the Japanese children. Of them, Miss C. F. Gordon-Cumming writes in her book of "Memories":

Fascinating as are even the commonest kinds of Japanese dolls, I was tantalized by accounts of the delightfully quaint doll army that holds sway throughout the land for one day in every year, namely, the third day of the third month. It is known as the Hina Matsuri, that is to say, "The Dolls' Festival." The dolls in question all represent historical or mythological characters—gods and demigods, mikados and shoguns, warlike heroes, empresses, and other ladies of note, minstrels, courtiers, priests. They vary in size from tiny things to about twelve inches in height, and are made of good wood or baked clay, but all alike are beautifully dressed in correct costume.

Two dolls are presented to every baby girl at the first festival after her birth, and as they are carefully treasured from year to year, and fresh dolls are ocacsionally added, the family doll-house requires to be capacious. When a girl marries she takes her original brace of dolls with her to her new home, as an early offering for her prospective family. The dolls are provided with miniature properties of all sorts, tiny but exquisitely lacquered tables, with complete dinner or tea-sets, all requisites for the toilet and for painting, and for making music.

Well-brought-up little Japanese maidens begin their festival by making formal offering of sweet-meats and rice wine to the dolls who personate the Mikado and the Kogo, and then devote the whole long, happy day to play with the delightful companions who at night will be hidden from them, not to be seen again for twelve long months. I have had the luck to be shown some of these precious dolls, but they are offered for sale only at the proper season.

WILL SAVE MANY LIVES.

Lungmotor Restores Many Apparent Deaths.

A wonderful contrivance which provides a method of preventing deaths of hundreds of persons annually overcome by inhaling gas, by drowning or electric shock has been brought from Germany by officials of the United States Bureau of Mines and made a part of the equipment of all of the government's mine-rescue cars.

Where there is a spark of life left in the body this machine, which is known as a pulmotor, or lungmotor, will restore the victim by causing the natural movements of inhalation and exhalation, at the same time giving a carefully measured supply of oxygen to the lungs.

Officials of the Bureau of Mines report that during the brief time the machine has been in use by this Government fifteen men have been restored who apparently were dead.

A New Anecdote About King George

One bank holiday some few years ago the King, Queen Mary and their little daughter Princess Mary, were motoring in the neighborhood of Windsor, when they came upon the scene of a strange accident. A party of holiday folk had hired a landau to enjoy a drive in the country, and all had gone well until within a short distance of Windsor Park. Then, by some mischance, the horse had caught one of its hind legs in the front of the carriage with such force that it seem inextricable.

The occupants had scrambled out in terrified haste, fearful lest the poor animal's frantic efforts to free itself should capsize the vehicle. Its wild plunges were fruitless, and it fell to the ground exhausted, its foot still imprisoned. The driver and his fares exchanged exclamations of dismay, and eyed the smart motor car bearing down upon them with cynical uncertainty as to the view its occupants would take of this predicament of commonplace bank holiday makers. With the courage of despair, however, the driver held up his hand as a signal of distress, apparently determined to believe that human hearts might be found even under the disguise of aristocratic motorists.

The car slowed down; its dignified owner stepping out. Approaching the disconsolate-looking driver with a cheery manner that promised much, he said, sympathetically: "You have a nasty accident, I see." "You're right, sir," responded the man, shaking his head dismally, but with a gleam of hope creeping into his eyes at the kindly tone. "It beats me to know how we are to right things."

The noble stranger cast a comprehensive glance over the scene—the prostrate horse—the damaged carriage—the disappointed pleasure seekers standing helplessly around. Then he spoke in a brisk, business-like tone that put courage into all.

"If you will just follow my directions," he said, "we will try and extricate this poor creature," and turning to his chaffauer he bade him bring the tools belonging to the car.

Off went the motorist's long coat, and with a sailor's ready wit and skill our Sailor Prince set to work, while his wife and little daughter left the car and joined the small crowd which had gathered to watch with them the results of his efforts.

The tools, however, were found inadequate to the task; something stronger was needed. What was to be done? The difficulty was met in a way which made the byestanders wonder who the stranger could be, for, calling a man, he directed him to go to the park lodge and there make known his requirements. Evidently he must be well known at the palace to venture on such a step as that.

The necessary tools were brought; the frightened horse was set free; but it lay panting and trembling, exhausted almost to death. In vain willing but ignorant hands sought to raise it; the poor creature was powerless to respond. At this fresh crisis the noble carpenter assumed a fresh role—that of veterinary surgeon. "Water!" he commanded promptly; "bring me a pail of water"; and when it was brought it was from his compassionate hand the refreshing stream was poured upon the fainting animal's head, the result being that in a very short time it revived and was able to struggle to its feet.

Meanwhile the driver stood sadly contemplating the half-wrecked carriage, for the horse's hoof had been literally cut out of the woodwork. What sort of a reception could he expect from his employer at the livery stables?

Just then a Guardsman came in sight cycling along the road. He glanced with indifferent curiosity at the little crowd gathered around the scene of the late disaster, until his eye fell upon the motor car. Then his expression suddenly changed to one of vivid interest. Leaping from his machine he looked searchingly around and caught sight of the motorist just as he turned towards him. He saluted with a promptitude and reverence that made the byestanders stare in greater astonishment than ever. The Royal Guardsman received some command, and, saluting again with profound respect, remounted his bicycle and rode off in haste towards Windsor. His errand was not discovered till later. But the mystery of the motorist's identity was cleared up before the Guardsman was out of sight.

The stranger, having completed his self-imposed task, once more donned the long grey coat, and, going up to the coachman as he stood a little aloof, his amazement struggling with the thanks he found himself powerless to utter, the Prince held out his hand, saying with a genial smile:

"Accept a little present from the Prince and Princess of Wales."

Then, before the recipient could finally recover from his bewilderment, the Prince had stepped into his car, where his wife and daughter were already seated, and had glided off. The byestanders, however, had taken in the situation, and they cheered wildly, again and again, congratulating themselves on their good fortune which had made this bank holiday a red letter day to them for the rest of their lives.

But more good fortune was in store for the coachman, for when he arrived at the livery stables, he was surprised to find his master on the look-out for him; but supposing that already his mishap had become known through wayside tattlers, he approached with a dismal apprehension of impending fate, which even the remembrance of a Prince's kindness and generosity could not dissipate. For it, as seemed certain, he should receive his dismissal, even the Prince's gift would not go far towards alleviating the consequences.

It was at this moment that he discovered what had been the errand on which the Prince had sent the Royal Guardsman. Incidentally, also, he discovered something of the depths of that kingly heart. Not content with rendering "first aid" to man and beast on the spot, the Prince had bethought him of the coachman's future. With the foresight of a naval commander he had sent word to his employer that he had been in no way to blame for the unfortunate accident, and that his character as a driver was not thereby impugned.

This certificate from the Prince of Wales naturally reversed his position in the eyes of his master, and no doubt he was regarded in the light of a hero. The injury to the carriage, too, was overlooked in the happy realization that the life of the four-legged hero had been saved, and that by royal skill and kindness.

It was fitting that this charming story of our present gracious king should be revised at this juncture, for it assures us that the lustre of the Imperial Crown, which has since descended to him, will remain undiminished, since he has proved himself so staunch an upholder of the noble traditions of his house, that "Mercy becomes the throned monarch better than his crown."—Cactus, in the Ladies' Field.

RADIUM CLUE TO CANCER.

Secret May Be Unearthed By London Physicians.

While it is not yet possible to say that a cure for cancer has been found, some very tangible results have been obtained from the experimental work of which the Middlesex (England) Hospital is the chief London centre. Here cancer re-search is chiefly concerned with the remarkable fact that human tissues contain varying quantities of radium-like substances and that there appears to be some connection between the presence of these and the origin of cancer. It is well known that radium and its congeners give off X-rays, and those rays, under certain circumstances, are known to lead to the production of cancer. Hence, it has been suggested at the Middlesex, according to the medical correspondent of a London paper, that the secret of cancer is probably to be found in the occasional overcharge of certain tissues with radium-like manner, for under such circumstances surrounding parts would be subjected to the continuous action of tiny doses of X-rays, which, although minute, might in the course of time, be able to exert their cancer-producing effect. It will be remembered that it is only when human tissues are exposed for a very long time—say, for many hours a day and months at a time—that they are able to bring about such a result.

Up to the present time a number of important facts have been discovered which appeared to confirm this view, and it is not improbable that this remarkable and lengthy investigation will eventually throw light on many of the obscure problems which surround the cancer question. Although no startling or sensational deductions have yet been made in the laboratories, a vast number of facts are being steadily accumulated in regard to this connection between radium and cancer, which, no doubt, will some day be made to fit into their proper place in a new theory of the cause of the disease.

One important advance that has lately been made at the Middlesex is the discovery of certain tiny granules in normal tissue-cells, which are not found in cancer-cells, and it is hoped that this discovery may ultimately lead to a valuable method of settling the question as to whether any growth of doubtful appearance is cancerous or not.

NERVOUS DISEASES IN THE SPRING

Can be Removed by Toning Up the Blood, Thus Strengthening the Nerves

Nervous diseases are more common and more serious in the spring than at any other time of the year. This is the opinion of the best medical authorities after long observation. Vital changes in the system after long winter months may cause much more than "spring weakness," and the familiar weariness and achings. Official records prove that in April and May neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy and various forms of nerve disturbances are at their worst, especially among those who have not reached middle age.

The antiquated custom of taking purgatives in the spring is useless, for the system really needs strengthening, while purgatives make you weaker. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have a special action on the blood and nerves, for they give strength and have cured not only many forms of nervous disorders, but also other spring troubles, such as headaches, weakness in the limbs, loss of appetite, trembling of the hands, as well as unsightly pimples and skin troubles. They do this because they actually make new, rich, red blood, which means a return to perfect health.

QUEEN MARY'S TASTES.

Her Fund of General Information is Remarkable.

Queen Mary is before all else a perfect wife and mother. But it strikes one that perhaps too much stress has been laid on her domesticity. At least scant mention seems to be made of many of her other characteristics, says the Queen.

The Queen's education was wide and deep and her fund of general information is remarkable. She has always been a great reader and books of travel, history and biography are seldom missed. In fact, few ladies have a better knowledge of English literature. Then like most royalties the Queen is a first rate linguist and speaks and writes several languages with ease and fluency.

Queen Mary in her early days rode well and Princess Mary inherits this taste and has become a fine horsewoman. But her Majesty never went with the hounds and is now seldom seen on horseback. Nor does she shoot, fish or play golf or tennis like several of her royal relations. And yachting for yachting's sake is by no means among the Queen's favorite amusements.

In fact she cares little for the more daring sports and games, but will sometimes play croquet and often goes for long walks with her children and a lady in attendance. And she dances extremely well and with evident enjoyment.

A GOOD MEDICINE FOR THE BABY

Baby's Own Tablets is the one medicine that can be given little ones with the firm knowledge that nothing but good will result. The Tablets are sold under the guarantee of a government analyst to contain no opiate nor any other drug which will harm the youngest child—they cannot possibly do harm; they always do good, and once a mother has used them she will never again give her little ones castor oil or the "soothing" stuffs which simply drug baby into temporary relief and in the end do harm. Mrs. Phillias Paradis, Frampton, Que., writes: "Send me two more boxes of Baby's Own Tablets. I have used them for constipation and have always found them very good. My baby is certainly progressing under the Tablets." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BIGGER BATTLESHIPS.

Naval Architects Say the Limit Has Not Been Reached.

The British Society of Naval Architects has been discussing the size of battleships and inclines to the opinion that the limit has by no means been reached. The discussion brought out the ratio of growth in England. Battleships have increased in the last ten years 60 per cent. in displacement, 35 per cent. in length, 17 per cent. in breadth. In speed more than two knots an hour has been gained, and the weight of metal discharged in a broadside has made the amazing growth from 4,000 to 12,000 pounds.

Considering the matter of cost, it was said that two of the newest vessels could be built for about the price of three of the earlier and smaller pre-Dreadnought type. The two modern vessels would, however, take into action a main armament one-third greater than that of the three small vessels combined, and their working cost and expensiveness in maintainance and repairs would be less. From these considerations Professor J. J. Welch thought the policy of building big ships was justified. The unsettled question, one which naval officers could best answer, he said, was whether ships of still greater size would not prove an advantage.

Professor G. H. Biles said the classic dictum used to be that "only numbers could annihilate," but it was now antiquated. One Dreadnought could have annihilated Nelson's fleet at Trafalgar and for the matter of that the French and Spanish ships to boot. He was far from believing that the battleship limit had been reached in vessels of 28,000 or 30,000 tons.

NO PLACE FOR UNDERTAKERS

There is at least one spot in the world where everybody is happy, prosperous and well. The only people who don't get on there are chemists, doctors and undertakers. In the village of Cobena, near Madrid, Spain, disease and death are practically unknown. Two years ago, the local chemist, in despair, gave up the sale of drugs, and took to selling sweet stuffs and confectionery. As there hadn't been a death for eight years, half the cemetery has been turned into a pleasure garden, and the undertaker has fled the place. The doctor, who had been living for years on his capital, hoping against hope, recently decided to emigrate. The inhabitants generously decided to raise a subscription to help him on his way; but, no—he would not accept charity from those who had so persistently declined to oblige him in the usual way.

WHALES IN A QUARREL.

A remarkable incident has taken place on the coast of Perkins Island (North Tasmania), no fewer than thirty-seven monster whales having been stranded there. The whales, among which there was only one cow, quarrelled, and in chasing the female entered the shallows. All attempted to jump backward into deep water, only to fail in every effort. As the tide receded the huge animals were left floundering on the sands, in which they half buried themselves in their struggles. Unable to help themselves they perished in a short time. A number of persons who saw the spectacle formed a syndicate with a capital of $1,500 to recover the ambergris from the carcases. They have already obtained 3,000 pounds of the valuable commodity.

CANNOT FAIL TO INTEREST WOMEN

ALBERTA LADY TELLS OF HER CURE BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Was weak, nervous, run-down and suffering from Rheumatism — Dodd's Kidney Pills made her a new person.

Beauvallon, Alta., May 1 (Special).—Women who are nervous, run down and suffering from Rheumatism, cannot fail to be interested in the case of Miss Gertrude E. Reyome of this place. She was exactly in that condition. To-day she is as she puts it herself "a new person." Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her. Here is her statement given for publication:

"My Kidney Disease started from a cold two years ago. Rheumatism set in, and I was weak and nervous, and in a run down condition. I was attended by a doctor who did not appear to understand my case. Three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made a new person of me."

Is not Miss Reyome's condition an exact description of nine-tenths of the ailing women of Canada? The doctor did not understand her case. It was simple enough. It was Kidney Trouble. And Kidney Disease is the one great cause of women's troubles. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure it.

WHY SHE CRIED.

A tender-hearted little girl was looking at a picture of Daniel in the lions' den. She suddenly began to cry, whereupon her mother said:

"Are you crying for the poor man, dearie?"

"No; I'm crying for that little lion over there in the corner. He isn't going to get any at all."

YOUNG BUT WISE.

In a school in a Western Ontario town is a little girl who has not taken pluckily to the mysteries of addition. "One'n one?" asked the teacher, while putting the class through the easiest of the addition tables. The little girl referred to was the only person in the class who couldn't give the answer. "Two'n one?" asked the teacher. The little girl smiled confidently, put up her hand and when noticed by the teacher, said, "Shoe polish."—From Toronto Canadian Courier.

"Well, here I am," announced the fashionable physician in his breezy way. "And now, what do you think is the matter with you" "Doctor I hardly know," murmured the fashionable patient. "What is new?"

CLAIMED OLD RIGHT.

On a recent Sunday some 3,000 people assembled near High Wycombe, Bucks., England, to assert what they believe to be their right to use a certain footpath which leads to Roundabout Wood. Efforts have been made to close this, and the footpath and the adjoining land have been plowed up. After a meeting, the 3,000 marched in pairs over the plowed ground to make a quarter mile long footpath.

ISSUE NO. 18—11.

JAPAN IN COMMERCE.

Destined to be a Manufacturing and Shipping Country.

The Japanese recognize that their argricultural resources are limited on account of the peculiar topographical and climatic features of the country. The agricultural land has been subjected to intense culture for centuries and cannot be improved much more. The empire is thus precluded from becoming an important contributor to the world's food supplies. It will do well if it can manage to produce sufficient food products for its own use. When the population increases it will necessarily become dependent upon foreign countries for food. Consequently, the administrators have for some years aimed at making Japan a manufacturing and shipping country. They have taken England as a model in doing this. Japan is not nearly so well endowed with natural resources as England is, but the progress lately made in developing Japan's shipping and manufacturing industries is remarkable.

It is almost essential for a nation aspiring to rank well among the great manufacturing peoples to command extensive resources of coal, iron, salt, the alkalies, petroleum, limestone, and clays. Japan, fortunately, possesses an abundance of such resources and is therefore naturally equipped for becoming what her political leaders are striving for—the leading manufacturing and trading country in the Orient.

Japanese mines are generally well worked and equipped with machinery. Good and efficient metallurgical works exist for the treatment of metallic ores close to the mines. Japanese engineers have shown a good aptitude for mining and metallurgical work and they have been well backed up by local capitalists. There is every reason for the belief that the remarkable progress made in the development of the empire's mineral resources during the past decade will be continued and that this steady improvement will powerfully contribute to the working out of the national ideals of the Japanese people.—Engineering Magazine.

BRANDING CRIMINALS.

The branding of criminals, which Judge Rentoul sugests might be advantageously revived for the benefit of deported aliens, was abolished in England in 1778, says the Pall Mall Gazette. Until then, this punishment was inflicted in open court, generally in the presence of the judge, the necessary implements—the iron brand, the chafing dish and the iron gripper for keeping the hand steady—being always in readiness. The usual brand was an "R" applied to the left shoulder. Child stealing, &c., however, were at one time punished by branding the offender with "R" on the shoulder (for rogue), "M" on the right hand (for manslayer), and "T" on the left hand (for thief).

MOTHERS!
DO YOU KNOW —

That when you put a salve onto your child's skin, it passes through the pores and enters the blood, just as surely as if you put it into the child's stomach?

You would not put a coarse mass of animal fat, colored by various mineral poisons (such as many crude salves are) into your child's blood by way of the stomach? Then why do so by way of the pores?

Take no risk. Use always the pure herbal essences provided in Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk contains no trace of any animal oil or fat, and no poisonous mineral coloring matter. From start to finish it is purely herbal.

It will heal sores, ulcers, abscesses, eruptions, varicose ulcers, cuts, burns and bruises more quickly than any other known preparation. It is antiseptic, quickly stops the smarting of a sore or cut, cures piles, inflamed sores and blood-poisoning. It is a combination of healing power and scientific purity. Ask those who have proved it.

THURSDAY, MAY. 4, '11

Sixty-five bars closed on Saturday night in Ontario, as a result of Local Option contests of January last. There are also several others that have but three months more in which to do business.

Last week the Editor of the Mitchell Advocate, Mr. W. R. Davis, started in on his 52nd year of business as publisher of the journal. Of the men and firms in business in Mitchell when he started, not one remains. Our fraternal congratulations and best wishes are extended to Brer Davis.

Daniel McGillicuddy, of dredging fame and who more recently became famous for driving the "Eye Opener" out of business, is now said to be the man who has threatened to hand proofs of the boodling of a cabinet minister over to the opposition if Sir Wilfred does not dismiss the minister. It may not be Dan, but it listens like him.

Could anything be more disgusting than the average hennery at this season of the year; Many henneries are not cleaned from fall until spring, and then from spring to fall again. Disease germs, and lice are given every opportunity to play havoc with the flock. This is particularly true in the warm summer months, as during the winter the temperature is too low for bacterial and insect growth to make rapid headway. The thorough cleansing of the hen house and the liberal use of whitewash would be time well spent. During the summer, if possible, the hen house should be whitewashed two or three times and cleansed every few days.

CREDITON.

Jack Frost's sudden re-appearance has put a set back to the spring growth The fine weather the past week was the means of having our farmers do their seeding, and our townsmen their gardening. SKIN SUFFERER TRIED EVERYTHING—THEN D. D. D. CURED

This was the experience of Mrs. Geo. Newman of orangeville, Ont. She wrote in January, 1910,

"I was terribly troubled with eczema on my face, neck and hands for four years. I tried everything I had heard tell of, then saw your advertisement in the paper, sent for a trial bottle of D.D.D., used it on my face and got well. It is now two years and no return of the eczema. I consider I am cured and it certainly was a blessing to me."

No matter how terribly you suffer from eczema, salt rheum, ringworm or any other skin disease, you will feel instantly soothed and the itch relieved at once when a few drops of this compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, Glycerine, etc., is applied. The cures all seem to be permanent, too.

For free trial bottle of D. D. D. write the D.D.D. Laboratories, Dept. E. A., 49 Colborne St., Toronto.

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE;

OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

Dorothy was disappointed beyond expression, and Mrs. Darnley was annoyed. It hurt her to think that any woman should have such power over her son, and that he should have gone without a word or sign to her; a sense of vexation, too, mingled in with her satisfaction in that she was effectually parted from that designing girl, vexation new to her proud nature in more senses than one.

It was from Baines that Nancy learned of Darnley's departure, and, though her face made no sign, she felt a wave of relief pass through her; it would not be so difficult to bear now he was gone, she told herself. The torture of seeing him day after day, reading his utter contempt and disgust, would have been too great.

The maid imparted the news very cheerily; but her sharp eyes were not to be deceived by any acting, however good. She had grown very fond of Nancy, and, woman-like, she had conjured up a romance for the girl in which Derrick Darnley took a prominent part.

They would make a handsome pair, she had determined over and over again, as she had watched Nancy walk across the grass, the sun glinting her russet curls, the sky above not bluer than her eyes. Any one could see Miss Hamilton was a lady born, and she was as sweet as she was beautiful. There might be a double wedding, for all they knew, when the Earl of Merefield led Miss Dorothy to the altar.

But all these dreams vanished when Baines beheld Nancy's white face, and told her that Mr. Darnley had gone away; gone for good he had, so Foster said. Something had happened, and when Baines knew what that something was she was thunderstruck with horror.

"It ain't natural!" she cried, to her fellow servants; "and she'll break her heart, see if she don't."

"If it ain't already broke," observed old Foster, shrewdly. "Don't Miss Dorothy take on, too; I never see two such pretty faces so changed. Lord 'a' mercy on us, what does a nice young woman like that want a-marryin' that beast; like enough he'll kick her as he did poor Zoe."

And at this notion Baines turned pale with horror.

"I wish I might go with her when she goes," she thought to herself; but she said nothing to either her young mistress, who had grown strangely quiet or constrained, or to Nancy, when she went in to help the girl dress for dinner. It was Baines, and Baines alone, who noticed how wan and weary Miss Hamilton was becoming. She knew just how much value to put on the red patches which decorated the fair young cheeks; she knew that it was no amount of heat which brought the dark circles round those blue eyes. Her heart beat in sympathy with the girl's, though she said nothing; she noticed the quick, hungry look that came in Nancy's face when Dorothy's voice sounded outside or her step came on the stairs—Dorothy, who used to rush in every other moment laughing and romping, but who never came near the room now, and, indeed, rarely addressed Nancy at all.

For Dorothy was simply overwhelmed with grief and disappointment. She had to listen, day after day, to bitter remarks about Nancy Hamilton, and hear her summed up as mercenary, heartless and ungrateful, knowing all the while she could not contradict the slander.

"I tried to make her happy, and I failed," she used to say to herself; "she wants more than we can give her—with that man she will have every luxury possible—that is why she is going. If she had not told me herself it was her own wish, I would never have believed it; and even now she is longing to be gone. She never comes near me. Oh! Nancy! and I loved you so dearly!"

Well was it for Nancy she was spared these laments, or her burden would have been still heavier! It was a horrible time—a living nightmare! She shrank from mingling with the flow of guests, yet she was compelled to do so; and all the time she was conscious of Dorothy's changed face, Sir Humphrey's astonishment and undisguised regret, Mrs. Darnley's contemept, and the curiosity bestowed on her by all the rest. Awful as the future seemed, the present was to her more terrible, and she grew to long for the moment when she could escape all this, even though in that escape she found herself Crawshaw's wife.

The marriage was to be immediately—the first week in September—and Dorothy had one interview alone with Nancy when this was announced.

"I have written and asked Madam Celeste to come to us here, Nancy," she said, gently. "She will take the whole of your trousseau in hand. No—no, please"—as Nancy's pale lips opened to speak—"please do not deny me this one pleasure. I entreat you, for the sake of the love and friendship that once existed between us, to allow me to act toward you as I should act to a sister."

Nancy's eyes were blinded by tears. She bent and kissed Dorothy's hand.

"Do as you will, dear. I accept," she said, in choked, miserable tones.

Dorothy grasped her hands.

"Nancy!" she began, eagerly. Was the moment come when Nancy would throw aside this horrible mystery that hung over her actions? She waited almost breathlessly, but the other girl made no sign, and, with a deep-drawn sigh, Dorothy moved to the door and went out.

If she could but have heard the moan that broke from Nancy's overcharged heart, and seen her arms outstretched in an abandonment of tenderness, she would have been happier than she had been ever since that memorable night; but seeing, knowing nothing of this, she remained in the same state of disappointed pain—a pain that was not lessened by the triumphant expression on her Aunt Priscilla's and her Aunt Anne's respective faces; they said as plainly as though the words were written there:

"This comes of quixotic kindness! Ah! we always knew that girl would turn out badly."

And to Dorothy, in her simple truth, it seemed as if she must, against all love and loyalty, agree with this, for she felt that Nancy must be sacrificing her very soul to gain this man's money.

Mrs. Darnley watched the rift widen between these two girls with intense satisfaction.

"Once married, Dorothy will have done with her for ever."

And Nancy, alone in here room, the night before her wedding morn, with none but the stars to shine in on her solitude, spread her arms and bowed her head upon them.

"Only give me strength to bear it all!" was her prayer. "Oh, Father, above, do not Thou desert me utterly."

CHAPTER XV.

It must not be imagined that Nancy had calmly accepted Crawshaw's statement concerning her uncle as complete and final. She had received a letter from Henry Chaplin, as we know, giving here a rather incoherent account of his crime, and imploring her, by everything she held sacred, to save him from dishonor and open shame; but when the first sharpness of the blow had worked off, Nancy set about procuring further information from her uncle.

She found it very hard in her own mind to reconcile the thought of Henry Chaplin with so mean and base an act; and thought she could not deny the authenticity of his letter, yet she could not crush down a strange suspicion and doubt that Crawshaw was deceiving her somehow in this matter.

When the first week of her most miserable and comfortless engagement had passed, Nancy wrote to Dr. Grantley.

She dwelt but briefly on her present position, but asked him many questions about her uncle—always, of course, repressing anw mention of his crime—and ended by saying how glad she would be if Dr. Grantley would prevail on Henry Chaplin to come down to Ripstone village and see her, if only for a few moments.

The answer to this letter arrived the night preceding her marriage.

Dr. Grantley had been abroad, hence the long silence.

Her old friend wrote his congratulations on her good fortune; but they did not sound altogether sincere, for he was in reality astounded at the news, knowing, as he did, how the girl had loathed and detested her future husband when he had been simple Thomas Moss, of the timber yard. Then he went on to say that, immediately on receipt of Nancy's letter, he had gone in search of her uncle, only to find, greatly to his astonishment, that the little grocer's shop was empty, and that the Chaplin family had gone away, some said to America, some to Australia; but no one quite knew where.

"The neighbors hint at some pecuniary trouble which lately befell your uncle," Dr. Grantley wrote, "and are of opinion that he was compelled to go away. Of course, my dear child, you may rely on my doing all in my power to discover his whereabouts, however difficult a task it may prove to be. I only regret that I was not at home when this crisis, whatever it was, came upon him, poor man. I had a strong feeling of friendship for Henry Chaplin, and I pitied him from the bottom of my heart; he was an honest and honorable gentleman, and must ever remain so, despite a hundred grocer's shops."

And with a few more kind and affectionate words to herself, the letter ended.

Nancy's heart beat with a sudden hurriedness as she read that simple testimony to her uncle's truth and honor, but the faint gleam of pleasure did not last long.

Her uncle was gone, flown to distant lands, without a word or sign. What further proof of his guilt was necessary

To Nancy this news dropped the last stone to the barrier that stood irrevocably between her and happiness; it was enough, and her final hope, faint and feeble though it had been, was killed entirely.

The night before her marriage! What a dark, close, sombre night it was!

One by one the glittering stars faded out of the gloomy, clouded sky, and the sound of pattering rain on the leaves outside reached the girl's ears as she sat keeping her lonely, miserable vigil until morning broke. She was very weary, but sleep was impossible to her. Her hot, sad eyes went round the dainty room. How dear, how inexpressibly dear, it looked to her! Here had been spent the happiest moments of her young life, such moments as she could not understand now, they seemed so far away, as if they had belonged to some other creature—not to her, poor, helpless, hopeless Nancy!

She was tired of thinking, tired of dwelling on the past—the future she would not even let enter her thoughts; she shivered with dread and fear at the bare mention of the word.

She was such a poor, young creature to fight against so many and hideous difficulties.

"Oh, if I could only open my heart to her!" she cried, as Dorothy crept into her mind; "if I might only tell her all and hold her clasped in my arms, it would be almost happiness. She would know then I am not the worldly, mercenary, ungrateful creature she must think me now. She would sympathize with me, and heal my aching wounds with her sweet love; it is the very hardest of all that I must be misjudged, that I must watch them growing cold and hard toward me, and yet never move my lips to tell them my story. Perhaps if he were to know, he would be less cruel in his anger. Derry! oh, Derry! my dear heart, my lost love!"

The rain fell steadily outside, weeping, as it were, for her wrecked youth and gladness. The cool, damp night air stole in through the open window to greet her with a chilly touch, the clock from the tower chimed the quarters and the hours, and she still sat on, crouched in her chair, battling with her grief with all her strength, and longing with a dumb, great longing that it might end even by death, she cared not how, so that she might be free.

* * * * *

The morning broke radiant after the torrents of rain that had fallen in the night.

Ripstone Hall and Ripstone village were awake early, and busy preparations commenced with an eagerness that bespoke excitement.

And is not a wedding always an excitement, come when it may? Of course, there would have been considerably more of this had the bride been Miss Dorothy, their golden-haired mistress and idol; but as it was, there was a good briskness prevailing, and every one had a kind wish for Nancy, who had endeared herself to all with her quick sympathy and generosity.

Sir Humphrey and Dorothy were determined on doing everything as well as it could be done, despite the very disagreeable remarks passed on their folly by Lady Merefield, and the sneers with which Mrs. Darnley watched the proceedings.

"It is scandalous," the Countess of Merefield declared; "there could not be more fuss or expense if Dorothy herself was going to be married; it is passing all comprehension! What claim has this girl upon them that they should make fools of themselves about her in this way? She is a very lucky person, and it would have been more becoming altogether had she gone to church simply, without all this show and noise."

Do not be in too much of a hurry to force a horse's coat to shed in the spring.

Forced shedding exposes the new hair before it is ready to come to the surface and it quickly becomes dry and harsh.

A mule seldom gets sick more than once and he generally dies then.

More mules die of accident and old age than from disease.

A horse that brings $300 at three years of age pays as well or better than any other animal on the farm.

$3,600 in Cash Prizes for Farmers

Tell Us How You Did It

You may win a prize by doing so

SUPPOSE your friend Bob Wilson, on the next concession, "pulled up" at your front gate on the way back from market and asked about that silo or barn foundation you built, you would be glad to tell him, wouldn't you? And it wouldn't take you long, either, would it? And, as a matter of fact, you'd find as much pleasure telling him as he would in listening—isn't that right?

First you would take him over to view the silo or barn foundation. Then you would start to describe it—its dimensions—the kind of aggregate used—the proportions of cement used—number of men employed—number of hours' working time required—method of mixing—kind of forms used—method of reinforcing, if any—and finally, what the job cost. So that by the time you finished, neighbor Wilson would have a pretty accurate idea of how to go about building the particular piece of work which you described.

Now couldn't you do the same for us, with this difference—that you stand a good chance of getting well paid for your time?

In Prize "D" of our contest, open to the farmers of Canada, we offer $100.00 to the farmer in each Province who will furnish us with the best and most complete description of how any particular piece of concrete work shown by photograph sent in was done. The size of the work described makes no difference. The only important thing to remember is that the work must be done in 1911 and "CANADA" Cement used.

In writing your description, don't be too particular about grammar or spelling or punctuation. Leave that to literary folk. Tell it to us as you would tell it to your neighbor. What we want are the facts, plainly and clearly told.

Sounds simple, doesn't it? And it is simple. And surely it is well worth your while when you think of the reward in view.

Now sit right down, take your pen or pencil—fill out the attached coupon—or a post-card if it's handier—and write for the circular which fully describes the conditions of this, the first contest of the kind ever held in Canada.

Every dealer who handles "CANADA" Cement will also be given a supply of these circulars—and you can get one from the dealer in your town, if that seems more convenient than writing for it.

Contest will close on November 15th, 1911—all photos and descriptions must be sent in by that date, to be eligible for one of these prizes. Awards will be made as soon as possible thereafter. The decisions will be made by a disinterested committee, the following gentlemen having consented to act for us, as the jury of award: Prof. Peter Gillespie, Lecturer in Theory of Construction, University of Toronto; Prof. W. H. Day, Professor of Physics, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph; and Ivan S. Macdonald, Editor of "Construction."

Having decided to compete for one of the prizes, your first step should be to get all the information you can on the subject of Concrete Construction on the Farm. Fortunately, most of the pointers that anyone can possibly need, are contained in our wonderfully complete book, entitled "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete." A large number of Canadian farmers have already sent for and obtained copies of this free book. Have you got your copy yet? If not, you'd better send for one to-day. Whether you are a contestant for one of our prizes or not, you really ought to have this book in your library. For it contains a vast amount of information and hints that are invaluable to the farmer.

Please send full particulars and book.

FOUR KILLED IN EXPLOSION

Drying House of Dominion Explosive Company Blown Up.

A despatch from Sand Point says: As the result of an explosion in the drying house of the Dominion Explosives Company, one and a half miles west of this place, a calamity which in cause and some of its results almost exactly duplicated that of a year ago in that same powder mills, four men were instantly hurled into eternity and about $700 damage was done to the property of the company. The explosion occurred at 12.10 on Thursday afternoon, and is said by the officials of the company to have been due to the ignition of a quantity of gas in the building where it took place. The dead are: Dominic Bennet, Westport, aged 22; William Brooks, Sand Point, aged 27; Joseph Mills, Popular, North London, England, aged 38; Horace McMullen, Ottawa, aged 20.

The catastrophe was one as sudden as it was terrible in its effects. Without anything that might in any way have given the unfortunate victims a warning the explosion came. The drying house was disintegrated in an instant and smashed into kindling wood, which strewed the surrounding landscape. William Brooks and Dominic Bennet were inside the building, Joseph Mills and Horace McMullen standing on its platform. The bodies of Bennet and Mills were blown into atoms, no trace of them having been found. Those of Brooks and McMullen were recovered, that of the latter being almost impossible to identify. Almost miraculously none of the other employes were injured, though near by.

Besides the complete destruction of the drying house, the sides of the nitrate rooms were staved in, as were the ends of the ice house and a storeroom. Where the drying house had been, nothing was left but a large hollow in the ground, the result of the downward action of the explosion.

SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

Advantages of Consolidation Strikingly Shown in Results of Maple Leaf Milling Company.

A special despatch from Toronto says: The success attending upon consolidation when carried out on sound business lines is strikingly shown by the results obtained by the Maple Leaf Milling Company during its first year. This Company represents a consolidation of the Maple Leaf Flour Mills Company, Limited, and the Hedley Shaw Milling Company, and its first annual report to be issued shortly will, it is said, show that the Company on its present mills has earned well beyond the dividend requirements of its preferred stock. This would leave the entire earnings from the new 6,000 barrel mill now nearing completion at Port Colborne to go towards the accumulation of a strong reserve fund and dividends on the common stock.

The attempt of the Montreal Street Railway employees to form a union was met by the company discharging twenty-five conductors and motormen.

A GREAT BUILDING BOOM

Month of March Shows Total of $9,805,560 Permits in Canadian Cities

A despatch from Toronto says: In the May number of Construction, the building situation in Canadian cities is reported to show an average gain for March of 8 per cent. over the corresponding period last year.

Apart from Winnipeg, where a decrease of 60 per cent. is noted, Ottawa, with a set-back of 38 per cent., and Lethbridge and London, with declines of 32 and 53 per cent. respectively, the situation is regarded as satisfactory.

Toronto's investment of $2,210,770, netting a gain of 39 per cent., reflects a state of enormous activity. In Vancouver, the work projected amounts to $2,147,798, as against $1,806,106 in the same period last year. Calgary, with $1,012,260, is 143 per cent. better than her previous corresponding month. Edmonton has a gain of 3 per cent., while Medicine Hat, in the same province, by an advance of 1,700 per cent., has the biggest proportionate increase noted in the list. Other Western gains are:—Victoria, 14 per cent.; Moose Jaw, 25 per cent., and Regina, 65 per cent., the investment in the latter place amounting to over half a million dollars.

In the province of Quebec, Montreal shows the same unremitting progress that has characterized her remarkable development during the past two years. Permits were issued for new work amounting to 1,107,577, as against $676,804 in the same period last year, the total noted being the third highest amount recorded for the month. East of these points, Halifax and Sydney are respectively in the arrear to the extent of 49 and 30 per cent., and St. John again fails to report.

CORONATION CONTINGENT

All the Members Must Assemble For Seven Days Drill and Instruction

A despatch from Ottawa says: Orders were issued on Wednesday regarding the Coronation contingent. The men will be paid in accordance with the rank they hold on the contingent, not the rank they hold in their own regiment. They will also be granted efficiency pay and field allowance. All the members of the contingent must assemble for seven days' drill and instructions at the depot of the arm of the service to which they belong, and for three days further at Quebec prior to embarkment for England.

The cavalry will assemble at Winnipeg, Toronto and St. John's, Que., on May 22. The field and horse artillery assemble at Kingston and the garrison artillery at Quebec. They assemble at Kingston on May 22 and at Quebec on May 23. All the dismounted corps will assemble at Quebec on May 23.

The officers will provide themselves with uniforms of the branch of service to which they belong. The non-commissioned officers and men will take theirs with them to the point of mobilization. All warrant officers and non-commissioned officers and men will receive a free issue of one suit of service clothing and two pairs of ankle boots.

The contingent will embark on June 2 on the S.S. Empress of Ireland from Quebec, and will leave Liverpool on the return trip on July 2 per S. S. Empress of Britain.

BANGOR, MAINE, FIRE SWEPT

Public Buildings and Churches Wiped Out —Six Million Dollar Loss.

A despatch from Bangor, Maine, says: Damage already estimated at nearly $6,000,000 has been caused by a fire which broke out in Bacon and Robinson's coal sheds on Broad Street, shortly after 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon. Two persons are known to have been killed and over 20 have been injured. Everything north of York Street, from Kenduskeag stream to the east side of Broadway, has been burned. Nearly all of the fine residences in the most exclusive section of the city as well as the post-office and all of the largest office and business buildings are in ruins. The First Congregational Church on Broadway, one of the oldest in the State; St. John's Episcopal, the Central Congregational, on French Street, and the Universal Church, are gone as are the Windsor Hotel and High School building. The Bangor Public Library with one of the most valuable collections of books in New England, is totally destroyed. Thousands are walking the streets homeless and destitute. Dynamite, powder, and thousands of cartridges in the L. Crosby Company's sporting goods store exploded. The electric lights are out, trolley cars are not running, and the telephone system is also out of commission.

More than a square mile wide of the business section of the city has been burned up. The City Hall somehow escaped the flames, although it stood directly in the path of the fire.

CANADA'S TRADE FOR YEAR

Exceeds $759,000,000, Nearly Double That of Ten Years Ago

A despatch from Ottawa says: Final figures of the trade of Canada during the past fiscal year show an increase of $81,952,200 in the total volume of imports and exports as compared with the preceding year. The aggregate for the year was $759,094,389, or nearly double the trade of ten years ago. Imports for the year totalled $461,898,024, an increase of $86,114,364. Exports of both domestic and foreign products totalled $297,196,365. Exports of domestic products totalled $274,361,553, a decrease of $4,894,984. Exports of foreign products totalled $22,879,812, an increase of about two and one-half millions. The exports of coin and bullion last year totalled $7,296,155, as compared with $2,594,536 for 1909-10. The exports, according to the principal products, were as follows:—Exports of the mine, $42,787,561, an increase of $2,700,000. Exports of agriculture, $82,601,284, a decrease of nearly eight millions. Exports of the forest, $45,439,057, a decrease of a little over two millions. Exports of manufactures, $35,283,118, an increase of nearly four millions. Exports of fisheries, $15,675,544, or practically the same as the preceding year. Exports of animals and their products $53,244,174, a decrease of a million and a half.

The Customs revenue for this year was $73,297,525, an increase of $12,287,033, or over twenty per cent.

SCHOOL TEACHERS KILLED

Three Known to Have Perished, Eight Others Believed to be Dead in Railway Wreck.

A despatch from Easton, Penn., says: Three persons lost their lives, eight are missing and believed to be dead, and half a hundred others were injured Saturday afternoon at Martin's Creek, N. J., in a wreck of an excursion train, carrying 170 school teachers and friends from Utica and Syracuse, N. Y., and vicinity to Washington, for a week's outing. The train was one furnished the teachers by the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western R. R., and the accident occurred while it was travelling at a high rate of speed over a stretch of track controlled by the Pennsylvania R. R. The locomotive jumped the track, the cars toppled over and were set on fire by exploding oil, the wrecked coaches having sidewiped an oil tank along the track when they left the rails.

The entire train was quickly enveloped in flames and completely consumed by the fire. The eight missing persons, seven of whom were women and lived in Utica, are believed to have been burned to death in the wreckage. The finding of charred bones led the railroad wrecking crews to the conclusion that they are dead. The cause of the wreck has not yet been ascertained. The place where the accident occurred had been undergoing repairs and unfinished work may have been responsible for the train leaving the track.

It looks as if the day was past when every little hamlet could boast of having a local paper. At least four papers in this part of Ontario have gone out of business somewhat recently—The Wroxeter Planet, the Harriston Tribune, the Gorrie Vidette, and now the Holstein Leader. These were not all new ventures, for the Vidette and the Tribune were long established businesses. Publishing a newspaper involves persistent labor to build up a successful business, and necessitates heavy expenses. With a limited field and keen competition, a popular paper and paying business are out of the question. —Whitham Advance.

The old spectacle racket was worked in town Thursday last by a glib tongued young man about twenty years of age. His mission, as usual, was to sell some useful household article—this time can openers—and before leaving would introduce the speciacle game. As he went from house to house his story was that he had just arrived from Centralia and while there had picked up from the street a pair of gold rimmed spectacles. He inquired and could find no owner and as they were of no use to him he would sell them cheap—a dollar. Those who bought will have a better idea of their "bargain" after wearing the spectacles a few days. Thus the old adage again applies, "a fool and his money soon parted."

BANK MATTERS

There have been no new developments in the liquidation of the Farmers Bank, but the curator states that, in accordance with the announcement made some time ago, the double liability will be exacted from the shareholders The present list shows that there are about 700 shareholders who will come under the double liability provision, and the amount that they will have to make good will approximate $500,000 Many of these are Ontario farmers.

An application intended to be made Friday for the appointment of a liquidator of the Sovereign Bank was withheld owing to the success of the proposed formation of a new company to take over the assets of the bank and preserve this charter. The chief difficulties have been the dilatoriness of the holders in extending support to the scheme, but this has been overcome. The Dresdner Bank, which was a considerable holder of Sovereign shares, agreed to the plan, and J. P. Morgan & Co. of New York, have also assented after a personal interview with Mr. Jemmett.

The crisis in the winding-up of the bank's affairs was produced by the demand of one bank for the payment of a loan made to the Sovereign in conjunction with other institutions at the time of failure.

WINCHELSEA

Death of Mrs. Heywood.—A particularly sad death occurred here on Thursday last, when the spirit of Mrs. Wesley Heywood took its flight, just as she was in the prime of life. For about six months Mrs. Heywood had been ailing from the effects of an internal growth, previous to which she had always been particularly robust and hearty, scarcely knowing what a day's sickness was, and giving promise of a long and useful life. In February last she underwent an operation at Victoria Hospital, London. The operation in itself was a success, but the nature of the trouble was serious, and from that time till death claimed her, she gradually wasted away. Deceased was a native of Usborne, being a daughter of Mr. Henry Francis, and her whole life was spent in that township. She was of a cheerful, happy disposition, a good wife, a kind and indulgent mother, and her early demise will be deeply regretted by the whole community. About 21 years ago she married her now bereft husband, and there were born to the happy union four daughters, Othello, Nellie, Della and Frances, all of whom survive. She also leaves to mourn her demise her father, three sisters, and two brothers—Mrs. Eli Heywood of Winchelsea, Mrs. Mills of Kirkton, Mrs. Woodley of Fullarton, Arthur of Usborne and one brother in the west. She was aged 45 years, 10 months, and 10 days. The funeral took place to the Kirkton cemetery on Saturday and was largely attended.

Miss Almena Heywood returned home Wednesday last from Fullarton after a pleasant visit with her aunt, Mrs. W. Woodley.—Miss Lilla Heywood returned from Bryanston on Thursday last.—Messrs. T. Coward and W. W. Kerr spent Saturday in London on business. —Messrs. Wellington Batten and Albert had an exciting experience on Sunday last. While out driving one shaft coupling broke, letting the shaft loose, and it hit the horse which broke into a run and upset the buggy, throwing the occupants out, then escaped with the shafts. Luckily the occupants of the buggy escaped with only a few bruises —On Saturday, while driving from Exeter Mr. John Hern, sr., his wife, and Mrs John Johns were thrown from the buggy while turning onto the St. Marys road. The horse escaped with the rig and badly demolished it.—Mrs. H. Francis left Monday for the St. Joseph Hospital, London, where she undergoes an operation on her knee, which has been troubling her for some time past.—Mrs. Thos. Durdle left Tuesday for St. Thomas to visit her son Francis and wife.

BREWSTER.

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE;

OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER XV.—(Cont'd)

A sentiment which poor Nancy herself most heartily endorsed. She had only ventured on one remonstrance to Dorothy, but as she saw that the girl had a strong wish that things should be as she had planned she gave way, sacrificing her own feelings and inclinations so that she might not add another disappointment for Dorothy to bear; it was sufficient pain to see the change that had come on the girl who had given her more than a sister's love, and to know that it was she, and she alone, who had brought that change. There was an end to all the dear little cozy chats and confidences now, an end to all.

