"And, besides," said Sigrid, "what girl would care to take such love as he might now be able to give? I am sure nothing would induce me to accept any secondary love of that kind."

Now Cecil was of a wholly different type. Already love had taken possession of her, it had stolen into her heart almost unconsciously and had brought grave shadows into her quiet life, shadows cast by the sorrow of another. Sigrid's speech troubled her for a minute or two; if one girl could speak so, why not all girls?

"It may be so," she admitted, yet with a latent consciousness that so infinite a thing as love could not be bound by any hard and fast rules. "But I can not help it. Whether it is womanly or not I would die to give him the least real comfort.'"

"Tell Harris to stop, Cecil," said Mrs. Boniface. "We will get some grapes for Mr. Falck."

And glad to escape from the carriage for a minute, and glad, too, to be of use even in such a far-off way, Cecil went into the fruiterer's, returning before long with a beautiful basket of grapes and flowers.

CHAPTER XIX.

"See what I have brought you," said Sigrid, re-entering the sick-room a little later on.

Frithiof took the basket and looked, with a pleasure which a few weeks ago would have been impossible to him, at the lovely fruit and flowers.

"You have come just at the right time, for he will insist on talking of all the deepest things in heaven and earth," said Roy, "and this makes a good diversion."

"They are from Mrs. Boniface. Is it not kind of her? And do you know, Frithiof, she and Doctor Morris have been making quite a deep plot; they want to transplant us bodily to Rowan Tree House, and Doctor Morris thinks the move could do you no harm now that you are getting better."

"How I should like never to see this hateful room again!" he exclaimed. "You don't know how I detest it. The old ghosts seem to haunt it still. There is nothing that I can bear to look at except your picture of Bergen, which has done me more than one good turn."

The change to Rowan Tree House seemed to work wonders in him. The house had always charmed him, and the recollection of the first time he had entered it, using it as a shelter from the storm of life, much as Roy and Cecil had used his father's house as a shelter from the drenching rain of Bergen, returned to him again and again through the quiet weeks that followed.

Sigrid told him all the details of her life in Norway since they had last seen each other, of her refusal of Torvald Lundgren, of her relations with her aunt, of the early morning on Hjerkinsho. And her story toouched him.

"It was just as if I had worn a crape veil all my life," she said, looking up from her work for a moment with those clear, blue, practical eyes of hers. "And up there on the mountain it seemed as if some one had lifted it quite away."

Her words stirred within him an uneasy sense of loss, a vague desire, which he had once or twice felt before.

"Sigrid!" he said at last, with a suppressed eagerness in his voice, "Sigrid, you won't go back again to Norway and leave me?"

"No, dear, I will never leave you," she said, warmly. "I will try to find some sort of work. To-night I mean to talk to Mr. Boniface about it. Surely in this huge place there must be something I can do."

"It is its very hugeness that makes one despair," said Frithiof. "Good God! what I went through last autumn! And there are thousands in the same plight, thousands who would work if only they could meet with employment."

Sigrid watched his returning strength with delight; indeed, perhaps she never realized what he had been during his lonely months of London life.

Frithiof hardly knew which part of the day was most pleasant to him, the quiet morning after Mr. Boniface and Roy had gone to town, when he and Sigrid were left to their own devices; the pleasant little break at eleven, when Mrs. Boniface looked in to remind them that fruit was good in the morning, and to tempt him with pears and grapes, while Cecil and the two children came in from the garden, bringing with them a sense of freshness and life.

Quiet the life was, it is true, but dull never. Every one had plenty to do, yet not too much.

Into the midst of this home there had come now some strangely fresh elements. Three distinct romances were being worked out beneath that quiet roof. There was poor Frithiof with his shattered life, his past an agony which would scarcely bear thinking of, his future a desperate struggle with circumstances. There was Cecil, whose life was so far bound up with his that when he suffered she suffered too, yet had to live on with a serene face and make no sign. There was Roy already madly in love with th eblue-eyed, fair-haired Sigrid, who seemed in the glad reaction after all her troubles to have developed into a totally different being, and was the life of the party. And yet in spite of the inevitable pain of love, these were happy days for all of them. Happy to Frithiof because his strength was returning to him; because, with an iron resolution, he as far as possible shut out the remembrance of Blanche; because the spirit life within him was slowly developing, and for the first time he had become conscious that it was a reality.

Happy for Cecil because her love was no foolish sentimentality, no selfish day-dream, but a noble love which taught her more than anything else could possibly have done. Happiest of all perhaps for Roy, because his love story was full of bright hope—a hope that each day grew fuller and clearer.

"Robin," said Mrs. Boniface one evening to her husband. "I think Sigrid Falck is one of the sweetest girls I ever saw."

"So thinks some one else if I am not much mistaken," he replied.

"Then, you, too, have noticed it. I am so glad. I hoped it was so, but could not feel sure. Oh, Robin, I wonder if he has any chance? She would make him such a sweet little wife."

"How can we tell that she has not left her heart in Norway?"

"I do not think so," said Mrs. Boniface. "No, I feel sure that can't be, from the way in which she speaks of her life there. If there is any rival to be feared it is Frithiof. They seem to be wrapped up in each other, and it is only natural, too, after all their trouble and separation and this illness of his. How strong he is getting again, and how naturally he takes to the game! He is such a fine-looking fellow, somehow he dwarfs every one else."

OLD, BUT GAINS RICHES.

Wealthy Japanese Could Not Read Until He was Sixty.

Too old at forty does not apply in Japan. Wakao Ippel, the richest man in the province of Yamanashi, who has just celebrated his ninety-third birthday, did not learn to read until he was sixty, nor had he begun to amass his great fortune.

He was a rag-picker, and his first money-making venture was the purchase of a number of crystal balls, which he sold at an enormous profit. After reaching the age of sixty he engaged a tutor, and as soon as he had learned to read began Chinese classics, a study which he pursued until his ninetieth year.

EUROPE'S POPULAR BANKS

NOW 18,000 IN GERMANY AND 5,500 IN FRANCE.

Founded by German Financier with a View to Assisting Farmers.

The popular banks of Europe were first instituted about seventy years ago in Germany. From their beginning they have been founded and conducted upon the basis of the unlimited liability of the shareholders. These banks are now found practically in all the countries of Europe, serving especially two classes of the people, the farmers and the wage earners.

The inception of the popular banks may be found in the brain of the well-known German financier and philanthropist Raiffeisen. According to Moody's Magazine he first conceived this beneficent plan for the amelioration of the conditions surrounding agricultural people. In 1847 he established the first caisse rurale, or agricultural bank.

His purpose was actuated solely by a desire to help the farmer by placing within his grasp the facilities with which to help himself, to improve his equipment and to increase his acreage and the productivity of his land and stock.

PLAN QUICKLY GAINS FAVOR.

He neither sought nor obtained assistance from the government, but from the first relied upon the perfect mutuality of all the elements of the plan. The wisdom and practicability of Raiffeisen's system can have no better proofs than the thousands of societies which have been founded during these intervening years upon the identical plans which he conceived and successfully established in the beginning.

Contemporaneous with Raiffeisen another German, Schultze-Delitzsch, established the first popular bank or co-operative credit society for the benefit of the people of the towns, tradesmen and institutions.

He is undoubtedly entitled to quite as much credit as we accord to Raiffeisen, as he extended the work of the latter by assisting a different class of the people who were quite as much in need of banking facilitis as were those in the farming districts.

ARTICLES OF ASSOCIATION.

The following are some of the articles of association upon which the success of these banks has been established:

The capital of the society is not fixed, but varies according to the number of stockholders.

The capital is divided into shares of $1 to $5 par value each (i. e., francs, lira, marks, etc., as the case may be.)

The foundational object of the society is to procure to its stockholders the credit necessary for their business to stimulate the habit of saving surplus and to provide a safe and remunerative investment for such savings.

The shareholders shall be mutually responsible to the extent of their respective private fortunes for the liabilities of the society, which liabilities are divided among the shareholders pro rata.

No person is accepted as a shareholder unless he is well known to the directors, a citizen of the same locality, and known to be honest, sober and economical.

PRINCIPLES OF LOANING.

The shareholders alone are eligible to borrow money from the bank. The specific purpose for which the loan is asked must be explained, and only the necessary amount actually required is loaned. (This principle of loaning only to shareholders insures to a great degree the security of the loan in that the borrower will naturally protect his own investment as a shareholder).

The management of the society rests with the governor, board of directors, auditors and the general meetings of the shareholders. These will all vary in number according to the volume of business transacted.

In Germany there are at present 18,000 institutions of this character, of which over 10,000 are country popular banks. There are some differences in the details of the constitution and management of these banks, depending upon local conditions.

About five hundred of the number are based upon the limited liability of the shareholders, and the remaining 9,500 follow the plan of unlimited liability and moral mutuality among the members. During the last year of 1910 the gross business of the German societies amounted to over 6,000,000,000 marks, equal to $1,500,000,000.

NEW IN ENGLAND.

In England the organization of popular banks has only recently been undertaken and their success is still a matter for future development, though it may be safely predicted, as there is ample opportunity and a recognized necessity for these banking facilities in rural districts. There they are known as village credit societies, agricultural credit societies or agricultural banks.

In Austria there are more than 4,000 popular banks and agricultural credit societies and in Hungary about seven hundred. In Belgium there are over 300 agricultural or co-operative societies, of which 290 are based upon the Raiffeisen system.

In Italy there are over 7,000 popular banks and credit societies under the same system, established under the personal guidance of Mr. Wollemborg; of this number 736 are purely popular banks. The Italian popular banks represent a capital of 95,000,000 francs, surplus 57,000,000 francs, total 152,000,000 francs. The rate of interest on loans averages 4 to 6 per cent., and the rate paid on deposits is 3 to 4 per cent.

In France the popular banks are variously known by the names of Credit Agricole Mutuel, Caisse Rurale and Regionale, Caisse Ouvriere, etc. They number in the different classes over 5,500 banks and societies with over 1,800,000 shareholders. All these societies enjoy the control of the French Government, as also its financial help.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

It has been said times without number that this is the age of organization, and fortunately the genius for organization is not exhausted in founding and developing industrial trusts. It is employed unceasingly in the churches, in the associated charities, in the social settlements. Men and women are working together as they have never worked before to help all who need a helping hand, to bring comfort to those who are parts of what Rev. J. J. D. Hall calls the "human junk piles."

The world owes much and it will owe more to these united efforts for the benefit of the race. The union is a mighty one, and the people who have joined it are rich not merely in professions, but in good works. But it is well to remember even where there is the highest enthusiasm for organized philanthropy that there is still a demand for individualism of the right sort, a demand that may be supplied not only in associations of many kinds but in all our daily intercourse with one another. And possibly the intense interest that is aroused by doing good with "malice aforethought" may sometimes put out of mind the opportunities that come to every one for doing good without organization and without any elaborate planning.

For an illustration of what is meant consider the life and conduct of two men whom we all know. One carries sunshine wherever he goes. His presence is a benediction. He passes through an open doorway, and as he does so a ray of light seems to enter the room. Discontent and weariness vanish. Whether there are two, three or a dozen persons in the room all are made glad. Nor is this due only to the charm of a pleasing manner. There is a much deeper reason. The man's character has stood the test of many trials. "To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven." but to his unselfish purpose there is a time in every minute. He will run his legs off for a friend. He is doing little things for somebody with every fresh impulse from an overflowing heart, with such beautiful thoughtlessness, such complete forgetfulness of self that God's greatest blessing is on him in the love of his fellows.

For a contrast there is that other man who is so much concerned with general problems that he counts for nothing in particular cases, so much impressed by the prevalence of evil and his isolated goodness that in imagination he is always on the heights, so rich in fine sentiment and so absorbed with his own little wants that he seldom lifts his hand for others, that he actually makes a burden of his favors, and repels and irritates his closest associates.

Conceivably a man who at least suggests the first type may be found among the human junk piles, while examples of the second type are not unknown in philanthropic circles. And the young person who is yearning to be good and to do good might profit by thinking over the comparison. Let him do what he can in concert with others, but let him not forget that he may discover abundant opportunities for working out his noble designs in his home and in his business and on the street. Above all, let him remember that uplifting humanity does not consist in lifting up one's self.

HOME HINTS.

Cabbage should always be boiled in two waters.

To keep celery and lettuce fresh, stand the roots in cold water.

Put castors on your woodbox if you would have it handy to move about.

Change dish water often—it is better both for the hands and for the dishes.

Never bang an oven door, if you don't wish your bread or cake to fall. Close it gently instead.

To keep flowers fresh, clip their stems and change the water every day. Also a pinch of salt helps.

To get rid of the objectionable smell of cabbage while cooking, put a piece of charcoal in the second water.

HEALTH

THE ESOPHAGUS.

The esophagus is the passage that leads from the mouth to the stomach, and through it all our food must necessarily pass. Like the other organs of the body, it is subject to various accidents and diseases, many of them painful or dangerous in themselves, and especially serious, because they may lead to partial or even total starvation. In stricture of the esophagus, when the canal is tightened or filled up at some point, the sufferer may live for years in a state of semi-starvation, because the passage of solids is a mechanical impossibility, and life must be sustained on liquid food.

Acute inflammation of the esophagus may be a complication in typhoid or scarlet fever. It also occurs as "thrush" in children, especially in badly fed and anemic children of the poorer classes. In these cases the mouth and throat are usually affected at the same time.

In diphtheria the inflammation may extend from the throat into the esophagus, and membranes may form there. The esophagus may also be attacked in chronic tuberculosis, although the disease does not begin there, but spreads to it from the larvnx or adjoining parts.

Many cases of acute inflammation of the esophagus are caused by injuries. Young children sometimes swallow small objects that inflict wounds in their descent, and professional entertainers who perform such tricks as sword-swallowing have been known to inflict or wound or even rupture this organ.

The worst cases of inflammation are caused by corrosive or caustic liquids, sometimes taken with suicidal intent, and sometimes by accident, as in those cases where bottles of ammonia or caustic acids are carelessly left where children can experiment with them. Such an accident is at once followed by intense pain and symptoms of shock. Immediate efforts should be made to neutralize the acid, or alkali, to wash out the stomach or to induce vomiting.

The worst of this sort of accident is that if there is recovery from the poison, the patient is very likely to suffer with a lifelong stricture of the esophagus as a result of the local injury inflicted. — Youth's Companion.

HEADACHE AND ITS CURE.

The first essential in relieving a headache is to know something of its nature, and for the present purpose headaches may be roughly divided into two classes; first, those in which the o wof blood to the brain is increased; second, those in which the flow of blood to the brain is diminished. In the former case the face becomes flushed and heated; the eyes are often bloodshot; there is a sensation of fulness and tension behind the eyeballs, which sometimes feel as if they actually protruded; the pulse is full and often quick; the hands are hot while the feet may be cold. Usually there is a feeling of restlessness, with nervous inability to keep still. For the relief of such a headache a cool, dark room, free from noise is of the first importance, and cold applications to the top of the head or the back of the neck will do fgood. A handkerchief wrung out of water to which a few drops of eau de Cologne and half a teaspoonful of sal volatile are added, may be laid on the forehead and changed frequently. A mild mustard plaster applied to the back of the neck with a piece of old soft handkerchief next the skin will often give relief; it should only be kept on till it begins to burn sharply, otherwise it may cause a raw surface. A 20 grain powder of bromide of potash dissolved in half a tumbler of either hot or cold water can be taken with safety, and if the pain be not entirely relieved this dose may be repeated after two hours have elapsed.

A FEARFUL VIGIL.

A Hindu Hunter's Experience With a Tiger.

An extraordinary tale of a Hindu hunter's presence of mind and self-control is told by Ernest Young in "Adventures Among Hunters and Trappers," on the authority of Colonel Campbell, a British officer in the Indian service. A tiger had carried off a number of cattle from the vicinity of a small village in India. Bussapa, the chief hunter, resolving to put an end to these depredations, found where the beast's lair was, fastened up a young bullock as a bait, and sat down near it—but well to leeward—to watch.

His only protection in case of attack on the part of the tiger was a small bush. Soon after sunset the tiger put in his appearance, pounced on the bullock, and began his supper. While he was gorging himself with the warm flesh and blood of his victim, Bussapa thrust his long, clumsy match-lock through the bush and fired.

The tiger was wounded, but not killed. It rose with a sullen growl, peered round as if to try to discover its assailant, and being unable, on account of the bush and the gathering gloom, to see the man with the gun, once more greedily fell upon the bullock.

Bussapa was kneeling only a few yards away, completely defenceless. Had he dared to reload, his movements would have proclaimed his whereabouts, and his wounded enemy would have sprung upon him at once. His bare knees were pressed against the gravel, which was cutting into his flesh, but he dared not move an inch.

There he knelt, getting stiffer and stiffer, while just in front of him was the tiger, growling hoarsely over his evening meal, and keeping one eye on the bush, whence he appeared to suspect danger. The wind blew his hot breath into the face of the almost crippled hunter, but the wretched man kept perfectly still.

The pain of his cramped position increased every moment; suspense became almost intolerable; but the motion of a limb, the rustling of a leaf would have been death. He heard the gong of the village strike each hour of that fearful night. The mosquitoes swarmed round his face, but he dared not brush them off.

Hours rolled on, and his endurance was well-nigh exhausted, when at length the welcome dawn began to light up the eastern horizon. On the approach of the day the tiger rose and stalked away, growling sulkily, to a thicket at some distance; and then the stiff and wearied Bussapa felt that he was safe.

One would have thought that after such a night of suffering he would have been too thankful for his escape to venture on any further risk. But Bussapa was not so easily diverted from his purpose. As soon as he had stretched his cramped limbs and restored his sluggish circulation, he reloaded his matchlock, and coolly proceeded to finish his work. With his match lighted, he advanced alone to the tiger, lying ready to receive him, and shot him dead in the forehead while he was in the very act of charging.

HOME HELPS.

A spoonful of flour added to the grease in which eggs are to be fried will keep them from sticking to the pan.

White felt hats can be cleaned by dusting them with white corn meal and brushing the meal thoroughly out.

If paper shades for the lamp or candle can be dipped in a solution of alum they are less likely to catch fire.

An old Japan tray can be rejuvenated and its usefulness prolonged if you give it two coats of white paint and one of enamel.

If soot falls on a carpet, do not try to brush it off. Spread a handful of well-dried salt upon it and sweep up salt and soot together.

Every householder should have plenty of dust sheets for cleaning days. Sometimes old sheets can be utilized in this way. New dust sheets are best made of cheap calico.

GOD'S QUICKENING POWER

We Cannot Be Too Careful and Jealous Lest Man's Wisdom and Devices Become Our Reliance.

"Wilt thou not quicken us again, that thy people may rejoice in thee?"—Psalms, lxxxv., 6.

We have returned again to our accustomed place after a season of rest. In so doing it is right and proper that we give thanks to Him, life our eyes unto the hills whence cometh all our blessings. Rest from labor, relaxation from incessant toil is only then justifiable when we return with a devout purpose of renewing our efforts, of advancing our cause and pressing forward to the goal set before us. As Christians we recognize that God's work is best done in His way, and only then will we be successful when we have learned the lesson of loving obedience and humble submission.

Let us notice God's quickening power:—

Man is dependent upon nature to quicken his vitality for the performance of his physical tasks. Only as he can use and assimilate nature's gifts, nature's products, is strength afforded him to do his best. Of course, there are many who ignore God's laws in the book of nature, and who resort to artificial means or methods—substitutions—in order to sustain life, if only for a season. When our strength fails us how we resort to every available means to recover it! Change of climate,

TRAVELS BY LAND AND SEA,

health resorts at home and abroad and a thousand other ways to get to the quickening power of mother earth, nature's source of strength

The Psalmist in the text remembers whence Israel came and whither they were going. He remembers Israel's checkered history, apostasy, failure, defeat, captivity, humiliation. Have we learned the lessons of life any better?

Are we ready to condemn them and justify our every act?

What is the sum total of life's experiences to us to-day?

Are we ready to acknowledge God as the source of our spirit's quickening power? If not, who is the source of our soul's power?

There is great need of that quickening power in resuming our work. There is need of re-impressing upon our minds, of reassuring our hearts that the God of Jacob is our God, the Jehovah of old is the tower of our strength to-day. And only as we feel our dependence upon Him in all our work, only as we feel the need of His quickening power and use it without stint, can and will we be successful in the work of His kingdom, whatever that work may be. There are so many spurious efforts put forth, so many counterfeits of anything good practised in the Church palmed off for Christianity—which have cursed the Church and hardened sinners in their sins without number. It is not noisy demonstration but the "still, small voice" that we need; not human dependence or schemes, but God's arm; not machinery or measures or sensational methods, but the Holy Spirit sent down from on high in answer to fervent prayer to unite our strength, our forces, however small they may be, to advance the Kingdom of our God and His Christ among us. For this Christ needs men, living men for living problems.

I deny that the riches of this world can give abiding joy. If this were so the favored sons of earth who have treasures above measure would enjoy the greatest felicity. But do they? It lies not in the power of man or nature to give tranquility of soul to man. Every good and perfect gift cometh from above.

The effect is that the delight in service bears its own fruit here and now—joy, holy joy. The joy that meets by the way; the joy that follows us in misery, in sorrow; the joy that abides in our trials and struggles; joy that cheers us in our successes and failures; joy that causes the milk of human kindness to flow in our veins; joy that extracts honey out of life's experiences; joy that gives us beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness, that they may be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord, that He might be glorified. "Wilt thou not quicken us again, that thy people may rejoice in thee?"—Rev. Carl Zinssmeister.

DOGGIE TEARS.

Pathetic Incident of a Dog's Affectionate Nature.

On the Southern Pacific Railroad a local train had just passed a little station called Nahant, when the engineer saw an old man lying at full length on the lines only a few hundred yards in front of his engine. The usual warning was given, but the man did not move, and the train was brought to a standstill a few feet from him. A glance at the body showed that the poor fellow was dead. In a few minutes the engineer and other officials were standing round the body. Up to this time they had not observed the presence of a little black dog, but as soon as they approached his master he made a dash for the nearest man, and for a few seconds fought with all his strength to keep the man away.

They were there for the purpose of examining the body, however, to see what could be done, and the little dog was rudely kicked to one side. He did not howl with pain as a dog generally does when kicked. He simply gathered himself up and quietly made his way between the man's legs until he reached his dead master's head, when he placed his little face by the side of his master's, and, after looking at the intruders a few seconds, began to whine; big tears were noticed running down his nose.

"I had often heard," said one of them, "that dogs have been known to shed tears, but I never believed it until then, and I have lots more respect for the dog family than I ever before had. When I looked round at my companions some of them were crying, too.

"The old man was removed from the line with more care than is usually displayed in such cases. The body was handled as gently as a mother would have done it, all on account of the tears in that little dog's eyes.

"As soon as the dog discovered that our roughness had disappeared he became friendly, and seemed to appreciate what we were doing for his master; but we could not induce him to leave the old man's body, and when the train steamed out he was still sitting by his dead master's head."

VOTING INDUCEMENTS.

In this country voting is not compulsory, and, therefore, any omission to do so when the polling day comes round is not punishable by law.

But the same happy state of affairs does not obtain in Belgium. There the franchise laws are extremely strict, for failure to vote is counted a misdemeanor, and the penalty is severe. To prevent non-appearance at the polling-station, the Belgian Government even goes so far as to defray the expenses of citizens who live some distance away, and who can show an adequate reason for absence. In fact, many natives of that country, domiciled for a time in England on business, enjoyed a free trip home last May in order to record their votes at the Parliamentary polling.

Nor is the Belgian content with one vote. He can, if he will, obtain three. Besides that to which he is entitled at the age of twenty-five should he have lived in the same commune for a year, he is granted another if he reach a certain degree of educational efficiency.

While the third is obtainable at the age of thirty-five—that is, if the citizen pays a house tax of five francs—$1.02 a year, and is either married or a widower.

A STICK FOR A HUMP.

Swing a stick for a hump, physical or mental! A well-known physician recently stated that fewer round shoulders would be observed in our young men of to-day could they but cultivate the habit of carrying a stick. As will easily be seen, the use of a walking-stick inevitably pulls back the arm. And so, quite naturally, too, the chest is pushed forward, thus allowing of its expansion. Whereas the man who carries nothing is invariably nervously conscious of his hands. And to hide them away somewhere, puts them in his pockets. What happens By the very action of thrusting his hands in his pockets, he brings his shoulders into the line of a slouch, and so to a stoop. But to be at all efficacious, the walking-stick caried must be of ordinary size—that is, to reach as far as the hip. A shorter stick fails in its mission. For either it is swung in the hand, with the other hand in the pocket, or it is carried high under the arm, with both hands buried deep.

NUFF SAID.

"And you like chicken, Sam?"

"Gee! Ah certainly does boss."

"And you get 'em once in a while?"

"Oh, sure, boss, Ah gets 'em."

"How do you get 'em, Sam?"

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, OCTOBER 6.

Lesson I.—Jesus walking on the Sea, Mark 6. 45-56. Golden Text, Matt. 14. 27.

Verse 45.—Straightway he constrained his disciples—Immediately after the miracle of feeding five thousand Jesus dispatched the twelve, with great urgency from the scene. The reason for this is given by John only (6. 15), who states that the effect of the miracle upon the multitude was such that they were about to take him by force and make him king. Jesus doubtless perceived that the disciples would share in this movement and therefore sent them away in haste.

Unto the other side to Bethsaida—They were directed to take a westerly course across the Lake toward Bethsaida in Galilee, a fishing village near Capernaum. This village is not to be confused with Bethsaida Julias, which was on the northeastern shore and near which occurred the miracle of the loaves and fishes. Luke 9. 10. Matthew's record (14. 22) is simply that they were to go "to the other side," while John (6. 17) says they "were going over the sea unto Capernaum."

Himself sendeth the multitude away—The state of mind of the multitude made the situation critical and necessitated extraordinary precaution such as Jesus alone could exercise.

46.—Into the mountain to pray—One of the mountains near the scene of the miracle. The necessity for prayer grew out of the sudden popularity with which the crowd invested Jesus.

47. When even was come — The early evening referred to in 6. 35 was from three to six o'clock, while the late evening here referred to was from six o'clock until night.

In the midst of the sea — About half way across. John (6. 19) says: "About five and twenty or thirty furlongs."

48. Distressed in rowing — The night was divided by the Romans into four watches of three hours each. This was, therefore, the last watch, from three to six in the morning. Their distress is evident from the fact that they had rowed about eight hours and had covered only between three and four miles.

Walking on the sea—This miracle is clearly not to be explained, as some would attempt to do, by saying that he was walking on the shore "above the sea."

Would have passed by them—It was probably the deliberate purpose of Jesus to pass them to make opportunity for testing and instructing their faith.

49. A ghost—The darkness made it impossible to recognize Jesus, and naturally they did not expect to see a person walking on the water. Whatever the Jews could not explain naturally they attributed to spirits.

50. All saw him—Conclusive evidence it was not a delusion.

Be of good cheer: it is I; be not afraid—This immediate word of assurance is also recorded by Matt. (14. 27) and John (6 20). John omits "Be of good cheer." Although they did not recognize the form, they knew at once the voice of Jesus, and this had the immediate effect of allaying their fears.

51. Went up unto them into the boat—We would infer from John's account (6. 21) that the disciples were prevented from receiving Jesus into the boat because by the time Jesus had reached it they had arrived at the shore.

52. Understood not concerning the loaves—This is given as the reason why the disciples did not understand the present miracle. After witnessing the feeding of the multitude they should have had less difficulty at this time.

Their heart was hardened — The Jews considered the heart to be the seat of intelligence as well as affection, so that the phrase does not refer so much to dullness of moral sensibilities as to intellectual stupidity.

53. Came to the land unto Gennesaret—A fertile plain about three miles long and a mile wide extending along the western shore of the lake. The place of landing was several imles south of Capernaum and Bethsaida, which is proof that they had been driven far out of their course.

55. Beds—Pallets.

56. The border of his garment—The outer robe worn by the Jews had fringe or tassels about the edge and corners to remind them of the law.

SUBSTITUTE.

Hazel—"Didn't Marion marry the druggist?"

PARLIAMENT TO HEAR THE NAVAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

The announcement that Parliament is to be summoned for some time in November means that before long the people of Canada will have before them the result of the deliberations which took place in London during the past summer between representatives of the Canadian and Imperial governments. The Borden government has to announce its naval policy, and it is to make that announcement according to constitutional practice on the floor of parliament in the hearing of all the people, through their representatives.

That the policy to be announced will fully realize the expectations of those Canadians who believe that Canada as a British nation should do her part toward British defence on the seas, seems to be more than probable. It is also to be safely assumed that in whatever proposal the government makes to Parliament there will be no diminution of Canadian autonomy and no sacrifice of Canada's position as a great self-governing Dominion within the empire.

The Borden government has sought, and it is believed, has found, a solution of the navy problem which is at once adequate to the needs of the time, consistent with the increasing dignity and importance of the Dominion and a worthy recognition of the long years of service freely given to Canada by the mother country in the maintenance of great fleets for the protection of this as well as other portions of the empire of Greater Britain.

Section four of the Municipal Amendment Act, 1912, makes an important change in the number of votes to carry a By-law granting a bonus in aid of a manufacturing industry. All that is now necessary to effect this result is to obtain the assent of three-fourths of all the members of the Council and two thirds of the ratepayers who actually vote on the by-law.

It is against the law to have a common drinking cup in a railroad train and so a fellow has to travel a long way often without even a drink of water. This is pretty fine haired hygiene and the country is getting too much of it. Even if there was any danger a man need not grab a glass between his lips and rub off the possible microbes. There is often more danger in not letting a man have a drink of water when he needs it than in all the germs one can muster up in his imagination. If this thing keeps up there will soon be laws against eating sandwiches, sausages and stone pies, for in all these things there are more hiding places for germs and bacteria than there are on the edge of a drinking cup.

A review of the live stock situation in England, shows the world-wide decline in the number of meat-producing animals. If this decline is not checked even we are bound to have higher prices for meats of all kinds than those now ruling. The supply on this continent shows no signs of being on the upward grade. The number of meat-producing animals in Canada per head of population does not show any improvement. Especially is this true of Ontario where the live stock business is the chief branch of agriculture. The farmer, therefore, need have no hesitation about increasing the number of meat-producing animals on his farm.

Comparing the cost of education to the farmer and the resident of town, the Bruce Herald quotes Inspector McCool, who takes as an example School Section No. 2, Brant, which pays its teacher a salary of $600 per annum. After deducting the various grants from the salary, the Inspector finds that a man owning a 100 acre farm in this section and assessed for $3,800 would pay a school rate per year of $7.01. In Walkerton the Inspector owns a house assessed at $3,100 and on this he pays a school rate of $30.15, thus showing that the levy for education in the town is nearly five times that of the country. Compared with his town brethren the farmers would seem to be faring mightily well.

Most women and some men are addicted to the talk habit. Talking uses up more nerve force than almost any work in which a human being can engage; yet women who are nervous, weak, and incapacitated for work will indulge in excited and wholly needless conversation by the hour and fancy themselves doing nothing—resting. Mistaken, but well meaning friends visit an invalid for an entire afternoon and extract more vitality from the ailing one than would perhaps if rightly applied, restore her health. Women unfit for household duties hire a maid to do their work, and then spend a large proportion of their time flitting about among their friends, recklessly expending their already flagging nervous energy in purposeless talk, talk, talk.

GODERICH—While preparing to go out Sunday, Mr. John Holiday dropped dead. For some time back he had been in poor health but death was quite unexpected. Medical attendance was soon on hand, but too late to do anything, heart trouble being the cause. He was 63 years old, and is survived by his wife and three daughters.

CLANDEBOYE

Death of Frank Abbott.—There passed away at the residence of his son, Mr. W. P. Abbott, on Wednesday, Oct. 2nd, Mr. Frank Abbott, at the age of 84 years. The deceased had been in very poor health for some time, and a short time ago returned from the London Hospital, where he had been under treatment. Mr. Abbott was well and favorably known throughout the community. He had been for many years extensively engaged in bee keeping. He leaves a grown up family to mourn his decease. The funeral will take place Friday to the Nursery Cemetery.

Bete—Hodgins—A very pretty wedding took place at St. James' Church, Clandeboye, on Sept. 25, when Lizzie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hodgins, became the bride of Mr. George B. Bere of London. Rev. Lowe of Lucan performed the ceremony in the presence of one-hundred and twenty guests, who were ushered in by Messrs. Roy Simpson and Alex. Hodgins. At 2.30 p.m. the bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her father to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Clara Shoebottom of London, cousin of the bride. The bride looked handsome in a gown of embroidered Brussels net over white silk, and wearing the customary bridal veil and carried a bouquet of roses. The bride and groom were unattended. Miss Jean Hodgins of Strathroy, cousin of the bride, acted as flower girl and looked dainty in a gown of pink silk, with beaded trimming, and carried a basket of pink carnations. After the ceremony all returned to the bride's home, where a dainty dinner was served. The evening was spent in games and dancing until the wee small hours, when Mr. and Mrs. Bere left in an auto for their home in London. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome fur coat, to the flower girl a locket and chain and to Miss Shoebottom a brooch set with pearls. The bride and groom received many beautiful and costly presents, among them being a handsome cheque from the bride's father. Mr. and Mrs. Bere will be at home to their friends after October 20th, at 78 Oxford St., West London.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

FREE TO YOU—MY SISTER
FREE TO YOU AND EVERY SISTER SUFFERING FROM WOMEN'S AILMENTS.

I am a woman.
I know woman's sufferings.
I have found the cure.

I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from women's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure — you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhoea or Whitish discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths, also pains in the head; back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete 10 days' treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial; and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer, if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhœa, Green Sickness and Painful or Irregular Menstruation in Young Ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all woman's diseases and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten days' treatment is yours, also the book. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address:

Are the Fly and Mosquito Dangerous?

The fly, with spongy feet, collects the invisible germs of diseases, spreads them over our food and poisons us with typhoid and cholera. The mosquito with its bite injects into our veins malaria and yellow fever. The bacteria of consumption, or grip, are everywhere present for us to breathe into our lungs. The blood which flows through our veins and arteries is our protection. It should contain healthy red and white blood corpuscles—capable of warding off these disease germs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood medicine and alterative made entirely without alcohol, a pure glycerie extract of bloodroot, golden seal, Oregon grape root, queen's root, mandrake and stone root, which has enjoyed a good reputation for over forty years. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

M. Maguire, Esq.

"About forty years ago while in Newark, New Jersey, I had chills and fever," writes Mr. Michael Maguire, of National Military Home, Kans. "I went to Kansas City and in the spring of 1877 the chills and fever returned. Doctors and everything I tried failed to do me good. Finally I saw Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery advertised. I took one bottle of it and the chills vanished. In about a year afterward I felt them coming back so I got another bottle and have never had any symptoms of fever or ague since. That is all of twenty years ago, for I had the chills about twelve years before I started to take Golden Medical Discovery."

VARICOSE VEINS CURED
NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.
Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.
HENRY C. LOCUST.

HAS YOUR BLOOD BEEN DISEASED?

BLOOD POISONS are the most prevalent and most serious diseases. They sap the very life blood of the victim and unless entirely eradicated from the system will cause serious complications. Beware of Mercury. It may suppress the symptoms—our NEW METHOD cures all blood diseases.

YOUNG OR MIDDLE AGED MEN.—Imprudent acts or later excesses have broken down your system. You feel the symptoms stealing over you. Mentally, physically and vitally you are not the man you used to be or should be. Will you heed the danger signals?

READER Are you a victim? Have you lost hope? Are you intending to marry? Has your blood been diseased? Have you any weakness? Our NEW METHOD TREATMENT will cure you. What it has done for others it will do for you. Consultation Free. No matter who has treated you, write for an honest opinion Free of Charge. Books Free—"Boyhood, Manhood, Fatherhood." (Illustrated) on Diseases of Men.

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT. PRIVATE. No names on boxes or envelopes. Everything Confidential. Question List and Cost of Treatment FREE FOR HOME TREATMENT.

A WHOLE FAMILY WIPED OUT

A despatch from Omemee says: Five persons, a family party, were drowned on Saturday afternoon in the Pigeon River, near Omemee, when their canoe was overturned by the pull of a 14 pound muskallonge on a trolling line held by William McCaffery, assistant supply manager of the Canadian General Electric Company, Toronto. The dead:—William McCaffery, 41, 16 South Drive. Laura S. McCaffery, 38, his wife. Mary McCaffery, Omemee, his mother. Grave Maxine McCaffery, 12, his daughter. Howard Southby McCaffery, 8, his son.

Mr. McCaffery, who was a son of Charles McCaffery, of Omemee, went with his family to that village on Friday at his old home. With his wife, mother, and two children, he started down the Pigeon River on Saturday morning on a fishing expedition. The weather was fine, and though it came on to rain towards evening there was nothing in the nature of a squall on the water during the day.

It appears that no member of the party was ever seen alive after the canoe had passed from sight down the river, and it is believed that no person actually witnessed the accident. When the party did not return to Omemee towards evening, according to his expectation, Charles McCaffery, father of the drowned man, became alarmed, and organized a search party. Seven miles down the river the canoe was discovered, floating bottom upward. Dragging operations were commenced immediately. The search continued until three o'clock on Sunday morning, by which time four bodies—those of McCaffery, his wife, mother, and son—had been recovered. The clue to the position of the bodies was afforded by the splashing of a large fish. The body of the little girl was not found until 10 o'clock in the morning, when a second search party recovered it.

EIGHT WOUNDED AT LECTURE

Conscripts Started Free Fight in Paris Hall.

A despatch from Paris says: The announcement that Prof. Gustave Herve, the Socialist, who had just been released from jail because of the utterances of his paper during the railway strike, would deliver a lecture on Wednesday night on "Our Country," stirred up the militant Anarchists, who regard Herve as a backslider, and they determined to prevent the delivery of his address. They gathered in large numbers in the hall and started a disturbance before the time for the lecture to begin. Chairs flew and revolvers were fired, and before the professor started to speak eight wounded men had been taken to the hospital. When he took the platform and failed to advise the conscripts to desert, the radical anti-militarist faction and Anarchists, who were present in great strength, raised pandemonium.

In spite of the racket Prof. Herve proceeded ot deliver his address. The noise and turmoil were so great however, that it was impossible to hear what he said beyond learning that he explained his famous phrase about planting the flag in a manure heap as a reference to an imperial, not a republican flag. He declared that his sole error had been in allowing himself to be dubbed anti-patriotic. He denied that he was an anti-militarist, and said he believed that it was only possible to effect a social revolution with the assistance of the army, and to secure this the schools must be captured first.

COAST PLANS OF C.N.R.

Officials Make Announcements of Big Undertakings.

Statements recently made by Col. Davidson and Canadian Northern officials in the west show the company's intentions regarding its Pacific terminal at Vancouver and Port Mann. The former is to be the passenger terminus, while Port Mann will be utilized for the freight end of the business, and will also be the site of the company's car and locomotive repair shops. In addition it will likely be the steamer port at such time as the Canadian Northern decides to operate a trans-Pacific service.

No less a sum than ten million dollars is to be spent on the C.N.R. location at False Creek, outside Vancouver, and the connection between the station there and the downtown depot, which will be by means of a tunnel. Work there will begin at the earliest possible moment. The foundations of the machine shops at Port Mann will be started within a month, according to a statement issued by Col. Davidson.

THE LATE RT. HON SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

THOUGHT HE WAS MURDERER

Cobalt Youth Commits Suicide as a Result.

A despatch from Cobalt says: After shooting three times at George Wilkes, proprietor of the Ottawa House here, this evening, and thinking he had killed him, J. K. (Curley) McDonald, a young American from the Adirondack region, stepped outside and shot himself through the brain, dying instantly. Wilkes had garnisheed McDonald's wages at the Nipissing Mine, and McDonald's grievances rose over the action.

Wilkes threw himself on the floor, exclaiming, "I'm gone," when McDonald fired the third shot. He escaped the three shots, one barely burning the skin of his hip. The affair occured in the Ottawa House, and the suicide was committed a few feet from its door. McDonald came to Cobalt and lived for some time under the alias of H. O. McCarthy, giving the reason confidentially, it is stated, that he had formerly committed a depredation. He was well educated, although inclined to act strangely at times.

FOOD FOR THE VILLAGERS.

Old Broken-down Horse Which Fell Dead on German Street.

A despatch from Berlin, Germany, says: The Vorwaerts in supporting its meat campaign prints a story of an old broken-down horse which dropped dead in the Village of Maerzdorf, in Silesia, where the food scarcity is extreme. The villagers skinned the animal, stripped the flesh from the bones, and carried it to their homes.

Three firemen were injured by falling from a ladder at a blaze on Bay street, Toronto, on Sunday.

TORONTO CORRESPONDENCE

INTERESTING GOSSIP FROM ONTARIO'S CAPITAL.

Disposal of St. James Square—St. Clair Case a Peculiar One—Toronto's Phenomenal Growth.

Quite a tempest has been created about the prospective disposal of St. James Square, the valuable block of land bounded by Gould, Gerrard, Victoria and Church streets, in the centre of which stands the venerable building housing the Education Department and Normal School. For reasons of convenience the Education Department is to forsake the precincts that have known it since the days of Egerton Ryerson, and henceforth will be housed with the other departments of government in the Parliament Buildings, a section of the new wing being designed for that special purpose. As to any removal of the Normal School or Provincial Museum no announcement has yet been made. But an official statement, the other day, calling for offers for the whole Normal School property caused everyone to jump to the conclusion that the Government was offering it for sale.

Immediately the city press and officials and citizens generally, perhaps with something of the spirit which has earned for Toronto the nickname of "Hogtown," began to clamor that the property should not be sold, but that it should be presented to the corporation of Toronto as a public park. The modesty of the request is appreciated when it is stated that St. James Square is worth approximately one million dollars, although it is only a little patch of land bounded by one city block on each side.

TORONTO'S MORAL RIGHT.

Toronto's argument is that originally the Provincial government paid only $18,000 for the square, that the tremendous increase has been brought about by reason of the city's growth and improvements, and that therefore the "unearned increment" is the city's by moral right. It is also pointed out that the property has enjoyed exemption from taxes, which according to the sensationally displayed figuring of one paper, would have amounted to upwards of $300,000. But no one has pointed out that while the Province has benefited by the increase in values in Toronto, the city of Toronto has in its turn benefited to an untold amount by having had located here the Normal School and the Department of Education.

Some of the papers have been kicking up a great fuss about the matter. But, meanwhile, Sir James Whitney sits tight. A deputation from the City Council interviewed him, but they lost courage to ask him for a gift of the property. Their only request was that the city be given a chance to buy before the Square was sold to a private individual, and this Sir James readily assented to. There is a suspicion that the Premier has no intention of selling the property, and that he merely wanted to find out what its actual value is. If this is the case he must be enjoying the storm that is being waged.

Everyone is agreed that it would be a calamity if the property passed into private hands, and this breathing spot in one of the most congested districts was closed up. But if it is to become a city park the difference of opinion arises as to whether the city ought not to pay for it.

THE CASE OF REV. R. B. ST. CLAIR.

One of the strangest prosecutions Toronto has seen in a long time was the trial of Rev. R. B. St. Clair, secretary of an organization known as the Toronto Vigilance Committee, on a charge of circulating obscene literature. Many persons who have come in contact with Mr. St. Clair and the Vigilance Committee which he brought into being, have not been disposed to take him over seriously. He has not been in Toronto long, and since his sojourn here he has evinced something like a monomania on the subject of clearing up vice. This is the kind of job that many very good people prefer to leave to some one else, and wish it done with a minimum of publicity. But among many activities Mr. St. Slair did one thing that got him into the spotlights. He attended a performance at one of the burlesque houses and wrote out a description of what he saw, which he mailed to a number of men and women, chiefly clergymen and others specially interested in the suppression of vice. Now, this performance had been passed upon by the local police officers as a fit and decent show, proper for public presentation. But immediately Mr. St. Clair sent a description of it to a few friends he was arrested (not summoned) by the same police department on the charge of circulating obscene literature.

In defence of the police action it is stated that Mr. St. Clair's description was not warranted by the actual performance, but as to this there is conflicting evidence. Substantial witnesses supporting Mr. St. Clair's drastic condemnation of the show were not wanting at the trial, and the whole affair has served to arouse much bitter feeling against the class of performance put on at these burlesque theatres. They are attended chiefly by men and boys, a woman being only occasionally seen in the audiences. They draw houses ranging from 1,000 to 1,500 each at each one of 12 performances a week, every afternoon and evening, and as their prices are not particularly cheap they are veritable gold mines for the proprietors. Smoking is allowed, and the whole atmosphere is not particularly elevating, to say the least.

TORONTO GROWING LIKE A WEED.

The completion of the city's assessment on which taxes for the year 1913 will be paid shows that the total assessment has increased in a year by the remarkable figure of $85,000,000, and the aggregate now stands at $426,500,000. These figures are eloquent of the city's growth. Over half of the increase was made in ward three, which includes Yonge street, where there has not been so much actual growth as there has been increase in values, caused by the general growth of the city, and while in some instances on Yonge and nearby streets assessments have been doubled over last year, they are, in all cases, still far below selling values.

The assessors' estimate of population is 410,000. It is admitted, however, that assessors never get them all, so that the police census of 425,000 probably most accurately represents the present size of this centre. The increase in a year has been 35,000, and this does not include annexations. In a decade Toronto's population has increased by 106 per cent. a record not equalled by any other city of 400,000 population in America. Detroit, which in that period has become the "capital of the automobile industry," has the next best record, namely 91 per cent., but Toronto's growth has not been confined to any one industry. Then comes Pittsburg with 86 per cent., Cleveland with 70 per cent., New York with 47 per cent., Buffalo 42 per cent., Chicago and St. Louis 33 per cent., Philadelphia 23 per cent., and San Francisco 22 per cent. Los Angeles is the only city of approximately Toronto's size that has enjoyed a higher rate of growth. It has now about 375,000 and ten years ago was nowhere. Toronto is now the twelfth city in America. These boastings as to growth and size are becoming the everyday stock in trade of the average citizen's conversation, but under the circumstances a little boasting may be forgiven.

BALL TEAM'S JOB ENDED.

The winning of the pennant by the Toronto Baseball team does not seem to have created the enthusiasm that the same feat did five years ago. But the performance was clean-cut and altogether creditable, and the fans are happy. Meanwhile the players, referred to jocularly as the "hired help," have hurried off to their respective homes, all far south of the boundary line, with the exception of the solitary home brew, O'Hara, who is a product of our own corner lots. In the winter time "Bill," in partnership with "Jack" White, another baseball star, runs a billiard and pool room in his home town. Most of the others likewise have profitable winter occupations which supplement the substantial salaries they draw in the summer time as ball players. Some are dentists, others have shops and others are in other lines of business. "Joe" Kelly, the manager, lives in Baltimore. His father-in-law is the democratic "boss" there and as such is said to hold in the hollow of his hand all the municipal and other patronage of that large city. They do say that "Joe" himself goes on the pay roll at the rate of $5 a day and that his official title is that of messenger.

Next year the championship winners will all be back, barring accidents, as the only man drafted by the big leagues was Fisher, a catcher who did not make good and was farmed out to a minor league team. Of course, some of the stars may be sold, but this is unlikely, as the owners are understood to have made money, and therefore are not likely to liquidate their talent. So that the prospects for good ball in 1913 are rosy.

LACROSSE IN THE DOLDRUMS.

In contrast to the prosperity in baseball is the financial difficulty that all the big lacrosse clubs find themselves in. Without exception they have lost money. They have paid fancy salaries and have drawn poor gates, sometimes only a few hundred people. Mr. R. J. Fleming got the coveted championship with his Torontos, but he is reported to have lost the most money of all, because he paid the highest salaries. Friends of lacrosse are earnestly discussing the question of what is wrong with Canada's national game that it has lost its attractiveness to the public. Some advocate a lacrosse commission, which would keep salaries within bounds and control other matters connected with the game. But this, while it might save some money would not overcome public apathy. No letter of explanation of that indifference has yet been forthcoming than that the game was killed by long years of mismanagement in which foul tactics were tacitly encouragaged finally resulting in public disgust. Now it is found the game cannot be reinstated in a day. It will probably take many long years of conscientious work to overcome the effects of the period of former disastrous policy.

LIFE SENTENCE FOR MURDERER

W. A. Ferguson Convicted by Jury at Detroit for the Murder of Herbert.

A despatch from Detroit says: Although himself admitting that he had shot down a fellow man in cold blood and notwithstanding that the murder was witnessed by at least half a dozen persons, William A. Ferguson, slayer of Herbert H. Herbert, the Canadian immigration inspector, will escape the death penalty. Ferguson's trial ended at 3.25 o'clock Friday afternoon when, after concluding arguments by the Government and the defence, the case went to the jury. Deliberating a little more than half an hour, the verdict was returned finding Ferguson "guilty of murder in the first degree without capital punishment."

Judge Sessions then pronounced sentence as follows:—"The verdict of the jury is a fair one and there is only one sentence which I can pronounce. The sentence of the court is that you be confined in the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, with hard labor for the rest of your natural life."

The prisoner displayed not the slightest sign of feeling. His hard, lined face, which a several days' growth of beard only made appear the more dogged, was turned towards the bench where the judge sat. His gnarled fingers twitched convulsively once or twice, but beyond this there was nothing to indicate that he had a full appreciation of his position.

In his closing plea for the defence, Attorney James H. Pound painted a word picture of the circumstances which led up to and which caused Ferguson to take the life of Inspector Herbert. "Here was a British subject longing to get back to his native land," he said. "But as he touched foot upon Canadian shores he was met by these petty officials and turned back, rejected and insulted. For this, and for the affection he showed his country, William A. Ferguson is being put behind walls of steel and stone for the remainder of his life." The main argument of the counsel for defence was justification.

TURN YOUR TIME INTO MONEY

There is a firm in Toronto who give hundreds of men and women an opportunity to earn from $250.00 to $1,500.00 every year with but little effort. This firm manufactures reliable family remedies, beautiful toilet preparations and many necessary household goods, such as baking powder, washing compounds, stove, furniture and metal polishes, in all over one hundred preparations that every home uses every day. SEARCH FOR WEAPONS.

Brantford Grand Jury Advises Periodic Examination.

A despatch from Brantford says: The Grand Jury at the Assizes here in its presentment to Mr. Justice Riddell, the presiding judge, made the following recommendation:—

"Owing to the prevalence of crimes of violence amongst the foreign immigrants by reason of their possession of firearms, knives, and other dangerous weapons, we believe that for the protection of the community a periodical search for and confiscation of such weapons would be advisable, and we would accordingly strongly recommend the same."

DESPONDENT, SEEKS DEATH.

Hangs Himself on Hearing He Had Consumption.

A despatch from Montreal says: Despondent because he had learned that he was suffering from consumption, Jacob Atlas, who came here recently from Sudbury, Ont., committed suicide in a Craig Street west boarding house by hanging.

MARCONI IN AUTO WRECK.

Wireless Inventor Suffering From Serious Injuries.

A despatch from Spezia, Italy, says: William Marconi, of wireless fame, was injured in an automobile accident near Borghetto, in the valley of the Vara River. The extent of his injuries has not been disclosed, but he was brought back with bandages around his head. He was suffering from a wound of the right eye and his right cheek and temple were badly bruised.

Marconi was motoring with his wife when in turning a sharp curve the machine came into collision with another automobile. Both cars were overturned. Mrs. Marconi was not injured, but Marconi's secretary and chauffeur received slight injuries. In the other car were five women, all of whom were found to be suffering from severe bruises and shock.

BLUEJACKETS LANDED.

Will Protect Foreign Property on the Island of Samos.

Constantinople, Sept. 26.—British and French bluejackets have been landed at the Island of Samos to protect the Conculates and foreign property during the fighting between the Turks and the rebels. The town of Vathy is now apparently peaceable, the insurgents having withdrawn to the hills when the Turks landed.

TWO CENT RATE TO CUBA.

Letters Go For That Sum Now to North American Nations.

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—A convention has been concluded between Canada and Cuba, bringing into force between the two countries a postal rate of two cents per ounce. Cuba was almost the only country left in North America with which Canada had no such arrangement.

WORK AND WORRY WEAKEN WOMEN

It is useless to tell a hard-working woman to take life easily and not to worry. Every woman at the head of a home; every girl in offices, shops and factories, is subject to more or less worry. These cannot be avoided. But it is the duty of every woman and every girl to save her strength as much as possible and to build up her system to meet any unusual demands. Her future health depends upon it. To guard against a breakdown in health the blood must be kept rich, red and pure. Nothing can keep the blood in this condition so well as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They strengthen the nerves, restore the appetite, bring the glow of health to pallid cheeks, and renewed energy to listless people. Women cannot always rest when they should, but they can keep their strength and keep disease away by the occasional use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Or, if a breakdown has come unexpectedly they can obtain new health through this same medicine. Mrs. M. Thomas, River street, Toronto, says: "For several years I was almost a constant invalid, unable to do my housework and spending much of my time in bed. My nerves seemed worn out and I was so run down that all my friends thought I was in a hopeless decline. I was as pale as a corpse; I was so bloodless that if I cut my finger it would not bleed; my limbs were swollen far beyond their usual size. At the least exertion my heart would palpitate violently, and I frequently had fainting spells. I was under treatment by good doctors, but it did me no good. Then one day my husband brought home some Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I began taking them. They seemed to go to the root of the trouble, and in the course of a few weeks the improvement they were making was quite plain. Gradually as I continued taking the Pills the swelling of my limbs disappeared; the weak spells came less and less frequently; my appetite greatly improved, and finally I was completely cured and able to do my housework with ease. Later, my daughter Elma seemed to be troubled with anaemia, and we gave her the Pills with the same good results."

Why suffer in any way when you can begin curing yourself to-day with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SNIPS ABOUT SHARKS.

While the whale is regarded as the largest of creatures that haunt the sea, there are some sharks that can be compared in size with the former animals. These giant sharks, however, are very rare, and are known under the name of the great whale shark and the basking shark. The former, which attains a length of fifty feet, is found off the coast of India, Peru, and Lower California. The latter's most favorite haunt is the Arctic Ocean; but it is also found near the great whale shark. These monsters, curiously enough, are quite harmless. Their teeth are very small, and they feed on tiny matter that floats on the surface of the sea. This matter the fish strains through its enormous gill rakers.

Specialist Did Skin Trouble No Good

Very Itchy and Disfiguring. Got a Little Cuticura Soap and Ointment and Was Cured.

"For two summers I suffered with skin trouble on my arms, and on my legs from my knees down. My arms were badly disfigured, and I kept them covered. It came like the hives, and was very itchy. I consulted a specialist, who gave me medicine, as well as an ointment, but seemed to do no good. It was beginning to appear on my face.

"I got a little Cuticura Ointment and some Cuticura Soap. The first touch of Ointment seemed to relieve, and before the Cuticura Ointment was finished I was cured. I have not the least sign of trouble. I think it would have spread over my whole body if Cuticura Soap and Ointment had not cured me. I am delighted with them, and do feel pleased to think I have something I have confidence in. I tell all my friends about them, and I think Cuticura Ointment is the best I ever saw." (Signed) M. J. Boddy, 73 McCaul St., Toronto, Dec. 22, 1910.

Cold-Sore Began to Heal With First Use of Cuticura Ointment.

"Cuticura Ointment cured a very bad cold-sore that gave me hours of severe pain and loss of sleep. I tried lots of other remedies but nothing did me any good till I tried Cuticura Ointment, and from the very first application it began to heal and now there is not even a scar left." (Signed) Mrs. W. Boyce, Mermaid Farm, P.E.I., Jan. 8, '11.

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have afforded the speediest, safest and most economical treatment for skin and scalp troubles, of young and old. Although they are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a liberal sample of each may be obtained free, from the Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole props., 57 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

A CENTENARIAN.

A wonderful span of life was that of John Pipher, of 16 Archer street, Toronto, whose death occurred last week. During his 103 years Canada has grown from a series of little-valued colonies to a united nation. Many of the greatest inventions have been achieved. There have been half a dozen British sovereigns. Three generations have come and gone. A few events might be recalled to illustrate the happenings of this one lifetime.

Although further importation of slaves into Upper Canada had been forbidden in 1793, slavery still existed in York (Toronto) until two years after John Pipher was born.

He was three years old when the war of 1812 took place; twenty-eight when the insurrection of 1837 took place. He remembered it well.

He was thirty-two when responsible government was achieved, with the union of Upper and Lower Canada.

He was far past the ordinary "prime of life"—a man of 58—at Confederation.

He had lived under George III., the Regency, George IV., William IV., Victoria, Edward VII., George V.

There were 25 Governors of Canada and Governors-General of the Dominion during his lifetime.

The Accommodation, first steamer to navigate the St. Lawrence, made the journey from Montreal to Quebec, three days being consumed in making the down-trip of 180 miles.

At that time the only canals in Canada were the Coteau du Lac, Cascades, and Sault Ste. Marie.

John Pipher was a lad of sixteen when George Stephenson completed the first railway in England. He was twentyseven when the first railway was opened in Canada, namely, the Champion and St. Lawrence.

A Canadian-built vessel, the Royal William, had the distinction of being the first in the world to cross the Atlantic by steam power alone. But Pipher was a man of twenty-four when that occurred.

Up to the date of his birth, there had been only fifteen newspapers established in Canada.

St. John, N.B., was the only incorporated city.

There were probably six hundred souls in York (Toronto), and 80,000 white in Upper Canada.

The first Canadian bank note was not issued until Pipher was eight years old.

He was thirty-eight when the first telegraph wires were strung in Canada; sixty-eight—almost at the allotted plan—when Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone.

Revive the Jaded Condition.—When energy flags and the cares of business become irksome; when the whole system is out of sorts and there is general depression, try Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. They will regulate the action of a deranged stomach and a disordered liver, and make you feel like a new man. No one need suffer a day from debilitated digestion when so simple and effective a pill can be got at any drug store.

HE KNEW.

"Tommy," the schoolma'am asked, "why are you scratching your head?"

SILK FROM HORSE FLESH.

German chemists are reported to have succeeded in utilizing fibrous animal refuse—such as the flesh of dead horses—for making artificial silk. Treatment with acids disintegrates the flesh into its ultimate fibres, and these are given a silky appearance, with great durability, by a kind of tanning process. The threads produced greatly resemble those of the wild silkworm, are about two inches long. They may be vulcanized like true silk, and can be made airtight and watertight by immersion for a couple of hours in a caoutchouc bath under a pressure of four atmospheres. The material seems to promise something cheaper than silk for balloon envelopes, insulation, etc., though attempts to spin the fibres into threads have not yet been successful.

JUMBLE OF ALL THE AGES.

Cairo a Mixture of the Antique and the Modern.

What were my first impressions of Cairo? Perhaps I was rather disappointed, or perhaps it was merely that I was feeling decidedly shaky as a result of a desperate passage from Liverpool, says a writer in the Christian Herald. At any rate it struck me at first that the whole place was frightfully modern. The street cars, the hotels, the carriages and automobiles, with their fashionable English and American occupants, even the pedestrians, seemed prosiacally up-to-date. But this was an impression which did not last; for in the native quarters of the city you may see Cairo to-day as it was a thousand years ago, and even on the most fashionable thoroughfares you will frequently witness scenes which will carry you back into by-gone ages—scenes which the dominant modern note merely serves to throw into strong relief.

I have specially in mind the old water-sellers, with their ancient jars and goat-skins thrown over their backs. It is interesting to see these old fellows parading up and down on the sidewalk, mingling with the up-to-date citizens of the present day. The same contrast is noticeable out on the street. An automobile of the latest design is followed (more leisurely!) by a camel mounted by an Arab of the desert. Below the waist his body sways to and fro in rhythmic accord with the absolutely noiseless tread of the great clumsy animal. And the man himself gazes silently and steadily straight ahead, looking neither to the right hand nor to the left, as if there was nothing in front of him but limitless miles of sand. One cannot fail to be impressed by this striking blend of ancient and modern.

HARD TO SEE.

Even When the Facts are Plain.

It is curious how people will refuse to believe what one can clearly see.

Tell the average man or woman that the slow but cumulative poisonous effect of caffein—the alkaloid in tea and coffee—tends to weaken the heart, upset the nervous system and cause indigestion, and they may laugh at you if they don't know the facts.

Prove it by science or by practical demonstration in the recovery of tea and coffee drinkers from the above conditions, and a large per cent. of the human family will shrug their shoulders, take some drugs and—keep on drinking tea or coffee.

"Coffee never agreed with me nor with several members of our household," writes a lady. "It enervates, depresses and creates a feeling of langor and heaviness. It was only by leaving off coffee and using Postum that we discovered the cause and way out of these ills.

"The only reason, I am sure, why Postum is not used altogether to the exclusion of ordinary coffee is, many persons do not know and do not seem willing to learn the facts and how to prepare this nutritious beverage. There's only one way—according to directions—boil it fully 15 minutes. Then it is delicious." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE DEPTH OF MEANNESS.

Little Jonas was the son of penurious parents, and the son bade fair to outdo them in frugality—a fact that worked extreme hardship upon Bobby Graves, his seatmate.

Bobby came home one night looking so depressed that his mother asked the cause of his trouble.

"It's that Jone Peterbo!" burst out Bobby. "He's just about the meanest thing! He eats my apples all up, and he never gives me even a bite offen his, an' my apples are good an' his ain't—very! An' today he made me do his 'rithmetic zamples, 'cause he didn't know how, an' he wouldn't even lend me his pencil to do 'em with!"

THE QUEEREST ONES.

"I suppose," said the city man, "there are some queer characters around an old village like this."

"You'll find a good many," admitted the native, "when the hotels fill up."

Sardines! Certainly; they are always acceptable if they are really Sardines. If they are FOREIGN BELIEFS.

Some Curious Superstitions Are Indulged In.

In Spain the wedding is spoiled if one of the guests appears entirely in black, or if the bride looks into a mirror after orange blossoms and veil are fast in her headdress.

When a person's hair ends split, it's taken by the superstitious for a sign that she is either a witch or has been bewitched. As blond hair splits more readily than dark hair, all witches, spirits and sorceresses have blond or red hair, according to popular belief. Likewise, according to the standard of art.

On the marriage eve there is often much good-natured rivalry between the groom and the bride in the Slav countries as to who shall blow out the candle, for the person who does will be "first to die." It is impossible to trace the origin of this superstition, yet it prevails in aristocratic society as well as in the peasant's hut, even as like this, that "to insure the life and health of the children" the woman must occupy the right side of the bed. In addition, she must not smoke before her forty-fifth year.

There is a superstition in this country and many others against burning a broom. The bud of birch broom is used in Southern Germany as a preventive against erysipelas. These buds, a piece of yellow wax and some other articles are enclosed in a pink silk bag, scoured with red silk and worn on the back of the neck. The person must change his shirt every Friday.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia.

THE USUAL WAY.

He—"You know, my dear, X is an unknown quantity."

She—"I know it is. I've never seen one since I married you."

It Bids Pain Begone. — When neuralgia racks the nerves or lumbago cripples the back is the time to test the virtues of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Well rubbed in it will still the pain and produce a sensation of ease and rest. There is nothing like it as a liniment for its curative properties are great. A trial of it will establish faith in it.

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

AN ENDURING EPISODE.

"I suppose you and your wife can remember your first quarrel," said the meddlesome person.

"Remember it!" returned Mr. Growcher; "I should say so. It isn't over yet."

Corns cause much suffering, but Holloway's Corn Cure offers a speedy, sure, and satisfactory relief.

VERY SIMPLE.

A rather simple-looking lad halted before a blacksmith's shop on his way home from school and eyed the doings of the proprietor with much interest.

The brawny smith, dissatisfied with the boy's curiosity, held a piece of red-hot iron suddenly under the youngster's nose, hoping to make him beat a hasty retreat.

"If you'll give me half a dollar I'll lick it," said the lad.

The simple-looking youngster took the coin, licked it, dropped it in his pocket and slowly walked away whistling.

A VERSATILE CHILD.

The little girl was having a great deal of trouble pronouncing some of the words she met with. "Vinegar" had given her the most trouble, and she was duly grieved to know the village was being entertained by her efforts in this direction.

She was one day sent to the store with the vinegar-jug, to get it filled, and had no intention of amusing the people who were gathered in the store. So she handed the jug to the clerk with:

"Smell the mouth of it and give me a quart."

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is insured against blood poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk.

Again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or to a diseased part, the cells beneath the skin's surface are so stimulated that new healthy tissue is quickly formed. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day Mr. Marsh, of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Company and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured, and has had no trace of any return of the eczema!

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, or we will send free trial box if you send this advertisement and a 1c. stamp (to pay return postage). Address Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

UNCONTROLLABLE.

"Your daughter has so much temperament."

"I am not sure what you call it. All I know is that her mother and I can't do anything with her."

Hope for the Chronic Dyspeptic.—Through lack of consideration of the body's needs many persons allow disorders of the digestive apparatus to endure until they become chronic, filling days and nights with suffering. To these a course of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is recommended as a sure and speedy way to regain health. These pills are specially compounded to combat dyspepsia and the many ills that follow in its train, and they are successful always.

WHERE LOVE IS.

A little girl was lost on the street, and was brought into the police-station. The officers tried in every way to learn her name. Finally one of the officers said:

"Tell me, little girl, what name does your mother call your father?"

"Why," responded the child, innocently, "she don't call him any names; she likes him."

NEARLY A FIRE.—An incipient fire was nipped in the bud on Simcoe street Saturday night last. While coming up town Mrs. and Mrs Frank Mallett noticed a blaze at the rear of Mr. John Northcott's dwelling and on further investigation it was found that a fire had broken out in the woodshed and was making rapid headway. It had burned through the siding and was fast approaching the top of the building. Mr. Mallett gave the alarm and it took numerous buckets of water to subdue the blaze. The fire is supposed to have originated by the top of a match flying off and communicating with some rubbish in the shed.

HICKS' FORECAST FOR OCTOBER.—A Regular Storm Period, central on the 9th, covers the 7th to the 12th. Earth Mercury and "Vulcan" will unite in this period, with Moon at perigee on the 7th; on the equator on the 8th, and new, at a total eclipse node, on the 10th. Great atmospheric disturbances are probable at this period. Severe West India storms are very likely, and the barometer readings should be carefully watched along all southern coast region. Tidal disturbances are to be expected Thunder, rain and high winds will visit many interior parts of the country, turning in northern sections to sleet and snow. An early cold wave, for the season, will come with the rising barometer behind these storms, sending frosty nights far toward the south. A very marked seismic period involves the 7th to the 13th, central on the 10th.

WORTHY CITIZENS LEAVE TOWN.

Mr. John J. Knight, who for the past twelve years has been Grand Trunk Station agent here, and, who for a number of years previous to that, was operator for the G. T. Mr Herb. Southcott left Friday to take a situation with The T. Eaton Co., Toronto. On Thursday evening the ladies of J. A. Stewart's store presented him with a signet ring, and a number of the boys presented him with signet cuff links, after which they partook of a supper at E. A. Follick's.

We should always remember that it is quite possible to improve the conditions and outward surroundings of life without in any way improving life itself. The man who has come up from a three roomed cottage to live in a hundred thousand dollar mansion may be a better man or a worse man than he was; the house he lives in will never help us to decide the question of his morality or of his real worth. Clean streets and improved social conditions are good, and we must strive for them with persistent determination but if in getting them we do not at the same time improve the quality of life that is lived in the midst of them we will not be making any progress that is worth while.

Hudson visited her parents at Grand Bend.

Married.—One of these events that arouses a pleasant interest in the neighbood occurred at Mr. J. Carruther's home last Wednesday when his daughter Irene became the bride of Mr. Roy Hutchinson, a prosperous farmer of Willis West. The bride, tastefully gowned in white, entered the parlor to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Maud Hodgins. Her sister, Miss Jean gracefully performed the duties of bride's maid, while the groom's brother, Leslie, assisted him. After Rev. Farney of Parkhill had pronounced them man and wife, and the seventy guests present had offered their congratulations to the happy couple, they all went to the dining-room where a sumptuous repast was served. Among the guests present which consisted of relatives only, was the bride's great grand-mother, Mrs. Phillips. Many handsome and useful presents testified to the popularity of the young couple, and many friends wish them life-long happiness and prosperity.

If any one had told Roy that his fate was to be seriously affected by Mrs. James Horner, he would scarcely have credited the idea. If the life at Rowan Tree House had gone on without interruption, if Sigrid had been unable to find work and had been at perfect leisure to consider Roy's wooing, it is quite probable that in a few weeks their friendship might have ended in betrothal. But Mrs. James Horner gave a children's party, and this fact changed the whole aspect of affairs.

"It is, as you say, rather soon after my poor uncle's death for us to give a dance," said Mrs. Horner, as she sat in the drawing-room of Rowan Tree House discussing the various arrangements. "But you see it is dear Mamie's birthday, and I do not like to disappoint her; and Madame Lechertier has taken the idea up so warmly, and has promised to come as a spectator. It was at her suggestion that we made it a fancy-dress affair."

"Who is Madame Lechertier?" asked Sigrid, who listened with all the interest of a foreigner to these details.

"She is a very celebrated dancing mistress," explained Cecil. "I should like you to see her, for she is quite a character."

"Miss Falck will, I hope, come to our little entertainment," said Mrs. Horner, graciously. For, although she detested Frithiof, she had been, against her will, charmed by Sigrid. "It is, you know, quite a small affair—about fifty children, and only from seven to ten. I would not for the world shock the congregation, Loveday, so I mean to make it all as simple as possible. I do not know that I shall even have ices."

"My dear, I do not think ices would shock them," said Mrs. Boniface, "though I should think perhaps they might not be wholesome for little children who have got heated with dancing."

"Oh, I don't really think they'll be shocked at all," said Mrs. Horner, smiling. "James could do almost anything before they'd be shocked. You see, he's such a benefactor to the chapel and is so entirely the leading spirit, why, where would they be without him"

Mrs. Boniface murmured some kindly reply. It was quite true, as she knew very well. James Horner was so entirely the rich and generous head of the congregation that everything had to give way to him, and the minister was not a little hampered in consequence.

Whether Mr. Boniface entirely approved of this children's fancy-dress dance, Sigrid could not feel sure. She fancied that in spite of all his kindly tolerant spirit he had an innate love of the older forms of Puritanism, and that his quiet, home-keeping nature could not understand at all the enjoyment of dancing or of character-dresses.

At length the great day came, and Mr. Boniface and Roy on their return from town were greeted by a bewitching little figure on the stairs, with curly hair combed out to its full length and a dainty suit of crimson velvet trimmed with gold lace.

"Why, who are you?" said Mr. Boniface, entering almost unconsciously into the fun of the masquerade.

"I'm Cinderella's prince," shouted Lance, gleefully, and in the highest spirits the little fellow danced in to show Frithiof his get-up. Frithiof, who had been tired and depressed all day, brightened up at once when Lance, who was very fond of him, came to sit on his knee in that ecstasy of happy impatience which one only sees in children.

"What is the time now?" he asked every two minutes. "Do you think it will soon be time to go? Don't you almost think you hear the carriage coming?"

"As for me," said Sigrid, "I feel like Cinderella before the fairy godmother came. "You are sure Mrs. Horner will not mind this ordinary black gown?"

"Oh, dear, no," said Cecil. "You see, she herself is in mourning; and besides, you look charming, Sigrid."

"I wish you could come too," said Cecil, glancing at Frithiof, while she swathed the little prince in a thick plaid. "It will be very pretty to see all the children in costume."

"Yes," he replied; "but my head would never stand the noise and the heat. I am better here."

"We shall take great care of him," said Mrs. Boniface; "and you must tell us all about it afterward. Don't keep Lance up late if he seems to get tired, dearie. Goodbye, and mind you enjoy yourself."

A children's party generally does call out whatever good there is in people. It was, moreover, the first really gay scene which had met Sigrid's eyes for nearly a year, and she enjoyed to the full the quaint little cavaliers, the tiny court ladies, with their powdered hair and their patches; the Red Ridinghoods and Bo-peeps; the fairies and the peasants; the Robin Hoods and Maid Marians. The dancing was going on merrily when Mme. Lechertier was announced, and Sigrid looked up with interest to see what the lady who was pronounced to be "quite a character" was like. She saw a tall and wonderfully graceful woman, with an expressive but plain face. In repose her expression was decidedly autocratic, but she had a most charming smile, and a perfect manner. The Norwegian girl took a great fancy to her, and the feeling was mutual, for the great Mme. Lechertier, who, it was rumored, was of a keenly critical disposition instantly noticed her, and turned to the hostess with an eager question.

"What a charming face that golden-haired girl has!" she said, in her outspoken and yet courteous way. "With all her simplicity there is such a pretty little touch of dignity. See how perfect her bow is! What is her name? And may I not be introduced to her?"

"She is a friend of my cousin's," explained Mrs. Horner. "She is a Norwegian, and her name is Falck."

Sigrid liked the bright, clever, majestic-looking French-woman better than ever after she had talked with her. There was, indeed, in Mme. Lechertier something very refreshing.

The pianist, a pale, worn-looking lady, whose black silk dress had an ominously shiny back, which told its tale of poverty, all at once broke down, and her white face touched Sigrid's heart.

"I think she is faint," she exclaimed. "Do you think I might offer to play for her?"

"It is a kind thought," said Mme. Lechertier. She played extremely well, and being herself a born dancer, entered into the spirit of the waltz in a way which her predecessor had wholly failed to do. Mme. Lechertier was delighted, and when by and by Sigrid was released she rejoined her, and refused to be borne off to the supper-room by Mr. Horner.

"No, no," she said; "let the little people be attended to first. Miss Falck and I mean to have a quiet talk here."

So Sigrid told her something of her life at Bergen, and of the national love of music and dancing, and thoroughly interested her.

"And when do you return?" asked Mme. Lechertier.

"That depends on whether I can find work in England," replied Sigrid. "What I wish is to stay in London with my brother. He has been very ill, and I do not think he ought to live alone."

"What sort of work do you wish for?" asked Mme. Lechertier.

"I would do anything," said Sigrid. "But the worst of it is everything is so crowded already, and I have no very special talent."

"My dear," sail Mme. Lechertier, "it seems to me you have a very decided talent. You play dance music better than any one I ever heard, and that is saying a good deal. Why do you not turn this to account?"

"Do you think I could?" asked Sigrid, her eyes lighting up eagerly. "Do you really think I could earn my living by it?"

"I feel sure of it," said Mme. Lechertier. "And if you seriously think the idea is good I will come and discuss the matter with you. I hear you are a friend of my old pupil, Miss Boniface."

"Yes, we are staying now at Rowan Tree House; they have been so good to us."

"They are delightful people—the father is one of nature's true gentlemen. I shall come and see you, then, and talk this over. To-morrow morning, if that will suit you."

AN AUTUMN FROCK.

The little French trotting frock illustrated above shows the pannier overskirt, which is really only a section of drapery turned in and upward all round. The lavish use of buttons and the huge size of the big black velvet osprey-trimmed hat are also features of the season's fancy.

Sigrid went home in high spirits, and the next day, when as usual she and Frithiof were alone in the morning-room after breakfast, she told him of Mme. Lechertier's proposal, and while they were still discussing the matter the good lady was announced.

Now, like many people, Mme. Lechertier was benevolent by impulse. Had Sigrid been less attractive, she would not have gone out of her way to help her; but the Norwegian girl had somehow touched her heart.

"It will be a case of 'Colors seen by candle-light will not look the same by day,'" she had reflected as she walked to Rowan Tree House. "I shall find my pretty Norse girl quite commonplace and uninteresting, and my castle in the air will fall in ruins."

But when she was shown into the room where Sigrid sat at work, all her fears vanished. "The girl has bewitched me!" she thought to herself. "And the brother, what a fine-looking fellow! There is a history behind that face if I'm not mistaken."

"We have just been talking over what you said to me last night, madame," said Sigrid, brightly.

"The question is," said Mme. Lechertier, "whether you are really in earnest in seeking work, and whether you will not object to my proposal. The fact is, that the girl who for some time has played for me at my principal classes is going to be married. I should only need you in the afternoon, and during the three terms of the year. Each term is of twelve weeks, and the salary I should offer you would be £24 a term—£2 a week, you see."

"Oh, Frithiof!" cried Sigrid, in great excitement, "we should be able to keep Swanhild. We could have her over from Norway. Surely your salary and mine together would keep us all?"

"Who is Swanhild?" asked Mme. Lechertier.

"She is our little sister, madame. She is much younger—only eleven years old, and as we are orphans, Frithiof and I are her guardians."

Mme. Lechertier looked at the two young faces, smiling to think that they should be already burdened with the cares of guardianship. It touched her, and yet at the same time it was almost comical to hear these two young things gravely talking about their ward.

"You see," said Frithiof, "there would be her education, one must not forget that."

"But at the high-schools it is very cheap, is it not, madame?" said Sigrid.

"About ten pounds a year," said Mme. Lechertier. "What is your little sister like, because if she is at all like you—"

"Here is her photograph," said Sigrid, unfastening her writing-case and taking out Swanhild's picture. "This is taken in her peasant costume which she used to wear sometimes for fun when we were in the country. It suits her very well, I think."

"But she is charming," cried Mme. Lechertier. "Such a dainty little figure—such well-shaped legs! My dear, I have a bright thought—an inspiration. Send for your little Swanhild, and when you come to me each afternoon bring her also in this fascinating costume. She shall be my little pupil-teacher, and though, of course, her earnings would be but small, yet they would more than cover her education at a high-school, and she would be learning a useful profession into the bargain."

On the Farm

WHEN TO SELL HOGS.

I write only from my own experience of over twenty years in raising hogs for the market, writes Mr. W. C. Holstand.

Different localities and different feeds make a great deal more or less profit in the keep of the hog. Some feed too long and consume part of the profit, while others feed not long enough or liberally enough to make what they ought to make.

I run all my hogs on alfalfa from birth until sold, either for breeders or for the packer, and as soon as they weigh 200 pounds each, or about that, I sell or kill them.

If you are feeding pure-blooded hogs (especially if the blood is red) they will weigh from 175 to 225 pounds each at six to eight months of age. I think seven months old is the best age, and the most profitable hog we can sell.

The younger you sell, the less risk of disease, the less trouble, time and feed it takes. The sooner you sell, the more room and the better care for the next litter.

The cheapest gain is made while the pig is small. A pig weighs about three pounds at birth. With reasonable care it will gain on an average one-fourth pound a day for the first ten to twenty days.

So you see it doubles its weight in twelve days, and at 65 cents per bushel for corn, and $1.50 for 100 pounds for shorts the first three pounds of gain cost about 3¼ cents per pound, allowing eight pigs to the litter for each sow.

I figure on the rule that it takes only a small amount of fire to heat a baling wire, but it would take a lot of fire to heat a 300 pound rod of iron.

So I say it takes a little to make a pig gain a pound per day. But it takes about eight to ten ears of corn per day and some slop to make a pig hold its own.

Some men say, if the market is low, feed longer (even though feed is high), prices may go up. Others will say, "Feed is high, I will sell (while they are not fat); prices may go down."

Don't try to get the market ready for your hogs, but get your hogs ready for the market. Sell them when they are fat and not before. Keep the kind that top the market and you will make money if feed is high.

Registered hogs gain faster, bring more money for the breeder, and make more pounds of meat out of the grain fed them than any other animal on earth.

RECLEARING OLD FIELDS.

There are many old fields that have been thrown out years ago and have so grown up with scrub timber, green briars and other filth that it looks to be almost an impossible undertaking to reclear them, says Mr. A. J. Legg.

If it be undertaken to kill them by grubbing out the briers and brush it is indeed a hard job, and the briers will sprout for years, but if the brush is hacked down and let dry, then burned over, the land can be effectually cleared by pasturing it with cattle and sheep.

A few years ago I had a field overgrown with greenbriers and pine. Ther e were patches of greenbriers so dense that it was impossible to get through them, let alone grub them out.

These thickest patches were burned through. The fire killed other briers, then in a few months they too would burn, so I made it a rule that whenever I found a patch of greenbrier dry enough to burn I would set fire to it.

The pines were all cut down, and when they got dry, they too were burned.

The briers were kept down by the stock grazing over them. Whenever a young brier appeared it was ripped up. By the end of the third year the brier roots were all rotted and the pine stumps were pretty well rotted, so that the land could be plowed.

STRANGE CUSTOMS OF INDIA.

Parrots are taught in India to spend a large portion of their time in repeating the names of gods, and such a spokesman brings a great price, especially among business men, who imagine that by owning such a parrot their spiritual treasures are accumulating while they attend to their usual occupations.

Many of the dancing girls in India, belonging to the temples, are called the wives of the gods. At an early age they are united in wedlock to the images worshipped in the temples. This strange matrimonial connection is formed in compliance with the wishes of the parents, who believe it to be a highly meritorious act to present a beautiful daughter in marriage to a senseless idol.

The only foreigner who ever saw the inside of the great Temple of Juggernaut was an English officer, who succeeded in gaining admission by painting and dressing himself like a native.

When the Brahmins discovered that their holy place had been thus defiled they became so enraged that all the English residing at the station were obliged to flee for their lives.

Suspecting their pursuers to be more desirous of gratifying their avarice than their revenge, they strewed silver money by the way, and while the natives stopped to pick it up they gained time, and succeeded in reaching a place of safety.

Write for the "Concrete Book"

IN Canada, where the winters are long and cold, houses must be solid and substantial. No "gingerbread frills," such as distinguish California bungalows, can be permitted. Canadian homes should be built to defy wind and cold, to keep warm inside when it's thirty below out-doors.

IT is because Concrete, of all materials, best withstands wind, water and cold, that it is fast becoming popular with Canadian home-builders. Concrete houses are warm in winter, requiring less coal for heating; they are cool in summer. A Concrete house never needs repairs; because, instead of decaying, it actually grows stronger with time and exposure to the elements.

VERY attractive architectural effects may be obtained with Concrete, especially for houses in the country, where the rough concrete surface harmonizes with its surroundings.

SINCE it never requires repairs, the first cost of a concrete residence is its last cost; and it is cheaper, for this reason, than any other kind of home.

NOT only is Concrete the best material for house-building. It may also be used in scores of other ways around the home and on the farm. For each of these purposes it is the best material known.

IF you haven't investigated the use of Concrete around the home and on the farm, write now for our free book, which tells all about the mixing and placing of Concrete, and describes hundreds of practical uses for it. Just say "Send me your book" in a letter or on a post card, and the book will be sent you absolutely free.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

England has found a means of dealing with the tramp which is so successful that it is predicted that in a few years the habitual vagrant will be hardly known in the country. This is the "way ticket system," by the operation of which some counties in the last year have reduced by 25 to 75 per cent. the number of vagrants passing through their workhouses.

This system gives food and shelter for a night at a workhouse to any vagrant. In the morning, when leaving, the vagrant is given a ticket, which entitles him to an allowance of bread and cheese at stations along the road he intends to take. He has thus no excuse for begging, and if he is genuinely in search of work he receives aid until he finds it. But if he is an habitual tramp he soon comes to be known at the workhouses and is treated accordingly.

Much of the success of the system depends on the co-operation of householders. An appeal by circular has been made to all householders by Mr. Watson-Watkins, secretary of the inter-county committee of the way ticket system, to refuse aid to vagrants, since every applicant is cared for at the workhouses.

Something of this sort should be applicable to every civilized country. The tramp nuisance is one of the deterrents to the enjoyment of life in many parts of this country; how to deal with it has perplexed altruists and public authorities. Every community has some institution at which food, shelter and way tickets might be given and the undeserving applicants separated from the deserving.

"If I permitted all who seek to renounce their rank to do so, I should soon be alone in my glory," the Czar of Russia is said to have remarked to his cousin, Grand Duke Gabriel Constantinovitch, when the latter asked permission to become a plain citizen in order to marry his sister's former governess.

There is perhaps no pithier comment on the penalties of royalty. Members of royal families have few opportunities to amount to something in the world through their own energies. They are secure from the fear of want and yet forbidden to mate as they choose; their lives must be regulated to their positions in a worse respect than the life of the humblest toiler; they may not do as they choose in the most essential matters.

Life is short for royalty as well as for day laborers. To make the most of one's life is to live happily as well as rightly. The "pursuit of happiness" is truly an end to be sought in the organization of a state and the moulding of society. Whoever is tempted to comment on a life of ease and so-called greatness should remember the Czar's significant utterance.

FOUNDING A SHEEP FLOCK.

Since the new edition of the bulletin, "Sheep Husbandry in Canada," was issued a few weeks ago, there has been a constant stream of requests for it flowing into the Publications Branch at Ottawa. A great many of the applicants state that they are just commencing, or are about to commence, sheep raising and that they wish to learn how to handle a flock successfully. This bulletin contains a chapter specially prepared for such persons, describing how best to establish a flock of commercial sheep. The author, Mr. J. B. Spencer, well known to many farmer readers, recommends a flock of fifteen ewes as the minimum for a farm of one hundred acres. Such a flock can be increased with experience, but not beyond twenty to twenty-five unless it is desired to make a special business of sheep raising. With the management and care described in the bulletin, an increase through lambs can be expected of from 150 to 175 per cent. and it should be the latter.

The early weeks of autumn is stated to be the best time to purchase ewes, as then one can select those that have raised good lambs.

Before the present edition of the bulletin is fully exhausted a still further one will be ordered, so that no one need hesitate about ordering a copy, which will be sent FREE to all who apply for it to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

LIFE'S SYMPATHETIC CRITIC

Jesus of Nazareth Is at Once Man's Revelation of God and God's Revelation of Man.

The only unfailing method of living the poetic life is in Him whose life was and is the greatest of epics. The poetry of Christianity may say, "I am apprehended of Christ that I may apprehend" the meaning of the world, the significance of man's life and struggle, the immeasurable hope and destiny, the open secret of Omniscient God. Only as any poetry is the result of the mutual life of mind and heart, as they are "inspired or possessed," by truth revealed to man, as he is influenced by plans higher than man's limping thought, is it a worthy "criticism of life." Only as any poetry records the supreme spiritual events, not unreasonable, but above the ken of reason alone, and visions of being to which men may aspire, is it, or can it be, a true "criticism of life." Jesus of Nazareth, as Saviour and Master, is life's truest, because life's most hopeful and sympathetic critic, flooding life's realm and process by the radiance of Himself, at once man's revelation of God and God's revelation of man.

His presence in the plan of God in the universal movement, leading "to that divine far-off event

Toward which the whole creation moves."

as the reason which was from the beginning and will be the reason for it all at the consummation. His progress through the life of man's uplooking and seeking spirit, the hope of Him which was the inevitable product of the soul as it was constituted and led by God through the evolution of its life and ideal—these are within, if they have not created that melodious tune which sings in the changing mass called nature. Poetry witnesses that these have made the "mighty riddle of that rhythmic breath" in the world of man's thought and sentiment which "suffers him not to rest." Poetry is the art which taps this central, elemental stream which "flows through all things," and, listening to its harmony, finding that it has discovered and has been made rhythmic with the musical theme, the poet's soul obeys, because it is "inspired and possessed" by this imperative cadence. When it expresses its experience with all possible fitness the result is undying verse. When it is translated into living it is the transfigured life.

Therefore the psalmists and prophets were men almost necessarily poetic. Poetry came when a Jacob wrestled until the breaking of the day with what seemed the incarnate Infinite, though it were called only an angel; or when, like Moses, a fine human eye, looking through flame and feeling that truth or goodness may not be burned, had listened to the Eternal in a burning acacia bush; or when, with the hot blast of life's problem bursting from a fiery furnace, one saw a form or when out of an abyss of despair a soul, like Job's soul, cries for a daysman that shall stand between God and man; or when a lawgiver, knowing the impotence of Sinai to govern men, looks ever so vaguely for a lawgiver whose law shall have an authority like that of Calvary, toward whose altar all other altars seem to lean. Our life is all a cry and prophecy until the ideal man comes. Whatever opinions one may entertain as to the supernatural element in Hebrew prophecy and psalmody in the sacred writings, it is impossible to suppose that minds willing to be "inspired or possessed," who are therefore poetic in temper and method, should miss the fact that nature and life are persistently enthroning a human manifestation of the divine, and that a Christmas day is drawing nigh somewhere and somewhen.

LIKE UNTO THE SON OF GOD,

Beneath all the shadowy dreams of Israel and throughout all the expectant adoration of Messiah which sang its hope in the lines of prophet or bard in Hebrewdom, not less than in that "still sad music of humanity" which rises to the lips of pagan poetry, a true philosopher of literature and religion will see man obedient and hopeful in the presence of great symbolic ideals pointing Christward. These are the crude ore of poetry. Humanity in all loftiest hours, when higher ideals have hurried men away and up and on at the cost of losing lower ideals, "has drunk of that spiritual rock which followed them; and that rock was Christ." This minstrelsy has glorified the Redeemer. It is His eternal reward in which our Saviour sees the travail of His soul and is satisfied when this poem of redeeming love is embodied by you and me as God, "the First Great Poet," was incarnated in Jesus Christ.

FRANK W. GUNSAULUS.

THANKS TO THE PUPPY

"That pup must be drowned!"

Mr. Jim Stiggings snapped up his paper, which the pup upon which he had passed sentence of death had been tearing to shreds, and scowled round at his little family.

"Please, dad—please don't drown him!" implored a freckled, red-haired youngster, rising from her seat on the rug and coming to him with tears of wistful entreaty in her eyes.

"I shall!" cried Mr. Stiggings. "He's a destructive little mongrel, ripping everything into bits that he can get his teeth into. He's ruined the back garden, and he's spoiled my best slippers, and he's pulled the kitchen hearthrug to pieces. So I'm going to drown him!"

Yap! With an upward spring, the pup had leapt at the paper which Mr. Stiggings was waving in his hand as he spoke, and had torn it from his grasp.

"That settles it!" stormed Mr. Stiggings, with the light of vengeful fire shining in his eyes. "Take him away, Trixie. And remember, I shall do away with him next Saturday afternoon in the duckpond, as sure as sure!"

The child burst into tears, and taking the pup into her motherly little arms, sat down beside the hearth to hug the doomed mongrel to her fast-beating heart. The next moment a little polite knock sounded upon the street door.

Mr. Stiggings, who went to open it, was surprised to find a stylishly-dressed gentleman bowing to her with profound respect.

"Mrs. Stiggings, perhaps?" questioned the wonderful stranger.

"Ye-es, sir," hesitated meek little Mrs. Stiggings, staring in a kind of fascination at the highly-polished silk hat which the stranger was flourishing before her eyes. "Yes, sir, this is Stiggings's Did you want Mr. Stiggings?"

The stranger having confessed that he did, Mrs. Stiggings showed him into the best room, where Mr. Stiggings joined him a moment later.

"Mr. Stiggings, I believe?" said the stranger, extending his hand, with the silkiest of smiles. "I'm glad to meet you. My name is Grime, sir. You inserted this advertisement, I believe, concerning a grocery business which you wish to buy?"

He pointed to an advertisement in a morning newspaper which he had drawn from his pocket. Mr. Stiggings nodded.