But in all her pain and misery Nancy did not forget a single thing that might perchance give pleasure to Dorothy, and so she made no further protest to the mockery of wedding festivities when she saw the girl had some strong wish in the opposite direction to her own. To Sir Humphrey, Nancy rarely spoke now; she could not bear to read the surprise and disappointment on his kind face, and know that he, like all the rest, regarded her as worldly, ungrateful and contemptible.

"My wedding day!" murmured Nancy, as she staggered to her feet when the first bright touch of dawn crept into the sky, "the day that should have been the most beautiful of my life, and is the most terrible!"

She was faint and weak with long sitting; her limbs trembled beneath her weight; she half-faltered and fell. With great difficulty she made her way to the bed, groping for it like a blind creature; and, reaching it, she stumbled on to it, and immediately lost consciousness.

It might have been a swoon or only a deep, exhausted sleep that overcame her. Nancy never knew; but she remained like a log through the early morning hours, and never moved till a voice sounded in her ears and some one brushed back the heavy masses of hair from her hot brow.

It was Baines.

"Miss Nancy—come, Miss Nancy—rouse yourself, my dear. I have brought you a cup of coffee; it will do you more good than tea, miss. It's me—Miss Baines; don't look so frightened, my dear."

"Poor lamb—poor lamb!" was the hurried thought in the kind-hearted woman's breast, as she raised the girl tenderly and tried to make her comfortable. She was grieved and alarmed at Nancy's bloodless face and weakness; she had thought there was some trouble, but she did not guess it was so bad as this. It was no ordinary trouble that had left its traces on that bright young face.

"What—what time is it, Baines?" Nancy whispered, as she rested her head against the motherly shoulder. "Is—is it time?"

"To dress, miss? No, it's only just gone eight; but I had an idea you might like some coffee, miss, and so I brought it early. You've just time for an hour or so's quiet rest, if you want to take it. There, let me undress you, miss; you don't get no proper rest with your clothes on."

"Baines"—Nancy put her small, hot hand on to the woman's—"Baines, don't—don't tell——"

Baines understood her plainly; she did not wish Dorothy to know she had not been to bed all night.

"Lor' bless you, miss; in course not; not one shan't know nothin'. There, my dear, now lie still; drink up the coffee and shut your eyes, we mustn't have you a-faintin', must we?"

"I shan't faint," Nancy said, in weak, weary tones, as she obeyed the maid; then she put out both her hands, "Thank you, Baines; you are very—very good to me. I—I am grateful to you."

Tears sprang to the woman's eyes.

"Don't talk like that, Miss Nancy, don't!" she said hurriedly. "I'm not doing anything at all; it's a great pleasure to serve you, Miss Nancy, that it is. I only wish as how you was goin' to stay, miss."

Nancy turned her wan face toward the woman.

"Oh, Baines!" she said, eagerly, "if—if you could only come with me, I——" She forgot herself for one moment.

"Then I'll come, miss; yes, that I will. Now, don't you fret, miss I'll do it."

"But Miss Dorothy." Nancy began, feebly.

"There's Sarah, miss; she's Miss Dorothy's old nurse, and she have done far more for her nor I have ever done. Miss Dorothy will only be too glad to send me with you; she loves you so much, miss."

Nancy clung to the maid's roughened hand and burst into tears.

"Oh, Baines!—dear Baines!" she moaned.

No other complaint passed her lips, but Baines knew as well as if she had told her in words that the young girl's heart was broken.

"Don't—don't miss," she said, tears stealing down her own cheeks unconsciously. "It ain't for me to inquire into your trouble, Miss Nancy; but I ain't so blind I can't see you've got a grief; but only put your trust in me, miss—I won't fail you, and I'll do all in my power to comfort you and help you, miss. Now rest back and lie still. See, I will darken your blind; you don't need to think of dressing for another two hours—you don't take long."

Baines stole about softly, arranging and preparing everything as quietly as possible.

"You don't tell me she's marrying him for his money; there's something behind all this, or my name ain't Esther Baines," she muttered to herself; and then, with a parting glance at the girl, lying with white, set face, her breath coming in short, panting sobs from her overladen breast, she went quietly out of the room and sought Dorothy.

She found Miss Leicester out of bed, standing staring over the sunlit garden, with a sad, depressed look on her lovely countenance.

"Have you been in to Miss Hamilton yet, Baines?" she asked, waking with a start from her thoughts.

Baines hesitated; she longed to speak of what she had just seen, to have told Dorothy of the evident mental agony poor Nancy was enduring, but something restrained her, she scarcely knew what, save that she felt Nancy wished to keep her sorrow hidden, and from her girl friend more especially.

"I have been in, but I think I won't disturb her just yet, Miss Dorothy."

Dorothy glanced at the woman; her quick perception saw at once that all was not well with Nancy; and again that curious sensation which had visited her so often during the last few weeks, that Nancy was sacrificing herself for some mysterious reason, came over her.

She made a movement as if to run toward Nancy's room, and then she stopped.

"Do you think Miss Hamilton can see me, Baines?" she asked, hurriedly.

"Well, Miss Dorothy, I am sure she will see you, but"—Baines was busy unfolding the delicate cream-silk bridesmaid's dress destined for Dorothy's wear, and her face was hidden—"I think, miss, she will be better left alone."

"Baines," Dorothy checked herself; she stood lost in deep reflection; and while Baines wondered to herself when she should best broach the subject of her going with Nancy, and if her young mistress would be annoyed at the request, Dorothy's voice broke in on her musing, and, by some strange coincidence, she spoke on this very subject.

"Baines," she said, slowly, "I think I should like you to accompany Miss Hamilton as maid; she knows you, and trusts you, and—and I should be happier knowing you were with her; what do you say, Baines?"

And then Baines explained that she had come there on purpose to ask this very thing, and that if Miss Dorothy did not mind, she would like to go with Thomas Crawshaw's young wife when she left the Hall that day.

Dorothy's clear gray eyes met the maid's honest ones, and, though neither spoke, there was the same thought in the mind of each—that by doing this they would feel that Nancy had some protection and comfort in her forthcoming detestable marriage.

"See that your box is packed at once, Baines, and tell Mrs. Craven to pay that Frenchwoman who came down last night a month's wages, and let her go," said Dorothy quickly; and when she was once more alone she stood and gave way to her thoughts again.

The whole affair was a gigantic mystery to Dorothy—one that seemed impossible of being unravelled. She had credited Nancy, against her every wish and inclination, with being mercenary, wanting in affection and gratitude; and certainly Nancy's very cold and constrained manner, which had been so marked ever since the engagement was publicly pronounced, had gone far to force these unpleasant thoughts into actual truths. But as she stood alone on the very morning that was to see Nancy made a wife, Dorothy Leicester could not rid her mind of the feeling that she had terribly misjudged her girl friend, and almost sister, and that instead of condemning, she should be consoling—offering pity, not congratulations.

"Whatever it is, it is too late to change things now," she said to herself. "The die is cast, and Nancy must be that man's wife. May God help her, for she will be a miserable woman. With all his wealth, all his treasures, he is nothing more or less than a brute, without a mind, a brain or a heart. Well, if ever she should need a friend, she will find one in me. Poor Nancy! I—I did not think to lose her like this! She has been very dear to me, and she will be dear to me to the end."

Then Dorothy dashed away her fast-falling tears, rang her bell for Sarah, her old nurse, and began her task of beautifying herself for the occasion.

She had constituted herself sole bridesmaid; and though her whole spirit mutinied and rebelled against the marriage, she was determined to give her friend everything she herself would have when her wedding day arrived.

To please her, and out of compliment to Nancy, whom he sincerely liked, the Earl of Merefield offered his services to Mr. Crawshaw as best man; and the Hall was full of guests.

It was on the stroke of eleven when Dorothy at last ventured into Nancy's room.

The girl was standing erect and alone, with her bridal train sweeping the ground and her bridal veil shading her rich russet tresses and sweet, white face.

Dorothy waited a moment at the door. Nancy had not heard her come in, and there was a look on that still, set countenance which sent a pang to the other's warm, generous heart.

"Is there anything I can do for you?" she began, in a low, hurried voice; then, as their eyes met, she ran forward, with her hands outstretched. "Oh, Nancy! Nancy dear!" she cried, brokenly. "Come to my arms, Nancy, and kiss me!"

With a broken sob, Nancy turned, clasped the two small hands, and the next moment the two girls were clinging to one another, heedless of their rich finery, heedless of all save that they loved one another, and that the hour of their parting was at hand, a parting fraught with bitter pain.

"Dorothy, darling! you—you will think kindly of me!—you will forgive me——"

Nancy could get no farther; the words died away in a sob.

"Forgive! It is I who ask forgiveness of you. Oh, Nancy! how wicked, how blind, you must have thought me! I see now how I have misjudged you. Something terrible has happened! That man has got you in his power! Why did I not know that before? But it is not too late, Nancy—it is not too late, dear!"

Nancy clung to the slender form. Alas! she could not echo the hope that filled Dorothy's last words.

"Yes," she breathed, rather than spoke, "it is too late. Dorothy, you mustn't ask me any more; my lips are sealed. I—I never meant to let you see my misery; but when you came near me with your dear, dear arms, I could not help myself. Dorothy, my best my truest friend, may God bless you, and keep you always. Pray for me, Dorothy, for I shall need your prayers, I feel—I know. Kiss me, dearest, and go—go, or I—I shall break down, and I must not do that—I must not do that!"

She drew herself forcibly from Dorothy's hold, and almost pushed the girl from the room in her agitation and eagerness.

For one instant Dorothy resisted, then she caught a glimpse of Nancy's white, agonized face; and she knew that, struggle as she might, the fiat had come forth, and was irrevocable, and that to argue or urge her now would but be to strengthen her difficulty a hundredfold.

* * * * *

Ripstone village had plenty of gossip and chat about the grand wedding up at the Hall, and many were the words of admiration lavished on the bride and her beauty; while Miss Dorothy came in for her share too, though it was generally allowed that she did not look so well as usual, and that her eyes seemed as if they had been weary with much crying.

The local reporters wrote long, flowing accounts of the affair, and eulogized everything and everybody, and a stranger and onlooker would have imagined no two happier people existed in the whole world than Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Moss Crawshaw, the hero and heroine of the day.

A short but ample notice of the wedding appeared in the more fashionable of the daily newspapers, and thus it was that Derrick Darnley, standing on the deck of a Cunarder as it steamed out of the Mersey on its way to New York, read the end of his brief romance.

He had lingered on in England, hidden from his old friends and old haunts, ever since that night when the light and joy of life had been suddenly darkened for him—lingered, urged by a conflicting tide of hope and desperation; but now the struggle was over, and Nancy was gone from him for ever, he had determined to put the ocean between himself and his native country, for a time, at least.

"May she suffer some day as she has made me suffer," he muttered, bitterly, as he flung the newspaper on the polished deck and trod it under foot. "I will tear her memory out of my heart! I will be strong and forget her, for she is not worthy to be remembered!"

PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—bowels, kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up, the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For some time I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all dealers at 25c a box. 6

SAVED, SEALED, SENT.

II. Cor. 1: 12-22.

For this, O Lord, Thou didst appear
And unto needy ones draw near;
For this Thy days were spent.
For this Thou dost Thy blessing give,
That in Thy presence we may live
And saved and sealed and sent.

The sinless One, for us made sin,
Thou didst for this the victory win;
For this the veil was rent:
For this the Holy Spirit came,
That we should go in Thy great name
As saved and sealed and sent.

For this Thou dost bestow Thy grace,
And give us with Thine own a place
And shape our hearts' intent.
For this Thou dost reveal Thy light,
That we may go in Thy great might
As saved and sealed and sent.

For this, when fiercest foes appear,
Thou dost rebuke our needless fear
And so we dwell content:
For this Thou dost our burdens bear,
That we may in Thy service share
As saved and sealed and sent.

For this our needs are all supplied;
For this Thou dost our footsteps guide;
For this Thy word is meant:
For this Thy witnesses are we,
That we may always walk with Thee
As saved and sealed and sent.

Sustained by "everlasting strength"
We shall behold Thy face at length
And leave this earthly tent:
Then thankful shall we be to know
The joy of those who here below
Were saved and sealed and sent.

CHOICE OF AN EMPLOYER.

German Servant Girl Method of Selecting a Mistress.

A domestic servant at Heidelberg advertised for a position as cook and maid of all work, announcing that she would be glad to receive offers of employment in keeping with her special talents, writes a correspondent of the London Daily Mail. Forty-five replies reached her.

Forty were cast aside as unworthy of notice either because of insufficient wages or because the would be mistress lived in an "undesirable" locality or higher than the second story.

The five ladies on whom the servant decided to bestow her favor temporarily, received written notice that she would do herself the pleasure of calling on the succeeding Sunday between 2 and 4 o'clock.

She devoted the afternoon to informing herself as to the manner of living of each family, the regular periods at which rises in wages might be expected, the amount of entertaining done, the character and value of gratuities and presents customarily given to servants, how many free evenings a month were allowed and how long a summer holiday might be expected.

After imparting the desired information the ladies were informed that their offers would be taken into consideration and decision sent by post. Four of them got the following note next morning: "I regret to be compelled to inform you that my choice has not fallen upon you."

INSURANCE FOR WORKERS

Lloyd-George's Measure Compelling Protection for Certain Laboring Classes

A despatch from London says: David Lloyd-George, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, on Thursday introduced the long-promised plan of State insurance against unemployment, sickness and invalidity. Every worker whose annual earnings fall below the income tax level of £160 (approximately $800) will be compulsorily insured against illness so as to assure him the receipt of five shillings per week during his incapacity. Toward this the worker would contribute about one-half, the same being deducted from his wages, while the balance would be paid jointly by his employers and the State. The weekly assessment against the insured would be eight cents in the case of a man and six cents for a woman, representing, as the Chancellor put it, "two pints of ale or one ounce of tobacco." Every one in the class mentioned between the ages of 16 and 65 is included in the plan. The employers would pay six cents weekly for every employe and the Government contribute four cents for each of the insured.

Mr. Lloyd-George estimated that his plan would affect 14,700,000 men and women. Provision is made whereby women will receive thirty shillings in maternity cases on condition that they do not work for a month following child birth, and for free medical attendance for every contributor.

The state would also help in the crusade against consumption providing $7,500,000 to aid local authorities in building sanitariums and $5,000,000 towards their maintenance.

Although in cases of permanent disability the sick allowance would be five shillings weekly, ten shillings would be allowed for the first three months in the case of men and seven shillings six pence in the case of women.

Those who can be shown to have invited incapacity would receive no insurance, though any necessary medical treatment would be provided.

COURT MOURNING ENDED.

This Week Sees Opening of London Season's Festivities.

A despatch from London says: The period of mourning at Court being at an end, mourning was discarded on Sunday, and there will be an advent of brilliant costumes at this week's balls and dinners. The season's festivities have already commenced, and debutantes are rushing to luncheons, to dinners, to balls, and to bed just before dawn. King George, Queen Mary, Queen Alexandra, the Prince of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, and other members of the Royal Family attended a memorial service at Windsor on Saturday, on the first anniversary of the death of King Edward. Many friends of the late King were present and a great many wreaths were sent to the chapel. The Archbishop of Canterbury conducted the services.

THREW HIMSELF INTO RIVER.

Arthur Durocher Commits Suicide at Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: Arthur Durocher, aged 19, is said to have committed suicide by throwing himself into the river off the Thompson Line wharf on Friday. Constable Nadeau found a hard hat, in which was a Chinese laundry check, on the wharf Saturday. On the check was written the name "Arthur Durocher." Further inquiry showed that a sailor on the Frontenac had seen a young man throw himself into the river on Friday, and that the man had been swept away in the swift current. Durocher's father said that the young man had been drinking heavily and had left the house in a passion at noon on Friday, threatening to drown himself.

Feared That It May Spread Over a Wide Area.

A despatch from Kenora, Ont., says: A big bush fire is raging near the east end of Clearwater Bay, about 16 miles from here, and, with the very dry conditions that are at present existing, it may spread over considerable territory. East of here, between Tache and Ignace, and four miles from the latter point, a fire is raging, and there are also fires in some portions of the country very close to the main lint of the C.P.R. Fire rangers started for Clearwater Bay several days ago, and men have also been sent east along the line to battle with the serious outbreak there. Conditions are regarded as serious.

$8,000 FIRE AT LINDSAY.

Baker Lumber Company's Yards Badly Gutted.

A despatch from Lindsay says: A somewhat serious fire occurred at the Baker Lumber Company's yard in the east ward at about 5.30 Saturday evening, by which over a quarter of a million feet of beech and hemlock lumber and half a million shingles were destroyed. A G.T.R. car, filled with shingles, was also destroyed. The fire, which is supposed to have started from a spark from a passing steamer, proved a stubborn one to fight, and althought under control during the night, the firemen were not released until four o'clock Sunday morning. The loss is roughly estimated at about $8,000.

RUSHING IN IMMIGRANTS

Inspector Lawrence Secures Many Convictions at Cloverdale, B. C.

A despatch from Vancouver, B. C., says: Two weeks ago the Canadian Immigration Inspector, H. G. Lawrence, who has but recently been appointed, instituted a special effort to stamp out the wholesale railroading of undesirable foreign immigrants across the international boundary in the Blaine district. Here are a few figures of the results during a fortnight. One hundred and fifty persons were arrested, brought before the Magistrate at Cloverdale, and fined amounts varying from $10 to $50, and then ordered to be deported. Two of the alleged ringleaders, who are said to have charged from $2 to $5 for each man piloted across the border line, are now in jail at New Westminster, and two hundred persons were turned back at the boundary, being refused admission, but were not placed under arrest. The intending immigrants were mostly Russians, Greeks and Italians.

FIRED FROM WINDOW.

The Drunken Freak of a Young Montrealer.

A despatch from Montreal says: Crazed by constant drinking, Jos. Belleau, a young French-Canadian residing at 287 Delisle street, seized a revolver on Friday afternoon and opened fire from a front window at passers-by on the street. Mr. D. Mallette, a neighbor, was wounded in the back, and Constable Mailleux in the arm in attempting to arrest him. Neither victim is seriously injured. When the police finally forced their way into the house by a rear entrance they found Belleau had collapsed, and was lying in a drunken stupor on the floor. His mother, with whom he had been living, said that he had been drinking heavily, and had the idea that he was being persecuted by humanity in general.

McNAMARA'S TRIAL.

Iron Workers' Secretary-Treasurer Will be Arraigned June 1.

A despatch from Los Angeles, Cal., says: John J. McNamara, secretary and treasurer of the International Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' Association and his brother, James B. McNamara, were arraigned late on Friday before Superior Judge Bordwell on nineteen indictments, charging murder in causing a dynamite explosion in The Los Angeles Times building, and the consequent death of 21 men. Attorney Rappaport of Indianapolis for the McNamaras, asked for 30 days' time in which to enter pleas for the men. District Attorney Fredericks consented to a postponement till June 1, and that time was fixed by Judge Bordwell.

SHORT-WEIGHT CHEESE.

Inspector at Glasgow Reports Serious Losses.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Dealing with the question of cheese imported into Scotland, James A. Findland, inspector at Glasgow, reports:—"There is still a depressing feature of the Canadian cheese trade, in respect that the accuracy of marked weights cannot be relied on, and importers find it essential to test thoroughly the weights of each shipment for shortage, particularly during the summer months. It is a serious matter to importers, who have contracted to take a factory's weekly output, to find the cheese arrive showing from one-half to two and three pounds short weight per box, not to speak of odd boxes turning up five to ten pounds lighter than the marked weight, which, viewed in the most favorable light, can only be considered gross carelessness. Importations into Glasgow of Canadian cheese last year fell off 35,000 boxes. It is attributable to a heavier output of Scotch cheese, and also to the strike making many idle. Butter importations from Canada to Glasgow are also decreasing on account of the high price of the Canadian article."

DIAMONDS AND PLATINUM.

Messrs. Churchill & Crans' Report on Tulamen Mountains Finds.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Mr. F. L. Churchill of Rossland has returned from the Tulamen Mountains, where important discoveries of platinum and diamonds have recently been made. Mr. Churchill in partnership with Mr. J. L. Crans, the Government Assayer has found the ore to run 3½ ounces of platinum, with a number of diamonds of clear water, exceptional hardness, and very considerable commercial value.

BODIES IN MANHOLE.

Remains of Two Infants are Discovered in Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: Entering a manhole on Mance street, a few yards above Ontario street, on Thursday, Zeon Houle, a corporation employe, discovered the bodies of two new-born infants. There was nothing on the bodies to aid in their indentification, but the circumstances of the case show that they could not have been there more than twenty-four hours.

CHINA'S FAMINE HORRORS

Ill-Fed People a Prey to Fevers---Babies Sold as Merchandise.

A despatch from Toronto says: In a letter to Rev. R. P. McKay, secretary of the Presbyterian Foreign Missions, Miss A. Bostick, missionary in China, gives an account of the conditions in China at the present time.

"Wheat bran now sells for what was ordinarily considered the high price for good flour," she states, "and dried potato leaves find a ready sale. Dry, hard cakes made from the sesame seeds that have all the oil pressed from them, now form common articles of food. Those who eat it find themselves burning with fierce inward fevers, and being unable to buy tea, drink freely of cold unboiled water, which very often results in death. Little children are still being sold from door to door, as common articles of merchandise. Most of the dead poor are just wrapped in matting and buried in trenches, where the dogs can get at them."

Dr. Donald McGillicuddy writes that the plague is abating, but vigilance is still necessary.

A DOUBLE CURE FOR DOUBLE TROUBLE

Father Morriscy's No. 26 Cures Catarrh by a Combined Treatment.

The sudden weather variations in our climate result in a great many cases of catarrh—a troublesome disease usually considered hard to cure, and one which often leads to serious pulmonary and intestinal troubles.

A neglected cold in the head weakens the nasal membranes, so that at every future exposure the trouble returns. At length these conditions are fastened onto the system, and the sufferer undergoes the annoyance and danger of chronic catarrh.

Some doctors confine themselves to prescribing external applications, and thus do not reach the seat of the trouble. Others give internal treatment exclusively, and thus do not promptly relieve the affected parts.

Father Morriscy, the skilled priest-physician, rightly regarded catarrh as a double trouble, consisting of unpleasant local effects and their fundamental causes, the latter having to do with impaired general vitality.

His famous remedy, No. 26, is a combined cure for catarrh. It consists of tablets to be taken three times a day, and an especially compounded salve.

The salve is antiseptic, and quickly heals the inflamed membranes of the nasal passages. The tablets go to the seat of the trouble and restore the system to its usual tone. Together, they cure.

Instead of neglecting a disease that is unpleasant to yourself and to others, and one which often leads to pneumonia and consumption, it is surely the part of wisdom to take timely steps to do away with the effects and at the same time remove the cause. No. 26 does just that.

50c. for the combined treatment. At your druggist's, or from Father Morriscy Medicine Co., Ltd.,

ECZEMA WAS SPREADING TILL D.D.D. CURED IT

This is a translation of a letter written us in French on April 16, 1910, by Mr. Dan. Babineau, Cap Lumiere, N.B. "I had been suffering with eczema for about 6 months, and had consulted several doctors who did not do me any good. The disease was spreading and I was most uncomfortable. I thought I would go crazy. All my friends were telling me I would lose my hands unless I found the right treatment.

One day I read in the Messenger about your D.D.D. treatment and asked for a sample. It did me so much good that I immediately ordered two large bottles. It took eight bottles altogether to cure me of this terrible disease. I shall never be without a bottle of D.D.D. in my home."

The records of ten years of complete cures of thousands of the most severe cases show that D.D.D. stands to-day as the absolutely reliable eczema cure.

Write to-day for free trial bottle to the D.D.D. Laboratories, Dept. E.A., 49 Colborne St., Toronto. It will give you instant relief.

BREAD.

Bran Bread.—Four cupfuls bran flour, two cupfuls white flour, one-half teaspoonful salt, two rounding teaspoonfuls soda, two eggs beaten light, two cupfuls buttermilk, six tablespoonfuls molasses, one-half package seedless raisins. Mix well with hand and bake in moderate oven one hour. Try with a straw before removing from oven. Bake in a deep bread pan in order to retain moisture. This makes one loaf and is good for constipation.

Bread.—Early in the afternoon previous to baking day take three cooked potatoes, mash with a spoon in a large bowl, then add about four heaping tablespoonfuls of flour and one teaspoonful of sugar; mix together, then scald with boiling water, stirring, until smooth and thick. Dissolve half a yeast cake in a cup with a little lukewarm water; when the mixture has cooled until barely warm stir in the yeast and place to rise in a fairly warm place during the afternoon. At night take two quarts of lukewarm water, a tablespoonful of salt, and stir in as much flour as can be stirred with a spoon, then add the yeast, which should be foamy and light. Cover warm by the stove till morning if the weather is chill and allow plenty of room for rising. In the morning mix stiff with flour, let it rise till twice the bulk, then mold into loaves. Allow these to rise till nearly twice the bulk, or for about an hour, then bake about one hour in a moderate oven. This recipe will make six medium sized loaves. Before mixing in the morning if two cupfuls of the mixture is set aside in a cool place it may be used instead of the fresh yeast cake for the next baking and will make six more loaves.

Rusks.—Two cups raised dough, one cup sugar, one-half cup butter, two well beaten eggs, flour enough to make it a stiff dough; set it to rise and when light mold into high biscuits and set to rise again; place in oven. When done rub tops with granulated sugar and milk and place in oven to dry.

SALADS.

Shrimp and Tomato.—Cut a piece from the blossom end of each fair ripe tomato of fair size anl dig out the pulp. Fill the cavity thus made with cold boiled shrimps (canned are good for the purpose). Arrange them neatly with the backs up. Line a chilled dish with endive or with lettuce leaves and set the tomatoes within these. Or lay each upon a separate bed of the leaves upon individual plates. In either case send around mayonnaise dressing with it in a sauceboat. Crab salad —Make as above, using crab meat instead of shrimps.

White Fruit Salad—One can pineapple, diced; one can California white cherries, stoned; one pound white grapes halved and seeded; three bunches celery, white part only, cut fine; 15 cents' worth English walnuts, blanched. Dressing: Yolks three eggs, beaten stiff; three heaping teaspoonfuls sugar; a pinch of mustard, salt, and pepper; stir in this six tablespoonfuls boiling vinegar; stir over fire until thick, add one teaspoonful butter. When ready to serve add one pint whipped cream; mix with fruit.

Beauty Salad.—Cut in small pieces six oranges, mix with half a can of sliced pineapple diced. Add a dozen of marshmallows cut into bits, then add broken English walnuts. On each salad plate place a lettuce leaf and some of the salad, dot over with mayonnaise dressing. This has been pronounced delicious, besides being a beautiful decoration in color for the table.

PUDDING.

Noodle Custard.—Boil in boiling salt water for twenty minutes about half a pound of dry noodles, drain, cover with cold water, and drain again. Now in another dish make a custard of two eggs, beaten, two cups sweet milk, two tablespoonfuls sugar, butter size of walnut. Put this over the noodles and bake about half an hour. Serve warm. Extra nice if eaten with sweet cream.

Sago Custard.—Boil sago, in double boiler, with milk (as you do rice) until done. In a bowl beat one or two eggs, add two scant teaspoonfuls flour, one-half cup milk, a little nutmeg. Add this to the boiling sago, and let it boil until thick. Serve hot, with or without milk or cream.

Apricot Pudding.—A dainty pudding, the colors being gold and white, can be made in the following manner: Boil one pound dried apricots until tender; press through a sieve; return to the fire with one cupful sugar; cook thick, then add two tablespoonfuls Keystone silver white gelatine dissolved in three tablespoonfuls cold water, and stir until gelatine is dissolved; remove from fire. Prepare a boiled custard, using one quart of milk, three eggs, half a cupful of sugar; cook until it thickens, then add two tablespoonfuls of gelatine dissolved in three of cold water; add one tablespoonful of vanilla. Put the apricot jelly and the custard into a mold in alternate layers; allow each layer to become thoroughly set before adding the next. Serve with either plain or whipped cream. This lookes pretty when molded in sherbet glasses and served with a large spoonful of whipped cream on top.

FRUIT RECIPES.

Pineapple Dainty.—Dispose a square of angel food in a tall glass and on this put a round of canned pineapple. Add a little sugar and lemon juice to the pineapple juice and cool; add enough marshino to tint the syrup (or tint with color paste or red raspberry juice) and pour it over the pineapple and cake. Pipe whipped cream above the pineapple and finish with a cherry. Serve at any time when ice cream would be served.

Apple and Date Salad.—Pare and core about three choice apples. Cut them into matchlike pieces; there should be about one pint. Squeeze the juice of half a lemon over the apple. Pour boiling water over half a pound of dates, separate them with a silver work, and skim out upon an agate dish. Let them dry off in a hot oven. When cold cut each date into four or five strips, rejecting the stone; sprinkle with one-fourth a teaspoonful of salt and three or four tablespoonfuls of olive oil. Mix the apple and date and put aside in a cool place about an hour. When ready to serve add a tablespoonful of lemon juice and one or two tablespoonfuls of oil if the mixture seems dry. Mix thoroughly. Serve in a bowl lined with lettuce hearts.

USEFUL HINTS.

Zinc or tin, if badly discolored may be cleaned with a paste of whiting and paraffin.

A cheap red coloring for cookery is made thus: Chop a large beetroot very fine and pour a little boiling water over; strain and use.

If after frying fish a slice of toast be put into the fat for about two minutes and then taken out, anything may be fried in it, and it will not taste of the fish.

If a few drops of glycerine be added to the starch for linens, it will be found that the iron will not stick, and that the linens will have a beautiful gloss after they have been ironed.

Old pieces of velveteen make excellent polishing cloths and can be used instead of chamois skin. When soiled, wash in soapy water and dry without rinsing.

To test nutmegs, prick them with a pin, and if they are good the oil will instantly spread around the puncture.

If the handles of ivory knives are spotted, dip a chamois skin in water, then in powdered pumice, and rub hard.

When making fruit pies, damp the edge with milk instead of water. It holds better, and the juice is not so liable to boil over.

COMING TO CANADA.

Respectable German Girls Want Husbands.

Helene, a sturdy German fraulein, writes the editor of the Berlin Tageblatt thus: "Since the German Government pays no attention whatever to the colossal surplus of young German girls, and as the high price of meat is making it increasingly difficult for respectable German girls to get married, the girls of our circle have unanimously decided to become British subjects and to emigrate to Canada in order that the aspirations of the Canadian bachelors may be gratified. We do not see why the young English women should snatch the best catches from under the very noses of us German girls. I see by the papers that there are 50,000 eligible bachelors in Canada without suitable feminine acquaintances." Helene goes on to say that when German young womanhood has emigrated bodily and become British, the old country will see what a mistake it made in refusing the franchise to these once loyal and desirable subjects.

JAPAN EMPEROR SACRED.

Until 1870 it was against the law and sacred custom for any subject to look at the Emperor of Japan. His political advisers and attendants only saw his back. When he first left the palace the shutters of all the houses had to be drawn and no one was permitted in the streets. Even to-day, when the emperor has the privilege of driving through the streets like one of his subjects, it is not considered quite proper to cast a glance at him.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, MAY 14.

Isaiah's vision and call to service, Isa. 6. Golden Text, Isa. 6. 8.

Verse I. The year that king Uzziah died—The exact date cannot be determined, and for our purposes is not important. It is the event itself, with all its stern meaning, and its contrast to the exalted heavenly Sovereign, to which the prophet calls our attention. The splendor of Uzziah's court, and the triumphant success of his long reign doubtless had made a deep impression upon the future prophet's imagination. The terrible judgment which had befallen the proud monarch, his hero, and his awful death, must have been a rude shock to one who had basked in the sunshine of this earthly sovereignty. It was at this critical moment in his career that the vision of another throne came to him, on high and lifted up above all that is human.

His train—The skirts of his garments filled the entire space of the temple, the very place where Uzziah had committed his sin and met his fate.

2. Above him . . . the seraphim, nowhere else mentioned as angelic beings, are here represented as the attendants of the Lord, stand above him in the attitude of service. By their presence and actions they suggest the ineffable majesties of God. They seem to have been at least partly human in form, with two wings covering the face, that they might not see, and with two covering the feet, that they "might not be seen."

3. One cried unto another — They sang in antiphon, some crying, Holy, holy, holy, a thrice repeated tribute to the divine holiness (denoting a sense of distance, or contrast to the imperfections of the people), and the rest responding, in terms that describe the manifestation of the divine holiness in nature, and anticipate the universal diffusion of his glory.

4. The foundations of the thresholds—Meaning, of the temple, which had been polluted by the hypocritical worship of the nation. The smoke was not that of acceptable sacrifice accompanying the pure worship of the seraphs. It was like the mist which arises when fire and water come together, for here the sanctity of the divine comes in contact with the profanity of the human. Compare Rev. 15. 8. The smoke is a fitting antecedent of the rising feeling in the prophet's mind of the unworthiness of his people as expressed in the following verse.

5-8—The impression made by the vision, the symbolic act expressing the divine pardon, and the ready response to the Lord's call to service.

5. A man of unclean lips—He would fain join in the praise ascribed to Jehovah, but he feels himself deprived of the right because of his mortal imperfections. These, in a man standing upon the threshold of a prophetic career, would most naturally show themselves in the lips, the organs of speech.

A people of unclean lips—Their worship, in startling contrast to that of these sinless seraphs, seemed to Isaiah corrupt and profane. Their lips, and therefore their acts of worship, were impure and unacceptable, because their lives were so. The man whose eyes had rested upon the august presence of the King could no longer tolerate the practice of sinning socially and politically, and then trying to worship God religiously.

6. A live coal—This was a simple domestic device for transferring fire from the hearth to the place where it was required. Thus it superseded the intricate and clumsy ceremonies ordinarily connected with sacrifices for sin in the temple. Isaiah in his own altar; he acts his Lord. "In that divine presence Isaiah in his own altar; he acts his guilt in his own person, and so he feels the expiratory fire come to his very self directly from the heavenly hearth."

7. This hath touched thy lips — Since he feels all his sin concentrated there, it is fitting the purifying fire should thus be applied to the organ of expression. We can understand from this act, which brought him the assurance that his iniquity was forgiven, and upon the simple condition of penitent confession, why Isaiah railed against the costly and elaborate ritual service by which his people thought they could propitiate an offended God (Isa. 1. 10-17).

8. I heard the voice of the Lord—His sin being removed, it was possible for him to come into direct communication with God, and not depend upon the medium of seraphim. And what he heard was not a command, but an entreaty; and he answers, not under compulsion, but with unhesitating freedom.

9-13—Isaiah's commission; and the outcome, first, to deepen the spiritual insensibility of the sin-hardened people, and, secondly, to pour judgment upon the nation until only a remnant remained.

9. Hear . . . but understand not —This, of course, is to be the result of the prophet's declaration of the word of God, but here it is described as if it were a purpose. There is almost a contemptuous thrust in the words, this people, as if Jehovah were thoroughly disgusted with this callous generation.

10. Make the heart . . . fat—The stubborn rejection of the message from God will result in their unfeeling hearts becoming still more unfeeling. The seeming harshness of such a revelation is due to our referring it to God, as if he willed their spiritual death. But the meaning is simply that the unbelief of these people is nothing more nor less than an incapacity for the will of their Maker (Compare Matt. 13. 14; Rom. 11. 8).

11. How long?—Isaiah is certain that this condition of things cannot continue indefinitely. Exterminating war, humiliating subjugation, and devastating exile, leaving many forsaken places in the land (12), can be the only answer. It is by such judgments that Jehovah must bring the people to their senses.

13. A tenth—In this doctrine of the remnant of Israel the prophets found special comfort and hope for the future (Isa. 1. 9; Amos 5. 3). The thought is illustrated by the figure of the destruction of the turpentine tree, and the oak. Though the stump may be burned after the tree has fallen, yet a principle of vitality is likely to endure. So Israel in ruins still has hope because of the indestructible spark of life contained in the faithful remnant.

OLD WEDDING KNIVES.

Few Specimens Left of This Once Common Gift to Brides.

Of the many dainty and curious relics belonging to old wedding customs none is more interesting and beautiful than the once indespensable bride knives, specimens of which still linger here and there among the cabinets of old country houses, says The Queen.

Or you may discover a slender, quaint old pair of these ancient posy knives in their delicate, faded cases, hiding behind the glass in some sleepy, provincial museum.

You scarcely realize as you examine them that without her wedding knives duly attached to her girdle the mediaeval and seventeenth century bride would hardly have considered herself dressed. So completely a part of the marriage costume were they and so important an item of the ritual of the ceremony that they once came to be considered almost as necessary to an orthodox marriage as the veil and the ring itself. The old plays teem with allusions to them.

And who can forge the figure of Juliet, wearing her wedding knives, as she stands in tragic anguish in the friar's cell, and again when she is about to take the sleeping potion? Shakespeare in the old quarto of 1597 made special reference to his heroine wearing them.

Of the 101 delicate trifles of the ancient wedding toilet, few were invested with more tender fancies or mystic symbolism than these knives; there was the idea of the severing of the knot of love, and then the more practical suggested emblem of good housewifery and domestic policy.

They were not worn in England alone, but all over Europe wedding knives formed part of the bride's regular accoutrements. The highest invention was often brought to bear upon their metal, brocade and shagreen cases and sheaths. In the old Flemish pictures they may be seen hanging from the ladies' girdles beside the bodkin, scissors and other personal articles of the new wife.

Very beautiful indeed are some of the quaint old blades and handles, and all were of superior quality and artistic ornament. As the rank of the bride rose so they became more elaborately chased, and sometimes they were jewelled to a standard of immense value. It is very curious to learn that many of the finest English specimens emanated even in those remote days from Sheffield.

The precise origin of the custom of wearing wedding knives is lost in obscurity, but their decline from favor seems to have set in after the reign of William and Mary. In the time of Anne and the early Georges the custom was already obsolete and archaic. There is something almost mysterious in the way in which these beautiful little mementoes have completely vanished from modern usage, disappearing almost concurrently with the ill-fated Stuarts.

THE WORLD'S SHEEP FLOCKS

Australia leads the world in sheep farming, according to the following statement: Australia, 87,043,266; Argentina, 77,581,100; Russia, 58,510,523; United States, 54,631,000; United Kingdom, 30,011,833; New Zealand, 22,449,053; India, 18,029,181; France, 17,461,379; Spain, 16,119,051; Cape of Good Hope, 14,848,795; Uruguay, 13,915,796; Italy, 10,877,000; Austria-Hungary, 10,743,707. The estimated capital value of the Australian flocks is $220,352,400, and the annual gross output of the flocks is estimated at 75 per cent. of the value.

THE NORTH AND SOUTH POLES

REMARKABLE STORIES TOLD BY FAMOUS EXPLORERS.

Both the Arctic and Antarctic Regions Are the eVry Reverse of Quiet.

On Polar seas the ice, though thick and solid as granite rocks, is hardly ever still. There are tides in the Arctic and Antarctic oceans and these lift and lower the huge ice fields causing low creaking, groaning noises.

Even as late as November the pack will wake up without warning and pile itself in huge heaps with indescribable crashings, groanings, and roarings.

During his last successful journey Captain Peary's ship was in terrible danger from a sudden movement of the floe. He speaks of the "rabid roar" of the "tumbling chaos of ice blocks." His Eskimos were terribly frightened, and set up weird howlings. The dogs whined and barked, and the noise was terrific.

Every Arctic explorer gives similar accounts. Captain Hall, who led the Polaris expedition, had an appaling experience. He speaks of masses of ice colliding around the ship with a series of TERRIFIC CRASHES.

The Polaris herself was "nipped," and there followed such a terrible rending and groaning that everyone aboard was convinced that she was going to the bottom, and the crew all but twelve men were ordered out on to the ice.

They spent 196 days on a drifting floe, which carried them 1,500 miles. The amazing part of the adventure is that the Polaris did not sink, and the men left aboard managed to get her to a harbor, where they built a house and spent the rest of the winter.

Spring is the noisest time in the Polar seas. When the ice breaks up the sound, to use a trite phrase, beggars description. Captain McClure, of the Investigator, compared it to heavy thunder or the sound of great guns, and another writer says that the movements of the breaking floe resemble the upheavals of a volcanic eruption.

Whether in the Arctic or the Antarctic regions the air is seldom s and gales are frequent. The winter winds of the Far North, says Peary, blow with almost UNIMAGINABLE FURY.

During the winter which he spent aboard the Roosevelt before his last successful dash for the Pole, he experienced a series of terrific storms.

In the cabins the sound resembled that of some gigantic power plant, everything vibrating to the pulsation of the machinery. The whole atmosphere was full of the deep, sullen roar of the wind, and so thick was the cloud of snow picked up and swept forward on the wings of the gale that powerful lamps were invisible ten feet away.

On high ground, such as inner Greenland, the wind is never still. Nansen tells of the constant sibilant hiss of the breeze laden with tiny speckles of ice which flowed along knee high like a shining white river glitttring in the pale arctic sunlight.

In the Antarctic the storms are, if possible, more terrible than in the Arctic. The Antarctica expedition experienced a gale from the south-west which blew a heavy boat a distance of over sixty feet and smashed it to matchwood. It also shifted a heavy bag of fossils. The astonishing velocity of 85 miles an hour was registered, and then the wind gauge was CARRIED AWAY BODILY.

During such storms everything became charged with electricity. The tips of men's fingers glowed in the dark, and there was a snapping and crackling as they touched any metal object.

All along Arctic coasts huge rivers of ice extend to the sea. When these glaciers "calve"—that is, when bergs break off—the sound which ensues is quite indescribable. It beggars thunder or great guns. The very air trembles, and the sea is flung up into waves which resemble those formed by submarine earthquakes.

Nor is there lack of sounds caused by animal life. In the Arctic may often be heard the baying of wolves, and the barking of seals, while in summer the harsh cry of sea birds echoes along the face of the cliffs. In the South there are penguins by the million. Dr. Nordenskjold writes of "the cackling colony of Seymour Island."

No, the Poles are not the places to go in search of silence. They do not compare in this respect with tropical deserts such as the Sahara nor with the open sea upon a calm, summer day.—Pearson's Weekly.

There was an elopement a short time ago, and after a brief honeymoon the bride returned to the parental roof. "And you will give us your blessing?" she asked. "Freely," replied the old man; "no trouble about the blessing, but board and lodging will be at regular rates."

SENTENCED TO STRANGLING

THE METHOD IS VERY SIMILAR TO SPAIN'S GAROTTE.

How the Law's Greatest Penalty is Carried Out in Different Countries.

Austria is the only country which employs the strangling method of execution, but Spain's garotte is very similar. The original method of garrotting was, in fact, nothing but strangling. The criminal was seated on a chair fixed to a post, a loop of rope was placed incircling his neck and the post, and by means of a stick or cudgel (Spanish, "garrotte") inserted between the post and the condemned man's neck, the cord was tightened until strangulation ensued, says Pearson's Weekly.

The modern garrotte consists of a brass collar containing a sharp-pointed screw. The executioner turns the screw, and its point penetrates the spinal marrow, causing instant death.

HANGING IN OLDEN DAYS.

Every civilized country does its best nowadays to make the dreadful task of execution as rapid and as painless as possible Hanging as at present performed is a very different matter from what it used to be.

Till nearly the end of the eighteenth century, the condemned man was made to stand in a cart with the rope round his neck, and the cart was then driven away from under him. In 1783 Parliament abolished this practice as being too barbarous, and a platform was substituted for the cart. In 1874 this method was improved by proportioning the length of the drop to the weight of the body.

The drop is so nicely adjusted that the mere fall at once ruptures the ligatures of the spine, and so causes death at least as certain and instantaneous as the electric method which has been adopted in America.

The State of New York inaugurated the electric chair twenty-one years ago, but its only advantage over our method is that the man who switches on the current is out of sight of the death chamber, and so escapes the gruesome title of public executioner.

Formerly all criminals in this country died by the axe, and undoubtedly the axe in the hands of a skilful headsman was as merciful an instrument of death as any which exists to-day. In Prussia decapitation by the axe is still the recognized method of execution, but the rest of Germany follows the example of France, and uses the guillotine.

THE FRENCHMAN'S "WIDOW."

Execution had become almost obsolete in France until public sentiment was aroused by the ever increasing number of brutal murders that in January of last year "the Widow," as the French term the instrument, was dragged out of its retirement, and four miscreants were publicly executed at Bethune, in the North of France.

The guillotine was invented by a doctor named Guillotin more than a century ago, but it is not true that the inventor fell a victim to his own device. He died quietly in his bed. The guillotine consists of two upright posts groved on the inside. An immensely heavy and sharp steel blade is fixed to slide in these grooves, and the executioner has nothing to do but pull a rope, when the blade drops and decapitates the victim instantly.

A terrible peculiarity of French law is that in the case of parricide the sentence must be read aloud to the condemned man when he reaches the guillotine. This was actually done when Duchemin, who murdered his mother, was executed in September last.

Persia last year suffered from a revolution. Four conspirators who were caught in the act of throwing a bomb in the crowded bazaar at Teheran were hanged and quartered in the same fashion that prevailed in this country up to the seventeenth century. The remains of the wretched men were hung at the city gates as a horrible warning.

FLOGGED TO DEATH.

Morocco is perhaps the most mediaeval country in existence. Flogging to death is still in vogue. No longer ago than May last Mulai Hafid had the Shereef Kittain executed in this horrible fashion.

The Ameer of Afghanistan has peculiar methods of making the punishment fit the crime. A baker, for selling short weight, was roasted in his own oven, and a man who had started a scare that the Russians were advancing on Kabul was placed on a stool fastened on top of a tall pole, and kept there on sentry go till he died of sleeplessness and exhaustion.

There are a few countries where capital punishment has been abolished, notably Switzerland. In Italy, also, there have been no executions for civil offences for many years past.

CLERGYMAN A DETECTIVE.

Telltale Nail Brought Woman to the Scaffold.

Dr. John Donne, the famous English divine and poet, who lived in the reign of James I., was a veritable Sherlock Holmes, says London Tit-Bits. One of his famous exploits is as follows: He was walking in the churchyard while a grave was being dug, when the sexton cast up a mouldering skull. The doctor idly took it up and, in handling it, found a headless nail driven into it.

This he managed to take out and conceal in his handkerchief. It was evident to him that murder had been done. He questioned the sexton and he learned that the skull was probably that of a certain man who was the proprietor of a brandy shop and was a drunkard, being found dead in bed one morning after a night in which he had drunk two quarts of brandy.

"Had he a wife?" asked the doctor. "Yes." "What character does she bear?" "She bore a very good character, only the neighbors gossiped because she married the day after her husband's funeral. She still lives here." The doctor soon called on the woman.

He asked for and received the particulars of the death of her husband. Suddenly opening his handkerchief he showed her the telltale nail, asking in a loud voice, "Madame, do you know this nail?" The woman was so surprised that she confessed, was tried and executed.