"Yes, sir," he said. "But I only want to spend two hundred pounds on it. That's all I've been able to save."

The stranger tapped Mr. Stiggings on the chest confidentially.

"Between you and me, Mr. Stiggings, it's quite enough," he said. "Yes, you can buy a really first-class business for two hundred nowadays, if you're smart. And if you care to take the 'bus to Kilburn with me, I'll take you to a shop which I have for sale at just the figure you mention."

Mr. Stiggings looked at his watch.

"All right; I'll come at once," he agreed. "We can be there and back in a couple of hours. Just wait a minute while I change my collar, and I'll be ready."

Half an hour later they were walking into a smart grocery shop in Kilburn. Three assistants and a boy were busily serving, and the counters were thronged with customers.

"It's fine!" gasped Mr. Stiggings, with his eyes shining greedily. "But surely this business isn't for sale for only two hundred pounds?"

"Sh-h! Don't speak aloud!" cautioned the frock-coated splendor at his side. "These assistants mustn't know that the business is changing hands, y'see. The owner is a retired gentleman, living in Sussex, and he doesn't want the shop staff to know that he's parting with the business until it's actually sold. It unsettles 'em, y' know." And Mr. Grime looked very sly, and winked at Stiggings with the profoundest meaning.

"To-morrow," said Mr. Grime, as they left the shop, "I'll call round to show you the books. Then we can clinch matters. Good-night! I'll be round at seven o'clock at your house."

The next evening Mr. Grime arrived with two large books, on the backs of which was boldly printed the name of "Carleybrook Road Stores, Kilburn."

Mr. Stiggings examined them, and his eyes glistened at the golden story they told. In less than half an hour his mind was fully made up. He would buy Carleybrook Road Stores for his two hundred pounds of precious savings, and then settle down to a hard-earned prosperity as a well-to-do grocer.

Mr. Grime had brought with him a number of large, important-looking documents. He was a solicitor, so he smilingly informed the worshipping Mr. Stiggings, and as a solicitor he was acting for Mr. Gelder, the owner of the business. Therefore, if Mr. Stiggings wished to settle at once, and make sure of the bargain, he might do so.

Mr. Stiggings agreed, and the other man drew out a gold-fitter fountain-pen, and filled in the deeds which were to make Carleybrook Road Stores the property of Mr. James Stiggings. Mr. Stiggings also affixed his signature, and Mrs. Stiggings was excavated from the washing cellar as act as a witness.

"It only requires Mr. Gelder's signature now," said the gentlemanly Grime. "I'll motor down to Sussex to-morrow, and if you post your cheque to him to-night he will be able to send you the deeds by return. Here is his card, with the address to which you'll need send the cheque. Good-night."

The moment Mr. Grime had gone, Mr. Stiggings wrote his cheque, and enclosed it, with a respectful little note, in an envelope addressed to Horace Gelder, Esq., of Branscombe, Horstown, Sussex. Then he wrote half a dozen other letters of delight to his relatives and friends, telling them of his wonderful bargain.

Two days later Mr. Stiggings went down to Kilburn to visit his property. He was impatient for the joy of telling the awed assistants that henceforth he was their lord and master.

He entered the shop, and spoke to the oldest salesman, a clean, tidy-looking man, with a goatee tuft and quick, roving eyes.

"Wha—what!" almost screamed the elderly salesman, in response to Mr. Stiggings's smiling announcement. "What? You've bought my shop?"

"Yours!" gasped Mr. Stiggings. "But—but you're not Horace Gelder, are you?"

The clean-looking man suddenly became calm and firm.

"Look here," he said; "you clear out of my shop at once, and don't let's have any more of it!"

"Your shop! Why, I've bought it! I've paid for it!" screamed Mr. Stiggings.

"George," said the clean man, fiercely calm, turning to an assistant, "go for a policeman."

In a towering rage, Mr. Stiggings waited for the arrival of the constable. The moment he appeared, Stiggings dashed to his side and told him his story.

The policeman scratched his head.

"You've been swindled, sir," he explained thoughtfully. "I've heard of this trick before. The books he showed you, and the title deeds you signed, were all frauds, written up for the purpose. Was this Mr. Grime a tall, well-dressed man, with a gash across his upper lip?"

"Ye-es," faltered Mr. Stiggings, beginning to feel a curious emptiness below his chest.

"Ah, he's a trickster, who's always up to this sort of thing!" announced the constable, making a few notes in his pocket-book. "And by this time he'll have cashed your cheque and made off."

"Horace Gelder and Mr. Grime are the same man, you see," returned the constable, smiling unsympathetically.

Mr. Stiggings telegraphed to the bank; then he walked sadly home. He felt that he couldn't afford even a 'bus fare.

It was certainly cruel luck. His savings of twenty years were gone. Mr. Grime's neat trickery, in pretending to sell a shop which didn't belong to him, had robbed poor Stiggings of nearly every penny he had in the world.

Only one thought helped to calm Mr. Stiggings's furious rage. It was now Saturday afternoon, and he could kill that pup!

"I'll drown the ugly little mongrel the minute I get home!" decided Mr. Stiggings, with savage emphasis. "I'll tie a brick to his neck, and heave him into the duckpond, the mischievous, destructive little wretch!"

This decision was strengthened by the news with which he was greeted by Mrs. Stiggings, that the pup had spent the morning in tearing Trixie's best slippers into ribbons.

"I'll drown him!" muttered Stiggings, eyenig the little black pup more fiercely than ever. Then suddenly he turned to his wife. "Mabel," he said brokenly, "we're ruined, my lass. The two hundred pounds that we posted the night before last has gone into the hands of a cruel, thieving trickster. That well-dressed chap had nothing at all to do with the shop he showed me at Kilburn. The whole thing was a swindle. He never had any right to sell the shop!"

Mrs. tSiggings shrieked. Then, despairingly, she called to Trixie.

"Trixie, did you post those letters that I gave you the night before last?" she asked.

"Yes, mother," answered the girl, nodding her head decidedly.

Mr. and Mrs. Stiggings groaned in unison.

"It's gone, then," muttered Stiggings hopelessly. Then he strode to the pup's kennel. "I'll kill this dog!" he snarled viciously. "Come out and be drowned, you destructive little cur!"

"Oh, dad—dad, please don't! Please don't drow little Roy!" implored Trixie, hanging to Mr. Stiggings's arm. "He doesn't know he's doing harm when he tears things up. It was my fault for leaving those slippers about. Whip me, dad ,but don't kill little Roy. Please—oh, please!"

Mr. Stiggings shook her off roughly, and reached into the kennel for th edoomed pup. Then he pulled out some papers which were lying on the straw of the kennel.

"Here's something else the little thief has stolen and ripped up," growled Stiggings. And then he looked again at the papers in his hand.

At the second sight of them he reeled back drunkenly, his mouth widely open, the whites of his eyes showing.

"Gracious! What's the matter with the man?" squeaked little Mrs. Stiggings, staring at him in terror. "What's come over you? What is it that you've found in the kennel?"

"The letter! The letter! The letter to Horace Gelder, with the cheque inside it!" yelled Mr. Stiggings, dancing in wild glee round the yard. "Hooray! We're saved—we're saved! The letter and cheque never went to Mr. Gelder after all. The pup stole it before it could be posted, and brought it into this kennel to rip up, like he rips everything else up that he can get hold of!"

"I remember the other night leaving the bundle of letters on the chair before I went to post them, whilst I looked for my hat," Trixie broke in. "That must be when the puppy got hold of that letter. Oh, dad, the pup won't need to be drowned now, will he? You'll let little Roy live?"

"Live?" cried Stiggings, almost incoherent in his thankfulness. "Why, the little jewel has saved our home, by just the same sort of mischief that he's been trying to tear it to bits! Live? Of course he can live!" He dived his hand into his pocket. "Here's five shillings," he said to Trixie. "Take him and buy him the nicest collar you can see in the shop. Bless the pretty little pet, I believe he'll turn out to be a thoroughbred after all!"—London Answers.

GOOD RECIPES.

Swedish Meat Omelet.—Mince any cold meat on hand, ham or lamb being preferable; put in saucepan, moisten with a little milk or cream. Then place, when heated through, in mound on dish which withstands heat of oven. Beat up whites of eggs, one for each person to be served, and place upon meat mound, make depression with a teaspoon in whites of eggs, and very carefully slide into them the yolks of the eggs. Brown in oven and serve at once.

Cabbage and Pepper Salad.—For this shred finely a pint measure of young crisp cabbage, and add to it two shredded peppers and, if liked, a very slight grating of onion, or use onion salt for part of the seasonnig. Make a boiled dressing, using two tablespoonfuls of butter, two eggs, one cup of vinegar, two teaspoonfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of dry mustard, two-thirds of a teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper. Put all ingredients except the vinegar in the inner vessel of a double boiler and cook over hot water until they begin to thicken; then add the vinegar and continue the cooking three minutes longer. Beat the dressing occasionally while cooking. If not all used, this will keep for future use.

Entire Wheat Bread.—One quart of flour, half cake yeast, half teaspoon of salt, three cups water, half tablespoon butter or lard. Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water, add lard or butter, then flour, gradually and lastly, salt, mixed thoroughly; place in well-greased bowl, cover and set aside in a warm place to rise until double its bulk, then turn out on kneading board and knead thoroughly. Mould into loaves, place in well-greased small baking pans, cover and set aside ot rise. When again double its bulk bake in hot oven 50 or 60 minutes, until crust is well browned, as crust is the most nutritious part of the bread. This makes two small loaves.

Creamed Ham with Poached Eggs.— Cook three-quarter cup of milk in double boiler for 15 minutes with a little celery and onion. Then remove celery and onion from milk and add level tablespoon and a half of butter and same of flour. These ingredients are to be creamed together before using, in the usual way. When mixture is thick, cover and allow it to cook 10 minutes. Now add some cold boiled ham which has been put through the grinder, about three-quarters of a cup, and allow to become very hot. Have ready either circlets or neatly trimmed squares of toast and dip edges into boiling salted water before arranging on platter. Spread lightly with good butter and afterward with the ham. Put a nicely poached egg on each piece of toast. The most astute breakfaster will not suspect the left-over morsel contained therein.

Salt Rising.—At night slice two large raw potatoes quite thin. Add a tablespoonful of flour, a teaspoonful of sugar, a half teaspoonful of salt, and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of soda. Over this pour a pint of warm, but not hot water; cover all closely and keep warm over night. In the morning put this mixture into a double boiler and keep warm (never hot, remember!) at the back of the range until it is foamy. Then take out the sliced potatoes and throw them away. Add to what is left a cupful of milk which has been scalded then cooled to blood warmth; a tablespoonful of lard, a teaspoonful of sugar, and a half teaspoonful of lard. Lastly stir in a pint of warmed flour, and set away in a warm place until it is light. This should be in an hour or less. When it has risen well, add flour enough to enable you to knead the dough readily. It is impossible to give the exact quantity of flour, but the dough should be a little softer than for yeast bread. Mould into loaves at once; put into pans, and when it has doubled in bulk, bake about an hour in a moderate oven.

Lace that will wash should be first soaked in cold water; then put in a glass jar with lukewarm water and a tiny pinch of borax and well shaken. Rinse well in several hot waters, squeeze out most of the moisture and dry by covering a drawing board with a Turkish towel, to which the lace is pinned, each point in position. Dry in the sun.

Cold Peach Charlotte.—Butter a baking dish, place in it a very light layer of bread crumbs, then a deep layer of peaches; sprinkle thickly with powdered sugar, then repeat until dish is full, crumbs forming the last layer. Crumbs should not be used too plentifully if peaches are dry, as the crumbs absorb the juices. Place pieces of butter over these and bake half an hour. Serve cold with whipped cream slightly flavored with vanilla.

TO RESTORE HATS.

The girl who does not want to spend another dollar on her hats, can do a surprising amount of freshening.

Let her remove the trimming and freshen the hat itself. A black hat is easy. It can be made to look like new by washing in denatured alcohol after dusting. The entire hat may be soaked in the alcohol and while still damp it is straightened where bent.

The woman who once a week wipes off black hats with alcohol and also uses it on ribbons will find her hats wear much longer.

Colored hats that have faded are seemingly hopeless, but a box of water color paint, or some of the special dyes for straw hats, soon restores their beauty. Soiled white hats can be freshened by bread crumbs—a favorite method of cleaning with many milliners—and they are improved by coating thickly with magnesia, which is kept on over night. One woman uses the whitener that she puts on her shoes.

Sunburnt hats are hard to freshen. If good, they should be sent to a bleacher; if not worth that, try bleaching them at home with oxalic acid, a teaspoonful to a pint of water.

Scrub the straw well, then rinse at once with hot water, followed by cold. Wipe dry and hang in the sun. While still damp, press with a hot iron on the wrong side, with a thin cloth over the straw.

White feathers and the numerous aigrettes of the season may be made snowy by cleaning in a paste made of gasoline and white cornmeal, and rinsing with gasoline alone, or with more of the paste until it shows no soil. If the curl has come out, hold it over the kitchen range or curl the flues, a few at a time, with the back of a heated silver knife.

Ribbons may be washed in alcohol and pressed under heavy paper or a thick cloth while still slightly damp.

Steel buckles can be soaked in coal oil for six or eight hours, then polished with fine emery. Jet is brightened by rubbing in alcohol and polishing with tissue paper. Dulled bronze and gilt trimmings are difficult, but may be somewhat freshened by good silver polish thinned with alcohol instead of water.

THE FLOOD OF GOLD.

Enormous Output of the South African Mines.

As to the prospects of a cessation of the flood of gold attention is called to the fact that in June the mines of the Rand produced 753,936 fine ounces of gold, compared with 684,576 ounces in June, 1911, and 625,181 in the corresponding month of 1910. The outturn was valued at £3,202,517, against £2,907,854 in the same month last year and £2,655,602 in June, 1910.

The total Transvaal output for 1911 reached the enormous value of $170,286,718 of which the Witwatersrand Mines produced $163,239,341. From the total output $37,779,057 in dividends was distributed.

Approximately $35,000,000 was paid on the Witwatersrand Mines during the year in wages, not including about $5,000,000 in salaries.

The total number of stamps in operation on the gold mines of the Transvaal in December, 1911, was 10,195, an increase of 420 in twelve months; tube mills in operation, 261, an increase of 61.

THURSDAY OCT. 10, '12

MAIN PROVISIONS OF "THE ONTARIO STALLION ACT" AND REGULATIONS.

Since The Advocate mentioned this matter a few weeks ago several parties interested have asked us for further particulars, which we cheerfully give.

1. That each Stallion standing for service in Ontario must be enrolled with the Stallion Enrolment Board.

2. A Certificate of each enrolment will be issued by the Board, which Certificate must form a part of each newspaper advertisement or poster advertising the Stallion.

3. At the option of the owner the Stallion may be inspected by three Officers appointed under the Act, and if such inspection is made, the report of the inspection will form a part of the record of enrolment and the Registration Certificate will be issued in accordance therewith.

4. The Board will fix the times and places at which Stallions may be inspected; notice thereof will be given so that any person desiring to procure the inspection of a stallion may present him at the most convenient point.

5. For the purposes of the administration of the Act, a Pure Bred Stallion is considered to be one registered in one of the Records affiliated with the Canadian National Live Stock Records or in case there is no such record for the breed, in one of the Records recognized as authentic by the Record Board. A Grade Stallion is considered to be any other Stallion.

6. The following are considered diseases or malformations, as the case may be,—Bone spavin, curb, when associated with a formation of hock which predisposes to curb; bog spavin, when associated with a formation of hock which predisposes to bog spavin; string halt; side bone; roaring or whistling; periodic opthalmia; and navicular disease.

7. Six forms of Certificates will be issued to provide for the following conditions,—

a. Pure Bred, Inspected & approved.

b. Pure Bred, Inspected, but found to be not free from malformations and diseases named in the Regulations.

c. Pure Bred, not Inspected.

d. Grade, Inspected and found to be free from malformations and diseases named in the regulations.

e. Grade, Inspected, but found to be not free from malformations and diseases named in the regulations.

f. Grade, not Inspected.

8. Each enrolment must be renewed annually. In case of inspected stallions however, the report of the Inspection Committee will hold good for two years.

9. When a Stallion is sold the transfer must be registered with the Board.

10. The fees to be paid to the Board before the issue of any Certificate are,
For enrolment $2.00
For inspection $5.00
Renewal of enrolment $1.00
Transfer certificate $1.00

11. The penalty for contravention of any of the provisions of the Act will be not more than $100 nor less than $25.

I sit beneath my greenwood tree and watch the girls go by, a-chewing gum with ecstacy and ardor in each eye; they chew their gum as though they knew that every bit of gum they chew will take them nearer to the blue and angel-haunted sky. They chew their gum with frenzied zeal, as poets write their odes; they chew as though they seem to feel some conscientious goads; the Nells and Alices and Mauds and other sweet bebibboned frauds chew on, and throw their chewed-out wads along the quiet roads. The jaws of gentle little Jill, though wearied, worn and numb, are clanking like a coffee mill, upon her chunk of gum; her duty she will never shun; she'll chew until her task is done all other things beneath the sun may go to Kingdom Come. The damsels pass my humble cot in groups of one or two. They haven't time to talk or sing, they haven't time for anything, but just to make their jawbones swing—oh, here's a howdydo; I dare remark that chewing gum is not our end and aim; it's not the pinnacle or sum of life's mortal game; the chewers now and then should pause, for they can find a nobler cause than this wig-wagging with their jaws until those jaws are lame.—Walt Mason.

At New Haven, Conn., on Sept. 28th, Mr. Woodrow Wilson, Democratic candidate for the Presidency, in his speech made a remarkably frank acknowledgement that the reciprocity agreement would have been injurious to Canada. He said, "I was very much interested in some of the reasons given by our friends across the Canadian border for being very shy about the reciprocity arrangements. They said, 'We were not sure where those arrangements will lead, and we don't care to associate too closely with the economic conditions of the United States until those conditions are as modern as ours.' When I represented this and asked for particulars I had to retire from the debate, because I found that they had adjusted their economic development to conditions which we had not yet found a way to meet in the United States."

The average hundred-acre farm, with a lane through the middle, if parcelled off into ten-acre fields, will have over two acres in fence bottoms, not counting those around the boundary line. Where the farm is of good shape, the fences straight and built of wire, and care taken to plough close, the waste land may not be much over two acres. Under other circumstances it may be much more. These fence bottoms are a nuisance to mow and a harboring place for mice and insects, as well as a seeding ground for weeds. Every superfluous 40-rod cross fence takes 20 square rods of good land, more or less. Cut out superfluous fences, save interest and maintenance charges, expediate cultivation, and increase revenue-producing area.—Farmers Advocate.

Hon. Sydney Fisher has been earning the applause of Ontario audiences by that part of his lengthy oration which runs, "ladies and gentlemen I shall not detain you further."

The customs revenue for six months shows an increase greater than the increase for the whole of the last fiscal year. There may be some way of harmonizing this proof of prosperity with the Laurier Lament that his defeat was a defeat for the country, but we can't see it.

The prevalence of attributing to prominent Conservative leaders by the Liberal press views on the navy question must be taken by these gentlemen as a compliment. Strong and decided views on great issues were always a monopoly of the Conservative party and the doubting Thomases never found safe harbor in their ranks.

Crediton

Apples and potatoes are a big crop this year. The fine weather of this week has given our people a chance to do a great deal of work.

We are pleased to learn that Mrs. Walker, who recently had to undergo an operation for appendicitis in London, is doing nicely and rapidly recovering.

Dr. Orme, Miss Orme, J. H. Holtzmann and H. F. Elber motored to London on Tuesday

The Misses Watson and Snider spent last Saturday and Sunday with their parents in Drysdale.

Fraser Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Holtzman and Mr. and Mrs Chris Hatzel motored to Colborne Tp. last Sunday and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Schwanz.

Henry Sweitzer has rented the store owned by Jas. Bauer and will use it as a ware house.

George Elber has been re-engaged with C. Zwicker for the season.

The School trustees have had the school hedge trimmed and lawn cut which has a decided improvement.

The fowl supper given in the Evangelical Church Shed last Thursday evening was a decided success. Over $300 was collected and the committee are indeed pleased with the results. There was an abundance of the good things to eat and people came from far and near. After supper a splendid program was given in the church., Rev. Jefferson of the Methodist Church delivered a brief address which was full of good thought and listened to with great attention. Rev. Damm of Sebringville gave a talk on his travels through Italy which proved very interesting. Miss Clara Wind sang a beautiful solo and the anthems by the choir and choruses by the young men proved very acceptable.

Rev. and Mrs. Damm of Sebringville spent a few days last vweek in town renewing old acquaintances who were pleased to see them.

Amos.— Marrs Hill Church intend holding their anniversary services October 20 and 21—Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Prest returned to their home in Toronto after spending their holidays with their parents.—Mrs. Aitken of Mandomin is spending a few weeks with her daughter, Mrs. Wm Morley.—Mr. Jos. Sholdice, of Brinsley, who underwent an operation for appendicitis last week at his home is progressing favorably.

CLANDEBOYE

Mrs. Thos. Hodgins, who has been very ill, is improving nicely.—Mr. Sholdice of McGillivray has moved to Clandeboye.—Mrs. Joe Carter, who, for the past month has been away, has returned.—Quite a number of farmers are complaining about their potatoes being rotten.—Mrs. M. Hodgins is visiting her son in London.

A BIRD OF LIGHT.

The Arctic Tern Shuns the Night by Flights From Pole to Pole.

It used to be thought that the golden plover bore off the palm for length of flight between summer and winter homes, but an article in the National Geographic Magazine awards that distinction to the arctic tern. This bird breeds as far north as it can find anything stable on which to construct its nest. It has been found within seven and a half degrees of the pole itself. And that nest was found surrounded by a wall of newly fallen snow, which the mother bird had carefully scooped out from round her chick.

The tern arrives in the far north about June 15 and leaves again for the south toward the last of August, when the young are able to fly strongly. Two or three months later the birds are to be found skirting the edge of the antarctic continent, 11,000 miles away.

What their track is over that vast space no one yet knows. A few individuals are occasionally seen along the New England or Long Island coast in the fall, but the flocks of thousands and thousands of these gregarious birds which alternate from pole to pole have never been met by any trained observer competent to learn their preferred path and their time schedule. They must travel at least 150 miles each day—apart from their flights in search or in pursuit of food—to carry them within ten or twelve weeks from one end of the world to the other.

The arctic terns enjoy more hours of sunlight than any other creatures on the globe. The sun never sets during their stay at their northern nesting grounds, and during their stay in the south they have two months of continuous sunlight and practical daylight for two months more. The birds have twenty-four hours of daylight for between six and eight months of the year.

STEEL RAILS A MARVEL.

The Strain, the Pull, the Pounding and Grinding They Endure.

Have you an idea of the strain to which a steel rail is subjected today? Let us consider one for a moment in the time of its greatest torture and see. The Cannon Ball express is coming. It is drawn by two engines. The largest weighs 100 tons. Seventy-seven tons of the weight are carried on the six driving wheels, which means almost thirteen tons to a wheel. Thirteen tons of weight upon each wheel! That means thirteen tons of weight impinging for a flying instant upon a rail surface perhaps no more than an inch square and then moving forward all the time, a succession of whirling blows from a thirteen ton hammer.

If the train is going thirty miles an hour an imaginary square inch has but one five-hundred-and-twenty-eighth part of a second in which to receive the blow, wince under it, distribute the terrible force of it through its elastic elements to the surrounding mass of the rail, brace itself to help distribute stresses that are being set up on adjacent surfaces and zigzagging back and forth in all sorts of ways through the content of the rail and then almost instantly lift its devoted head to receive the blow of the next driving wheel. If the train is going sixty miles an hour instead of thirty this all has to be received, withstood and passed on in one ten-hundred-and-fifty-sixth part of a second.

And yet this isn't all that is happening to the nerves of the rail. This is only taking account of the compression strains. There is another set of strains, for these big driving wheels are pulling the train. They have caught hold of the rails just as your hands grip the rope in a tug-of-war, and they take a fresh hold every fraction of a second. The tendency is to pull the top or head off the rail, to pull it all to pieces. It is the business of the rail to stick together, head and web and flange, in every single and separate molecule with all the tenacity of which steel is capable.

But we have stated only one-half the tension strain. This strain is reversing all the time, for while the huge drivers are pulling one part of the rail toward them they are pushing another part away from them. This plucking and spurning, hauling and kicking, tension and compression go on continuously. Complete reversing from compression to tension or back again takes place with every half turn of a driving wheel and at a frightfully rapid rate. The marvel is that the rail is not ground to powder.—Metropolitan Magazine.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

SEAFORTH—October 2nd, Mrs. Carlton, mother of Mrs. John A. Stewart, passed away, after being an invalid for years, during which time she was carefully nursed by her daughter. Mrs. Carlton was a relict of the late Walter Carlton, and was almost 82 years of age.

TUCKERSMITH—Mr. Wm. Carnochan of the 4th concession of Tuckersmith departed this life on Tuesday night last. The event, although sad, was not unexpected as Mr. Carnochan had been suffering from ill health for several years. He was a native of the township of Tuckersmith, in which he spent his life, being the eldest son of the late Robert Carnochan. He is survived by his widow and a family of three sons and three daughters, also by two brothers, James and Samuel Carnochan.

HENSALL

Mrs. Scott and niece Miss Sinclair have returned after spending several months in the Old Country.—Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dick have returned after visiting with friends in Oakville, Tavistock and Alliston.—T. Hemphill left for Wroxeter Thursday morning to attend the funeral of a cousin William Weir, of that place who died suddenly of heart failure.—There are 44 appeals to come before the Judges Court of Revision, of Hensall Voters List The Liberals have put in 35 and the Conservatives 9.—Robert Dowie who was taken to Clinton Hospital, has not been progressing very well, so that it was found necessary to amputate the second finger of his injured hand.—John MacArthur and family left to reside in London. They have been residents of Hensall for about 31 years.—Last week G. C. Petty received a telegram from Kamloops, B. C., conveying the sad intelligence that William Elder, well-known to all the old residents here, had departed this life. He had been ill for over a year and had undergone several operations. He was born in this section and lived on a farm at Rodgerville for many years. He moved to Hensall, and resided here for a time. After which he moved to Barrie where he spent over a year and then went to British Columbia, settling on a fruit farm near Kamloops. It is over twelve years since he left Hensall.

ZURICH

MAGIC WATER TOYS.

Europe and America turn out for the edification of their children many ingenious toys, but the occidental youngsters have nothing to compare with the strange expanding water toys with which the children of the far east have for centuries amused themselves.

These are placed in small wooden boxes similar to the little paint boxes so often seen in our own country. They have the appearance of soiled shavings, broken matches and dilapidated toothpicks, but when thrown into the water the ingenious toys at once exhibit properties that show them to be considerably more than mere bits of stick.

The wood of these toys has been kiln dried, and immediately it touches the water it begins to absorb the water and to expand almost indefinitely. As it increases in size it separates and suddenly opens, becoming a very pretty toy. One stick will change into a flowerpot containing, it may be, a rosebush in full bloom. Another becomes an obese mandarin carrying an umbrella. Still another will take the form of a sea serpent, very ferocious in its tiny dimensions.

Then, too, there are toys which show as whales, tigers, crocodiles, etc. The figures are colored and present a bewildering variety in design and treatment. Their manufacture is a trade secret, kept inviolate by the guild that turns them out by the thousands.

For older children there are provided larger and even more artistic figures, consisting of historical characters—rulers, poets and soldiers—and dwarfed trees and tiny houses, whose doors and windows are full of inmates, are also among this class. The more ordinary kind cost a mere song, but the finer toys are quite expensive.—New York Press.

FAR DISTANT URANUS.

Oddities a Visit to This Gigantic Planet Would Disclose.

If Uranus, which is a star of about the sixth magnitude, were a planet like those little ones called asteroids, which are being discovered by the dozen every year, it could not have much claim upon popular attention, but Uranus is really a gigantic world, more than sixty times as large as ours Its vast distance, about 1,700,000,000 miles from the earth, is what causes it to look so small.

Uranus has four moons, which revolve backward in their orbits—that is to say, they revolve from east to west around Uranus, while Uranus goes, like all the other planets, from west to east around the sun. It is believed that Uranus rotates backward on its axis also. Moreover, the axis of that great, strange globe lies in such a direction that in the course of its year, which is equal to eighty-four of our years, the sun shines almost perpendicularly first upon one pole and then upon the other.

Measured by our time standard, there are forty years of constant daylight, followed by forty years of unbroken night, around the poles of Uranus, and the sun rises in the west and sets in the east there, but the sun looks very small when viewed from Uranus—only one four-hundredth as large as it appears to us. Still it sheds upon that planet 1,500 times as much light as the full moon sends to the earth, so that daylight upon Uranus, while faint compared with the blaze of a terrestrial noonday, is nevertheless a very respectable kind of illumination.

The Game of Life.

The game we are all playing is a losing game at best. Yet we must play. We cannot get up and leave the table knowing the dice are cogged and the cards marked against us. We must play on, losing our principal stake little by little or in splendid rouleaux, as chance or our disposition may urge, but knowing well that in the end, soon or late, whatever remains of it will be swept from the board Lucky the man who is tempted to play but the one stake Happy the man who in death loses only his life.—F. P. Dunne in American Magazine.

Bluejacket's Black Neckerchief.

It is not generally known that the bluejacket's black neckerchief, a survival of the service mourning for Nelson, is the best British silk obtainable and that the admiralty is a very fastidious customer. Two to each man are issued annually, and many thousands of these discarded scarfs have been subsequently worn by Jack's femininity. A pair of them make an excellent blouse.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Spoiled Her Enthusiasm.

"Harry proposed last night! I was so"—

"I knew he would. I played a joke on him."

"What?"

"I told him you would inherit a fortune when you came of age."—Houston Post.

Matrimonial.

Three Germans were sitting at luncheon recently and were overheard discussing the second marriage of a mutual friend when one of them remarked: "I'll tell you what A man what marries de second time don't deserve to haf lost his first vife."—Life.

Small Blaze.

Mr. Dubb—My brain is on fire! Miss Keen—I hardly think we need call out the fire department.—Boston Transcript.

A lazy man is as useless as a dead man and takes up more room.—Hubbard.

WINGHAM—William Weir, license commissioner for North Huron, passed away suddenly on his verandah on Wednesday night last. Heart failure is believed to be the cause of death. He was found by his wife, to whom he had remarked in the morning that he never felt better in his life.

SEAFORTH—The Carter scholarships open to competition among the Collegiate Institutes and high schools in the County of Huron, have again been captured by local Collegiate Institute pupils. The scholarships in question have been awarded as follows,—1. John F. Doherty, Seaforth, $100; 2. Mary L. Cowan, $60; 3 Samuel W. Archibald, $40.

CLINTON.—John Leslie for many year a carriage maker here, died Sunday at the age of 73 years. The man was at work until a few days before. An attack of pneumonia was the cause of death.

WOMEN TAKE NOTICE!

A man cannot understand the torture and suffering many women endure uncomplainingly. If the majority of men suffered as much pain and endured with patience the weakening sicknesses that most women do, they would ask for immediate sympathy and look for a quick cure.

Many women have been saved from a life of misery and suffering by turning to the right remedy—Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—a remedy which is safe to take because containing no narcotics, alcohol or injurious ingredients. It is an alterative extract of roots, made with pure glycerin, and first given to the public by that famous specialist in the diseases of women—Dr. R. V. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y.

MRS. HESSHEIMER.

MRS. LILLIE M. HESSHEIMER, of Lincoln, Neb., 529 "C" St., says: "I send a testimonial with much pleasure so that some suffering woman may know the true worth of your remedies. I was a great sufferer from female troubles but after taking one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which a friend advised me to take, I found myself very much improved. After taking three more bottles, and using two boxes of Dr. Pierce's Lotion Tablets, I found myself on the road to recovery. I was in poor health for five years but now I am cured.

Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules.

BRITISH SUBMARINE SUNK

Run Down By Liner—Of Crew of Fifteen Only One Was Picked Up.

A despatch from Dover, England, says: The British submarine "B2" was run down by the Hamburg-American steamer Amerika here on Friday. It sank at once, drowning fourteen of the crew. The officer in charge was rescued. The disaster in which the "B2" was sunk occurred while the third patrol flotilla of submarines, consisting of six vessels, was manoeuvring off the south foreland on the coast of Kent. The liner Amerika appears to have cut the submarine completely in halves. Lieut. Richard I. Pulleyne, who was second in command, was the only man among the crew of fifteen who was saved. He was found floating in the sea too exhausted to say more when he was rescued than "The submarine is cut in two. I went down a mile." The young lieutenant collapsed after he was taken from the water and conveyed to the parent ship. The liner Amerika stood by after the collision and threw life buoys overboard, while a number of torpedo boats, after being informed of the accident by wireless telegraphy, searched the sea for hours. None of the other members of the crew, however, were found, and no sign of wreckage was discernable in the vicinity. The Amerika then proceeded on her voyage to Southampton and Cherbourg on her way to New York.

This is the sixth disaster to British submarines, each of them involving the loss of from eleven to fifteen lives. Lieut. Percy B. O'Brien was the commander of the "B2."

MILITIA TO HONOR BROCK.

Salute of Thirteen Guns Will Be Fired by Field Batteries.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Militia Department will assist in the national celebration of the anniversary of the death of General Brock and the victory of Queenston Heights. Militia orders have been issued directing field batteries at all the militia centres throughout Canada to fire a salute of thirteen guns on Saturday, October 12.

THE TITANIC DISASTER.

Has Temporarily Frightened Intending Emigrants.

A despatch from Ottawa says: That the Titanic disaster temporarily stopped British immigration to Canada is one of the interesting features of an interim report as to immigration to Canada from Great Britain. The total immigration from Great Britain for this fiscal year up to the end of August was 95,142, as compared with 91,857 for the corresponding period last year, an increase of 3,825. During May immediately following the Titanic disaster there was a falling off of twelve per cent. on the arrivals from Great Britain, which the immigration authorities attribute to the apprehension raised in the minds of intending immigrants as to the safety of the Atlantic passage. For August, on the other hand, when this fear had passed, immigration from Great Britain increased thirty per cent. over August of last year.

KITCHENER LEAVES PARIS.

Detectives, Fearing For Him, Accompany General to Border.

A despatch from Paris says: Lord Kitchener, the British Agent Consul-General to Egypt, left here on his way to Cairo on Thursday. French detectives accompanied him as far as Marseilles upon advices from London that his life was menaced.

HARVESTERS FROM JAIL.

Western Farmers are Glad to Pay Fines to Get Workers.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: So pressing is the need of threshermen that farmers are coming to the city and guaranteeing the fines of men in jail for petty offences if they will go out and work in the fields. The authorities are agreeable, as the central police station is overcrowded, and a dozen men have been let out on these novel terms.

TORONTO CORRESPONDENCE

INTERESTING GOSSIP FROM ONTARIO'S CAPITAL.

Hon. Mr. Borden's Visit—The St. Clair Case—From Baseball to Rugby—The Senate Vacancies.

Toronto has appreciated recent visits from both the Federal political leaders. The reception to Mr. Borden was unique. There has never been anything like it in Canada. Seven thousand people at a banquet, fifteen hundred of them diners, is a record, the size of which may be appreciated when it is pointed out that Massey Hall will accommodate less than 4,000 people, and that the largest dining room in Toronto will not seat more than 400 banquetters. The non-partisan character of the event has occasioned much favorable comment.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, on the other hand, has, during his tour, made no public appearance in Toronto, though he has, in passing from one point to another, spent a day or two privately with friends here. No doubt, had he so chosen, he could have had a rousing meeting here, but he has had rousing meetings in Toronto before, only to see the Conservative majorities grow higher than ever on polling day. Apart from politics altogether it is doubtful if Toronto has ever fully appreciated or understood Sir Wilfrid. And it is equally true that Sir Wilfrid has never understood Toronto. A gentleman who was with Sir Wilfrid in Quebec on the evening of September 21, 1911, recalls that when among the first returns to come in were the stupendous Toronto majorities, Sir Wilfrid quizzically remarked, "Your city does not seem to like reciprocity."

Whether it is Toronto's ultra Protestantism, or its ultra Imperialism, or its ultra protectionism, or whether, as some say, it is that Sir Wilfrid has been poorly advised in matters relating to Toronto politics, the fact is that there has been less sympathy between the former Premier and the city of Toronto than generally exists between any political leader and a similar center of population. Though that does not mean that he has not just as many warm personal admirers here as he has anywhere.

The Provincial bye-elections in East Middlesex and in North Waterloo are arousing some interest. Not that the result will have any appreciable effect on a Legislature that is preponderatingly one-sided, but there is curiosity to know what success Mr. Rowell is meeting with in building up an organization, and more especially what effect his abolition of the bar platform is having in the country. As this is the first test of strength since his pronouncement, those specially interested in that issue will await the result of the polls with interest. North Waterloo is not exactly a favorable constituency for the nurturing of such a policy and no doubt Mr. Rowell himself appreciates the humor in the fact that it, of all constituencies, should be the one first opened by the government. East Middlesex may offer a different field.

A JUDGE DRAWS FIRE.

Judge J. H. Denton has drawn fire for his decision in the Rev. R. B. St. Clair case, which is a new sensation for him. His is not the kind of a personality that thrives on publicity.

Judge Denton found St. Clair guilty of circulating obscene literature, though he suspended sentence. At the same time he declared that what Mr. St. Clair had written was a substantially correct report of what had taken place at the burlesque theatre. Now the friends of Mr. St. Clair complain that the judge would not admit evidence as to the attitude of the police department toward this theatre or as to the general reputation of the place itself on the ground, no doubt, that neither the theatre nor the police department was on trial. He could dispose only of the charge that had been laid.

At the same time the anomaly of the situation is apparent. If Rev. Mr. St Clair committed crime by circulating the report of what took place on the stage the speaking and acting of that performance must surely in itself have been a crime. And it is from this point of view that the police criticize the judgment. They maintain that Mr. St Clair's report was a grossly exaggerated piece of literature.

Judge Denton is naturally one of the most fair-minded men one could meet and to do anyone an injustice would doubtless grieve him exceedingly. He is the type of a judge who leans to humaneness rather than severity. By a frank statement of their circumstances and a sincere confession of a desire to do better more than one prisoner coming before him for sentence has escaped with a shortened term.

Another judge who is said to be sensitive to criticism is Judge Winchester, who has been prominent in many civic investigations. He has been the victim of persistent attacks on the part of a local weekly publication. That these attacks are said to be inspired by one who not long ago was himself under investigation by the judge himself does not altogether remove their sting.

RUGBY TO THE FRONT.

In sports the scene has changed with lightning rapidity. Yesterday we were hailing the winning of a baseball pennant. To-day we are cheering like mad for a "touch down."

In Toronto the Varsity Rugby team again holds the centre of the stage by reason of the fact that they promise to maintain the quality of play set in recent years by their predecessors. Generally speaking, there is no great enthusiasm in the city proper for things connected with the University, and if there was a chance for a city team to beat Varsity on its merits that team would be regarded as the greatest bunch of heroes the town has seen in a dog's age. But with Varsity setting its present pace, such a feat is an impossible one. In the first place, there is no city organization that can command a tenth of the enthusiasm and exprit de corps of Varsity. The Argonaut Club, with its long honorable record, has something of the spirit, but not much in comparison. Other clubs are organized, perhaps get together a team of stars and make a flash in the pan for a year or two and then pass into limbo. Not so at Varsity. The organization there is permanent and there are always ten candidates of brawn and muscle, and at the right age, for each place that is vacant.

Besides, even given enthusiasm and candidates, no city club can get the practice Varsity indulges in. It is not possible for their members to get off in the afternoons, and it is dark by six o'clock. Electric light practices at night are a poor substitute.

On the whole it looks as though history in the United States would be repeated, and that only Intercollegiate Rugby would survive eventually. Under the handicaps it is surprising that city football has survived as long and as well as it has.

THE SENATE VACANCIES.

The death of Sir Richard Cartwright leaves three vacancies in the Senate to be filled from Ontario and politicians are speculating as to who will get the plums. Toronto men would not seem to stand much chance, as none of the vacancies have occurred in this district, but stranger things have happened than that one of the seats should fall among the numerous party stalwarts here.

Besides Sir Cartwright's seat the other vacancies are those caused by the death of Senator Wilson and the disqualification by non-attendance of Senator Sullivan of Kingston. Among the names that have been mentioned as possible successors to Senator Sullivan are Mr. Denis Murphy ex-M.P.P., of Ottawa, at present a member of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Commission; Mr. George Gordon, ex-M.P. for Nipissing, who resigned his seat for Hon. Frank Cochrane, and Mr. Thomas Birkett, ex-M.P. for Ottawa.

For Western Ontario a name frequently mentioned is that of Mr. W. S. Dingman, proprietor of the Stratford Herald, an ex-Mayor of Stratford and a past president of the Canadian Press Association. It is pointed out that of the present Ontario representation in the Senate only four reside west of Toronto, namely, Senators Cotey, London; Gibson, Beamsville; McMullen, Mount Forest, and Ratz, Parkhill. There are six residing in Toronto, Senators Arch. Campbell, Geo. A. Cox, Sir G. W. Ross, Robt. Jaffray, Sir L. M. Jones, and J. K. Kerr. While to the East of Toronto there are eleven, including Senators Beith, Bowmanville; Belcourt, Ottawa; Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Belleville; Derbyshire, Brockville; Edwards, Ottawa; Frost, Smiths' Falls; McHugh, Lindsay; McLaren, Perth; McMillan, Alexandria; Sir R. W. Scott, Ottawa; Taylor, Gananoque.

It may be noted in passing that of the Ontario representation in the Senate of twenty years ago only three survive, namely, Senators McLaren, McMillan and Sir R. W. Scott.

FIFTEEN-INCH GUNS.

Two New British Ships Likely To Be Equipped With Them.

Fifteen-inch guns, which hurl projectiles weighing 1,720 pounds each, will probably be installed upon the two British ships of the super-dreadnought type to be built under the naval programme adopted this year.

Messrs. Vickers have manufactured such a gun, though the Marlborough and the Iron Duke, two huge ships to be launched this month, will carry guns of smaller bore. Directly these ships are launched at Devonport and Portsmouth respectively the keels for two ships authorized this year will be laid. One of these ships will be, it is declared, of unusually large size. Plans for it provide that it shall be equipped with fourteen-inch guns, but it is rumored in naval circles that fifteen-inch guns will be used instead! The same size guns may be installed upon the other new ship. The displacement of the larger of the two new ships is given at 30,000 tons, her length as 700 feet and its speed is to be about twenty-nine knots. While the side plating of the ship will be heavier than that of the Iron Duke class, there will also be more adequate protection against attacks from the air.

The recent developments of air craft have shown that the broad funnel openings leading down to the furnaces and engine-rooms need to be screened. This will be a feature of the new design, and probably also steps will be taken to give better protection against aerial attack in the case of vessels already in commission.

It is also stated that the new British ship is to be armed with 14-inch guns. The difference between the weight of the projectile thrown by this gun and that of the 13.5 gun at present in use is only 150 pounds with practically the same penetrative power of hard steel plate.

A 15-inch gun, with a 1,720-pound shell, has been completed by Messrs. Vickers, with a much greater penetrative power, and there is some expectation in naval circles that this gun may be mounted in the dreadnoughts of this year's programme.

"How are you spending your vacation?" "In an ideal way. I'm pleased nearly all the time." "That is rare. What is your method?" "I spend two days in the country, then I'm glad to get back to the city. I spend two days in the city, then I'm glad to get back to the country. It's a great scheme."

THIRTY YEARS OF DISFIGURING ECZEMA CURED

"Ever since I was a little girl, thirty years ago, I had suffered tortures from eczema in one of its worst forms. The disease runs in my family, and mine was of a scaly and most disfiguring kind. The eczema formed in round rings, and then scales all over my face and limbs. I have been smothered from head to foot. I was born in Leamington, which is famous for its sulphur baths and pump waters, and one would think that after taking the treatment there regularly as I did, the disease would long ago have been cured, but it was not. I attended the ——— Hospital for years and years, so you will see I gave it a fair trial. Everyone in the town knew of my case. My face was disfigured very badly. A doctor told me that I should never get rid of it. I spent pounds in doctors' bills, and I attended several hospitals but nothing did any good.

"Then one day an uncle of mine recommended the Cuticura Remedies. I took his advice, and commenced to use the Cuticura Soap. To my astonishment an improvement at once set in, and my hair, which had been a complete mass of scales and scurf, soon began to look in splendid condition. Then I bought a box of Cuticura Ointment, and this cleared my skin wonderfully. In a few weeks' time all traces of the scaly eruptions had completely disappeared. Now my skin is clear and healthy, and thanks to the Cuticura Remedies I am completely cured of eczema. All my neighbours were astounded. The Cuticura Remedies are worth their weight in gold, and one tablet of Cuticura Soap goes further than four cakes of cheaper soaps. It has brought happiness into my home." (Signed) Mrs. Butler, 17, Francis Rd., The Cotteridge, King's Norton, Birmingham, Eng., July 26, 1910.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, but those who wish to try them without charge may do so by sending to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 62 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A., for a liberal sample of each, post-free, with 32-p. skin book.

CROWN PRINCE AT OXFORD.

With his tutor, a Magdalen man, the Prince of Wales went into residence at Magdalen, Oxford, on Oct. 10, occupying a large suite of rooms in the cloisters. His royal highness will attend history lectures, but it is understood that he will not try for a degree.