A GREAT REMEDY FOR LITTLE ONES

That is what thousand of mothers say of Baby's Own Tablets. We have received thousands of letters praising them—we have yet to receive a single one condemning them. The Tablets cannot possibly do harm even to the newborn babe. They contain none of those poisonous drugs which make the so-called "soothing" mixtures so dangerous to the welfare of the little one. They are a scientific medicine prepared by one of the greatest specialists on childhood ailments and should be kept in every home where there are babies or small children. Mrs. Fred. McCarthy, Pinewood, Ont., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets and have found them a great remedy for little ones. I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WHAT IS ELECTRICITY?

Many persons, young and old, often wonder how the modern electric cars, trains and locomotives are operated and what electricity is. No one knows what electricity is. We know some of the things that it will do; we have, to a certain extent, learned how to control it, and, for want of a better name, we call it a fluid. We have discovered, too, that it is one of the most important forces, if not the most important force, of which we have any knowledge. We are almost as ignorant of many other great forces of Nature, as, for example, the attraction of gravitation. For the present we must be content to observe such forces in action, and to devise the best methods to control them. In this knowledge mankind has progressed wonderfully within a few years.

BRITISH CENSUS HUMORS.

Suffragettes in Hiding — King George Did His Duty.

The British census has been taken, and in spite of the efforts of the suffragettes the list of the people is believed to be as complete as usual. The papers publish some quaint pictures of women suffering a midnight martyrdom for the cause. One was photographed by flashlight and shown sleeping in a bath; others were photographed sleeping, or apparently sleeping, on narrow benches and on the floors of houses in which they sought a refuge from the heads of their own households. These and other devices of a similar character to escape the enumeration may have been picturesque, but they had little effect on the total of the census.

For the rest the census passed off with its usual calm. King George filled up his census paper as the head of a family with all the punctiliousness his father used to exercise in this matter.

Edward VII., by the way, during his reign filled up two census papers, though he was king for less than ten years. His second census paper was served on him in Paris, where he happened to be when the French census was being taken. The document was delivered at the British Embassy through the French Foreign Office, and did not come as usual through the Prefecture of the Seine.

Technically, of course, King Edward was on English soil at the British Embassy, and the application might have been ignored. But the "Duc de Lancastre," his age, birth and so on figure in the official records of the population of France. In 1896 the French census caught some other distinguished visitors. Queen Victoria, the Empress Marie of Russia and King Leopold of Belgium were all in Paris at the time, and all three appear in the list of people living in France.

Boroughs in England with a population of 50,000 attain the dignity of county boroughs. This has given rise to several odd effects during the present census taking.

The Mayor of Dover, anxious that his town should achieve the dignity of becoming a county borough, issued an appeal to the citizens to stay at home for the Sunday and help to make up the 50,000. Cheltenham was in the same condition as Dover, below 50,000 at the last census, but perhaps over that number last Sunday.

Here, however, several thoughtful men realized that if the census showed a population of 50,000, although the honor of county boroughship would be attained, Mr. Lloyd George's budget would also cause an increase in licence duties of the town. So brewers and publicans did all they could to reduce the population for the night of the census, and paid the expenses of their employees, their wives and their children for a week-end holiday.

FAMILIAR, ANYWAY.

The two sailors had just returned from a long voyage, and it was good to get back on English soil once more. They were a little inclined to be sentimental about it, says a writer in London Tit-Bits. Above the rumble of the traffic they heard, one day, a very harsh and unmusical voice. After listening for a few moments, one of them turned to his companion and said:

"Eh, Jack, it's a long time since we've heard that song."

"What song?" asked the other.

"The one that fellow's singing in the street, 'The Light of Other Days.'"

"That fellow ain't singing 'The Light of Other Days' at all," replied the other. "I've been listening to him. He's piping 'The Banks of Allan Water.'"

"Here, Tommy," called out the first man to a small boy, "run along and find out what that man's singing!"

"He ain't singing at all," protested Tommy. "He's hawking herrings!"

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no future trouble will be experienced.

GRAND OLD MAN OF THE PRAIRIES

DECLARES HE OWES HIS SPLENDID HEALTH TO DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Suffered for twenty-five years from Rheumatism and Kidney Disease —three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made him a new man.

Swift Current, Sask., May 1st (Special).—Seventy-six years of age, but strong and healthy, Mr. J. P. Lackey of this place is one of the grand old men of the prairies. But Mr. Lackey has not always enjoyed his present health. "For twenty-five years," he says, "I suffered from Rheumatism, which I inherited. I was nervous. My limbs would swell and I had a severe pain across the back. I also had a heavy dragging sensation across the loins. I am a well man to-day and I attribute it all to three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills. My Rheumatism and Kidney Disease have entirely disappeared."

Mr. Lackey is showing his appreciation of Dodd's Kidney Pills by buying them and presenting them to his friends. He has joined the great army of those who have learned from their own experience that as a giver of new life to old and young Dodd's Kidney Pills stand without an equal.

A SECOND DANIEL.

Mrs. Smith (hearing a great noise in the children's room the other day, went up to see what was the matter): "Children! children!" she said; "whatever is all this noise about."

Little Jamie—"Oh, we've had grandpa and uncle Henry locked up in the cupboard for an hour, and when they get a little angrier I'm going to play going into the lion's cage."

REST AND HEALTH TO MOTHER AND CHILD.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over SIXTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, with PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHŒA. It is absolutely harmless. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Neighbor—"Did you break this window, Charlie?" Charlie—"Well, I helped." Neighbor—"Helped? How helped?" Charlie—"It was a ball that broke it—but I threw the ball."

Pills That Have Benefitted Thousands.—Known far and near as a sure remedy in the treatment of indigestion and all derangements of the stomach, liver and kidneys, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills have brought relief to thousands when other specifics have failed. Innumerable testimonials can be produced to establish the truth of this assertion. Once tried they will be found superior to all other pills in the treatment of the ailments for which they are prescribed.

"Tommy," said a father to his precocious five-year-old son and heir, "your mother tells me she gives you pennies to be good. Do you think that is right" "Of course it is," replied Tommy. "You don't want me to grow up and be good for nothing, do you?"

Wife—"Wake up! There are thieves in the house!" Husband—"Go down and show them your new bonnet, and they won't waste any time looking for money here!"

It Will Cure a Cold.—Colds are the commonest ailments of mankind and if neglected may lead to serious conditions. Dr. Thomas Eclectric Oil will relieve the bronchial passages of inflammation speedily and thoroughly and will strengthen them against subsequent attack. And as it eases the inflammation it will stop the cough because it allays all irritation in the throat. Try it and prove it.

A little boy of eight years, attending school away from home, wrote a letter to his sister from which the following extract is taken: "We had a spelling match in school today, and I beat all the boys and won the Meddle."

Keep Minard's Liniment in the house.

Grocer—"Good morning, Mr. Popple. How are those eggs I sent you?" Popple—"Better, thank you. They are gaining strength every minute."

For over fifty years Rheumatism and Neuralgia sufferers have found great relief in Hamlins Wizard Oil. Don't wait for inflammation to set in. Get a bottle to-day.

The Lady—"I thought you said you were looking for work?" The Tramp—"Well, I am, mum. But I don't want to get it now. I'm a detective, yer see, an' I'm jest after clues to-day."

A DIMINISHING DOG.

In "Walks and People in Tuscany" Sir Francis Vane tells the story of a courageous but unfortunate dog, Turco, whose acquaintance he made near Greve. The animal was a farm dog, a splendid specimen of a black-and-white sheep dog.

Born with an adventurous disposition, Turco explored the neighborhood, and one sad day was shot at, and with such little accuracy that his near hind leg was destroyed. A kindly English lady had him attended by a veterinary, and the dog recovered, although, of course, with three legs only. Yet his indomitable daring was not lessened. He still roamed and fought many battles.

Then came the poison incident. Burglars had arranged to rob my friend's house, and had prepared their way by laying down poison. Yet almost by a miracle, Turco recovered after weeks of agony, and regained his spirits, too; for he sauntered out one night, had an immense battle with a dog larger than himself, and came back to the house with his fore leg hopelessly broken.

He now has only two legs, or had when I saw him last, yet although I had not seen him for more than a year, he limped up to greet me with the wildest of welcomes.

"Got a job for a man wot's been out o' work six months, guv'nor?" "Sorry, I haven't! I've more men on the place now than I can find work for." "But the little I'd do wouldn't make much odds."

1,000,000 MEN UNDER ARMS.

Germany's Field Manoeuvres This Summer.

Germany will have under arms in connection with field manoeuvres this summer practically one million men. In addition to the regular army with a strength of 622,000 men, over 355,000 reservists will be called to the colors, making a total effective strength for the army of 977,000. Adding to this men serving with the fleet, an armed force of considerably more than a million will be engaged in the gigantic war game.

The new firing regulations for the field artillery, just published, contain in addition to further directions for fire against captive balloons, a new set of instructions governing the use of the artillery against dirigibles and aeroplanes. It is admitted, however, that artillery fire against aeroplanes offers slight chance of success without enourmous use of ammunition.

13 WEEKS IN HOSPITAL.

Came Away No Better and Then Two Boxes of Zam-Buk Worked Complete Cure.

Mr. Fred. Mason, the well-known upholsterer and mattress manufacturer of St. Andrews, N.B., says:—"I had eczema on my knee, which caused me terrible pain and inconvenience. The sore parts would itch and burn and tingle, and then when rubbed or scratched, would become very painful. I tried various remedies but got no better, so I decided to go to Montreal and take special treatment. I received treatment at the Montreal General Hospital for thirteen weeks, but at the end of that time I was not cured, and almost gave in. A friend advised me to give Zam-Buk a trial, and although I had little hope of it doing me good, I took the advice. Almost as soon as applied Zam-Buk stopped the itching and the irritation. I persevered with the balm, and it was soon evident that it would do me good. Each day the pain was reduced, the sore spots began to heal, and by the time I had used a few boxes of Zam-Buk I was cured."

For eczema, blood-poisoning, piles, ulcers, sores, abscesses, varicose ulcers, bad leg, sore feet, blisters, insect stings, poisoned wounds, cuts, burns, bruises and all skin injuries and diseases. Zam-Buk is without equal. Zam-Buk Soap should also be used for washing all wounds, eczemous patches and sores. All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c box and Zam-Buk Soap at 25c. per tablet, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

A Pill That is Prized.—There have been many pills put upon the market and pressed upon public attention, but none has endured so long or met with so much favor as Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Widespread use of them has attested their great value, and they need no further advertisement than this. Having firmly established themselves in public esteem, they now rank without a peer in the list of standard vegetable preparations.

POLICEMAN JUST PRAYED.

Patrolman George Malone of the Denver police department is a firm believer in the efficacy of prayer. One day last week he was called to make an arrest following a neighborhood quarrel. After listening to the stories of the women involved, Malone lifted his helmet, laid his club on the floor and knelt in prayer. The prayer was brief, but to the point. When he arose the women were silent. "Cut out this squabbling," he said, "and pray more." Malone is as strong physically as he is morally, for a few hours afterward he stopped and threw a runaway horse.

A man who insists that he's just as good as you are may not be extra good at that.

THERE'S A DIFERENCE—Running a newspaper is just like running a hotel only a little bit different. When a man goes into a hotel and finds something on the table which does not raise hades with the landlord and tell him to stop his old hotel. Well hardly. He sets that dish to one side and wades into the many dishes that suit him It is different with some newspaper readers. They find an article occasionally that does not suit them exactly and without stopping to think it may please hundreds of other readers, make a grand stand play and tell the editor how a newspaper should be run and what should be put in it. But such people are becoming fewer every year.

EXETER SCHOOL BOARD

April 15.—Special session held in the Town Hall to consider an application from the Exeter Base Ball Club for the use of the school grounds for game and practice purposes for the current year. Per S. Martin and F. Wood—That the use of the grounds be granted subject to the following conditions.—1, that no game or practice be held during the sessional hours of the school; 2, that the Club become responsible for all damage done to school property through such use of the grounds.

May 8.—Meeting of the Board in the Town Hall at 8.30 p.m. Absent F. W. Gladman. The following is the order of business duly submitted and approved. Per Chair—Minutes of previous meeting. Reports of Committees—Wood, that further supplies were probable during the current session. Floral—F. Wood, that help was not at present procurable for the improvements required. Per Secretary, that the sum of $448.60 had been paid over to the corporation on account of fees. Per S. Martin and H. Huston that the following account be paid, subject to the endorsement of the principal, Times Printing Co., blanks and cards, $15.05. Per F. Wood and S. Martin—that Miss Robinson be granted the use of the typewriter, subject to the payment of the usual fee.

Quite the best report received from the Board's annual delegation to the Educational Association at Toronto, H Huston, was then presented.—After an introduction to the president and Col. Sam Hughes in which the latter changed from a short puggy fiery little leader of Orangeism to a large well-framed, well proportioned and manly leader of men, he followed up with a description of the work of Dr. Aubin, Medical Superintendent of the Birmingham, Eng., schools with an enrolment of 98,000 pupils. The principal ideas introduced and emphasized were the following.—1, That where intelligent human life existed, no matter how weakened, dulled, or diseased, it could be much improved by careful treatment and training, and that it was our duty to provide all necessary facilities for the accomplishment of this good. 2, That every capable boy and girl should be taught to swim and given thorough knowledge of the best means of resuscitation. 3rd, That the best training in agriculture could be secured not in the public schools, but by using on the farm the demonstrators and lecturers appointed by the government and available for that purpose. Following he introduced the question of social purity as presented to the trustees section, mainly as the outcome of the Thornly London episode, and endorsed the decision of that section, that government lecturers should be appointed to visit all schools that our children may grow up with a full knowledge of their physical responsibilities and care of life. In the after discussion that followed the following recommendations received general approval and are published with the full authority of the Board.

(1) That all children should be taught that life is a sacred gift from our Great Creator directly to our first parents, and that it was given with the power and command to transmit to succeeding generations to the end of time

(2) That this power is theirs and of every healthily born child and their sacred charge to keep untouched until the time when in the order of our Great Creator as the head of a home it should be transmitted as the life of a new generation.

(3) That the violation of this command and any misuse of its channel means the Divine displeasure and the loss of life, health, beauty, mental vigor and happiness, and

(4) That obedience with the observance of the ordinary laws of good living mean the largest measure to old age of health, beauty, and all that makes physical life happy and desirable.

Per S. Martin and T. B. Carling that the sincere thanks of the Board be tendered Mr. Huston for his very desirable report, and that the expenses incident to the trip be paid. The appointment of a delegation if necessary to the June session of the County Council at Goderich was left in the hands of the chair.

J. Grigg, Secretary.

P. S.—It would be very gratifying to the Board if the suggestions for instruction in social purity as mentioned above be published by every exchange of this paper. It is held also that this instruction should be given to every child at a period not exceeding 12 years of age.

NEW TRAIN SERVICE TO "LAKE OF 'BAYS'"

The Sunday evening boat service from the Wawa hotel, Britannia, Point Ideal Portage, Deerhurst and other important calling points on "Lake of Bays" to Huntsville will be run on same schedule as for season 1910, during the months of July, and August, and which will be a boon to week-enders desiring to return to the city for business on Mondays.

Miss Bertha Mack, who has been book keeper with the Gordon Mackay Co., of Toronto, for the past two years, has resigned her position and has accepted one with the Canada Lumber Co., Toronto, at an increase of salary.

CARROLL TO HANG

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. May 12.—This morning John Carroll, a shantyman, was sentenced to be hanged on July 26 for the murder of a companion named Tallon in a camp near Blind River. Justice Britton only said a few words in pronouncing the death sentence. The jury had brought in a recommendation for mercy, and the judge said that while this would be forwarded to the proper authorities, Caroll should not be given any hope that he would be shown any mercy. The prisoner took the whole matter quietly.

Carroll formerly resided in North Middlesex and has relatives residing there. He was confined in the London Asylum for some months in 1908, and had several times attempted to commit suicide, but was never known to try to injure anyone else until he murdered Tallon last winter.

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE;

OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER XVI.

The newly-married couple were to go to London first, and then proceed to Paris and other Continental cities for their bridal trip.

The sacred service, the pealing organ, the wedding breakfast, with its laughter, buzz of voices, gorgeous dresses and flashing jewels, the hurried removal of her bridal array for her travelling gown, all had passed to Nancy as a curious dream. She moved about like one who is absolutely conscious of nothing, who is led by some strong influence, but beyond that is powerless to act for herself.

She heard the false, honeyed congratulations in a dim, far-off way, feeling it must be some other person who stood there with a bouquet of flowers in her hands and a carriage waiting to convey her away.

But she woke with a sudden pang of agony to know that it was no dream, but all hideous reality, as Dorothy flung her arms about her and kissed her farewell, weeping unrestrainedly as she did so.

Not till this moment did Nancy comprehend the fulness of the agony entailed by the sacrifice she had taken on her young shoulders; not till now did the fulness of her horror, her fear, her loathing of Thomas Crawshaw come to her. As her distraught eyes, shining like sapphires in their deep-blue glory, rested on his common face, full of savage triumph and unmeasurable conceit, she gave one great shudder, and, drawing her hand from Dorothy's, she ran down to the carriage and entered it. If she stayed another moment, she felt she should cling to Sir Humphrey, or to Dr. Grantley, who was there as her oldest friend, and implore them to protect her, and save her from a life of torture with this man for her husband.

Crawshaw was quick to see that shudder and that look of horror. His face grew very dark, and wore a nasty expression as he took his seat beside her and the carriage rolled away.

He said nothing to her, however, and, horrible as his sullen presence was to her, Nancy could not but be grateful for this silence.

Alas! she soon learned that this calm was but the prelude to a storm of impotent rage, before which she shrank aghast, and beneath which she cowed, not from fear, but from disgust and despair.

The country lanes were bordered with the villagers, who had come out to catch a last glimpse of the bride; but neither the man nor the girl made any effort to return their cheers and kindly greetings by even a bow or a smile.

Surely, never so curious a bride and bridegroom was ever seen before.

Nancy, still grasping the bouquet of delicate, hothouse flowers in her hand, crouched back in her corner, and kept her white face steadfastly turned from him; and he sat with his arms folded, his brows knit, and his eyes, still wearing that evil, cruel expression, fixed on her as a hawk might watch its prey.

The drive to the station was long, but Nancy wished it could have been even miles farther. For one hour did they sit in the carriage and roll through the sunlit country, just beginning to show a trace here and there of coming autumn, and never exchanged one word; and as each landmark and well-known spot vanished behind her, her courage and strength faded, too, till, as they came to a standstill at last, she was trembling in every limb.

Crawshaw shambled out of the carriage, and then, regardless of the etiquette or any remark, turned his back on the girl, and left her to alight at her own convenience, thereby provoking many glances of astonishment from the station-master and the porters, and making Baines flush angrily, and long to knock him down.

The maid had previously been dispatched with Nancy's luggage, and she had been informed by Mr. Crawshaw's groom that she would meet the bridegroom's valet and her new fellow servant at the station.

To her intense surprise, and no little disgust, this individual turned out to be none other than William, the discharged footman from the Hall, a man whom she had never liked, and for whom she had a supreme contempt.

"Like master, like man," she said to herself, as she superintended the arrangement of the luggage without bestowing any but the curtest of greetings on her companion in service.

"Well, I thank Heaven I am going to be with Miss Nancy, for I feel sure something awful would happen to her alone with these two horrid men."

There was a self-satisfied expression about William's face that annoyed her, and his flippant manner to the steady old station-master, who was, in Baines' opinion, far above the valet in every way, roused her ire beyond description.

"We shan't be together long," she said to herself, grimly, as she stood waiting for her young mistress to come, "before I give him a piece of my mind, or my name ain't Esther Baines."

And at that moment she descried the carriage turning the corner of the lane, and prepared to receive Nancy.

An angry flush spread over her honest face, followed by an angry beat of her heart, as she saw Mr. Crawshaw treat his young wife with such scant courtesy; but her anger soon changed into fear and disappointment as she saw that her new master was coming direct to her, and that his face boded no pleasant or good news for her.

"What are you doing here?" demanded Crawshaw, roughly, scanning her up and down with his deep black eyes, his hands plunged as usual into his trousers' pockets.

"I am going as maid to Mrs. Crawshaw," poor Baines replied, her heart beating fast as she read her sentence in those eyes.

"Oh, you are—are you; and pray who told you you was to be maid to Mrs. Crawshaw?"

Nancy was exchanging a few hurried, nervous words with the old stationmaster. She never passed any one by without a kindly expression, and after that long, horrible silence it was a pleasure to exchange greetings with a sympathetic person. Her husband's loud, coarse tones grated painfully on her ear; she turned quickly, and her eyes rested on William's pale, smooth face, set in outward civility, but wearing an expression which made her blood boil. She walked across to Baines.

"What is the matter—what is wrong?" she asked, in scarcely audible tones.

Baines half turned to her; the woman's lips were trembling and her eyes were full of tears; but before she could utter a word Crawshaw had gone on furiously addressing her, and not bestowing a single scrap of attention to Nancy's question, or even to her presence.

"So now you know, and you can go back to the Hall as fast as you like, and tell Miss Leicester I don't intend to let no spies of hers come snivelling after my wife. Be off with you; Mrs. Crawshaw don't want no maid, and if she do, well, I will get her one; but it won't be an old fossil from that lot over there. I've done with them all from to-day—turned my back on them—and I won't have nothing more to do with them, so you can understand me clearly."

In his anger, Mr. Crawshaw spoke with a less regard for grammar than usual.

With difficulty Baines restrained her tears; she felt she must not break down, or Nancy would be more distressed than ever. She looked at the girl imploringly.

"What am I to do, miss?" she asked, hurriedly.

This direct indifference to him lashed Crawshaw to fury.

"Do!" he shouted, "do what I tell you—be off. Come, I shan't stand any impudence or nonsense, off you go!"

Nancy put her hand up to her throat; the white flowers in her bouquet were not so pale as her face.

"What if I—I refuse to let Baines go?" she said, in low, choked tones, her pride and anger making her faint and weak.

Crawshaw turned and looked at her fixedly.

"I don't think you will go against me, Nancy," he said, in ominously quiet tones, and with a shiver she understood him. Thwart him or defy him in any way, and his cruel hand would fall on the man for whose sake she had wrecked her life. No—no, she had put her hand to the plough, she must not look back; the sacrifice was not nearly complete, but, having taken it up, it would be worse than madness to permit her uncle's shame to become known now, when by simple submission to the tyrant's will she could avert such a calamity.

"Mr. Crawshaw's wishes are mine," she said, speaking in cold, even tones, the effort of sheer desperation, "therefore you must leave me, Baines. I—I am sorry, but——"

Baines made no answer; she could not control herself sufficiently to speak, for she did not know what she might not say if she began.

Crawshaw's eyes were full of triumph.

"Come, sharp's the word," he remarked, as he turned on his heel and lurched away a few yards.

"Baines," Nancy whispered, eagerly, "I want you to tell Miss Dorothy that she—she is not to try and do anything for me until—until I ask her help; and, Baines, say I entreat, I beg, that she will never disclose my unhappiness to a soul. I can trust you, I know, Baines, but I do not want all the world to know the truth of my marriage."

"Oh Miss Nancy! Oh Miss Nancy!"

It was all poor Baines could say, and even if she had wished to speak more, she had no opportunity, for Crawshaw returned at that moment, and, without more ado, bundled her down the steps into the carriage.

A mist blinded Nancy's blue eyes as she stood and watched the departure of this last link to her lost, all too brief happiness.

Her sorrow was so keen that she seemed almost stunned by it. She did not realize the full bitterness of her position as she would have done at another time.

She glanced down at the flowers in her hand. What a mockery their fragrance and loveliness was! They had no part in her life henceforth. She had done with flowers and sunshine, happy, dreamy hours in the summer air—all was gone from her, without hope of return.

With an irrepressible shudder, she dropped the costly bouquet on the platform, and went with hurried, nervous steps to the saloon carriage which Thomas Crawshaw's money had procured to bear himself and his newly-made wife to the metropolis.

The porters and a few rustics who had congregated to see them depart cast curious glances at her. Even their dense minds grasped the fact that this was no common marriage, and that the white-faced bride deserved their pity, and not their good wishes.

But Nancy heeded none of them. She flung herself on the cushioned seat, and buried her face in her hands, not even stirring when Crawshaw entered. The door was slammed, and the train steamed slowly away.

She was not crying; she was simply overwhelmed, crushed to earth, now that the necessity for bearing up the strain of the last few weeks had gone.

Crawshaw appeared to take no notice of her. He opened a newspaper and commenced to read, whistling softly under his breath the while; but his eyes went every now and then to that bowed figure, and he bit his lip with savage anger as he realized that, though he had won—though he had compelled her by cruel means to bow beneath his power—he was, if anything, more destestable and contemptible in her eyes than before.

He had flattered himself that he would only have to show himself to Nancy in his new feathers, and she would be at his feet immediately. It seemed an utter impossibility than any woman could resist him and his wealth, more especially one who had lived in such poverty and hardship as Nancy had done.

He had a long arrear of petty spite and grudge to settle with this girl, and his whole mind had been occupied, directly she disappeared, in saving money to track her out and bring her to her bearings.

Fate, or the devil, was good to him, for he came into his unexpected fortune at the very moment when he learned, through his old companion, William, of her presence and position at Ripstone Hall.

From that moment Crawshaw had possessed but one motive in life—a desire to be even with Nancy, and despite her every struggle, make her his wife. He had not forgotten that January night when Derrick Darnley's strong right arm had stretched him low in the mud. He had brooded on it until it had become infused in his blood, as it were; and this, strengthened by Nancy's never altering disgust and dislike for him, spurred him on to the task of being revenged.

And now his task was completed.

He had humbled her to the dust. He had forced her to be his wife. His revenge was won, and yet he was not content.

He loved this girl—if such a sacred word as love can be applied to the jealous, selfish passion which surged in his mean breast. It was not enough that she was his wife—his slave; she must be his lover. Her beauty belonged to him now. Her wonderful, red-brown hair; her sweet, picturesque face; her eyes—those maddening eyes, of heaven's deepest, truest blue—all this was his by right of the marital vow she had just spoken. But Crawshaw's heart beat with a fierce, jealous throb, as he realized that, despite a hundred vows, no love would shine for him out of those eyes; her lips, instead of meeting his would shrink and grow pale if he touched them with his own; that, though she was his wife, his own property, her heart, her very soul, was given irrevocably to that other man; and that contempt, loathing, hatred, deep and immeasurable, lived in her breast for him and his cruel, cowardly conduct.

OUR AIM.

John 21: 15-17; II. Peter 1: 8.

(A Bible School Convention Motto.)

"More and better work," Lord Jesus,
We desire to do for Thee:
This it is that makes our meeting
Strong and purposeful to be.
Since Thy love, all love excelling,
Gives us in Thy house a place,
We would be to others telling
Of Thy all-redeeming grace.

"More and better work," Lord Jesus,
This it is that we desire.
May Thy gracious counsel guide us
May Thy love our hearts inspire.
All the precious moments seizing,
Better workers may we be:
More of all that is well-pleasing
May we render, Lord, to Thee.

When Thy servant with decision
Spoke his love sincere and deep,
He received Thy plain commission—
"Feed my lambs," and "tend my sheep."
And, like him, we have been learning
How Thou dost the sceptre wield;
And with love that prompts our yearning
We ourselves for service yield.

"More and better work," Lord Jesus:
Love would claim for Thee the best:
For effective work prepare us:
Grant our hearts' sincere request.
May Thy promised aid enfold us
While at better work we aim:
May Thy power divine uphold us;
May we triumph in Thy name.

$3,600 in Cash Prizes for Farmers

ARE you going to build that new horseblock, sidewalk or dairy house of cement? Then insist on your dealer supplying you with the "CANADA" Cement. Not only will this ensure your getting a pure, uniform and strictly high-grade cement, that will guarantee the lifelong permanency of the thing you build, but it will also entitle you to enter our Prize Contest. And in this contest you stand a good chance of winning a prize that will perhaps more than pay you for the cost of the work. Every farmer in Canada who uses "CANADA" Cement is eligible to compete. Four prizes will be awarded in each Province and these prizes will be divided as follows:

PRIZE "A"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who will use during 1911 the greatest number of barrels of "CANADA" Cement.
PRIZE "B"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who uses "CANADA" Cement on his farm in 1911 for the greatest number of purposes.
PRIZE "C"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who furnishes us with the photograph showing the best of any particular kind of work done on his farm during 1911 with "CANADA" Cement.
PRIZE "D"—$100.00 to be given to the farmer in each Province who submits the best and most complete description, of how any particular piece of work shown by photograph sent in, was done.

Notice how we have purposely planned and imposed certain necessary conditions in order to give large and small users of cement an equal opportunity.

As an illustration of this: In prizes "C" and "D," the quantity of cement used has no bearing whatever on the result. The farmer who sends us the best photograph of as small a thing as a watering trough or a gate post, has as much chance for prize "C" as a man who sends a photograph of a house—and the same applies to prize "D."

Don't hold back from entering because you think you don't know anything about concrete work. It's very simple. Besides, we have a 160-page book that we will send you free on request, which tells you all about concrete and how to make and use it. In this book, you'll find complete instructions for the making of almost everything you can think of in the way of farm utilities, floors, vats, troughs, stairs, posts, etc.

This free book—entitled "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete"—will not only inform you—it will also greatly interest you. So send for it anyway, whether you intend to try for one of the prizes or not.

Recipes and Other Valuable Information of Particular Interest to Women Folks.

STRAWBERRIES.

Strawberry Compote. — Slice one pint of clean, fresh berries, sprinkle over them one cupful of powdered sugar. Dissolve one tablespoon of gelatin in a little warm water. Crush fine one cupful of cake crumbs. Mix the gelatin, berries, and crumbs; turn into a mold. Whip one cupful of cream until stiff. When the fruit gelatin is firm dip by the spoonful into a glass dish, alternating with spoonfuls of the cream until the dish is full. Top with the cream and a few whole perfect berries.

Carolines with Strawberries. — Stir one cup of flour into one cup of water and half a cup of butter, boiling together. When the mixture leaves the sides of the pan turn into a mixing bowl and beat in three eggs, one at a time. Bake the mixture on a buttered sheet by the dessertspoonful, about fifttea minutes. When done split open and fill with sweetened whipped cream mixed with crushed strawberries. Or another cream filling may be used made thus: Five even teaspoonfuls of flour, one cup of milk, one-half cup of sugar, and one egg. Cook until creamy, then add one cup of crushed strawberries.

Strawberry Sandwiches.—Bake the following sponge cake in one large or two small sheets. Cut the cake into pieces of a size suitable for individual service and split each piece. Have ready some hulled and washed berries, mixed with sugar. If berries are large, cut in half. Put the prepared berries between and above the pieces of cake. Serve with cream.

Sponge Cake—Beat three eggs without separating the whites and yolks, gradually beating one cup and a half of sugar; then grated rind of a lemon and half a cup of either milk or water, and lastly, two cups of sifted flour, sifted again with half a teaspoonful of salt and two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder.

TASTY RECIPES.

Baked Spring Chicken.—Cut each of four chickens into seven or nine pieces, wash thoroughly and quickly and put in a colander to drain; put a half tablespoonful each of lard and butter into a dripping pan, lay in the pieces, and add half a pint of hot water; place in oven and bake half an hour; turn, taking care that they get only to a light brown, and just before taking up add salt and pepper to taste; when done take out in a dish and keep hot. To make the gravy, add a half pint or more of water, set the dripping pan on the stove and add one tablespoonful flour mixed with half cup of cream or milk, stirring slowly, adding a little of the mixture at a time. Let cook thoroughly, stirring constantly to prevent burning; season more if necessary.

Macaroni and Cheese.—One package of macaroni broken in small pieces and thrown into boiling salted water; boil until tender, stirring so it will not stick to the bottom of the kettle. Then turn into colander or sieve and turn cold water on it until perfectly cold, then let it drain well. It will then be nice and white and every piece will be separate, not stuck together. Have a skillet with plenty of hot fat (half lard, half butter) and fry a nice brown. Mix one cup of grated yellow cheese, one egg well beaten, one-fourth cup of catsup, one cup of tomatoes, small onion, salt and pepper. This will be thick, but must be thinned with milk until it is as thick as molasses. If preferred, more catsup and tomatoes may be added. When the macaroni is nicely browned pour this mixture over it and fry it until crisp and brown. This is much more satisfactory than the old way of baking, as it is browned all over, while in baking only the top is crisp and the bottom seems raw, and saves the trouble of heating the oven. Try it.

SPECIAL RECIPES.

Date Whip.—Whites of six eggs beaten stiff; when half whipped add one-half teaspoon cream of tartar and whip stiff. Add one cup of sifted granulated sugar, one cup of stoned and chopped dates, and one cup of chopped English walnuts. Bake in a loaf cake pan in a moderately hot oven for three-quarters of an hour. Serve with whipped cream. Can be served hot or cold.

Special Marmalade.—Have you made your marmalade yet? If not, here is a special recipe for a delightfully clear and delicious marmalade. Slice one orange, one lemon, and one grapefruit finely, rejecting nothing except seeds and cores. Measure the quantity of fruit and add to it three times that quantity of water. Let it stand in an earthenware dish over night, and next morning boil it for ten minutes only. Stand for another night and next morning add pint for pint of sugar and boil steadily for about two hours until the marmalade jellies. This makes enough marmalade to fill twelve glasses.

Ambushed Asparagus.—Cut off the tender tops of fifty heads of asparagus; boil and drain them. Have ready as many stale biscuits or rolls as there are persons to be served, from which you have cut a neat top slice and scooped out the inside. Set them in the oven to crisp, laying the tops beside them, that all may dry together. Meanwhile put into a saucepan a sugarless custard made as follows: A pint of milk and four well beaten eggs; boil the milk first, then beat in the eggs; set over the fire and stir till it thickens, when add a tablespoonful of buttter and season with salt and pepper. Into this put the asparagus, minced fine. Do not let it boil, but remove from stove as soon as the asparagus is added. Fill the rolls, put on the tops, fitting them carefully, and set in oven three minutes. Serve hot.

ALL ABOUT THE HOUSE.

Olive oil and salt will remove spots from furniture.

Wheat bran placed in coarse flannel bags is excellent for cleaning dust from delicate wall paper.

A tin kettle or coffee pot is easily cleaned by being rubbed with a woollen rag soaked in paraffin.

A spoonful of vinegar put into the water in which meat or fowls are boiling will make them tender.

Braid of check material is best mended by using several shades of silk or in one needle.

Mahogany, or any other colored wood, may be darkened by polishing with cold drawn linseed oil.

Left-over cereals need not be wasted. They are excellent fried like mush and eaten with syrup or honey.

If you rub your hands with a piece of celery after peeling onions it will quite remove the unpleasant smell.

White oilcloth is the best covering for pantry shelves. Keep red pepper around the edges to ward off insects.

When making sweet croquettes add a little sugar to the crumbs in which the croquettes are to be rolled.

Celery can be much improved by soaking it for an hour in ice cold water in which a lemon has been squeezed.

Scratches on polished wood, if not too deep, can be removed by rubbing gently with fine sandpaper and then with a mixture of olive oil and vinegar.

If you desire to serve a baked fish whole, and have it stand upright on the platter, put a carrot inside the fish before cooking and it will remain in position.

When making lemonade one of the lemons may be peeled and run through a meat-chopper with a small piece of the peel. This will give the lemonade a delightfully piquant flavor.

Fresh grease spots on the floor are removed by putting on dry soda, let stand a few minutes, pour over boiling water, let stand fifteen minutes longer, and wash up.

If ink or shoe polish gets spilled on the carpet, with blotting paper take up all you can and then cover with sweet milk. Wipe up milk and pour over more, repeating until the carpet is clean.

If grease gets spilled on the carpet, lay over blotting paper and on this set a hot iron. Repeat until all the oil is drawn out. Now cover with tailor's chalk or whiting and let stand several days and brush off.

To Clean White Paint—Mix whiting and warm water to form a paste. Dip a clean flannel rag into the mixture and rub the paint lightly. Thoroughly rinse with cold water and the white paint will come out like new.

Obtain a small piece of red cedar from a lumberman or cabinet maker and use as a stand for your iron. Starch will never stick—you won't know what it is to scrape your iron—neither will the use of wax be necessary.

Put clothes to soak in lukewarm water; rub soiled places with naptha soap; let stand until after breakfast. Then wring out and put into a boiler of hot water, in which a bar of soap has been cut, a spoonful of borax, and two of kerosene have been added; never more, as it will form dots on clothes. Boil thirty minutes, take out, rub and rinse. Unless dirty they will need no rubbing.

In life the man who shakes the tree doesn't always get the plums.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, MAY 21.

Song of the Vineyard (Temperance Lesson), Isa. 5. 1-12. Golden Text, Isa. 5. 22.

Verse I. My wellbeloved . . . my beloved — The difference in the words is merely one of rhythm. Isaiah is about to declare to the people of his time that their country is in danger from the just judgments of Jehovah. But he conceals his purpose by telling this story that all can understand. Who the beloved friend was, therefore, would hardly be asked.

A very fruitful hill—Literally, "a horn, the son of fatness," a word for "hill" peculiar to Isaiah. From Jerusalem it was possible to see many a bright promontory given up to vineyard cultivation.

2. Digged . . . gathered . . . . planted—The work of cultivation was as perfect as the situation. The choicest grapes to be found were introduced. In addition, a watch tower for the caretakers added dignity and protection to the vineyard. The wine vat would be hewed out of the solid rock, forming a receptacle for the juice from the press.

He looked . . . grapes — The confident expectation of a vinedresser, who had expended such pains on his property, would be that a fair return should come for his outlay. Instead he gets grapes that are only so in appearance.

3. And now—Marking an advance in the unfolding of the story. The prophet fittingly seeks a verdict from the men he addresses, as to what a husbandman ought to do in such a case. And with this appeal Jehovah himself enters the field, and the assemblage can be no longer in doubt as to the drift of the parable.

4. What could have been done more?—This reminds one of the sad wail of Jehovah in Isa. 1. 2, "I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me." The case of the Owner of this vineyard of human beings, the people of Judah, is a strong and unanswerable one. He justly looked for the fruits of righteous character, but instead was rewarded with only the semblance of grapes, the poison of hyprocrisy.

5. I will tell you what I will do—There is nothing unreasonable in his decision. The prophet's hearers have already practically consented to the justice of such a judgment.

The hedge—Jehovah had provided Israel with every possible restraint and privilege. This is represented by the fact that this vineyard had not only a hedge of thorns but also a wall of stone. But now all protections are to be trodden down, and the nation is to be left to the mercy of the invaders.

6. I will also command the clouds—With this the veil, if any still remained, was entirely removed. For none but Jehovah can withhold the rain.

7. For—Introducing the prophet's two-fold application of the parable: (1) The vineyard represents the people of Israel, and especially Judah, the plant of his delight; (2) The grapes he expected were justice and righteousness, and the wild grapes he found were oppression of the poor, and the cry of the oppressed. The words in the Hebrew at this point are wonderful in their studied correspondence of sounds, the effect being to deepen the impression, that the natural result of so much care of his people, on the part of Jehovah, has been cruelly perverted.

8. Woe—An indictment of the landed proprietors, who, by joining house to house, and seizing upon every nook and corner of real estate, crowd out the poor and deprive them of residential privileges. We have seen, in the case of Naboth, how tenaciously every landowner clung to his holdings, since the rights of citizenship were measured mostly by a man's possession of so much soil, and, once deprived of it, he was in danger of becoming a mere slave. Such evictions of the smaller owners of property were common in this age, and called forth the bitter denunciations of other prophets.

9. In mine ears—Jehovah takes the prophet into his confidence, and the prophet, in turn, makes the startling announcement that all these evils are known to Jehovah, and that he will not suffer them to go unrequitted. When they are secure in their houses great and fair, feasting no doubt on the spoils of their avarice, then shall come upon them the curse described in the following verse.

10. One bath—About eight gallons (of wine). This barrenness of the land, "Jehovah's remedy for land-grabbing," is still more pointedly portrayed in the profitlessness of planting grain; for one ephah shall be the sole return from the planting of ten ephahs (a homer being ten or twelve bushels, or ten times as much as an ephah).

11. Rise up early in the morning—To drink in the morning was reckoned by the Romans and Jews a shameful practice. Sensuality, in the mind of the prophet, goes along with avarice. The latter, after all, is simply self-gratification in another form, and the two often go hand in hand.

12. The harp, etc.—Mirth and music filled their feasts, but it was like a din in their ears that drowned out the voice of Jehovah, and rendered them insensible to the operation of his hands by which he was plainly about to execute a terrible judgment upon them.

NEW WAY TO TRAP ANIMALS.

Tigers Are Now Caught With Sticky Fly Paper.

A new way to catch tigers has been revealed by Payson Stewart, who has just returned to England from India where he learned about it.

A certain Indian gentleman of wealth and title has a hobby of taming and domesticating wild animals. His last experience, according to Mr. Stewart, was with tigers which he had captured and brought to his place at great expense. For a long time they were kept in a compound until they seemed to have become as harmless and tame as house cats. Then they were let loose to be pets of the neighborhood. Immediately their jungle tastes and habits returned.

The first night they cleaned out a native village and ate up something like a score of inhabitants. In spite of all the ensuing excitement, the would-be tiger tamer insisted that the animals must be captured alive and returned to the compound; they were too valuable to be killed and so the hunting party was disbanded.

No volunteers came forward, however, to catch the tigers as you do sheep, or even by putting salt on their tails. Then western ingenuity came to the front. Mr. Stewart suggested fly paper. Hundreds of sheets of it were spread around the lawns. While the anxious people in the houses were peering out that night the tigers prowled up, stepped on the sticky fly paper, seemed very much disconcerted when it did not drop off and that the more they rubbed around to wipe it away they more they got on.

In a minute or so what might have been an approaching tragedy was turned into a burlesque. The tigers changed from terrors to clowns in their struggles with the fly paper. They rolled on the ground to rub it off and finally became wiggling, howling bundles of paper instead of ferocious wild animals. They were so stuck up that they couldn't even see and hardly move, and were easily captured.

BEQUESTS TO MANY WOMEN.

Will of a Noted Engineer Being Contested in England.

A strange chapter in the love affairs of the late Colonel George Earl Church, the noted engineer, was revealed in the King's Bench Division, London, England, recently, through the suit instituted by Mrs. Annie Margaret Salmon for a share in the Church estate. The septuagenary plaintiff lost her case, the jury returning a verdict for the defendants, who were the Colonel's widow and his executors.

Colonel Church died in London on January 5, 1910. According to the prosecutor's case the Colonel met Mrs. Chase and her invalid husband on the Continent, and promised to marry her when the husband died. When Salmon passed away, however, Church married another woman. Subsequently the plaintiff agreed to accept an annuity in compensation for her disappointment.

Mrs. Salmon testified that she received the annuity for eleven years, but when Church died his executors refused to recognize the alleged agreement.

The prosecution further asserted that the Colonel's will provided for payments of $150,000 to each of three women, the wives of foreigners whom Church had met on the Continent, but Mrs. Salmon's name was omitted from the list. of beneficiaries.

Colonel Church was born at New Bedford, Mass., in 1835. He attained prominence as a colonel of the Seventh Rhode Island Infantry in the Civil War, and later for his travels, scientific study and literary work. He was the only member of the Royal Geographical Society not an English citizen.

CONCRETE FENCE-POSTS.

Several English railways, the London & Northwestern, the Great Northern and the Great Eastern, have recently constructed fence-posts of re-enforced concrete, and the results are reported to be very satisfactory. It is estimated that the "life" of such posts may extend to 100 years, while that of creosoted deal posts does not exceed 20 years. The concrete posts cost about 40 cents per yard, and it is said that in many places cement, sand and iron can be obtained and made into posts at a less price than deal timber. The same material has been tried for railway-sleepers with good results. Steel sleepers were first tried, but were found to be too noisy.

BURGLARY AT A MOSQUE.

Tunneled From Pool of Siloam to Solomon's Temple.

The inhabitants of Jerusalem have been aroused to the point of rioting by the operations of a party of English archaeologists, who are accused of having excavated beneath the inviolable Mosque of Omar and removed the relics reputed to include the Ark of the Covenant, the Censer, and other sacred vessels which belonged to the tribes of Israel.

Azmy Bey, the Turkish Governor, was mobbed on the streets for supposed complicity in the profanation and hooted as "a pig."

The mosque has been closed and is closely guarded, pending the arrival from Constantinople of officials of the Government, who will make an investigation. The expediton worked for two years on a large scale, beginning at the Village of Siloam, which lies at the south-east end of Jerusalem on the southern slope of the Mount of Olives, overlooking the Valley of Kedron and the Pool of Siloam.

The explorers are credited with having excavated a passage from the Pool of Siloam toward the place where once stood Solomon's Temple, built in 1012 B.C., pillaged and restored and finally destroyed by Titus, A.D., 70.

Failing to reach the relics sought in this manner the explorers, according to the alleged confessions of the guards of the mosque, bribed the guards, entered the mosque and after digging on six nights spirited away the treasures, "the whereabouts of which," says an Arabic paper, "none knew except God and these English."

Mystery surrounds the expedition, whose operations have been of such magnitude as to make evident that a large sum of money was invested.

DICKENS'S LITERARY GAINS.

Said to have Made About $50,000 Out of Each of Later Books.

The papers have been printing a great deal of pure nonsense on the subject of Dickens's literary gains, says London Truth. We are told among other things that the emoluments from his books were "totally inadequate, owing to the non-existence of copyright." No writer of his time was so highly paid as Dickens.

It was calculated by one who knew all about his affairs that he made about £10,000 out of each of the books which he wrote after 1846. The price paid down for "Edwin Drood" was £7,500. Author and publisher were to share equally in the profit of sales of over 25,000 copies and 50,000 were sold of each of the opening numbers. The payments for the early sheets for America and for the Tauchnitz edition must have brought the author about £2,000 besides.

Dickens is stated to have died leaving "earnings that often accrue to a respectable solicitor." This is rubbish also. Dickens left £93,000 in round figures, and this did not include a considerable sum of money that he had settled some years before his death. His readings (1858-69) had brought in about £36,000.

It is forgotten that Dickens began life without one penny and that every farthing he spent or gave away or left was earned by himself, only excepting £2,000 which was bequeathed to him by a friend about two years before his own death. Dickens lived liberally (some people said extravagantly) for about thirty-four years, he brought up and started in life a large and very expensive family and he gave away a great deal of money to needy relatives.

MEN WHO DO 100 MILES A DAY

An East Indian Caste Trained for Centuries as Runners.

Ordinary Marathon runners seem rather insignificant compared with the regular performances of a certain East Indian caste. These Kahars, also known as Jhinwarb, live in the Punjab, where for centuries they have acted as runners, fisherman and water fowl catchers.