As an undergraduate at Magdalen the day of the Prince will be mapped out about on these lines:

He will be called by his servant at 7 o'clock. Breakfast is at 8 o'clock and the undergraduate may either partake of it in junior common room or in his own rooms. He will have told his servant when he was being called what he will have for breakfast, which at Oxford is usually very copious, including bacon and eggs, fried sole and salmon cutlets.

Lectures and "reading" are from 9 until 1 o'clock, followed by a frugal luncheon, consisting ordinarily of bread and cheese and beer or water.

The time from 2 until 5 is devoted to exercise, and then comes a shower bath, a change of clothing, tea and a couple of hours of reading.

At 7 comes a very excellent plain dinner for about 2s. He must dine a fixed number of nights in hall during full term—usually about five nights in the week.

After dinner the men gather in the junior common room and take coffee or visit one another's rooms or go to the Union, where once a week there is a debate, or to one of the many essay societies, which are a feature of university life. It is possible to leave college up to a certain hour, outside which limits men have to get special leave from the dean. But from 9 to midnight is for the "reading" man the principal time for work. If he "slacks" during that time he is hopeless.

IT'S THE FOOD.

The True Way to Correct Nervous Troubles.

Nervous troubles are more often caused by improper food and indigestion than most people imagine. Even doctors sometimes overlook this fact. A man says:

"Until two years ago waffles and butter with meat and gravy were the main features of my breakfast. Finally dyspepsia came on and I found myself in a bad condition, worse in the morning than any other time. I would have a full, sick feeling in my stomach, with pains in my heart, sides and head.

"At times I would have no appetite for days, then I would feel ravenous, never satisfied when I did eat and so nervous I felt like shrieking at the top of my voice. I lost flesh badly and hardly knew which way to turn until one day I bought a box of Grape-Nuts food to see if I could eat that. I tried it without telling the doctor, and liked it fine; made me feel as if I had something to eat that was satisfying and still I didn't have that heaviness that I had felt after eating any other food.

"I hadn't drank any coffee then in five weeks. I kept on with the Grape-Nuts and in a month and a half I had gained 15 pounds, could eat almost anything I wanted, didn't feel badly after eating and my nervousness was all gone. It's a pleasure to be well again."

Nothing will cause another to lose confidence in you more readily than a broken promise. A promise should be a sacred duty, just as a debt must be paid.

Warts will render the prettiest hands unsightly. Clear the excrescences away by using Holloway's Corn Cure, which acts thoroughly and painlessly.

"Darling, I left my watch upstairs, and I'm too tired to go and fetch it." "Sweetest, if you only wait your watch will run down all right."

Minard's Liniment Cures Burns, Etc.

"I wish to complain," said the bride haughtily, "about that flour you sold me. It was tough." "Tough, ma'am?" asked the grocer. "Yes, tough. I made a pie with it, and my husband could hardly cut it."

Two black-faced minstrels were giving an entertainment on the sands of a certain seaside holiday resort recently. While one of them was telling funny stories about the humors of boarding-house landladies the other went among the crowd making a collection. He at length went up to a stern-looking woman, who promptly snatched the tambourine from his hand and poured the contents into her lap. As she returned the empty tambourine to the astonished minstrel she exclaimed: "Tell your friend who knows so much about landladies that I'm the one he forgot to pay the last time he was here!"

Prominent Statesman—"No; a good stomach."

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited.

Sirs,—I came across a bottle of your MINARD'S LINIMENT in the hands of one of the students at the University of Maryland, and he being so kind as to let me use it for a very bad sprain, which I obtained in training for foot races, and to say that it helped me would be putting it very mildly, and I therefore ask if you would let me know of one of your agents that is closest to Baltimore so that I may obtain some of it. Thanking you in advance I remain,

Yours truly,
W. C. McCUEAN.

"It is said that impetuous people have black eyes." "Yes; and if they don't have them they are apt to get them!"

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

"How is it I never see you about with young Flirton, now?" "Oh, I married him a fortnight ago."

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff.

"Dickie, I'm awfully sorry you use tobacco! I don't like it, and mamma simply loathes it. Will you stop when we are married?" "Isn't that asking a lot, dearie?" asked Dickie. "I wouldn't care for myself," answered the girl, "but you know it makes mamma very ill." "Well, then," he promised cheerfully, "I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll never smoke when your mamma is with us." She threw her arms around him. "Darling," she murmured. "That's so good of you! I was afraid you'd insist on smoking once in a while after we were married!"

The real life you live sets its mark on you in the eyes of any man or woman worth knowing, and all your finery and education and charity can never cover that fatal seal.

BAD COINS COME FROM JAIL.

Cairo Authorities Find Criminal at Work Behind Bars.

For some time past the Cairo (Egypt) authorities have been mystified by the fact that a large quantity of counterfeit silver has been in circulation, the origin of which they had been unable to discover. At last they have succeeded in locating the source of supply.

The counterfeit coins have been manufactured in Tourah prison. One of the prisoners was found to be in the possession of a most ingenious instrument made to coin five piastre (25 cent) pieces and a quantity of silver bullion was discovered at the same time. The man, who is a penal convict, confessed to having been engaged in coining while in prison, and accused a fellow convict of complicity.

Out of the eleven million natives of Egypt, only some 600,000 can read and write.

A Safe Pill for Sufferers.—There are pills that violently purge and fill the stomach and intestines with pain. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are mild and effective. They are purely vegetable, no mineral purgative entering into their composition and their effect is soothing and beneficial. Try them and be convinced. Thousands can attest their great curative qualities because thousands owe their health and strength to timely use of this most excellent medicine.

Poets are born—therefore they are more to be pitied than censured.

Willis—Then you don't think an investment that pays over 6 per cent. is safe? Gillis—Oh, yes! But I don't think one that promises to pay over 6 per cent. is.

Sleeplessness.—Sleep is the great restorer and to be deprived of it is vital loss. Whatever may be the cause of it, indigestion, nervous derangement or mental worry, try a course of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. By regulating the action of the stomach, where the trouble lies, they will restore normal conditions and healthful sleep will follow. They exert a sedative force upon the nerves and where there is unrest they bring rest.

Sam Slick once said that kisses were like creation—made out of nothing and very good.

BRIDGET'S CHARACTER.

Bridget left Ireland with an excellent letter of recommendation from her last mistress, but on the way over the letter fell into the sea and was lost. Not knowing how to find work without her recommendation she appealed to a friend to write one for her, and he gave her the following:—"To all concerned: Bridget Flaherty had a good reputation when she left Ireland, but lost it on the way over."

Regularity

of the bowels is an absolute necessity for good health. Unless the waste matter from the food which collects there is got rid of at least once a day, it decays and poisons the whole body, causing biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches. Salts and other harsh mineral purgatives irritate the delicate lining of the bowels. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills—entirely vegetable—regulate the bowels effectively without weakening, sickening or griping. Use

CARE FOR SICK ON TRAINS.

German Railroads Have Special Cars for Them.

Excellent facilities are afforded in Germany for transporting invalids and cripples, who are unable to walk, according to T. J. Albert, Consul at Brunswick. The German railroad system provides a first-class car for invalids who can afford to use it. This car is fitted with every possible convenience for the sick. A special apartment, opening on the level of the station platform, with a double door, so that a stretcher can be carried in without the slightest difficulty, is set apart for the invalid and attendants. The balance of the car contains a kitchen, where meals can be prepared, and a section handsomely upholstered for members of the family or accompanying friends. For invalids who travel second or third-class an apartment on an ordinary car is used, opening in like manner with a double door on the station platform.

The charges for transporting sick and helpless persons have hitherto been moderate. For invalids travelling third-class the charge has been the cost of four tickets, free transport being granted for two attendants. This rate is still granted when the car containing the invalid apartment belongs to a regular train with a fixed destination; otherwise in the future six tickets second class must be purchased and an extra rate paid if the car has to be specially ordered.

SIX YEARS USE OF BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets she will always use them as long as there are little ones in the house. They are absolutely safe and never fail to cure constipation, colic, indigestion or the many other babyhood and childhood ailments. Concerning them Mrs. E. Simmons, Hamilton, Ont., says: "I have not been without Baby's Own Tablets for six years. I have given them to my three little ones and find them excellent during teething and at other times." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"People are allus impressed," said Grandpa Stubblegrass, "by what they can't see through. Many a stream gits credit fur bein' deep when it's only muddy."

'Tis a Marvellous Thing.—When the cures effected by Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil are considered, the speedy and permanent relief it has brought to the suffering wherever it has been used, it must be regarded as a marvellous thing that so potent a medicine should result from the six ingredients which enter into its composition. A trial will convince the most skeptical of its healing virtues.

All honest men will bear watching. It is the rascals who cannot stand it.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia.

FOR HIS FAMILY'S SAKE.

Paterfamilias was a very robust man, but he called in the doctor. If the truth be told, Paterfamilias was so healthy, so big, and so robust, that he had grown into the habit of bullying his family.

"I don't know what's the matter with my family," he remarked to the medico, "but my wife is nervous, my children are suffering from something—I don't know what. In fact, the whole household is upset. All the servants are bordering on nervous prostration. What do you think about it?"

The doctor was a friend of the family, and knew a little of its history.

"I think it would be all right," said he, "if you took a six months' tour of Europe—alone."

"Me?" replied the father ungrammatically, in his surprise. "Me?"

"Yes," replied the doctor. "For the health of your family."

DEAN SWIFT AND ASPARAGUS

Asparagus was a great dish with Dean Swift. Dining with him one day, George Faulkener, the Dublin publisher, asked for a second helping of his favorite vegetable, but Swift pointed to the stalks on his guest's plate and said:—"Sir, first finish what is before you." "What!" exclaimed Faulkener, "eat my stalks?" "Aye, sir," bellowed the imperious Dean; "eat your stalks, or you will get no more. King William III. always ate his stalks." Asked once, when he was telling the story, whether he really did eat his talks, Faulkener replied: "Yes, certainly; and if you had dined with Dean Swift you would have been obliged to eat your stalks, too."

READY FOR HIM.

EATING POOR MAN'S DINNER.

English Newspaper Men Try It and Find It Very Good.

A party of London (England) newspaper men recently met at the rooms of the Society of Medical Officers of Health to eat a poor man's dinner. It was, of course, such a dinner as no poor man ever eats, but that is because he does not know how to lay his money out so as to get the best and most feeding stuffs, neither does his wife know how to cook them properly when bought. These things they could learn from the secretary of the society, a barrister and an enthusiast on dietetics.

It was interesting to learn what can be done by judicious buying at the open air markets of London, where the food is probably cheaper and of better quality than in any other capital. They started with some tasty soup made from parts of fish usually thrown away as useless by thriftless cooks, each helping costing about a fourth of a cent to make. The foreigners in Soho are well aware of these economies. Then there were admirable cent apiece herrings, haddock and three meat courses, any one of which would have made a good meal. There was roast mutton from Australia—9 cents a pound in the open air market; flank of Australian beef—a part commonly ignored by English housewives, but good to eat all the same; steak and kidney pie, costing about 6 cents a portion; and jugged hare made from colonial hare, bought at 50 cents for nine pounds and tasting as good as the Norfolk variety.

The lemon pudding was so alluring that most of the newspaper men came again for more. The dessert was West Indian limes (five for a cent), pears (4 cents a pound), and so on.

The meal cost much less than the tinned meat and fruit so much patronized by the poor, and was far more nourishing.

HE CONFESSED.

"Captain, you told me this boat would reach the dock by 9 o'clock."

"Did I, madam? Well, I must have lied to you. We'll be there in about twenty minutes."

"But the land isn't in sight yet."

"So I see. Madam, you have caught me in another lie."

LOCAL DOINGS.

Some office-seekers are appointed, but more are disappointed.

Rev. Collins addressed the Public School on Friday afternoon last.

One good swift kick often gets results where sympathy would be wasted.

It is much easier to convert cash into experience than experience into cash.

Rev. McAllister and Rev. Powell will exchange pulpits next Sunday morning.

Mr John May's sale was very successful last week, the receipts being very large.

Success is always due to our own efforts; failure we can blame on somebody else.

We have lived long enough to discover there is nothing much going on anywhere.

It isn't our own bad luck that discouraged us so much as the good luck of other people.

The difference between what we are and what we know we ought to be is the vast opportunity in life.

Don't forget how vast is the number of subjects on which you are highly qualified to keep silent.

Men claim that it is not good business to spend money to secure industries, and then to spend more money to "fight them to a finish."

"It does not hardly seem enough," but it is claimed that $200.00 is the price paid in Exeter to save a man's reputation—for—well, we do not know what.

Rev. J. W. Hodgins of Stratford occupied the pulpit of the Trivitt Memorial church on Sunday last, preaching two excellent sermons. Rev. Collins conducted Harvest Thanksgiving services in Stratford.

Many friends will regret to learn that Mr. Ephrain Follick suffered a severe stroke of paralysis on Thursday last. At the time of writing he has somewhat improved and is now able to leave his bed for short intervals.

A large number of Exeter people attended the fowl supper in Crediton on Thursday evening. The buggy, attached to the horse driven by Miss Hattie Handford, while left in the hotel shed, was badly damaged, the top and seat being torn off. It became necessary to procure another rig in which to return home.

The following is the list of nominees made by public school teachers to the Advisory Council of the Education Department,—Harriett Johnson, Toronto; Thos. A. Reid, Owen Sound; R. F. Downey, B. A.; B. Packkpaed, Peterboro; Hugh A Beaton, Walkerville; J. Frank Bryant, M. D. London; Jas. Denny, B. A., Ottawa; W. B. Weidenhammer, B.A. Exeter Four are to be elected.

It is announced that, as a result of the decision of the tanners to advance the price of leather from 10 to 20 per cent. over present prices, shoe manufacturers and dealers announce an increase in the price of shoes of 10 per cent. This means an advance of 25 per cent. over the prices charged for shoes a year ago.

After thirty-six years of successful business in the tanning industry in Exeter Mr. T. H. McCallum is giving up the business. During his long business career here Mr. McCallum has been closely identified with the best interests of the town and we trust that he will continue a resident of Exeter, although his business interests are now largely centred in London.

The peach growers of the Niagara district, both sides of the border, stand to lose more than $100,000 for the very peculiar reason that there is an over abundance of this luscious fruit this year. The crop is too big to handle, and there is a shortage of pickers, a shortage of baskets, and the transportation companies are unable to furnish sufficient cars in which to ship the fruit after it is picked.

Griff—Hunter—A quiet wedding took place on Wednesday at the parsonage of the Memorial Methodist Church, when Miss Hattie Melissa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hunter, of Exeter, became the bride of Mr. Harry Griff, also of that place. Rev. Mr. Anderson officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Griff will reside at 1003 Waterloo street.—London Advertiser of October 3rd.

HARVEST HOME.—Sunday last was observed in the James street Methodist Church as Harvest Home Sunday, when the pastor, Rev. McAlister, preached appropriate sermons, and the choir furnished choice music. The male quartette rendered selections both morning and evening. Mr. Goodwin and Miss Nina Carling sang pleasing solos, the former in the morning and the latter in the evening. The church was nicely decorated with flowers. The services throughout were very bright and interesting.

LOCAL OPTION.—The Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance has definately decided to introduce local option campaigns this year in some fifty Ontario municipalities, more than half of which are large-sized towns and cities, including Peterborough, Lindsay, St Marys, Wingham, Clinton, Essex and Parkhill. The province has been divided into six parts and Field Secretaries will be kept busy from now until the first of January organizing committees and arranging for the introduction of by-laws for the suppression of the liquor traffic. The following municipalities in this county have been selected for the vote:—Bayfield, Blyth, Clinton, Exeter, McKillop Morris, Stephen, Turnberry, and Wingham.

HICKS' FORECAST FOR OCTOBER—A Reactionary storm period is central on the 14th, 15th and 16th. The moon is at greatest south declination on the 16th, hence the atmospheric tides will flow from northerly directions bringing boreal storms of cold rain, merging into sleet and snow over vast areas. The barometer will rise on western flanks of storm centres, bring autumnal gales and change to much colder, progressively from northwest. The quadrature of Uranus and Neptune with Sun and Earth on the 19, and 23, will intensify conditions at this time, prolonging the present tendency to seismic perturbations.

A horse driven by Mr. Ed. Hedgman ran away on the London Road North on Monday after being frightened by an auto. Little damage was done.

An exchange says that a farmer who recently separated from his wife is suing her for seven years wages. Seems funny he did not manage to get something on account as he went along. Just another case of the poor farmer fighting a trust.

Messrs. Snell and Marchand on Monday sold one of the new houses they built this summer on the site of the old Mansion House. The house sold was the most southerly one and the purchaser was Mr. John G. Barr of Cromarty, who will move to town this fall.

Earl, the 10-year-old son of Mr. Frank Mallett, jr., was operated on for appendicitis on Thursday evening of last week by Drs. Hyndman and McGillicuddy at the home of Mr and Mrs. P. Bawden. The operation was successful and the little fellow is now well on the way to complete recovery.

Tom Carling, jr., had a few moments of excitement at Centralia on Sunday afternoon when his horse became frightened of an automobile, and bolting into the ditch overturned the buggy and threw him out. Tommy was dragged two or three rods, but was not hurt. In turning onto the road again the buggy righted itself and the horse stopped after a short run, no hurt or damage being done.

On a busy day a woman walked into the office of the court rooms at Atlantic, Ga., and, addressing Judge Blank, said; Are you the reprobate judge?" "I am the probate judge," That is what I was saying, she said, 'and I have come to you because I am in trouble. My husband was studying to be a minister at a logical seminary, and he died detested, and left three little infidels, and I have come to be appointed their executioner."

We read not long since that only a very small percentage of business firms remain under the same business management for twenty-five years. Twenty-five years ago we bought out the bakery business of Mr. John Bell and started in the building now occupied by the Canadian Express. After five years we moved into our present premises. During the time we have been in business there have been a great many changes, but we remain in the same line with the same motto, to serve the public faithfully. We desire to heartily thank our many customers for their liberal patronage during all these years, but feel we cannot let it go just at that so have decided to give a birthday party on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 15th and 16th. That no one will feel barred from attending our party, to every purchaser of goods, even as low as ten cents, we will give tea, coffee or cocoa, a piece of birthday cake and a flower. It has been our aim to give the very best service possible. Our motto, "Cleanliness, Quality and Equality." We solicit a continuance of your patronage and will endeavor to give the same honest dealing in the future as we have in the past.—E. A. FOLLICK.

PIONEER PASSES AWAY.—Probably the oldest pioneer resident of this district passed peacefully away at her home John street, on Saturday night last. We refer to the demise of Mary Davis widow of the late Richard Davis, at the good old age of 86 years, 8 months and 11 days. Mrs. Davis had been in failing health from the infirmities of old age for the past year, and while her death was not in the least unexpected the event of her demise leaves an ineffareable void among those who knew and esteemed her for her lovable qualities Mrs Davis was born in Exeter, England, June 26, 1826, her maiden name being Mary Sanders. She came to Canada with her parents when but sixteen years of age, being among the very earliest settlers, when this district was a huge and dense forest. Like all the early inhabitants she shared and endured the many hardships incident to pioneer life, and her experiences of the early days were many and varied. Deceased was three times married, her first husband being Thomas Snell, the second John Rendle, and the third Richard Davis, Mr. Davis having predeceased her about 14 years. She is survived by five sons and one daughter, Mr. John Rendle of Spokane, Wash.; Daniel, Sidney, Joseph and Richard Davis, and Mrs Samuel Sweet of town. She is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Wm. Fanson of Winnipeg, Man., who was present when the end came. Mrs. Davis was a faithful member of the English church, and was admired and esteemed for her many excellent qualities. She was a kind and indulgent mother, full of goodwill and human sympathy, and she radiated cheerfulness and helpfulness. Her remains were taken to the Trivitt Memorial church, where a very impressive service was conducted by the rector, Rev. D. W. Collins, after which they were conveyed to the Exeter cemetery for interment.

ROOSEVELT SHOT

Milwaukee, Wis. Oct. 14—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was shot and slightly wounded to-night as he was leaving the Gilpatrick Hotel in an automobile for the Auditorium to make a speech. The wound was superficial, and the Colonel went on to the hall and began his speech after he had seen the assailant arrested and taken to the police station.

The man was seized and held until policeman came up. A mob surged around the prisoner, who apparently is mentally upset on the subject of Roosevelt's running for another term as President.

The man, who is small of stature, admitted firing the shot, and said that "any man looking for a third term ought to be shot."

Colonel Roosevelt's life was probably saved by a manuscript of the speech which he delivered to-night. The bullet struck the manuscript which retarded its force as it passed through into the flesh.

CLANDEBOYE

The Atkinson suit against the Grand Trunk Railway for damages for the death of James Atkinson, husband of the plaintiff, who was killed by a train near Clandeboye last winter, was won by the railway in the trial at London last week. The day of the accident was a cold and stormy one, and he had been sent by the foreman of the section gang to do work along the line. The plaintiff claimed that the company was negligent in sending the man alone in the existing weather conditions, and that the engineer of the train did not give sufficient warning to the sectionmen along the track. The railway's solicitor claimed that this was not the case, that the man was warned to keep on the alert for trains, and that he knew that trains would come upon him, having been two years in the employ of the road. Several witnesses were examined including James Dickie, a sectionman, Harold Bice, a student telegrapher, Thomas Hennessey, hotelkeeper, and Eli and Austin Bice. The jury brought in a clear verdict for the railway.

LUMLEY.

Mr. Enoch Parker had a very successful raising of his barn on Tuesday last and now has the siding on.—Mr. M. McTaggart and sister Annie, also Miss Liza Wallace attended the Welsh-Shortt nuptials on Wednesday of last week.—Mr and Mrs. Chas. Kingon of London who visited relatives in this section, have returned home.—J. L. Mitchell and wife spent Sunday with the former's brother, Mr. Atwood Mitchell.—Mr. Geo. Glenn has disposed of his grey roadster to Mr. Robt. Saddler of Staffa for a good figure.—Mrs. Hugh Chesney of Seaforth spent the week and with her brother Franklin.

GRAND BEND.

Ezra Brenner went to one of the London Hospital Tuesday, returning Saturday much improved from his rheumatism.—Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Clark, who have been here for the summer, returned to Hamilton last week.—Dr. L. Follick and sister, Mrs. Baker came here Sunday in Mr. Follick's auto. They were accompanied back by Mrs. M. Gill, who intends remaining for a week in Exeter.—Mr. and Mrs. Stewardson of Greenway visited Geo. Oliver Sunday.—The renovating work of the Methodist church is finished and it was reopened Sunday, services being conducted by Rev. Steadman of Ellinville. Both services were well attended.—Mrs. Gravelle, who has been the last two weeks visiting in Thedford, has returned.

GREENWAY

Mr. Ed. English is renewing acquaintances here.—Miss Stevens has returned from attending the Teachers' Convention in London, and visiting her home in Arva.—Willie Driver left our burg Monday after spending the summer with Mr. C. Woodburn.—A number from here attended the anniversary services in Grand Bend Church Sunday.—The special services that have been in progress in the Methodist church for the past week are growing in interest. On Sunday afternoon Miss Morton preached to a very large congregation. The service was of unusual power and blessing. At the evening service some 13 young people manifested their desire to become Christians. The services will be continued each evening of this week and next, and on Sunday next Miss Morton will preach. In every sermon she presents the truth in a very inspiring and soul stirring manner. Special Friday evening her subject will be, Where is the lamb,". Special music by choir.

Mr. Charles R. Dale of Toledo Ohio, formerly of St. Thomas, has been made storekeeper at the divisional headquarters of the Wabash, at Fort Wayne Ind. Mr. Dale has assumed his new duties, and Mrs. Dale, who was formerly Miss Amelia Oke, will join him shortly.

The W. M. S. of James street Methodist church was entertained at the Parsonage for their October meeting, and enjoyed a social time. During the program the President expressed the regret of the society upon the departure of Mrs. J. May, who shortly leaves for her new home in Clinton.

SHOT IN THE BACK AT WOODHAM

A shooting accident happened near Woodham on Tuesday last that might have been attended with fatal results. It appears Mr. James Howe, an Englishman, was out in the woods shooting and wounding a piece of game went to kill it outright with the butt of his gun, with the result that the second barrel was discharged, the whole load lodging in his back, under the right shoulder. He managed to get to his home when Dr. Campbell was called and extracted as much of the shot as possible, and the patient is now doing as well as could be expected, but is by no means out of danger.

BARNS BURNED.

Fire, thought to have originated from a spark from a threshing engine, completely destroyed the large barns of Mr. Wilson O'Neil of con. 18, four miles east of Parkhill on Monday. The fire broke out about 1.30 in the afternoon and had secured great headway before being noticed by the threshers, who were engaged on the premises. The fire burned so rapidly that it was with difficulty that the threshers got their horses out of the stable. Mr. O'Neil had all his grain threshed and loses along with the barn about 1000 bushels of grain, all his hay and cut straw, and implements, besides two hogs and a number of hens and turkeys. The loss is about $4,000, partly covered by insurance.

RECIPROCITY CANDIDATTE LOST

WINNIPEG—Oct. 18—By a decisive majority of 847 the electors of MacDonald yesterday returned the Government candidate, Alexander Morrison, over R. L. Richardson, who ran as Independent Liberal, and on the Grain Growers ticket, which put reciprocity and an increased British preference to the front. The entire vote cast is heavy runs over 6,000 as against 5,571 cast in the last general election, when W. D. Staples, Conservative, had a majority of 161, the vacancy being caused by his appointment to the Dominion Trade Commission.

Conservative supporters acclaim the victory as the last nail in the coffin of reciprocity.

BROKE BOTH ARMS.

Mr. Alfred Dow, who resides near Rusoldale, met with an unfortunate accident on Thursday last by falling from an apple tree and breaking both arms, leaving him in a very helpless condition. The injured members were dressed and the patient is doing as well as could be expected, but it will be some time before he will have use of the injured arms.

GOOD RECIPES FROM ITALY.

Vegetable Chowder. — One-half quart of stock, two slices of lean pork or a ham bone, two tomatoes, fresh or one canned, one cup rice, two tablespoons of dried beans, one tablespoon of peas, fresh or canned, two onions. Put into the stock the slices of pork, cut into small pieces, or, if desired, a ham bone may be substituted for the pork. Add the tomatoes, cut into small pieces; also, the onions, in small pieces, and the rice. Boil all together until the rice is cooked. Then add the beans and the peas and cook a little longer. The soup is ready when it is thick. If desired this chowder can be made with fish broth instead of the stock, and with the addition of shrimps which have been taken from their shells. The dish can be served hot or cold.

Macaroni with Tomato Souse. — Two quarts of water, three-quarters pound of macaroni. Boil the water until it makes big bubbles. Add salt, then break the macaroni and put it in. Cover the saucepan and boil for 15 minutes. The saucepan should not be too small, otherwise the macaroni will stick to the bottom. Prepare the sauce as follows: Take a good slice of ham fat and chop very fine with it a piece of onion, a piece of celery and some parsley. Then put this into a frying pan and cook until the grease is colored. (If desired, add a small lump of butter). When well colored add two tablespoons of tomato paste dissolved in a little hot water. Boil all together for 15 minutes. Drain the macaroni and put it into the frying pan with the sauce, mix well with fork and spoon over the fire, so that the macaroni will be thoroughly seasoned, then add three tablespoons of grated Parmesan cheese, mix again and serve. If no tomato paste is available make the tomato sauce as follows: Chop up fine one-quarter of an onion, a piece of celery the length of a finger, two or three basil leaves and a small bunch of parsley. Slice seven or eight tomatoes (fresh or canned), add salt and pepper, and put all on together to cook in four tablespoons of good olive oil. Stir occasionally, and when it becomes as thick as cream strain and add the macaroni as before directed.

Meat Sauce.—Put into a saucepan one pound of beef and one-half ounces of lard, some parsley, salt pepper, one clove and a very small slice of ham. Fry these over a hot fire for a few moments, moving them continually, and when the onion is browned add four tablespoons of red wine and four tablespoons of tomato sauce (or tomato paste). When this sauce begins to sputter add, little by little, some boiling water. Stick a fork into the meat from time to time to allow the juices to escape. Take a little of the sauce in a spoon, and when it looks a good golden color and there is a sufficient quantity to cover the meat put the covered saucepan at the back of the stove and allow it to simmer until the meat is thoroughly cooked. Then take out the meat, slice it, prepare macaroni, or any paste you desire, and serve it with the meat, and the sauce poured over all, and the addition of butter and grated cheese.

Codfish "Alla Marinaia."—Take one pound of salt codfish; boil slightly until you can remove the skin and bone; chop up fine a piece of onion and parsley, and fry them in a saucepan with three tablespoons of best olive oil, then put in the codfish with salt, pepper and a pinch of allspice. While this is cooking put into another saucepan three tablespoons of best vinegar, two tablespoons of fish broth, and one-half bay leaf; add a little flour to give body to the sauce, stir well, then remove the bay leaf and take the saucepan off the fire; arrange the platter with pieces of fried bread in a layer on the bottom, then the codfish and then the sauce poured over it.

Rice with Butter and Cheese. — Take one-half cup of rice. Boil in salted water. After 20 minutes of boiling take off the fire and drain. Then put the rice back into a saucepan with three tablespoons of grated cheese (Parmesan) and three tablespoons of butter. Mix well and serve as an entree or around a plate of meat.

USEFUL HINTS.

Sour milk makes a spongy light cake. A cake which cuts like pound cake is made with sweet milk. Soda is used alone with sour milk; with sweet milk, soda and cream of tartar. Butter should be beaten to a cream and the sugar added very gradually, then the yolks of eggs, then the flour, then the whites of eggs, and finally the flavoring.

The unpleasant strong flavor of uncooked onions is satisfactorily removed by slicing them; then put an onion chopped up with three them in a collander, pour boiling water on them, then plunge into ice water and allow them to remain half an hour. They will be sweet and crisp.

When silk is spotted with grease rub it with French chalk or magnesia, then hold the spotted portion near the fire. The chalk will absorb the grease and can be brushed off, taking the grease with it.

To get a good light from an oil lamp the wicks must be changed when they become clogged. Soaking wicks in vinegar twenty-four hours before putting them in the lamps aids in getting a clear flame.

Crushed ribbons should not be ironed; it makes them shiny. Dampen them and then fold them smoothly and tightly around a rolling pin or empty bottle. This will remove slight creases. There is nothing for very bad creases but to iron them.

Refuse, either vegetable or animal, should never be thrown on the ash heap, where it will decay and cause unwholesome smells. Give the refuse to pigs or fowls, if there are any. If there are neither pigs nor fowls, the refuse should be burned.

Windows in a sleeping-room should be so arranged that the fresh night air can come in from one side and the impure can go out through the other. To do this the upper sash should be down at the top and the lower sash up at the bottom, not less than one inch for every person sleeping in the room.

A SEVERE TEST.

Alfred Tennyson DeLury, M.A., Professors of Mathematics at the University of Toronto, sometimes puts extracts of poetry to a mathematical test.

Once he lectured on "Mathematical Allusion in Literature," and quoted from Hiawatha:

"Swift of foot was Hiawatha,
He could shoot an arrow from him,
And run forward with such fleetness
That the arrow fell behind him—"

"Now," went on the lecturer, "on calculation it has been proved that in order to perform this feat,

Prof. DeLury.

Hiawatha would have to run about eighty-four miles an hour."

At another time he was lecturing to a large class of School of Practical Science men. He was annoyed by one student who kept up a constant tapping with his pencil. The professor waited till he found that the noise was intentional, and then he paused and said in his own inimitable way, "I think there is a gentleman tapping his pencil on his desk—or on his head."

BELL TELEPHONE FINANCES.

In view of the fact that an additional issue of Bell Telephone bonds is about to be offered to the public, it is interesting to note that these securities are a first charge upon the whole lines, works and plant of the company other than real estate. The real estate in unencumbered. The value of the plant account (not including real estate) is $20,531,327, or more than three times the outstanding bonds. As regards the security from the income point of view the following table speaks for itself:

	Earnings
	Gross Revenue	Applicable to Bond Interest	Bond Interest
1906	$4,139,334	$1,135,838	$142,983
1907	4,829,657	1,223,767	179,970
1908	4,580,606	1,606,724	182,450
1909	4,949,197	1,651,339	182,450
1910	5,510,685	1,729,575	182,450

On the basis of the average results for the last six years the net earnings approximate to six times the total interest charges. The present authorized issue of the bonds is $7,500,000, of which $6,649,000 are out.

The company has a capital stock outstanding of $15,000,000, which is valued by the market at 160 per cent. Dividends at the rate of eight per cent. have been paid continuously for twenty-six years. Principal and interest on the bonds are payable on April and October 1st at the Bank of Montreal.

Winding wool is difficult if there is no one to hold the skein. Put two flatirons on the table a sufficient distance apart to allow the wool to be tightly stretched. This will answer as well as any one holding the skein.

Wife (to her husband who is arranging his papers)—"What have you got here in this parcel, Thomas?" Husband—"They are the dear reminiscences of our honeymoon." Wife—"Oh, how delightful! Pray, what kind of reminiscences are they?" Husband—"They are hotel bills!"

"Look at me!" exclaimed the leading lawyer warmly. "I never took a drop of medicine in my life, and I am as strong as any two of your patients put together." "Well, that's nothing," retorted the physician. "I never went to law in my life, and I'm as rich as any two dozen of your clients put together."

TORONTO CORRESPONDENCE

INTERESTING GOSSIP FROM ONTARIO'S CAPITAL.

With the Suffragets—Toronto Politics — Problem of the Churches—50,000 People Require Their Good Offices.

Miss Wylie, the English suffragest, who confesses to having thrown bricks with the rest of them, to two terms in prison and to leadership in a hunger strike, has not been making much progress in stirring Toronto women up to militant methods. Toronto has its suffrage associations—many of them—though the membership of each is small and of problematical influence. But the suffrage leaders in Toronto absolutely decline to start out on a campaign of window smashing. There is, for example, Dr. Augusta Stone Gullen, who is president of one of the local associations. While a woman of strong mentality she is the antithesis of revolutionary in appearance, with a motherly figure built on generous proporitions and a kindly face. Mrs. Flora McD. Denison, another leader, seems also well supplied with human kindness.

Perhaps the most striking figure of the local suffragists is Mrs. J. B. Leather, who came to Toronto from England some two years ago with her husband, who is a professor at the University. Physically she has a slight figure, a thin face and the eyes of a dreamer. She is a woman of great culture, speaks French, German, Italian and Russian and is an accomplished musician. Added to this she has intellectual force in an unusual degree. She knows the suffrage question through and through, which is more than can be said of all who talk on the subject either for or against. In addition she is much interested in all social reforms.

POLITICAL DEMONSTRATIONS.

The annual meeting of the Ontario Reform Association brought to the city some of that party's stalwarts, including the Chief himself, Hon. Mackenzie King, Hon. Geo. P. Graham and a number of others. These annual meetings are generally pretty perfunctory affairs, but this year it was more interesting than usual by reason of the fact that addresses were delivered by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Rowell, Mr. King, who is president of the association, and others. Local politicians have been following with interest the activities of Mr. Rowell and Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Apparently the country is willing to listen to both, and some of the large crowds and the enthusiasm that have been in evidence have been the subject of much comment. But as to what it means, or whether it means anything, even the change of a single seat in either Dominion or Provincial elections, no one will at this stage predict.

WARD ASSOCIATIONS MEET.

The Toronto political pot, too, is beginning to boil. The peculiarity about the Toronto pot is, however, that it boils only on one side. The organization of the Liberal party is rarely in evidence, and when it is, ineffective is the only word that describes it. There are not many persons who could tell you what it is or what it does. On the other hand the Conservatives have an exceedingly active organization. There is a central association and a ward association for each of the wards. As the boundaries of the wards do not coincide with the boundaries of the electoral ridings one might think there would be some confusion, but the experience of the party is that the ward arrangement is quite effective.

The only real political scraps in Toronto occur when factions in the Conservative associations get fighting among themselves. And just now, with the annual meetings of the organizations approaching, there are rumors of impending trouble. One report is that Mr. A. W. Wright is leading a revolt against Hon. Thos. Crawford in the west riding. Both gentlemen are well known throughout the Province. Mr. Wright as labor leader, political organizer, orator, imperial mission lecturer and good fellow; Mr. Crawford as former Speaker of the Legislature. It is impossible to say how far the threatened civil war will develop. It will not reach the point where the holding of a seat by the Conservatives will be endangered.

A CRAWFORD STORY.

When Sir James Whitney formed his cabinet Mr. Crawford's friends hoped he would be made Minister of Agriculture. But they were disappointed. Some time later some one who said he was the editor of the Mail and Empire, called up Mr. Crawford on the telephone to tell him that he had a story to the effect that Mr. Crawford had been using strong language about Sir James. The editor said he would like to have Mr. Crawford's explanation. According to the story, Mr. Crawford hastened to the Mail and Empire office, where it was discovered that a practical joker had been at work. Apparently Mr. Crawford's standing with the Premier was not affected, for it was afterwards that he was appointed Speaker.

A few years ago Mr. Joseph Russell led a revolt against the ward association powers-that-be in the east end. For a time the revolt was successful and resulted in Mr. Russell sitting in Parliament for one term. The regulars "came back" last year under Mr. Kemp, but the fight there is still smoldering.

CHURCHES' DOWN TOWN PROBLEM.

According to Rev. S. Wesley Dean, of the Fred Victor Mission, there are 50,000 people living south of College street. A large percentage of these are foreigners and most of the others live in boarding houses. There are few people anywhere more in need of the good offices of the churches than these, and yet this is the district that the churches of Toronto are showing a strong disposition to desert. One after another they are abandoning their buildings, selling their sites and moving into new modern edifices in the more fashionable residential districts. The latest on the list is Erskine Street Presbyterian. Even Central Presbyterian church on Grosvenor street, which is two blocks north of College, has a proposal under consideration which will take its activities out into the Rosedale area.

Taking these church movings individually they are easily explained. The churches were formerly situated in the midst of their respective congregations. But the members of the congregations one by one sold their residences and moved to the newer districts. The new owners of the residences are generally boarding house keepers, and eventually the church finds it has to follow its congregation. For boarding houses are not good church supporters and even devout churchgoers often will not go two or three miles when they can find another nearer home.

But meanwhile what are the Toronto churches going to do about the city of 50,000 persons who live south of College? It is a problem that challenges solution.

RESTAURANTS IN CHURCHES.

A few of the most prominent churches in the city are making a stand against the steady movement toward the residential districts. There is St. James Cathedral with its ancient associations that manages to bring a congregation to its private pews from the ends of the city every Sunday morning. The evening service is a different story. The Metropolitan Methodist church, one of the most beautiful church edifices in America, tells a somewhat similar story. So does St. Andrews Presbyterian. And there are a number of others of various denominations, some of them touching very closely the lives of the people among whom they are situated. The organization of the Roman Catholic church leaves no doubt as to the regularity and permanence of the work in such a church as St. Michael's Cathedral.

And some of these churches are not confining their activities to the pulpit or to Sundays. St. James has its parish house, with gymnasium, restaurant, and other conveniences open every day in the week. The Metropolitan is doing a similar work. At the moment St. Andrews is spending $45,000 on an extension to be devoted to like purposes. Whether these efforts will eventually result in reaching any considerable portion of the masses of the people remains to be seen. For the present they partake more or less of the character of private clubs, using the church buildings for their club houses.

Things which will save time and make work much easier in the sewing-room are a good, steady sewing table with brass-headed tacks driven in the side to indicate a yard length; a perforated wheel, pencils and chalk for marking; carbon paper for transferring; a remnant box; a large pin-cushion full of pins attached to the corner of the cutting table and another cushion holding safety pins.

Bread crumbs can be made quickly by tying stale pieces of bread in a muslin bag and rubbing gently between the hands for a few minutes. The crumbs will be fine enough to use for any purpose.

A source of disease, but one frequently overlooked, is the pet animals of the household. Even the coats of the most cleanly cats or dogs must come in contact with and carry many dangerous germs into the house.

All dried vegetables should be soaked overnight, to reabsorb the water lost through evaporation. Vegetables should always be cleaned before being cooked, and unless they are old should never be pared. During the boiling process the cover should be tilted to allow a circulation of air, which insures a better color and flavor.

ONLY ONE WAY TO CURE RHEUMATISM

It Must Be Treated Through the Blood and the Poisonous Acid Driven Out.

The twinges and tortures of rheumatism are not due to cold, damp weather as so many persons suppose. Rheumatism comes from poisonous acid in the blood. This is a medical truth which every sufferer should realize. There is only one way to cure rheumatism—it must be treated through the blood. All the liniments and rubbing and so-called electric treatment in the world will not cure rheumatism, and the sufferer who tries them is not only wasting money, but is allowing the trouble to become more deep-rooted in the system and harder to cure when the proper remedy is tried. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills always cure rheumatism because they go right to the root of the trouble in the blood. These Pills make the new, rich blood of health, and in this way drive out the poisonous acid which causes rheumatism. Thousands of instances of cures might be given, among which is the following one. Mrs. G. R. Dulmage, Cherry Valley, Ont., says: "I was attacked with rheumatism which gradually grew worse until I was confined to my bed. For about two weeks I had to be shifted and turned in bed as I was utterly unable to help myself. I was under the doctor's care and so far recovered that I was able to get up and move about, but the trouble still remained in my system. If I put my hands in cold water, or if I went out in the evening or in damp weather the trouble would return, and for four years I thus suffered from rheumatism, until I began to think it could not be driven from my system. Finally I gave up all other medicine and began to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after using them for a couple of months I was completely cured and have not had a twinge of rheumatism since. I can recommend the Pills to anyone suffering from this trouble."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE CAUSE.

Auntie—"Why, Tommy, how you do grow!"

Tommy—"Yes, I think they water me too much."

Astonished Auntie—"Water you too much!"

Tommy—"Yes, auntie; they bath me every night and morning."

Recognized as the leading specific for the destruction of worms, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator has proved a boon to suffering children everywhere. It seldom fails.

"Why did you insist on having your wife join the Suffragette Club?" "Because," replied Mr. Meekton grimly, "I want to see that Suffragette Club get all the trouble that's coming to it."

WHEN.

"When does your husband find time to do all his reading?"

"Usually when I want to tell him something important."

Skin-Tortured Little Ones

Mothers! Are your little ones suffering from itching, burning eczemas, or other torturing, disfiguring skin troubles? Are you, yourself, worn out with long, sleepless nights and ceaseless anxiety in caring for them? Then you should know that, in most cases, a warm bath with and a gentle application of Cuticura Ointment bring immediate relief, the little sufferers sleep, tired, fretted mothers rest, and peace falls on distracted households.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a postal to "Cuticura," Dept. 23L, Boston, U. S. A., will secure a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin and scalp, and treatment of their affections.

REID'S LITTLE WAYS.

Sir George Reid, Australian High Commissioner in London, who has been travelling over America lately, showed on one or two occasions some rather odd peculiarities for a public man of his standing.

He spoke at several luncheons in Toronto, and just as the guests were gathering for one of these events, he was introduced to a number of prominent citizens. After they had chatted for a few minutes Sir George indicated his desire that the others should precede him into the banquet room, and he would see them later. He wished them all to be in their places when he entered.

Sir George Reid.

At the same luncheon, after the chairman had called on him to speak, there was an awkward pause. Everybody wondered what the wait was for. Few know yet, but the fact is that the Australian knight would not arise to speak until all the waitresses had left the room.

Sir George, who is a man of considerable girth, described himself as "the only man in the world who represented a whole continent." This sally provoked a laugh.

At his request a stenographer was brought to the luncheon so that his remarks could be taken verbatim and cabled to all parts of the Empire.

"GOOD STUFF."

A Confirmed Drinker Takes to Postum.

A housewife was recently surprised when cook served Postum instead of tea and coffee. She says:

"For the last five or six years I have been troubled with nervousness, indigestion and heart trouble. I couldn't get any benefit from the doctor's medicine, so finally he ordered me to stop drinking coffee, which I did. (Tea is just as injurious because it contains caffeine—the drug in coffee.)

"I drank hot water while taking the doctor's medicine, with some improvement, then went back to coffee with the same old trouble as before.

"A new servant girl told me about Postum—said her folks used it and liked it in place of coffee. We got a package, but I told her I did not believe my husband would like it, as he was a great coffee drinker.

"To my surprise he called for a third cut, said it was "good stuff" and wanted to know what it was. We have used Postum ever since and both feel better than we have in years.

"My husband used to have bad spells with his stomach and would be sick three or four days, during which time he could not eat or drink anything. But since he gave up coffee and took to Postum, he has had no more trouble, and we now fully believe it was all caused by coffee.

"I have not had any return of my former troubles since drinking Postum, and feel better and can do more work than in the last ten years. We tell everyone about it—some say they tried it and did not like it. I tell them it makes all the difference as to how it's made. It should be made according to directions—then it is delicious."

MICROBES BUSIEST TIME.

Make the Greatest Trouble at Nine and Nine.

A celebrated scientist has made the interesting announcement that there are more microbes in the air at nine o'clock in the morning and at nine o'clock at night than during any other periods of the day. He has also discovered that the percentage of microbes in the atmosphere is less at three o'clock in the morning and three o'clock in the afternoon than at any other times. The explanation advanced for the partiality of the microbe for nine o'clock a.m. and p.m. is that the "microbe hour" is controlled by the movements of people. From five to nine in the morning they are going from their homes to their working places, and from five to nine in the evening they are again journeying through the streets, either homeward bound or in search of pleasure.

He noted that at or about six o'clock every morning and evening there were indications of the approach of the microbe "rush" hour. From that time on until nine o'clock the atmosphere became more and more crowded with germs of all kinds, some bad, some good; and then, immediately after nine o'clock, the tide began to ebb, until it was always lowest around about three o'clock. According to his researches, after lunch is the safest time for a nap.