The men are trained runners and are said to be able to go a hundred miles a day without resting. According to Baily's Magazine there is a well authenticated instance that Tika Ram, the son of Lalu Ram, carried despatches 300 miles in three days—from Mean-Mir to Meerut.

The point discussed, however, is whether the normal exercises of the Kahar post runners and the similar exertions of jinrikisha men shortened their lives, and it appears that the Kahars, trained from childhood to be distance runners, live to be old men; they are not only able to withstand the strain of running great distances under a heavy load, but thrive under it.

The jinrikisha man too, notwithstanding his irregular diet, excessive use of liquor and exposure to the elements, lives to a reasonable age. In Tokio, when a census was taken of the jinrikisha men three years ago there were found to be more than 1,300 who were over 55 years of age.

CORONATION CARD.

Official Invitations Are Fine Pieces of Workmanship.

The card inviting privileged guests to Westminster Abbey for the crowning of the King and Queen on June 22 is a remarkable piece of workmanship and design. The card which measures thirteen and a half inches by eleven and a quarter inches, is much larger than that used at the Coronation of King Edward. It is the work of Mr. Bernard Partridge. The general design, which is admirable in conception, emphasizes the maritime greatness of the British Empire, the sea, with the sun rising over it forming the fitting background for the entire design. In the centre is a beautiful winged symbolical figure of Britannia in classical drapery, carrying in her right hand the Royal sceptre with the Cross, and in the left the Orb, the emblem of sovereignty. Perched on the top of her aureoled helmet, which is also winged, sits a miniature British lion. Six smaller symbolical medallions, three on each side of the feet of the central figure, surmounted by the Royal Crown, indicate the various Dominions of the Empire.

"Why does the clock start again when it gets to twelve?" "Because thirteen is so unlucky."

New Zealand sends all persons convicted of drunkenness on four different occasions, to an island where there is no liquor and where everyone is occupied raising fruit. A much more sensible way of dealing with the chronic drunk than our own.

The Government's majority in the House has again refused to condemn Mr. Fielding's negligence in the matter of the Farmers' Bank whose failure carried such great distress to the people of Ontario. Not only does the Government seem indifferent about this particular case but it neglects to provide for the future in a general way by amending the Bank Act. The scheme seems to be to hold the revision as a club over the Banks until a time nearer the general election.

In the mad chase for the nimble dollar, the citizens of Exeter are prone to overlook the real satisfaction which is derived from tree planting, and garden pursuits generally. But there is no greater evidence of good taste than is shown in planting, caring for and nourishing trees, shrubs and flowers. Especially is this true in the residential parts of town, where every resident, whether owner or tenant, should take a hand in the decoration of his premises.

Horsemanship has suffered nothing from the developement of electricity, petrol and steam. If this is the age of the auto and the aeroplane, it is no less the real era of the horse. Machinery may replace him as a motive and traction power, just as it replaced hand labor in the factory and on the farm. The status of the laborer has suffered nothing from the evolution. His position is vastly better than it ever was when the introduction of engines and looms first filled his mind with apprehension. What progress, lent by these agencies, has done for labor, is also being done for horsemanship. Never was there such strong incentive to intelligent enterprise in horse-breeding as at the present time, when roads are full of autos, and when steam plows, each of them capable of plowing and seeding a quarter section per week, are dotting the great wheat fields of the West.

When the census man calls in June you will be asked a great many questions, such as :—Name of each person in family, place of habitation, sex, relationship of head of family or household, whether single, married, widowed, divorced, or legally separated, month of birth and age at last birthday. The following questions as to citizenship, nationality and religion also appear,—County or place of birth, year of immigration to Canada if an immigration, year of naturalization if formerly an alien, racial or tribal origin, nationality and religion, also occupation or trade, employment, employer, employee, or working on your own account you will be asked where you are employed, if you are a wage earner, what you work at, by the day or hour, what wages you receive, you total earnings. If you are insured, the amount on your life and against accidents and sickness, and what it cost you. Your education will be looked into, and also your physical condition or disabilities. The census man will not be satisfied until you give him all the particulars, but you can rest easy as he is sworn to secrecy.

A bulletin of the Census Office makes the following report on the crops and live stock of Canada.

The seeding and growing season for the whole of Canada has opened late this year, and the month of April has been marked by hard frosts. But May has been favorable to cultivation of the land, and the rainfall has been sufficient for healthy vegetation.

Fall wheat, which is grown chiefly in Ontario and Alberta, showed an average condition of 82 per cent. at the end of April, being 89 per cent. in Alberta and 81 per cent. in Ontario. In Ontario however, the April frosts were destructive in some regions; and from 12 to 34 per cent. of the area sown has been reported as winter-killed. The central counties, north of lake Ontario, suffered worst, the average loss as reported being 34 per cent. In the western counties 27 per cent. of the area in crop has been destroyed. In the southern counties, north of lake Erie, the loss is 10 per cent.; in the northern counties and districts 12.6 per cent.; and in the eastern counties, between the St. Lawrence and Ottawa rivers, 15 per cent. For the whole of Canada the area winter-killed is reported to be 21 per cent. and the per cent. condition of the growing crop is 82.

About 12½ per cent. of the clover was heaved out by the spring frosts, and the average condition of hay and clover at the end of April was 89 per cent. Alberta shows better than any other part of Canada, its average being 94 and half per cent. Nova Scotia comes next, with 93.75; and in Quebec, B. C. Saskatchewan the condition is over 90. In Ontario it is 86 and in Manitoba 85 per cent.

The percentage of total seeding completed at the end of April was 21.35 in Quebec, 44 in Ontario, 47 in Manitoba, 47.30 in Saskatchewan, 86.81 in Alberta and 76.90 in British Columbia. Manitoba and Saskatchewan had 70 per cent. of the proposed area of spring wheat sown at the end of April and Alberta and B.C. 80 per cent. The Maritime Provinces had scarcely made a beginning of seeding operations at the end of April, and in Quebec barely one fourth of the spring wheat, oats and barley were sown. In Ontario 51 per cent. of the spring wheat was in the ground, 44 per cent. of the oats and 42½ per cent. of the barley.

LIFE IS A FUNNY PROPOSITOIN—Man comes into this world without his consent and leaves it against his will. During his stay on earth his time is spent in one continuous round of contraries and misunderstandings by the balance of our species. In his infancy he is an angel; in his boyhood, he is a devil; in his manhood he is everything from a lizard up; in his duties he is an utter fool; if he raises a family he is a chump; if he raises a little check, he is a thief and then the law plays the devil with him. If he is a poor man, he is a poor manager and has no sense; if he is a rich man, he is dishonest, but considered smart; if he is in politics he is a grafter and a crook; if he is not in politics, you can't place him, as he is an undesirable citizen; if he goes to church he is a hypocrite; if he stays away from church, he is a sinner and damned; if he donates to foreign missions, he does it for show; if he doesn't, he is stingy and a tightwad. When he first comes into the world everybody wants to kiss him; before he goes out they all want to kick him. If he does young, there was a great future before him; if he lives to a ripe old age, he is simply in the way and living to save funeral expenses.

My little boy, three years old was covered from head to foot with eczema. I tried over twenty different kinds of salves and washes but could not see any improvement—in fact it seemed to be getting worse.

VARICOSE VEINS CURED

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

THE FESTIVAL OF EMPIRE

Great Crowds Greeted His Majesty and the Queen at the Opening

A despatch from London says: The Festival of Empire, a combination of Industrial Exhibition with pageantry illustrative of the striking periods and episodes in the history of the different parts of the British Empire, was opened at the Crystal Palace on Friday by King George and Queen Mary. It was the first public ceremony of their Majesties since the Court mourning for King Edward was ended, and the first of a long series of functions which promise to make the Coronation season memorable. The weather was beautiful. It was a perfect English Spring day, such as was usually referred to as "Queen's weather" in the time of the late Queen Victoria. Thousands of flags were displayed along the eight miles of the parade, and how the thousands of people who had assembled did cheer his Majesty adding to the steady, oft-repeated call of "The King," "The King." The Monarch bowed gravely in response to these demonstrations, and the Queen smiled joyously. The King was in ordinary dress, and the Queen wore a lilac gown and a hat to match.

THE CROPS HAVE DONE WELL

So Says Seed Expert at the Ontario Agricultural College

A despatch from Guelph says: "The Winter crops have come through very well all through the province," said Mr. Squirrell, assistant to Prof. C. A. Zavitz, of the Seed and Experimental Department of the O.A.C., on Friday. "There are a few districts scattered about the Province where the crops sown last Fall have not wintered very well, but these are much in the minority and the winter crops generally have come through the winter splendidly and promise a good yield almost everywhere in Ontario. At least a very satisfactory average may be confidently looked for.

"No less encouraging are the indications with respect to Spring crops, according to the reports received by this department. The Spring wheat, barley and oat crops are just nicely getting through the ground and an average of the reports received shows that there has been a good germination of the seed and the fields look healthy. The weather in most districts has been favorable for seeding operations. There has been increased quantity of alfalfa sown this year, but it is too soon to speak about the root crop."

CHARCOAL PLANT BURNED.

Five Hundred Men Thrown Out of Employment.

A despatch from Sault St. Marie, Ont., says: In a disastrous fire at the charcoal plant of the Standard Chemical, Iron & Lumber Company, Steelton, on Saturday night the entire retort plant was destroyed and is a total loss. The damage is covered by insurance. It is claimed by one of the men employed that the fire started as a result of an explosion of gas in one of the old mains used before the reconstruction, but the management states that the blaze started in the charcoal loading sheds. The boiler house and by-product plant were saved, but the manufacture of charcoal is suspended indefinitely. Five hundred men are thrown out of employment, besides a number in the woods cutting to supply wood for operation. The plant will be reconstructed upon advice from the head office, Toronto.

KILLED IN GRAVEL PIT.

Falling Mass of Earth Struck Laborer at Ottawa.

A despatch from Ottawa says: While working a gravel pit at Britannia Park on Thursday a falling mass of earth struck Rose, a workman, and he was killed. He leaves a widow and five children in Ottawa.

INFANT KILLED BY BEAR.

Animal Kept in Yard and Child Went in to Play With It.

A despatch from Cargary, Alberta, says: Lucille, the twenty-months old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Morley, Albion block, died on Saturday night as the result of a mauling it received from a bear that was kept in the yard adjoining firemen's headquarters, during the afternoon on Friday. The child strayed to the Firehall Menagerie and was pulled away by the big bear. She was trying to play with the animal. The firemen took the baby home, and left a warning that it was not to be allowed in the yard again. Somehow it strayed in again, and no one saw it until the firemen noticed the bear mauling the helpless body. Chief Smart had the animal killed at once.

ORILLIA GROWING.

Assessment Roll Shows Increase in Population of 775.

A despatch from Orillia says: The assessment roll returned on Wednesday shows the population of Orillia to be 6,478, an increase of 775 over last year. The total assessment is over three million dollars, which is a round million more than last year.

QUEEN-MOTHER VERY ILL?

New York Paper Publishes Alarmist Report of Her Condition

A despatch from New York says: The American published a cable from London on Friday morning which says that grave rumors are in circulation in regard to Queen Dowager Alexandra's health. The despatch says that the utmost endeavor is being made to keep the matter secret, but the fact that her life has been in danger for some time past has percolated down to the shopkeepers and others. This has resulted in a rush to Lloyd's Company insurance against financial loss in the event of the Dowager Queen's death postponing the Coronation.

"Ten guineas per cent.," the despatch continues, "for three months' insurance on Alexandra's life, is the present ruling rate."

Although the Coronation is only six weeks away, ten guineas per cent. is also quoted as the rate against the postponement of that event. Two months ago the rate was only two guineas per cent. Many conservative underwriters are now refusing to accept any further risks.

"The truth about Queen Alexandra is that she never recovered from her bereavement following King Edward's death."

RENOVATING RIDEAU HALL

Commons Vote Fifty Thousand Dollars to Prepare for Duke's Coming

A despatch from Ottawa says: In Committee of Supply in the Commons on Thursday night a vote of fifty thousand dollars for improvements to Rideau Hall, preparatory to the arrival of the Duke of Connaught, was passed.

Hon. Dr. Pugsley said his Royal Highness had sent a message asking that no unnecessary expense be gone to in making preparations for his arrival. However, it was deemed wise to make some improvements. The Chief Architect had gone over the place with a representative of the Duke of Connaught, and it had been decided to tear down some portions of the present premises and replace them. It was proposed to expend this money in the erection of two cottages for servants, a garage, to improve the sewerage system of the Hall, and to decorate some portions of the interior.

"It would be a good thing to tear the present building down and build a new and more suitable one," remarked Mr. Borden.

Dr. Pugsley agreed.

CARROLL GUILTY OF MURDER

He Killed Joseph Tallion With an Axe in a Lumber Camp

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says: William Carroll, aged sixty-five, who in 1902 escaped from the London Asylum upon the eve of his discharge as fully cured, was convicted of the murder of Jos. Tallion in a lumber camp near Blind River, at the Assizes here on Thursday afternoon. The jury returned a verdict of guilty, with a recommendation of mercy. Both were employed at Waldie Bros.' camp, last November, and, according to three witnesses, Carroll entered the shanty at 5.30 o'clock in the evening and struck Tallion on the head with a double-bitted axe, afterward admitting that he had mistaken Tallion for another man against whom he had a grudge.

In the court on Thursday Carroll was unconcerned, and did not change his attitude of indifference when the verdict was announced. The defence entered a plea of insanity, which was not considered by the jury after the evidence of Drs. Bruce Smith and Ryan, who stated that the man was in a condition to realize what he was doing.

The charge of Mr. Justice Britton was slightly against the prisoner.

T. & N. O. TRAIN STRUCK ROCK

It is supposed the rock was dislodged by the violent thunderstorm which swept over the country.

Vickers, Sons and Maxim Will Build One at Montreal

A despatch from Montreal says: Hon. L. P. Brodeur, who left on the Virginian on Thursday night, stated that the contract for the dry-dock at Montreal had been definitely awarded to Messrs. Vickers, Sons and Maxim. The subsidy to be paid to the contractors by the Federal Government will be at the rate of 3½ per cent. on a capital outlay of $3,000,000 for 38 years. The dry-dock will have a lifting capacity of 25,000 tons, sufficient to accommodate any vessel likely to use the St. Lawrence route for many years to come. Nothing definite has been settled as to the establishment of a dry-dock at Quebec.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Frederick Borden, Col. Sam Hughes, Senator Melvin Jones and Mr. H. A. Allan also sailed on the Virginian to attend the Coronation ceremonies.

THE BRIGHTEST DAY FOR EVERY WOMAN

Comes With Good Health Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Her brightest day for every girl and every woman is the day when she looks well, feels well and is well, but with most of the fair sex such days are rare. Instead they suffer from a painful languor, have a terrible weakness in the back, headaches that make everything seem blurred, and a ceaseless aching in the limbs. These and other trials afflict girls and women through the lack of rich, red blood nature is calling for. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have given the joy of real robust health to thousands of women who are happy today because these Pills actually make the rich, red blood that makes weak ones well and strong. This statement has been proven over and over again. Here is further proof from Mrs. C. J. Brook, Manitou, Man., who says: "After a busy term on second class work, followed only by a short time of relaxation, and a strenuous two and a half months normal course, in March, 1906, I began teaching school. I had a heavy rural school, with a large attendance, and consequently a large number of grades, thus I found the work a great nervous strain. This added to the overwork of study, previous to teaching, soon resulted in a "run down" condition. When vacation time came I did not pay much attention to my condition as I thought the holidays would restore me, but as I resumed work again I soon found this was not the case. One morning when I came to breakfast everything reeled before me and I almost fainted away. The lady with whom I was boarding advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She always spoke very highly of them, her daughter having used them with the most beneficial results following a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism. I decided to take her advice, and had only taken a few boxes when I began to improve in health—and such an appetite as I had. I rapidly gained health, my face had a healthy glow, and I gained in weight. I have since often recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to others who have used them with equally beneficial results, and I believe the Pills to be a standard remedy for the ills for which you recommend them."

You can get these Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SUCH A SIMPLE MATTER.

A benevolent old gentleman stopped at the sight of two similar-looking infants in a baby carriage.

"Ah, twins!" he said to the nurse. "And how do you know them apart? Which is which?"

"This one," answered the nurse, pointing, "is this, and that one is that."

"Quite so," said the gentleman. "But"—indicating the second one—"might not this one be this also?"

"It might," replied the girl; "but then that one would be that."

"And how do you manage to separate them?"

"We put one in one room, and the other in another."

"Indeed! And which one do you put in one room?"

"Sometimes this one, and sometimes that."

"And how do you know which one you're putting in which room?"

"We look and see which one is in the other room, and then we know that the other is in this room."

"Good!" said the gentleman. "But if one of them was in the house, and the other was away somewhere, would you be able to tell which was in the house?"

"Oh, yes, sir," replied the girl earnestly. "All we would have to do would be to look at him, and then we'd know that the one we saw was the one in the house, and then, of course, the one away somewhere would be the other. There are only two of them, you see, which makes it very easy."

CLEVER SWINDLER ESCAPES.

Captivating German Maidens' Hearts His Specialty.

A notorious swindler of a high order of talent, whose specialty was the marriage line, and whose most recent alias was General Count von Passy, has just made his escape from the prison at Heilbronn, Germany.

On a recent morning his cell window, which looks out on a narrow lane, was found open, the iron bars securing it being filed through and the count gone. It is presumed that he had assistance from outside. He found time before leaving prison to write a polite not to the Crown Prosecutor, begging forgiveness for causing this official so much trouble.

"The fact is," wrote the count, "that I am obliged to attend to certain very important matters, and must therefore renounce your hospitality."

"Count von Passy" first became prominent about five years ago as Major von Schiemangk. An American major of cavalry he called himself. He donned a uniform which was that of the United States cavalry, plus several bits of gold lace and numerous gilded buttons, which were not in the army regulations. He explained afterward with shocking cynicism that ladies liked these gilded additions, and that they enabled him to reach their hearts more speedily. Be this as it may, he carried on his adventures for some time with impunity and was said to have netted considerable sums from guileless maidens and from widows.

At last he made the acquaintance of the widow of a naval officer, who was on the point of handing him over 3,000 marks as guarantee money, when she thought better of it and asked for the assistance of the police. The result was disastrous for the major, and sentence of three years' imprisonment was evidence of the manner in which the Court of Justice viewed his enterprise. Last August he was liberated from jail, and it seems he at once resumed operations in the same fertile field. After several small affairs he happened on the daughter of a rich citizen of Heilbronn and introduced himself as Count von Passy. On the strength of forged documents he became possessed of the fine old castle of Stettenheim, in the neighborhood, and the wealthy young woman, having ambitions and desirous of becoming Countess von Passy of Stettenheim, was induced to fly with her count to Berlin, where he put her up at one of the best hotels of the capital. It was at this point that the young lady's father took action. The count, finding Berlin too hot for him, fled to Frankfurt, where Nemesis overtook him, and he was removed to Heilbronn.

The "count" is described as a man of the most engaging personality, with the frank and easy bearing of a soldier. He is at his best when narrating his military experience in the Phillipines, which he may have seen on the map.

SUFFERED GREATLY FROM COLIC

Mrs. Aime Guenette, L'Immaculee Conception, Que., writes: "My little boy suffered greatly from colic. I gave him castor oil and other medicines without helping him in the least. One day I saw Baby's Own Tablets advertised, so wrote for a box. I found them so good that I always keep them in the house and would use no other medicine for baby." The experience of Mrs. Guenette has been that of thousands of other mothers. Not only do the Tablets cure colic, but they cure constipation, vomiting, indigestion, make teething easy, banish worms and make baby bright, active and happy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FERDINAND THE FAITHFUL.

Wearily Ferdinand the frayed trudged up the garden path, and took off his hat to the woman at the door.

She eyed him keenly, and a quick flash of recognition passed over her countenance.

"Look here," she said, "you called at this house in the depth of last winer."

"I did, ma'am," he sorrowfully admitted.

"And I gave you a good square meal on condition that you swept the snow out of my backyard."

"That's right, ma'am."

"And when you had the meal you sneaked off without doing it."

Ferdinand passed the back of his hand tremulously over his eyes.

"Yes, ma'am," he said brokenly, "and my conscience smote me for the mean trick. That's why I've tramped all the way back under the scorching sun to finish the job!"

"That woman who lives next door, James," said Eliza, the young married woman, to her husband, "is the laziest, dreadfullest, most gossiping person I have met during my whole life. She does nothing but talk, morning, noon, and night. I am perfectly certain that she can never get any work done."

"Ah," replied her husband, "I thought she was a chatterbox. And to whom does she talk all day long?"

"Why, my dear, to me, of course," was the reply. "She talks to me over the garden wall."

The schoolmaster was explaining the circulation of the blood. "If I were to stand on my head, the blood would rush to my head, wouldn't it?" No one contradicted him. "Now," he continued, "when I stand on my feet, why doesn't it rush to my feet?" "Because," the bright boy suggested, "your feet ain't empty!"

A SURPRISE PARTY.

An Incident of the Early Days of the Northwest.

The Canadian Pacific Railway, it is announced, will open up in the spring fifty new towns situated on branch lines. The great Northwest is becoming one of the settled countries of the world. The necessities for "roughing it" are growing less. To-day the traveller finds a far different country from that described by J. A. Lees and W. J. Clutterbuck in "B. C. 1887." Among some of the anecdotes related by them is the following. It is the old story of the tenderfoot, but with a new ending.

A Britisher, settled out there, appeared one Sunday in a "stovepipe" hat. The citizens expressed their appreciation by pouncing out of corners and other places of vantage, and bonneting the unfortunate wearer. The first "topper" was thus reduced to pulp. However, the undaunted proprietor appeared the next Sunday with a lovely new one, which one of the "boys" marked as his prey when they came out of church.

The joker was a tall man. He swung his hand aloft and brought it flat down on the hat with wonderful emphasis. The populace yelled with delight. The joker yelled also, but from a different cause.

The worthy stickler for "stovepipe" hats had skilfully inserted tacks beneath and through the crown of his head-gear in such a way that they stuck upward through the nap. Now, if he chooses to keep his hat on during the service no one remonstrates.

The trial will be inexpensive and the result will be another customer for this excellent medicine. So effective is their action that many cures can certainly be traced to their use where other pills have proved ineffective.

SUBMARINES AND WIRELESS.

The British Admiralty has decided to equip certain classes of submarine naval boats with wireless telegraph apparatus. Experiments last year convinced the officials that the plan is feasible. No difficulty was found in receiving messages from a distance of fifty miles in every direction but there was considerable difficulty in sending messages from the submerged vessels. This has been overcome, it is thought, by the plan of giving each boat a mast and gaff for supporting the aerial wires, means being provided for lowering the mast to the level of the upper deck when not in use. Water tight sockets in the upper deck permit the passage of the wires down to the instruments in the hull of the vessel.

The Winnipeg Tribune of May 6th contained an account of the Young Womans Council of Grace Church, in which they presented the Shakespearian comedy, "As You Like It", commenting on the Characters, says of one of them.—"Miss Maud Taylor took the part of Rosalind daughter of the banished duke, and was particularly fine in the first act." A newspaper editor in one of the Manitoba villages had the joke on a citizen of his burg not long since. This citizen and his family, who are great admirers of the departmental store bought all the goods in Winnipeg. A few weeks ago a daughter of the citizen got married and the entire wedding paraphernalia including the invitations was purchased in the city. The day after the wedding the brides' father brought to the newspaper office a long account of the event but when the paper appeared it contained nothing about the wedding but an account of three or four lines. Next day the citizen called at the newspaper office to demand an explanation why the report of the wedding had not been printed. "Oh that's all right",—said the editor you will likely find it in one of the city departmental store catalogues.

While driving to church on Sunday Mr. Wilson Hawkins' horse became frightened, and ran away, with the result that while turning into a gateway the beast ran against a post, and coming in contact with the hinge injured its shoulder badly

On Saturday last, while Mr. Jas. Martin of Seaforth, and Mr. Wm. Higgins of Usborne were driving into town they had an unpleasant experience. The horse was standing in the middle of the road, and when about to start it turned quickly, upsetting the buggy and occupants, with the result that Mr Martin sustained a badly sprained wrist, a split nose, and other injuries, while Mr. Higgins was also considerably bruised about the head. The rig was only slightly damaged.

The Crystal City Courier Says.—"The heavy rain of Wednesday night followed by the blizzard on Thursday has furnished sufficient moisture for the time being and crop prospects are now better than ever. The snow fall was exceptionally heavy for a late spring storm, and being accompanied by a high wind from the north every one was glad to escape the fury of the elements by remaining in doors. The skating and curling rink collapsed under the weight of snow.

While turning the corner at the Presbyterian church on Monday afternoon Mr. R. G. Seldon's rubber-tired buggy, in which he and Tom Carling, jr., were riding, overturned and the occupants were thrown out, the horse escaping. She ran right on to Hensall, where some men attempted to stop her, and she ran against a tree, damaging the buggy to such an extent that it is fit only for the scrap heap. The horse was not injured in any way, and stood the long run beautifully. Mr. Seldon autoed to Hensall with Wilbur Martin and brought the animal home.

The following were present, Miss I. E. Sharman, vice president, Goderich, W. H. Johnston, secretary, Kippen, Miss J. Hamilton, Winchelsea, and J. H. Lowery, Holmesville. An interesting program was prepared for the October meeting.

DEATH OF RAY FANSON. — Word was received here on Monday afternoon of the death in Detroit that day of a former Exeter boy, Ray Fanson, aged 33 years. Deceased had for some time been a sufferer from anemia, and came from his home in Abernethy, Sask., some months ago, to secure treatment. After a few weeks visit here he went up Detroit, where his brother-in-law, Dr. Harrison, about two months ago, performed an operation by which he transferred some pints of blood from a healthy man into Mr. Fanson's veins. He rallied after the operation, but it was only temporary and served simply to prolong his life a few weeks. He became too weak at last to have the operation repeated, Mr. Fanson leaves a wife and two little boys. The remains were interred at Detroit on Wednesday, under the auspices of the I. O. F., of which he was a member. Ray grew to manhood here and was well and favorably known to many Exeter residents, who regret very much his early demise, and extend sympathy to the bereaved relatives.

Mrs. Aquilla Sheere and children of Lansing, Mich., are visiting relatives here.

Miss Clara Davis of Ingersoll, and Miss Francis Davis of Wingham holidayed here.

Mr. D. B. Sanders was in Hamilton and London Wednesday on business in connection with the Canning factory.

Word has been received here by relatives that Mrs. Nelson Sheere of Fort William underwent an operation at the hospital in that place for appendicitis. The operation was a success and the patient is doing nicely.

Sergt-Major F. E. Hector left Monday morning to join the other members of the Coronation contingent. He expects to be absent six or eight weeks. Commenting on the men as they congregated in London Monday, the Free Press said —A notable figure among the militiamen was Sergeant-Major F. E. Hector, W.O., of Exeter, 33rd Huron Regiment. With the caution of the old-timer, he wore service khaki, his "reds" carefully packed away from the dust of travel. Mr. Hector "did 16 years hard" in a British regiment of the line, saw active service in China, where he was wounded, and also in South Africa. For seven years he has been with the Huron corps six of these years as sergeant-major. His service has won him three medals, with six bars, and there is no more popular warrant officer in Ontario.

Large congregations attended the Sunday services in Caven Presbyterian Church, when Rev. Ross of London occupied the pulpit, the occasion being the first Sunday of the golden jubilee celebration. Miss Lang, soprano soloist, of Granton assisted the choir in the musical part of the services, which were very interesting. On Monday evening a social evening was enjoyed, when ice cream, lemonade and cake were served and addresses were given by Rev. Sharp the pastor, Rev. Carriere of Grand Bend Rev. Small of Blyth, Rev. Fletcher of Thames Road, and the resident ministers, Revs. Hobbs, Collins and Powell. Miss Lang again assisted the choir in music, as did also Miss Edna Follick. On Tuesday evening Mr. W. C. Senior of Toronto gave an interesting address on the Laymen's Missionary Movement. Special services will again be held next Sunday.

The May District meeting of the Exeter District of the Methodist church was held in Main street Methodist church on May 18th and 19th. Ministerial Session held Friday afternoon, when all the ministers of the District were present. On Thursday evening, Rev. J. E. J. Millyard of Hensall gave a very able paper on the "Book of Jonah". On Friday the Laymen from all the circuits were present. Rev. Wm. Godwin Parkhill, chairman of the District occupied the chair. Rev. G. J. Kerr, Lucan, Financial Secretary. The Rev. T. A. Steadman, Grand Bend, was elected Journal Secretary. The financial affairs of the District were found to be in a very satisfactory condition. Most of the connexional funds were found of the connexional friends were found to be in advance of last year. The missionary Fund nearly $3,000 in advance of last year. The re-arrangement of the work affecting Main Street, Centralia and Elimville is as follows.— Main Street and Bethany, Elimville, Zion and Sunshine, Centralia and Whalen, making three good circuits.

The Rev. Hugh Watson of Elimville tendered his resignation, which was accepted with expressions of regret. Mr. Watson wishes to pursue a University course on the other side. The following Laymen were elected to attend conference from Exeter. Mr. Henry E. Huston and Mr. McCallum, Main St. and Mr. John May and Mr. W. H. Kestle, representing James Street.

BASEBALL

The first local ball game was played on the skinned diamond here on Friday evening between Exeter and Zurich Juniors, when the latter won out, 5-4. Wurm of Zurich, who umpired, made it absolutely impossible for Exeter to win, from the fact that his decisions were rank in spots, and he took care that they were always costly spots. However both teams put up good ball which was interesting all the way, and a good crowd of enthusiasts was present. The boys are greatly encouraged by the way the fans turned out, and hope to hold their interest throughout the season. Reg. Bissett for Exeter struck out nine men, while Hoffman for the visitors fanned twelve. Other features were the homer and three-bagger by Hoskins, and two doubles, one credited to Jimmy Bawden and the other to Doc. Mallott. The line up was.—

Zurich—Brown 2, C. Weber 0, Hoffman 0, Keehler 0, Thiel 0, Eilber 0 M. Weber 0, Bender 1, Howald 2.—5.

Exeter—Mallott 1, Birney 0, Hoskins 2, Bawden 0, Sweet0, Prescator 0, Fuke 0, Bissett 1, Snell 0.—4.

Score by innings.—

Exeter	0	0	0	1	0	2	1	0	0	—4
Zurich	0	0	2	0	0	1	0	2	0	—5

The Brinsley ball team and the locals played morning and afternoon games May 24th, Exeter winning both games, 12-7 and 17-8. T. Hoyle unpired. Weir Dorman and Bradley were the battery for the visitors, while Brintnell, Carling and Hoskins did similar duty for Exeter.

THAMES ROAD

Darling—Hunkin—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hunkin of Usborne was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday of this week, when their daughter, Miss Florence M., was united in marriage to Mr. Amos Darling of McGillivray. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Colin Fletcher at six o'clock in the evening in the presence of over a hundred guests. The bride, attired in silk Mulle, trimmed with satin and beading, a long bridal veil trimmed with orange blossoms, and carrying a shower bouquet of white carnations, looked charming, and was given away by her father, Reeve Hunkin, the march being played by Miss Stella Passmore. She was attended by little Miss Eva Hunkin and little Miss Arabella Hunkin, cousin and niece, respectively of the bride, and each carried a basket of carnations and sweet peas. The bride's suit was of navy blue panama. The wedding presents which were numerous and costly, showed the high esteem in which the bride is held. The groom's present to the bride was a beautiful crescent, while his gifts to the flower girls were beautiful gold necklaces. The ceremony over a very dainty tea was served, followed by a pleasant evening spent socially. The young couple will have the best wishes of their many friends for a long and happy wedded life.

JUNE BUG PEST.

The June bug pest has again arrived, but with a greater magnitude than has ever been known before in this section. At night the air is full of them. The fruit, shade and other trees are literally besieged with the pests, with the result that fruit blossoms, and the leaves of the trees are suffering greatly from their ravages, and in many instances blossoms and leaves are completely shorn from the branches. The bugs now emerging are only the vanguard of the main army which fills the ground and continues coming out for a month or more. There is every indication that the fruit crop will be entirely destoyed for this year, which is a serious matter, but if no parasites, or checking agency intervenes, millions of the eggs will be laid to hatch out and develope into the white grub that has been so common and played such havoc in years past—but particularly last year. The black bird seems to be their greatest enemy and have been known to follow the plowman for miles in search of the white grub that lays in the ground. Some farmers in this section—particularly in Usborne—are fighting the pest, and it is quite common now to see a lantern set out, elevated over a tub of water in a farmer's yard. The bug is attracted by the light and on striking the lantern drops into the tub and there soon dies. They are a cabby thing and do not make much struggle for life. We have had instances of immense destruction, Mr. Wm. Coward of Usborne having captured no less than a heaping patent pail full on Thursday night, and Mr. Rich. Quance of town two pails full by this means. It is by this means, and it seems by this means only, that the pest can be destoyed successfully. Now is the time for farmers to get busy before another crop of eggs are deposited. It would be well for the Agricultural College to take the matter up as it is a serious one and is becoming more so every year.

The above mentioned pails of bugs are but fractional of the quantity some men have captured. Mr. F. Triebner reports capturing two grain bags full.

A FATAL MISTAKE

Goderich, Ont. May 19—James McIlwain, a farmer of Goderich Township, recently made a mistake which caused his death. He usually kept a sealer of buttermilk in a cupboard, and recently a cleaning preparation of lye was placed beside it in a similar vessel. About a week ago, in the half dark of the evening, McIlwain drank from the sealer of lye, taking two or three mouthful before discovering his error. Prompt medical treatment failed and he died in terrible agony.

Hints for Busy Housekeepers.

Recipes and Other Valuable Information of Particular Interest to Women Folks.

SANDWICHES.

Lettuce.—Select the smaller leaves of a head of lettuce, wash thoroughly and roll in damp napkin and place on ice. Make the following dressing. If made as directed it will be perfect: Yolks of two eggs, three-quarters of a pint of olive oil, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, saltspoonful of salt, saltspoonful of mustard, dry, dash of cayenne pepper. Have bowl, egg beater and oil as cold as possible. Break the yolks into the bowl, mix with salt, mustard, and cayenne pepper. Begin to beat with egg beater, adding the oil a little at first, then more rapidly until half is used. Then add the lemon juice, beat well, then the rest of the oil. When finished spread on the crisp lettuce leaves and place between thin slices of buttered bread.

Olive and Nut.—A 10 cent bottle of olives stuffed with red peppers and a quarter of a pound of shelled walnuts. Chop both finely together, mix with a boiled salad dressing, and spread between thin slices of buttered bread.

Ham.—Mix half a teaspoonful of dry mustard with a quarter of a teaspoonful of sugar, add two tablespoonfuls of cold water. Have quarter of a pound of boiled ham finely chopped. Add this to the well mixed mustard, spread between thin slices of buttered bread.

Chicken.—One cupful of finely chopped chicken, stewed preferred, as more moist. Mix with a little gravy, if possible; if not, a little boiled salad dressing is good. To this add just a dash of celery salt. Spread between slices of buttered bread.

Sardine.—French sardines are best. Buy a 25 cent box. Remove skin and backbone from the fish. Mash well and add a tablespoonful of lemon juice. This spread between little salteens is dainty.

Egg.—Boil two eggs hard fifteen minutes. Place in cold water for a second to keep white from discoloring, remove shells and place eggs in a bowl with a piece of butter the size of a walnut and chop. When chopped quite fine add a dash of pepper, a saltspoon of salt, and one-half a teaspoonful of onion juice. Spread between thin slices of buttered bread.

Peanut.—Buy a pint of freshly roasted peanuts. Remove the shells and skins and chop finely. Add enough melted butter to make peanuts stick together. Spread between thin slices of buttered bread.

Cucumber.—Select rather a small cucumber. Slice thin and cover over with the following dressing: Three tablespoonfuls of vinegar; five tablespoonfuls of salad oil; one saltspoonful of salt; one-half teaspoonful of onion juice; one-fourth teaspoonful black pepper; dash of cayenne pepper. Place cucumbers in dish small enough for dressing to cover, then place dish on ice to chill. Spread between thin slices of buttered bread.

PIE.

Cream Custard Pie.—One cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of flour, two eggs, a pinch of salt; put in a dish and beat until light; beat two cupfuls of milk and pour on the sugar and eggs; have your crust ready and fill while the stuff is hot; have your oven about the heat that you have for bread; keep watch that it does not bake too long, if it does it will spoil your pie; take your pie out of the oven when it will shake yet; the goodness of a custard is in the baking.

Six Varieties of Cream Pie.—For each pie one cup of milk, one cup of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, well beaten yolks of two eggs, one tablespoonful of corn starch. Cook until thick, flavor to taste, and put in a crust previously baked.

Beat the whites of the two eggs until stiff. Put two tablespoonfuls of sugar in, put on pie and set in oven to brown. The variations are following, which are: When the filling is cooked stir through it one scant teaspoonful each of ground cinnamon and cloves. This is a favorite and is called "spice pie."

Cocoanut Pie—Cook filling as directed and beat two tablespoonfuls of cocoanut in the white of the eggs.

Chocolate Pie—Grate two heaping tablespoonfuls of chocolate in each pie and cook in the filling.

Banana Pie—Slice two bananas into baked crust, then pour filling over same and bake as directed.

Orange Pie—Prepare same as banana pie, using oranges instead of bananas.

Nut Pie—Cook filling as directed, then stir in one cup of finely chopped nuts through the pie, reserving a few to dot on top.

Raisin Pie.—One-half cupful soft raisins. Cover with one cupful of cold water and soak two hours. Beat one egg until light, add one cupful of sugar, the juice and grated rind of one lemon, and one tablespoonful of flour. Add the raisins and water in which they have been soaking and cook until mixture thickens. Bake in two crusts.

CAKE.

Sponge Cake.—Separate the whites and yolks of four eggs. Beat whites till you can turn dish upside down and they will remain in, then beat into this one-half cup of granulated sugar. Beat the yolks; add to them one-half cup of sugar, beating five minutes by the clock (this is important). Add to the yolks the juice and grated rind of one lemon. Now beat together the whites and yolks. Now beating is in order, but must be avoided after adding the flour, of which take one cup three times sifted. Fold into the eggs. Bake twenty-five to thirty-five minutes in moderate oven. Sift one tablespoon granulated sugar on top first before putting in oven.

Individual Shortcake.—Sift one cup flour, one cup of sugar, and one rounding teaspoon baking powder three times. Place one tablespoon of butter in a cup and put on stove to melt, break one egg in cup, and, without stirring, add enough milk to nearly fill cup. Add to flour mixture and stir until mixed. Bake in gem or cup cake tins. When cold cut and put mashed and sweetened berries between. Place berries on top of each little cake, sprinkle with powdered sugar, and crown each with a spoonful of whipped cream. These are delicious.

USEFUL HINTS.

When baking cake should the oven become too hot, set a basin of cold water in it.

To keep butter sweet in warm weather, pack the butter in a crock; make brine strong enough to bear up an egg, and pour over it.

To remove indelible ink: Take a small lump of cyanuret of potash, rub it on the ink stain, first dipping it in water, then rinse the cloth in cold water.

Brown boots when mud-stained may be cleaned with a cut raw potato. Wipe off any moisture, and leave in the fresh air for half an hour before polishing.

Potatoes for stews should always be boiled for five minutes before being added to the meat, as the first water in which they are cooked is never quite wholesome.

Never keep biscuits and cake in the same tin, as the cake loses its flavor, and the biscuits become soft and taste faintly of the cake.

Save the string when parcels are unpacked. Pick out the knots in which the twine is tied, twist it round the fingers and fasten it. Keep the "rings" of tied string in a drawer or box, specially saved for the purpose, and you will always have a supply of different strengths of string ready for parcels or pudding cloths.

Furniture needs cleaning just as much as other woodwork, especially in our large, dirty towns. This may be washed with warm soapsuds quickly, using a soft brush if necessary. Wipe dry at once and after a few hours polish with beeswax and turpentine, and you will procure a beautiful polish.

Silk Hose.—To prolong the wear of silk hose reinforce the heel by tacking a piece of soft silk, which will not irritate the foot, on the inside before starting to wear the hose. This will serve as a body to darn over when the heel begins to wear thin before holes appear, or even afterward.

Linoleums for Bedroom.—If you have to make any changes in the covering for your bedroom floors this spring, be sure and get linoleum, as it is not only the most sanitary floor covering but is also the most easily kept clean. There are very pretty matting designs for bedrooms and it is hard to detect from the real matting. It comes two yards wide and is usually $1 a running yard, which makes it much cheaper than carpet, and it wears several times as long. When laying it, loosen the quarter round molding on the baseboard so the linoleum will slip under. Do not tack or nail and let lay at least a week before nailing down the quarter round, so it can flatten out and get shaped to floor. About once in a year and a half or two years go over it with a floor varnish. This keeps the pattern from wearing off and preserves the life of the linoleum. It is easily kept clean and sanitary and does not have to be taken up until worn out. If you have an old ingrain carpet, have it woven into small rugs to lay in front of bed, dresser, etc.

DR. JOHNSON'S HOUSE.

Presented by Cecil Harmsworth to British Nation.

It was announced nearly four months ago that Dr. Johnson's house in Gough square, Fleet street, London, had been acquired by an anonymous purchaser, and was to be placed in the hands of trustees as a national memorial to the great Londoner.

It is now known that the purchaser is Mr. Cecil Harmsworth. According to the latest announcement, the house will be dedicated as national property "as soon as suitable arrangements can be made."

Last year the house was put into a good state of repair at a cost of some hundreds of pounds, and care was taken to preserve the characteristic features of the interior, which is in much the same condition as when Dr. Johnson lived there from 1748 to 1758.

It was in Gough square that Dr. Johnson toiled at his dictionary, which was commissioned by the chief book-sellers in London in 1747 for a fee of 1,800 guineas. The doctor had an upper room fitted up like a counting house, in which he gave to the copyists their several tasks.

According to Northcote, it was to Gough square that Reynolds took Boubillas to call upon Johnson, who "received them with much civility and took them up into a garret which he used as his library, where, besides his books, all covered with dust, there was an old crazy deal table, and a still worse and older elbow chair, having only three legs."

CONSTANTINOPLE'S DOGS.

Will Soon Be as Many as Ever in Turkey's Capital.

When the thirty thousand street dogs of Constantinople were collected in carts by the municipality last year and sent to the Island of Oxia in the Sea of Marmora, there to be poisoned and their skins to be turned into gloves, there were many persons who regarded the passing of the immemorial canine institution of the Turkish capital with regret. But another dog populaton has been growing up since.

With the disappearance of the old army of canine scavengers the fertile field of the Constantinople rubbish heaps was left unworked and the dogs of the surrounding villages, who in the old days would have been torn to pieces had they attempted to enter the city, began to sneak in at night to devour the domestic refuse of which the Turks dispose by throwing it into the gutter. Meeting with no opposition, they finally transplanted themselves and their families to the deserted land of plenty.

It is now again quite usual in Constantinople to have to step over a dog lying asleep across the pavement. The packs of dogs that are returning to inhabit the golf links too make a frequent practice of hurrying away with a driven ball, with a view to examining into its edible qualities at a distance.

The city authorities, satisfied with last year's great razzia, have taken no measures to stem the steady influx of strange dogs, much to the disgust of the cat population of Constantinople, which after a few months of unaccustomed facilities for nocturnal reunion have begun to find their social opportunities in this respect seriously curtailed by the sudden attacks of the newcomers.

Very soon travellers will be once more compelled to push their way to the door of their hotel through a jostling, yelping pack of lean, yellow curs and ancient Stamboul will be itself again.

FARMERS SHOULD KNOW THIS

PROFIT IN BANISHING FLIES AND MOSQUITOES.

Former is Cause of Typhoid Fever, the Latter of Malarial Fever.

A mistaken view prevalent in many farmers' homes is that flies are a necessary evil which is confined to a few summer months, or that they are an altogether harmless nuisance. The fact is that where flies have access to impurities of any sort they may carry deadly germs, which they deposit in crawling over food in kitchen, pantry or dining room. In an article prepared for the Country Gentleman and now reprinted in pamphlet form by the author William Paul Gerhard writes on flies and mosquitoes as carriers of disease and on what farmers can do to assist in the campaign against them.

Both typhoid and malaria, though occurring to some extent in cities, are considered to be chiefly country or farm diseases, and flies may be the indirect cause of typhoid fever and mosquitoes of malarial fever. While both flies and mosquitoes are bad enough at certain times in the city, they constitute in agricultural districts a veritable pest, a source of annoyance to horses, cattle and men, a cause of physical discomfort and a nuisance by which health may become seriously affected.

In cities the rapidly increasing use of motor vehicles and the corresponding reduction in the number of stable pits reduces

THE FLY NUISANCE

The antiquated and most primitive methods of waste disposal still existing on many farms offer favorable conditions for the breeding and rapid multiplication of flies. The extermination of flies can be brought about chiefly by a diligent attention to a proper disposal of waste matter and by the maintenance of scrupulous cleanliness.

Horse stables, cow barns, all out-buildings should have constant care and attention and they should be so constructed that they can be looked after with the best results. Dairy farmers should look particularly to the sanitation of the milk house and all its surroundings, and dairy windows and doors should be screened.

Barnyards should be kept scrupulously neat, gutters and stalls of stables should be cleaned daily and all refuse heaps kept covered pending removal. No decaying material should be permitted to accumulate on the household premises, and the garbage pan should be cleaned and scoured daily and when in use should be always kept well covered. All wooden garbage boxes or leaky slop pails should be abolished. Where there is no kitchen plumbing don't throw kitchen slop water, day by day, over the same spot by the kitchen door. The way to get rid of flies is by absolute cleanliness, and the up to date farmer for further protection screens all his windows and outside doors.

WHERE MOSQUITOES BREED.

Mosquitoes breed in stagnant water, in wet marshes or in any pool or permanent water accumulation, as in badly graded irrigating ditches or in roof gutters holding water; standing water in large or small volume anywhere may breed them.

Mosquitoes are not merely a constant source of discomfort, or as regards some species a serious danger to health, but mosquitoes may also affect business interests. It has been asserted that by the attacks of swarms of mosquitoes upon herds of cattle their milk yield has been so reduced as to make the keeping of these animals for dairy purposes unprofitable. Horses are injured by the attacks of mosquitoes. It is a familiar fact that there are tracts of land in various parts of the country that are made practically uninhabitable and impossible of development owing to the presence of mosquitoes in large numbers; and many places badly infested with them have shown a depreciation or have failed of appreciation in their property value, so that all mosquitoes are harmful in one way or another.