WHAT WILL HAPPEN.

A Southern lawyer tells of a case that came to him at the outset of his career, wherein his principal witness was a darky named Jackson, supposed to have knowledge of certain transactions not at all to the credit of his employer, the defendant. "Now, Jackson," said the lawyer, "I want you to understand the importance of telling the truth when you are put on the stand. You know what will happen, don't you, if you don't tell the truth. "Yes, sir," was Jackson's reply; "in dat case I expects our side will win de case."

AGREED WITH THE COURT.

"I wish to make a motion." The speaker stood a little unsteadily, looking at the judge, who ignored him. Pausing a moment, the would-be maker of the motion sat down. He was a good lawyer and a friend of the presiding judge, but at times he was not quite in condition for decorous court proceedings. The judge shook his head and, leaning forward, said sternly: "The court is of the opinion, Mr. ——, that you are not quite yourself!" "It is." "Well, that's the first correct opinion I've heard from this court," he remarked with an air of solemn approval and returned to his chair, where he remained in imperturable content.

A DIFFERENT THING.

Henry Hawkins, junior, was about to be married, and on the eve of this momentous occasion he was discussing the forthcoming event with his father.

"Well, father," he was saying, "I must confess that I don't feel so sure of this marriage business as I did at first. In fact, I'm funking it altogether."

"Nonsense, my boy!" responded his parent. "What do you mean? Maudie's a nice girl, with a little money and plenty of common-sense. What more do you want?"

"Oh, yes, I admit that!" replied Henry junior. "But it's all very fine for you to talk, father. You married my mother; but I'm marrying a total stranger!"

SUFFERERS FROM PILES!

Zam-Buk Has Cured These!

Friction on the hemorrhoid veins that are swollen, inflamed and gorged with blood, is what causes the terrible pain and stinging and smarting of piles. Zam-Buk applied at night will be found to give ease before morning.

Mr. Thomas Pearson, of Prince Albert, Sask., writes: "I must thank you for the benefit I have received from Zam-Buk. Last summer I suffered greatly from piles. I started to use Zam-Buk and found it gave me relief, so I continued it, and after using three or four boxes it effected a complete cure."

Magistrate Sanford, of Weston, King's Co., N.S., says: "I suffered long from itching piles, but Zam-Buk has now cured me."

Mr. William Kenty, of Upper Nine Mile River, Hants Co., N.S., says: "I suffered terribly from piles, the pain at times being almost unbearable. I tried various ointments, but everything I tried failed to do me the slightest good. I was tired of trying various remedies, when I heard of Zam-Buk, and thought as a last resource I would give this balm a trial. After a very short time Zam-Buk effected a complete cure."

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for skin injuries and diseases, eczema, ulcers, varicose veins, cuts, burns, bruises, chaps, cold sores, etc. 50c. box all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse imitations. Try Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet.

A GHASTLY GUIDE.—The Grain Grower's Guide is worrying the life out of its otherwise prosperous followers with perpetual dismal forebodings. No communities of people could endure the succession of miseries that the Guide prepares for those that believe it. Personally conducted followers of this Guide have been led to believe that the farmers would have no harvesters to gather their crop no twine to tie it up, no elevators to contain it, no cars to carry it to market, nor no one to buy it when it got there. Farmers in this gloomy procession are invited to breakfast, dine and sup on horrors. Every day is set apart as a growl-giving festival. He who enters the office of The Guide and becomes a subscriber leaves hope behind. No more for him the sunny sky, the cheerful companionship of genial friends, the smile of a contented wife, the prattle of wholesome children, the prospect of comfortable days, and of a placid old age; but ever the vision of famine, want, oppression, malicious influences, evil imaginings and the shadow of death. These and such-like sorrows are their manna daily and their evensong. From such forebodings and gloom those who seek other guidance are far removed. They find that the ghastly train of events spread as a programme before their unhappy neighbors do not happen. They work and sleep, take their profits add to their possessions and remain cheerful as they grow more rich.—Vancouver News-Advertiser.

BIDDULPH.

Breen—Morkin.—A pretty wedding was solemnized Wednesday morning in St. Peter's Cathedral, London, Fr. Hanlon officiating, when Miss Kate Breen, daughter of Mr. Patrick Breen of Masonville, was married to Mr. Wm. Morkin of Biddulph. They were attended by Miss Lucy Breen, sister of the bride, and Mr. John Morkin, brother of the groom. The bride was tastefully gowned in a dress of silk, with a wreath and trailing veil attached, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid wore a dress of white silk and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Immediately after the ceremony the couple left on a wedding trip to Montreal, Toronto and other points east. On their return they will reside in Biddulph.

Crediton

Our base-ball fans are greatly interested in the World's Series played between Boston and New York. At the time of writing the score is a tie.

Fred Irish who has been acting as teller of the bank for some time, received notice of his transfers to the Toronto branch and left here on Tuesday. Fred's many friends were sorry to see him go as he was well thought of. We wish him every success. Mr. Oakley of the Goderich branch has been appointed his successor.

Rev. George Finkbeiner of Freeport, Ill., preached in the Evangelical Church last Sunday morning and evening to a very large audiences. Rev. Finkbeiner is another one of our Crediton boys who has made good in the United States and his many friends were pleased to have the opportunity to hear him speak. His sermons were very interesting and inspiring.

Mrs. Daniel Sweitzer who has been spending the summer in Algonquin Park is home for a few weeks.

Mr. Geiger of Zurich occupied the pulpit in the Methodist Church on Sunday night and preached a very eloquent sermon. Although a young man, Mr. Geiger has every indication of becoming one of the leaders in the ministry.

W. B. Gaiser has just received a cheque for $100 payable to his daughter Elsie for the Carter Scolarship won at The Collegiate Institute in London the past term. Miss Gaiser is at present attending Toronto University and certainly has a bright future before her. We extend our hearty congratulations and wish her continued success.

There has been considerable trouble in our village of late caused by some one stealing small articles from the different houses and barns. It is time some steps were taken to stop this before it becomes worse. Wouldn't it be a good idea to start the curfew bell in town. It would be the means of keeping the youngsters off the streets at night and cut off mischief.

Fraser Brown has been confined to his bed the past week suffering from a severe cold. We hope he will soon be able to resume his work in the store.

The sugar beets are being harvested. The crop this year is an excellent one. Those of Jos. Halet's are a record breaker and will give a good average.

Mrs. Henry Eilber is visiting her sister Mrs. Samuel Eilber in Ubly, Mich., this week.

Thanksgiving Services and Fowl Supper.—The Thanksgiving Services in connection with the Methodist Church, will be held on Sunday Oct. 27th, when Rev. T. T. George of Lucan will preach at 10.30 a.m. and 7 p.m., an offering will be taken up in aid of the Trustee Fund. On Tuesday evening a hot fowl supper will be served commencing at 5.30, followed by a choice program. Admission 25c. and 35c.

CENTRALIA.

The Anniversary Services of the Centralia Methodist Church will be held on Sunday next, when the pastor, Rev. Blatchford will preach in the morning Rev. McAllister of Exeter, in the evening.

WINGHAM—The local police are confronted with a mysterious robbery. The sum of $40, all in bills, was stolen on Saturday night from the till in the store of Wallace Hough, on Josephine street, between 6 and 6.30 in the evening, while Mrs Hough, was in the basement preparing tea. The store was unoccupied at the time, and the loss was not detected until nearly 7 o'clock.

ST. MARYS—Thomas Lane, a highly respected resident of Blanshard for over 50 years, passed away on Sunday at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Chas. C. Atkinson, at the age of 72. Deceased was a Liberal in politics and a Methodist in religion. Three daughters and one son survive. The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon, with interment in Kirkton Cemetery.

WINGHAM—It is understood that the local Council is considering making a proposition to the temperance forces in connection with the cancelling of three out of the five licenses now existing here, and not submitting a local option by-law in January, as has been proposed. The local optionists, however will favor no such compromise. The petitions in course of circulation, asking for a local option vote, have been largely signed, and the temperance forces are confident of winning at the polls.

LUCAN—Thirty students from the Lucan high school went to Forest on Friday for the annual field day of the local institution. The Lucan 11 won the football by a score of 1 to 0, while, Forest won in the girl's basket ball contest, 13 to 7. The relay race went to the Lucanites. The visitors were guests in the students at an enjoyable banquet.

Mrs. M. Eidt and Mrs. John Eidt were called to Stratford on Monday, where Mr. John Eidt was taken ill with an attack of pleurisy, and is now in Stratford Hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Harris, after a few week's visit here with the latter's mother, Mrs. Rinker, returned Tuesday to their home in Sarnia.

Mr. Jacob Schroeder is confined to his bed through illness.

Mr. Fred McHale of Cleveland, Ohio, was called home on Saturday owing to the illness of his wife.

THE CANDLE BUOY

QUEER LITTLE LIGHTSHIPS.

They Were Floated and Anchored in the Channel of the River on Dark Nights and Showed the Navigator on Down Trips Where Reefs Were Not.

In the old steamboat days on the Mississippi, before the government had undertaken the duty of marking and lighting the "crossings" where the channel swings over from one bank to the other, the river pilots had to devise their own means of finding their way through these difficult and dangerous places.

In the daytime it was not hard to do, and on moonlight nights the landmarks, which every pilot knew by heart, could be seen plainly enough to make the crossing possible. But there were many nights so dark or foggy that the shore marks were not visible; then the reefs had to be "candled."

Candling was resorted to only on the down trip. Going up the river the pilot might "feel" of the reef with his boat, and if he did not find the best water the first time he could back off and try again a little to one side or the other wherever the soundings showed the deepest water to be.

In going down the river, however, that was impossible. The pilot had to find the channel the first time, for if the boat struck the current would drive her hard on the reef or else swing her broadside on the bar and in ten minutes imbed her in the very midst of it with tons of drifting sand.

To guard against such a disaster when nearing Pig's Eye, Beef Slough or Trempeleau bars—or any one of a dozen bars of equal difficulty—on a dark or hazy night the pilot stopped the boat at the head of the reef. With two men to row, a mate or watchman to steer, a "cub" pilot to manipulate the "candle buoys" and an older pilot to take soundings, the yawl was lowered and permitted to drop down the channel below the steamboat.

After the pilot had determined the best course by taking soundings the "cub," under his direction, anchored two, three or even four of the candle buoys, one after the other, in the center of the channel, and then the men let the yawl drop down below the reef, where it lay a little outside the channel. Then one of the men swung a lantern—a signal at which the pilot on watch came ahead, steering for the tiny lighthouses and running over them, one by one, until the reef was passed.

The candle buoy was made of a piece of two inch light pine plank, beveled for four inches at the "bow" in order to prevent its "diving" as the current pressed against it. A tin "sconce" with three legs, three or four inches long, was tacked down to the plank. Half of a common candle was placed in each sconce, and after being lighted an oiled paper chimney, with a base corresponding to that of the candle stick, was placed over the light to protect it from the wind. The outer ends of the tin "legs" of the sconce were turned back over the base of the paper chimney to hold it in place, and the buoy was ready for launching.

A hole was bored about six inches from the end of the plank. Through the hole a small cord some ten or twelve feet in length was rove and knotted, and to this cord a lump of coal weighing perhaps ten pounds was tied. This served as an anchor to hold the buoy in its place in the center of the channel.

Such was the procedure fifty years ago or more. Since the government boats begin patrolling the river and establishing permanent lights at all bad crossings it is seldom necessary for the pilots to go out in a sounding boat, although it is not an unheard of proceeding even now.

But the candle buoy is a thing of the past. Probably there are scores of present day pilots who never even heard of the makeshift little lightships that their puzzled predecessors were wont to launch amid the darkness and doubt of former years.—Youth's Companion.

A Title as Long as a Preface.

Many old pamphlets are distinguished by titles as long as prefaces. The author of one, published in 1640, evidently did not share in the modern editor's enthusiasm for short title headings, for this is the name under which his publication was ushered into the world: "Scotlands publick Acknowledgement of Gods Just Judgment upon their Nation for their Frequent Breach of Faith, Leagues, and Solemne Oathes made to their Neighbours of England in former ages, to gratine their Treacherous Confederates of France."—London Globe.

Rome's Triumphal Crown.

The triumphal crown of Rome was made of laurel leaves and was given to the general who achieved a great victory over an enemy. He entered the city not by a gate, but over a portion of the wall which was thrown down to afford a passage. At his funeral his laurel crown was placed in his bier and buried with the body.

Bores.

We often boast that we are never bored, but yet we are so conceited that we do not perceive how often we bore others.—La Rochefoucauld.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease the science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

No More Dandruff Or Falling Hair

PARISIAN SAGE IS YOUR FRIEND. USE IT AND ALL HAIR AND SCALP TROUBLES QUICKLY GO.

The cleanest, daintiest, most refreshing and delightful hair tonic in the world is PARISIAN Sage. If you do not use it you are daily missing a glorious treat. It is simply splendid for men, women and children. It is sold at drug and toilet goods counters for only 50 cents a large bottle. Ask for PARISIAN Sage for your own protection. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every carton and bottle.

PARISIAN Sage drives out dandruff and stops hair from falling in two weeks. It stops itching scalp in 12 hours.

Hugh D. McKinnon of Brantford, Ont., writes:—"I consider PARISIAN Sage the best preparation for the cure of dandruff, falling hair and itching scalp that I have ever used. It is an excellent hair tonic and dressing and I shall always be pleased to highly recommend PARISIAN Sage."

Suburban Obsession.

The grass—I have to cut the grass!
Amid the host of cheerless things
That make a round of country life
This is the cheerlessest, by jings!
I have the Jacqueminots to spray,
The hedge to clip—nay, do not scoff—
The bean to pole, the peas to hoe,
And when I plan an evening off
It rains and rains and rains, and then
I have to cut the grass again!

But there will come a time all right
In some far summer ere I pass
When, bent beneath the weight of years,
I shall not have to cut the grass.
And if at last the summons be
Not to some verdant realm of bliss,
But to dry and bladeless bourne,
A hotter suburb e'en than this,
(They say there's one), why, bah and tut!
At least there'll be no grass to cut!
—Judge.

An Unfortunate Abbreviation.

Cardinal Gibbons was discussing Gilmore and his band.

"Gilmore," continued the cardinal, "was famous for his playing of Mozart's 'Twelfth Mass.' On one occasion he played it in a North Carolina town, and next day the local paper announced that he 'rendered with great effect Mozart's "Twelfth Massachusetts."'"—Popular Magazine.

How Long Can He Stand It?

This is Mrs. Forbes-Robertson Hale's latest suffrage story:

"A negro woman was arguing and arguing with her husband, and when she had finished he said, 'Dinah, yo' talk don't affect me no mo' than a flea bite.'

His Limit.

"Queen of my heart," he softly sighed,
"We'll travel fast and far
Along the dewy country roads
Within a touring car
Or on a white, palatial yacht
Beneath the moonlight pale
Across the blue and breezy bay
I'll take you for a sail.

"Together in an aeroplane
We'll mount the azure sky
And soar among the fleecy clouds
And with the eagle fly,
Or in a speedy motorboat
We'll skim by cape and highland."
And then they took a trolley car
And went to Coney Island.

At Last.

Warren Chambers—So Cashier Morral has gone wrong? They say he has been stealing for fifteen years.

Barclay Murray—Why, when they investigated his books a year ago I thought he came out of the ordeal unspotted.

Warren Chambers—He did, but they have spotted him now.—Puck.

The Essential.

"You see, we have good streets, excellent lighting and shipping facilities. Trade conditions are good. We hope you will locate here."

"I dunno," said the visitor. "Things look good. But tell me this."

"Well?"

"What kind of a ball team have you got?"—Washington Herald.

Summer Stuff.

They dabbled their tootsies, side by each,
In the rippling mountain brook.
He was a pippin; she was a peach—
Wonderful! Have a look!

He fished in that little purling stream.
He swore he would catch a whale.
His swear was only a summer's dream—
Terrible! Hear his wail!

He waded out of the crick, by jing,
In the hazy sunset glow,
And he hadn't caught a gol darned thing,
By golly! But she had, though!
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Just a Precaution.

"Why are you starting out with an umbrella on such a sunshiny day?"

"I am bound for the art gallery."

"But you cannot exhibit an umbrella."

"Of course not. But a notice on the catalogue says that one must leave his cane or umbrella outside before he can enter."—Toronto World.

Kindness.

"Do you ever go out of your way to do things to make other people happy?"

"Yes. I crossed the street this morning to avoid meeting a man who owes money to me."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Busy Man.

"Away, away!"
Said William Biz.
"I have no time
For politics."
Then, just to show
His proper bent,
He bought some bait
And fishing went.
—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Benefited Anyway.

"Sorry you couldn't attend our banquet last night, doctor. It would have done you good."

"Thank you! It has done me good. I have just prescribed for three of the guests."—Boston Transcript.

The Literary Courtship.

"They started in a purely platonic way to read 'Lucile' together."

"Well?"

The Darkest Hour.

Mr. Isaiah Witmer, who was seriously ill, is recovering.—Mr. Fred Granville of Chatham is visiting at the home of George Denomy, Sauble Line.—Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Southcott left for California on Wednesday, where they expect to stay for the winter month.—Leo Laporte, son of Mr. John Laporte was operated on for appendicitis at a Detroit hospital. The operation was a success and the patient is said to be doing nicely.—Miss Maggie Campbell of Bay in is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs George Campbell.—Miss Lena Denommie has returned home very much improved in health.—J. J. Mernar, M. P., left for Saskatchewan to look after his farming interests in that province.—In the death of Mr. George Campbell Zurich loses one of its most valued citizens. The deceased moved to town from his farm in Stanley township about four years ago, and though of a quiet and retiring disposition, he made many warm friends, both young and old who all sincerely mourn his demise. At the time he and his family came here to live he had been in very poor health, the change seeming to do him a great deal of good and it is only recently that his old malady again attacked him, and his death was looked for some weeks. He breathed his last on Wednesday morning, being in the 71st year of his age. He leaves a widow, one son, George, on the homestead and three daughters, Mrs. Kampmann of Belin and Misses Katie and Maggie at home. The funeral took place Friday morning.

While Peter Krupt was grinding the cutting knives of his threshing machine the governor belt suddenly came off, with the result that engine, having nothing to control it, ran away. It attained such a furious speed that the whole outfit was rattled to pieces, and the equipment is so badly wrecked that Mr. Krupt has to buy a new machine. He places his loss at $1000.—The Zurich Flax Company gave its annual excursion Wednesday to its employees. Carriages were supplied by the company and the party took in the Bayfield Fair. In addition to this a luncheon was served in the grove on the north side of the river, after which all were treated to a ride on the lake.

CHISELHURST—At the auction sale of Wm Morris, in Hibbert, near Chiselhurst, one Shorthorn cow brought $135 and another of the same breed $102 Grade cows sold at from $66 to $71; yearlings at from $60 to $82, and spring calves at $35. A pair of horses sold for $625, and a two year old for $215.

Clinton.—The big flour mill which for over a third of a century has been known as Fair's has changed hands, the purchasers being John Schoenhals and Robert King.

How The Body Kills Germs.

Germs that get into the body are killed in two ways—by the white corpuscles of the blood, and by a germ-killing substance that is in the blood. Just what this substance is, we do not know. The blood of a healthy person always has some germ-killing substance in it to ward off the attack of disease. The fountain head of life is the stomach. A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished. To put the body in healthy condition, to feed the system on rich, red blood and throw out the poisons from the body, nothing in the past forty years has excelled Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a pure glycerin extract (without alcohol), of bloodroot, golden seal and Oregon grape root, stone root, mandrake and queen's root with black cherrybark.

J. H. Martin, Esq.

"My husband was a sufferer from stomach trouble and impure blood," writes Mrs. James H. Martin, of Frankfort, Ky. "He had a sore on his face that would form a scab which would dry and drop off in about a month, then another would immediately form. It continued this way for a long time. He tried every remedy that any one would suggest but found no relief. He then tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which completely cured him. He has stayed cured now for two years, and I recommend this valuable medicine for impurities of the blood."

She glanced at Frithiof and saw quite plainly that he shrunk from the idea, and that it would go hard with his proud nature to accept such an offer. She glanced at Sigrid, and saw that the sister was ready to sacrifice anything for the sake of getting the little girl to England. Then, having as much tact as kindness, she rose to go.

"You will talk it over between you and let me know your decision," she said, pleasantly. "Consult Mr. and Mrs. Boniface, and let me know in a day or two. Why should you not come in to afternoon tea with me to-morrow, for I shall be at home for once, and can show you my canaries! Cecil will bring you. She and I are old friends."

When she was gone Sigrid returned to the room with dancing eyes.

"Is she not delightful," she cried. "For myself, Frithiof, I can't hesitate for a moment. The work will be easy, and she will be thoroughly kind."

"She has a bad temper," said Frithiof.

"How do you know?"

"Because no sweet-tempered woman ever had such a straight, thin-lipped mouth."

"I think you are very horrid to pick holes in her when she has been so kind to us. For myself I must accept. But how about Swanhild?"

"I hate the thought for either of you," said Frithiof, moodily.

"Now, Frithiof, don't go and be a goose about it," said Sigrid, caressingly. "If we are ever to have a nice cozy little home together we must certainly work at something, and we are not likely to get lighter, or more congenial, or better paid work than this. Come, dear, you have got, as Lance would say, to 'grin and bear it.'"

"In any case, we must give Swanhild herself a voice in the matter," he said at length. "Accept the offer if you like, provisionally, and let us write to her and tell her about it."

"Very well, we will write a joint letter and give her all sorts of guardianly advice. But, all the same, you know as well as I do that Swanhild will not hesitate for a moment. She is dying to come to England, and she is never so happy as when she is dancing."

When Roy came home that evening the matter was practically decided. Frithiof and Sigrid had had a long talk in the library with Mr. and Mrs. Boniface, and by and by in the garden, Sigrid told him gleefully what she called the "good news."

"I can afford to laugh now at my aluminum pencils and the embroidery patterns, and the poodle-shaving," she said, gayly. "Was it not lucky that we happened to go to Mrs. Horner's party and that everything happened just as it did?"

"Do you really like the prospect?" asked Roy.

"Indeed I do. I haven't felt so happy for months. For now we need never again be parted from Frithiof. It will be the best thing in the world for him to have a comfortable little home; and I shall take good care that he doesn't work too hard. Mr. Boniface has been so good. He says that Frithiof can have some extra work to do if he likes; he can attend some of your concerts, and arrange the platform between the pieces; and this will add nicely to his salary. And then, too, when he heard that I had quite decided on accepting Madame Le[illegible]ier's offer, he proposed some[illegible] for us too."

"[illegible] was that?" said poor [illegible]

[illegible] he thinks that he might [illegible] engagements to play at children's parties or small dances. Fri[illegible]'s violin-playing is quite good enough, he says. And don't you ever think it would be much better for him than poring so long over that hateful work of Herr Sivertsen's?"

Roy was obliged to assent.

"Frithiof is rather down in the depths about it," said Sigrid. "And I do hope you will cheer him up. If you had known what it was to live in dependence on relations for so long, you would understand how happy I am to-night. I, too, shall be able to help in paying off the debts!"

"Is her life also to be given up to that desperate attempt?" thought Roy, despondently.

CHAPTER XXI.

During the next few days Sigrid was absorbed in deep calculations. She found that, exclusive of Swanhild's small earnings, which would be absorbed by her education and the few extras that might be needed, their actual yearly income would be about £150. Frithiof's work for Herr Siversten, and whatever they might earn by evening engagements could be laid aside toward the fund for paying off the debts, and she thought that they might perhaps manage to live on the rest. Mrs. Boniface seemed rather aghast at the notion, and said she thought it impossible.

"I don't suppose that we shall spend as little on food as Frithiof did when he was alone," said Sigrid, "for he nearly starved himself; and I don't mean to allow him to try that again. I see that the great difficulty will be rent, for that seems so high in London. We were talking about it this morning, and Frithiof had a bright idea. He says there are some very cheap flats—workmen's model lodgings—that might perhaps do for us; only of course we must make sure that they are quite healthy before we take Swanhild there."

"Clean and healthy they are pretty sure to be," said Mrs. Boniface, "but I fancy they have strict rules which might be rather irksome to you. Still, we can go and make inquiries. After all, you would in some ways be better off than in ordinary lodgings, where you are at the mercy of the landlady."

So that afternoon they went to an office where they could get information as to model dwellings, and found that four rooms could be obtained in some of them at the rate of seven and sixpence a week.

To outward view the model dwellings were certainly not attractive. The great high houses with their uniform ugly color, the endless rows of windows, all precisely alike, the asphalt court-yard in the center, though tidy and clean, had a desolate look.

"At present we have no rooms to let, sir," was the answer of the superintendent to Frithiof's inquiry. "I think, though, we are almost certain to have a set vacant before long."

"Could we see over them?" they asked.

"Well, the set that will most likely be vacant belongs to a north-country family, and I dare say they would let you look in. There is one of the children. Here, Jessie, ask your mother if she would mind just showing her rooms, will you?"

The child, glancing curiously at the visitors, led the way up flight after flight of clean stone stairs. A pleasant-looking woman came forward and asked them to step in.

"You'll excuse the place being a bit untidy," she said. "My man has just got fresh work, and he has but now told me we shall have to be flitting in a week's time. We are going to Compton Buildings in the Goswell Road."

"I wonder," said Sigrid, "if we took them, whether I could pay one of the neighbors to do my share of sweeping and scrubbing the stairs, and whether I could get them to scrub out these rooms once a week. You see, I don't think I could manage the scrubbing very well."

"Oh, miss, there would be no difficulty in that," said the woman. "There's many that would be thankful to earn a little that way, and the same with laundry work."

"Do you know, I begin to like this great court-yard," she said to Cecil. "At first it looked to me dreary, but now it looks to me like a great, orderly human hive; there is something about it that makes one feel industrious."

"We will settle down here, then," said Frithiof, smiling; "and you shall be queen bee."

"You think it would not hurt Swanhild?" asked Sigrid, turning to Mrs. Boniface. "The place seems to me beautifully airy."

"Indeed," said Mrs. Boniface, "I think in many ways the place is most comfortable, and certainly you could not do better, unless you gave a very much higher rent."

As for Sigrid, she was now in her element. A true woman, she delighted in the thought of having rooms of her own to furnish and arrange.

"Beds are ruinously dear," she said, after making elaborate calculations. "We must have three really comfortable ones since we mean to work hard all day, and they must certainly be new; the three of them with all their belongings will not leave very much out of twelve pounds, I fear. But then as to chairs and tables they might well be second-hand, and we won't go in for a single luxury; it will look rather bare, but then there will be less trouble about cleaning and dusting."

"You will become such a domestic character that we shan't know you," said Frithiof, laughing. "What do you think we can possibly furnish the rooms on?"

"Wait a moment, and I'll add up my list," she said, cheerfully. "I never knew before how many things there were in a house that one can't do well without. Now that must surely be all. No, I have forgotten brushes and brooms and such things. Now, then, for the adding up. You check me, Cecil, for fear I make it too little—this is a terrible moment."

"Twenty-eight pounds!" exclaimed both girls in a breath.

"You can surely never do it on that?" said Cecil.

"It seems a great deal to me," said Sigrid; "still I have more than that over from uncle's fifty-pound check, even after Doctor Morris is paid. No, on the whole, I think we need not worry, but may spend as much as that with a clear conscience. The thing I am anxious about is my weekly bill. Look here, we must somehow manage to live on £145 a year, that will leave five pounds in case of illness or any great need. For charity it leaves nothing, but we can't give while we are in debt. Two pounds, fifteen shillings a week for three of us! Why, poor people live on far less."

"With a clever manager it will be possible," Frithiof said, "and you are no novice, Sigrid, but have been keeping house for the last eleven years."

"After a fashion," she replied, "but old Gro really managed things. However, I know that I shall really enjoy trying my hand at anything so novel, and you will have to come and see me very often, Cecil, to prevent my turning into a regular housekeeping drudge."

At length the day came when they were to leave Rowan Tree House. They each tried to say something suitable to Mr. and Mrs. Boniface, but not very successfully, for Sigrid broke down and cried, and Frithiof felt that to put very deep gratitude into words is a task which might well baffle the readiest speaker.

"And when you want change or rest," said Mrs. Boniface, shaking his hand warmly, "you have only got to lock up your rooms and come down here to us. There will always be a welcome ready for the three of you. Don't forget that."

"Let it be your second home," said Mr. Boniface.

Cecil, who was the one to feel most, said least. She merely shook hands with him, made some trifling remark about the time of Swanhild's train, and wished him good-bye; then, with a sore heart, watched the brother and sister as they stepped into the carriage and drove away.

AIRSHIP IN BRITISH ARMY MANOEUVRES ABOUT TO ALIGHT AT KNEESWORTH

JERUSALEM WILL BE MODERN

Electricity, Tramways, and Water Works Soon Complete.

A Syrian journal gives some interesting details of the industrial development of Jerusalem, which, according to the paper, will before long be one of the most up-to-date and comfortable towns in the near east.

A large number of companies, financed by European capital, have, it is stated, recently been applying for concessions with a view to organizing the public services on a modern basis.

An English company which is erecting a large power station will soon supply electric current all over the city. Even the sacred hill will before long be lighted with electricity.

A complete new system of tramways is under construction by a French company, while a German concern is laying mains for a house to house water supply.

To complete the international character of the modernization of Jerusalem, a series of fire stations with more fire engines and ladders is being instituted under Austrian management.

On the Farm

HAY RACK.

A practical and cheap hay rack may be made very simply.

The bed frame is fifteen feet long, the rear end is three feet six inches wide, and the front one foot eight inches wide. Being narrow in front permits of the wagon being turned in a smaller place.

There is a bolster made on the frame. When the rack is to be used on the wagon, remove the bolster from the wagon and let the one made on the frame take its place.

The side rails are made of 2½ by six-inch stuff The cross-pieces are two by six inches and six feet sin-inches long. The two boards that form the bows that protect the wheels are made of one by eight-inch elm, or some wood that is tough and will not break in bending.

The frame is put together with three eight-inch bolts, assorted lengths to suit the different thicknesses of material.

The knees that support the front cross-piece are one foot tall, without the tenons; these are six inches on the lower end and three on the upper. If well put together out of good materials, and painted, and well taken care of, this frame will last for 30 years.

WATCH THE HORSE'S TEETH.

If your horse shows difficulty in eating or loses flesh without apparent cause, it is time to examine the teeth. Very often elongated teeth prevent a horse from properly masticating its food, thereby rendering it impossible to obtain much benefit from it.

Ulcerated teeth also are a source of great trouble and prevent a horse from eating well. Sometimes broken teeth cut the sides of the horse's mouth and form painful sores which, of course, interfere with mastication.

It is a good plan to examine the teeth of all horses two or three times a year, and in case of broken or elongated teeth, treat them with a file. If the teeth of a valuable animal are badly affected it should be treated by a veterinary surgeon.

ORCHARD SUGGESTIONS.

Midsummer pruning heals quickly and is being practised extensively by good orchardists.

Better ship fruit a little green than overripe because it deteriorates quickly after being packed and placed in hot cars and warehouses.

If you have a poor seedling pear or apple tree it may be entirely made over by top grafting.

Peach trees make kood stock for plum grafting, as they usually have large vigorous roots.

It costs but a trifle for stock for marketing fruit packages and if they are stenciled with your name, or the name of your farm, they will prove of a great benefit, provided the fruit is of the best quality.

THE DAIRY.

The separator should never be allowed in the barn or near it.

A half dozen window sash glazed will make a rust-proof box in which the dairy vessels can be sunned and kept absolutely clean.

An enterprising farmer living near a town of 5,000 or more can sell every pound of his butter at full retail prices, or little above, the year round.

For several years we have bought farm butter from the same farmer at two cents above retail market price every month in the year and glad to get it.

Never attempt to keep summer butter for early fall prices, because it will not keep.—W. D.

FARM NOTES.

Turn the scrub bull into bologna and fill his place with a sire that will add dollars to the value of the herd through his progeny.

Eggs that cost 25 cents per dozen will brink $7 or $8 when hatched and sold as broilers.

Cattle on farms do not need horns. Dehorn your young calves.

Ever see the man who works like a bee every place but at home?

Sour slops have no place on the well regulated farm.

Dipping hogs is cheaper than feeding lice.

Cheap meat can be made only from young pigs.

MONEY IN BRITISH BANKS.

Unclaimed Deposits Are Used for Various Purposes.

Two hundred millions of dollars of unclaimed money in the coffers of British banks—derelict gold which nobody owns, and which the banks are naturally pleased to take care of! Gold more than sufficient to pave every square foot of Cheapside with sovereigns, says London Tit-Bits.

The sum total may be exaggerated. But make a liberal deduction and you still have many millions to which no rightful owners make a claim. There is no bank in the whole length of Great Britain (or elsewhere) which has not its lists of these bank balances that may be said to go a-begging. Some are for trivial sums, scarcely worth the trouble of pocketing; some are for amounts running into thousands.

Some years ago it was found that the Bank of England alone had nearly 11,000 of these dormant accounts. Forty of them had more than $50,000 apiece to their credit; one balance was written in six figures, $907,990. The total at the bottom of the long list was $39,284,875. This amount was very largely made up of unclaimed dividends on government stock.

Scottish banks have, it is said, $45,000,00 of this overlooked gold. English banks at least double this sum.

It seems inconceivable that so much money, for all of which there must have been owners at some time or other, should be thus lost to sight. A score or more of simple causes account for the seeming impossibility. A man may, for private or business reasons, have accounts with more banks than one. He dies, his executors know nothing of any but his usual banks; the balances at the others remain unclaimed.

He may die abroad or disappear, leaving no clew to his banking affairs; he may even forget that such and such an account is not closed. In these and many similar ways—mostly the result of carelessness—money is left in the hands of bankers to swell the dormant funds.

For seven years the bankers keep the accounts open, prepared to pay over the balance to any one who can prove a title to it. This term expired, they regard the forgotten gold as their own. Five million dollars of such ownerless money went to build London's splendid law courts. The city, it is said, has more than one magnificent bank building reared from the same handy material. The Bank of England, one learns, provides pensions for clerks' widows out of such a fund.

No matter how much other people may run down the theatre the billposter always sticks up for it.

EATING POOR MAN'S DINNER.

A party of London (England) newspaper men recently met at the rooms of the Society of Medical Officers of Health to eat a poor man's dinner. It was, of course, such a dinner as no poor man ever eats, but that is because he does not know how to lay his money out so as to get the best and most feeding stuffs, neither does his wife know how to cook them properly when bought. These things they could learn from the secretary of the society, a barrister and an enthusiast on dietetics.

It was interesting to learn what can be done by judicious buying at the open air markets of London, where the food is probably cheaper and of better quality than in any other capital. They started with some tasty soup made from parts of fish usually thrown away as useless by thriftless cooks, each helping costing about a fourth of a cent to make. The foreigners in Soho are well aware of these economies. Then there were admirable cent apiece herrings, haddock and three meat courses, any one of which would have made a good meal. There was roast mutton from Australia—9 cents a pound in the open air market; flank of Australian beef—a part commonly ignored by English housewives, but good to eat all the same; steak and kidney pie, costing about 6 cents a portion; and jugged hare made from colonial hare, bought at 50 cents for nine pounds and tasting as good as the Norfolk variety.

The lemon pudding was so alluring that most of the newspaper men came again for more. The dessert was West Indian limes (five for a cent), pears (4 cents a pound), and so on.

The meal cost much less than the tinned meat and fruit so much patronized by the poor, and was far more nourishing.

ARMY SERVICE FOR GIRLS.

Prof. Witzel of Dusseldorf advocates compulsory military service for German girls. An army of nurses should, in his opinion, follow each army of male combatants not only to care for the wounded, but to attend to everything connected with food and clothing. Every healthy German girl, says the professor, should look on training for this object as a patriotic duty, and the knowledge acquired will be useful in the home if it is not utilized on the battlefield.

Chimneys were first erected in Britain in 1200.

On Pat's arrival in New York his Yankee friend began to boast of the heat and said it was so hot that it burnt the wings off the flies. Pat replied: "Oh, that's nothing to the heat in Ireland. Why, they have to feed the hens on ice cream to keep them from laying boiled eggs."

TURKISH TROOPS DEFEATED

Heavy Losses on Both Sides—Great Rejoicing in the Montenegrin Camp.

A despatch from Podgoritza, Montenegro, says: The Montenegrins have captured Detchitch Mountain. The Turkish commander and officers, with many soldiers, have surrendered. For the past thirty hours the battle between the Montenegrin forces, under direct command of King Nicholas, and Turkish troops, strongly entrenched in the hills, has been in progress. The fight began at 8 o'clock Wednesday morning, the first shot being fired by Prince Peter against the Turkish position on Mount Planinitza. Within a few hours the Turks evacuated that district. Strongly fortified positions were occupied by the Turks, however, on Detchitch Mountain, which commands the road to Scutari, and reinforcements were brought up which resulted in a general engagement, which extended along the line for several miles.

King Nicholas remained at his headquarters at Podgoritza while Prince Danilo directed operations at the front. The Montenegrins resumed the bombardment of Detchitch at dawn, and a heavy cannonading was kept up until 11 o'clock in the morning, when the Turkish batteries on the mountain were silenced.

In the meantime a great battle was proceeding near the Turkish town of Tushi, about fifteen miles to the south of Podgoritza. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the Turkish commander on Detchitch, with his officers and a majority of his troops, surrendered. The Montenegrins captured four guns. The Montenegrin standard was hoisted over the captured position. There were heavy losses on both sides, but the Montenegrin camp gave itself over to rejoicings on the first victory in the war.

APPLES TO SOUTH AFRICA.

Canadian Fruit Shipped to Cape Town for the Christmas Trade.

A despatch from Halifax says: The steamer Melville, of the Elder-Dempster Line, sailed on Friday night for Cape-Town with a cargo of 13,000 barrels and cases of apples. This is the off-season for apples in South Africa, and this cargo of Nova Scotia fruit is expected to be in good time for the Christmas trade. Besides Nova Scotia apples the Melville has a lot of Ontario fruit. The export from Halifax so far has been limited to one cargo per year. The Melville is taking a lot of prize stock from Ontario, some of it for the Cape Colony Government.

80, KILLS WIFE AND SELF.

Aged Police Pensioner Ends Two Lives With Old Revolver.

A despatch from Buffalo says: Philip Reinhardt, aged 80, a former patrolman, shot his wife, Sophia, aged 85, and then sent a bullet through his head some time during Tuesday night. A milkman found the bodies of the aged couple lying fully dressed on the kitchen floor of their home where they lived alone. Beside Reinhardt's body was his police revolver with two shells exploded. Reinhardt had been a pensioner of the police force for sixteen years.

LIVELY TIME IN LIMERICK.

Crowd Returning from Anti-Home Rule Meeting Attacked.

A despatch from Limerick says: While the people were leaving an anti-Home Rule meeting here on Thursday night they were attacked by a mob of hoodlums. An automobile was smashed, and many others were stoned. The people in the cars were compelled to take refuge in the post-office, where a number of windows were broken. The police repeatedly charged the mob, and used their clubs freely.

PEACE PRELIMINARY SIGNED.

Paris Figaro Hears Turkey and Italy Agreed on Wednesday.

A despatch from Paris says: The Figaro announces that the peace preliminaries between Turkey and Italy were signed on Wednesday.

HARVEST FOR THE LAWYERS

Suits Entered Against Ottawa on Account of the Typhoid Fever Epidemic.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Ottawa's second great typhoid epidemic, which so far this year has aggregated 1,200 cases and 72 deaths, promises to prove almost as good a harvest for the lawyers as it has been for the doctors. The City Solicitor has given an opinion to the City Council that the city is, on the ground of negligence in protecting the purity of the water supply, liable for damages to the typhoid sufferers. Based on the standard figures published, in epidemic losses by disease, the total collectible damages for loss from deaths, from wage loss, doctors' bills, etc., aggregate about $420,000. Several of the sufferers have already instituted action for recovery of damages against the city, one widow claiming $15,000.

Now comes another almost humorous sequel to the sad story of Ottawa's waterworks mismanagement. Bills for money spent by taxpayers for fuel for boiling the water in order to make it immune.

A NEW AGE OF ICE COMING.

Prof. Schmidt Thinks We May Soon Be Busy Keeping Warm.

A despatch from Ithaca, N. Y., says: "I have no doubt that we are now in an interglacial period similar to those which have already existed, and in the future the human race will have to use all its knowledge in another fight for its life against the encroaching ice," said Prof. Nathaniel Schmidt, of the history department at Cornell, on Tuesday. Speaking of the ice age, he added, "I wish to call attention to the recent discoveries in Switzerland of four distinct periods of glaciation, and to the fact that Prof. Winchell, of Minnesota, has been able to produce definite proofs that Kansas has gone through the same four periods. This is important because it proves the contemporaneousness of the glacial age in both hemispheres."

FELL 170 FEET TO DEATH.

Bridge-Worker Struck on Forehead and Hurled to His Doom.

A despatch from Edmonton, Alta., says: While changing his footing on the top tier of the immense steel bridge of the C.N.R. over the Pembina River at Entwhistle on Thursday, Joseph Johnstone, a structural iron-worker, accidentally touched the trigger of the pneumatic rivetter, which rebounded, striking him on the forehead, and he was sent hurtling through the air, a terrible drop of one hundred and seventy feet to the river below. The falling man struck an out-jutting beam on the lower deck of the bridge, and the body's drop was deflected from the open water on to a raft, upon which he fell, alighting on his head, and being instantly killed.

SIX STUDENTS ARRESTED.

Running Fight With Police Followed Athletics at McGill.

A despatch from Montreal says: There was a fight here on Friday evening between police and students of McGill University, resulting in six arrests and the wounding of a bystander, who was struck by a flying stone and taken unconscious to the Royal Victoria Hospital. The row followed the annual university sports, the students, when they were ordered by the police not to follow their usual practice of stopping the street car traffic by pulling the trolley poles from the wires, retaliating with rotten eggs and stones in a running battle all the way from the athletic grounds to the police station.

PERISHED IN A CANOE.

A despatch from Moose Jaw says: The dead body of Douglas Hood was found on the shore of Lake Johnson on Thursday, and his companion, Fred Williams, now at Expanse, is in a critical condition. Hood and several companions left here Monday for Williams' ranch for duck shooting. They were on the lake when a blizzard came up, and lost their way. Hood complained of cold, and Williams gave him his coat and took charge of the canoe, but when he reached the shore Hood was dead. Williams was found unconscious in the morning.

POLICEMEN DISMISSED.

Sequel of Failure to Catch New Westminster Bank Robbers.

A despatch from Chicago says: Police Captain John J. Mahony and Lieut. Bernard Burns were discharged from the Chicago Police Department by the Civil Service Commission on Wednesday because of the escape from Chicago on September 16 of two of the members of the gang who robbed the Bank of Montreal at New Westminster. The Civil Service Commissioners decided that both officers were guilty of incompetency and neglect of duty.

FATALITY AT RAISING BEE.

Man Killed Instantly by Falling Timbers of New Rink.

A despatch from Russell, Ont., says: During the progress of a "raising bee" in the village here on Saturday, when the curved wooden sets of a rink, which is being built by citizens, were being put in position, a violent windstorm came up and carried the heavy framework with a crash to the ground. Some two dozen men who were engaged in the work were caught in the falling timbers, John W. Low, aged fifty-five, one of them, being killed instantly. Many others had miraculous escapes from serious injury. John Foster was run over by a passing horse which had become frightened by the crash as he dashed out from the ruins of the building.

REMARKABLE FEAT.

Prolonged Man's Life Ten Hours Artificially.

A despatch from Montreal says: A rather remarkable feat has just been performed at the Royal Victoria Hospital. For ten and a half hours, by means of insufflation, that is, forcing oxygen into the lungs, the surgeons in the hospital kept a patient alive who had ceased entirely to breathe by any natural means. At 11 o'clock on Thursday the patient absolutely stopped breathing. Death would inevitably have ensued at once had it not been for the extraordinary skill of the surgeons, who kept the man alive with his heart beating normally until he died at 9 o'clock in the evening.

INJURED IN A QUARREL.

Man Whose Skull Was Fractured May Recover.

A despatch from London, Ont., says: Daniel Stewart, whose skull was fractured by a fall from the Thames street viaduct, is improving and may recover. It was thought at first the accident was fatal. His brother-in-law, George Williamson, and George Neill have since been arrested for drunkenness. They were with Stewart on the night of the accident. Neill is on bail and Williamson is held pending the outcome of Stewart's injuries. The police believe Stewart and Williamson were quarreling at the time Stewart fell from the bridge.

BLIND INDIAN BURNED.

A despatch from Swan Lake, Man., says: A double fatality occurred at Indian Springs, near Swan Lake, Friday night. An old Indian couple, from the Roseau Reserve, were staying with Ed Martin, five miles west of Swan Lake. The man, who was blind, and the squaw had been left alone in a tent, and when Martin returned at 1 o'clock this morning he found the tent burned down and the charred remains of the two occupants lying outside.

PRESERVING CITY'S HEALTH.

Inspector Confiscates 500,000 Lbs. of Food in Nine Months.

A despatch from Montreal says: From January 1 to October 1, or for a period of nine months, Montreal's chief Food Inspector has confiscated half a million pounds of meat, fruit and breadstuffs found unfit for human consumption.

OPENING OF PARLIAMENT.

Practically Certain That It Will be November 14 or 21.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The date of the opening of Parliament is practically certain to be November 14 or 21. The later date to be selected if it is found impossible to arrange the opening by the 14th.

MANY NEW CARS ORDERED

Heavy Contracts Awarded for Rolling Stock on the Intercolonial Railway.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Cabinet at its meeting on Wednesday awarded heavy contracts for rolling stock for the Intercolonial Railway. With one exception the various contracts were awarded to the Canadian Car Foundry Co., of Montreal. Those awards to this company were:—

One 8,000 gallon tank car; price, $2,695.

In addition, the Preston Car and Coach Co., of Preston, Ont., has been awarded the contract for three baggage cars for the I. C. R. at $7,500 each.

It will be recalled that several large orders for box cars and locomotives have preceded Wednesday's announcement.

RIOTERS SENTENCED.

Ten Years for Two Men—Rev. M. Hicks Bound Over.

A despatch from Port Arthur says: Justice Middleton on Thursday morning sentenced Dominico Duprenzo and Nick Duprenzo to ten years' imprisonment each in Stony Mountain penitentiary, for having assaulted Chief of Police McClellan on July 29, the night of the riots on the coal docks. Rev. Madicon Hicks was convicted of having been at the head of an unlawful assembly on the evening of July 29, at the time when the riots were in progress at the coal docks. Sentence was suspended and Hicks bound over in the sum of $500 to keep the peace.

TO EXTEND DUKE'S TERM.

London Truth Says Governor-General Will Remain a Year Extra.

A despatch from London says: "It is almost certain that the Duke of Connaught's term in Canada will extend another year," says Truth, which is generally reliable in such matters. "It is very desirable that he should be at the head of the Canadian Government when the Prince of Wales and Prince Albert visit Canada in 1914. "The Duchess and Princess Patricia are coming in April for a few weeks' visit to England, and will visit the Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden at Stockholm. Probably the latter will visit Canada next autumn."

FRIGHTFUL SLAUGHTER.

Explosion of Dynamite May Cause the Death of Several.

A despatch from North Bay says: An explosion of dynamite on the construction of the Algoma Eastern Railway, near Sudbury, on Wednesday afternoon frightfully injured six Italian laborers. One man had both arms blown off and another lost both eyes and suffered severe injuries to his head. The others had arms or legs broken. The injured men were rushed to Sudbury Hospital, where, it is stated, several will die. The explosion resulted from the handling of a box of dynamite caps by a laborer.

NATIONAL INSURANCE.

Australian Liberal Party Committed to the Scheme.

A Melbourne despatch to the London Daily Chronicle states that the most significant outcome of the Parliamentary discussion of Premier Fisher's maternity grant bill (which provides for the payment of £5 upon the birth of a child) is the committal of the Liberal party to a national insurance policy on the lines of Lloyd George's scheme, which embodies the element of thrift, but the Liberals decided up on a vigorous insurance campaign during the forthcoming elections.

Growth of Canadian Purchases in the United States.

A despatch from Washington, D. C., says: Exports from the United States to Canada are now averaging one million dollars a day, and a dozen years ago they averaged a quarter of a million dollars a day. This large growth in the exports to Canada occurs chiefly in bituminous coal, automobiles and other carriages, manufactures of iron and steel, lumber, corn and unmanufactured cotton.

200 RURAL MAIL ROUTES.

Carriers Will be Supplied with Stamps and Postal Notes.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Post-Office Department has during the past summer largely extended the rural mail delivery service in Ontario and Quebec. Two hundred new routes have been established in these two provinces. Beginning next month, the intention is to supply the carriers on the rural mail routes with stamps, postal notes, etc., for the convenience of farmers.

CURED OF FEVER

My son took sick with the fever, all the doctors gave him up and said he would not live the night through. We called for Mr. Vogelgesang and he said he would live the night through and he would not die, he started to work with his remedy and within an hour and a half his fever was to normal When the family doctor came he was surprised and said there was hope for the boy now. Any further information call at the house, Mrs. T. Urechel 128 Broadway, Depew, N.Y., Phone 287 W. This remedy is for sale at 328 Lee Ave Toronto.

BELL RINGERS.—The Conductor, Mr. J. E. Jessop possesses a magnificent voice of most unusual quality, whether in Oratorio, Operatic or Ballads the notes roll out in power and richness and volume rarely equalled on the stage. Although only 32 years old Mr. Jessop has been ringing bells since a very small boy soprano. The press of Ontario compares his great vocal gift to that of England's greatest Basso, Watkin Mills. LOCAL DOINGS.

The bowlers recognized the fact that Mr J. W. Millest went to particular pains to entertain the players at the time of the tournament here, and on Saturday last they presented him with a half-dozen knives and forks. John is always willing to go to any amount of trouble, and the little present was a graceful acknowledgement of his services

We believe that a telephone in a house is a great preventive of destruction from lightning. We do not say that a building which has one is immune, but tell us of a residence with a phone in and struck by this agency that has been destroyed. The fuse may burn out but the damage is slight compared to residences struck which contained no phone. Every farm house should have a phone for this reason among others.—Ex.

"The Canadian Farm", a weekly agricultural journal, published in Toronto, last week devoted considerable space to the correspondence between the Canadian National Exhibition and Mr. Harry Smith, of the Lake Road, Hay Tp., the noted breeder of Shorthorn cattle. Mr. Smith's cattle entries were declined by the directors of the Fair, owing, apparently, to a difficulty that arose the previous year. The Shorthorn Association, of which Mr. Smith is vice-president, makes an annual grant to the Fair, and they believe that Mr. Smith had a right to exhibit, and that the directors were in the wrong to decline his exhibit.

The Seaforth Expositor has the following to say of the death of Mrs. G. A. K. McLeod's sister.—"It was with feelings of deep and sincere regret that the announcement of the death of Mrs. John Grieve, wife of John Grieve Grieve, V. S., was received on Tuesday. It was known that Mrs. Grieve had been ill for some weeks, but no person outside of her immediate friends and medical attendants knew of the seriousness of her case. The sad event was, therefore a surprise as well as a sorrow to most people. Mrs. Grieve was a native of the township of Tuckersmith, being a daughter of the late Mr. Henry Chesney of that township. Her maiden name was Jane McLellan Chesney.

At $1.00 a barrel it is hard to see much money in the apple growing business for the farmer—after he has trimmed his trees, sprayed them four times a year as is recommended, picked the apples, boarded the packers, and delivered the full barrels to the railway station. A farmer, who has figured it up, tells us that it costs $1.00 a barrel for the work he does, and that when selling at that price he gives his apples away and boards the packers for nothing. Perhaps the buyer pays as big a price as possible, too, as he certainly has a lot of expense before he markets the fruit, and buyers do not all get rich at the business, but there does not seem to be as much in the business for the grower as there should be. And yet, get into the city and you will find that you pay a fancy price for your apples. The connection between the grower and the market seems to be too great.

HICKS' FORECASTS FOR OCTOBER. —A regular storm period is central on the 21st extending from the 18th to the 24th. During this period the Moon is in apogee on the 19th, and on the celestial equator on the 23rd. Look for decided fall of barometer, approaching from western extremes, as early as the 20th, and during the 21st, 22nd and 23rd storm conditions will increase, and cause rain, wind and thunder storms to pass progressively from west to east across the country. These disturbances may be prolonged in consequence of the full moon on the 25th, causing unseasonably raw and threatening weather from one period into another. High gales over the lake regions should be apprehended at this time, with falling inclement weather generally. A seismic period will naturally bring reports of earthquakes in many parts of the earth from about the 22nd to the 28th, being central on the 25th.

THE GREAT SECRET.—To run a newspaper all a fellow has to do is to be able to write poems, discuss the tariff and money questions, umpire a baseball game, report a wedding, saw wood, describe a fire so that the readers will shed there wraps, make $1 do the work of $10, shine at a dance, measure calico, abuse the liquor traffic, test whiskey, subscribe to charity, go without meals, wear diamonds, invent advertisements, sneer at snobbery, overlook a scandal, appraise babies, delight pumpkin raisers, minister to the afflicted, heal the disgruntled, fight to a finish, set type, mould opinions, sweep out the office, smile at a man who owes you for ten years, speak at the prayer-meetings, and stand in with everybody and everything. Even then he gets badly abused, and somebody is sure to stop the paper because he does not reach their ideal. Its some fun running a newspaper and trying to keep your head above the water.

WELSH—SHORTT.—On October 9th a very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Shortt, Stephen, when their daughter, Verda O. was united in marriage with William E., son of Mr. John Welsh, London Road North. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. Hicks of Hensall, assisted by Rev. H. E. Wilson of London, uncle of the bride, in the presence of 50 guests. The bride was attired in a gown of cream marquisette, with pearl trimmings over cream silk. She wore a bridal veil and orange blossoms and was supported by her sister, Miss Gertie Shortt. Little Fern Shortt was flower girl. Herbert Jones of Exeter supported the groom and Miss Ella Phillips of Exeter played the wedding march. The ceremony and congratulations were followed by a sumptuous wedding dinner. The bride received many handsome and useful presents, the groom's present being a fur-lined coat. To the bridesmaid and organist pearl broaches, and to the groomsman cufflinks. The happy couple are spending their honeymoon in London and Toronto. Their friends here join in wishing them a long and happy married life.

On Monday Mr. W. J. Carling disposed of his store and residence to Mr B. Bedford of Brighton. In the deal Mr. Carling gets a farm of 130 acres near Brighton. The large stock of general store goods will be sold in the next two or three months at greatly reduced prices.

Under the direction of Mr. J. H. Markham, a pantomime of excellent proportions is being prepared for the annual entertainment in connection with the Trivitt Memorial Church Sunday School, which will take place between Christmas and New Years. This entertainment promises to excel anything they have ever undertaken.

CARD OF THANKS.—I desire to express my sincere thanks to those who so willingly and generously contributed to the fund for the purpose of securing the relief of my wife and child from the Detention Hospital at Quebec, and to all of whom I shall ever feel grateful.—Charles Lawrence.

RAILROAD NEWS.—There is now every indication that the proposed new branch of the C. P. R. from St. Marys via Exeter to Sarnia will soon be put through. Application will be made at once to the Board of Railway Commissioners for sanction for the lease among others of the St. Mary's and Western Ontario Railway to the C. P. R. This done it is very probable that immediate action will be taken towards putting through the road.

GRAHAM—WALTERS.—A quiet wedding was solemnized in the Trivitt Memorial Church on Thursday morning last, when Miss Nettie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs James Walters, became the bride of Mr. A. R. Graham, manager of the Bank of Commerce at Edem, Sask., formerly of Exeter. The ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. D. W. Collins, in the presence of only the immediate family of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Graham left on the morning train for the western home, the bride travelling in a suit of navy blue. Mr. and Mrs. Graham have the best wishes of their many friends for a happy wedded life.

WEDDED.—The marriage took place on Wednesday, Oct. 16th, at the home of the bride's parents, of Miss Mary E. Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor, Albert street, Exeter, to Mr. Charles H. Kerslake, son of Mr. John Kerslake of the London Road South. The ceremony was performed by Rev. McAllister, pastor of the James Street Methodist Church, in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The young couple were unattended. At the conclusion of the ceremony, which took place at 3 o'clock, all partook of a dainty wedding supper. Mr. and Mrs. Kerslake took the evening train for a short wedding trip, the bride wearing a travelling dress of navy blue San Toy and cream waist. On their return they will reside on the groom's fine farm, London Road South. The Advocate extends heartiest congratulations and best wishes.

No matter how fast a young man may be he can be overtaken by trouble.

When it comes to making a rapid change of opinion every woman is an expert.

Some people waste a lot of time trying to devise cures for other people's bad habits.

Just because a man does the things his wife wants him to do is no sign that he's stuck on the position.

A narrow-minded man will admit that others have a right to their opinions—if they are the same as his.

When a married woman wants her own way she is apt to get peeved if her husband insists on letting her have it

An expert cabinet-maker can take a new piece of furniture and make it look as if it was two hundred years old—and so can the average small boy.

When a man gets sick he doesn't want to take any medicine When a woman gets sick, she wants to take about seventeen kinds at once.

Probably nothing hurts a bachelor egotist so much as when a pretty leap year girl declines to give him the opportunity to say "No."

THANKSGIVING DAY

Monday the government has set apart as a day of national public thanksgiving. Something more than a formal matter this should be with Canadians. While our Dominion is a manufacturing country of no small pretentions its agriculture is its real life and backbone. Sunshine and showers refresh and give life, and these depend upon no contrivance of man, upon no exercise of his skill or learning. When Noah looked upon a world that its Creator had overwhelmed for its sin, and heard the promise when the waters were driven up, while the earth remaineth seedtime and harvest, cold and heat, summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease," he, the pious servant of God, recognized His power, as well as the rebellious Ahab, when the prophet told him to get him down, lest the rain stop him after three years drought. And so it is still. East and west, north and south, from the Atlantic seaboard to the Pacific slope, from the Peace River belt, where the half-breed gathers in his winter store, to the fruit growers of the Niagara peninsula, all look to the tiller of the soil, and he looks to the Creator for an abundant return. As far as 1912 is concerned the result is known, and if ever in her history Canada has a cause to be thankful, she has it now. Crops are beyond expectations and prices also. With this before our minds we should meet the government holiday in a spirit of genuine thankfulness, remembering the Giver of the harvest and the Lord of life.

DID HE CHEAT THE GALLOWS?

The town of Walkerton is about to see the solving of an old mystery which concerns the burial of John Haag, the only murderer ever hanged in Bruce. The tale is as sensational as the escape from the Paris tombs of Jean Valjean. In February, 1868, it seems a man named Stephen Neubecker, while returning from Seaforth with the proceeds from a load of grain he had sold, was robbed and murdered near Formosa by a man who jumped on his sleigh and battered his head with a club. John Haag was convicted of the crime and hanged on December 15. After being taken from the gallows, the body was placed in a coffin and given to Geesen, caretaker of the cemetery, for burial. Several years afterwards the sexton told that the rope had never done its work, and that the body had come into his hands alive. He stoutly maintained that an empty casket was lowered into the grave and that the supposed corpse walked out of the cemetery. The murderer is alleged to have been seen afterwards tending bar in a Detroit saloon. The land has been sold and the bodies are to be removed, when it will be seen what truth there is in the sexton's story.

FATAL WRECK AT PARKHILL

Parkhill, Oct. 17th—H. R. Scott, a Grand Trunk fireman running out of Stratford, whose relatives are supposed to reside in Goderich, was killed tonight in a head-on collision at this place when an extra westbound through freight, hauled by 672, one of the big "pigs," crashed into the double-header mixed train, No. 72, eastbound, which was standing just ready to clear the passing tracks. No person else sustained serious injury.

WHEN A MAN MARRIES

When a man marries he quickly discovers his need of innumerable things he had never thought of before. And the butcher, the baker and the cabinet maker have a new home to supply. The new husband and wife must buy things to which they had previously given little thought. A thousand marriages mean a thousand new homes. Right here is a fact overlooked by many merchants. They say, How could it pay us to keep on repeating the story of our goods or service?" If they could reach every possible customer with one advertisement—and if people didn't forget—there might be no object in keeping everlastingly at it. But because every possible customer does not read every advertisement, you must repeat. And because these thousands of new homes are every day coming into existence, continuous advertising brings increased results. Perhaps some people knew your goods or your store five or ten years ago. Since then new generations have come into existence. The boy of to-day is the man who will sign the cheques to-morrow. Today your advertisements are of small interest to him. To-morrow he is your customer, if you solicit his trade through advertising. Every day thousands of people discover for the first time their need of your kind of goods. Will you be there every day with your bid for their business? Or will you leave the field to your competitors? Advertising is the key that opens the door of these new homes to your goods. Is advertising on your key-ring?

DON'T LET THEM WORK IT ON YOU

An American Land Company, doing business in this county, certainly have an easy method of tying up property for a year or more. They catch a man who thinks he would like to sell and they agree to buy his place at a certain price which they realize to be well within the actual value of the farm. They pay $1 down, the balance to be paid at the expiration of the time set for taking over the place. In the meantime if the man who holds the option gets a chance to sell, the farmer gets his price, but if no sale is made all that is forfeited to the farmer is the dollar advanced to him. His place has been tied up for a year, and no matter what chances he has to sell in the interval he is tied up. Instance after instance of this sort are coming to light every day, and many a farmer has soundly drubbed himself for being taken in on such a transparent scheme.—Kingsville Reporter.

AILSA CRAIG BABY BOY FATALLY CRUSHED

Ailsa Craig, Oct. 18.—The two-year-old son of David Weatherspoon was so badly hurt at his home here this afternoon that no hopes are held out for his recovery. Mr. Weatherspoon was backing his automobile out of the yard and failed to notice that the little child was directly behind. The heavy car passed over his chest, crushing him terribly.

MOTHERS NEED CONSTANT STRENGTH.

To Care for the Growing Family, and Her Household Cares.

When there is a growing family to care for and the mother falls ill, it is a serious matter. Many mothers who are on the go from morning to night whose work, apparently, is never done, heroically try to disguise their sufferings, and keep an appearance of cheerfulness before their family. Only themselves know how they are distressed by headaches and backaches, dragging down pains and nervous weakness; how their nights are often sleepless, and they arise to a new day's work tired, depressed and unrefreshed. Such mothers should know that these sufferings are usually due to a lack of good nourishing blood. They should know that the thing above all others they need to give them new health and strength is rich, red blood, and that among all medicines there is none can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for their blood-making, health restoring qualities. Every suffering woman with a home and family to care for should give these pills a fair trial, for they will keep her in health and strength, and make her work easy. Here is strong proof that these Pills do what is claimed for them. Mrs. Henry Thomas, Dryden, Ont., says: "When my second child was born I was so weak and run down that I could scarcely walk across a room. My baby was small and weak also, and cried and worried night and day until I discovered that the child was starving, as my nurse had turned almost to water. My husband got me a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I began taking them. The first beneficial effects were noticed in that my child began to thrive, as my nurse began to improve, and baby slept better and naturally. It was not long until I began to feel the improvement myself, and I daily gained new strength, and baby was growing very rosy and fat. I continued using the Pills while I was nursing him and found myself with all the vigor of good health, and able to easily do my housework, which had been so great a drag on me before. I am now never without Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the house, and take an occasional dose when I feel tired. I can strongly recommend these Pills to all nursing women, especially if weak or run down."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Pills That Have Benefited Thousands.—Known far and near as a sure remedy in the treatment of indigestion and all derangements of the stomach, liver and kidneys, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills have brought relief to thousands when other specifics have failed. Innumerable testimonials can be produced to establish the truth of this assertion. Once tried they will be found superior to all other pills in the treatment of the ailments for which they are prescribed.

Itching and Burning on Face and Throat

Sores Disfigured So He Dreaded to appear in Public. No Rest Night or Day. Cuticura Ointment Cured.

"Six months ago my face and throat all broke out and turned into a running sore. I did not bother about it at first, but in one week's time the disease had spread so rapidly over my face and throat and the burning itching sores became so painful that I began to seek relief in different medicines, but none seemed to give me any relief. The sores disfigured my face to such an extent that I dreaded to appear in public.

"I suffered terribly and could get no rest night or day. At last a friend advised me to try the Cuticura Remedies. I had about given up hope, but thought I would have one more try, and so I used a little Cuticura Ointment, and it helped me from the start. I continued using it and in six weeks' time was completely cured, and can say I would advise anyone suffering from skin disease to use Cuticura Ointment, as it is the best healing balm in the world." (Signed) Roscoe Good, Seven Persons, Alta., Feb. 18, 1911.

"My little girl when only a few weeks old broke out on the top of her head and it became a solid scab. Then her cheeks became raw and sore and after trying different remedies found relief only from using Cuticura Soap and Ointment. It lasted six months or more, but after a thorough treatment with the Cuticura Soap and Ointment never had any return." (Signed) Mrs. W. S. Owen, Yadkin College, N. C., May 26, 1911.

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Ointment have afforded the most successful treatment for skin and scalp troubles of infants, children and adults. A single cake of Cuticura Soap and box of Cuticura Ointment are often sufficient. Although sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin, will be sent free, on application to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 54 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

WILL MIX WITH STUDENTS.

The Prince of Wales at Magdalen College, Oxford.

The Prince of Wales, attended by his equerry, Major the Hon. W. Cadogan, and his tutor, H. P. Hansell, are now in residence at Magdalen College, Oxford. Reports that he will practically lead the life of an ordinary undergraduate are widely circulated, but these are undoubtedly exaggerated. He will be freer than his grandfather was undoubtedly. When he dines in the college dining-hall he will sit at the under-graduate table instead of with the dons. He will go to certain lectures given in the ordinary college lecture rooms with the other undergraduates instead of "being waited on in a house by Goldwin Smith and three or four chosen graduates" for instruction in history, as was King Edward's lot.

King Edward matriculated, too, as a "nobleman commoner" and wore a silk gown and gold tasseled college cap. "Gentlemen" and "noblemen commoner" have now been abolished, and the present Prince of Wales will wear the ordinary stuff goes and black tasselled cap the same as other undergraduates.

Half a dozen horses for the use of the Prince and his equerry and tutor preceded him, so he is expected to hunt. His physique, for lack of public school training, will bar him from participating in college games and athletics, even if he wished to take part in them or was allowed to do so. His studies will be directed to history, English literature, French and German and political economy. He probably will join The Union, the best known of the undergraduates' debating societies. He may also be allowed to join Vincents, an exclusive undergraduate club, which is limited to a hundred members and composed almost entirely of athletes. King Edward wished to join this club, but his parents would not allow him to do so.

SIR THOMAS' WIT.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, the C. P. R. president, is somewhat noted for his quaint wit. On one occasion a pompous young man with very high notions of his own importance, consulted him in regard to choosing a vocation for life. He said, "Sir Thomas, as you have been a very successful man, I am sure you are capable of giving excellent advice to a young man just starting in life. What business would you advise me to engage in?"

"Shoemaking," was the sententious reply. The young man gazed at him in blank amazement for several seconds, but seeing that he was apparently in deep earnest, he inquired his reason for recommending such a humble occupation.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy.

Without a smile Sir Thomas replied: "Shoemaking is a good business, a very good business, and it will always remain a good business as long as babies are born barefooted."

MUSHROOMS KILL SIXTEEN.

Other French People Ill From Eating Poisonous Fungi.

Deaths from poisonous mushrooms are reported in France daily. The roll for last month, for instance, is fourteen workmen dead and three dying in the Vosges. One workman is dead at Nancy, three are dangerously ill. A family of five has been poisoned at Versailles, one having died, while the four others are in a hospital.

The extraordinarly thing is that experts in fungi every year warn against the deadly danger of certain mushrooms, but without avail. They repeat yearly that the time-honored tests, such as boiling the mushrooms with a silver spoon, are of no use whatever; for in this particular case the most deadly of all fungi, it seems, do not turn the spoon black.

Another remarkable circumstance is that only one species of mushroom is really deadly, but then it is so deadly that one fragment in a dish will suffice. Other bad kinds of mushrooms merely make the eater feel queer, and he generally recovers.

POISON IN ABSINTHE.

Thyion the Deadly Agent in France's Favorite Intoxicant.

The principal poison in absinthe is a vegetable substance known as thyion. It is found in wormwood, which is used in making absinthe. France is the largest consumer of absinthe, taking more than all the rest of Europe. The consumption has been steadily increasing, so that in 1911 over 1,000,000 gallons of absinthe were used in France.

For some years French legislators have been trying to find a way to limit or stop the sale of absinthe. The government receives from the sale of this drink $100,000,000 a year and the communes about $5,000,000.

Aside from the question of the largest interests and revenues affected, certain social questions are involved. Thus M. Caillaux pointed out that "a wave from the depths" is to be feared if all the absinthe drinkers of France—chiefly recruited from the lower classes—are to be deprived of their favorite liquor.

For these reasons the government has abandoned the idea of a complete interdiction of the sale of absinthe. The latest proposition, and one that may be adopted, is to prohibit the distillers from using wormwood or any plant containing thyion, but then we should have absinthe that is not absinthe.

A DOCTOR'S TRIALS

He Sometimes Gets Sick Like Other People.

Even doing good to people is hard work if you have too much of it to do.

An overworked doctor tells his experience:

"About three years ago as the result of doing two men's work, attending a large practice and looking after the details of another business, my health broke down completely, and I was little better than a physical wreck.

"I suffered from indigestion and constipation, loss of weight and appetite, bloating and pain after meals, loss of memory and lack of nerve force for continued mental application.

"I became irritable, easily angered and despondent without cause. The heart's action became irregular and weak, with frequent attacks of palpitation during the first hour or two after retiring.

"Some Grape-Nuts and cut bananas came for my lunch one day and pleased me particularly with the result. I got more satisfaction from it than from anything I had eaten for months, and on further investigation and use, adopted Grape-Nuts for my morning and evening meals, served usually with cream and a sprinkle of salt or sugar.

"My improvement was rapid and permanent, in weight as well as in physical and mental endurance. In a word, I am filled with the joy of living again, and continue the daily use of Grape-Nuts for breakfast and often for the evening meal.

"The little pamphlet, 'The Road to Wellville,' found in pkgs., is invariably saved and handed to some needy patient along with the indicated remedy."

GUARD BABY FROM COLDS

The mother can guard her little ones from colds during the damp, cold fall days by the use of Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels working freely and the stomach sweet—that is the secret of preventing colds. The Tablets will not only prevent or banish colds, but will cure constipation, indigestion, expel worms and make teething easy. They are sold under the guarantee of a government analyst to contain no harmful drugs and may safely be given to the newborn babe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FRENCH CRIMINALS.

Thirty-Six Per Cent. of All Persons Accused Are Minors.

Juvenile crime is increasing in an alarming way in France, according to the recently published statistics of the courts of justice for 1910.

Some 36 per cent. of all persons accused of crime are minors. A similar tendency has been observed in England and Germany, and the question is receiving the serious thought of criminologists.

A second revelation of the French tables is the remarkable preponderance of half-educated persons among criminals as contrasted with well-educated and altogether uneducated ones. The well or fairly-well educated contribute about half as many culprits as do the totally illiterate, but it is from the class of meagrely educated that all but a trifling number of wrongdoers spring.

At present not far from half a million cases are brought before the lowest police courts in a year. It appears that criminality of a serious character has shown practically no change for the past ten years.

Crimes against property have decreased notably in number, the result, it is said, of the exceptional severity with which such matters are treated not only by judges but by juries.

The same can scarcely be said for crimes of violence against persons, French juries, in particular, being all too ready to wax sentimental over the pleas of passion, temptation, and so on, invariably put forward by accused persons.

We have no hesitation in saying that Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is without doubt the best medicine ever introduced for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera and all summer complaints, sea sickness, etc. It promptly gives relief and never fails to effect a positive cure. Won Fame on its Merits. — The unbounded popularity that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil enjoys is not attributable to any elaborate advertising, for it has not been so advertised, but is entirely due to the merits of this Oil as a medicine. In every city, town and hamlet in the country it is sought after solely because of its good qualities.

"So," said the good man, "you intend to be a doctor when you grow up." "Yes," Tommy replied. "And why have you decided upon the medical profession?" "Well, a doctor seems to be the only man that keeps right on getting paid whether his work is satisfactory or not."

HOUSES MADE OF PORCELAIN.

Mr. W. Hales Turner, a Staffordshire (England) inventor, proposes to build houses of sheets of porcelain, panelled and welded on a steel framework. "You would get a house," said Mr. Turner, "that would be damp-proof and absolutely sanitary. The walls, being non-porous, would not retain dirt or disease germs. No matter how careless or dirty the previous tenant has been, a bucketful of water and some soap will make the place as sweet and clean as a polished dinner plate. Wall decorations as desired could be glazed into the porcelain, and if a man got tired of the style of his frieze or dado he could get it changed any time as the parts would be all standardized. If you emigrated you could pack your house up and take it away with you."

HAD BAD SORE FOUR YEARS

Zam-Buk Has Healed It!

Mrs. Wilson, 110 Wickson Ave., Toronto, says: "About four years ago a sore spot appeared on the right side of my face. This spot increased in size until it became about half an inch in diameter and very painful. I went to a doctor, but the ointment he gave me did not have any good effect. The sore continued to discharge freely, and was most painful. I had it cauterized, tried poultices, and all kinds of salves, but it was no good, and I continued to suffer from it for four years!

"A sample of Zam-Buk was one day given to me, and I used it. Although the quantity was so small, it seemed to do me some good, so I purchased a further supply.

"Each box did me more and more good, and, to my delight, before I had been using Zam-Buk three weeks, I saw that it was going to heal the sore. In less than a month it was healed!

"I know a lady in the east of the city, whose husband suffered for years with an open sore on his leg. On my recommendation, Zam-Buk was tried in that case. The other day when I saw her, she told me that it had healed the sore completely.

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for eczema, piles, abscesses, ulcers, scalp sores, ringworm, cuts, burns, scalds, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c. box, all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. In case of skin disease use also Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet.

A Pill That is Prized.—There have been many pills put upon the market and pressed upon public attention, but none has endured so long or met with so much favor as Permelee's Vegetable Pills. Widespread use of them has attested their great value, and they need no further advertisement than this. Having firmly established themselves in public esteem, they now rank without a peer in the list of standard vegetable preparations.

Hobson's Choice.

An Eastern man, who was on a business trip through the West, stopped at the small hotel in a country town one day. He entered the dining-room and was shown to a table by a waiter.

"Will you have some pork and beans, sir?" asked the waiter, as he brought the customary glass of water.

"No, I don't care for them," answered the man. "I never eat pork and beans."

"Dinner is over, then, sir," said the waiter, as he moved away.

THE WAITER

In the bay-window of the boarding-house sitting-room a little group was discussing the girl who had just passed down the front steps.

"The airs she puts on!"

"And the money she spends!"

"It's a pity she hasn't someone to look after her. If she were my daughter——"

They paid no attention to George Hurstaway, who longed for courage to speak his mind, and defend Sylvia Grex in her absence. To him she seemed all that was perfect. He had thought himself lucky just to spend a week under the same roof.

Their fellow-guests would have said that Miss Grex had snubbed him on every possible occasion. Of course, Hurstaway reflected gloomily, she could not possibly be interested in a very ordinary fellow, plain and by no means smart—just a city clerk on his annual vacation, who was not accustomed to feminine society.

He wished that he could approach her dashingly as the other men did—wonderful dandies, with the latest thing in waistcoats, socks, and slang. But in the boarding-house society he was of no account whatever.

This was, in some ways, the most miserable holiday he had ever spent. Presently he must go back to town and the office. He would never see her again.

With an angry glance at the gossiping party in the window, he walked moodily upstairs. From his seat at dinner that night he could observe Miss Grex across the table. She seemed even more excitable and high-spirited than usual, and, with pangs of jealousy, George Hurstaway noted the evident admiration of her masculine neighbors.

When the meal was over, he wondered listlessly how he should spend the evening. Finally he was left alone in an alcove adjoining the hall.

There he must have closed his eyes. He roused himself with a start, to hear Mrs. Beatson's voice raised shrilly:

"So that's your little game, is it, Miss! To pack up your luggage and sneak off a day beforehand, without settling your bill!"

"I didn't know you were in. I've left a note to explain. I'd have written again directly I got home."

"Oh, of course! Nice goings-on! My word!"

"I meant to send you the money. You can't think I intended——"

"You'll pay me to-morrow," declared the proprietress thickly, "before you leave this house, or I'll know the reason why!"

She stamped off. Sylvia Grex sank down on a basket-chair, quite close to Hurstaway. She was crying a little.

He reached out and touched her arm.

"I heard," he stammered. "I couldn't help hearing."

She lifted her face, shrinking away.

"What must you think of me!"

"I have to apologize——"

"Do let me explain, please." He could hardly realize that this was the vivacious and haughty Miss Grex he had admired from afar "I quite thought I should have some extra money this morning. It was my birthday yesterday, and an uncle of mine has always sent me a present—five pounds. I counted on it this year, too, but perhaps he has forgotten."

She bent her head again.

"You see why I spent all I had with me. I thought I could easily pay Mrs. Beatson's bill to-day. I've been extravagant—having a good time."

"I'm not one of the fellows you've been friendly with. I haven't taken you about anywhere," observed Hurstaway slowly. "No one else need know. When you get home you can pay me back. I'm just a stranger, that's all; but I'd like to remember that I'd helped you, even in such a little way."

"Yes—you'd lend——"

"Please let me!"

"But you mustn't! I couldn't take it!" He turned away. "There's no time to ask my father or mother, though."

A few minutes later Hurstaway was walking along the promenade, happier than he had been since his holiday started.

Next morning Miss Grex went away. Everyone in the house was astonished to hear of her departure before breakfast. On the stairs George Hurstaway found one of his own visiting-cards.

"She dropped it! Now she won't know my address! But she's coming back here in September. If I could manage to run down for a week-end. I wonder if she'd mind."

He was occupied during the next few days mainly in thinking of her. Ordinary amusements were out of the question.

"I've only just about enough for Mrs. Beatson," he reflected; but he did not regret the fact at all. When asked to join in different excursions he pleaded engagements, and went for solitary walks.

On the Sunday, however, he made a discovery which appalled him. The return-half of his ticket was gone!

He remembered that once his letter-case had slipped from his pocket, and all the afternoon he spent in searching the beach, without success.

There was no one available from whom he could possibly borrow. There was no time to wire to friends even if the post-office had been open. Mrs. Beatson, he deliberated, would never consent to retain his belongings as security for part of her bill, and he was due back at the office the following morning!

At an early hour, desperate, he sent a telegram. The answer soon reached him. He stiffened as he read it:

"Excuse not accepted. Stay away for good. Week's salary follows by post."

The manager had always disliked him, and, after recent reprimands, had thrown out the broadest of hints that he should seek another situation.

He was left with a few copper coins.

* * * * * *

The waiter in the rather dingy restaurant in the side-street was snatching a few minutes' rest. A big party of excursionists had just left after a late lunch, and it was not likely that there would be any further customers yet awhile.

He was rather surprised, therefore, when the swing-doors opened.

"It's raining fast now!" remarked the elder lady audibly. "This isn't much of a place, but we can shelter till the shower's over."

Miss Sylvia Grex glanced round as they sat at a small table, but almost before her gaze could rest on the waiter, he had turned his back. She saw a stout man approach him, and overheard a sharp command:

"Attend to those ladies at once! What is wrong with you?"

But the waiter vanished through a curtained doorway. The stout, foreign-looking person came forward.

"I am sorry, but my waiter—he is ill. Kindly excuse him. I myself will take your order."

"Coffee for two, please."

The proprietor, presently, with much condescension, set the cups before them. A quarter of an hour went by.

"Ready, dear? I think the rain's over for the present. Shall we move?"

Miss Grex roused herself, seemingly with an effort, and assented. A minute later the waiter had apparently recovered. He reappeared, and began to clear the table.

Beneath one of the chairs lay a glove. As he picked it up, he noticed that the proprietor was occupied. He held it tightly for a moment between his two hands. There was a curious, strained expression on his face.

As he retired with the tray, the door was pushed open again—very softly this time. Miss Grex had returned alone. She stood looking awkwardly round. The stout man suddenly became aware of her presence.

"I believe I—I left something behind just now."

"Certainly! I will inquire at once. Yes."

He rang a bell, and the waiter stepped out.

"Have you picked up anything from that small table by the window? Come, come! Are you deaf?"

Slowly the waiter's hand sought his breast pocket.

"The lady's glove! You have it. Why did you not tell me, George? Why?" The stout man was growing angry.

"I was keeping it, sir, until—until——"

"Yes, yes; of course!"

Miss Grex drew the proprietor aside.

In the big mirror before her she saw the waiter's reflection. With a rapid movement he carried the glove to his lips. When they swung round to face him he bowed and held it out, impassive and respectful.

"Very well, miss; I will not reprimand him, since you wish. George, the door for the lady!"

As she passed, the girl's eyes sought the waiter's face. He was looking down, with head bent.

"Eight o'clock, outside the pier!"

He heard the whisper, and flushed suddenly, with a quick gasp.

"N-nine o'clock is when I'm free."

"Nine, then!" She disappeared.

"Do not loiter there all day, George! Write these menus—quick! Tchah! I will do them myself. Your hand shakes. You are ill yet?"

"No, sir," George Hurstaway answered quickly. "I feel considerably better now."

. . . . . .

"Shall we go through?" Miss Grex asked, indicating the turnstile.

"If you don't mind being seen about with me. I'm not known in the town much, after all, because I'm kept indoors a lot."

"And you think I'd care if——"

"My position, you see," Hurstaway reminded her quietly. "People would think you—you'd lost your senses!"

"I choose my own friends." The girl swung round to him as they walked along the pier. "And I don't consider what they do for a living!"

Hurstaway was silent for a moment.

"You said you'd come down here again."

"You've stopped here all the summer? I never expected to meet you."

"In there least of all, I suppose." He waved towards the distant cafe.

"Why did you take up that work?"

"It was all I could get, when I found I'd lost my situation in the city. The day after you left I—I went in for a meal just as the proprietor was discharging his waiter in a fit of temper. He offered me the job. I was in rather a hole."

He bit his lips as Miss Grex gave a cry.

"Explain it all. Yes, you must tell me."

She listened to his few faltered sentences, and guessed the remainder of the story.

"Then it was all through helping me that your troubles came!" Her voice was unsteady. "I lost your card somehow, but I remembered the name of your road. I returned that money next day to your lodgings in town."

"My landlady kept it, then, for the rent I owed her."

"I wondered why you'd never written even a line. So you didn't know my address."

"But I hoped I'd see you again if I waited till September. That was one of the reasons——"

"The reasons why you stayed!" she echoed softly. The look on her face made Hurstaway catch his breath. "I imagined you'd quite forgotten me."

"You'd have cared? But at the boarding-house you avoided me—hardly ever spoke!"

"Oh, you're very foolish!" He could just catch the words. "You were so different from those others! I—I liked you all along. I was so afraid I'd show it, though. Now I don't seem to mind, after meeting you this afternoon."

"In the restaurant?" he queried, puzzled.

"I recognized you directly, although you tried to hide. I left my glove on purpose. You—you kissed it. That shows——"

Hurstaway drew back from her.

"I'm poor, though—a waiter—shabby clothes." He set his lips together. "You can't think what you're saying." He held out his hand.

But the girl laughed shakily.

"I'm going to do the waiting now. You'll rise in the world. Wont you—if I believe in you?"

George Hurstaway caught her hand. A new confidence came to him. He threw back his head.

"Yes, in spite of everything."

"I, too, feel perfectly sure of that."

Hurstaway leaned over the pier railings, and stared across the sea into the darkness.

"Dreams," he muttered—"dreams are sweet!"

And one day his dreams came true.—London Answers.

INTERESTING GOSSIP FROM ONTARIO'S CAPITAL.

The New Corporation Counsel—New Labor Paper—Down Town Problem—A Big Audience.

After several months' delay the City Council has decided to appoint his Worship Mayor Geary to the Corporation Counselship, made vacant by the elevation of Mr. H. L. Drayton to the chairmanship of the Dominion Railway Board. The salary is to be $8,000 a year to begin with. This is not much advance over Mr. Geary's income as Mayor, which was $7,500. But it has the advantage of being permanent. Besides, Mr. Geary has expressed the hope that when he makes good the salary will grow. And it doubtless will. Some aldermen who opposed Mr. Geary's appointment on the ground that he was not a big enough lawyer for the job, said they would be prepared to pay $25,000 a year to the right man. Viewed from this standpoint, it is just a question if the city will not do as well with Mr. Geary on the job as it would with some man with a made reputation at a fancy salary. It is true he has not had much experience in legal work. But this is partly offset by his intimate knowledge of municipal affairs. Besides, he is young, energetic, diplomatic and ardently ambitious.

SOME SORENESS.

The sound criticism of the appointment is on the ground that no member of Council should be appointed to a permanent job during his term of office. In the present instance the Mayor admittedly did not give the subject disinterested consideration, and that is something the public, having elected him to the Chief Magistracy, had a right to expect from him on every issue, particularly on one as important as this one. There is a good deal of underlying soreness about this phase of the matter.

There is some surprise that Mr. Geary, by his action, has expressed a preference for his legal profession as against political life. He could have had a nomination for Parliament any time during the last five years, and with the star of the Conservative party in the ascendant he might have been expected to have had a brilliant career. And he may yet return to the political arena. Meanwhile he is to be known as G. R. Geary, K. C., Corporation Counsel.

A NEW LABOR PAPER.

The appearance of a new labor paper in Toronto is an event of importance, not so much for the immediate effect it will have in politics or in labor affairs, but because of the potentialities for the future. The editor-in-chief is Mr. James Simpson, formerly a typesetter, more recently for many years city hall reporter for one of the local dailies, and always an active labor agitator, as well as temperance lecturer and Methodist local preacher. He was also a member of the Board of Education for some years and was a member of the Dominion Government's Commission on Technical Education. He will likely this year be a candidate for the Board of Control.

There have been many previous attempts to establish a labor organ in Toronto, but the attempts merely served to help fill the newspaper graveyard. A paper called "The Toiler" was the last victim. There are higher hopes for the latest venture. It starts off with fairly liberal support in the way of stock subscriptions from labor organizations and individuals, so that it is assured of sufficient capital to give it a chance to get on its feet. To prevent control of the publication falling into the hands of any individual or organization, or even group, the number of shares permitted to any one subscriber is strictly limited.

It has yet to be demonstrated that the labor organizations will support an "organ." The fault with previous publications is that they have been too much "organ," and not enough attention paid to making the paper interesting.

WILL AVOID GENERAL POLITICS.

It is expected that the newspaper will keep away from tariff and other issues of a general character, devoting itself to issues which specifically effect the city laboring man, such as conditions of labor and workmen's compensation. It will, in its general effect, probably emphasize rather than diminish the cleavage between city and country.

Its first political activity will doubtless be in municipal affairs. A labor "slate" for nearly all the civic offices is within the range of possibilities this year. If moderately successful there the next move, no doubt, will be to get into Provincial and Dominion politics. The establishment of the paper foreshadows the first serious attempt to launch a real labor party in Canadian politics.

IN BOND STREET CHURCH.

In my letter last week some reference was made to the down town problem confronting Toronto churches, and the disposition shown in some quarters to shirk it and in others to meet it. The solemn fact is that of the 50,000 persons living south of College street, only a small fraction has been reached by the churches. Both in preaching and in works it is undoubtedly the fact that some of the churches in down town Toronto are out of sympathy with the masses whom they are supposed to serve.

The church perhaps most popular in many ways with the crowd is Bond Street Congregational, whose destinies are presided over by Rev. Byron H. Stauffer, who came here several years ago from Buffalo. His methods are much less sensational than those employed in this pulpit twenty years ago by the late Dr. Wild, but he contrives to make his services interesting, and he always draws full houses. He is a man of considerable personality, a fluent speaker and embellishes his sermons with frequent references to the affairs of the hour. Some might call some of his addresses lectures rather than sermons, meaning that there is less of spirituality about them than is usual. Bond street church is sometimes compared to a business, of which the preacher is the general manager. Bearing out the analogy, he has there an office which he occupies several hours a day. And yet Bond street has no empty pews, and that is one point gained.

A SPURGEON NEEDED.

What the church in down-town Toronto needs to-day is a Spurgeon. It wants a man with fire and spirituality. The harvest is waiting for him. He could take such a building as the new arena, which will seat 7,000 persons, fill it three times on Sunday and possibly on any other evening in the week, if he had the physical strength. But where is the Spurgeon coming from?

Down town Toronto needs more, of course, in the way of church service than a preacher, even if he were a Spurgeon. It needs a small army of workers. It has a few now loyal and devoted, but their numbers are sadly out of proportion to the work that is to do. One wonders of the churches really appreciated the work that lies right at their hand.

TORONTO'S BIGGEST AUDIENCE.

Toronto's new amusement showplace, The Arena, has been successfully launched with a week's "musical festival." Designed primarily for hockey matches, the promoters hope they can make use of it in the off season for all sorts of special productions. The problem will be to fill it. It will hold eight thousand people, twice as many as any other meeting-place in Toronto, and a small city in itself. The sight on the closing night of the opening week, when every seat was filled, was one long to be remembered. The layout of the building is that of an oval amphitheatre, without galleries. All around the oval solid masses of humanity, rising tier upon tier, furnished an impressive sight. It was the greatest concourse of men and women ever gathered under one roof in Toronto.

Arbitration is always satisfactory—to the arbitrator.

POISONOUS SNAKES.

Took Over Twenty-Four Thousand Lives in India Last Year.

According to a report just published in Simla, India, the number of wild animals destroyed in India in 1911 was 25,840, as compared with 19,282 in 1910. This total included 1,426 tigers, 5,352 leopards, and 4,251 wolves. Nearly 172,000 snakes were destroyed, as against 91,100.

This increase is largely accounted for by the offering of rewards by the Burma Government. That this action was necessary is proved by the fact that in one area the paddy fields were so snake infested that their cultivation was impossible.

Altogether 1,947 persons were killed by wild animals and 24,264 by snakes, the figures for 1910 being 2,382 and 22,478 respectively. The number of cattle killed by wild animals was 91,709, against 93,070, and by snakes 10,533, as against 10,990.

With regard to snake bite of human beings it is said that in the Bombay Presidency, the United Provinces and Eastern Bengal and Assam the use of Sir Lauder Brunton's lancets is reported in a number of cases to have resulted in a high proportion of cures. As in previous years, however, the statistics relative to the successful use of this instrument can only be accepted with reservations.

Quite Sincere.

"Sir," said the young man respectfully, "I am a poor man and you are a millionaire. It seems presumptious in me, no doubt, to aspire to the hand of your daughter, but my love for her is so great that I cannot be stopped by such considerations. Oh! sir, will you give her to me?" The old magnate smiled and seemed interested. "But which of my three daughters do you want?" he asked, not unkindly. Eagerly the suitor made answer, "Oh, I'll leave that to you, sir."