For mosquito control or extermination there are now employed many means, which are applied by individual work on one's own premises or by combined or community efforts. Obviously all windows and outside doors of farmhouses should be carefully screened to keep out mosquitoes, as should be also rain water barrels and other water receptacles; but the breeding places of mosquitoes should be done away with by drainage, by filling in or by treatment with kerosene oil or similar preparations.

NEIGHBORING FARMERS

should co-operate. In farm villages improvement societies should be formed, one of their objects being organized war on the mosquito. The work of such a society should be laid out and directed by one responsible head, and it is desirable that he be a practical sanitarian. Much of the work to be done is of an engineering nature, such as the ditching of marshes, the proper grading of gutters and so on, and the assistance of an engineer familiar with drainage work is much to be desired. Each farming member of the society should make individual effort about his own premises, and these individual labors should be supplemented by the combined community effort in whatever direction that may be required.

To get rid of flies and mosquitoes would protect the farmer's health and well being and enhance his comfort and increase his profits.

LONDON TO DINE EARLIER.

Nine Was the Hour Under Edward VII., George V. Favors 7.30.

"When I first came to London in the heyday of Victorian institutions seven o'clock was the fixed, unalterable hour for dining," writes the London correspondent of Town and Country. Slowly by degrees, the time for dining was extended.

"First 7.30 then 8, then 8.15 and eventually, by the time King Edward came to the throne the ultra ton took to the dining room as late as 9 o'clock. That was bad for theatres and hotel suppers, and incidentally bad for the health and had much to do, no doubt, with the increase of gout and indigestion in certain circles.

"It was the opposite extreme of the custom of a century ago, when the fashionables would sit down to dinner at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and gentlemen considered themselves disgraced if their men servants had not carried them off helplessly intoxicated by 7. The present generation still suffers considerably from hereditary gout gathered at these festive functions.

"The Edwardian 9 o'clock dinner never became very popular and 8.30 was considered a fair hour for dining. But with the advent of King George we are to have a new custom. Seven-thirty is going to be the reasonable time for dinner. The King dines at that hour and while it has not been generally advertised, the fact has leaked out and the world follows suit. Strange to say, the fashions thus set are begun not in what is called 'the upper circles,' but by the solid phalanx of suburbanites whose loyalty is one of those things that poets should commemorate in glowing verse.

"The suburbs read in the newspapers that King George and his family dine at 7.30. The suburbs have been conforming to the unwritten social law of the last decade by courting indigestion at an hour which saw them in bed half a century ago. They clung manfully to their inalienable right to do as royalty does and so they dined late.

"Now, with unquestioning fervor, they have altered their time as taken from Buckingham Palace and 'fashionable society' follows suit. The hotels will not resent the change; on the contrary they welcome it, for it relieves them of the greatest possible strain, for up to now no sooner have the dinner tables been cleared than the people crowd in for supper."

A POTATO-FED PHILOSOPHER.

Austrian Novelist Conducting a Curious Experiment.

The latest experiment in plain living and high thinking is being carried on in the Whiteway Colony of "simple-lifers" on the Cotswold Hills in Gloucestershire, England.

Unlike the famous colony at Brook Farm, where Emerson was a shining light, the Whiteway enthusiasts had far to go before they made much impression on this bustling age. But Francis Sedlak, an Austrian by birth, who in the intervals of manual labor on neighboring farms, toils at the task of making converts to the Hagelian philosophy, has brought extensive advertisement to the settlement.

Sedlak's diet consists of lentils, home-grown potatoes, and wholemeal bread made from home-grown wheat. He lives in a wooden shanty of his own construction, and has just published a remarkable little book, "A Holiday with a Hegelian," which competent judges declare is a close and original presentation of the German philosopher's argument. Sedlak's ambition is to publish a translation of Hegel's "Science of Logic," but Britishers are far more interested in his highly romantic career, than in his academic industry.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, MAY 28.

Lesson IX.—Micah's picture of universal peace, Mic. 4. 1-8. Golden Text, Mic. 4. 3.

Verses 1-4. The future of Zion as the religious metropolis of the world. The passage has an almost exact parallel in Isa. 2. 2-4. The best opinion seems to be that both Isaiah and Micah must have taken the prophecy from some older source, the provision of a time of universal peace being a popular idea, of which this passage is the finest expression.

1. The latter days—A vague expression, denoting a rather remote future.

The mountain of Jehovah's house—The mount upon which is situated the Temple of the Lord. It is to be the seat of dominion of the Messiah. Its exaltation above other mountains and hills means its spiritual and temporal supremacy. Politically and religiously, Zion is to tower above all the governments of the earth. No topographical elevation is meant.

2. Many nations shall go—The heathen nations are to flow (1) toward Zion in a steady stream, in order to be taught by the prophets like Micah and Isaiah, the ways and paths of the God of Jacob; that is, the revealed laws and maxims of the kingdom of God, whose religion has now come to be recognized as universal. All this is to come about, not by force of arms, but as a great moral conquest. The nations therefore retain their political independence.

3. He will judge—Jehovah is to be the final arbiter, to whom are submitted all disputes for his just and impartial judgment, and his decisions are to be accepted as irreversible. The result will be the cessation of war among the nations, a blessing of the Messianic era which is often dwelt upon by the prophets. The transformation of swords and spears into agricultural implements shows how real this period of universal peace is to be. The people of the country, whose spokesman Micah is for the time being, are to pursue their accustomed labors unmolested. When the true religion fills their hearts, they will not think it necessary to preserve peace by the construction of costly battleships and menacing fortifications. The arsenals and navy-yards will be silent, and the mechanics will have gone back to the cultivation of the soil.

4. Every man under his vine—A picture of rural felicity. Wars and rumors of wars do not break in to disturb this satisfying quiet.

5. All the peoples walk — That is, at the present time, in contrast to the future just depicted. But, however other men walk, let the people of Jehovah continue in his name for ever and ever.

6-8. The day of peace is far off. Meanwhile there await afflictions for Zion, and exile. But God will restore them, and out of the righteous remnant make a mighty kingdom.

6. I will gather that which is driven away—By the Assyrians the people of God are to be taken away in captivity. And yet, lame and afflicted as they shall be, there will be a remnant (7) of so much worth because of their fidelity to Jehovah, that he will be able out of them to make a strong nation. The tree will be cut down, but life will still exist in the vital stump.

8. Tower of the flock—Jerusalem. The glory of these prophets is, that their faith is superior to earthly afflictions of the most stupendous kind. Purified of her sins by manifold trials, Zion is to arise greater than ever, with all the former glory of the days of David and Solomon. This is the single limitation of the prophecy by which it comes short of the most modern hope of universal peace. We cherish no thought of Zion as the center of Jehovah's sovereignty, except as "Zion" is to us a metaphorical way of speaking of that very sovereignty of Jehovah; and this spiritual sense the Old Testament prophet did not, of course, entertain. He thought of Zion as the literal center of the reign of Jehovah in the new era.

THE RABBIT INDUSTRY.

The rabbit industry in Australia is stated to be slowly but surely disappearing. The first export of frozen rabbits was made in 1894, in which year 14,923 rabbits were sent to England. Next year the total was 431,716. In 1900 the total was 5,678,924, and in 1905 10,258,356. Since that year the total has gradually declined till last year it had come down to 2,841,649 rabbits exported. Exporters and agriculturists alike are pleased at this result. The former have all their available freezing plants occupied with meat and butter and cheese, while the latter view the gradual extinction of the rabbit pest with composure.

OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER XVI.—(Cont'd)

All this flashed through his mind as he sat gazing at her from behind the open newspaper, while the train flew through the lovely country and approached the London smoke.

"She shall love me," he said to himself. "I'll knock all thought of that fellow from her mind before I'm many days older! I've bought her—she's mine, body and soul, and I don't mean to share her with no one.'

And having arrived at this determination, Crawshaw summoned his valet from an inner compartment, and ordered him to open some champagne without further delay.

Like most ignorant, vulgar-minded people, Mr. Crawshaw had an extraordinary predilection for imbibing the most costly champagne at the strangest hours. In his former life he had been noted for his temperance; in fact, he had been almost a total abstainer from liquor; but with riches and idleness this good habit soon vanished, and he found it necessary for his strength and his dignity to have recourse to frequent stimulant, which unfortunate custom was followed, as it could not fail to be, with lamentable results. Nancy started as she heard him speaking, and, lifting her head from her hands, leaned back against the cushions with closed eyes and pale, wan face.

Her thoughts had wandered, as she sat motionless and silent, in a misty, unconscious way, to the rose garden; she could feel the soft, warm air as on that by-gone summer day; the scent of the perfumed flowers seemed to steal into her very heart. How gentle! how peaceful! how happy it was! and then a sense of deeper happiness still crept over her. She heard in fancy that quick, firm step; she felt the dreamy enthrallment of his presence; she heard again his soft, tender voice, his hands touched hers, and with a start the mist was scattered and the vision vanished.

She was in the saloon carriage speeding through the autumn-tinged country; speeding away from Ripstone Hall, from Dorothy, from dear, kind, genial Sir Humphrey, from the sweet, loved gardens, the affectionate, generous, indescribably dear atmosphere of home — she was going from all this to what?

Her eyes opened involuntarily and rested on the man opposite, that creature, with his common person, his cruel, swarthy face, his mean, cowardly nature—that man was her husband, her companion for life, through good or ill.

A wave of utter repugnance rushed into her throat and almost choked her—the sacrifice of that moment seemed greater than she could bear.

Crawshaw's eyes met hers, strained with pain and horror for the time out of all likeness to their former beauty.

The champagne he had just swallowed ran like fire is his veins.

He poured some wine in a glass and went over to her.

"You look like a ghost with that white face; take a drink of this, Nancy, and then wake up. I didn't marry you to let you sit in a corner all day you know."

She crouched back for an instant, then, scarcely knowing what she did, she snatched the glass from his hold and flung it out of the window.

"Leave me to myself!" she cried, passionately, madly, "or if you will not, I will throw myself out of the carriage as I have just flung away that glass!"

There was a dangerous earnestness in her intensity of manner that impressed Crawshaw; he waited a moment, then, with a short laugh, he turned and went back to his newspaper and his corner.

"She'd do it, too, I do believe!" he muttered to himself, and then the light came in his eyes again. "Never mind, whatever happens, I'm her master, and she shall know it soon enough!"

CHAPTER XVII.

It was a dreary, dismal November day when Derrick Darnley drove once more through the well-remembered London streets. He was bronzed almost beyond recognition, but the old bright look had died out of his handsome gray eyes, and there was a moody, disappointed expression ever present on his face. He had come back suddenly and unexpectedly, and, having deposited his luggage at his old chambers, he drove first to his mother's house, and then on to his several clubs. It was, perhaps, a relief to find that Mrs. Darnley was not in town, having started already for her usual winter sojourn at the Riviera. Derrick had half shirked a meeting with his mother. She would remind him too clearly of that summer time at Ripstone Hall, when the roses had reared their beautiful faces to the sunlight, and shed their perfume on the soft air. He had guessed by some vague way that his mother had gauged his secret, and he shrank from the comments her lips might utter on the girl who had so cruelly blighted his whole happiness.

Yes, whatever hard or bitter thoughts he might harbor against Thomas Crawshaw's wife in the depths of his heart, he had not arrived at a sufficient degree of strength or hatred to permit others to breathe them in his presence.

He dimly felt that his mother would have nothing pleasant to say on this subject, and might perhaps have probed him disagreeably as to the cause of his sudden disappearance and still stranger silence. So it was a genuine sigh of relief that he gave as he learned from the servant that her mistress was gone, and was not expected back for at least two months. He got into his cab again and drove to his favorite club.

Here he was greeted with a perfect storm of hearty words and questions, and given a pile of letters enough to occupy his attention for hours.

Having laughingly parried all attacks as to what he had done and where he had been too, etc., etc., Darnley esconced himself in a corner and began his task of reading through his correspondence, which had accumulated to an enormous degree during his absence.

But he had scarcely got through half a page of the first letter he opened before he sprang to his feet in mingled surprise and pain.

It was written by Dorothy a few days back, and ran very briefly:

"I do not know, dear cousin," she wrote, "whether this letter will ever reach you, as I have received no answer or acknowledgment of the others. I fear that it will not; but it is a slight relief to me to write to you, even though the chance of your reading my words is so very faint. My dearest father is growing worse. Oh, Derry, if I lose him, I think it will be the end of my life, for my heart will break. He has asked for you now and then."

Derrick Darnley sprang from his seat. Two or three of his old acquaintances were watching him with mingled amusement and curiosity, but he neither saw it nor cared.

"Has any one seen Merefield lately?" he asked, hurriedly. "Is he in town?"

"Merefield! Why, he went off to Jamaica or some place all in a flurry last week," observed a young fellow, quickly; then, with a hearty laugh, "They do say that the Hon. Ella Chester has fairly hunted him out of the country. But what's up, old fellow? You look deuced green!"

"I have had bad news—very bad news. My cousin has written to say her father, Sir Humphrey Leicester, is dangerously ill. It is a great shock to me! He is such a good old chap," he said, involuntarily, almost to himself, "it hurts me to hear anything has happened to him." He paused an instant with a momentary dread. "I suppose," he said, his voice grown a little husky—"I suppose you fellows haven't heard anything worse about him?"

There was a perfect chorus of negatives, and Darnley felt a trifle cheered.

"This is Friday," he mused, "and Dolly wrote on Tuesday or Monday night, evidently; that looks hopeful. Poor old uncle and poor Dolly! She must be terribly cut up. I wonder if any one is with her. She ought not to be alone. I will go down at once. I shall just catch the evening express."

He sat down and wrote out a telegram. His brow was drawn and his mouth set with grim determination.

A sudden fear had come into his mind. What if he should meet Nancy there! What more likely than she should be with Dorothy at such a time?

It was because he loved her still; because, despite her mercenary, cruel conduct—despite all his efforts to crush her out of his memory—that she grew there stronger and stronger each day, that the man feared, yet longed, to see her again.

It would be joy to gaze on her face once more, and pain indescribable to realize that for him such joy must never be—that she had by her own act separated herself from him and given herself to another man.

Through all his journeyings—and he had covered a pretty good distance during his American trip—this had been the burden of his thought.

Sometimes he grew angry with himself, and he would apostrophize himself as a dolt, and not worthy the name of man. He would laugh scornfully at himself.

Was this gloomy, miserable creature the proud, ambitious Derrick Darnley of a few months ago? Where were all his hopes? his eager prospects? Could it be possible that he was so weak as to let the vision of a blue-eyed, tempting face, sweep away all that hitherto made his life?

He cried shame on himself over and over again, but all to no good.

Stronger men than Derrick Darnley have fallen beneath love's potent touch; and go where he would, do what he would, try as he would, he could not root Nancy out of his heart.

He possessed no common nature, and he had loved with no common love.

Time might, perchance, soften away the ragged edges of the wound; but heal it, and efface the traces of it altogether—never!

And so it was that, as Darnley wrote the telegram to Dolly, and planned out a hurried journey down to Ripstone Hall without further delay, his mind was haunted by those marvellous eyes, and he was wondering how his old love would look, how she would greet him, what he should say, almost more than he thought of the poor old man whom he really held in deep affection, and for whom he had unlimited sympathy.

"O sweet one, love! O my life's delight!
Dear, though the days have divided us!"

So ran the troubled, sad melody in Derrick Darnley's heart as he sat in the railway carriage and was borne away from London to Ripstone Hall.

His life's delight! Surely that was true; for life had only dawned in those short, few, madly precious summer hours. It was ended now, for he did not live; he simply submitted to an existence, which, dreary as it was, he was not coward enough to dream of ending.

"Dear, though the days have divided us!" Ay, that she was—dearer by the sense of desolation, of despair, that surrounded her image.

It was a curious fancy, but Darnley had grown to think sometimes of the Nancy of those summer hours as of a fair, dead creature—something to mourn and to worship; something that, though she was gone, lingered yet to remind him of the brief spell of happiness she had brought.

It was a sad but a peaceful reflection, and one that even in its sorrow was more pleasant to him than the cruel truth that she lived, and had wilfully deceived for another, and such another!

His ears had hungered, yet shrunk from hearing some mention of her name, as he sat in the club. He knew the sort of conversation the bare whisper of Thomas Crawshaw was likely to provoke. But whether it was that all gossip and excitement about the parvenu had died out, or whether the clubmongers had imagined, for some vague reason, that he would not care to hear any such gossip, Darnley could not tell; but the fact remained that not a single soul spoke of Crawshaw or his wife.

"I am glad of it," was the man's thought to himself, as he learned back in his corner with folded arms and moody face. "I could not bear to listen to any remarks on him, for they would seem to reflect on her."

His dark eyes were fixed on the gloom of night outside. There was a dissatisfied, uncomfortable expression in them.

"If I could only arrive at some good conclusion as to why she treated me as she did! It was so unlike her! She had a kind word for every living creature. Even the flowers won sympathy and love from her; and yet—yet she crushed the very light out of my life? She wantonly destroyed my happiness and broke my heart! Why? Surely, if she had wished to catch Crawshaw, she might have spared me. Can his wealth be such a salve to his odious self? Can she be happy with this brute? Will not her own innate refinement—for a refined, dainty gentlewoman Nancy is, and ever must be—will not this recoil and shrink from the daily contact with the coarse, low mind?"

CHEAP TELEPHONE SERVICE.

British Post Office Takes Over the Country's System.

By the end of the year the British Post Office will take over the management of the country's telephone system from the private company which has hitherto controlled it, and the British public does not regard this particular nationalization project entirely without misgivings especially in view of the fact that the direct control by the State of the country's telegraphs has resulted in a loss of $50,000,000 in the last fory years and that the present annual loss is well over $5,000,000. Business men are afraid that red tape will hamper the quick and cheap telephone service that everyone wants.

"Almost every European country has secured a cheaper and better telephone service in the last few years than England has done," said G. Dalzell Read, a telephone authority, who is in London, after having inspected the German, Danish and Swedish systems.

"A telephone at $10 a year is not an impossible dream, but it is a perfectly sound business proposal if the systems continue to expand at the present rate. In Denmark, already, outside Copenhagen, the annual subscription for small exchanges is $11 and additional calls may be obtained at the rate of $5.50 per 1,000 calls.

"Sweden, too, has a most efficient and moderate priced telephone service with more than 200,000 subscribers. The installation charge for a private house is only $4 with an annual subscription of $16.50.

LOYAL SERVICE.

While journeying through Central Africa once, after several days of severe marching, the men of Alfred J. Swann's caravan failed to reach camp. He returned to them with water and assistance, and finding the carts with only half their crew, he asked where the heavy load was, and they replied, "Miles behind." It was on this journey that he witnessed a remarkable instance of the endurance and loyalty of a black man.

"YOU WERE RIGHT, GEORGE, THERE IS NO ONE IN!"—Life.

Fearing the men would be starved, writes Mr. Swann in "Fighting the Slave-Hunters in Central Africa," we pressed on toward them, and finally discovered the load drawn up under a bush. Searching round for traces of the crew, I heard a voice faintly call out:

"I am alive, but give me water!"

On looking into the bush, we discovered the leader, sheltered from the sun, and after giving him water, I asked:

"Where are the others?"

"Gone on to camp," he replied, "for food and water."

"Why did you not go?"

"No, master, I could not leave the boat section. My name is Mahububu. I was one of Livingstone's boys. I should have died by the load. I cut off the hide lashings and ate them, and the roots I dug up and sucked for moisture."

Let no man question, concludes Mr. Swann, the ability of black men to perform loyal service after evidence of such heroic conduct.

WESTERN FARMER AND HIS PROFITS

A Typical Instance of the Receipts and Expenditures on 640 Acres in Ten Years

A farmer writing to a Toronto daily paper from Indian Head, Saskatchewan, under the nom de plume, Saskatchewan Farmer, refutes the statement made by many Westerners, that the farmers of the West have been ill-used by the Dominion Government, which is identified largely with Eastern interests. This Saskatchewan Farmer gives a typical instance of the expenditure and revenue connected with a section of land, 640 acres, from the year 1900 to 1910. He says:

"I will give you an idea of what a section of land, 640 acres, will earn, and how it will increase in value, in the most favored wheat producing districts of Saskatchewan under normal conditions, management and price of land, from 1900 to 1910, allowing the average price of land to be $10 per acre for that period. In so doing it should be borne in mind that 30 per cent. of the land in this Province was Free Grant.

Capital Expenditure.

1900.
Land, 640 acres at $10 per acre		$6,400.00
Cultivation, 440 acres at $6 per acre		2,640.00
Dwelling house		2,000.00
Stable for 12 horses, granary and implement shed		1,500.00
1901
12 horses and harness		3,000.00
Implements.	Duty.
3 seed drills	$33.00	330.00
3 plows	30.50	210.00
2 disc harrows	10.00	80.00
2 six-section harrows	6.50	60.00
3 7-ft. binders	53.00	465.00
4 wagons complete	72.00	360.00
One-sixth interest in thresher	125.00	500.00
Extras, say	20.00	455.00
	$350.00	$18,000.00
Crop for 10 years, from 400 acres at 25 bush. to the acre, at 75 cents		$75,000.00
Working expenses for 10 years at $5 per acre	$32,000.00
Interest on capital for 10 years at 6 per cent.	10,800.00
		42,800.00
Surplus (not taking into account increase in value of land, which may be figured at $18,000)		32,200.00

Duty on Implements.

"Now note right here, that all a farmer working a section of land under these conditions would pay in duty on the implements required to earn this large profit, assuming the average life of same to be 10 years, comes out at approximately $35 per annum. This is no exaggerated statement of profits and increase in value of land, as thousands of farmers in Saskatchewan can testify, and hundreds who have specially applied themselves and taken advantage of the opportunities at hand, have realized far greater profits than are here shown. How, then, can the farmers of the West claim that they have been ill-used, or not given a fair deal?

"Of course we have had, and have, grievances, such as elevator monopolies, grain blockades, and grievances connected with grading and marketing of grain, and they are not altogether remedied yet, but what great industry has not had minor difficulties equal to or greater than these to overcome.

"In conclusion, I may say that many farms in the Indian Head district, which have been well cultivated, and have been cropped continually with a one-third summer fallow each year since the early 80's, last season produced 30, 35, 40 and even more bushels to the acre, in quality almost if not quite equal to the first crop; at all events not more than one per cent. lower."

SKIN SUFFERER TRIED EVERYTHING—THEN D.D.D. CURED

This was the experience of Mrs. Geo. Newman of orangeville, Ont. She wrote in January, 1910.

"I was terribly troubled with eczema on my face, neck and hands for four years. I tried everything I had heard tell of, then saw your advertisement in the paper, sent for a trial bottle of D.D.D., used it on my face and got well. It is now two years and no return of the eczema. I consider I am cured and it certainly was a blessing to me."

No matter how terribly you suffer from eczema, salt rheum, ringworm or any other skin disease, you will feel instantly soothed and the itch relieved at once when a few drops of this compound of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, Glycerine, etc., is applied. The cures all seem to be permanent, too.

For free trial bottle of D. D. D. write the D.D.D. Laboratories, Dept. E. A., 49 Colborne St., Toronto.

cruits from public thoroughfares, departmental stores, restaurants and the dance halls. After gaining the confidence of their victims they suggest a trip to their homes in the states from which the girls never return. That there are many victims is proven by the statistics of immigration officers. This is one of the hardest crimes to detect, as there is nothing to assist the police in running down the procurers. Dr. Shearer believed Toronto to be practically free of the real traffic, although it is a large recruiting centre. Hon Edward Sims was again quoted as saying that only 20 per cent. of the victims of this traffic go into it voluntarily. As there is never a supply without a demand, the extent to which this trade has grown implicates very many of our men. The traffic flourishes for two reasons—because of ignorance, and because of double standard of morality. Dr. Shearer says, "Women are seen in the Police Court, men seldom, and if they are they are allowed to go. You women are as much to blame as we men. What we do in the police court you do socially." Col. Roosevelt was quoted as saying, "I call attention to this phase, as Governor of New York, insisting that men be held equally guilty with women when they have done wrong." Our civil law has recently been revised so that a man receives 5 years instead of two for a certain offence. This is not enough and should be changed. In New York a new White Slave law has been enacted, which places the maximum sentence at not less than 20 years and a fine of $1000. Another cause of this traffic is the segregated districts, in which, Dr. Shearer says, obscenity and the worst forms of vice come to light. The segregated districts are the only places in the country where a girl can be held a prisoner against her will. In illustration of this Mrs. McAlister told of a girl who answered an ad. as a cook and when she found where she was, tried to escape but was not allowed by the Police, for who could believe in the purity of a girl who came from such a district.

A clipping from San Francisco told of 6 Chinese girls who had been discovered only after the officers chopped thru seven blind doors. These girls had been bought for $25,000 and probably smuggled into port. Another clipping from Washington stated an extensive traffic in human life had been revealed by raids on manicure parlors there.

Much is being done to put down this traffic. Twenty countries have combined against it, of which Canada is one. New laws are being enacted, and precautions are being taken to protect those coming as strangers in large cities, but to reach the root of the matter we must begin in our homes. The following public statement was recently made by a gentleman in Chicago, "Unless steps of a corrective character are taken at once a high school scandal will come to light that will shock our cities from coast to coast!" Much can be done by the women of the convention in their own homes, and by warning others.

The devotional exercises of the evening meeting were lead by Mr. Hobbs, after which Mrs. Harrison gave the Cor. Sec report of circles and bands.. She commenced by congratulating the Women because of the wonderful age in which they are living. It is a day of miracles. God has levelled difficulties in the way of the progress of His Kingdom; the church has wakened up to the command, "Go." And the young are the heir of all the ages, with mighty things before them. Again the young are to be congratulated because of their place in the world's greatest movement—the establishment of God's kingdom. This will mean the enrichment of life, for the selfish life is dwarfed, but the life centred in Christ is enlarged. The story of missions is simply the story of the life lost and found again—the story of Livingstone, who lost his life in the jungles of Africa; the story of Jennie Ford, who lost her life and found it again in the lives of the helpless babes; the story of Herbie Bellamy, who found his life in the rescued orphans of Kenazawa, Japan. This place in the establishment of God's kingdom means the continuity of work—the taking up of the work of the women of to-day. As never before, the call is for skilled workmen, for expert men and women. The young of to-day are being educated for this work, and in the future will not be able to plead the lack of training. The work among the young is an arsenal for reserves. "Sunday School Evangelism" has the right ring and is getting down to the foundation. "Train up a child in the way he should go"—the Book says. "Train up a child in Band and Circle and surely she will catch a vision of a great needy world and say, "Here am I; send me." Then there shall not be a lack of workers but they shall hear the call and go forth in the strength of the Master to serve Him by serving "the least of these His brethren."

In conclusion Mrs. Harrison reported 33 circles—an increase of 2—9 auxiliaries who have Circle members—total circle members 1181. Givings $1,788.12 (these are not complete figures), an increase of $202.33.

Bands 34, increase of 3, membership 1164 (not final), $735.63 (also not final), increase of $183.99.

Then followed the presentation of "Life Membership" scholarship to the Band and Circle, having the largest percentage increase—Seaforth Band and Thedford Circle being the fortunate ones.

Miss Martin of the Rescue Home, Victoria, B. C., who is on furlough, was called upon to give the address of the evening, and her address was the story of the need in Victoria for the kind of work in which she is engaged. She spoke first of the 22,000 Orientals in B. C., most of whom have never heard of Christ and she drew a picture of an old woman of 80 in the Joss House presenting her petitions, and throwing something which she held in her hand to the floor to see if her petition would be granted. She also spoke of the season of dragon worship in Victoria and the Chinese New Year's celebration both of which show the strong hold of heathenism and the lavish expenditure of money in heathen worship. Many of the thinking classes among the Orientals are not satisfied with their forms of worship, but the talk of doing away with the Joss Houses led to such excitement among the Chinese (and indeed to an open fight) that no further steps have been taken.

Work among the Orientals is necessary because of their customs, many of which are opposed to Canadian laws. People throng into the Chinese gambling dens, among the crowds are Canadian men and girls. Slavery also is in existence in Victoria and Vancouver, with scores of slave girls, and this is largely responsible for the establishment of the Rescue Home. One little slave girl was brought to the Home with great marks on her body, branded in with a hot iron by her mistress. Polygamy is also carried on by the Chinese and is the cause of many unhappy homes. One husband, with two or three wives brought his three children to the Rescue Home, because they could not be trained at home. All these crimes are very difficult to detect because the official is at the mercy of the Chinese official, and because in the case of polygamy the Chinese buys his wives and is not troubled with licenses and church registers. The best way to stop these terrible conditions is to Christianize the people. 160 women have passed thru the Rescue Home, and many of them have thrilling stories. One little girl was rescued from moral slavery and brought into the Home, and she became a Christian. Subsequently she married a Christian in Toronto, and they in their turn bought and freed a little Chinese slave girl of whom they had heard. Now both are in China studying with a view to entering missionary work. Evangelization is done by the Home among the women of Chinatown, who are very much interested, but whose husbands render the work extremely difficult by their opposition. Because of the difficulties attending this work, there is great need of prayer among the women of the east. Other details of the work of the home were given and Miss Martin concluded with an appeal for sympathy, prayer, and for young people to go forth and preach the gospel.

Thus concluded the second day of the Convention.

Thursday morning's meeting was opened appropriately by a quiet hour, led by Mrs. Harrison who spoke beautifully on prayer. Her subject was the prayer life of Christ. Christ is our pattern and we must study him and arrange our lives by His. Prayer was a habit with Christ—an every day thing. So we ought to set aside a portion of the day for prayer. After the quiet hour the morning was given to business. Following are the remaining Dist. organizers reports.

Mrs. Taylor of Chatham Dist reported 1 new Circle, 2 Bands and three cradle rolls; membership 412, $1393.12 raised. For Sarnia District Mrs. Barraclough reported 1 auxiliary less, but excellent work through the year. Mrs. Crichton of Ridgetown Dist. reported 10 auxiliaries, 3 circles and bands and a financial increase of $127.26. Mrs. Marlatt gave the report for St. Thomas, showing 19 auxiliaries, one new, 2 new circles, 3 bands, auxiliary membership 535, circle 61, band 60, cradle 54, associate 74 amount raised $1442.31. The report of the Windsor District was read by Mrs. Tennant and received standing,—amount sent to Treasurer, $1330.17; auxiliary membership 579; band 399; circle 107; 3 new organizations.

The Time of Branch Meeting was on motion changed, the books to close on May 5th, the Convention to convene approximately two weeks later, exact date being left to the Executive.

The Cor-Sec's. report and that of the Treasurer were adopted with these corrections in the former, amount remitted from Circles to Auxiliaries substitute $7851.63; and for amount remitted from Bands to Auxiliaries substitute $764.43

Report of the W. M. S. Convention

At 2.30 o'clock on Tuesday, May 16, the 17th Annual Convention of the London Branch of the W M S. was pronounced open by the Branch President, Mrs Gordon Wright, with 102 accredited delegates in attendance, and a number of visitors. Those present at the Convention had come to Exeter from all over the London Conference, their journey attended, if not by actual 'perils on land', at least by considerable discomfort. For the Trunk Line which conveyed many of us to our destination had either underestimated the importance and size of this convention, or had considerably overestimated the physical endurance of its delegates. And others had driven in over roads muddied by the morning's rain.

Before even the Convention opened the delegates were busy finding their billets, and all honor, we say, to the convenor of the billetting committee and to the members of the Exeter Auxiliaries who so opened their homes to the visitors.

After the opening of the Convention the first public act of the delegates was to acknowledge their gratitude to God by the singing of the doxology and to ask His blessing on the work of the meetings. After singing again and a responsive scripture reading, the real business of the meeting began with the roll call, 102 delegates and officers answered to their names out of 174 on the list, and many more came in during the Convention. After the minutes of the last Executive meeting were read and passed, Mrs. Tennant brought in the following notices of motion and memorials,—

Preamble—With a view to the more rapid development of the W.M.S. work by increasing the number and efficiency of those who must assume leadership in the future, we recommend that the following Constitution be submitted for the present method of District administration.—

NOTICE OF MOTION No. 11.

In the event of the foregoing District Constitution being adopted, BE IT RESOLVED, that we memorialize the Board of Managers to instruct the Annual Report Committee to make such changes in the Constitution for Branches, Auxiliaries, Bands and Circles as are necessary to harmonize them with the new methods of District administration.

Mrs. Coutlhard presented the following notice of motion,—

Whereas—our Branch Meetings have grown until it is often difficult to find Auxiliaries able to entertain them,

And Whereas—much of the work done in the branch meetings may be and generally is done more effectively in the District Convention,

Therefore be it resolved—that the following section be inserted in Branch Constitution between Sections 2 and 3,

"The Branch Annual Meeting shall consist of the officers of the Branch, the District Supts., and delegates from each district in proportion of one to every three hundred members, or majority portion thereof, which delegates, with two alternatives, shall be elected by ballot without nomination, at the Annual District Convention. The travelling expenses of the members of the Branch Meeting shall be paid by the Branch."

This would necessitate the following changes,—

By-law No. 10 for Auxiliaries,—"At such meeting as shall be named by the District Supt. a delegate and alternate to the Annual District Meeting shall be elected by ballot without nomination, a majority vote being required."

By-law No. 8, for Circles.—"At such meeting as shall be named by the District Supt. a delegate and alternates to the annual District Convention shall be elected by ballot without nomination, a majority vote being required."

Section 10, Constitution for Bands.—At such meeting as shall be named by the Dist. Supt., a delegate and alternates to the Annual District Convention shall be elected by ballot without nomination, a majority vote being required."

The business of the first session was concluded by the appointment of Mrs. Austen, Mrs. Dingman, Mrs. Mureh and Snell as a courtesy committee.

It was a cause of great sorrow to the Convention that its Honorary President and Vice-President were both absent thru illness and that one of its honored district organizers was being carried to her last resting place at the very hour at which the Branch Meeting convened. Special mention was made of this latter fact by Mrs. Learoyd, who conducted the memorial service. After reading about the God "who has been our dwelling place from all generations" and the singing of an appropriate hymn, Mrs. Learoyd made mention of those who had been called within the veil during the past years, and especially of the one whose death had been such a shock and one of whose last messages had been that she would be present at the Convention in spirit, if not in body. The service was concluded by the reading of the beautiful memorial service from the Church of England Prayer Book, and another hymn.

One of the most impressive services of the Convention was the Consecration Service led that afternoon by Mrs. Dunsmore. After the usual exercises of singing and prayer, fully half an hour was given to testimonies from the delegates, the keynote of the words spoken being the joy of doing God's will fully and deeper consecration to that will. After this service, the entire Convention partook of the Lord's Supper.

The delegates and visitors were entertained to a most enjoyable tea in the church by the Exeter Ladies and a social hour was spent afterwards. The convention convened again at 8 o'clock. After the opening exercises conducted by Rev. Hobbs, addresses of welcome were given by Mrs. Snell and Reeve Taylor, and the former was replied to by Mrs. Dr. Weekes of London. The interest of the evening's meeting centred in the Cor. Sec., and Treas.' Reports and the President's address. The following is a resume of the Cor. Secretary's Report,—

Mrs. Tennant spoke first of the extent of the missionary enterprise, an enterprise having but one boundary, that set by Christ when he said to go into all the world and to all creatures. Probably no department of Christian work had done so much to broaden the women of our church and probably more had been accomplished than mere statistics would show. During the year 18 new societies had been organized, Exeter District being the banner district, having organized 7 auxiliaries and 2 circles. From 178 Auxiliaries in the Branch, 565 life members, 4769 annual members were reported, making a total of 5334. The branch had 7 missionaries in Japan, 8 in China, and 2 on the home field, and two more are to sail this year for China. In order that these representatives may be sustained it is necessary that the Branch members must sympathize with them, give of their money and of their prayer. Mrs. Tennant spoke of the rest fund for the benefit of the returned missionaries, and in conclusion appealed for consecrated womanhood in this missionary work.

"Hear ye not the echo ring;
Woman wanted for the King."

Mrs. Marlatt, the Branch Treasurer, read a report of the "best year ever" in which $16217.39 had been sent by the London Branch to its treasurer.

The President's address, given by Mrs. Gordon Wright, was masterly. She opened by speaking of the splendid year that had passed and stating that now was the day of opportunity—the time for a decided forward advance in the auxiliaries. But the main subjects of her address were the needs of our own Canadian land, and a report of the World's Missionary Congress held at Edinburgh last summer. In speaking of our Western work Mrs. Wright told the story of the call and the pioneer work of Miss Munroe and Miss Edmonds among the Galicians of Alberta. The changed lives of the foreigners touch by the missionaries was a challenge to the expansion of our Home Mission work. Last year, she stated 300,000 immigrants came into Canada, and as many more will come this year. It is our duty to see that these are made the right kind of Canadians—Mrs. Wright's story of the Edinburgh Congress was full of special interest, telling, as it did, of a gathering probably the most significant in church history since the days of Pentecost. And the dominant note of the Congress was the supremacy of the Lord Jesus Christ—a supremacy which must be acknowledged by full belief in His words and work. Of the 8 commissions which brought their findings to the Congress, one was introduced by Sir Andrew Fraser, and he spoke of the necessity of comity in the mission field. Another Commission dealt with missionary equipment and its appeal was not so much for quantity as for quality. Missionaries were wanted, who should be theologians, that is, "those who see life and all that pertains thereto from God's point of view." Among the most impressive features of the Congress were the speakers from non-Christian countries, about a few of whom Mrs. Wright told us. One Chinese student urged on the delegates the great joy of being a soul winner, and indeed he went on to say that every Christian must of necessity be a soul winner, and he told of school boys in China who were so filled with this soul passion that they lived often on one meal a day in order to save money for the propagation of the Gospel. Another Chinese urged the members of the Congress to go more with Jesus unto the Mount of Olives, that they might receive His power, and still another stated:—We have found that it is of absolute necessity that we must separate ourselves from everything that would bring reproach to the cause of Christ."

A Chinese student stated that he had just received a cablegram telling of 500 Chinese students who had just offered themselves for the evangelization of China and his plea was for more educators but only for those who have the evangelizing touch. A representative from Corea reported that in Korea there had been a convert every hour, day and night, for the last 25 years. These wonderful works have been accomplished by prayer and personal work, an earnest going about from house to house telling friends and neighbors of Jesus.

Mrs. Wright struck the key note of the Congress and the note that was to be central in our own convention, when she spoke of the daily prayer meetings during the Congress for the outpouring of God's spirit. The results of these prayers were the never-to-be-forgotten days in Edinburgh, each day more wonderful than the last, until on the last "great day" the delegates fairly reached the mountain top of Christian experience and blessing.

After Mrs. Wright's address, the usual closing exercises took place and thus ended the first day of the convention.

The Tuesday morning session began with a quiet hour led by Mesdames Wright and Tennant. In her Bible reading Mrs. Tennant held up Jesus Christ before us as He lived here on earth. Then she spoke of the necessity of his going away that the disciples might receive power by the baptism of the Holy Spirit. So we may receive this gift of the Spirit by asking for it, and only so shall we have power, "If ye then, being evil know how to give good gifts to your children how much more shall your Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him." We are all running a race, "therefore, let us lay aside, etc.

The season of prayer which followed was filled with definite, earnest requests for the endowment of the Holy Spirit and equipment for service.

After the reading of the minutes of Tuesday's meetings, the notices of motion were voted upon, with the result that the first motion was tabled for one year, and the second was defeated. It was moved, seconded and carried that in future years each delegate and officer of the Branch Convention should contribute 50c. towards their entertainment. A further motion that the 50c. should be included in the delegate's expenses was defeated, it being decided that it would be best that each delegate and officer should pay her entertainment fee. On the motion of Mrs. McAlister these changes shall be embodied in the by-laws.

After the transaction of this business the district organizers were called upon for their reports. Mrs. Rea of the London District reported 28 auxiliaries, 3 of them new ones, and $4700 raised in the district, an increase of $200 over last year. Mrs. Dunsmore reported for the Stratford District and told of one new auxiliary, one new circle and one new band. There was an increase during the year of 62 annual members and 16 life members, and the amount raised was $1815.72. For the Goderich Dist. Mrs. Leach reported 1 new auxiliary, a membership of 559, which was an increase of 44 over last year, and the receipts $1492.89, an increase of 331.58 Mrs. Sparling of the Wingham District reported 378 members, 2 new auxiliaries and $858.25. The report of Mrs. Wilson of Exeter District was as follows, 7 new auxiliaries, 3 new circles, 1 new band, 1 cradle roll, total increase of members 112 and in funds of auxiliaries $100. Mrs. Graham of Strathroy who undertook the work of District organizer during the year, reported that she was unable to tell of new organizations but that the interest had been increasing.

Owing to the lateness of the hour it was found necessary to defer the reports of the remaining organizers until a future date. An invitation to the branch to meet in Sarnia next year was read and heartily accepted. The Convention then adjourned until the afternoon.

Before the afternoon session, meetings were held of the Executive and of the Circle delegates. At the latter, it was unanimously decided that Miss Code should take the place of Miss Weekes as Circle representative in the West.

The afternoon meeting commenced with devotional exercises, led by Mesdames Taylor and Graham. After the reading of the minutes and the transaction of a few minor points of business, Mrs. McCamus, Supt. of Systematic Giving gave her report. Mrs. McCamus spoke of her department as a very important one, because if systematic giving could be adopted the money problem would be solved. She showed that the tithe was the lowest form of giving, and was in existence even among pagan people. Giving should be part of one's worship, and a part from which no one should be exempt. She told an interesting story of a woman on the Otonabee River, who in her dire poverty raised from $5 to $10 a year for the missionaries, one year making an investment of a fowl, another year of yarn. And from that district came Robt. Emberson, the missionary to Japan. Surely the leaven of self-sacrifice had worked.

Mrs. McCamus said that those reporting to her from the Dept. of Systematic Giving showed a fine disregard for statistics, but yet the Dept. was growing fast. Cards that she had sent out to various persons, asking them what they considered the duties of systematic supts. brought in some splendid suggestions, such as discussion of the subject at every meeting, the use of the "Christian Steward," a Bible exercise on tithing, and the free distribution of literature. Our auxiliary reported that in former years they had made their money by holding a church festival, but last year they discarded this in favor of a missionary Sabbath, with very good results.

In conclusion Mrs. McCamus recommended the Bible as a text-book on systematic giving, and conducted a "model tithe study." The questions and answers were as follows,—

Is there a distinct command to tithe?

Deut.14.22—"Thou shalt sure tithe all the increase of thy seed."

Where are we commanded to bring the tithe?

Neh. 10.35—"And to bring the first fruits of our ground and the first fruits of all manner of trees, year by year, unto the House of Jehovah."

Did Christ command tithing?

Luke 11.42—"Ye tithe mint and rue and every herb, and pass over justice and the love of God; but these things ye ought to have done and not to leave the other undone."

Did Paul command tithing?

I. Cor. 16.12—Upon the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in store as he may prosper."

Give a promise to the obedient?

Luke 6.38—"Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, shaken together, running over shall they give into your bosom."

Will you give curses to the disobedient

Prov. 11.24—"There is that scattereth and increaseth yet more; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth only to want."

Will you give any result of tithing?

Heb. 13.5—"Be ye free from the love of money; content with such things as ye have; for himself hath said I will in no wise fail thee, neither will I in any wise forsake thee."

A conference on thithing followed and several wh practised tithing spoke of the pleasure they found in giving.

Now followed the Circle and Band Conference, conducted by Mrs. Harrison. She had arranged that a number of Circle and Band delegates should discuss the questions, viz,—

Circle Work.—a. The place of prayer; b, Knowledge; c, Money; d, Other church auxiliaries.

Band Work.—a, The kind of officers needed; b, The helpful member; c. The helpful auxiliary.

The discussion brought out the following suggestions,—

Prayer should be given the very place in Circles, and in order that it may be a blessing both to those who listen and those who take part it should be previously arranged, like any other part of the program. One delegate suggested Bible verses in the form of a prayer, leading in the Lord's prayer and sentence prayers, for those who are to lead in prayer for the first time. A man who knoweth and knoweth" etc. This knowledge can best be acquired by systematic, consecutive study, and this can best be done by the study class. 8 circles reported study class. Those who spoke on giving thought that with a thoro knowledge of the work, the money would come in, and that the supt of systematic giving should be allowed right of way in order to train the members to regard giving as a religious exercise. Various methods of raising money were suggested, as the monthly offerings, Easter thank offering, making all members who marry life members, and others. The Circle delegate from Stratford thought that the Circle members should make better auxiliary members, better League members, better S. S. teachers and "big sisters" to the Band and Junior League Others thought that they might become a factor in the church life and might gain the interest of the other church organizations by being enthusastic in their work.

The helpful Band officers and members should be faithful, willing to be taught, willing to do, willing to be, well-behaved, punctual, interested, aggressive, and self-denying. Of all helpful Band members, probably "mother," is the most helpful. The auxiliary should feel its responsibility to the Band and should sympathize and assist and pray.

After the Circle and Band discussion, Mrs. Mrs. McAlister gave an extremely interesting address on "Our National Problem" substantiating everything she said by authoritative quotations and recent newspaper clippings. The emphasis of all moral reformers to-day is on this question and when we know the truth about it, the truth shall make us free. A clipping cut from a January paper told how in Riga, Russia the offices of the White Slave Agency were raided by the police and 15 young girls were found who had answered ads for dairymaids. Only one trader was seized. It was found that there would be a profit of $30 on each woman placed in America. A quotation from the Hon. Edward Sims stated that in this traffic in America there is a yearly reinforcement of 15,000 foreign and of 45,000 native born women. In Chicago alone there are 30,000 who have missed the way and as the average life of these women is only five years there is an annual re-inforcement of 6000. In April of this year a warning was published by Dr. Shearer of Toronto against the White slave dealers believed to be working in that city. Many of these dealers are women who secure their re-

$20,000,000 LOSS BY FIRE

Forty Thousand People Rendered Homeless in a City of Manchuria.

A despatch from Harbin, Manchuria, says: Forty thousand persons at Kirin are homeless as a consequence of the recent conflagration in that city. The money loss is estimated at $20,000,000. Four thousand shops, fifteen banks, and 8,387 other buildings were destroyed. The fire at Kirin will rank with the London and Chicago conflagrations. In the great London fire 13,200 houses were burned, besides 88 churches.

Reports from Pekin told of a destructive fire at Kirin on May 9, but telegraph communication to this remote Manchurian town was interrupted, and few details of the fire were known. Kirin is the capital of the Manchurian Province of Kirin, 270 miles west of Vladivostock, and has a population of 80,000.

THE FLY SPREADS DISEASE

FUNCTION OF ITS POWERS OF LOCOMOTION.

Clings to Surfaces by Means of Claws and Pads Which It Has on Each Foot.

"The fly's power to spread disease is a direct function of its powers of locomotion. It can fly considerable distances at a high rate of speed. It is quickly carried long distances by trains, boats, team, animals, and man. It is possible to get a good idea of a fly's rate of flight in a number of ways. Flies come to ships newly arrived in port across considerable stretches of water. This we know, because a few hours earlier there were no flies on the ship. No communication has been had with land. The flies must have come on their own wings. Occasionally we see a fly follow a team or animal, easily keeping up a good pace. The wing muscles of a fly when weighed are found heavier in proportion than those of any bird so far examined. It is difficult to tire a fly out. Test this by trying to keep one constantly on the wing in a room, and you will soon find you have no easy task. All this shows the fly to be no mean navigator of the air.

"Most of our diseases are caused by invisible germs. These germs may be brought to us from sick persons by whatever is large enough to carry them and has the opportunity. Combine this fact with what everyone knows about flies, and we see at once the tremendous importance of flies as carriers of human disease germs.

"The result of this simple piece of reasoning is so startling that it is often side-tracked by its own importance. It looks so incredible that we hesitate, distributing our own logic. It seems incredible that men have gone on doing as they have done, and as they are still doing, if the facts are as they seem. The consequences of our reasoning seem so tremendous we fear there must have been a mistake somewhere. And so we dismiss the idea.

"One way to disturb this false security is to interest people in the habits and structure of flies. The more we know about flies the more clear it will become that they are among our worst enemies.

THE ANATOMY OF A FLY.

"The fly clings to rough surfaces by means of its claws, and to smooth surfaces by a combined action of the claws and pads. There are two claws and pads on each foot. The fly's pads are covered with thousands of minute short hairs, sticky at the end. There is no suction—merely adhesion.

"The action of a fly's pads may be illustrated by means of a piece of sticking plaster and a few threads and small weights. Take a piece of sticking plaster half an inch wide and sew through it some short pieces of thread at intervals of half an inch, and knot the threads on the sticky side, so that they cannot pull through. Stick the plaster to a dinner plate or other smooth object, and it will be found that if a small weight is attached to each thread the plaster will sustain in this way a considerable weight—that is to say, the sum of all the small weights is considerable.

"Now remove the weights and attach all of them to one or two of the threads at one end. The plaster will promptly be torn loose. Acting on a portion of the plaster at a time the weights can accomplish what they cannot accomplish when distributed along the whole surface of the plaster. This experiment illustrates roughly how the course, in my illustration you can see just how the weights release the plaster from end to end. It is very difficult to make this observation on a fly, because the fly's pad is so small and more particularly because the whole operation takes place in something like the fiftieth part of a second. Wonderful as the fly's pads are, they have their disadvantages, for stickiness and locomotion are not always strictly compatible

STICKY FEET.

"All his grown-up life the fly has to manage with sticky feet. Imagine our plight if the soles of our feet were sticking plaster, perennially renewing their stickiness! Whoever has experienced the sticky mud of certain regions will recall how the boots ball up and what a conglomeration one drags home from a ramble under such circumstances. To such inconveniences the fly is constantly subject, and it is this that has bred in him a habit of frequently preening himself, particularly his feet. These are constantly becoming clogged with adhering substances, and this contamination the fly must assiduously remove if his feet are to act properly in supporting him on slippery places. If this contamination is too sticky to rub off the fly it laps it off, and it then passes off in his excreta. Thus it is that all sorts of microscopic particles are moved from place to place on the feet of flies. These particles are rarely of sufficient size to be seen with the unaided eye. Nevertheless, they are constantly present, and the amount of matter thus transferred is relatively considerable on account of the fly's activity. When flies have access to diseased or rotten or foul matter, the transfers thus effected are dangerous. All sorts of minute organisms are spread in this way, including diseases of man, animals, and plants. It is impossible to go into details in this place, but it is only right to say that the imagination completely fails to grasp the far-reaching consequneces of this transfer of germs and spores on the feet of flies."—Mr. N. A. Cobb in "Natural Geographical Magazine."

KAISER SURPRISED.

Everywhere He is Acclaimed in the Friendliest Manner.

A despatch from London says: The Kaiser is getting in London a reception that manifestly is a surprise to him as there is none of the prevalent anti-German bitterness directed against him. He fulfils numerous private engagements unceremonial and everywhere he is recognized and acclaimed in the friendliest manner. He visited on Thursday, among other things, the Zoo, accompanied by a single companion. He displayed an almost boyish interest in the animals, but remained longest in the monkey-house. His next longest stay was in the lion-house.

SANITARIA IN EVERY COUNTY

Recommended at Annual Meeting of Anti-Tuberculosis Association.

A despatch from London, Ont., says: At the session of the Canadian Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis which met on Wednesday in the Hygienic Institute here, Dr. J. D. Adami, the president, advocated small sanitaria, located in each community or county, rather than a larger sanitarium at a distance from the home of the patient. He congratulated London upon its fight against tuberculosis as evidenced by the Alexandria Sanitarium. He strongly advised against the German error of establishing sanitaria only in isolated centres. He commended the work done by the Muskoka institution.

Dr. C. D. Parfitt, in a paper read, stated that the first sanitarium was established in Ontario 14 years ago. Now there are 20 in Canada, 12 of them being in this province. Since 1896 the death-rate per hundred thousand has been reduced from 150 to 112. The aim of sanitaria treatment is to provide fresh air day and [illegible] and a proper diet.

Dr. W. C. White, of Pittsburg, followed with a paper on "Prevention and Treatment of Tuberculosis." Amongst other things he advocated a school for health officers, after the manner of the one in Indiana. Consumption was not a family curse, as had been believed in past. Educate people along proper lines and the disease will gradually be overcome. Dr. White is a believer in local autonomy and against large district institutions.

Dr. Hodgetts vigorously criticized the primitive system of public health now prevailing in Ontario. Health officers were poorly pa[illegible] and hence were frequently inefficient men. The public should demand more attention for health matters. In towns and cities tuberculosis is on decline, but in rural districts is on increase.

KILLED ON RAILWAY TRACKS.

Mr. Harry Hobman Meets Death at Valois, Que.

A despatch from Montreal says: Mr. Harry Hobman, an accountant employed by Dale & Company, this city, was instantly killed by a Grand Trunk Railway train at Valois on Wednesday morning. Mr. Hobman arrived at the station too late to take his usual train to the city, and after taking leave of his wife he went to cross the G. T. R. tracks with the intention of going to business by the C. P. R. train on the tracks adjacent. The Vaudreuil train, not scheduled to stop at Valois, dashed into the unfortunate man as he was crossing, killing him instantly. Mr. Hobman leaves a wife, but no children. He was twenty-eight years old, a native of Lancashire, England, where his mother is yet living. He came to this country eight years ago.

FOREST FIRES ALARMING.

Much Timber Already Lost in Sections of New Brunswick.

A despatch from St. John, N.B., says: Reports from provincial centres on Thursday show the forest fire situation in New Brunswick to be alarming, particularly in King's and York Counties. In the former a tract of lumber land five miles by eight is burned over, and in York every available man of the Government Crown Lands Department is out fighting fires. Deputy Crown Lands Commissioner Loggie said on Thursday that if there is much wind, and unless rain comes, thousands of acres of valuable lumber would likely be wiped out.

NEW METHODS IN SPELLING

Imperial Education Conference Urges Importance of Simplification.

A despatch from London, England, says: At the Imperial Education Conference recently held privately the Foreign Office resolved that the simplification of spelling was a matter of urgent importance throughout the Empire, demanding such practical steps in every country as may appear most conducive to the creation of enlightened public opinion and the direction thereof to the maintenance of English in purity and simplicity among all English speaking people. Among the suggestions was a proposal from Dr. MacKay, of Nova Scotia, that there be progressive simultaneous simplification of spelling with recurring periods throughout the English-speaking world, including the United States. Dr. Mackay did not propose that adults be compelled to adopt the new methods, but that new ways be adopted and new spellings issued, say, every 25 years, these to be taught to each new generation of children.

The conference adopted various resolutions unifying education arrangements in the Empire.

INDIGESTION RIGHTLY CURED STAYS CURED

Not by Treating the Symptoms but by Toning up the Stomach to do Nature's Work

Indigestion should not be neglected, for by depriving the body of its proper nourishment it grows steadily worse. Neither stimulating medicines, which ruin the already weak stomach by making it work beyond its strength, should be used, nor predigested foods, which do not excite a flow of the digestive fluids, and by disuse cause the stomach to grow weaker. Nowhere is the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills more clearly useful. Its principle is to enable the stomach to do its own work by building up the blood and giving tone to the nerves. When these are once more restored to their normal health indigestion disappears and the cure is permanent. In proof of these statements we give the experience of Mrs. Paul Gannon, Star City, Sask., who says: "For more than a year I suffered with all the terrible pains of indigestion, and my life was one of the greatest misery. It did not seem to make any difference whether I ate or not, the pains were always there, often accompanied by a severe bloating and a belching of wind. I did not even get relief at night, and sometimes hardly got a bit of sleep in my misery. I tried many remedies said to cure indigestion, but they did me not one particle of good and I fully expected that I would always be afflicted in this way. At this time my brother came home on a visit and he urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and get six boxes for me. By the time I had taken four boxes I began to improve and could eat with some relish. I was greatly cheered, and continued taking the Pills until all traces of the trouble had disappeared and I could once more eat all kinds of food without the smallest inconvenience. We have since used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in our family for other troubles. I am so firmly convinced of their virtue as a family medicine that I have no hesitation in recommending them to all weak, ailing people."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

NEW GERMAN SHELL.

Makes Trench Protection and Shielded Batteries Impossible.

The protection of trenches and armor shielded field batteries is at an end, for, if a leading German military authority is to be believed, security hitherto enjoyed by soldiers through the protection of breastworks or similar shallow intrenchments has ceased to be with the late invention of not less than three different shells which all have the aim to kill or wound everybody thus protected.

The new projectiles are a combination of the grenade-shrapnel shell with comparatively thin walls. Instead of the old arrangement of the bursting charge and the single time fuse producing explosion by concussion, and making the bullets and fragments move like a cone-like shower, the new shells are designed to produce a two-fold mission. The Krupp grenade shrapnel carries a peculiarly arranged charge of balls placed at regular intervals and angels ,and depending on a certain combination of time fuses for their discharge.

The old fashioned grenade was effective only when exploding among the gunners serving a battery, but since it did not possess any penetrative force it was useless against the armored shields with which field guns now are protected. The new Brisanz shrapnel Ehrhardt shell is a particularly powerful one. Its penetrating power is equal to that of a cupronickled solid shot, and, through its arrangement of the charge its destructiveness from shattering is equally great.

At the recent official trial of one of these shells tore a hole a square yard in size in a two feet thick brick wall, and a number of mannikins standing behind it were destroyed. Dummy batteries protected by two inch thick armor plate were totally demolished by the new shells fired at 10,000 feet range, and the gunners, represented by wooden dummies, shattered by the fragments and balls.

The third shell is not designed so much with a view to penetrating qualities as to scattering fire, and is in reality an aerial automatic magazine gun. The centre of the shell is filled with explosive materials and shrapnel shot, which is intended to be exploded as in an ordinary shell at a predetermined moment. In addition to this there are four partitions, in each of which there is a series of holes adapted to receive rifle cartridges. These holes form an acute angle with the axis of the shell, and are directed backward. By means of a timing device the cartridges may be detonated successively to discharge bullets in the wake of the shell.

The idea is to regulate the speed of the bullets so that they will strike backward despite the forward motion of the shell, and hit the enemy behind the trenches. The efficiency of this shell has not as yet been sufficiently illustrated. A great many bullets are wasted by the present arrangement, an account of being directed too high to strike the enemy with sufficient energy. This new weapon, it is believed, will revolutionize the present methods of defence.

THE KAISER IN PALESTINE.

Traces of His Repeated Visits Everywhere Found by the Tourist.

Wherever red roofs appear in Palestine it betokens Enropean invasion. Red roofs are encroachments of the modern—advance guards of western "civilization."

Many streets in Haifa might almost pass as a part of a German village. The rows of prim red-roofed cottages, each with its neat garden, are in no degree Syrian. There were Germans in charge of the carriages to Nazareth; there were German hotels. Even the American consul was German.

It is impossible not to notice evidences of the Kaiser's interest in Palestine. At each visit the Kaiser pays to the Holy Land a bit of good road is built, writes Ruth Bryan Owens in the National Monthly, and after taking the drive to Nazareth we hoped for the comfort of later pilgrims that the Kaiser might pass that way.

In one place is a tablet erected by the Kaiser to the Sultan, at others thrifty German colonies; here a good road, there a fountain presented by him. When on the Mount of Ascension the guide pointed out the legendary footprint of the Master impressed in the rock and also the impress left by the prophet Mahommed, one observant traveller asked, "And now where is the footprint of the German Emperor?"

THE ONLY MEDICINE FOR THE BABY

The only medicine a mother should give her little ones is one she can give and feel absolutely safe that not the slightest harm will result—a medicine that is guaranteed strictly free from injurious drugs. Such a medicine is Baby's Own Tablets—every box is sold under such a guarantee and the mother may feel perfectly safe in giving them to even the new-born babe. Concerning them Mrs. Albert E. Wood, London, Ont., says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets all that is claimed for them. My baby has had them from birth and will take them eagerly. I am sure there is no better medicine for little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BURIED WITH HIS GOLD.

French Miser Took His Wealth to the Grave to Hide From Family.

A miser named Anglade, who died at Pau, France, recently, carried part of his fortune with him into the grave and hid the balance, in order to prevent any one else using the money. He had steadily refused to give any information about his possessions, and after his death his wife made a systematic search of the house, with the result that about 86,000 was found in gold and banknotes secreted in

She believed that this represented all his wealth, but when a bank out-of-the-way places.
clerk presented a note for payment of a loan promised by the miser and said that Anglade had a document confirming the transaction, the widow decided that her husband must have taken the paper to the grave.

The grave was opened in the presence of a magistrate. Packets of banknotes and bonds, with a number of other documents, including the one sought for, were found under the man's armpits. Opportunity was taken to search a bamboo cane which, according to Anglade's dying wish, was buried with him. Each section of the cane was found to contain notes and gold wrapped in cotton wool.

Our past depends entirely upon our present, and changes perpetually with it.

ONE MORE OF THE PIONEER WOMEN

TELLS HER SUFFERING SISTERS TO FIND RELIEF IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Mrs. Forrester had Rheumatism and other Kidney Diseases for two years, but Dodd's Kidney Pills made her well.

Dinsmore, Sask., May 22 (Special)—One more of the pioneer women of Saskatchewan, relieved of pain and suffering by Dodd's Kidney Pills, has given her statement for publication in order that other suffering women may profit by her experience. This time it is Mrs. John Forrester, well known and highly respected in this neighborhood.

"My trouble started from a severe cold," Mrs. Forrester states. "My sleep was broken and unrefreshing. I perspired freely at the slightest exertion. I had pains in my back and Rheumatism developed, from which I suffered for two years.

"I do not need to tell you that I was far from being a well woman when I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. But now I am thankful to say my troubles are gone. I recommend all suffering women to use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Suffering women can learn from the experience of others that the one sure way to health is to cure their kidneys, and Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure the Kidneys.

WOMEN DISPLACE MEN.

Drive Male Employes Out of London Offices.

The most significant fact that emerges from the coronation census of the City of London, just concluded, is the startling increase in female employment offices. In the busy square mile whereon are concentrated the biggest commercial and financial interests, the women are steadily replacing men. The present day secretary invariably wears skirts. The typist looks a trim little figure in belted blouse; petticoats swish the legs of office stools.

Women are everywhere, men next to nowhere, in the modern business office. And according to those in a position to judge, every indication points to a still greater supersession of men by girls in city offices in the next ten years.

The head of the employment department of the London Chamber of Commerce, on being asked for his opinion on this state of affairs, explained that there is one great difference between the sexes in this qustion of office employment.

"The junior shorthand clerk is very difficult to get—of the boy kind. If a boy is a good shorthand writer, it seems to be feared that he will be always a shorthand writer. For the girl it is a very different matter. She doesn't mind becoming just a shorthand clerk."

The manager of one of the largest and oldest commercial training colleges, indorsing this statement, added:

"I should not be surprised if the census figures disclose an amazing increase in female employment. We have been placing girls at the rate of 2,000 a year for some time. And these girls do very well. They fill such situations as typists, secretaries, cashiers and bookkeepers very efficiently, and there are women in London who can command salaries running well into four figures as buyers or heads of departments, controlling a number of others. A woman is worth just as much as a man—that is, she is worth what her work brings to the firm. You can go into many big offices now-a-days and see no man about the place except the managing directors or the managers; the rest are girls."

A Pleasant Purgative.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are so compounded as to operate on both the stomach and the bowels, so that they act along the whole alimentary and excretory passage. They are not drastic in their work, but mildly purgative, and the pleasure of taking them is only equalled by the gratifying effect they produce. Compounded only of vegetable substances the curative qualities of which were fully tested, they affordf relief without chance of injury.

Nothing happens to us that is not of the same nature as ourselves.

Ask for Minard's and take no other.

"What's that boy yelling at?" asked the farmer of his son. "Why," chuckled the boy, "he's just yelling at the top of his voice."

Warts are unsightly blemishes, and corns are painful growths. Holloway's Corn Cure will remove them.

It takes vastly more courage to be happy than unhappy.

A PRETTY ROMANCE.

Stranger Well Treated, Returns and Woos Cafe Keeper.

There is material for romance in an incident which has occurred at Marseilles in a little cafe kept by a young woman noted for her beauty and goodness of heart.

The cafe is close to the harbor, and is frequented by sailors, who gave the name of "Mother Marie" to the landlady. The young woman had to deal with the roughest of sailor men, but her kindness to her customers was her best protection. When they had no money, she fed them and kept them well supplied with tobacco. The sailors never imposed on her kindness, and always paid her when they received their wages.

One day a stranger of unkempt appearance entered the cafe. "Mother Marie" immediately saw to his requirements. After eating a hearty meal he was asked by the landlady whether he would smoke a cigar. His reply was that he had not any money for a cigar, nor even for the meal he nad eaten. "Never mind," said the landlady, "have a cigar all the same."

A few weeks afterwards a well-dressed man appeared in the cafe and ordered food. "Mother Marie" glanced at him and recognized in him the stranger who had not paid for his entertainment.

The elegant gentleman told "Mother Marie" that he had heard of her kindness to rough sailor men and had resolved to put her to the test. He found that she was all that the sailors had represented her to be, and he added that he had returned to the cafe in order to improve his acquaintance with her.

Then he disclosed his identity. He was a count and a large manufacturer, and asked "Mother Marie" to become his wife. The "sailors friend" consented, and now the little cafe on the harbor has a new tenant.

ZAM-BUK HEALED BABY'S SORES.

Mrs. C. Pardy, of 479 Seigneurs St., Montreal, writes:—"I cannot tell you how thankful I am for the cure Zam-Buk has worked in the case of my baby son. He was troubled with scalp disease and I tried everything I could think of, but in vain. Finally I tried Zam-Buk. I could see an improvement after two applications! After persevering with the Zam-Buk treatment he is now completely cured. Zam-Buk is certainly a wonderful balm, and I shall always keep it on hand."

Mothers should use Zam-Buk for all children's skin sores, ringworm, scalp sores, cuts, chafings, bruises, etc., because of its great purity. Also cures piles, eczema, bad leg, varicose sores, etc. 50c. box, all druggists and stores.

Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet, is best for baby's bath and for delicate skins.

Pessimist Jones—"How is it, Smith, that you look so hale and happy and well?" Optimist Smith—"Every time I sit down to worry I fall asleep."

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

The past continually takes the form of vases into which the thought of to-day is soured.

Keep Minard's Liniment in the house.

"I suppose the servant does all the heavy work in your house?" "Not all; my wife makes the pies and puddings."

Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator will drive worms from the system without injury to the child, because its action, while fully effective, is mild.

SOMETHING SOOTHING.

"Well, my little man," said the house-surgeon cheerily to the new patient, "how do you feel?" "He seems all right," said the nurse. "I've just taken his temperature." "Good. Have you had anything to eat, sonny?" "I had a little, sir." "What did they give you?" "This lady gimme a piece of glass to suck, sir."

The pills that will do this work thoroughly are Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which are mild in action but mighty in results. They purge painlessly and effectively, and work a permanent cure. Gentlemen,—In January last, Francis Leclare, one of the men employed by me, working in the lumber woods, had a tree fall on him, crushing him fearfully. He was, when found, placed on a sled and taken home, where grave fears were entertained for his recovery, his hips being badly bruised and his body turned black from his ribs to his feet. We used MINARD'S LINIMENT on him freely to deaden the pain and with the use of three bottles he was completely cured and able to return to his work.

The Oil for the Athlete.—In rubbing down, the athlete can find nothing finer than Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. It renders the muscles and sinews pliable, takes the soreness out of them and strengthens them for strains that may be put upon them. It stands pre-eminent for this purpose, and athletes who for years have been using it can testify to its value as a lubricant.

Now, tell me, how many eggs did you take?" The little boy, stammering, said: "Well! Well! Why didn't the bird tell you the whole of it?"

Mr. W. H. Dearing of Stephen is suffering from a gathering in his head and as a result is unable to attend to his farm duties.

A team belonging to Mr. Elgin Amy of Stephen became frightened while left standing at the Ross-Taylor factory on Monday afternoon and made a rapid run down Main street scattering the load of shingles, cedar posts, etc. along the road. Turning west at the Commercial House the balance of the load with the wagon rack was thrown up against the fence and the team continued on with the wagon until caught a mile and a quarter west by Fred Kerr. J. D. Atkinson took the owner back in his auto and Mr. Amy returned to town and gathered up his load, finding little damage done.

All the services of Sunday were largely attended, as was also the preparatory service on Friday evening. A solo Sunday morning by Mr. Herb Southcott was much appreciated. The musical selections during the anniversary reflected much credit on the choir and leader.

ST. MARYS—There died in St. Marys on Thursday, May 25 after a lingering illness, Mary Jane Brent, beloved wife of Mr. John Easterbrook, sen, in her sixty-seventh year. The funeral took place to St. Marys cemetery.

APPOINTED WARDEN.—Dr. J. H. Rivers, a former resident and practitioner of Crediton, has been appointed warden of the new provincial jail at Lethbridge, Alberta, where he has been residing for the past year. The Lethbridge Daily Herald, which contains an excellent portrait of the Dr., commenting on the appointment, says.—The appointment of Dr. J. H. Rivers to be warden of the provincial jail at Lethbridge, will be generally approved. As mayor of Raymond for two years he showed executive ability that would qualify him to hold an important executive position, although, of course the town of Raymond is not at all comparable to the jail. As a man Dr. Rivers is the type that should be chosen for such positions. The object of sentencing men to prison is for reforming them as well as punishing them and protecting the public. The warden appointed is one of those men in whom everyone has confidence, and there is no doubt but what his personal character will have an excellent influence on the men who will come under his care. No better man could be chosen to have a beneficial influence on the unfortunates who will be sentenced to the Lethbridge jail, and lead them to reform and become useful citizens. Hundreds of men will come under his influence, and they will receive the care and treatment that will tend to make their prison life serve its purpose of reformation and reclamation." The doctor is another of the Ontario young men who are making good in the West, and will have the congratulations of his many friends on his new appointment.

DEATH OF GEORGE HODGINS— An old resident and once familiar character on our streets, in the person of Mr. George Hodgins passed away, at Clinton on Tuesday last, at the great age of 93 years. For some months deceased has been in failing health from the infirmities of old age, but no perceptible change in his condition took place until about five days ago, when he was stricken down, death following Tuesday. The late Mr. Hodgins was a native of England, coming to Canada about the year 1850. His first years in Canada were spent in railway construction. He assisted in the work of building the first railroad, the Great Western, through London. Later he moved to Exeter and for the greater part of his life he made Exeter his home. About five years ago he decided to make his home at the House of Refuge, as a "pay" inmate. He is survived by one son only, Mr. W. J. Hodgins of Winnipeg, his wife having died about nine years ago. The deceased was a man of industrious habits, honest in purpose and deed and was much respected. The remains were brought here for burial, the funeral taking place from Messrs Rowe & Atkinson's undertaking rooms, yesterday (Wednesday) to the Exeter cemetery, Rev. D. W. Collins conducting the service.

THE BAWDEN BOWLING TROPHY.

The conditions of the presentation of the S. G. Bawden Bowling Trophy have been somewhat changed from the original idea. The main condition is that the cup is to be a trophy for an annual tournament on the Exeter Greens, same to be won three times in succession to become the property of the rink. In the meantime, however, before a tournament can be arranged for, the local club is to be divided into rinks and to contest for the cup, the winners to hold same until called for by the trustees to be put up at an annual event. The first of the local contests is to take place immediately after June 1st. The trustees appointed by Mr Bawden are Rev. D. W. Collins, W. J. Heaman, L. H. Dickson, N. D. Hurdon and R. N. Creech.

REGULATIONS WITH CERTIFICATES

The increase in the number of teachers lured by matrimony and the West from the schools of Ontario has led the Ontario educational department to enact new provisions for the securing and retaining of teachers. Every certificate issued by the department for 1911 will be given only with the agreement of the graduating Normalite to teach at least one year in the schools of Ontario.

The circulars of the department announcing this also urge upon the various school boards throughout the province the necessity of paying larger salaries. It is noted that the salaries in other places are much higher than in Ontario.

The number of teachers newly certificated and graduating from the mills of learning throughout the province the department estimates at 1,000.

SAREPTA

A quiet wedding was solemnized here on Saturday last when Mr. Horatio F. N. Reynolds was united in marriage to Miss Susan Jane Adams, late of New York, and daughter of the late Richard Adams of Stephen. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. H. Grenzebach of Dashwood in the presence of only a few of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The happy couple will have the best wishes of their many friends for a happy wedded life.

Death of Mrs. Reynolds.—Another of the old and much esteemed pioneer residents of this district departed this life at the residence of her son, Mr. Horatio Reynolds, here on Tuesday, May 23. We refer to the demise of Susannah Lee, widow of the late William Reynolds, in her 81st year. The deceased had been in failing health from the infirmities of old age for some time, but her condition did not assume a serious aspect until only two days before her demise, when she was stricken down and sank rapidly until the end came, which was calm and peaceful. Mrs. Reynolds was born in Leicestershire, England, in the year 1831, and came to Canada with her parents when quite young, settling first in the Township of Tuckersmith, and she has continuously resided in the neighborhood ever since. She married her late husband in the year 1853, and to the happy union was born 13 of a family, (six of whom are still living—three sons and three daughters—William of Sarnia; Henry of Hay; Horatio of Sarepta; Mrs. J. H. Beamer of Wingham; Mrs. W. C. Kelly of Newberry, Mich.; and Mrs. John Nicholson of Earl Grey, Sask. Her husband predeceased her about five years. The subject of this sketch was one of the most kind hearted of women, and many of the older settlers were the recipients of her kind ministrations and generosity. She was a good mother and wife, kind and true, and always solicitous to the welfare of those of her household and those under her care. The funeral took place to the Exeter cemetery on Thursday. The sympathy of all go out to the bereaved.

USBORNE

DEATH.—The sad death took place on Monday, May 29th, at the City Hospital Hamilton, of a highly respected resident of this Township in the person of Janet H. Laing, beloved wife of Mr. Andrew Hodgert, aged 47 years, 11 months. Deceased had been in failing health for some months, from an internal growth, and two weeks ago it was decided to undergo an operation for which purpose she was taken to Hamilton. The operation, however, did not prove a success, and she passed away as above stated. The remains were brought to her late residence, Con. 9, Usborne, on Monday evening, from which place interment took place to the Exeter cemetery on Wednesday afternoon. The late Mrs. Hodgert was a daughter of the late Thomas Laing of Cromarty. Two brothers, and two sisters, Mrs. J. Scott and Mrs. Neil Gillespie, all of Cromarty, survive besides the sorrowing husband, five sons and one daughter, the oldest being about nineteen years of age. Deceased was a most admirable woman, a fond wife and mother and her demise will be sincerely regretted by a wide circle of friends, who will sympathize most sincerely with the bereaved family.

BASEBALL

Centralia and Exeter boys played an excellent game of baseball on the local diamond Monday evening, resulting in favor of Exeter, 8-1. T. Carling pitched for the locals and secured eleven strike-outs, while the visitors got three hits off him. H. Swann for the Centralia team got ten strike-outs and had four hits recorded against him. A feature of the game was the throwing of Catcher Hoskins to Second. It was so well done and so well received by Jimmy Bawden on the second sack that the visitors were time and again caught trying to steal second, and at last were very wary about attempting it. A good crowd was present and the game was thoroughly enjoyed. The line-up was as follows,—

The juniors drove to Zurich Tuesday afternoon and defeated the boys of that village by a score of 6-5. Exeter had the game in good shape, 6-1 until the ninth when the boys went up in the air and the opponents almost snatched the victory from them, scoring four runs. The juniors are putting up a remarkably good game, and are deserving of the towns patronage. The Exeter players were, Bissett, Sweet, Hoskins, Duplan Birney, Fuke, Heywood, Mallott, Prescator, Geo. Palmer umpired.

ANIMAL INSURANCE

Live stock insurance is of comparatively recent development in this country. Even to-day outside the insuring of horses there is very little done. It is, however, a phase of farm management that should receive more attention from every one who keeps live stock. The man who invests a thousand dollars or so in a stallion or a few hundred in a brood mare is taking long chances in not providing for loss by insuring in some reliable company. There are few farmers who would think of allowing their farm buildings to go uninsured for even a week, yet many will invest as much money as their whole buildings cost in improved live stock, and not have a dollar's worth of insurance on it. If the truth were known, there is as much loss in the country through valuable animals dying, as from buildings destroyed by fire. Animal insurance as we have already stated, has not received much attention in this country. It has reached its greatest development in the Old Land and in Europe. In Prussia they have had for years a system of insurance against the seizure of animals condemned because of some malignant disease. In 1907 the total animals under insurance in that country were 1,102,000; calves, 569,0000; pigs 4,076,000; and sheep, 120,000. In '09 there were 33 private enterprises in Germany for insuring cattle, 26 of which were on a mutual, and the rest on an individual basis.

Recipes and Other Valuable Information of Particular Interest to Women Folks.

TESTED RECIPES.

Chicken Coquettes.—Roll four cups of minced chicken, one cup bread crumbs, three well beaten eggs, one tablespoonful of sherry wine, two grates of nutmeg, one-half teaspoonful of salt, dash each of cayenne and paprika, one tablespoonful each of cream and melted butter, into pear-shaped balls; dip these into beaten egg and bread crumbs and fry to a golden brown. These are delicious.

Pineapple Dessert.—One pint of shredded pineapple. Boil with one-half ounce of gelatin which has been dissolved in just enough cold water to dissolve it. When cooled, but not fully formed, stir in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs and fold in lightly one-half pint of whipped cream; pour into a mold and set on ice to harden. If canned pineapple is used no sugar will be required. Serve with plain cream.

Cuban Dish.—Peel and slice four fine Bermuda onions into cold water. Leave them there half an hour, take them out and dry by laying them upon one cloth, covering with another. Have ready in a saucepan a dozen fine tomatoes peeled and sliced thin. Heat slowly while you fry the onions in butter to a light brown. When the tomatoes are hot and soft season with salt, sugar, and an even teaspoonful of paprika. Add four okra pods silced thin. Bring to a boil, add the fried onions, and cook fast for fifteen minutes. Line a platter with slices of toast, well buttered, and pour the "olla" over them. Set in the oven for three minutes to soak the toast and serve.

Genoa Dish.—Stew one dozen tomatoes until soft, add a little sugar, salt, and cayenne. Put through a colander, return to fire. In a frying pan heat three large tablespoonfuls of butter, break into it rapidly six eggs, stirring all the time. As soon as eggs are broken and mixed add the tomatoes, then add quickly three tablespoonfuls of grated Parmesan cheese. Eat with brown bread.

PINEAPPLE.

Drain the slices of pineapple from the syrup in the can. Dip the slices, one at a time, in fritter batter and fry in deep fat to a delicate amber tint. Drain on soft paper. Serve at once with a hot sauce made of the syrup from the can or with powdered sugar.

Sauce for Fritters—Put the syrup from the can of pineapples and three-fourths of a cup of sugar over the fire to boil; mix a level teaspoonful of arrowroot to a smooth, thin consistency, with three or four tablespoonfuls of cold water; stir the arrowroot in boiling syrup and let simmer five or six minutes. When ready to serve add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of lemon juice, and Kirsch, claret, or rum to taste. Serve as an entree with roast meat.

Pineapple Fritters.—Batter for Pineapple Fritters—Beat one egg, add one-half cup of milk, and gradually stir into one cup of sifted flour, sifted again with one level teaspoonful and a half each of baking powder and sugar and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt.

Golden Custard.—To each pint of milk allow two eggs, one-fourth cupful of sugar, or more if desired very sweet. Whip the sugar with the eggs until sugar is dissolved. Pour this into the milk and pour over a half cupful of stale cake crumbs that have been dried and rolled fine. Pour into fancy molds or cups and set in a pan of warm water which comes to one-third of the top of the cups. Bake in a moderate oven until the custards are firm. Remove from the cups by slipping a thin bladed knife about the edges of custards. Pour some sweetened pineapple juice over each one and top with a spoonful of whipped cream.

Pineapple Trifle.—Boil two-thirds cupful of sugar and one pint can of grated pineapple until a good syrup. Dissolve one-half package of gelatin in one-half pint of boiling water. Add pineapple syrup, juice of an orange, and let set. When well set add one-half cupful whipped cream and beat until well mixed. This amount will serve eight persons, and in carrying out a color scheme of red or green a decoration of maraschino cherries could be used.

TIME FOR COOKING.

Beets, from one hour to four hours. Wash and cut off tops.

Cabbage, wash and soak a few minutes in salt water to remove any insects; boil for twenty minutes.

Carrots, scrape, boil from thirty to forty-five minutes.

Turnips, pare, boil in water to which a tablespoonful of sugar has been added; if large, slice.

Winter squash, remove the seeds and skin and cut into pieces; boil from fifteen to twenty minutes in very little water.

Onions, peel under water; boil three-quarters of an hour to an hour.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Lemon juice rubbed on the hands will easily and effectually remove stains.

To cure earache, wrap a litle black pepper in cotton, moisten it with sweet oil and insert it in the ear.

Stains may be removed from tinware by scouring with common soda then washing thoroughly and drying.

Lemons hardened from long standing may be made usable by covering a few moments with boiling water.

It is said that a piece of sal ammoniac will remove a wart if dampened and rubbed on the wart several nights in succession.

When preparing a leg of lamb for roasting, pin on thin slices of bacon with whole cloves and the flavor of the meat will be fine.

Always warm the baby's bed with a hot water bottle before putting him to rest for the night. If he is restless this will make him sleep.

Having several pairs of shoes and never wearing the same pair more than one or two days at a time will rest the leather and make it last better.

Boiled potatoes should be served as soon as they are cooked. To make them drier drain off the water quickly, shake them in a strong draught of air, and do not put back the lid of pot.

Any dish that has held dough, milk, cream or eggs should be rinsed in cold water before being placed in hot water, as hot water tends to cook such things and make them more difficult to remove.

To keep the feet dry and warm and increase the durability of boots and shoes, it is best to have the soles perfectly dry, and then apply linseed oil on the outside of them till they will absorb no more.

The best way to keep a bed from becoming damp if left for a week or two, is to leave a blanket on the top of the bed after it is made. Take the blanket off before using, and then you will find it quite safe.

It is seldom necessary to eat half a chicken in the middle of the night, but there are times when a plain biscuit and a glass of water will give the relief to an exhausted body which will bring soothing rest to the disturbed mind.

Wash and starch your curtains in the usual way. Pin down on the lawn with toothpicks, stretching into position as you proceed. You will find they will look as good as new and the process much easier and quicker than with frames.

White ostrich feathers can be cleaned by using gasoline and flour. Stir in enough flour to make a thin white paste. Thoroughly shake the feather in this. Dry by waving in the sunshine and air. The flour will shake out, leaving your feather white, soft, and beautiful.

If there is a strong wind and the doctor has left orders that a window in the sick room must be kept open all night, nail a piece of muslin over the aperture. This will prevent draughts, and at the same time not obstruct the ventilation. The material should be coarse.

Instead of a hot-water bag, use a bag of hot salt. Put the salt in a pie plate and heat it in the oven, then put it into a small bag or, in case of emergency tie it loosely in a thin cloth and lay it over the afflicted part. Many prefer a hot salt bag to a hot water bag. The salt may be reheated.

Save old kid gloves for ironing day. Sew a pad made from the left glove on to the palm of the right one, and you will find your hand is saved from becoming blistered while the fingers and the back of the hand will be protected from the scorching heat, which is so damaging to the skin.

OVERLOOKED.

A schoolmaster had been severely correcting a boy, and finished by saying: "Now, sit down and write a letter to your parents, telling them how much you are taught here, and how little you profit therefrom. I should be ashamed to tell them." The boy cried at first, and then wrote: "Dear Father,—I am very stupid, though there is more to be learnt here than anywhere. Twice two's four, four boys go to one bed, six beds make one attic, and four attics made one well-ventilated and well-appointed sleeping dormitory. One round of bread and butter makes one breakfast, and every tea makes its own supper."

"This time," said the master, when he had examined the letter, "we will overlook your conduct, and you neen't send that note."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, JUNE 4.

Lesson X.—Israel's penitence and God's pardon, Hosea 14.

Golden Text, Neh. 9. 17.

Verse 1. Return unto Jehovah thy God—Hosea has followed Amos in declaring that inevitable disaster awaits his people because of their iniquity. But now, with faith and patriotism, he turns to them with an appeal to repent and a promise of God's forgiving mercy. His doctrine of repentance, therefore, is as gracious as it is true. He realizes how low his nation has fallen in the guilt and shame of its degeneracy. But he knows there is hope in a God who is waiting to hear the cry and satisfy the hunger of the returning prodigal.

2. Take with you words — True repentance is articulate. It will not keep silent and so give no token of its sincerity, but will speak forth in praise and pure worship. Hosea saw that the entire manner in which Israel turned to God was altogether artificial and lacking in earnestness. Her burnt-offerings were cheaply rendered. They could in no wise satisfy an offended God. He wanted none of them. What he desired was a clean worship that expressed itself in heart-wrung words—bullocks of the lips. Penitent confessions, vows, abhorrence of sin—these Jehovah will gladly accept as good.

3. Assyria shall not save us — There were two political parties in Israel in these latter days of the kingdom. One courted the help of Assyria, the other favored resistance of Assyria through alliance with Egypt. The prophets regarded both these schemes as disloyalty to the God of Israel, and accordingly frowned upon foreign entanglements of every sort, whether they meant protection from the powerful Assyrian, or the reenforcement of Egypt's swift horses (cavalry). The foreign idols, also, wrought by their own hands, were equally to be eschewed as an offense to God and as a worthless superfluity. They had Jehovah, and he was more than all their allies and made unnecessary their hideous idolatries.

The fatherless—This is a touch of that personal history which colors so much of Hosea's prophecy. Like his own children—one of whom he called Unloved (one who knew not the pity which a father has for his children)—so were the sons and daughters of this wicked generation. They had grown up in ignorance of the true God, and were not his. But he intends, nevertheless, to seek them out, to win them back, and prove to them—fatherless as they are—that in him is mercy.

4. I will love them freely—The love of Jehovah is nothing that can be purchased. It is as spontaneous as it is undeserved. It asks no sacrifices except those of a contrite heart, and where that is found there in a potency in the love of God which makes all things new. It is ready to forgive gratuitously, and powerful to heal absolutely, all our backsliding. So it removes the stain, as well as the guilt, of our sin. Compare Rom. 3. 24; 8. 32; Rev. 21. 6; 22. 17.

5. The dew—Scarcity of rain often made the land depend upon the dew. So the Psalmist speaks of the dews of Hermon. In the long droughts of summer there would be no living in Palestine without this gracious provision. Hermon itself is snow-capped in summer, and the moist warm wind from the Mediterranean, coming in contact with the chilled air about the snowy top, results in a drenching dew. What a picture of the gentle pity of God.

Lebanon—Here, as often in the Old Testament, not the entire range now knows as Lebanon is meant, but Hermon, the loftiest and southernmost summit. From almost every quarter of Galilee it is visible. "You cannot lift your eyes from any spot of northern Israel without resting them upon the vast mountain. From the unhealthy jungles of the upper Jordan, the pilgrim lifts his heart to the cool hill air above, to the ever-green cedars and firs, to the streams and waterfalls that drop like silver chains off the great breastplate of snow." Compare Isaiah 60. 13.

6. His beauty . . . as the olive-tree—A promise of national prosperity and plenty.

7. They shall revive—Under the nurturing influences of the divine mercy, as expressed by the dew, and the protection of his shadow, Israel is to blossom forth in unwonted beauty, fragrance, and fertility.

8. Ephraim—Representing the people of Israel. The verse has many difficulties, owing to the confusion resulting from the use of so many undefined pronouns. This confusion is characteristic of Hosea's style. Here, it cannot certainly be determined which is speaking, Jehovah or Ephraim, or both. A good explanation makes the verse a dialogue betweeen the two. Ephraim announces his intention to have done with idols. Jehovah replies that he has taken note of the penitent's prayer and will answer. That being the case Ephraim feels himself robust as a green fir-tree. But Jehovah warns him not to forget again that all the fruit of prosperity comes solely from him.

9. Who is wise, that he may understand?—To understand, in the thought of the prophet, was to lay to heart, with a good conscience, such truth as God had made known. None but the wise and prudent can so appreciate the message of this prophecy as to profit thereby. To do that requires not merely an intellectual apprehension of the ways of Jehovah, but a practical effectiveness manifest in walking in them.

CONCRETE ON THE FARM.

Its Uses Have Been Largely Extended by a Series of Experiments

It is only a few years since concrete was generally accepted as a reliable building material, yet the difference which this convenient and economical form of construction has made in the outlook of the farmer in these few years, has done much to revolutionize things on the farm.

The growing scarcity of lumber and its consequent rise in price, has gradually caused that commodity to assume the general aspect of a luxury. So much lumber is used on the farm for buildings and fences that its extremely high price has made it almost prohibitive to the average farmer unless he has an extra large sum of money to spend on outlay. Wire fencing partially solved the problem, but real relief did not come until concrete was proven by actual tests to be not only practicable, but to possess many advantages over wood as a building material.

The uses to which concrete can be put are practically without limit, more particularly on the farm. Already much has been accomplished on the farm by the use of concrete. Perhaps the greatest argument in its favor, and one which has developed only since concrete has actually been put into general use, is its health-promoting properties.

If sickness occurs in a city to any great extent, a searching investigation usually follows, conducted by a medical health officer, with the result that it is traced back to its cause and this cause removed.

The farmer must be his own medical health officer. He must look to the causes to be found on his own farm. A great deal is now being done along these lines, and in many places, particularly in the West, it has been found that a number of the causes of sickness can be avoided by the use of concrete.

A common sense view of the situation shows that this simply-handled material is peculiarly well adapted to measures of sanitation and in preventing germs from spreading.

Possibly the place visited more often than any other by the farmer is his well. If it is so situated that unhealthful ground streams can leak into the drinking water, there is every possibility of this unhealthfulness being communicated to the farmer and his family by the most direct route. Concrete has done much to remedy this. If a well is built of concrete—a solid cylinder set into the ground—it is impossible for such leakage to occur. In the same way a concrete dairy provides but slim accommodation for disease germs. These two simple precautions are a long stride in the direction of good health, as water and milk, the latter even more than the former, are the commonest of the germ-distributing agencies and both are used frequently by the farmer and his family.

HOGS EATING FROM A CONCRETE FEEDING FIOOR.

Not only has the modern farmer studied out a method of guarding against sickness from sources which might, in the case of water and milk, be termed, internal. He has gone a step further and has decided that the barnyard must also be subjected to some changes if doctors' pills and doctors' bills are to be dodged.

CAPTAIN KIDD'S TREASURES.

Papers In Record Office Tell What He Did With the Booty.

Doomed to an infamy undeserved, his name reddened with crimes he never committed and made wildly romantic by tales of treasure which he did not bury, Captain Willian Kidd is fairly entitled to the sympathy of posterity and the apologies of all the ballad-makers and alleged historians who have obscured the facts in a cloud of fable. Fate has played the strangest tricks with the memory of this seventeenth century seafarer, who never cut a throat nor made a victim walk the plank; who was no more than an amateur pirate in an era when this interesting profession was in its heyday; and who was hanged at Execution Dock for the excessively unromantic crime of cracking the skull of his gunner with a wooden bucket; because, forsooth, his majesty's officers were unable to prove their charges of piracy.

As for the riches of Captain Kidd, the original documents in his case, preserved among the State papers of the Public Record Office in London, relate with much detail what booty he had and what he did with it. Alas! they reveal the futility of the searches after the stout sea-chest buried above high water mark. The only authentic Kidd treasure was dug up and inventoried more than two hundred years ago, nor has the slightest clue to any other been found since then.

WEAK HEARTS NOT FATAL.

Irregularity in Beats Need Not Alarm, Says Physician.

Dr. James Mackenzie, a distinguished physician and an authority on diseases of the heart, recently has upset all of the old-fashioned notions concerning what is known as heart failure. The results of his investigations were made known in the first of the lectures lately delivered at the Royal College of Physicians, London, England.

Dr. Mackenzie said that heart trouble due to damaged valves may persist for 50 years and not interfere with good health and long life. Again, he made an assertion that should ease the minds of millions of apprehensive persons who fear that they are in danger of death because their hearts sometimes beat irregularly—namely, that of a skip and a jump once in a while is good evidence of a healthy heart.

KING'S DURBAR TENT.

Enormous Baronnial Fireplace to be Built in Canvas Structure.

Although King George is to live in a tent during his stay in Delhi for the Durbar, it may not be supposed that the tent will bear any likeness to the white canvas mushrooms which are associated with the training of troops.

The London Mirror has obtained some details of how the Royal tents in India will be fitted up. In India, Durbar tents are structures of wonderful splendor, and the King's tent—or, rather, range of tents—will, as is only fitting, be on a scale calculated to impress even those accustomed to the magnificence of the tabernacles of the Indian rajahs and chiefs.

A kind of temporary place or pavilion will be built, consisting of a large number of the most sumptuous Durbar tents specially made for the occasion.

The principal of these will be about forty feet in length, is being lined with native woven draperies, and will have an enormous "baronial" type of fireplace built into one side of it.

The general scheme of decoration is to follow Indian traditions, and will be carried out in a full, rich-toned orange and black as the dominant colors. Externally, the whole group of tents will be made as strikingly gorgeous as possible in order to impress the minds of a people who, in a ages, have been associated with the most lavish display in pageantry.

In all, there will be a large number of different camps outside the walls of Delhi—the King's camp, surrounded by the camps of the higher officials of the Indian Government, those of the greater Indian chiefs, overflow camps for the suites of native princes, and, finally, camps for visitors.