WHAT HAPPENED IN '96.

The Liberal press has been complaining of some dismissals from the outside civil service by the government. In view of their complaints and the virtuous attitude they have assumed, it is interesting to present the record of the Laurier administration when it came into power in 1896. Nine months after the Laurier government assumed office a return was called for in the senate of the dismissals up to that time. The return is a remarkable document and contains 35 pages, while it contains only a partial list of the dismissals.

In the Indian department the dismissals ran up to 27. The axe fell particularly freely in the customs department where in the nine months 81 employees were dismissed to make way for good Liberals. In no case was there an investigation.

The then Minister of Public Works dismissed in the first nine months 64. In the department of Inland Revenue 46 employees were removed, and in the majority of cases it was frankly stated that it was at the request of a member of parliament. This was apparently the main reason for dismissals at that time

In the Fisheries service the Liberal government worked overtime in getting rid of Conservatives and no less than 129 members of the civil service were removed from office to give Liberals jobs The explanation given for the majority of the dismissals was "active and offensive partisanship" which was a favorite excuse to cover up a bald dismissal The axe was not employed quite so freely in the Marine service, and only 32 were removed by the minister The department of Justice has not as many employees and its list is smaller, running to eleven In every case except two there was no notice given, and this is true of a large percentage of the Liberal dismissals The decency of a regular notice to give the dismissed man an opportunity to find new employment was not followed It was simply a case of "off with his head" In the Agriculture department 33 employees were dismissed to make room for clamoring Liberals, and in the department of Interior, outside of the Indian Branch, the bloody assizes resulted in these first nine months in the dismissal of 23

These are but few of the civil servants dismissed immediately after the elections of 1896. Major Currie, M.P. for North Simcoe, commenting on the wholesale slaughter of the Liberals in the House last session, said: "The proscription lists of Marius and Sulla, the tyrants of ancient Rome, were not to be compared with the lists prepared after the elections of 1896 Hundreds of men were thrown out of office without any reason being given for dismissal The members of the late government never for a moment ceased to make the open boast that they believed in and always practised the spoils system and that they were going to practise it."

Continuing, Mr. Currie added. In addition we all know that the present leader of the opposition always was the high priest of the spoils system We know that throughout his whole career he practised these principles and endeavored to set up in this country a system of partisanship."

Wm. Sutherland, Independent candidate in the East Middlesex bye-election seems to have mixed up his temperance views so badly that he does not seem to have the confidence of either the temperance people or the Liberals.

If a man is really looking for a wife instead of a society butterfly, an heiress of a chorus girl, we recommend for his consideration a telephone girl. For even temper, patience, promptness and meekness, telephone girls have the world beaten. They are girls with practical ideas and common sense, they are girls who will help you save your money and make you an all-round housewife. We have never seen one that wasn't neat and clean, and they would probably be the most orderly housekeepers you could get. And one of their greatest virtues in their ability to control their tongues. They are accustomed to being quarrelled at and bemoaned, yet they are not moved to an outburst thereby. We know they are sometimes imposed upon and are seldom rated at true worth. If you are in need of a good wife, get a telephone girl.

The Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, London, England, desire to call attention to the fact that the employment, from time to time, in the newspaper press and elsewhere, of the phrase "Cattle Plague" in connection with the recent outbreaks of Foot-and Mouth Disease in Great Britain has given rise to considerable apprehension in Continental countries and is calculated to be prejudicial to the interests of British stockkeepers. The Board wish, therefore, specifically to state that no case of Cattle Plague (Peste, bovine, Rinderpest) has recently occurred in the United Kingdom which has been absolutely free from that disease since the year 1877, that is for more than thirty-five years past.

GREENWAY.

Mr. and Mrs. Gollen were in Zurich on Sunday visiting his uncle, who has been ill.—Mr. and Mrs. Dean Brown welcomed a young daughter to their home on Sunday morning.—The Male Quartette sang at Brinsley on Monday night.—Mr. and Mrs. Cliffe and Willie were visitors with friends here over Sunday.—The special services that have in progress in the Methodist church in the past two weeks are growing in interest as was evidenced by the very large congregations at the services on Sunday. Miss Morton gave two very powerful addresses and her appeals to the unsaved were of unusual power. On Sunday evening Miss Morton will give a special address to converts and on Sunday she will preach her farewell sermon.

RUBBER AND HUMOR.

In 1839 Professor Emmet of the University of Virginia visited in New York with his family and while there received from abroad a pair of india rubber cloth boots. His son, Dr. Thomas Addis Emmet, in his book, "Incidents of My Life," says that his distinguished father was happier in his new possessions than a child with a new toy and spent most of his time standing like a heron in the water to test them.

Their shape was not such as would have fascinated Puckelan, the famous bootmaker. They were made like a long stocking of coarse canvas with a leather sole, and over all was smeared a paste of rubber which might have answered in cold weather, but which was sticky and ill smelling under a moderately hot sun. In very few articles has there been more improvement than in rubber goods since they first came into use.

My father took back with him a "rubber coat" as a present to our old negro coachman, but he could never be induced to wear it in the rain, and when expostulated with his answer was, "Does you t'ink I'a gwine wear dis new coat in de rain?" He never wore it except in the bright sunshine and on a warm day, so that when he got off the box at the stable it was necessary to take with him the cushion and remove his trousers before he could get his coat off.

I recollect as a child the first "gum shoes" in use, which were hideous to look at and most uncomfortable over a shoe, but which to the bare feet of the old negroes were a joy and a comfort The first rubber shoe was shaped like a large sausage, and from one end along the side a piece was removed to permit the introduction of the foot After the foot was inserted the elastic substance shaped itself about it.

They were always called "gum shoes." While a medical student I was present at the opening of the Girard House in Philadelphia, and I remember that there were printed notices at each entrance with the request, "Please wipe your gums on the mat."

THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET.

That Famous Moss Covered One That Hung in the Well.

Not far from Boston is located the well which inspired the familiar lines of Samuel Woodworth to the "Old Oaken Bucket." Every time the place is visited many new traditions are told concerning the famous old bucket about which people have been singing these many years. Having drunk deep of the sparkling waters between whistled snatches of the familiar refrain how disconcerting it was to have the charm broken by learning that the original "old oaken bucket" was stolen shortly after his well known poem became famous!

The youngest daughter of Samuel Woodworth, the author, who died in Berkeley, Cal., often used to tell about the real old oaken bucket and of the sadness which came over the household on the day it was stolen. It seemed as if one of the family were missing. In this age of souvenir collection who knows but that some day the real old "moss covered bucket that hung in the well" may turn up in a museum or serve as a water tank in the show windows of some enterprising advertiser?

There is no other water bucket in the world so enshrined in homely, genuine romance as this one. Even the golden goblets of royalty and the treasured chalices of the crusaders have never awakened the universal and popular interest attained by the "old oaken bucket that hung in the well" until it was stolen and carried away in the zenith of its fame.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in National Magazine.

Grant's Graceful Act.

When General Grant was in Japan the emperor invited him to cross the imperial footbridge near the palace at Tokyo, across which none but those of royal blood had ever passed General Grant accepted the invitation and walked beside the mikado until they reached the center of the bridge Then he stopped, profoundly saluted the emperor and said: "Your majesty, I have come so far to show you that I am not insensible to the honor you would do me, but I cannot violate your traditions. Let us return the way we came" It was a graceful act, gracefully done.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Woman's Hair Made Glorious

PARISIAN SAGE STOPS FALLING HAIR AND DANDRUFF.

Nothing so detracts from the attractiveness of woman as dull, faded, lusterless hair.

There is no excuse for this condition nowadays, because notice is hereby given to the readers of The Advocate that Parisian Sage, the quick acting hair resister, is sold with a money back guarantee at 50 cents a large bottle.

Since its introduction into Canada, Parisian Sage has had an immense sale, and here are the reasons.

It is safe and harmless. Contains no dye or poisonous lead.

It cures dandruff in two weeks, by killing the dandruff germ.

It stops falling hair.

It promptly stops itching of the scalp

It makes the hair soft and luxuriant.

It gives life and beauty to the hair.

It is not sticky or greasy.

It is the daintiest perfumed hair tonic

It is the best, the most pleasant and invigorating hair dressing made.

Fight shy of the druggist who offers you a substitute, he is unworthy of your confidence.

Made only in Canada by the R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package.

At reliable druggists, department stores and toilet goods counters have Parisian Sage Hair Tonic. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package, W. S. COLE guarantees it!

A PROFOUND IMPRESSION

It is said that an evangelist recently told the people of a neighboring town that if they wished to see the newspaper man there converted the immediate payment of their subscriptions was the first step to be taken towards the desired end. That's a good practical suggestion. When a man walks into a printing office and planks down the cash for ten or fifteen years back subscription he's got genuine dyed-in-the-wool religion, and it makes a profound impression on the editor.

Humor and Philosophy
By DUNCAN H. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

BETWEEN the woman who wants a husband and the woman who wants to get rid of one society in many a town is kept amused and interested.

A lot of us in our secret souls are rather glad when we find we aren't getting what is coming to us.

The fellow who loses his temper isn't differing a great deal from the high tempered man who is exhibiting his.

It isn't half as much fun to do as you please when you don't have any one about you who cares whether you do or not.

It is about as hopeless to try to encourage some persons as it is to try to discourage some others.

To discourage a knocker give him a meat block and tell him to go to it and keep it up.

The biggest mistake that the majority of mankind make is being born poor.

Getting It Out of the System.

I never liked the kind of rhyming
That called on freakishness in chiming.
Nor can I warm up to the style of
The stuff, though I have seen a pile of
The sort of verse that strung the meter out
As though the author feared that it would peter out,
Though possibly it makes the diction airy
For one who does not own a dictionary.

Full many a thought a man can scarcely spell, see or Sense turns out by methods of this sort excelsior,
Though one who has a heroine, has him her ably,
To find her this method helps considerably,
One does not have this way to chart or diagram 'er,
Or use the rules of rhetoric or yet of grammar
Or say, "This sort of thing I shun; null
Is it and void and contrary to the constitution."

One who pauses need not think he is a candidate
For the bug house and that there is a cell and a date
For him at the asylum. Not on your photograph,
For in it simply is a note o' graphic description. He may run on all serene. Oh,
Yes, and say it is a peacherino!
Then he can start to read it backward, and he
Will find it just as smooth as lasses candy.

The sense or yet the nonsense does not matter. He Makes on the language an assault and battery.
What any one may say he doesn't care a cent or Pay close attention to the literary mentor.
He goes ahead where cautious would the way shun,
And any word will get him to his station
But, oh, to make his ending neat, proper
And pat he writes not with a pen, but a meat chopper!

The Way It Goes.

"Do you believe in bad luck?"
"Not when it happens to the other fellow."
"Why not?"
"It looks too much like foolishness and pigheadedness then."

Wanted the Excitement.

"They are going to elope."
"The geese! Why?"
"They are afraid their parents might consent to a quiet home wedding if they were to ask them."

Changed Then Around.

"She sings all the popular songs of the day."
"Popular?"
"That is what I said."
"Not when she sings them."

Makes a Difference.

"His wife is away on a visit."
"Is he anxious to have her back?"
"I should say he was."
"I didn't suppose he was getting his own meals."

Sounded Like It.

"Have you seen my new motorboat?"
"No, but I have heard it."
"I am looking for a name for it."
"Why not call it the Mexican war?"

So What's the Use?

"The world owes me a living."
"That may be, but you can't prove it."

HENEALL

Dr. John Ross of Toronto spoke in behalf of Temperance in the Presbyterian church here Sunday morning, and in the Methodist church in the evening. Rev. McCormich of Holmesville was in the Methodist church in the morning.—Miss Etta Davis is visiting in Toronto—Geo. Reynolds of Hamilton is visiting at his home here.—Mrs. T. Neelands is visiting in London, Ingersoll and Toronto.—Frank White and wife of Saskatoon have been visiting relatives here.—Mrs. Thos. Simpson has returned from London where she visited her sister, Mrs. Pearson.—Robt. Dowie who has been in Clinton Hospital for sometime, has recovered from the effects of his accident.

LIFURY—Recently J. W. Smithers, 17 con. of McGillivray, was bitten by a dog, when coming out of the grist mill at Dashwood. It appeared that the dog was suspected of having bitten some animals, and attacking other people. The dog was killed and its head sent to Ottawa for examination, when it was found that the animal was afflicted with rabies. As soon as word was received Mr Smithers left for Toronto to take the Pasteur treatment.

CROMARTY—It is with feelings of deep regret that we chronicle the death of that noble man, Mr. Donald Park, who passed away at his home here on Thursday, October 10th, at the advanced age of eighty-three years. He had been in declining health for about two years, so his death was not entirely unexpected. Deceased was born in Dalhousie, Lanark county, and with his parents brothers and sisters came to Hibbert when it was all forest country.

WOMAN'S TRIALS.

The burdens a woman has to carry through life are many but they can be lightened if she will turn to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. A soothing and strengthening nervine—subduing nervous excitability, prostration, hysteria, hot-flashes and the many symptoms which may be caused by distressing ills peculiar to women. For those "dragging-down" pains or distress and for the derangements and irregularities the "Favorite Prescription" has had many thousands of testimonials from people living in every part of America. Another important thing to every woman is that this medicine is made from efficient medicinal roots, without the use of alcohol, narcotics, or any injurious agents. Full list of ingredients given on bottle-wrapper and sworn to by Dr. R. V. Pierce—who is President of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N.Y. Every woman is invited to write to this Institute and receive confidential and sound medical advice, entirely without cost from one who makes the diseases of women his specialty.

MRS. MORRELL.

"I can cheerfully recommend your remedies, especially your 'Favorite Prescription,' for all female disorders," writes Mrs. M. M. MORRELL, of Bluff City, Tenn., Route 3. "During the past seven years I suffered from pains in the back and ovaries. Tried many remedies but found only transient relief until I was persuaded by a friend to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. After giving this remedy a fair trial, I found that it would do just what it is recommended to do. I used in all seven bottles. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Pierce's remedies for all female derangements."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate liver ills.

CONSTITUTIONAL BLOOD DISEASE.

Patient No. 16474. "The spots are all gone from my legs and arms and I feel good now. I am very grateful to you and shall never forget the favor your medicines have done for me. You can use my name in recommending it to any sufferer. I am going to get married soon. Thanking you once more, etc."

SAYS TWO MONTHS CURED HIM.

Patient No. 16765. Age 23. Single. Indulged in immoral habits 4 years. Deposit in urine and drains at night. Varicose Veins on both sides, pains in back, weak sexually. He writes:—"I received your letter of recent date and in reply I am pleased to say that after taking two months' treatment I would consider myself completely cured, as I have seen no signs of them coming back (one year).

THE WORLD SEEMS DIFFERENT.

Patient No. 15923. "I have not had a regular Emission I don't know when and am feeling fine. The world seems altogether different to me and I thank God for directing me to you. You have been an honest doctor with me."

VARICOSE VEINS CURED.

Case No. 16988. Symptoms when he started treatment:—Age 21, single, indulged in immoral habits several years. Varicose Veins on both sides—pimples on the face, etc. After two months' treatment he writes as follows:—"Your welcome letter to hand and am very glad to say that I think myself cured. My Varicose Veins have completely disappeared for quite a while and it seems a cure. I work harder and feel less tired. I have no desire for that habit whatever and if I stay like this, which I have every reason to believe I will. Thanking you for your kind attention," etc.

GAINED 14 POUNDS IN ONE MONTH.

Patient No. 13522. This patient (aged 58) had a chronic case of Nervous Debility and Sexual Weakness and was run down in vigor and vitality. After one month's treatment he reports as follows:—"I am feeling very well. I have gained 14 pounds in one month, so that I will have to congratulate you." Later report:—"I am beginning to feel more like a man. I feel my condition is getting better every week." His last report:—"Dear Doctors—As I feel this is the last month's treatment that I will have to get, I thought at one time I would never be cured but I put confidence in you from the start and you have cured me."

RED WAR IN THE BALKANS

Turkey, Bulgaria and Servia Are Now Fighting In Dead Earnest.

A despatch from Athens says: Greece, not wishing to detach herself from her allies, sent instructions early on Thursday morning to the Minister at Constantinople to communicate a declaration of war to the Porte. Greece at the same time sent a fraternal greeting of the allied States.

Servia was the first of the three States to declare war on Thursday night. Bulgaria followed with a similar declaration.

A despatch from Constantinople says: The formal declaration of war against Servia and Bulgaria was published by the Turkish Government on Thursday.

A despatch from Athens, Greece, says: Fighting between the Greek army and the Turkish forces stationed along the frontier began early on Thursday.

A despatch from Sofia says: King Ferdinand is on his way to the headquarters of the Bulgarian army near the Turkish frontier. A special service will be held in the Cathedral, where the Archbishop will invoke a blessing on the holy war on which the country is embarking. Similar services will be held throughout the country.

A despatch from Berlin says: Turkey has withdrawn a large sum of money, reported to be $17,500,000, from Germany, according to a special despatch from Bucharest, Roumania. The money was deposited in Germany during the reign of the Sultan Abdul Hamed and was ear-marked exclusively for a war fund. Germany has consented, says the correspondent, to its delivery to the Ottoman Government and the gold is now on the way from Kustendje, Roumania, to Constantinople, on board of the steamer Regele Carol I.

GREEKS VICTORIOUS.

A despatch from Athens says: After a four hours' engagement the Greeks on Saturday dislodged the Turks from the strong position which they had taken in the defence of Elassona, at the foot of Mount Olympus, and occupied the town. Crown Prince Constantine was in personal command, and received a baptism of fire. The Greek troops showed great courage. Their losses were small. The Turkish troops retired toward Sarandaporo Pass, where the main forces had concentrated. The Greeks occupy all the heights of the north of Elassona, and a decisive battle is imminent.

THE SERVIAN ADVANCE.

A despatch from Belgrade says: The Servian army, under command of the Crown Prince, has captured Rulva Heights, a strategical position to the south of Bujanoraiz, some miles below Vranya. An official report from the general staff at Nish says that the Servians have taken all the trenches in the Turkish territory around Vranya and that the Turks have been driven back across the Morava Valley.

TOOK 100 PRISONERS.

A despatch from Sofia says: The Bulgarian forces operating against Adrianople have driven the Turks back to the forts forming the outer line of the defences. They took 100 prisoners. The general advance of the Bulgarians continues. Several of the positions on the heights were taken at the bayonet point. In the villages the Turks are seizing Bulgarian officials and holding them for ransom.

CAPTURE OF PLAVA.

A despatch from Cettinje, Montenegro, says: It is officially announced here that the Montenegrin forces captured the town of Plava on Friday. The battle lasted two days.

WARSHIPS OFF EPIRUS.

A despatch from Constantinople says: It is reported from Janina that six Greek warships and three transports have appeared off the coast of Epirus. Their apparent object is the landing of troops.

MAP OF THE BALKAN WAR FIELD

This map indicates the manner in which Greece, Bulgaria, Servia and Montenegro are attacking Turkey. On the north-west, the Montenegrin troops captured several thousand Turkss and are about to invest Scutaria, which is pouring over the border. On the east the Bulgarian army is making its way towards Adrianople. The Turkish fleet threatens to land Turkish troops in the rear. On the south the Greeks have captured Meluna Pass, and are ready to invade Macedonia. It will be seen that Turkey is assailed on all sides.

CROPS BADLY HURT BY RAIN

A despatch from Ottawa says: A bulletin issued on Wednesday by the Census and Statistics Office covers the crop conditions in Canada for the month ended September 30. It states that during this month disastrously wet weather continued to prevail over most parts of Canada, especially over the Provinces of Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba. At September 30 large areas of grain, both in the East and West, were still either uncut or were exposed to the wet in stook. Much damage has been caused by sprouting, and in the North-West Provinces second growth has in numerous instances caused uneven ripening and consequent lowering of grade. Frosts during September in those provinces did some damage, but as a rule only late-sown crops, including flax, were seriously affected. In parts of Southern Ontario the ground is so wet that many farmers have abandoned the sowing of Fall wheat for next year.

The estimates of yield published a month ago could only be regarded as of preliminary value, because in consequence of the bad weather and late season harvesting operations had made so little progress.

The new estimates of yield obtained from correspondents at the end of September confirm generally the previous estimates for most of the crops, but inasmuch as very little threshing had been possible and large areas of grain were still unharvested, it is feared that the final estimates after completion of the threshing may turn out lower than the figures now given.

For Spring wheat the estimated production is 188,816,600 bushels, as compared with 189,904,500 bushels last year. For Fall wheat the estimate is 16,868,700 bushels, compared with 26,014,000 bushels last year, the total estimated wheat production being therefore 205,685,300 bushels, as compared with 215,918,500 bushels in 1911, a decrease of 5 per cent. The yield per acre is 21.08 bushels for all wheat, as against 20.77 bushels last year. Oats show a total production of 381,502,000 bushels, compared with 348,585,600 bushels last year, the yield per acre being 41.39 bushels, compared with 37.75. Barley is estimated to yield a total of 43,895,100 bushels, compared with 40,631,000 bushels last year, the yield being 31.00 bushels per acre, against 28.94.

The total production of rye is 3,086,000 bushels, against 2,668,800 bushels in 1911, the yields per acre being 20.75 and 17.41 bushels respectively. Of oats, barley and rye increases in total production as compared with last year represent percentages of 9.8 and 15. The estimated production of peas is 4,202,400 bushels, beans 1,106,800 bushels, of buckwheat 10,924,100 bushels, of flaxseed 21,143,400 bushels, of mixed grains 17,940,900 bushels, and of corn for husking 14,218,000 bushels.

The average quality of these crops at harvest time, measured up on a per cent. basis of 100 as representing grain well headed, well filled, well saved, and unaffected to any appreciably extent by frost, rust, smut, etc., is as follows:—

Spring wheat, 83.70; oats, 86.01; barley, 84.48; rye, 80.82; peas, 66.41; beans, 68.81; buckwheat, 80.87; mixed grains, 90.59; flaxseed, 83.86, and corn for husking, 71.92 per cent. Of these crops wheat, oats, barley, and flaxseed are above, while peas, beans, and corn for husking are below the average quality for either of the two previous years. Rye is slightly below the average. Flax is well above the quality of both 1911 (75 per cent.) and 1910 (73 per cent.).

Root crops continue to show excellent figures as representing average condition during growth. The highest are potatoes, 90.12 per cent., and the lowest corn for fodder, 80.63 per cent., the last named crop has improved by over 4 points during the month.

TRAIN HIT SLEEPING BULL.

Workman Jumped From Car and Was Crushed to Death.

A despatch from North Bay says: Isodore Levesqui, teamster, employed by the Superior Construction Co., was killed on Thursday when the Algoma Central work train on which he was riding collided with a bull lying asleep across the rails. Levesqui jumped from the car in which he was riding, and was crushed under it when it toppled over with the impact.

FOLLOWED HER FIANCE.

Owen Sound Girl Died Two Weeks After He Passed Away.

A despatch from Owen Sound says: Miss Gunn, for a number of years bookkeeper in a local clothing store, died on Saturday evening after two days' illness. She was to have been married in the near future to the late Alex. McEwen, the manager of the store, who died of typhoid less than a fortnight ago. Miss Gunn came here from Woodstock, and is survived by one brother and sister.

SPIKE PIERCED FOOT.

A despatch from Lindsay says: The large mill belonging to the Baker Lumber Company was totally destroyed by fire late Saturday night. The blaze was first noticed by the nightwatchman, who sent in the alarm, which was promptly responded to by the firemen. Before the latter arrived the fire had made great headway and their efforts failed to save the building. Besides the building and machinery, 10 or 12 thousand pieces of barrel headings were consumed. The mill, when in operation, employs seventy workmen, and was one of Lindsay's most successful industries. The loss is estimated at about $20,000; insurance about $9,000. The mill will likely be rebuilt during the coming winter.

MILLION-DOLLAR CONTRACT.

England to Make Shells for United States Navy.

A despatch from Washington says: A contract for part of the armor-piercing shells for the United States navy, on which the Hatfield Steel Company of England recently underbid all American competitors by nearly $2,000 on less than a million-dollar contract for two thousand fourteen-inch shells, and by about $300,000 on a contract of about $1,000,000 for 2,500 twelve-inch shells, will be awarded to the English concern, it was announced on Wednesday by Acting Secretary Winthrop. Just how many shells will be made by the English company has not been decided, but it is said only enough will be contracted for to serve as a test.

NUMBERS OF NEW CITIZENS

A despatch from Ottawa says: During the six months, April 1st to October 1st, of the current fiscal year 273,649 immigrants arrived in Canada. Of this number 183,990 arrived at ocean ports, and 89,659 from the United States. These figures show an increase of 13 per cent. as compared with the number of arrivals for the corresponding months of last fiscal year, which were 158,614 at ocean ports and 83,317 from the United States, making a total for the six months, April 1 to Oct. 1, 1911, of 241,931 persons.

During the month of September this year there were 31,140 arrivals, 20,690 of them having been at ocean ports and 10,450 from the States, as against 29,077 for September last year, 17,593 of whom were at ocean ports and 11,484 from the States.

The immigration to Canada for the last half-year is considerably greater than the entire population of Montenegro, the country which a few days ago declared war against Turkey.

The electoral district of Carleton, Ontario, has, according to the census of 1911, a population of 28,406; it will be seen that the immigration during the last six months is more than equivalent to the population of nine such districts.

Supposing that all the immigrants who arrived during the last six months were in line of march one pace apart, Indian file, the procession would reach from Toronto to Kingston, more than one hundred and fifty miles.

NEWS OF DEATH WITH BODY.

Parents Were Bereaved When Coffin Was Delivered.

A despatch from Ottawa says: To be suddenly confronted with a coffin containing the dead body of their son, without having received any previous notification of his demise, was the lot of Mr. and Mrs. A. Poirier, 122 Albert Street, Hull, parents of the late Napoleon Poirier, whose body was delivered by express on Thursday. Napoleon left Hull for the shanties six weeks ago, and his parents heard nothing from him until, answering the doorbell Thursday, Mr. Poirier was informed by the express man that he had the body of N. Poirier to deliver. Accompanying the body was a letter stating that deceased had met with his death by being struck by a falling tree whilst in the woods.

MARCONI'S EYE REMOVED.

Operation Performed By Noted Turin Surgeon.

A despatch from Rome says: William Marconi's right eye was removed on Thursday by Dr. Bayardi, a noted Turin surgeon. Mr. Marconi was seriously injured on September 25 in an automobile accident near Borghetto. He was removed to the hospital of the Naval Department at Spezia, where he was treated for several days. The severe contusions and swellings around the injured eye prevented a thorough examination until recently, when it was found that the optic nerve had been affected. The operation was performed in order that Mr. Marconi's left eye might be saved.

NEW GERMAN AMBASSADOR.

A Prince to Represent the Empire at Court of St. James.

A despatch from Berlin says: Prince Charles Max Lichnowsky has been nominated German Ambassador in London in succession to the late Baron Marschall von Bieberstein. Prince Lichnowsky is 52 years of age, and a soldier diplomat. After leaving the army he was attached to the diplomatic service in Stockholm, Constantinople, Dresden, Bucharest and Vienna, retiring from active duty in 1904. He is a member of the Prussian House of Lords.

INJURED BY RUNAWAY.

Owen Sound Merchant Knocked Down and Badly Hurt.

A despatch from Owen Sound says: Mr. David A. McClean, a well-known local merchant, lies at his home in an unconscious condition as the result of a runaway accident. He was knocked down by a horse while on the sidewalk and suffered a serious fracture of the hipbone and internal injuries. His condition is extremely critical.

AWARDED HEAVY DAMAGES.

Man Injured in Fatal C.P.R. Wreck at Hull Gets Over $20,000.

A despatch from Ottawa says: C. Roy, traveler for Bate and Sons, of this city, who was badly injured about the neck and shoulders in the disastrous C.P.R. wreck at Hull last winter, was on Friday awarded $21,075 by a jury in the Hull Superior Court. He claimed to have been permanently disabled.

PHILIPPINES HAS TYPHOON.

Four Hundred Lives Lost and $5,000,000 Damage Wrought.

A despatch from Manilla says: The typhoon which swept several of the islands of the Philippines group October 16, caused many deaths and heavy damage to property. A telegram received here by the military authorities estimates that 400 persons were killed and damage amounting to $5,000,000 was done by the storm in the Island of Cebu. The typhoon was of hurricane force, and leveled thousands of houses, vessels were swept ashore and sunk and their crews drowned. Many Americans and Filipinos are homeless.

HOSPITAL STAFF WALKS OUT.

A despatch from Prince Albert, Sask., says: The entire staff of Victoria Hospital severed its connection with that institution on Friday, when a month's notice previously given expired. As promptly as old members walked out an almost entire new staff took charge. The new matron is Miss C. L. Shaw of Hamilton. This is the sequel to the recent charges regarding the discipline at the hospital, in which an Alderman stated conditions there were bad.

BRIDE GOING TO BALKANS.

Icelandic-Canadian Girl Offers Services to Red Cross.

A despatch from Calgary, Alberta, says: Married only two weeks ago and now accompanying her husband to the seat of war in the Balkans is the romantic story of a Canadian girl, Mrs. Peter Leaded, formerly Miss Violet Tjola Olfron, of Winnipeg. This young woman will offer her services to the Red Cross in Greece to go to the front. She is an Icelander by birth and her mother resides in Winnipeg.

SIX-INCH HAT PINS.

Boston Council Will Limit Those Worn in Public.

A despatch from Boston, Mass., says: Because of numerous complaints made to him, Mayor Fitzgerald said on Wednesday that he will send to the next meeting of the City Council the draft of an ordinance which will limit the length of hat pins to be worn by women on the streets and in public conveyances to six inches.

Col. Diaz, nephew of Mexico's ex-president, who is leading a new rebellion, is in possession of Vera Cruz. He has 500 men.

SLEW CHILDREN AND SELF.

Polish Woman, Distraught, Ended Life with Carving Knife.

A despatch from Medicine Hat says: The Mounted Police were summoned from this point on Thursday morning to investigate a murder and suicide which occurred at Tidelake, 26 miles north of Carlstedt. Mrs. Julia Polosky, who lost her husband and one child recently through typhoid, and who apparently became somewhat unsettled in her reason through grief and through complications in regard to her possession of the homestead, slew her two remaining children, aged five and three years, with a carving knife, and then apparently turned the same weapon upon herself. The family were Polish immigrants, and the tragedy was discovered by Polish neighbors.

GRENADIERS' RE-UNION.

Canada's Noted Regiment Celebrating Their Jubilee.

The Royal Grenadiers of Toronto, one of Canada's smartest regiments, organized in 1862, is this year holding a grand re-union and jubilee on November 2nd and 3rd, at which it is expected about 2,000 ex-members will be present. The names and addresses of ex-members are pouring in from all parts of Canada and United States, and those who have not yet sent in their names and addresses to the Royal Grenadiers, Toronto, should do so at once, and thus avoid being overlooked.

BAIL FOR CONFESSED SLAYER

Facing Murder Charge, Vancouver Youth is at Liberty.

A despatch from Vancouver says: Despite the fact that the accused had confessed to killing Ernest Spinard, and that the charge was on Wednesday afternoon altered from manslaughter to murder, Harold A. McNaughton, son of Mrs. McNaughton, school trustee, was allowed out on bail when an application was made before Justice Murphy in the Supreme Court. McNaughton will stand trial at the next assizes.

BAD BILLS CIRCULATING.

$2 Note Is Softer and Has Lighter Black and Darker Red Ink.

A despatch from Galt says: That counterfeit Dominion notes are being circulated in this part of the country was shown on Thursday when Town Treasurer Hood discovered that one of the municipal departments had accepted a "phoney" $2 note. On close examination it was distinguishable from real "cash" by the lighter shade of black ink used for printing and a darker-hued red for the serial number. The paper is softer than that of Dominion bills.

ONLY A MONTH;

OR, A CURIOUS MYSTERY EXPLAINED.

CHAPTER XXI.—(Cont'd)

That chapter of her life was over, and she was quite well aware that the next chapter would seem terribly dull and insipid. For a moment the thought alarmed her.

"What have I been doing," she said to herself, "to let this love get so great a hold on me? Why is it that no other man in the world seems to me worth a thought, even he may be better, and may live a nobler life than Frithiof?"

"It is after all only natural to feel this going away," she reflected. "Like the tree, I shall soon grow steady again." And then she heard Lance's voice calling her, and, going to the nursery, found a childish dispute in need of settling, and tiny arms to cling about her, and soft kisses to comfort her.

Meanwhile, Frithiof and Sigrid had reached the model lodgings, and, key in hand, were toiling up the long flights of stone stairs. All had been arranged on the previous day, and now, as they unlocked their door, the moment seemed to them a grave one, for they were about to begin a new and unknown life. Sigrid's heart beat quickly as they entered the little sitting-room. The door opened straight into it, which was a drawback, but Mrs. Boniface's present of a four-fold Japanese screen gave warmth and privacy, and picturesqueness, by shutting off that corner from view; and, in spite of extreme economy in furnishing, the place looked very pretty. A cheerful crimson carpet covered the floor; the buff-colored walls were bare indeed, for there was a rule against knocking in nails, but the picture of Bergen stood on the mantel-piece between the photographs of their father and mother, serving as a continual remembrance of home and of a countryman's kindness. Facing the fire was a cottage piano lent by Mr. Boniface for as long as they liked to keep it, and on the open shelves above a corner cupboard were ranged the blue willow-pattern cups and saucers which Sigrid had delighted in buying.

"They were much too effective to be banished to the kitchen, were they not?" she said. "I am sure they are far prettier than a great deal of the rare old china I have seen put up in drawing-rooms."

"How about the fire?" said Frithiof. "Shall I light it?"

"Yes; do. We must have a little one to boil the kettle, and Swanhild is sure to come in cold after that long journey. I'll just put these flowers into Cecil's little vases. How lovely they are! Do you know, Frithiof, I think our new life is going to be like the smell of these chrysanthemums — healthy and good, and a sort of bitter-sweet."

"I never knew they had any smell," he said, still intent on his fire.

"Live and learn," said Sigrid, laughingly holding out to him the basket of beautiful flowers—red, white, crimson, yellow, russet, and in every variety.

"I should like to come to King's Cross too," said Sigrid. "But perhaps it is better that I should stay here and get things quite ready. I hope Swanhild will turn up all right. She seems such a little thing to travel all that way alone."

When he had set off, she began with great satisfaction to lay the table for tea. She put everything tidy in the bare little kitchen, where, in truth, there was not one unnecessary piece of furniture.

At last she heard the door handle turned, and Frithiof's voice.

"You'll find her quite a domesticated character," he was saying; and in another minute Swanhild was in her arms, none the worse for her lonely pourney, but very glad to feel her cares at an end.

"Oh, Sigrid!" she cried, with child-like glee; "what a dear, funny little room! And how cozy you have made it! Why, there's the picture of Bergen! and oh, what a pretty-looking tea-table! I'm dreadfully hungry, Sigrid. I was afraid to get out of the train for fear it should go on. They seem to go so dreadfully fast here, everything is in a bustle."

"You poor child, you must be starving!" cried Sigrid. "Come and take your things off quickly. She really looks quite thin and pale, does she not, Frithiof?"

"She doesn't feel so very bony," he said, laughing.

"Oh, and I did eat something," explained Swanhild. "There was an old lady who gave me two sandwiches, but they were so dreadfully full of fat."

"What do you think of your new bedroom?" Frithiof asked.

"It's lovely!" cried Swanhild. "What a funny, round bath, and such a tiny washing-stand, just like the one in the old doll's house on three legs. And oh, Sigrid, auntie has sent us three lovely eider-down quilts as a Christmas present, only she thought I might as well bring them now."

"There's one thing which we had better make up our minds to at once," said Sigrid, when at length they rose. "Since we have got to wait on ourselves, we may as well try to enjoy it and get what fun we can out of it. Come, Swanhild, I will wash the tea things and you shall dry them."

"As for me," said Frithiof, suddenly appearing at the kitchen door in his shirt sleeves, "I am shoeblack to the establishment."

"You! oh Frithiof!" cried Swanhild, startled into gravity.

"I assure you it is in the bond," he said, smiling. "Sigrid is cook and housekeeper; you are the lady help; and I am the man for the coals, knives, and boots. Every respectable household has a man for that part of the work, you know."

"Yes, yes," she hesitated; "but you—"

"She clearly doesn't think me competent," he said, laughingly threatening her with his brush.

"Order! order! you two, or there will be tea-cups broken," said Sigrid, laughing. "I believe he will do the boots quite scientifically, for he has really studied the subject. There, put the china in the sitting-room, Swanhild, on the corner shelves, and then we will come and unpack."

By nine o'clock everything was arranged, and they came back to the sitting-room, where Frithof had lighted the pretty little lamp, and was writing to Herr Siversten to say he would be glad of more work.

"Come," said Sigrid, "the evening won't be complete without some music, and I am dying to try that piano. What shall be the first thing we play in our new home, Swanhild?"

"'For Norge,'" said the little girl promptly.

"Do you know we had quite a discussion about that at Rowan Tree House the other night," said Sigrid. "They were all under the impression that it was an English air, and only knew it as a glee called 'The Hardy Norseman.' Mr. Boniface calls Frithiof his Hardy Norseman because he got well so quickly."

"Come and sing, Frithiof, do come," pleaded Swanhild, slipping her hand caressingly into his and drawing him toward the piano. And willingly enough he consented, and in their new home in this foreign land, they sung together the stirring Norway national song.

CHAPTER XXII.

"My dear, she is charming, your little Swanhild! She is a born dancer and catches up everything with the greatest ease," said Mme. Lechertier one autumn afternoon, when Sigrid at the usual time entered the big, bare room where the classes were held.

"You think she will really be of use to you, madame" asked Sigrid. "If she is no good we should not of course like her to take any money."

"Yes, yes," said Mme. Lechertier. "You are independent and proud, I know it well enough. But I assure you, Swanhild will be a first-rate little teacher, and I am delighted to have her. There is no longer any need for her to come to me every morning, for I have taught her all that she will at present need, and no doubt you are in a hurry for her to go on with her ordinary schooling."

"I have arranged for her to go to a high school, in the mornings, after Christmas," said Sigrid, "and she must, till then, work well at her English or she will not take a good place. It will be a very busy life for her, but then we are all of us strong and able to get through a good deal."

"And her work with me is purely physical and will not overtask her," said madame. "Dear little soul! she has the most perfect manners I ever saw in a child! Her charm to me is that she is so bright and unaffected. What is it, I wonder, that makes you Norwegians so spontaneous? so perfectly simple and courteous?"

"In England," said Sigrid, "people seem to me to have two sides, a rough home side, and a polite society side. The Bonifaces reverse the order and keep their beautiful side for home and a rather shy side for society, but still they, like all the English people I have met, have distinctly two manners. In Norway there is nothing of that. I think perhaps we think less about the impression we are making; and I think Norwegians more naturally respect each other."

Swanhild prospered well on that first Saturday afternoon, and Mme. Lechertier was quite satisfied with her little idea as to the Norwegian costumes. They had only just returned and taken off their walking things when there came a loud knock at the door. Swanhild still in her Hardanger dress ran to see what was wanted, and could hardly help laughing at the funny-looking old man who inquired whether Frithiof were in.

"Still out, you say," he panted; very provoking. "I specially wanted to see him on a matter of urgency."

"Will you not come in and wait?" said the child. "Frithiof will soon be home."

"Thank you," said old Herr Sivertsen. "These stairs are terrible work. I shall be glad not to have to climb them again. But houses are all alike in London—all alike! Story after story, till they're no better than the tower of Babel."

"Frithiof has gone for a walk with a friend of his," she explained. "But he will be home in a few minutes. I always persuade him to take a good walk on Saturday if possible."

"In consequence of which he doesn't get through half as much work for me," said Herr Sivertsen. "However, you are quite right. He needed more exercise. Is he quite well again?"

"Quite well, thank you; though I suppose he will never be so strong as he once was," she said a little sadly. "You see overwork and trouble and poor living must in the long run injure even a strong man."

"There are no strong men now-a-days, it seems to me," said the old author gruffly. "They all knock out sooner or later—a degenerate race—a worthless generation."

"Well, the doctor says he must have had a very fine constitution to have recovered so fast," said Sigrid. "Still, I feel rather afraid sometimes of his doing too much again. Were you going to suggest some more work for him?"

"Yes, I was; but perhaps it is work in which you could help him," said Herr Sivertsen, and he explained to her his project.

"If only I could make time for it," she cried. "But you see we all have busy lives. I have to see to the house almost entirely and there is always either mending or making in hand. And Swanhild and I are out every afternoon at Madame Lechertier's academy. By the bye, that is why we have on these peasant costumes, which must have surprised you."

"It is a pretty dress, and takes me back to my old days at home," said Herr Sivertsen. "As to the work, do what you can of it, there is no immediate hurry. Here comes your brother!" and the old man at once button-holed Frithiof, while Roy, who had returned with him, was ready enough to talk with Sigrid as she stood by the fire making toast, little Swanhild in the meantime setting the table for afternoon tea, lighting the lamp, and drawing the curtains.

Will you be one of the 108 farmers who will receive our Prize Contest checks?

THERE will be twelve cash prizes in each of the nine provinces (108 in all) in the 1912 Prize Contest for Canadian Farmers. The 1911 Contest was so successful in awakening interest in the use of Concrete on the farm, that a second contest, in which three times as many prizes are offered, was decided upon for this year.

The Contest this year is divided into three classes, "A," "B" and "C," and there will be four prizes in each class. (First prize, $50; Second prize, $25; Third prize, $15; Fourth prize, $10.)

Thus there are three $50 Prizes, three $25 Prizes, three $15 prizes, and three $10 Prizes, for each province.

DESCRIPTION OF CLASSES

In Each Class there will be First, Second, Third and Fourth Prizes ($50, $25, $15, and $10) for Each Province.

CLASS "A"—Prizes to be awarded to the four farmers in each province who use most "Canada" Cement on their farms in the year 1912.

CLASS "B"—Prizes to be awarded to the four farmers in each province who send photographs of the best concrete work done with "Canada" Cement on their farms in 1912.

CLASS "C"—Prizes to be awarded to the four farmers in each province who send in the best description, telling how any piece of concrete work was done with "Canada" Cement. (Entries for this prize must be accompanied by photographs of the work.)

Don't think that you must use a large quantity of cement in order to win a prize. The quantity of cement used does not count in Classes "B" and "C." Many of last year's prize winners used very little cement.

When you enter the Contest, you have a chance to win a cash prize of $50 as well as the certainty that you will add a permanent improvement to your farm. If you haven't a copy, be sure and ask for our book, "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete." It will not only suggest many improvements that you can use in entering the Contest, but will tell you all about the use of concrete on the farm.

Just write your name and address on the attached coupon, or use a postal card, and we will send full particulars of the Prize Contest and a copy of "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete" to you absolutely free.

We notice a number of our exchanges carry the T. Eaton Company's advertising On a number of occasions we refused this advertising at a high rate, out of loyalty to our own merchants and our town. The Exeter merchants who get their printing out of town, and citizens who send to Eaton's for wedding and other stationery, and there are quite a number, too, are not deserting of much consideration, and we sometimes doubt if even for the satisfaction of being loyal, we were wise in refusing a good offer. Our candid opinion is that the person who patronizes home trade is the best citizen generally.

Sunday last was Dominion Alliance Day in Huron County, when many of the pulpits were filled by visiting ministers who spoke on the subject of Temperance In Exeter Rev. Kennedy occupied the Main street pulpit in the morning, and James Street pulpit in the evening. In this connection it may be again mentioned that another big Local Option campaign will be fought out at the time of the next Municipal Elections. Voting is likely to take place in over 70 municipalities, comprising 1 city, 16 towns 20 villages and 34 townships. For the most part the contests are in Western Ontario, Huron leading with nine. Most of these places have voted before, but in a considerable number the question will come before the electors for the first time. A list of the places was given in our columns last week.

To most people the mention of Devon means the Lorna Doone country, an enjoyable field for sightseeing. But this South-Coast county of England has produced enough famous men to make the name of Devon signify still more Among the celebrities are Sir Francis Drake, Charles Kingsley, James Anthony, Froude, John Gay, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Sir Redvers Buller, Bishop Phillpotts, Rev. S. Baring-Gould, Blackmore, and Sir Francis Gould, the cartoonist. And also many of the leading residents of Stratford, Ont., are Devons by birth, and the country around Exeter, Ont., is chiefly settled by men of Devonshire, who brought the name of their famous old county town with them. The country around Exeter is, moreover, to this day, noted for Devonshire cream." There is fibre in the descendants of mighty old Devon.—The Stratford Herald.

HICKS' FORECAST FOR OCTOBER—A regular storm period will be in its first stages as we pass from October into November that is, in western parts of the country the thermomster will be rising, the barometer will be falling, with growing cloudiness and threatening weather, and during the opening days of November storms of rain and snow will pass in regular rotation eastwardly across the country. Each section, during the progress of a storm period, first has a day or two of warm, fair, "weather breeding weather," with falling barometer east of storm areas. These conditions are followed by rain or snow from the west, while sections west of storm areas have rising barometer change to colder, westerly winds and clearing weather.