FINGERS AND FORKS.

A Traveller Says Forks Were First Used in Italy.

The customs of to-day are the laughing stock of to-morrow; and, quite as often, the innovation, scorned by steady-going and respectable folks, becomes, in the course of time, an every-day necessity. It is scarcely three centuries, for example, since forks came into use.

"I observed," says a traveller of 1611, "a custom in Italian towns that is not used in any other country. The Italians do always at their meals use a little fork when they cut their meat. For while with the knife, which they hold in one hand, they cut the meat out of the dish, they fasten the fork, which they hold in the other hand, upon the same dish. So that one should unadvisedly touch the dish of meat with his fingers, from which all the table do cut, will give occasion of offense unto the company. The reason of this their curiosity is because the Italian cannot by any means endured to have his dish touched with fingers, seeing that all men's fingers are not alike clean. Hereupon, I myself thought good to imitate the Italian fashion of cutting meat since I came home."

To Queen Elizabeth were presented gold and jeweled forks at various times. But the dainty queen preferred the old habit of fingering her meat, and forks were for a long time regarded as a worthless, foppish invention. One divine, in the reign of James I., preached a sermon against forks, declaring it to be an "insult on Providence not to touch one's meat with one's fingers." And another, in 1617, advised all travellers "returning home to lay aside the spoon and fork of Italy, the affected gestures of France, and all strange apparel."

THE FINGER NAIL.

Do Marks Indicate Approaching Dissolution.

The significance of certain markings on the finger nails frequently has been the subject of discussion in medical publications. The latest contribution is a paper by Norman Flower, which appears in the British Medical Journal. It deals with the condition of the nails during and after severe illness.

"Flower brings forward several cases," says the Medical Record, commenting on his paper, "which have come under his observation in support of the contention that finger nails undergo a change during and after serious illness. The most interesting part of his paper is, however, the testimony of Sir Samuel Wilke to the same effect. Wilke was the first to notice the white markings on the nails as being indicative of death or approaching death. Wilke mentioned several cases in proof of this argument.

"Whether these finger nail markings are of any value in prognosis is doubtful. In the first place, it may be presumed that they do not always occur, and then those who have them do not always die. They are apparently simple curiosities."

When poisoned with poison ivy bathe the affected parts with 90 per cent alcohol. Government experiments have proved this to be an absolute antidote for poison ivy.

JUST ONE CURE FOR ANAEMIA

It Is Through the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make

There is just one cure for anaemia—more rich, red blood. Anaemia is simply a bloodless, run down condition. Then the body becomes weak from overwork, worry or illness, an examination of the blood will show it to be weak and watery. The common symptoms are paleness of lips, gums and cheeks, shortness of breath and palpitation of the heart after the slightest exertion, dull eyes and a loss of appetite. Anaemia itself is a dangerous trouble and may pass into consumption. It can only be cured by making the blood rich and red, thereby enabling it to carry the necessary nourishment to every part of the body.

It is a proved fact that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured thousands and thousands of cases of anaemia. They are really intended to make new, rich blood, and are compounded in the most scientific manner with the finest ingredients for the blood known to medical science. These Pills are not a cure-all. They are intended to cure only those diseases that have their origin in poor, watery blood, and starved, weakened nerves, and the record of their success in doing this is their constantly increasing popularity in every part of the world.

Mrs. R. Colton, Golden, B. C., says:—"As a matter of duty I wish to say a word in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for what they have done for my daughters, one 16 and the other 18 years of age. Both were pale and bloodless and suffered from many of the symptoms of anaemia. They would tire easily, suffered from frequent headaches, were easily discouraged, and often fretful. I saw in our home paper the story of a young girl who had similarly suffered and was cured through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink ills. I bought three boxes of the Pills and my daughters started to take them. Before they were done they began to feel better and look better, and I got a half dozen more boxes, and by the time these were used, they were enjoying the best of health, with rosy cheeks and not like the same girls at all. I also gave the Pills to my little boy who had rheumatism, and they completely cured him."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Pleasure is almost anything we can't afford.

If wishes were horses there would soon be a hay famine.

Success demonstrates that it's a long head that has no turning.

A man may be a power in financial circles, and still be on the square.

It isn't enough to pay as we go. We should save enough to get back.

When we succeed it is hard work; failure is due entirely to bad luck.

Everybody who works makes work for somebody else.

The only real way to take care of "No. 1" is to see that "No. 1" is a good man.

To be happy with money you must own your money, not let your money own you.

Money goes such a long way in these times that it never can get back home again.

A girl is more enthusiastic over being married than she is over the man she is married to.

Friends are like an umbrella—when the storm comes on, you don't stop to see whether the handle is pretty or plain.

AN INVALUABLE MEDICINE

Mrs. W. Arnold, Edmonton, Alta., writes:—"Kindly send me a box of Baby's Own Tablets. They have been invaluable to me and I really do not know how I ever would have got along without them. Baby was poorly; his digestion was bad and he was constipated. I gave him the Tablets and they made a fine healthy boy of him. Now, whenever he is cross or troubled with constipation, I always give him the Tablets and they relieve him right away. I tried a lot of other medicine, but nothing seemed to agree with him till I got the Tablets. I would not be without them." The testimony of Mrs. Arnold is that of thousands of other mothers. Everyone who ever uses Baby's Own Tablets have words of praise for them. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"I'm sorry to hear your mother is ill, Lola," said the neighbor. "Is she sick in bed?" "Oh, no!" replied small Lola. "She's just sick in a rocking chair!"

MAN SHOULD REACH 100

CENTENARIANS ARE NOW FREQUENTLY HEARD OF.

Some Interesting Facts and Comparisons Given by a London Expert.

"It is extremely doubtful if a really natural death ever does occur in any kind of animal—including man," said Dr. Chalmers Mitchell, the secretary of the Zoological Society, in the course of the first three lectures on "Problems of animals in captivity," at the Royal Institution, London, not long ago.

Dr. Mitchell supported Metchnikoff's theory that the changes of senility are the results of external accidents, of the poisons of various kinds of diseases, or of insanitary conditions. If all these causes were removed most animals, including ourselves, would attain very much greater ages than we do.

To an animal living in a perfectly hygienic world, sheltered from all diseases death would still eventually come, but as a result of the slow, gradual accumulation of waste matters of all kinds in the tissues.

Here are some of the interesting facts Dr. Mitchell stated:—

The potential age of man should certainly be placed at well over 100 and it is noticeable that centenarians are nowadays quite frequently heard of.

The number of potential centenarians among animals is comparatively small.

AMONG MAMMALS

we have only man, whales and elephants, and among birds eagles and parrots. Humboldt told a story of a parrot so old that it spoke in a forgotten tongue. Popular conceptions as to the age of animals are often based on such evidence.

There is no relation between size and potential longevity. A canary lives almost as long as an ostrich, while a parrot lives longer than an ostrich.

Among reptiles there are well-established cases of turtles and tortoises living to 150 and 200 years.

With fish we enter into the region of legend. The old and dilapidated carp at Fontainebleau were at one time supposed to have reached an incredible age, but it has been shown that the basin was cleaned out, and the carp were destroyed at the time of the Revolution, so that fixes the limit of their possible antiquity. There is also a story, which cannot be vouched for, that a carp caught in 1260, branded and thrown back into the sea, was recaught 260 years later.

A new and more satisfactory method of reckoning the lives of fishes is now being introduced. In connection with their ears there is a structure consisting of consecutive yearly deposits, which may be counted like the annual rings to

THE STEM OF A TREE.

Invertebrates are short lived—from a few weeks to two or three years—save the cicada, which lives for seventeen years as a grub in the roots of trees in orchards, then comes to the surface, assumes the form of adult life, and dies in two or three months.

Snails and sea molluscs are said to be able to live up to 100 years, but the evidence is again doubtful. A sea anemone, however, kept in captivity in Edinburgh, was fully grown when put into its tank, and only died as the result of an accident at the age of between sixty and seventy.

The destruction of eggs, disease, changes of climate, starvation, and above all, the attacks of enemies, account for the fact that few animals ever reach their potential ages.

ST. BERNARD HOSPICE.

It Was First Established More Than a Thousand Years Ago.

There was probably a hospice upon the Great St. Bernard more than a thousand years ago. But the Saracens came up from the South of France and made havoc in these parts and the hospice had to be refunded by St. Bernard of Menthon in the eleventh century. According to Mr. Coolidge, it has been served by the Austin Canons of Martigny, whose chief has just died after twenty-five years of command, perhaps ever since 1154, certainly since 1215. How many travellers have the good canons and their dogs befriended during all these centuries? Formerly the canons had a good deal of property in England. The chapel of Romford was theirs in 1177, and Henry II. gave them the hospital of Hornchurch or Havering in Essex. From them William of Wykeham acquired for the benefit of New College, Oxford.—London Chronicle.

FARMER'S WIFE TELLS HER STORY

FOUND A CURE FOR ALL HER ILLS IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

She was tired, worn-out and nervous, and suffered from Rheumatism, but two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

Hawthorne, Ont., May 22 (Special).—Mrs. T. G. Alexander, wife of a well-known farmer living near here, adds her testimony to that of the thousands who have learned from their own experience that Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Kidney Disease.

"I suffered for twelve years," Mrs. Alexander says. "My back ached, my sleep was broken and unrefreshing. I was nervous and tired and I was troubled with heart flutterings. Rheumatism developed and added to my suffering.

"I was in a very run-down, worn-out condition when I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, but I am thankful to say they gave me relief almost from the first. Two boxes cured me completely."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidneys. Cured Kidneys mean that all impurities are strained out of the blood. That means pure blood all over the body and the banishment of that tired, heavy feeling and those pains and aches that impure blood brings.

WORLD'S DEADLIEST POISON.

Emanations of Hydrocyanic Will Cause Instant Death.

Although it has been stated that hyoscin is the deadliest poison known to science, this is not quite correct.

It is true that no more than half a grain is sufficient to destroy life, so that a single pound of the horrible substance would be capable of causing the deaths of more than 15,000 people. But there are other drugs that are even more deadly, although, luckily, they are never found outside the laboratory of the professional toxicologist.

Tetanine is one of these. It is what scientists call a microbe poison, the product of the microbe of tetanus, or lockjaw. A fatal dose of tetanine would be but a fifth part of a similar dose of hyoscin. Or put another way, while a pound weight of hyoscin would suffice to kill above 15,000 people, a pound of tetanine would kill over 75,000. By actual experiment it has been proved that a fifteen-hundredth part of a grain of tetanine will kill a horse 600,000,000 times his own weight.

It is probable that this is the deadliest poison known, although there are several others that run it a fairly close second. For example, pure hydrocyanic acid (not that usually sold in the chemists' shops, which is only a 2 per cent. solution) is so exceedingly poisonous that the mere inhalation of its emanations will cause instant death, and in fact, Scheel, its discoverer, lost his life in this manner.

ISSUE NO. 22—11.

POOR RECOMMENDATION.

A young Scotchman living in London married a beautiful and talented Englishwoman, of whom he was justly proud. Not long after his marriage he went to Scotland on a flying trip to see an old bachelor uncle.

"Weel, Tammas, ye have gotten a wife," said the old gentleman, "now what can she do, lad?"

"Do!" echoed "Tammas."

"Yes, do," repeated his uncle, firmly. "Can she sew on your buttons an' mak your porritch an' your scones?"

"Oh, no, she doesn't know how to do those things," said Tammas. "But she has the loveliest voice that you ever heard. She's a grand singer."

"Hoot, mon!" cried his uncle, indignantly. "Could you nae get a canary in Lunnon?"

HAVE YOU A BAD SORE?

If so, remember these facts—Zam-Buk is by far the most widely used balm in Canada! Why has it become so popular? Because it heals sores, cures skin diseases, and does what is claimed for it.

Remember that Zam-Buk is at the same time healing, soothing, and antiseptic. Kills poison instantly, and all harmful germs. It is suitable alike for recent injuries and diseases, and for chronic sores, ulcers, etc. Test how different and superior Zam-Buk really is. All druggists and stores at 50c. box. Use also Zam-Buk Soap. Relieves sunburn and prevents freckles. Best for baby's bath. 25c. tablet.

THE KING'S WAY.

It was characteristic of the late Edward VII. that he never showed too much or too little courtesy, but just enough to maintain his reputation of being the most gracious gentleman of Europe. Some years ago, according to the author of "The People's King," his majesty visited Aberdeen, and knighted the Lord Provost.

At the luncheon which followed, the king sat next to Mrs. Lyon, the wife of the Lord Provost, and noticed on the table the card denoting her place.

"I must alter this," the king said, smiling on the lady.

With his pencil he effaced the word Mrs. and in its place substituted Lady, and graciously handed the card to her newly made ladyship.

CURED HIS RHEUMATISM.

Yarmouth, N.S., June 2, 1908.—"I have been bothered with Rheumatism for the past year and have taken a good many kinds of medicine and found no relief for it.

"One day a friend advised me to try Gin Pills, so I did, and after taking only one box of them, I felt like a new man. "I thought I would write you a few lines to let you know how thankful I feel for the relief they gave me, and would advise all sufferers from Rheumatism to get Gin Pills."

EFFECT BUT NO CAUSE.

"So there's another rupture of Mount Vociferous," said Mrs. Partington, as she put on her specs. "The paper tells us about the burning lather running down the mountains, but it don't tell how it got afire."

They Soothe Excited Nerves.—Nervous affections are usually attributable to defective digestion, as the stomach dominates the nerve centres. A course of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will still all disturbances of this character, and by restoring the stomach to normal action relieve the nerves from irritation. There is no sedative like them and in the correction of irregularities of the digestive processes, no preparation has done so effective work, as can be testified to by thousands.

"Paddy," said a father to his little boy, who was in the habit of telling lies, "do you know what happens to liars when they die?" "Well," said Paddy, after thinking a while, "I suppose they lie still."

REST AND HEALTH TO MOTHER AND CHILD.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for over SIXTY YEARS by MILLIONS of MOTHERS for their CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, with PERFECT SUCCESS. It SOOTHES the CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS all PAIN; CURES WIND COLIC, and is the best remedy for DIARRHŒA. It is absolutely harmless. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

"Why do fashions change so frequently?" "I don't know. It may be that they're trying to elude some of the people who follow them."

Hard and soft corns both yield to Holloway's Corn Cure, which is entirely safe to use, and certain and satisfactory in its action.

WHAT GERMANY DOES.

If the Germans educate their children, giving them a systematic training in well-equipped schools until sixteen or seventeen years of age, while we leave ours in the condition indicated in the above deplorable statistics, what can be the only possible consequence? The answer to that question is clearly written for all those who have compared the two nations. It will go hard with our children, and it will go harder with our children's children, if we do not awaken to the fact that for the great majority of our people education is a mockery.

Will no man arise and insist upon the building of school for school—all big gun schools—against these Germans?

We have no hesitation in saying that Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is without doubt the best medicine ever introduced for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera and all summer complaints, sea sickness, etc. It promptly gives relief and never fails to effect a positive cure. Mothers should never be without a bottle when their children are teething.

There is no known preparation that will reach the spot quicker than this magic Oil. In consequence it ranks first among liniments now offered to the public and is accorded first place among all its competitors.

MALAYAN TREE DWELLERS.

Human tree dwellers are not yet extinct. A Malayan newspaper describes an interesting discovery made in South Canara. The Kudiyas, living near Mangalore, include, it appears, a clan who have become tree dwellers by necessity. They live in huts built amid palm and other tall trees in order to protect themselves against attacks of elephants and other wild beasts of the jungle. Their clothing consists of the bark of certain kinds of jungle trees, and they subsist on yams and meat. They are dark-skinned and noted for their fine physique, the women being even more muscular than the men, and one of their chief occupations is honey-gathering, a very dangerous employment, since the bees of Canara build their honey combs on the treetops often as much as 120 feet high.—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE FARM AS A PRISON

Incidents, which from time to time, get to the public in connection with life at the Ontario Prison Farm, show the radical departure which has taken place there in the treatment of those sentenced. In the past the idea of judges and magistrates in passing sentence, and of prison officials charged with the custody of delinquents has been to inflict punishment. The prison garb with rigorous discipline, the harsh word, the armed guard betokened the desire to humiliate and beat-beat.

Now the chief aim is to secure reform. In the pursuit of this object dislike, distrust and punishment have given place to more humane methods. The user of tobacco gets his allowance of the weed. The daily paper and the magazine are at the disposal of those under detention that they may keep themselves abreast of the world's doings. The Minister as well as the officials knows the men familiarly as Tom or Bill or whatever the name may be and in turn are respectfully addressed as Mr. Hanna Mr. Armstrong, Mr Cole, etc. Suggestions which the men may make with reference to the work and plans are listened to with interest and adopted when wise. Good conduct is rewarded with liberation on parole. All are put on their honor and made to feel that life holds hope for honest effort.

The new and improved way of transporting the remains of a deceased relative or friend to a distant place for interment is to have the body cremated, and the ashes mailed in a tin can to the desired point.

The Supreme Court of the United States orders the dissolution of the Standard Oil Company into its thirty constituent parts. At the hearing it was seen that in seven years the profits of the business had been nearly $500,000,000. It is estimated that the assets of the Standard Oil amounts to $600,000,000, in plant and properties. For the last seven years the company has paid dividends of $40 a share. Its lowest dividend of 36 per cent. was in 1904. In 1909 the stock of the company went to $635 a share, and later in 1910 to $565 Its lowest record in 1911 was $617. It is now $679. The high water mark was reached in 1901 when it sold for 948.

If you would be a successful advertiser, you must be sincere; you must not exaggerate (this is difficult), you must be honest; your merchandise and your business methods must be every bit as good as you advertise them to be. The best ads on earth will not help your business permanently unless your goods are right, and your dealings fair and square. First see that your goods and your methods of dealing with your trade are as good as you can make them, then advertise constantly and sincerely the advantages of doing business at your store, and your business is bound to grow, if you keep up with the progress of the times.

The Lorne Base Ball team from London arrived here in the morning and played our "Stars" two games of ball. The one in the morning being 7-6 in favor of the home team and in the afternoon our boys simply walked away with the strangers, defeating them 10—1. In the morning game some of the inner men made costly errors and at one time, it appeared as though the visitors would win but Teddy was pitching good ball and saved the game. This was the first game of the season and considering that our boys hadn't practiced of any account, the work was well done. The mighty "King" hasn't lost his speed and still wears that happy smile of his. By the way have you noticed that the Star team have five Fahner's in it. Everyone is a ball-player too. The morning game was umpired by Mr. Bert Wistow of London and the afternoon by Mr. Wes. Kerr of Winchelsa and Mr. Wistow innings about. The diamond is in excellent shape and fast work can be performed on it.

AMERICAN CAPITAL

Senator Beveridge Says This Must be Kept Out of Canada

As the result of some investigations conducted by The Monetary Times, Toronto, it is known that at the present time at least 200 United States manufacturing companies are operating branch factories in Canada, representing an aggregate investment of $226,000,000. For this influx of capital, with all the benefits accruing to the Dominion therefrom, the country must thank a tariff which made it worth while for those who hoped to sell Canada goods to come over the line to manufacture. Had that tariff not been a protective one, those United States manufacturers would probably have enlarged their home factories to take care of Canadian business instead of building on the Canadian side, in which case Canada would now be using goods made from United States material with United States labor, instead of goods made from Canadian material with Canadian labor.

That the States look upon this movement as a distinct loss to be remedied by Reciprocity with Canada is shown in the following extract from a speech recently delivered by Senator Beveridge, of Indiana:

"There must be reciprocity with Canada. Our tariff with the rest of the world does not apply to our northern neighbor. That policy already has driven American manufacturers across the Canadian borders, built vast plants with American capital on Canadian soil, employing Canadian workingmen to supply trade. That capital should be kept at home to employ American workingmen to supply Canadian demand. We should admit Canadian wood pulp and Canadian paper free in return for Canada's admitting our agricultural implements our engines, pumps and other machinery free. We should freely admit Canadian lumber to American planing mills in return for Canada's freely admitting other American manufactured products to Canadian markets."

PURCHASES FROM THE STATES

For the fiscal year ending 31st March, 1910, Canada's purchases from the United States were $223,501,809, their purchases from us $113,150,778. For the past decade the returns in round figures show imports from the United States of $1,600,000,000, exports to the United States of $800,000,000. In other words seven million Canadians purchased twice as much from the United States as ninety million people in the United States purchased from Canada.

ECZEMA WAS SPREADING TILL D.D.D. CURED IT

This is a translation of a letter written us in French on April 16, 1910, by Mr. Dan. Babineau, Cap Lumiere, N.B.

"I had been suffering with eczema for about 6 months, and had consulted several doctors who did not do me any good. The disease was spreading and I was most uncomfortable. I thought I would go crazy. All my friends were telling me I would lose my hands unless I found the right treatment.

One day I read in the Messenger about your D.D.D. treatment and asked for a sample. It did me so much good that I immediately ordered two large bottles. It took eight bottles altogether to cure me of this terrible disease. I shall never be without a bottle of D.D.D. in my home."

The records of ten years of complete cures of thousands of the most severe cases show that D.D.D. stands to-day as the absolutely reliable eczema cure.

Write to-day for free trial bottle to the D.D.D. Laboratories, Dept. B.A., 49 Colborne St., Toronto. It will give you instant relief.

AFTER TREATMENT

He was surprised at how the sores healed.—"I took your New Method Treatment for a serious blood disease with which I had been inflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the New Method Treatment for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I certainly can recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish. W. FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE;

OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

Darnley sighed suddenly.

He was travelling over the old, old ground, with the same disturbing results. Hour after hour he had lain awake and asked himself the same questions, only to leave himself more troubled than before.

Then another thought came, and his brow seemed to grow darker and his mouth twitched as with pain.

What if Crawsnaw had known Nancy in those miserable days, and held some power over her which forced her to become his wife?

The young man's strong right fist clinched itself suddenly, his breath came quick and fast.

What power could he hold? Surely, no wrong—no shame could ever have hung over the girl's young life!

"I will not believe that—no, no, I will not believe it, though she is gone from me—though she has wrecked my life! I will answer for it with my own that no shadow or taint of shame mingles with the gloom of those miserable young years! She was as pure as the flowers she worshipped when she gave me such perfect joy! She may be heartless, cruel, worldly, but that is all. Soone would I know her dead than doubt this!" and then Dornley hid his face in his hands and groaned aloud.

"Oh! my love—my lost love!—if only you had been true to yourself, true to me, what happiness we should have had!"

It was raining hard when Mr. Darnley embarked in the rickety village fly, procured after much difficulty and not without grumbles, on his long drive to Ripstone Hall.

His mind went back to the last time he had undertaken a similar journey. How his heart had beat and his pulses thrilled, as the soft summer evening breeze had greeted him, whispering to him of the exquisite joy that awaited him on his arrival at the Hall!

How different was his state now!

Then every vexing thought—and he had been considerably annoyed and surprised at the fruitlessness of the journey his mother had imposed upon him, which, to this day, was always a source of mystery to him whenever it entered his mind—now not one cloud upon the brilliancy of his future, not one flaw in his present.

Now not the rain clouds looming above his head were darker or more sombre than his condition; the sodden, wintry scene around was a fitting surrounding to his bitter, aching heart, the moaning of the empty trees a fitting melody to his disappointment.

The lodge keeper was reposing serenely in bed, and so, with a careful thought to the old man's rheumatism, Darnley dismounted at the gates, and, after having amply repaid the driver for the use of his most ancient vehicle, he grasped his portmanteau and prepared to walk up the long avenue to the Hall.

"I expect I shall give them a turn, arriving at this time of night; but I must explain to Dolly that I sent her a telegram, and it was not my fault that I appeared just in time to deliver it myself."

A fact which had provoked almost the first smile to his lips as he beheld the orange-colored missive which, by rights, should have been delivered two hours previously lying on the station-master's desk, to be sent up early in the morning.

"That comes of living in the wilds," the young man said to self, as he struggled against the heavy rain and wind, and heaved a sigh of relief as the Hall loomed up in the dusky light before him; "now I must go to work carefully, or I shall have them all in hysterics. By Jove! that's luck; there's a light in the smoking-room, and if that isn't old Purfleet's head, I'll eat my hat!"

With the agility of a monkey, notwithstanding the weight of the portmanteau, Darnley sprang up the incline, then scaled the terrace railing, the steps were too far down, and then he knocked cautiously at the window.

"Hist!" he whispered. "Purfleet, don't be frightened. Don't think I am a ghost; I am very real, I assure you, and very wet."

"Lor', Mr. Darnley, sir, what a start you did give me! Oh, Miss Dolly will be pleased! Come in, sir, do. You is wet, and no mistake. Has you walked, sir? Oh, dear!"

"Only up the avenue; but how is my uncle; is he better?"

The young man's voice was full of anxiety now, as he let Purfleet pull off his soaked ulster and relieve him of his belongings.

"Sir 'Umphrey was a trifle better this afternoon; I think he's really took a good turn, sir. Poor Miss Dolly! she is nearly wore out; she will be overjoyed to see you, sir. Her ladyship's 'ere, you know, sir!"

Mr. Darnley nodded; he wanted no further explanation as to why Dolly would be glad to see him. If Priscilla, Countess of Merefield, had been with her all through her trouble, the conclusion was evident.

He stooped and warmed himself by the fire, that fortunately blazed in full vigor on the hearth, while Purfleet bustled about to get him some food and tell Dorothy he was here.

In an incredibly short time there came the sound of small, pattering feet; the door was opened, and Dolly rushed in—Dolly in a dark red dressing gown, with her golden locks dishevelled and neglected about her shoulders, her very pretty face strained with tears and marked with deep traces of grief.

"Oh! Derry! Derry! you have come at last!" she cried, as she ran up to him and flung herself in his arms.

She had been brave up to this moment, for she had been all alone when her feather's condition had been fraught with danger every moment.

The young, petted girl had forgotten herself, had put aside her natural weakness and fears, and, self-reliant as any brave man, she had faced the situation with courage and resolution; but now—now that the danger was fast going, and the doctors not only suggested hope, but both looked and declared it—now that Derry was come—Derry, with his illimitable sympathy, his frank, manly voice, his strength, his charm—Dolly broke down, and as she hid her face on his rough coat, she wept out a passion of tears.

Except that he put his arms about the trembling form, the young man forebore to check her grief, judging rightly it was a natural vent, and would do her good in the long run; and after a few moments the sobs died away, and Dorothy was herself again.

"Oh! Derry, how good it is to see you again—how good!"

That was all she could say at first, and she held his hand with a tenacity that testified to the truth of this cry.

"Come, little cousin, you must cheer up; sit down in this cozy chair and tell me everything, how this happened and how things are going now."

Derrick pushed her gently back on the cushions as he spoke so cheerily.

He was very fond of Dorothy, as fond as though she had been his little sister; and he was more than grieved at the change in her; it did not seem right that Dorothy should be weeping—beautiful, sunny, laughter-loving Dorothy; it pained him that such heavy trouble should have come upon her, she who had been the embodiment of earthly joy.

"It has all been so awful!" the poor child said, as she passed her hand over her hot eyes; "it seems as though years had come and gone since you went away, Derry, and yet it is only four months. Daddy was so well then; yes, and long after; I can't tell you exactly how it began, but he was ailing some weeks before the awful day when he nearly killed me by stumbling over some loose stones and injuring his leg. He suffered—oh, Derry, how he suffered! I wrote you all about it the other day, but no words could be strong enough to describe his agony. But even that was not so bad as what came after, the day when they told me that they feared paralysis, and that whenever he recovered, if he did recover, he would be lame for life—lame! Think of it, Derry; daddy, who was always in the open air, rushing here and rushing there—lame! Oh! it breaks my heart to think of it!"

"Oh, you must be brave, dear," Darnley said, passing his hand tenderly over her ruffled golden locks; his own eyes were misty as he spoke; "remember, lame or no, he will be with you still, and that is everything."

"Ah! yes, indeed; if I can only keep him, I shall try and bear everything else. I—I have not been so silly before as I am to-night, Derry; it sounds foolish, but I am crying because you have come, dear. I have wanted some one like you, some sympathetic friend to help me through this dreadful time."

Dorothy's voice faltered a little at the end, her head drooped so that she could not see the quick, stern look that came into the man's face.

"And—and has no one come to you?" he asked, in hard, dry tones; he could not frame the words that should bring in Nancy's name.

"Aunt Anne wrote very kindly, offering to help nurse daddy, but I refused her; she would have been no use, Derry."

"No, she would have been no use," Derrick repeated. They were both too kind-hearted to say out frankly that Mrs. Darnley would, in reality, have been an additional trouble. "But Lady Merefield, Dolly?"

"She would come; and, to do her justice, I think she has fretted terribly about papa; but Aunt Priscilla does not exactly help me, Derry."

A faint smile flickered on Dorothy's wan face for an instant, but it found no answering one on Derrick's grave face.

There was a silence between them, during which he tried hard to crush down the new bitterness that was springing up against Nancy.

Dorothy looked at him wistfully once or twice, and then, as their eyes met, she leaned forward hurriedly.

"Yes, Derry, I know what is in your mind," she said, "you are wondering why Nancy has not come to me in my trouble."

"It was her positive duty," he answered harshly; "if such a thing as gratitude existed in her heart, she would not, could not have deserted you at this time for a hundred husbands!"

Dolly looked a little astonished at his warmth, then she shook her head.

"Ah! I see you are like the rest, you have nothing but hard, bitter thoughts for Nancy!"

"If so, she has herself to thank for them," he said, dryly. "Come now, Dorothy, confess, does not your own nature recoil from this girl, who first of all sells herself—yes, sells—for what other reason can be given for her marriage to a brute who happens to possess thousands, and can gratify her every wish? and then, when you, her benefactor, her friend, her sister—when you are in the greatest sorrow a woman can know, she never even comes near you, or offers to help you in the smallest degree. Hard thoughts! what thoughts can be too hard for such a creature?"

Dorothy's lips quivered.

"If this were true, Derry, I might think as you do!"

"If!" The man's eyes were flashing. "What doubt is there, then?—if, indeed! Dorothy, you are almost too tender, too forgiving!"

"Where Nancy is concerned I am all love!" the girl cried, staunchly; "for I alone knew the truth."

Derrick Darnley paused; at one touch his bitterness, his anger died out—hope and fear sprang into birth. Dorothy's tones were pregnant of some meaning. Doubt enveloped him in vague, mysterious clouds; his very heart seemed to cease beating.

"What do you mean?" he asked, huskily. "The truth—what is the truth?"

Dorothy Leicester shrank back from him; his manner was so strange it frightened her. And seeing this at once, he changed his mood.

"I spoke hastily; but I felt rather warm on the question. I—I don't care to judge any one unjustly, so will you tell me all you know?"

Dorothy shook her head sadly.

"I know very little, but even that little I may never tell—my lips are sealed."

Her thoughts as she spoke had gone to the agony she had seen in Nancy's face on her wedding morning; to the one passionate cry that had broken from the girl's lips; to the muttered confidence that had passed between them; and to the promise sent by Baines, that never-to-be-forgotten day, which she would guard sacredly until Nancy herself removed the seal and permitted her to speak.

Darnley's heart gave one great leap.

Had he, then, been mistaken all through? He was in the dark now, but hope was dawning beyond, and he would fathom this mystery, even if it cost him his life.

SHOWING HIS PACES.

This Old Lady Was Particular About Her Footmen.

In that delightful record of social customs in the eighteenth century, "The Merry Past," Mr. Ralph H. Neville makes a good jest of the extreme formality of the times. Lord Lyttleton was once much piqued by the remarks of a certain old lady, well known for her strong predilection for beauty and athletic form in her footmen, and in consequence fixed upon the following method of making her ridiculous:

A friend of his had an Irish servant of remarkably fine presence, with a great fund of native humor. This man Lord Lyttleton borrowed, and instructed to apply to the old lady, who, as was well known, had advertised for a footman. Her ladyship either was, or affected to be, troubled by the most delicate and irritable nerves, which could not endure the slightest disturbance or noise.

The new servant, handsomely dressed and well powdered, presented himself at the lady's door, and his errand being announced, he was soon ushered into her saloon.

My lady was alone, and after asking the young man a variety of questions the answers to which seemed to be satisfactory, she told him she liked his appearance much as he stood, but she wished to see him walk, to know whether he did that gracefully, a main point with her.

The man walked up and down the room, the old lady's eyes following him closely, and in evident admiration of his six feet of height and his fine figure.

He was next ordered to turn this way, then that way, then to make his bow, then to carry a fan and book; last of all, to walk the length of the room again.

Having walked the last time the man made a profound bow, and said, "Your ladyship has examined some but not all of my accomplishments, which are all equally excellent. You have seen me walk, now you shall see me trot."

With that he trotted up and down the room with the utmost vigor, until the glasses, china, chairs and everything else danced.

Then stopping a moment, the rascal said, "Now, my lady, you have seen me trot, I'll next show you how I can gallop."

This he also performed with his utmost energy, and running downstairs, bolted out of the hall door.

REVIVAL.

Hab. 3: 2.

"Review Thy work, O Lord;"
All hearts with fervor fill;
Lead men to hearken to Thy word
And seek to do Thy will.

O Lord, Thy work revive;
This is our earnest plea:
So may Thy mighty spirit strive
That souls may turn to Thee.

O Lord, revive Thy work;
And by Thy power divine
Cast out the hidden things that lurk
In hearts that should be Thine.

Revive Thy work again:
We look to Thee, O Lord:
May He who was for sinners slain
Be everywhere adored.

Revive Thy work, we pray;
Send blessing from above:
May willing ones their Lord obey
And grow in grace and love.

O Lord, Thy work revive,
While here our songs we raise:
For all that we from Thee desire
We render fervent praise.

There is no inevitable tragedy. The sole way to thwart destiny is to do just the contrary to the evil it would have us do.

He rejoiced in the pleasing name of Wood, and he prided himself on his jokes and smart repartee. One day he met a friend whose name was Stone, and naturally a name like that was too good a chance to miss. "Good morning, Mr. Stone," he said, pleasantly; "and how is Mrs. Stone and all the little pebbles?" "Quite well, thank you, Mr. Wood; and how is Mrs. Wood and all the little splinters?"

THE FARM

Useful Hints for the Tiller of the Soil

THE DESTRUCTION OF HUMUS

There is so little attention paid to the humus of the soil that it is a wonder that there is any left in the ground. Many people will spend time and money on fertilizers, both green and chemical, when if they had kept all the humus intact they would not have been out for the extra nor have spent as much time and energy.

Humus is the decayed and decaying vegetation—the well rotted particles beneath the sod. Because it is dead is no sign that it has no value in the therapeutics of plant life. It has. It has a most distinct value. Without it there is very little luxuriance and hardly any fruition. It is not in itself a food, but it opens the way for every particle and kind of possible food to reach the young and growing life.

The moisture that flows along the lines of its direction, the chemicals that it absorbs and sustains, the life, the light, the air that makes it possible for the possession of the plant life, are wonderful and necessary beyond words for expression. Yet so many people will not take any of these great fundamentals into consideration and go on ruthlessly destroying it.

Humus is destroyed, generally, three ways. First by overcultivation, by keeping down all growth between trees altogether and never allowing it to get large enough to be of value as humus. Second, it is done by dry ploughing, turning up great quantities of sod and leaving these clods to dry out in the hot sun during summer or hot fall weather. Nothing will so certainly kill a field as this, yet many supposedly good farmers do this. The third way is by burning over a field of heavy grasses, heating the sod three or more inches deep, and thus drying out the elasticity of both soil and humus, and preventing the seed or vegetation planted from getting a good hold in the ground. With no chance for a living it cannot grow. Take care of the humus and it will take care of you.

ORCHARD SUGGESTIONS.

Field mice been at the young trees? If the bark is gnawed to the wood the trees may be saved by bridge grafting.

If the rabbits have gnawed only the outer bark, wrap the wound with cloth.

A tree can be bridge grafted in less than half an hour and it is better to take this time to do it than to let a valuable tree die.

An hour's work with a sharp wire at the foot of your peach trees killing borers may mean an extra bushel of fine peaches.

If the orchard has gone to weeds plow carefully just deep enough to miss the rots, cultivate as you would for the garden and next fall sow clover, cow peas or some other nitrogen-bearing plant and plow the next spring.

There is just as much sense in planting an orchard and then allowing it to shift for itself as there is in planting a corn field and allowing it to run to weeds.

Keep the fence around the orchard as free from weeds, grass and trash as you would your choicest garden plants. Weeds along the fence are fine harbors for insects.

The best place in the world for the poultry yard is the orchard—any kind of an orchard where insects abound.

$3,600

in Cash Prizes for Farmers

Your Photograph May Win a Prize

AMONG the prizes we are offering in our big Prize Contest is one of $100.00 (Prize "C") for the farmer in each Province who furnishes us with a photograph showing the best of any particular kind of work done on his farm during 1911 with "CANADA" Cement. For this prize, work of every description is included.

Now just as soon as you finish that new silo, barn, feeding floor or dairy, that you've been thinking of building, why not photograph it and send the picture to us? The photograph doesn't necessarily have to be taken by a professional or an expert. In fact, your son's or your daughter's camera will do nicely. Or, failing this, you might use the kodak of your neighbor's son nearby. In any event, don't let the idea of having a photograph made deter you from entering the competition. Particularly as we have requested your local dealer to help in cases where it is not convenient for the farmer to procure a camera in the neighborhood. By this means you are placed on an equal footing with every other contestant. Get the circular, which gives you full particulars of the conditions and of the other three prizes. Every dealer who sells "CANADA" Cement will have on hand a supply of these circulars—and he'll give you one if you just ask for it. Or if you prefer, you can use the attached coupon—or a postcard will do—send it to us and you'll receive the complete details of the contest by return mail.

If you haven't received your copy of "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete," write for that, too. It's a finely illustrated book of 160 pages full of useful and practical information of the uses of concrete.

Write us to-night, and you'll receive the book and the circular promptly.

Do not delay—sit right down—take your pen or pencil, and fill out the coupon NOW.

LINER CRASHES ON ROCK

Ivernia Lies in Queenstown Harbor in Badly Damaged Condition

A despatch from Queenstown says: The Cunard Line steamer Ivernia struck on a rock at noon on Wednesday during a fog as she was passing this port. The vessel is now resting at anchor close to the eastern bank of Kinloch Channel, in the inner harbor, with 25 feet of water in her fore compartment. No one on board the steamer was hurt.

The first that was known of the accident was when the liner passed Roche's Point, at the head of Cork harbor. The forepart of the Ivernia was sunk deep in the water, her stern was high in the air, and she had a dangerous-looking list to starboard. The great hole in the forepart of the liner and the narrow margin of free board above the water sufficiently indicated what a narrow escape the Cunarder had from disaster. The watertight compartment, however, stood the strain well, and the water was confined to the forward hold

The captain brought his damaged vessel safely into the inner harbor, where she was anchored at the edge of the eastern bank. The passengers, who numbered 758, were quickly landed.

The liner was within a mile of a tender, which was waiting to take off the Irish contingent of passengers, when Daunt Rock suddenly loomed up in a dense fog, and before the vessel's way could be stopped the big ship struck. The passengers were at luncheon at the time of the accident, and quickly rushed on deck. The ship only hung on the rocks for a short time, and then slid off into deep water with a large aperture in her starboard bows, through which the water poured and threatened to flood the liner. Captain Potter and his officers, however, were prompt to close the bulkhead, and the inrush of water was confined to the forward hold. The Ivernia's officers were able to quickly reassure the passengers of their safety, and there was no sign of panic on board.

BRITISH EXODUS.

Returned Visitor Says Farms are Being Depleted.

A despatch from Montreal says: Mr. C. R. Hosmer returned to Montreal on Friday from England and Continental Europe. In the British Isles, he said, he found that Canada as a field for the man who was willing to work was a topic of conversation among all classes. He stated that there seemed good ground for the apprehension felt by some people in England, and many in Scotland, at the exodus of the young men and farmers to the Canadian West. The emigration this year is heavier than ever, said he, and in parts of Scotland there are not enough men left to work the farms, while almost all the young men are on their way to Canada. The emigrants are of the best class, he declared. He stated also that British investors have great faith in Canada, and that the many financiers whom he met had little hesitation in taking up Canadian securities.

DIAZ LEAVES MEXICO.

Dictator for Thirty Years, He Leaves Secretly.

A despatch from Mexico City, says: Porfirio Diaz, for whom during 30 years all Mexico stood to one side, early on Friday, hat in hand, stole from the capital. Only a few devoted friends, whom he dared to trust, followed him to the station, and at 2 o'clock in the morning, shortly after the celebration over his resignation had quieted down, Diaz was bound for Vera Cruz to take ship for Spain. In the distance he could hear the voices of a few of the more enthusiastic citizens who were still accompanying the new President, Frances Leon de la Barra and shouting "Viva Madero." So carefully were the arrangements made for the abdicated President's secret escape that the news did not transpire until late in the day. Secrecy was due less to apprehension of a popular outburst than to a desire to reach Vera Cruz before marauders along the route could learn of the trip.

AVIATOR'S TERRIBLE DEATH.

Cirri Fell 650 Feet in Presence of His Family.

A despatch from Voghera, Italy, says: The Italian aviator, Cirri, while making an aeroplane flight near here on Sunday, fell from a height of 650 feet and was killed. Twenty thousand persons, including Cirri's wife and children, were viewing the exhibition. Cirri used a Bleriot monoplane. He had completed a number of evolutions when suddenly the motor exploded and in a moment the wings of the machine were on fire. The aviator fell headlong from his seat.

Grimsby's Oldest Inhabitant Taken to Refuge in an Auto.

A despatch from St. Catharines, says: Grimsby's oldest inhabitant, John Winney, a man 101 years of age, has been brought to the Industrial Home here. Mr. Winney is in good health, and walks around like a man of 60. His memory and eyesight are good, but he is a little hard of hearing. He has a son 75 years of age, and two grandsons both over 50. He was born in England in 1810. He was brought here in an automobile, and this was his first experience with what he called a "mud-splasher."

THE BIGGEST BATTLESHIP.

A despatch from London says: British pride received a jar in the House of Commons on Wednesday afternoon when the Right Hon. SUE KAISER FOR $20,000,000

Descendants of Count Munnich Lay Claim to Vast Estate

A despatch from Berlin says: Kaiser Wilhelm will shortly be the defendant in a suit in which $20,000,000 is at stake. The plaintiffs are two direct heirs of the Russian soldier-statesman, Field Marshal Count Burkhard Christoph von Munnich, upon whom Frederick the Great conferred vast estates of Bugen in return for his services in securing the Russian alliance for Prussia.

Count Munnich fell into disgrace upon the accession of the Empress Elizabeth of Prussia and was sentenced to be executed. He was actually sent to Siberia for 20 years, and was completely stripped of his estates by Elizabeth. Peter III., recalled him and he again enjoyed great power at the Russian court. On his death in 1767 Frederick the Great transferred the Bugen properties to Munnich's son, Ernst. In consequence of litigation Ernst Munnich never obtained possession of the estates, and they lapsed to the Prussian Crown.

The descendants of Munnich say now that they have the royal deed of gift and are able to prove their lineage. They intend to sue in the Prussian courts.

"DREAMLAND'S" COSTLY FIRE

Eighty Wild Animals Perished in the Flames.

A despatch from New York says: A flat black plain of about ten acres of steaming embers and twisted iron, stretching from Fifth street westward to Tenth street, and from Surf avenue south to the sea, spread out before the eyes of thousands when the sun rose upon Coney Island on Saturday morning, the ruins of the fire which started at 2 o'clock a.m. at the Dreamland concession known as Hell Gate, and which destroyed about $2,225,000 worth of buildings and equipment in Dreamland itself, and more than $1,000,000 worth of property to the east and west of the big park. In the ruins were the charred bodies of about eighty animals, lions, bears, monkeys, deer leopards and various hybrids, which had been part of Col. Terrari's animal show.

A RECORD-BREAKING CROP

Mr. William Whyte Estimates the Western Yield at 200,000,000 Bushels

A despatch from Toronto says: According to Mr. William Whyte, Vice-President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Winnipeg, who arrived in the city on Wednesday, given favorable weather conditions and estimating the yield at twenty bushels to the acre, this season's crop in the three Prairie Provinces will approximate two hundred millions of bushels of grain. Mr. Whyte said that the increase in acreage under crop this spring was about twenty-five per cent., and this gain was principally in Saskatchewan. He estimated the area under crop as follows: Saskatchewan, 6,000,000 acres; Alberta 500,000 to 1,000,000, and Manitoba, 3,000,000.

The weather conditions so far were favorable for the growing crops. Moisture was plentiful and it was not too hot.

The month of May this year will undoubtedly go on record as containing more real hot days than the same month for many years previously. For seven days the mercury registered over 85 degrees, 5 of them being over 90 and the highest 93. This week, however, has been cooler, thus far.

No business man can afford to spend less than 2 per cent of his receipts for advertising, and if your advertising is good, business-building material judiciously placed, a 4 per cent or 5 per cent. appropriation for this purpose will be found advisable, depending upon the possibility of increasing your business in this community.

The Board of Trade has invited the newspaper men of the county to meet in Goderich on Friday next for a discussion of the Huron County power proposition. According to the records of the Provincial Police Department this spring has seen a remarkable falling off of hoboes who usually cross the border into Canada with the robins. About 500 were rounded up in the province last year, and the most of them got the limit, six months in jail—and they have not forgotten it.

Few merchants and corporations realize the full value of adequate and systematic use of newspapers in advertising their business. Advertising is salesship, but it goes further and reaches out more broadly. Appearance of stores is advertising treatment accorded customers, store service etc. Advertising is not an expense but an investment, and the up-to-date merchant sets aside various sums. A local paper ought to be encouraged. It is the most powerful agent of public opinion in the community and the broadest carrier of your own talk about your store. Papers should cater to the advertisers and the merchant should co-operate with the paper to the mutual advantage of both. The newspaper is usually willing to do what it can. A town ought to have civic pride in a clean newspaper with modern type, neatly printed, and if this is so the advertisments generally pay much better. Get in touch with the newspaper man.

ANOTHER SHORT APPLE CROP.—We are informed by reliable men, who have examined the orchards of this vicinity that the winter apple crop will be practically nil again this year, due it is claimed by some, to the hot weather prevailing at the time the trees were in blossom. By others, it is said the fault is due to June bugs. Whatever is the cause it seems to be certain that we will have to pay the long price this year for our supply of winter apples. A short crop for one year was considered very unusual, but for two years in succession it will be nothing less than extraordinary.

Local Items

The County Council is meeting in the County town this week.

Bishop Williams will preach to the Masonic Brethren on June 25th in the Trivitt Memorial Church.

On Saturday last Mr. John Pedler took his brother, George, to the Victoria Home for Incurables at London.

"He who takes no interest in the general weal, and gives no thought for those who are trodden underfoot, save now and then to bestow alms, is not a good citizen."

The synod of the Diocese of Huron meets Tuesday next in Stratford. Messrs Thos. Case and John Markhim are the delegates from Trivitt Memorial church.

Should an editor publish all the stuff that he naturally confines to the waste paper basket he would need to go into hiding for a month after each issue in order to preserve his anatomy in anything like a whole condition. There is no part about the newspaper office that saves the editor and the people from personal hurt and embarassment so much as the waste paper basket. Thank Goodness ours is large enough to contain the weekly grist, that if published would bring sadness and probably sudden death to many of us.

PROLIFIC SOW.—A sow belonging to Mr. Norman Jarrott, of Usborne breaks the record for prolific breeding. On the 24th of May she brought forth a happy family" of no less a number than 20 all husky and frisky. Then again this sow has a record of unusual prolificacy, having produced of three litters 47 porkers. She is of the Yorkshire breed and the owner would like to know if there is anything better on record.

CAN'T SELL CIGARS—In each of five cases where dealers and merchants who had been tried and acquitted for selling cigars, candies and soft drinks on Sunday, Mr. Justice Middleton, who heard the appeal of the Attorney-General at Osgoode Hall, has ruled that there should have been convictions, as as offence had been committed against the Lord's Day Act. The offenders, cannot be re-arrested and tried on the old charges but a violation of the act now will mean punishment. Justice Middleton ruled: (1) That hotelkeepers and restaurant keepers may sell these things to their guests, but not to any other persons. (2) That druggists may not sell cigars on Sunday (3) That cigars are not "necessities" within in the meaning of the Lord's Day Act. (4) If tobacco is sold as a drug there must be evidence to show that it is required by the purchaser as a drug. Here after Magisterial decisions on violations of the Lord's Day Act will be governed by that of Justice Middleton.

Mr. Earl Browning has recovered from his recent illness.

A number of the young people of Main street church, to-gether with Mr. T. Handford, conducted the service in Lucan Methodist church Sunday.

The Exeter Canning and Preserving Co. have let the contract for the sinking of a rock well at their factory, the work being commenced on Tuesday by Messrs. Mitchell of Sarnia and Walter Statton of Grand Bend.

Mr. Harold Swann, who took the service in James street Methodist church on Sunday Morning, delivered a very interesting address in excellent manner as did also the young men in the evening, Messrs Mark Salter, M. Southcott and R. May. Mr. Wm. Clark who was in town Sunday addressed the Sunday School on his recent trip around the world.

HICKS' FORECASTS.—A reactionary storm period will bring decided storm conditions on and touching the 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th. At this period we enter into the June solstice disturbances. The full moon on the 11th falls at the central day of the annual magnetic and electric crisis. Within three days of sunset on the 11th, a maximum of magnetic and electrical storms will visit many wide extremes of the earth, attended by phenomenal "earth currents," much volcanic unrest and violent seismic shakes. A regular storm period extends from the 13th to the 17th, being at the crisis of the Mercury period, and under full strain of the solstice and the Venus periods. Daily thunder storms with an excess of electricity, wind, rain and hail, may be expected. Tornadoes may be looked for, and your locality may be in their paths—why not?—Change to very much cooler will follow follow about the 16th to 19th.

WEDDED.—An interesting event took place on Wednesday, June 7th, at 3 p.m. at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Luker, 37 Docatah St., St. Catharines, formerly of Exeter, when their daughter, Miss Beatrice Laurel, became the bride of a popular Exeter young man, Mr. E. J. Christie, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Christie. The ceremony was performed by Dr. I. H. Ratcliffe in the presence of only a few of the immediate friends. The only attendant was the little niece of the groom, Miss Margaret Rogers of Chicago. The bride was handsomely gowned in cream silk, and her going away gown was a grey tailored suit. Mr. and Mrs. Christie will spend three weeks in sight-seeing along the Niagara, and at Toronto and Buffalo, after which they will reside in Exeter. The Advocate joins with the many friends in wishing the young couple a happy and prosperous wedded life.

The annual meeting of the Reform Association was held at Hensall on Tuesday last, when Mr. H. Smith was re-elected President and Mr. J. G. Stanbury, Secretary. The only change in the Committee for the various municipalities was that of Exeter, Mr. R. G. Seldon being elected instead of Mr. S. Martin.

CORONATION DAY.—June 22 is Coronation Day, when George V. is to be crowned King of Great Britain, etc. and many towns and villages are celebrating the event in various ways. The matter has been discussed somewhat in town in a private way, and many citizens consider that Exeter should have a celebration. We are of the same opinion, and as the date is now but two weeks away it is necessary that immediate steps should be taken if we are to observe the day by a celebration. Would it not be well for the council to take the matter up, call a public meeting and discuss it, or appoint a committee to consider and act if advisable.

Miss Nina Kinsman went to London Wednesday.

Dr. Will Knight of London is here this week.

Messrs. James and Alfred Walters left Wednesday morning on a trip to the Soo.

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE.

OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER XVIII.

The rain clouds had vanished the next morning, and the sunshine, though it was but a faint likeness to the golden light that used to dwell in the bygone summer time, still shone bright and pleasantly over the grounds and lawn.

Darnley was up early; he had paid his visit to the sick-room, and had been re[illegible]ded for his pains by the evident [illegible]t and comfort his uncle experienced in his presence. The young man was inexpressibly shocked at the change wrought in the vigorous, florid, happy-looking Sir Humphrey; and despite his manhood, a mist of unshed tears rushed to his eyes as he gazed at the white, drawn face, with the shadow of retreating death lingering, as it were, reluctantly on it; he could not speak at first, but stood grasping the thin, trembling hand his uncle extended to him.

"This—this is a bad lookout, Derry, my lad," Sir Humphrey whispered, in his faint, weak voice. "I've had a narrow squeak, ay, a very narrow one. I thank Heaven you are here. My—my darling wants some one to look after her, and——"

His strength would go no farther.

The young man began to talk cheerily, in the nearest approach to his old frank manner he could muster up; it was a hard struggle, for it hit him very deep to see the active, healthy, gentle-natured man, who had seemed the very quintessence of vitality, lying there a cripple for life, a terrible wreck.

He said everything he could to cheer Sir Humphrey—sacrificing his own inclination, which was battling to be out in the open air, trying to solve the problem which Dorothy's words of last night had conjured up.

The sick man lay back contented, a more peaceful look on his wan countenance than had come during his short respite from pain.

"I am glad," he murmured, over and over again; and once, when Darnley bent over him, he caught the whisper; "Dolly has fretted about Nancy—you must cheer——"

When he had left the sick-room, having first inquired for Dorothy, and learned that she was sleeping soundly—a condition of things which pleased him beyond all description—the young man put on his hat, and, whistling for the dogs, who were mournful and depressed at their beloved master's illness, he sallied out into the open air. It was a wonderfully balmy day—one of the few summer days that are sprinkled here and there in an English winter. The very first person he saw was the old head gardener, Mr. Murdock, from whom he received a warm greeting—in fact, everybody was pleased to see him again.

"Eh, but it's Miss Dorothy will be right glad, sir," he said. "We were just at our wits' end two days sen that puir bairn's white face made our hearts bleed. And sen his lordship went she's wanted some one varry badly."

"Well, I am here now, and here I shall remain," said Derrick Darnley, quickly. He shrank from hearing some unkind remark on Nancy's conduct. With this new and perplexing condition of his mind, he determined he would judge her no more till he had fathomed something of the truth.

As he moved away, followed by the dogs, his thought went to Merefield, and he wondered what could have taken the other man away from his cousin at such a crisis. It was very odd; and then his mind went back to the one all-potent subject—Nancy. He was too truly a man of honor and of delicacy to have pressed Dorothy further last night, although in the girl's shattered state a less generous-minded person might have learned all he wanted to know. In fact, he had changed the subject immediately, and Nancy's name had not been mentioned again. But Dorothy's staunch love and loyalty had awakened fresh impulses in the man's heart. It sent a pang of self-reproach through him—reproach that she should be faithful to Nancy, while he had already judged and condemned her, and it also brought pain—deep, lasting pain; and the agonizing reflection came, that were he to discover now that his love had never changed—that she was still his fair, pure ideal—was there not the torture of knowing she was lost? He was so completely in the dark, he did not even know where Nancy was, what she was doing, how it fared with her. Dorothy had vouchsafed no information, if even she had any to give, and he had been too agitated to question her.

Deep in his thoughts, he strolled on and on, until he reached the end of the lawn, then returned and looked at the Hall, standing surrounded with its dismantled trees waving their empty branches to and fro in the soft, mild air.

"Dolly's blind is down. Good. A long sleep is the best thing for her, poor child! I can't bear to see her face as it was last night. I feel restless. A few miles more will do me good.

He whistled to the dogs, who pricked up their ears gladly and raced round him, delighted at the prospect of a walk, and seeing in this—poor animals!—a sign that better times were coming. Derrick walked on rapidly. He gave no special heed to the path he chose, but let his feet lead him involuntarily whither they would. He was soon out of the grounds into the muddy country lanes, but once there he awoke from his musings, and, with a quick movement, turned away from the village. Solitude was bad, but gossip was worse, and he could not by any chance go through Ripstone village without stopping to greet first one person and then another.

He strode along heedless of the mud. Although he had been at the Hall a great deal the earlier part of the year, he was not very conversant with the neighborhood, as his walks had been confined principally to the Hall grounds, and Sir Humphrey had been abroad so much that he had no chance of exploring the country during the hunting seasons, therefore, it was not at all surprising that, when Mr. Darnley found himself at a corner where two lanes ran diverse ways, he came to a sudden standstill and hesitated.

He stood and reconnoitred, having first ascertained that it was still early by a glance at his watch, and then determined to take the right-hand lane.

"I must have made a regular detour," he said to himself. "That mass of trees evidently belongs to the east part of Ripstone. I can get back that way."

So, suiting the action to the word, he made for the spot mentioned.

When he reached the trees, however, he came to a stop. A gate was before him, but it was chained and padlocked, with ominous iron spikes ornamenting the top rail.

The young man gave a short whistle of surprise, which deepened as his eyes rested on a board with a warning to trespassers printed on it in gigantic letters.

"This is very odd! Uncle Humphrey can know nothing of it, I am sure. One of the keepers has taken upon himself to be very cautious all at once. It's the first time I ever remember a board like that, or spikes like those ugly ones, to have a place in Ripstone property."

He rattled the gate as he muttered this; but though the chain was loose, there was no movement either backward or forward.

"This is, to say the least of it, annoying—deuced annoying!" mused Darnley, his wrath rising visibly against the imaginary keeper, who had arranged all this apparently to thwart him.

"I don't feel like retracing my steps at all. I am sure this is a near way to the Hall."

He stepped back and reviewed the gate, the dogs watching him with eager eyes and hanging tongues, marvelling as to what he was going to do.

"Hum!" mused the young man, with much deep thought; "it's bad, certainly; but it might be worse. I think I'll have a shot! At the worst I shall only tear my clothes, and I hate to be beaten. Now to see if want of practice has destroyed my former agility!"

He retraced a few paces farther, fixed his hat on firmly, then starting at a quick, even pace, he leaped the formidable barrier as lightly as though it had been a few inches, not a five-barred gate.

There was a flush of pleasure on his face and a thrill of satisfaction in his breast.

"I said I would not be beaten," he mentally declared, as he coaxed the dogs to squeeze through the bars and join him. "It would have been awfully hard lines to have had to tramp all down that lane again; and I must get on now. Poor Dolly will wonder what has become of me."

He picked up his hat, which had fallen off in his jump, and replaced it on his dark, wavy locks.

"I'll have to go at Murdock about that gate and board, by Jove, I will!" he declared, as he turned to go through the long grass and wild, wooded inclosure. "Sir Humphrey won't stand it for an instant, I am sure."

Then he whistled to the dogs and pushed on. It was strange, but he did not quite recognize his surroundings.

True, there were doubtless many portions of the Hall grounds and lands which he had not yet seen; but there was an indefinable feeling in his mind that this was not like the rest of the property.

For one thing, it was unkempt and neglected. Evidently the board to trespassers was not needed, for this spot was not inviting, even to tramps.

"If I go this way I shall reach the lake," Darnley communed with himself, as he came to one point.

The sunshine had suddenly gone, and the air felt like rain at any moment.

A shiver, born of what sensation he did not know, passed through him. He stood still, and looked round, and at that moment one of the dogs gave a sharp cry and a moan of pain; and in one glance the young man saw that the poor animal had its forepaw locked in a trap which had been hidden in the long grass.

"This is shameful!" he said, flushed with anger, as he knelt down and unfastened the cruel machine. "I shall certainly give Murdock a piece of my mind. Poor Dick!—poor Dick! It isn't so bad old fellow! You were more frightened than hurt, thank goodness! But if this infernal thing had closed as it should have done, you would have had a broken leg, old chap!"

With infinite tenderness Darnley patted and soothed the frightened animal.

It was as he said. The dog was not really much hurt, for the trap had fortunately failed to act properly; but his brow darkened as he rose from his knees.

"Sir Humphrey would be simply beside himself if he knew these horrible things were scattered about. I wonder who has done it? It's not like Murdock, for with all his grumpiness, the old fellow has as soft a heart as any one I know. Perhaps Lady Merefield has been exercising her authority. This is just the sort of thing I could imagine her doing. Well, at any rate, when Dolly knows, everything will be altered in the twinkling of an eye. Now I must get on. Surely the lake must be over there."

With another tender caress for the dog, who was going very lame, the young man strode over the rank weeds and grass, keeping a sharp lookout for more traps, and making the dogs follow sharp at heel, a proceeding to which the sagacious beasts were nothing loath, since their companion had experienced such difficulty and pain.

Darnley walked on for about fifty yards, and yet the lake did not come in sight.

"It is very odd," he muttered, "I seem to be all wrong. Hallo! what's that?—looks like a woman's dress; it must be one of the maids—so much the better, she will put me on the right track. Come on, dogs!"

His steps were necessarily softened with the thickness of the herbage upon which he walked, and as he pushed through a short clump of low-growing shrubs, Mr. Darnley saw immediately that the servant maid not only was unaware of his presence, or, indeed, the presence of any one near her, but that she was evidently overcome with fatigue or grief, for she sat crouched on an old gnarled tree root, her elbows planted on her knees and her face hidden in her hands.

With the instinctive delicacy that was so pre-eminently one of his chief characteristics, deepened by the rush of sympathy that came upon him as he beheld this figure, so expressive of utter despair and desolation, Derrick Darnley turned to withdraw silently without intruding on the girl's sorrow, for he saw the figure was both young and slight; but before his thoughtful intention could be carried out, an incident occurred to prevent it altogether. The dogs, who were not actuated by so nice a sense of delicacy, went up to the silent form, and first giving a sniff of wariness, next began to jump up and lick the small hands with short barks and cries of canine welcome and delight.

The man's heart stood still, a mist rose before his eyes, then his pulses began to throb at a rate they had never travelled before.

"Dick—Borgie—Dick, come here. Do you hear me?" he called, in a strange, husky voice.

The dogs fell back, suddenly checked in their exuberant pleasure; not so much by his command as by the involuntary shiver that ran through the girl's frame, making her start to her feet and turn her white, tear-stained face to their master.

A silence that was as deep as death lived then. What words could come at such a moment between these two? It was not weakness alone that tied Derrick Darnley's tongue, as his dark eyes gazed into Nancy's great, sad blue ones; it was a sense of fear, of honor that compelled his silence, for in that one glance he read how much he had wronged her; and that, no matter what motive had caused her to separate herself from him, she loved him with even more intensity than in their brief summer happiness.

"TICKETS—PLEASE!"

How the Operation is Done on a Japanese Railway Train.

To see Japan thoroughly, to master its problems, to probe its soul, to pluck the whole heart of its mystery, would probably need—so a fellow "globe-trotter" assured Mr. A. M. Thompson—"all of a fortnight." So entire thoroughness is not claimed by the author of "Japan for a Week." Still, Mr. Thompson was there long enough to get a vivid impression of Japanese courtesy—how the "please," so frequently entirely omitted from stern demand in the Occident, is emphasized into an art.

The guard, in the train to Tokyo, who affords us much information by the way is exceedingly interested in us. He stands by my side on the platform, and laughingly points out that the top of his head—he is of more than average size for a Jap—barely reaches my shoulders.

"Me big," he says in his quaint English, "but you much more big."

He is, like all the Japanese we met, amazingly polite.

When he comes round to examine tickets, he begins by standing at the end of the car, takes off his cap to the honorable assembly, bows to the ground, rubs his knees with his hands, draws in his breath audibly, and delivers himself of an announcement in Japanese which I imaginatively translate as follows:

"Your most honorable excellencies and most augustly-deigning-to-be-pleased ones, I hope you will pardon this creature of mud for having been born into this world to ask you, most gracious and superior ones, to show your augustly blessed tickets; after which I beg you will honorably deign to grind and crush me, who am but as a snail of the soil, beneath your kindly sandals."

The passengers, ceasing for a moment from their rice and chopsticks, bow profoundly in return, rub their knees with their hands, suck in their breaths with the peculiar whistling sound which is the special expression of a Japanese greeting, fumble among their loose layers of clothes, and ultimately produce their honorable tickets.

After this there is more bowing on both sides, and the guard, still bowing, vanishes.

CURED OF CONSTIPATON

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes:

"For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment never comes single-handed, and I have been a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. Medicine after medicine I have taken in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the one ailment that caused so much trouble, yet at last I read about these Indian Root Pills.

That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box. 2

THE FARM

Useful Hints for the Tiller of the Soil

STARTING ALFALFA.

Alfalfa is the king among hay crops, the queen among soil improvers, the prince among drought resistant plants. It comes nearer to giving something for nothing than anything else on the farm. It will produce more hay per acre, and hay of a high feeding value. While giving that valuable crop of hay it will at the same time leave the soil richer in nitrogen and humus every year that it occupies the land, and supplies the very things that the grain crops take out the fastest and leave the soil in the greatest need of. Still the whole story is not told, as weeds cannot grow readily after the alfalfa gets a good stand and if they should grow a little the alfalfa is cut before the weeds are ripe so they cannot go to seed. The roots go deep and so open up the soil better than the subsoiler. The one disadvantage in growing alfalfa is that it is a little difficult to start; so when a good stand is secured it ought to be left for several years. It is not a good rotation crop like clover. This is really no great drawback though, as it will produce a crop that is worth more than any other crop that can be grown.

Alfalfa will grow on any good soil that is well drained; in sand it will not do so well, and hard pan interferes with its root growth. Standing water is death to it. When starting alfalfa it must be kept in mind that alfalfa has bacteria living in nodules on its roots. These germs furnish the plant with nitrogen which they take from the soil air. They put it into a form that the plant can use and so supply the alfalfa with the nitrogen that it needs and more too. The alfalfa plant has in a measure lost the power of taking nitrogen from the soil as the other crops do, so it can not make much growth alone. It in turn furnishes the germs with food of a different kind so it is a co-operative affair, each furnishing that which it can secure the easiest.

When the alfalfa is starting it does not have the germs on its roots and so is very delicate and must be given good care. The best way to do that is to get some soil from a field that has been growing alfalfa successfully for a few years and sow it on the new field at the rate of 200 pounds per acre.

The best way to prepare the soil is to manure for a crop of corn—clean cultivate the corn—then sow the alfalfa on the disced corn stubble, putting in eight to ten pounds per acre—and with the drill so as to get the seed buried, one to two inches—do not sow any nurse crop with it. A bare fallow that has been kept free from weeds will also be a good preparation, as will also potato ground. But in any case it should be manured. When the alfalfa is up eight to ten inches it should be cut back. This will not hurt the alfalfa; in fact will do it good—but will be hard on the weeds. The amount of seed sown should vary with the rainfall; under irrigation, or where the rainfall is abundant, more seed than specified above should be sown. It has been found by experiments that where the plants were nine inches apart three cuttings were secured in 1910 and the yield was nearly 2½ tons, while where the plants were only two inches apart only one cutting of about half a ton was secured. In digging out the roots it was found that where the plants were far apart the roots went down seven to eight feet while in the case of the plants that were close together the roots did not go down more than three feet.

NOTES OF THE POULTRY YARD

Do not try to force Nature. In fitting young fries for the market give the chicks proper food, plenty of room, clean quarters, freedom from lice and Nature will do the rest.

A correspondent who raised 300 chickens last year says they are the best potato bug traps he ever used, except ducks, which cannot be beaten for this purpose.

Sow a patch of cow peas near the poultry yard. Do not harvest the peas when ripe, but turn the hens into them when the green grass disappears and they will thrive upon them.

Summer selection should be kept up until the fowls are fully grown. Dispose of every little runt that shows up, because they are not worth keeping.

Do not wait until the broody fever hen becomes chronic, but discourage her as she shows signs of it.

It isn't necessary to use an axe or club or cold water or any such things to break her up. She is only obeying the call of Nature.

Put her in a small yard with plenty of grass in it. Provide good shade and keep her in the open air all day. Feed no corn, but sparingly of some other cooking food and keep plenty of cool water before her all the time.

Hints for Busy Housekeepers.

Recipes and Other Valuable Information of Particular Interest to Women Folks.

DAINTY DISHES.

An excellent salad dressing is made as follows: If you want it to be very mild, use half the quantity of mustard and no pepper. Kept in a cool place it will keep indefinitely. Cream well together two tablespoonfuls of butter and one teaspoonful each of salt and sugar, a half teaspoonful of mustard and a dash of cayenne pepper. Put into a double boiler the beaten yolks of two eggs; add gradually four tablespoonfuls of hot vinegar, stirring constantly until the mixture thickens. Remove from the fire and add the creamed butter. Beat until thoroughly mixed, and when cold add half a cupful of whipped cream.

To make a real, old-fashioned Irish stew will be needed three pounds of the neck of mutton, four potatoes cut into dice, four good-sized onions, two quarts of water and salt and pepper to taste.

Cut the meat into small pieces, cover with boiling water, add the onions sliced and simmer slowly for three hours. Add the potatoes about half an hour before the meat is done. Season with salt and pepper. The beaten yolk of an egg may be added, or dumplings, as in a stew of beef.

For pressed chicken a fowl may be used instead of a spring chicken. Singe and place in a kettle, cover with cold water. Allow to simmer gently until the meat falls from the bones, having added one teaspoonful of salt when about half done. Three to four hours are required to cook an old fowl. Take the meat from the bones and cut into small pieces, put the bones and skin into the kettle and boil until the liquor is reduced to one and a half pints. Strain and season to taste. Stir in the tiny squares of chicken, pour into a square mold and let stand in a cool place over night. A weight on top of a board placed on the mold will press it firmly together. When hard and cold, turn from the mold, cut in slices a half inch thick with a sharp knife and serve with the garnishing of a spring of parsley.

A good potato dish is made as follows: Peel and wash and cut in quarters half a dozen or more raw potatoes. Put them in a saucepan with a lump of butter and a little water; season with salt and peper and cook very slowly, tossing them frequently until they are soft. Then beat them until they are light; put them in a baking dish, cover with grated cheese and pour over them half a cupful of melted butter. Bake slowly in a moderate oven for half an hour.

Few housewives try to do anything with marrow and simply throw it away. There are many delicious dishes that can be made with marrow, which is a rich and nutritious food. To use with soup, scrape the marrow from the bones and if very cold, as in winter, try out somewhat, so as to make workable. Add to the marrow one beaten egg and mix into a smooth paste. Season with salt and pepper, adding enough stale bread crumbs that have been sifted to enable you to roll the marrow into small balls about the size of a marble. Test their consistency by dropping one into the boiling soup. If it holds together it is all right, but if it falls apart a few more crumbs are needed.

Fresh milk coming from healthy, well-fed cows and kept in clean vessels is always neutral; that is, when tried with red or blue litmus paper would leave both unchanged. Any milk which reddens blue litmus paper should be rejected.

MOCK DISHES.

Imitation Chicken.—Have ready a granite stewpan with a generous tablespoon of butter browning. Wash 15 cents worth of veal, cut in pieces, toss in the butter until seared on every side, then cover for five minutes. Add enough water to nearly cover; simmer till nearly done, and add dumplings made as follows: Sift one heaping cup of flour with a heaping teaspoon of baking powder and a pinch of salt. Add just enough water to make a stiff batter. Drop from spoon and cover tightly and let boil gently fifteen minutes. Thicken gravy after removing dumplings and serve.

Mock Duck.—Make stuffing as follows: One-half loaf of bread, soaked and minced fine; one onion cut fine, a sprinkle of sage and thyme, salt and pepper, and one-half teaspoon of baking powder (this taking the place of an egg), and a piece of butter. Mix well and spread on round steak, roll and tie; put in pan and bake with one half cup of water and several bits of butter; place potatoes for dinner in pan around the "duck." Baste well when baking.

FRUIT RECIPES.

Juice of one orange and one-half lemon, one-half cup sugar, yolks of two eggs; stir together well; all a little butter; put over fire and serve with whipped cream. Sliced bananas, pineapple, chopped dates and figs, shredded cocoanut, peanuts, or walnuts make fine fruit salad.

Date Pudding—One quart of boiling water, one cupful of graham flour, a little salt, one cupful of sugar, one pound of chopped dates, also a cupful of chopped nuts if desired. Cook in double boiler for about a half hour. Serve with whipped cream.

Swiss Sponge with Strawberries—Cook one-half cup of rice in two cups of milk till tender, press through a sieve, add one-half teaspoonful salt, one cup powdered sugar, juice from one-half a lemon; then fold that into the dry, stiffly beaten whites of eight eggs, pour into a buttered border mold, set in a pan of hot water, and bake in a moderate oven for thirty minutes; invert on to a dish after cooling, place strawberries dipped in pulverized sugar in centre and around on the outside of the dish. Berries can be added at discretion. This is a delicious dessert for luncheon in hot weather.

ICE CREAM HINT.

How many housekeepers ever think of utilizing melted ice cream? Instead of throwing away the small left over portions that remain in freezer or mold, this melted cream should be incorporated in cake, cookies, or some small dessert. For the latter a little gelatin should be added, varying, of course, with the result desired.

Melted chocolate ice cream into which chopped marshmallows have been stirred, and a little melted gelatin added, makes a delicious combination. Chopped fruits, as bananas, figs and dates, also give a pleasing variety. When using melted ice cream for cake leave out the milk called for in the recipe and use less butter and sugar. Judgment must be used in combining quantities as no general rule can be given. The flavor of the cake must be considered and the ice cream flavor must harmonize with it.

CAKE.

Fancy Shortcake—Pour one cupful of boiling water over two cupfuls of sugar. Boil for five minutes, then cool. Separate the whites from yolks of four eggs and beat the yolks until thick; then add the syrup to them, beating constantly; now add two cupfuls of flour sifted with two teaspoons of baking powder; add a pinch salt and one teaspoonful of lemon juice; then fold in the whites, beaten stiff and dry; spread in two layer cake pans; bake in a quick oven. When done remove to a warm platter, spread with sugar, and strawberries crushed. Place on top a thick meringue of beaten egg whites with sugar or whipped cream and sugar. Arrange berries around the cake.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Blacklead is an excellent lubricant for hinges.

To Remove Grease from Silk.—Lay the silk on a clean cloth, cover with chalk, then lay over blotting paper, and on the top a hot iron.

Moth in Carpet.—Soak the affected part with benzine, being careful that there is no fire or light in the room meanwhile.

To Remove Ironmould.—Make a paste with salt and lemon-juice, and lay it over the yellow mark. Repeat a second time if necessary.

Spots of machine oil on white goods should be moistened with ammonia, and then washed with soap and water.

Glue which will withstand damp, should be made with linseed oil instead of water. This is only useful for woodwork.

When storing cutlery rub the blades lightly with a cloth moistened with vaseline. Before using wash in soda water and clean in the usual way.

Laying a fire well is considered by some to be an art. The "art" consists in crossing the sticks carefully and not using too many of them.

To keep a bed aired put in a stone water bottle filled with boiling water every second day. This is very little trouble, and the bed is then ready for use at any time.

To clean a sponge soak it for several hours in butter milk. Squeeze it well, and then rinse in clean water, when it will be perfectly sweet and soft.

When putting up muslin blinds, if you have to put a rod through the hem, slip a thimble on to the end of the rod so that it will not tear the muslin.

Pictures are so often hung too high. Remember that the centre of the picture should be on a level with the eye. Do not overcrowd your walls. Crowding detracts from beauty.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, JUNE 11.

Lesson XI.—Hezekiah's great passover, II. Chron. 30. Golden Text, I. Sam. 16. 7.

Verses 1-12—The invitation to the passover.

1. Israel . . . Ephraim and Manasseh—It will be seen from the preceding chapters that Hezekiah had made every provision for the return of the people of the city to the true worship. But now he is anxious to extend the good work. He wishes to reach out, not only into the provincial districts of Judah, but into the northern tribes as well. The tribes mentioned merely represent Israel, and are given to make it clear that the northern kingdom of Israel is meant.

To keep the passover—This great feast commemorating the deliverance of the Hebrew people from bondage to Egypt, was held beginning on the fourteenth of the month Nisan, the first month of the ecclesiastical year.

2. The king had taken counsel—Not with his priests, for they were not as yet reorganized, but with the princes and popular assembly. It was thus determined, for the reason given in the next verse, to keep the passover in the second month instead of the first, a notable irregularity for sticklers after ritualistic niceties. However, the law made the observance of the feast in the second month legitimate in certain cases. The people evidently accepted any opportunity with eagerness to return to the worship of Jehovah, after so many years of apostasy.

3. They could not keep it at that time—That is, in the first month. There was a twofold reason; first, because the priests had not completed the purification of the temple, and they themselves, therefore (presumably), remained unsanctified, or ceremonially unfit; secondly, the people, owing to the well-known unreadiness of the temple, failed to gather at Jerusalem.

5. From Beersheba even unto Dan—Indicating the limits of the undivided kingdom of David and Solomon. The northern Kingdom is regarded as having already fallen.

Had not kept it in great numbers—According to the law, "the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel" were to observe this feast, but only a few had done so.

6. Posts—Couriers from the royal guards.

6-9. Ye children of Israel, turn again—Addressed to the apostate tribes of the northern kingdom. Hezekiah goes on to show that their brethren had been carried away in captivity into an alien land because they had deserted the worship of Jehovah in his house. But now, if this remnant, who have escaped out of the hand of Shalmaneser and Sargon, the kings of Assyria, through whom Samaria fell, will return to their God, not only shall they themselves avoid calamity but their brethren shall come again into their own land, and the compassion of a gracious God shall be visited upon them. Some take this to refer to the invasion of Tiglath-pileser, whose ravages of the northern countries took place some ten years before. But the chronology is very difficult here, and the great captivity better agrees with the language employed.

10. Even unto Zebulun—The use of these names is doubtless general and rhetorical. Some of the northern tribes had passed out of history, owing to the depredations and deportations of the enemies of Israel. The messengers were mocked by the majority, but certain men of these apostate tribes (11), enough to make a multitude (18), repented of their backsliding, and accepted the invitation. In contrast to the scorn and stubbornness of the Jews of the north was the enthusiasm of the people of Judah, which led them to celebrate the feast with one heart, and in immense numbers (12).

13-27.—The celebration of the passover.

13. Feast of unleavened bread — Properly, a feast following the celebration of the passover (Ex. 12. 1-13), but here, as in the New Testament, treated as identical with the other. They came to be regarded as one feast.

14. The altars—After the priests had cleansed the temple, it became necessary to remove the other marks of the idolatrous condition of the city under Ahaz, and this the people themselves accomplished. Read also 2 Kings 18. 4.

15. Priests and Levites were ashamed—They had been remiss (2 Chron. 29. 34), but now the zeal of the laity stirs them to a sense of their duty.

17. The Levites had the charge of killing the passovers—According to the Mosaic law all the congregation slay the paschal lamb (that is, each householder his own lamb). But on this occasion the Levites took charge of the slaying of the lambs, owing to the unclean condition of the people (they having been living in open idolatry). Had these lambs been killed and their blood received by persons unsanctified, the sacrificial blood would have become defiled. Compare the passover celebrated by Josiah (2 Chron. 35. 11), and also Ezra 6. 19, 20. This was otherwise than it is written (18), but it was considered better to break the letter of the law in this case than to deprive the people of the opportunity to keep the spirit of the law.

20. Healed the people—Forgave them. Their ceremonial transgression is regarded as a disease to be removed by a healing remedy. Possibly physical sickness is meant (Lev. 15. 31).

23. Other seven days—A similar two-weeks festival was held at the completion of Solomon's temple, but came before the regular feast. This prolongation of the celebration was made possible by the gift of bullocks and sheep by Hezekiah and the princes (24), and by the fact that many priests arose to the occasion and sanctified themselves, so that the offerings could be properly handled.

25. Sojourners—Those proselytes from both kingdoms who, with the people of Judah and those from the northern kingdom, made up the crowd of participants at the feast. They were of foreign descent (Ex. 12. 19, 48).

26. The time of Solomon—Compare 2 Chron. 7. The dedication had been a great occasion; for 250 years there had been nothing to equal it.

IN JAPANESE SHOPS.

Some of the Queer Sights to be Seen in Florwery Kingdom.

The shops and booths of Japan are of unfailing interest. Here the green-grocer and fruit seller has arranged his wares till it seems as though one looked upon a great bouquet. There the flower shop blazes in brilliance and the lantern-maker squats at his multi-colored task. At the next entrance we perhaps see a man severing chicken meat from the bone, and he performs the operations as skilfully as the surgeon with his dissecting knife. Beef and chicken are commonly sold in this fashion. But curious things are not found in the shops alone. The green vegetable peddler at once arouses attention. He carries loads heavy enough for a horse, but with a quick step he will walk from street to street, still with enough energy to call his wares as he goes. One marvels at those wonderful, big, snow-white radishes he sells; green onions, carrots, fruits, and even lotus roots dug from the muddy bottoms of ponds. Fancy yourself eating long burdock roots which grow in any country backyard! The Japanese consider these a tothsome article, and the peddler fetches them from the farmers, who raise them like turnips.—The Christian Herald.

AMBIDEXTROUS MINDS.

Scientific Discovery That is Reported From Germany.

From Berlin comes the assurance that to be ambidextrous is also to be better balanced mentally, for whereas right handed people have the organ of speech on one side of the brain, and vice versa, "people who are ambidextrous have two language centres, (one in each lobe of the brain)." This claim may or may not be based on a physiological fact. But before we endow it with any educational or scientific value we should like to know how far its proposed application to German national schools is promoted by genuine scientists, and how far that proposal is only a sign that the "Bilingualists" are again at work. If the latter supposition is correct, it is to be feared that cultivators of ambidexterity as an intellectual asset may have to look for their fruition to other countries than Germany, which has too often been a dumping ground for unclaimed scientific causes in the past.

THEATRE FOR INVALIDS.

The Latest Experiments in Curing by Mental Suggestion.

Therapeutic theatres are the latest phase of the nature cure in Germany. The theory is that acting and reciting are cures for mental and nervous diseases. An Austrian doctor named Lack professes to have cured many persons by forcing them to act before audiences of their friends in the open air.

The explanation given is that acting takes the patients out of themselves, and thus prevents them from thinking of their own maladies. All over the empire are being founded theatrical organizations to produce plays in the open air, and during the coming Summer nature performances will be given more or less regularly near every large town.

At Potsdam the municipality is leading the movement, and it proposes to build an open-air stage in a picturesque part of a neighboring forest. The movement is under the patronage of the Princess Eitel Friedrich, one of the Kaiser's daughters-in-law, who is an amateur actress.

ARMY DOCTOR WAS A WOMAN

MIGHT HAVE SERVED AT BATTLE OF WATERLOO.

Rose to High Rank, and Her Death Made It Known She Was Not a Man.

In spite of the common opinion that a woman cannot for long pass as a man without arousing suspicion, two striking instances have recently come to light where for a number of years the imposition has never been suspected, says the London Mail. Marie Le Roy passed for 25 years as Harry Lloyd at Enfield, and her sex was only discovered on her death a few weeks ago, and Mrs. Elena Smith has engaged for the last five years in business in New York as A. L. Martinez and her sex was not even suspected till she confessed it with some scathing criticism of the American as he appears to his fellow men.

One of the most interesting of these impersonations is that of James Barry, M.D., inspector general of hospitals, concerning whom Lieutenant Colonel E. Rogers sends us the following account taken from the introduction to his book, "A Modern Sphinx."

It may sound like a paradox, but we very much doubt if ever there was a woman with a past of so pronounced a type as that of the late James Parry, inspector general of hospitals, who, having personated a man during her adult lifetime, died at the ripe age of 71 years, in Down street, Piccadilly, London, on July 15, 1865, and was then and there found to be of

THE FEMALE SEX!

Reference to Hart's Army List, January 1, 1865, will show that James Barry, M.D., entered her majesty's service as hospital assistant on July 5, 1813, and as she was promoted to be assistant surgeon on December 7, 1815, the possibility but not the probability is that she served in the medical department of our army at Waterloo! At all events, she was in the Crimea, yet no record of the woman's war services is placed to her credit.

She could almost, if not altogether, choose her own foreign stations. She could be, and was, as insubordinate as she liked, without remonstrance. In a word she was treated by the authorities as if she were—as she was—a woman. Need we wonder, then, that her promotion was rapid and that she even managed to jump up two steps at a time in her ambitious climb to the top of the tree. Thus, she never was a surgeon (this sounds derogatory); but she became surgeon major on November 22, 1827. She never was assistant inspector nor brevet deputy inspector general, which were grades in the medical officers' promotion in those days; but she became deputy inspector general on May 16, 1851, and inspector general on December 7, 1858. Dr. Barry died on July 15, 1865, and her grave in Kensal Green, bearing the very simple inscription, Dr. James Barry, inspector general of army hospital; died July 15, 1865, aged 71 years, may still be found at Kensal Green Cemetery (Grave 1931.)

In the following year an inspired article in All the Year Round entitled, became the temporary talk of the town, for in it was disclosed the strange eventful history of the sphinxlike individual.

A MYSTERY STILL

Attention was called to this queer, nay, unparalleled case, by a correspondent in the Lancet, in consequence of a question asked by George Bright, M.D., United States Navy. The replies to his query were numerous and interesting. Suffice it, however, to quote a few extracts from a letter I wrote when captain of the Third West India Regiment:

"In 1857 I travelled with this remarkable character on board the intercolonial steamer plying between Saint Thomas and Barbadoes. A goat was on board to provide her with milk. She was a strict vegetarian, and she was accompanied by a negro servant and a little dog called Psyche. The doctor was going at the time to visit her old friend, and enemy, General Sir Josias Cleote (commanding troops), with whom, when aide-de-camp to the governor of the Cape, she had fought a duel and was wounded in the leg. The late Colonel Shadwell Clerke, who was on the staff of General Basil Brooke at Barbadoes, told me before his death that he, too, was challenged by Dr. Barry for some fancied insult, but that General Brooke pooh-poohed the idea, and made them shake hands. In person, James Barry was short in stature, angular in figure, with a long Ciceronian nose, prominent cheek bones and a rather lugubrious expression of countenance.

"Imperious in manner and officially dictatorial, in social circles, Dr. Barry was

ADMIRED AND RESPECTED;

She was, moreover, sympathetic, and skillful in her profession—yet, what a life of repressed emotions must hers have been?"

In a subsequent letter to me (published in the Lancet), General W. Chamberlayne said: "I knew Dr. Barry in Jamaica. I think the account published in All the Year Round was pretty nearly correct, as far as I remember. I do not think she wore a wig, the hair was light, I think dyed. Spectacles were not worn, but high-heeled boots were. One peculiarity was a strict vegetable diet, no meat, or even wine or other liquor, and she always evinced a dislike for medical men. She had a great fondness for animals, keeping several cats and dogs very happily, she was rather bombastic in speech and repellent in manner, but kind and anxious to do good to those who were never likely to become intrusive or familiar or troublesome to her.

"When I think of the anxiety, care and trouble she must have experienced for years to keep up the assumed character, probably first undertaken for the love of some man, and subsequently retained, perhaps for the sake of his character as well as her own, it seems surprising how she could have possessed so many good points, for I saw a great deal of her in Jamaica. I believe her manner and speech were assumed to repel inquisitive associates. It must have been to have been obliged to be continually acting a part so repellent to her better feelings."

Colonel R. Wilson (formerly adjutant, Third West India Regiment), wrote: "You know almost all about Miss Barry, or nearly so. I recollect that she, like most women, loved attending weddings, christenings, etc.; also, when I was fort adjutant in Jamaica, I used frequently to meet her at dinner at General Ashmore's, and we were all much amused at the outrageous stories she used to tell, making herself out quite a ladykiller; also at balls or parties of any kind, she was certain to tack herself on to the finest and best looking woman in the room. You may remember she died her hair red, but had not a hair on her face, and never had. You can make all you like out of what I have now told you."

TEA MAKING IN MOROCCO.

It's a Gentleman's Duty and the Result is Like a Rich Punch.

In his article on that little-known Moroccon city of Rabat in Harper's, Sydney Adamson tells of the ceremony of tea drinking with the Governor, to whom he bore a letter from the Basha of Tangier.

"Moorish rugs, in brilliant barbarous coloring, covered the finely tiled floor. Around the walls, richly covered cushions lay for one to sit upon crosslegged. The Governor sat upon one in front of a raised dias. His brother and a nephew, a young man who wore his fez rakishly on one side, were seated near him.

"Our party occupied the remaining cushions. In the hallway slaves awaited. Behind the Governor on the dias stood a handsome brass bed richly hung with silken curtains and spread. Shereef explained that the Governor rested there when he would have no one disturb him, or he might honor a guest by its use. On the walls were several clocks in pairs, all going, and all wrong.

"We conversed while the slaves brought a silver tray and tea service of Turkish gilded glass, a great kettle with charcoal stove inside, which boils its own water, and trays heaped with rich cakes. But the office of making tea itself always rests with a gentleman and is never performed by a slave. The good looking young nephew with the rakish fez honored us.

"First he warmed the pot. Then he took a large lump of loaf sugar so big that his hand could not surround it, and thrust it into the pot. A big handful of freshly gathered mint followed the sugar, and then a sufficient quantity of the finest green tea completed the charge. The boiling water was then poured over this, and for the usual five or six minutes it was permitted to stand. A slave then handed us each a glass of the fragrant amber colored liquid, which was very delightful and wholesome, but more like a rich, unusual punch than everyday tea."

WHY ITALY'S SKY IS BLUE.

As Italy is nearer the equator than we are, the sun's rays strike it more directly, and therefore more brightly. This means that there is a greater quantity of blue rays, as of all kinds of rays coming through the Italian air; and the reason why the air is bluer is because the particles of it have more blue rays to catch and reflect to our eyes.

BULL-FIGHTING'S TOLL.

Bull-fighting levies a heavy toll upon human life. During a recent season in Madrid at least twelve bull-fighters were killed and 111 injured, a record of casualties unprecedented in the history of the national sport of Spain. It has been computed that about 2,500 bulls and 3,500 horses are killed every year in Spanish bull-fights.

The remains of the late Mrs. Mathew Winer, who died in Marlette, Mich., on Friday, were brought here Saturday and interred in the Evangelical cemetery on Monday, Rev. Burn officiating. Mrs. Winer left last fall for Michigan to spend the remainder of her days with her children, and during that time had fair health. She had eaten a hearty meal on Friday and walked out into the yard at the home of her son, Wes. Winer, when she was suddenly taken ill with apoplexy and died before help could be secured. The deceased was one of the early pioneers of this village and neighborhood, and her sudden death came as a shock to her many friends. She leaves to mourn her loss, 7 sons, 5 daughters, 44 grandchildren and great grandchildren, to whom is extended the sympathy of the entire neighborhood.

On Tuesday the Junior ball team of Exeter came back and played our juniors a brilliant game of ball. Exeter scored the first run, then our boys tied it. The home team's score grew to 3, and later it stood 4-2. Then the pitcher of the Brownies appeared to lose control, with the result that the visitors won out by a score of 5-4 . Geo. Palmer was the umpire and gave good satisfaction. It was worth the price of admission to see the antics of the booters of the visiting club and the home team. N-o-i-s-e reigned supreme. It reminded one of the night we celebrated the Relief of Ladysmith. Our boys promise to give the visiting team a hot game in return.

WEEDS

The winter and spring seasons are not times when the farmer concerns himself very much about weeds. They are not in sight and have not begun the systematic stealing of plant food which belongs to the growing crop, and consequently do not loom up as of very much importance in the farmer's mind. And yet they are there all the same, ready to do business when the time comes. The germs of the weed may be in the seed sown, or its roots may be dormant in the ground awaiting the time when conditions are favorable for their appearance above ground, and to do battle with grain and other crops for the plant food stored up in the soil. And very often they win out lessening the yield of grain, roots or corn when the harvest comes.

COVERED WITH ECZEMA

Cured by Two Bottles of D. D. D.

On March 21st, 1910, Mr. Angus McMillan of Port Hood, N.S., wrote us,—

My little boy, three years old was covered from head to foot with eczema. I tried over twenty different kinds of salves and washes but could not see any improvement—in fact it seemed to be getting worse.

I was about discouraged and had lost faith in all kinds of so-called eczema cures, when I saw an ad. telling about D. D. D. Prescription. I sent for sample bottle and the third application convinced me that I had at last a sure cure."

What D. D. D. did for this little boy it will do for any skin sufferer. A mild, soothing liquid made up of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol, Glycerine and other ingredients, it penetrates to the root of the trouble and washes the disease germs out.

Why not get relief? Simply write to-day to the D. D. D. Laboratories Dept. E. A., 49 Colborne St., Toronto, and they will send you a free trial bottle.

FREE TO YOU—MY SISTER

FREE TO YOU AND EVERY SISTER SUFFERING FROM WOMEN'S AILMENTS.

I am a woman.
I know woman's sufferings.
I have found the cure.

I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from women's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure—you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourself at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhœa or Whitish discharge, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths, also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weakness peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete 10 days' treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial; and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer, if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says "You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhœa, Green Sickness, and Painful or Irregular Menstruation in Young Ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all women's diseases and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten days' treatment is yours, also the book. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address:

The house is of solid brick structure and is in good repair. It is most advantageously situated on the high ground north of the river. The drainage and cellerage is unexcelled. The house is equipped with a good furnace, bath room, lavatory, hard, soft, hot and cold water, and possesses other modern conveniences; good outbuildings and large orchard of choice winter fruit. This is no doubt one of the finest homes in the County, and as there is only a short time to wind up the estate will positively be sold to party sending in highest tender (provided they can comply with the terms and conditions.) Easy terms of payment. For forms of tender and terms and particulars apply to Thos. Cameron, Farquhar; S. G. Bawden, Exeter, or to Dickson & Carling, Solicitors for Estate, Exeter.