JUDGMENT VARIED AND COSTS REDUCED

Before Judges Boyd, Latchford and Middleton in the Divisional Court at Toronto on Tuesday the appeal of defendent in the case of: Exeter Canning and Preserving Company vs. W. J. Blewett was heard and while the judgment was sustained it was reduced from $15 to $13 damages, and the costs were reduced from the County Court scale to the Division Court scale; and the injunction was dissolved. No costs of appeal were allowed. It will be remembered that in June last the case was tried before Judge Doyle at Goderich and a large number of witnesses were heard. The Canning Co. claimed damages for trespass and removal of pea straw and asked for an injunction, and Judge Doyle awarded plaintiff judgment for $15 and costs on the County Court scale, and an injunction restraining the defendant from further trespass and removal. The appeal judges simply varied the judgment from $15. to $13. and allowed the Canning Co. costs on Division Court scale instead of County Court scale, allowing the defendant a set-off of their costs at county court rate and the injunction was dissolved.

We notice in this week's issue of The Family Herald and Weekly Star that the publisher's have secured as a premium picture for subscribers, another beautiful subject, entitled "Mother's Treasures," a companion to the beautiful picture "Home Again" which they gave last year. Family Herald Pictures are always good, and it is said that "Mother's Treasures" is the best yet. It is truly wonderful what great value one receives for one dollar a year in The Family Herald and Weekly Star. It is a paper no home in Canada should be without. Every member of the family will find some part of it interesting, and alone well worth the year's subscription. The premium picture "Mother's Treasures" is 22 by 29 inches, all ready for framing, and alone would sell in any art store at two dollars. The Family Herald should do bigger business than ever this season.

The Canning Company Again Succeeds in the Pea Straw Litigation

Last week we had only time to copy the report of the judgment of the Divisional Court in this case as it appeared in the Toronto papers. Since then we have had time to analyze the judgment, and to those of our readers who may have read the cheap thunder equite, published in the legal puffery bureau, it will be interesting to know the result of the appeal by the defendant to the Divisional Court. It will be remembered that at the Goderich trial it was adjudged that the pea straw in question was not a nuisance, that the defendant Bissett committed trespass in removing the straw, and that the Board of Health (?) acted illegally. The judgment of the County Court therefore affirmed the contention of the Canning Co'y, the Divisional Court re-affirms the Company's contention and again gives the Canning Company damages for the straw and damages for the trespass committed by defendant. The appellant Bissett is compelled to pay his costs of the appeal to Toronto and all his appeal avails is that the injunction restraining him "forever" from a repetition of his trespass is dissolved and this the Canning Company would have been pleased to give him if he had asked for it without any expense to himself. The judgment on appeal also varies the County Court judgment, in that while it gives the Canning Company the damages, with Division Court costs, which defendant must pay, the defendant is allowed to set off his costs of defence in the County Court suit. This question of costs remains, therefore, for the taxing officer to adjust and the lawyers to squabble over. The ratepayers will be in a better position to judge who wins and who loses when the year's financial statement is before them, that is if suppression of the figures in this matter is not resorted to as, it is said, has been done in the past.

In the meantime who pays for moving the straw?

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE NOT IN TROUBLE

On Thursday of last week an unfounded and perfectly rediculous rumour was circulated in town to the effect that The Canadian Bank of Commerce was being investigated by the Government for sending in false returns. By the business and professional men the report was treated as a joke, but a number of the depositors, who were not as well informed as to the standing of the Bank, became alarmed and were inclined to demand their money. The local Manager of the bank, whom we at once interviewed, stated that there was absolutely no truth in the rumour and that he had discovered the origin of it, and had pointed out to the person responsible, the great harm which might be done by circulating an untrue report of that nature. We believe that the person responsible for the rumour thought it to be true at the time, but any one passing a statement of this nature, without first obtaining the facts are not only to be condemned, but are leaving themselves amenable to the law. These facts could easily have been obtained, and would not only have saved a number of depositors a few anxious minutes, but would have prevented a momentary doubt being cast over one of our foremost Banks in Canada. The Canadian Bank of Commerce is the second strongest Bank in the Dominion, with a Capital of $15,000,000, and reserve fund of $12,500,000. Its head office officials are conservative and capable bankers, and we can assure our readers that there is nothing whatever in the report of last week.

HOTEL BURNED AT WINGHAM.

Wingham, Oct. 29.—Fire originating in a chimney almost completely wiped out the Exchange Hotel, a two-story hostelry, the property of C. E. Leppard here to-night. Practically all the contents were saved, but the loss, it is understood, will be quite heavy, although partially covered by insurance.

2 KILLED, 80 INJURED

On Monday evening a train containing Toronto soldiers, who were returning from a sham fight near Streetsville, ran head-on into the Detroit Flyer at Streetsville junction. One coach was telescoped and nearly every one injured, mostly of the 48th Highlanders R. Murdock and John Banatyne were killed.

CONSERVATIVE ELECTED

Geo. W. Neely, straight Conservative was elected to the Provincial Legislature over William Sutherland, Independent, in East Middlesex on Monday last by a majority of 551. Chas. H. Mills, Conservative, was also elected in Waterloo by over 1300 majority.

Fire Series Inspector Campbell of Sylvan was in town on official duty last Tuesday

Mr. Phil. Rowtcliffe is moving with his family to London this week, where they intend to reside.

A young man from Toronto was nearly killed near Forest while shooting rabbits on Thanksgiving Day. The charge tore through the fleshy part of the leg and forty-seven stitches were required to close the wound.

FARQUHAR.

The death occurred at Russeldale on Thursday, October 24th, of Mr. Cecil Russell, aged 29 years. Mr. Russell had been ill of heart trouble for about two years. The end came very suddenly, however, as he had been in Stratford the previous day. He had never been unable to attend to his usual duties. He leaves to mourn his death a wife, who was Miss Della McNicol of this place, and two children. The funeral on Saturday was very largely attended, there being over 150 rigs in the procession. The remains were interred in Roy's Cemetery.

WIFE OF FORMER EXETER MAN COMMITS SUICIDE.

Apparently in a temporary insane condition, Mrs. Nelson, aged 43, wife of Mr. Rockford B. Nelson, 650 Waterloo Street, London, formerly of Exeter, at 5 o'clock last Friday afternoon attempted to force a quantity of carbolic acid down the throat of Mrs. Ball, a sick neighbor, and failing in her intention, swallowed the poison herself, dying from the effects 20 minutes later. Mrs. Ball is now confined in Victoria Hospital, suffering from horrible burns about the mouth and face, where the liquid was spilled when she struggled to free herself from the other woman. Mrs. Nelson, it appears, for sometime past had been employed to attend to the needs of Mrs. Ball, who had been confined to bed with a two-week-old baby boy. Although not sleeping in her neighbor's house, Mrs. Nelson was in the house considerably throughout the day, and there was nothing unusual in her appearance at the house at that hour Mrs. Ball sprang from the bed, pushed her assailant away and hurried in her nightdress to a neighbor's, and when they returned Mrs. Nelson was discovered lying unconscious upon a bed in another room, where she probably drank the poison after Mrs. Ball's departure. An inquest was considered unnecessary as it was plainly a case of suicide. Deceased was Mr. Nelson's second wife and she had no children. Mr. Nelson, who is well known in Exeter, is caretaker of the Talbot Street Baptist church.

FORMER EXETER GIRL KILLED IN LONDON.

Miss Annie Slavin, aged 40, a former resident of Exeter, while attending to her regular duties as chambermaid in the Tecumseh House, London, on Friday evening at 8 o'clock, received a fracture at the base of the skull from a falling wardrobe, and died shortly afterward. Miss Slavin was alone at the time in one of the rooms. Being small in stature and judging from her position, after the accident, it is evident that as she reached into the wardrobe for an article it toppled backward upon her, crushing her head to the floor.

George H O'Neil the proprietor of the House, who was passing through a lower corridor, heard the crash, and suspecting something was wrong, hurried upstairs, finding the unfortunate woman bleeding profusely from the mouth and presumably in a dying condition. A doctor was hurriedly called but life was extinct before he arrived. Dr. Ferguson, coroner, later viewed the body, and becoming aware of the probable facts of the case, declared an inquest was unnecessary. Miss Slavin and a sister Miss Mary, have been employed in the hotel for some years. A brother, Thomas Slavin, resides near Heneall

The remains of the late Miss Slavin were taken to Heneall and thence to the home of her brother, Wm. Slavin, Concession 12, Tuckersmith, from where the funeral took place to McTaggart's cemetery, Chiselhurst, on Monday.

Herr Sivertsen found himself drinking tea before he knew what he was about, and the novelty of the little household quite shook him out of his gruff surliness. Strange by-gone memories came floating back to him as he listened to the two girls' merry talk, watched them as suddenly they broke into an impromptu dance, and begged them to sing to him the old tunes which for so many years he had not heard.

"I am sorry to say," observed Sigrid, laughing, "that our next-door neighbor, Mrs. Hallifield, tells me the general belief in the house is that we belong to the Christy Minstrels. English people don't seem to understand that one can dance and sing at home for pure pleasure and not professionally."

After that the old author often paid them a visit, and they learned to like him very much and to enjoy his tirades against the degenerate modern race. And thus with hard work, enlivened now and then by a visit to Rowan Tree House, or by a call from the Bonifaces, the winter slipped by, and the trees grew green once more, and they were obliged to own that even this smoky London had a beauty all its own.

"Did you ever see anything so lovely as all this pink may and yellow laburnum?" cried Sigrid, as one spring evening she and Frithiof walked westward to fulfill one of the evening engagements to which they had now become pretty well accustomed.

"No; we had nothing equal to this at Bergen," he admitted, and in very good spirits they walked on, past the great wealthy houses; he with his violin-case, and she with a big roll of music, well content with the success they had worked hard to win, and not at all disposed to envy the West End people. It was indeed a great treat to Sigrid to have a glimpse of so different a life. This evening he happened to be particularly cheerful; things had gone well lately at the shop; his strength was increasing every day, and the home atmosphere had done a great deal to banish the haunting thoughts of the past which in solitude had so preyed on his mind. They discussed the people in Norwegian during the intervals, and in a quiet way were contriving to get a good deal of fun out of the evening, when suddenly their peace was invaded by the unexpected sight of the very face which Frithiof had so strenuously tried to exile from his thoughts. They had just finished a waltz. Sigrid looked up from her music and saw, only a few yards distant from her, the pretty willowy figure, the glowing face and dark eyes and siren-like smile of Lady Rominaux. For a moment her heart seemed to stop beating, then with a wild hope that possibly Frithiof might not have noticed her, she turned to him with intense anxiety.

"Frithiof," she said in Norwegian, "you are faint. Go out into the cool and get some water before the next dance."

How she longed to get up and rush from the house! How she loathed that woman who stood flirting with the empty-headed man standing at her side! If it had not been for her perfidy how different all might now be!

"I can't help hating her!" thought poor Sigrid. "She has ruined Frithiof's life, and now in one moment has undone the work of months. She brought about my father's failure; if she had been true we should not now be toiling to pay off these terrible debts—hundreds of homes in Bergen would have been saved from a cruel loss—and he—my father—he might have been alive and well! How can I help hating her?"

"Have they come to that?" she thought. "Oh, poor things! How sorry I am for them! Papa told me Herr Falck had failed; but to have sunk so low! Well, since they lost all their money it was a mercy that all was over between us. And yet, if I had been true to him—"

Her companion wondered what made her so silent all at once.

"How extraordinary that I should chance to meet my Viking here!" she thought to herself. "How very much older he looks! How very much his face has altered! One would have thought that to come down in the world would have cowed him a little; but it seems somehow to have given him dignity. I positively feel afraid of him. After all, I could soon get my old power over him if I chose to try. I will go and speak to them; it would be rude not to notice them in their new position, poor things."

With a word of explanation to her partner she hastily crossed over to the piano. But when she met Frithiof's eyes her heart began to beat painfully, and once more the feeling of fear returned to her.

"Will you tell me the name of the last waltz?" she asked.

He bowed, and began to turn over the pile of music to find the piece.

"Frithiof," she whispered, "have you forgotten me? Have you nothing to say to me?"

But he made as though he did not hear her, gravely handed her the music, then, turning away, took up his violin and signed to Sigrid to begin the next dance.

Poor Blanche was eagerly claimed by her next partner, and with burning cheeks and eyes bright with unshed tears, was whirled off, though her feet seemed weighted and almost refused to keep time with that violin whose tones seemed to tear her heart.

The thought of the possibility of stopping the dismal mockery of enjoyment came to her again, and she eagerly seized the first opportunity of departure; but when once the strain of the excitement was over her strength all at once evaporated. Feeling sick and faint, she lay back in a cushioned chair in the cloak-room; her gold plush mantle and the lace mantilla which she wore on her head made her look ghastly pale, and the maid came up to her with anxious inquiries.

And then came a confused sound of wheels outside in the street and shouts echoing through the night, while from above came the sound of the dancers, and that resolute indefatigable violin still going on with the monotonous air of "Sir Roger de Coverley," as though it were played by a machine rather than by a man with a weary head and a heavy heart.

"Lady Romiaux's carriage is at the door," said a voice, and she hastily got up, made her way through the brightly lighted hall, and with a sense of relief stepped into her brougham.

It was quite possible for Lady Romiaux to go, but the dance was not yet over, and Frithiof and Sigrid had, of course, to stay to the bitter end.

And at length the programme had been toiled through. She hurried down-stairs to put on her cloak and hat, rejoining Frithiof in a few minutes in the crowded hall, where he stood looking, to her fond fancy, a thousand times nobler and grander than any of the other men about him.

"You are very tired?" asked Sigrid, lipping her arm into his.

"Yes, tired to death," he said. "It is humiliating for a fellow to be knocked out by so little."

"I do not call it 'little,'" she said, eagerly. "You know quite well it was neither the heat nor the work which tired you. Oh, Frithiof, how could that woman dare to speak to you?"

"Hush!" he said, sadly. "Talking only makes it worse. I wish you would drive the thought out of my head with something else."

The dim, dreary streets through which they walked and the gradually increasing light in the east, seemed like a picture of his own life, for there dawned for him in his sadness a clearer revelation of the Unseen than had even before been granted him.

CHAPTER XXIII.

It seemed to Sigrid that she had hardly gone to bed before it was time to get up again; she sleepily wished that Londoners would give dances at more reasonable hours, then, remembering all that had happened, she forgot her own weariness and turned with an eager question to Swanhild. It was the little sister's daily duty to go in and wake Frithiof up a task of some difficulty, for either his bad habit of working at night during his lonely year in town, or else her illness, had left him with a tendency to be wide awake between twelve and two and sound asleep between six and seven.

"You haven't called him yet, have you?" asked Sigrid, rubbing her eyes.

"No, but it is quite time," said Swanhild, shutting up her atlas and rearing up in the bed where she had been luxuriously learning geography.

"Oh, leave him a little longer," said Sigrid. "We were so late last night, and his head was so bad, that I don't suppose he has had much sleep. And, Swanhild, whatever you do, don't speak of the dance to him or ask him any questions. As ill-luck would have it, Lady Romiaux was there."

Now Swanhild was a very imaginative child, and she was just at the age when girls form extravagant adorations for women.

"How was she looking?" she asked, turning away her blushing face with the most comical parody of a woman's innate tendency to hide her love.

"Oh, she was looking just as usual—as pretty, and as siren-like as ever, wretched woman!" Then, remembering that Swanhild was too young to hear all the truth, she suddenly drew up. "But there, don't speak of her any more. I never wish to hear her name again."

Frithiof came to breakfast only a few minutes before the time when he had to start for business. His eyes looked very heavy, and his face had a pale, set look which Sigrid had learned to interpret only too well.

"You don't look well this morning, Mr. Falck," said the foreman, a cheerful, bright-eyed, good-hearted old man, who had managed to bring up a large family on his salary, and to whom Frithiof had often applied for advice on the subject of domestic economy.

"We were up late last night," said Frithiof, by way of explanation. But the old man was shrewd and quick-sighted, and happening later on to be in Mr. Boniface's private room, he seized the opportunity to remark:

"We shall have Mr. Falck knocking out again, sir, if I'm not mistaken; he is looking very ill today."

"I'm sorry to hear that," said Mr. Boniface. "You were quite right to tell me, Foster. We will see what can be done."

And the foreman knew that there was no favoritism in this speech, for Mr. Boniface considered the health of his employes as a matter of the very highest importance, and being a Christian first and a tradesman afterward, did not consider money-making to be the great object of life. Many a time good old Foster himself had been sent down for a few days at the sea-side with his family, and it was perhaps a vivid remembrance of the delights of West Cordington that made him add, as he left the room:

"He looks to me, sir, as if he needed bracing up."

Just in Time.

A German shoemaker left the gas turned on in his shop one night, and upon arriving in the morning struck a match to light it. There was a terrible explosion, and the shoemaker was blown out through the door almost to the middle of the street.

A passer-by rushed to his assistance and after helping him to rise, inquired if he was injured.

The little German gazed in at his place of business, which was now burning quite briskly, and said:

"No, I ain't hurt. But I got out shust in time, eh?"

Far better the naked truth than an overdressed lie.

MOROCCO'S SLAVE MARKET

VIVID DESCRIPTION OF LIFE AT MARAKESH.

Auctions Opened With "A Word of Prayer"—French Will Stop Traffic.

S. L. Benensan writing to the ondon Daily Mirror, regarding the slave trade in Morocco, says:—

As soon as the tricolor is hoisted permanently over Marakesh, the southern capital of the Moorish Empire, the French will put an end to the operations of the slave market, which is to-day the largest in Africa.

It has been fed for centuries by the caravan traffic that came from Timbuctoo and the banks of the Niger across the Sahara desert. These caravans used to leave Marakesh and go for a considerable journey through the Sahara to a place where there are great salt deposits. There the camels used to be loaded with salt, and the journey would be resumed across the desert to Timbuctoo and the lesser towns along the Niger, where there is an enormous demand for salt. It was paid for in gold dust, ostrich feathers, and slaves, and these unfortunate human beings, many of them of tender years, were carried back on camels across the Sahara under conditions that frequently resulted in the death of 30 or 40 per cent.

DRESSED FOR AUCTION.

Since the French occupied Timbuctoo the value of the slave traffic has dwindled very considerably, but to this day a few caravans manage to struggle through. In the great southern capital there are many Kaids who own a great number of slaves and sell those they do not want; and I heard when I was in Marakesh some years ago that one or two men ran institutions on the lines of stud farms and used to rear child slaves for the market.

The business is in the hands of a group of auctioneers called dilals. They receive the slaves either from their owners or from the masters of the caravans, in which case they are given two or three days' rest and some special feeding, and before the sales they are dressed in bright and attractive garments, generally of calico, which are only worn during the sale, and must be returned to the auctioneers by the purchasers.

When I was in Marakesh about ten or twelve of these men were engaged in the sale of slaves, and each had his own enclosure in which the slaves he proposed to sell were herded. The markets are held two or three times a week.

OFFER UP A PRAYER.

Before the sale the auctioneers ranged themselves in line, and on behalf of all of them the senior auctioneer offered up a prayer aloud. He called upon the patron saint of the city to bless those who bought and those who sold the slaves, and his utterances, which did not err on the side of brevity, were met with a frequent response, not only from his brother auctioneers but from the assembled buyers. As soon as the prayer was over each auctioneer hurried to his pen, sorted out his slaves, and led them slowly round the market while the intending buyers scanned the slaves as they passed and listened to the extravagant praise each auctioneer gave to the members of his company.

ALL BLACKS.

The slaves, without exception black, were of all ages and physique, from old men and women who could command only a few dollars, down to little children, who were sometimes offered with their mothers, but could be separated if necessary. This separation led from time to time to scenes too painful for description here.

When a purchaser had selected the slave likely to suit his requirements there would be some examination, consisting generally of feeling the muscles and examining the teeth, for the Moors attach great importance to the condition of a slave's teeth, and one whose mouth is in a bad plight can find no purchaser save at a very low figure.

FRIGHTENED CHILDREN.

The middle-aged and the young would probably be purchased for work in the fields, while the young girls were bought for the harem, and the boys were often bought to be companions to the sons of the buyer, it being the custom in Morrocco to give a lad a slave-companion about his own age who grows up with him and becomes his confidential servant, often reaching a position of importance in the household.

When a buyer had selected his slave he would make an offer for him, and the dilal would then resume his tramp round the market-place, leading the slave or slaves selected and naming the price that had been offered. If after two or three promenades nobody bettered this price the sale would be concluded.

HIGHEST BID $300.

The behavior of the slaves varied very considerably. The old people for the most part were not going into slavery for the first time, and were consequently indifferent. Some of the younger ones were obviously keenly interested, doubtless wondering whether fate would send them a good or a bad master. The children were clearly frightened, some of them clinging passionately to their mothers and needing force before they could be separated, while a few who were suspected of having an untractable disposition were led through the market with their arms tied behind their backs. Sometimes two unruly slaves are tied together.

The strong men and the attractive women and girls are always sold first, and the prices in some cases rise to hundreds of dollars, though I never saw more than the equivalent of £60 in English money paid for anybody, and this was exceptional.

INVENTOR OF GOOD ROADS.

John Loudon McAdam, Who Gave His Name to a System.

John Loudon McAdam, the road builder, an article which appears in the current issue of Good Roads, is one of considerable interest to the lay reader, as well as to the man whose business is the building of roads.

The article was written by Maurice O. Eldridge, Assoc. M. Am. Soc. C. E., assistant in charge of road management investigations in the United States office of public roads.

John Loudon McAdam was born at Ayr, Scotland, on September 21, 1756. He was the son of James McAdam, a descendant of Adam McGregor, the first baron of Waterhead and one of the Highland clan of McGregor. When James II. of Scotland outlawed the McGregors, Adam settled in the lowlands and changed his name to McAdam. John Loudon McAdam's mother was Susana Cochrane, daughter of John Cochrane of Waterhead, a relative of the Earl of Dundonald.

When John was fourteen years old his father died and he was intrusted to the care of his uncle, William McAdam, a merchant living in New York. He received his business training with his uncle and accumulated a considerable fortune during the revolutionary war as an agent for the sale of prizes. When the war was over, McAdam had lost most of his property, but had enough left to enable him to return to Scotland in 1783, and purchase Sambrie, an estate in Ayrshire, where he lived for thirteen years.

He was married twice, his first wife being the daughter of an American by descent, named DeLancey. He had seven children, four sons and three daughters, all by his first wife.

In Ayrshire, McAdam was magistrate deputy lieutenant of the county and road trustee. At that time the roads throughout Great Britain, especially in Scotland, were very bad, and McAdam interested himself in investigating conditions and conducting experiments in road building.

As a result of his investigations and experiments, he arrived at the conclusion that roads should be constructed of small broken stone. He contended that the earth foundation should be raised slightly above the adjacent land and that suitable ditches should be built at the sides to provide drainage; that the earth foundation should be covered by a series of thin layers of hard stone broken into small angular fragments of a nearly cubical shape, and so nearly as possible of the same size. A piece to weigh over six ounces. The layers of broken stone were to be consolidated gradually by the traffic and would ultimately form a smooth hard crust impervious to water and durable in proportion to the hardness of the stone and the density of traffic. He laid down this principle: That the natural soil really supports the traffic, and that while it is preserved in a dry state it will sustain any weight without sinking. The two essential requisites, therefore, were drainage and a waterproof covering.

A very complex subject is treated with suck perfect assurance by the correspondent of an eastern paper that it seems desirable to pass his positive and irrevocable judgment along. He is appalled at the number of married women who work away from home, and he says: "Find me the woman whose name is best known in the world of music or letters, and conceding that she is also a good wife and mother, which is rarely the case, and in the background you will find a nonenity of a husband who on his own resources could not draw $100 a month in any capacity whatever. If he could, his wife would not work, for, in spite of all they say to the contrary, no woman works because she wants to, but because she must."

Warming to the subject, the indignant writer goes on to say that the man who lets his wife become a wage-earner proves that he was guilty of a crime in taking upon himself duties that he could not perform, and he adds: "The sooner people refuse to employ in any capacity whatever the woman who acknowledges the protection of a husband, the fever divorces and unhappy homes will be found, and the male parasite will have to go abroad to flourish where woman is regarded as a beast of burden."

Is there anything to be said against such an uncompromising person? Would he admit of any exceptions whatever? Would he give a short term permit if the husband was suffering from some disability? He is so sweeping in his assertions that he knocks all possible opposition over, and yet it certainly happens sometimes that when women have tasted the joys of an independent income they are very loath to give it up.

They may not work because they want to, but the income looks good to them, and they are not able to resign it without a pang. Possibly that is why so many of them keep on working, and it is conceivable that there are cases in which the male parasite has done nothing to deserve the withering scorn that is poured upon him.

In England the development of the motor omnibus has reached the stage where it is interfering with the earnings of street railways. A decline in the earnings of 113 tramway lines of more than $500,000 in the last six months is ascribed to the competition of the new vehicles, the falling off being especially notable in London, where the motor omnibus has come much into use.

The chief engineer of the Metropolitan Electric Tramways Company has made public an estimate showing that the motor omnibus can be operated at less cost per mile than the electric tram-car, while as regards investment of capital it has a large advantage. For a five-minute service he shows an investment of $105,000 per mile when electric cars are used and only $20,00 per mile when motor omnibuses are used.

A committee of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce has advised the city council to consider "the probable prospective obsolescence of the present system of overhead tramways" and "the satisfactory alternative to be obtained by a motor-omnibus service." The motor omnibus, of course, requires no expensive investment in tracks, and it can operate much more flexibly in crowded streets. Perhaps the day is soon coming when it will supplant the trolley car for new lines in cities, though expensive existing plants for electric operation probably will not soon be discarded.

Katharine's Interest.

Katharine is two and a half years old. Her father came home one afternoon, after working three days and three nights at high pressure, with almost no sleep. He lay down with the feeling that he did not want to wake up for a week. Half an hour later, from the depths of his dreams, he heard a small, clear voice, "Father!"

The sleeper stirred, and turned his head on the pillow.

"Father! father!"

He stirred again, and moaned.

"Father! father!"

He struggled and resisted and floundered, and finally raised his eyelids like a man lifting heavy weights. He saw Katharine smiling divinely beside his couch.

"Father! father!"

"What is it, daughter?"

"Father, are you having a nice nap?"

PINEAPPLE RECIPES.

The pineapple is one of the most wholesome foods that comes to our tables. Its rich and abundant juices are very cooling to the blood and contain a remarkably active digestive principle similar to pepsin, but, unlike the latter, this principle will operate in either an acid, neutral or alkaline medium, according to the kind of proteid to which it is presented.

Whether the pulp or the juice of a fresh pineapple is to be used, it should be thoroughly scalded before combining it with any such albuminoid substance as milk, eggs or gelatine.

Pineapple is best eaten at the end of breakfast or as an accompaniment or follower of the meat course at dinner, when it assists in the digestion of the food.

Pineapples are blessings in the sickroom. The juice allays thirst and is nourishing, acting upon the liver and kidneys beneficially.

The pineapple is a fruit that grows in popularity with use, and its flavor is so agreeable that very few people have to acquire a taste for it.

Canned pineapple is only now beginning to be appreciated. It is easy to buy, and certain reliable brands are excellent. It usually comes in three forms — sliced, crushed and grated.

While canned pineapple may be used when the fresh fruit cannot be obtained, it is only an inferior substitute. No matter how dainty a pineapple is served, it is not quite equal in flavor to the dead-ripe fruit just picked from the plant.

Pineapple Punch.—Peel, remove the eyes, then chop finely one ripe pineapple, pour over it one pint of boiling water and allow to stand until cold; strain and press it to extract as much liquid as possible. Add half a pint of cherry or raspberry juice, the juice of two lemons and a syrup made by boiling one pound of sugar with a pint and a half of water; before serving add one bottle of apollinaris.

Pineapple Sherbet.—Peel and remove the eyes from a large pineapple, then chop very fine, add one pound of sugar and mix well together; add two pints of water, the juice of two lemons, and one orange and leave in a cool place for two hours; strain and freeze to a "mush" or batter. Stir in a meringue made by whipping the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth, gradually adding three tablespoonfuls of sugar. Finish the freezing, then repack, and allow to stand for two hours till firm.

Pineapple Pie.—Ope grated pineapple, its weight in sugar, half its weight in butter, half a pint of cream, five eggs. Beat the butter to a cream, add the sugar and yolks of the eggs, continue beating until very light; add the cream, pineapple grated, and the whites of the eggs beaten stiffly. Bake with an under crust; serve cold.

Pineapple Nectar.—Pare and remove the eyes from a fine, ripe pineapple and grate on a coarse grater; add to each pint of pulp half a pint of water. Press through a sieve and add to every quart one pound of sugar boiled to a syrup with half a pint of water. Leave it till cold, then add the whipped white of one egg, beat thoroughly for a few minutes and place on ice until time to serve.

Pineapple Icing.—Mix together half a pint of grated pineapple (using juice and pulp) and half a pint of sugar; if only the canned article is available decrease the amount of sugar by one-third. Add half a teaspoonful of lemon juice and boil slowly, but steadily, until the syrup will spin a thread when dropped from the prongs of a fork. Have ready the whites of two eggs whipped to a froth; over them pour the syrup in a fine stream, beating steadily. When mixed stand the saucepans on the side of the fire for a few moments, beating hard. When the egg seems to be cooked transfer to a pan of cold water and beat slowly until the icing is thick enough to spread.

Pineapple Salad.—To two breakfast cupfuls of shredded pineapple add one breakfast cupful of diced celery and two-thirds of a breakfast cupful of nut kernels. Serve on crisp leaves of head lettuce with a fruit salad dressing or a boiled salad dressing, to which has been added a little sugar and some whipped cream.

Pineapple Glace.—Peel and slice the fruit and pat it dry between the folds of a towel. Boil together without stirring one pound of sugar and half a cupful of water. When a little dropped into cold water is brittle, remove the saucepan from the range, stand it in an outer pan of boiling water and stir in three tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Take each slice of pineapple up quickly with sugar tongs, dip it into the scalding syrup and lay on waxed greased paper to dry. This drying process would be best done where the air is dry and warm.

Pineapple Marmalade.—Peel and grate as many pineapples as are desired, using a silver fork or knife in the operation. Measure or weigh, and allow one pound of sugar to each pound of fruit; mix well and stand in a cool place over night. In the morning cook for half an hour or until soft enough to put through a sieve. Then strain, return to the preserving kettle and continue cooking, stirring almost constantly for half an hour or longer until a clear amber jelly is formed that will thicken into a paste as it cools. Put into small jars, and seal when cool.

Home Hints.

For flatulency there is no better remedy than a teaspoonful of glycerine after each meal.

Where fruits leave a stain on the teeth it should be removed at once by rubbing on a little salt.

Washing the baby's eyes with warm water in which has been dissolved a little borax is cleansing and good for weak eyes.

When the sick room is being ventilated a screen should be passed in front of the window to prevent the danger of a draught.

Flowers will keep very fresh overnight if they are excluded from the air. Wet them thoroughly, put them in a damp box and cover with wet raw cotton or wet newspaper, then place them in a cool place.

Never burn your old shoes in the furnace; they fill the air with an unpleasant odor. Keep them to throw at your neighbors' cats.

The nutritive value of milk as compared with buttermilk is not near so great as some appear to think. It is about as 20 to 18.

Never stay in a warm bath more than twenty minutes, and bathe the neck and face first, to prevent an unpleasant rush of blood to the head.

Sometimes, in small houses, the family is a little cramped for space to store away the numerous small articles which, although not in frequent use, must be at hand when needed. The following means an endless saving of time and patience. Get a number of cardboard boxes and pack your things away in them. Then number the boxes with large figures and enter a complete list of the contents of each in a book. The boxes can then be stored away, and you will always be able to locate any particular thing you want out.

Hints on Sleep.

Nature's sweet restorer—sleep—is not a thing to be governed by any set of formal rules. The amount of sleep required, for instance, depends on the individual's age, constitution and occupation. "Six hours' sleep for a man, seven for a woman, and eight for a fool," said the third George. But, as a matter of fact, those whose brains are in exercise, whose nervous systems are delicate and excitable, need as much sleep as they can possibly get. Every woman must discover for herself whether or not a late supper suits her, for what suits some may be decidedly harmful to others. Mental work up to the very last moment before going to bed is not good. It may banish sleep, or at least disturb it. Before retiring a short interval may be advantageously spent in reading a soothing and cheering book which demands no intellectual strain.

THE USELESSNESS OF WORRY

The Harm it Works, the Lives it Shortens, the Suicides it Causes, Cannot be Estimated.

St. Matthew vi., 34:—Take no thought for the morrow.

These words are, of course, not meant to encourage indifference, imprudence, shiftlessness and sloth, nor are they meant to forbid a right use of man's God given powers of judgment, prudence and foresight. The Greek word, here translated "Take no thought," might in this context better be rendered, as the revisers have it, "Be not anxious." This is in line with sound reason and with our Lord's whole attitude toward mankind, whom he always endeavored to arouse to the point of taking some serious thought about themselves, their duties, their problems, their destiny. But, lest they should overdo His counsel along this line and lest they should, so to speak, allow their thought to run to seed and take the form of anxious care about the future, He throws in this caution, "Be not anxious concerning the morrow."

Never was there a people and never an age that seemed so much in need of the practice of this precept as we of this twentieth century.

But how is it to be abolished?

First, by bringing a common sense philosophy to bear and realizing to the full extent of our being its utter uselessness, to say nothing of its harmfulness. Make a rule never to worry about what you can't help, for it will do no good, and never to worry about what you can help, but instead to pitch in and do something.

But our Lord's cure for worry goes deeper than this. He bids us overcome it by practising the opposite virtue—faith. Have faith enough in God. He says, to believe that He who has given you life will provide also the necessaries — though not always the luxuries — to sustain it. And have faith enough in man to believe him worthy to be an object of God's fatherly care and solicitude. In other words, Christ bids us believe not only in the general providence of God, but in His INDIVIDUAL PROVIDENCE.

We need to assure ourselves not only that He cares for all mankind, but that He cares for us as individuals. The very hairs of our heads are numbered. He knows us all by our names. He cares for me. If we can let that truth sink into our souls worry will never assail us.

Practice what some one has suggestively called the "sunset limit." Close up the books each night and do not carry over the troubles of the day past nor enter those of the day to come. If we could only acquire this habit of living by the day, how much happier we all should be! —Rev. George Ashton Oldham.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, NOVEMBER 3.

Lesson V.—The sign and the leaven, Mark 8. 11-26. Golden Text, John 8. 12.

Verse 11. The Pharisees — Matthew adds the Sadducees, who thus far have not appeared as parties in any meeting with Jesus.

Came forth—Perhaps from their homes in the neighborhood of Dalmanutha (v. 10), or from the cities at a greater distance.

Began to question with him — Seeking to entangle him in his speech.

A sign—Some extraordinary manifestation beyond his usual words and works.

12. Sighed—Or, groaned. Jesus was grieved by the obstinacy of the Pharisees, which he knew would shortly lead to open hostility and final separation.

This generation—The Pharisees were typical representatives of the religious leadership of their time.

13. To the other side—The location of Dalmanutha being unknown, it is impossible to determine whether the eastern or the western shore is here meant. Jesus may have crossed the north or northwest part of the lake in either direction, proceeding from the place of landing gradually toward Bethsaida, where, according to verse 22, he arrived shortly afterward.

14. Forgot to take bread—The duty of securing the provisions needed for the journey would devolve naturally upon Judas, who was the treasurer of the apostolic company. It is quite likely, however, that some one or two of the other disciples shared this responsibility with him.

15. Beware of the leaven — Jesus is speaking in figurative language, referring to the contaminating evil influence of the Pharisees and the courtiers and followers of Herod. The repetition of the word "leaven" indicates perhaps distinct kinds of corrupting influences emanating respectively from the teaching of the Pharisees and the court practices of the king.

16. Reasoned one with another—Debated what the significance of the Master's words might be.

17. Do ye not yet perceive, neither understand?—It was a source of disappointment to Jesus, after all his teaching, that they failed to recognize the truth which his figurative language was intended to convey. In Matthew (16. 8) it is the defect of their faith that is emphasized.

19. Baskets full—The word basket in verses 19 and 20 represents different Greek words. In this verse a small wicker or individual traveling basket is meant; in verse 20 a larger basket or hamper. The distinction is one of several which Mark is careful to make in comparing the incident of the feeding of the four thousand, retaining in each reference the precise details used in the original narrative.

21. Do ye not yet understand?—Their sense of preception is so obtuse that even this reference to the familiar experience of the marvelous power of Jesus to provide food in any emergency does not suggest to them the real meaning of his words. Matthew proceeds to explain that finally they did discover that in speaking to them of the leaven he had the corrupt teaching of the Jewish sects in mind, and not the mere matter of bread (Matt. 16. 11, 12).

22. Bethsaida—Probably Bethsaida Julias, on the northeastern shore, is meant, though it may have been the Bethsaida on the west side of the lake. The former city would be a little nearer to the villages of Caesarea Philippi, visited immediately afterward. Compare verse 27.

A blind man—The blazing sun and shifting sand of Palestine and the near Orient, together with a lack of knowledge of the ordinary rules of sanitary living, account for the very large number of blind people found there even to-day.

23. By the hand—Leading him thus.

Spit on his eyes—As in the case of the deaf mute, the one other instance in which Jesus applies the moisture of his mouth in this way. It has been suggested that Jesus in this and similar instances united his own miraculous power with means already in use among men, thus directing the thought and faith of the beneficiary from the lower to the higher means.

Seest thou aught?—Seest thou anything at all?

I see men . . . as trees, walking—He could discern moving objects which he knew to be men, though he could not distinguish them from the stationary objects which he judged to be trees.

25. Looked steadfastly — Fixed his gaze intent on discerning accurately. His sight was restored gradually.

26. Do not even enter into the village—Jesus desired to avoid the notoriety which the working of the miracle would naturally cause among the villagers.

DOCK CHILDREN OF LONDON

THEY ARE SLOWLY STARVING TO DEATH.

Many Homes Are Closed and Families Are Moving to Poorhouses.

"All is quiet in the East End." True, the streets are full of people, standing or strolling for the most part in silence. Even the groups of eagerly anxious women who gathered on Sunday and Monday at the places where bread and milk were being distributed, the barefooted ragged children assembling at the feeding centres, speak only now and again, and then in low voices and few words, says the London Daily News. (Some of the children's voices, indeed, have grown so weak that one must stoop to hear them). Such quiet is awe-inspiring: it is the stillness of a folk made dumb by suffering, and awaiting in a sort of helpless hush further impending catastrophe.

In Rotherhithe and Bermondsey, in Bow, Poplar, and West Ham, the scene repeats itself—the pavement full of silent men, the women, in their stripped homes, accepting the situation without remark beyond an occasional "It's cruel hard on the children."

There are so many children to feel the hardship! Dockers marry young, and have large families. In house after house one finds a woman surrounded by six, eight, nine children. It is while there are several children under school age that the situation is most desperate; the destitute school child at least gets one meal a day five days a week. I asked one small boy whose face of wistful pain will be a haunting memory—he might have sat for a model of one of Count Urgolino's sons in the Hunger Tower—how many younger than himself there were at home, and he answered "Three," showing me with his hand how they stood like little steps one below another.

BORN TO TROUBLE.

Like most of the boys under a certain age, he was shoeless and stockingless. This is a common enough sight in the East End; when times are bad a boy runs barefoot without exciting much comment. But it is otherwise with the girls in ordinary seasons. Now they, too, are without shoes, and many of the smaller ones have scarcely clothes to cover them. As for the babies new come into this grim world, they would be in a hopeless plight indeed if it were not for the charitable hands that have sent garments to clothe them. From a single centre on Saturday morning there were sent out fourteen "maternity" parcels to homes where there was not so much as a sheet to cover the bed where the mother was lying, nor a gown in which to wrap her new-born infant. I shall never forget the look in the eyes of a young fellow of about three-and-twenty, waiting to know if some such aid could be sent to his wife, who had just given birth to her first child. No provision had been made for the confinement; none could be, seeing that this was one of 2,000 households in a single district of Poplar which for a fortnight past have subsisted on 4s. worth of food tickets a week.

I have spoken of the houses as "stripped." This is literally the case in many quarters of Dockland; but in some, inhabited by a more refined class, the families of the "permanent" men, a tremendous effort has been made to avoid "breaking up the home," and there faces look even more wan and pinched than among the rougher sort, who have sacrificed all other kinds of well-being to the satisfaction of hunger. Payment of rent and shop bills has stopped—stopped so completely that it will not be much longer possible for the smaller landlords and provision dealers to maintain a waiting policy. Many of them are themselves at the end of their credit, and on the verge of ruin. Evictions have begun, and the pitiful sight may be seen of the last few poor "sticks" on the pavement, and of a group of families, three or four at a time, moving miserably to the workhouse.

WHAT "NEUTRALITY" MEANS.

Things are bad enough already. But they are going to be much worse in a few days' time, when the schools close—unless, indeed, the London County, before these lines are in print, rescinds its refusal to continue feeding the necessitous school-children during the holidays. The Council—or that portion of it which, by a narrow majority, rejected the appeal of the Progressives for the continuance of this feeding—might take courage and example from the neighboring council of West Ham, which has not only resolved to continue the school meals, but for weeks past has given breakfast as well as dinner to destitute scholars. On purely economic grounds there is argument enough for the humane course. It is a costly saving that is effected at the expense of constitutions undermined and brains dulled by semi-starvation, of overflowing hospitals and Poor Law schools. But if men and women who argue in favor of inaction in this matter—and in the matter of the strike as a whole—would go and see for themselves what "neutrality" is entailing on a population equal to that of a great city, and above all on the most helpless portion of it—the women and children—the economic argument would not be needed. Common humanity would speak too loud to be gainsaid.

Signs of Matrimony.

"Are those two in front of us husband and wife?"

"I don't think so."

"What makes you think they are not?"

"Because when they met he raised his hat to her and then took her bundles to carry for her."

LEARNING SOMETHING.

The Visitor—"Have you any of that delicious porkpie we had from you last time?"

The Old Lady—"No, sir, I 'aven't; you see the little pigs have been so 'ealthy this year that we haven't 'ad to kill none—and none of 'em's died!"—English paper.

Exeter Advocate,

Sanders & Creech, Props.

THURSDAY OCT. 31, '12

The summoning of Parliament for November 21st mean that before many weeks the country will know all that there is to know on the subject of the Borden Government's naval policy. The announcement of the date sufficiently answers Liberal predictions that the Government would seek and find some pretext for delaying the opening until the new year. Predictions of that sort have been freely circulated in opposition newspapers for some weeks, the wish being probably father to the thought. They have been circulated despite the definite declaration of the Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden in Montreal on September 21st, that Parliament would meet in the autumn. The statement of the Prime Minister should have settled, and with most people undoubtedly did settle, the question as to the readiness of the Government to meet the House. As a matter of fact there is every indication that the opening of the second session of the twelfth Parliament will find the Government's sessional agenda in an advanced stage of preparation so that no time will be lost in getting important legislation before Parliament. This means that there is to be a working session from the start, making possible a comparatively early prorogation consistent with the importance of the measures to be considered. The naval policy will of course be the principal matter for the consideration of the House. Recent developements substantiate the belief that the policy will be one worthy of the people of Canada, involving as one of its main features immediate and effective aid to the mother country, such aid to be given in a manner calculated to amply safe-guard the status of Canada as a self-governing dominion within the Empire.

The resignation of Hon. F. D. Monk as Minister of Public Works has come about under circumstances which are creditable to the Government and at the same time creditable to Mr. Monk. These circumstances involved, on the part of the Government a determination to do its duty as a Government, on the part of Mr. Monk a determination to observe a promise made by him as an individual member prior to the formation of the present Government. Mr. Monk's retirement was affected without bitterness on either side but on the contrary, with the most friendly personal feelings and with no diminuation of that mutual good will existing prior to Mr. Monk's decision to resign. Mr. Monk considered himself personally pledged to a reference of any naval policy to the people. When the Government as a whole reached the conclusion, following the visit of the Prime Minister and some of his colleagues to England, that the situation in Great Britain called for immediate aid, Mr. Monk found himself unable to agree to a measure of aid without the question being first referred to the people. At the same time he recognized the naval situation to be grave and critical. As an honorable man Mr. Monk was bound to observe his pledge, and his course must have been followed by any other minister similarly situated. The other members of the Government said made no pledge to refer the question of immediate aid to the people. They could not see eye to eye with Mr. Monk, while thoroughly appreciating his position. Under these circumstances Mr Monk took the only course open to him. To ignore his previous attitude was, of course, out of the question. He goes out of the Government in obedience to a sense of duty, and this has entitled him to the respect alike of political friends and opponent. At the same time the circumstances of his withdrawal have crystallized the belief that the Government intends to propose, for immediate action by Parliament, a strong measure of effective aid to Great Britian in a grave and critical moment.

Following the resignation of Hon. Mr. Monk, the new minister of Public Works is Hon. Robt. Rogers, the minister of the interior is Hon. W. J. Roche, and the secretary of state is Louis Coderre, K. C., of Montreal, who is the new man in the cabinet.

Thanksgiving Day passed off quietly in town. Moses Feist, Garnet Sweitzer and Miss Lilian Fahner were in Detroit, Mrs. August Ewald, Miss Snider and Miss Watson in London, Mr. W. H. Paget in St. Catharines, Mr. Oakley in Barrie and Mr. Glenn in Hensall.

The local option petition, with the required number of signatures has been handed in to the Township Clerk. The vote will take place next January, at the municipal elections.

Messrs A. Hill & Co. of Mitchell have a gang of men at work putting up the iron bridge across the Sauble river, a mile and a quarter south of town. It is expected the work will be completed some time this week.

H. Eilber, M. P. P., and Paul Shenk left on Monday evening for McConkey, Parry Sound Dist., for their annual deer hunt. We wish them success.

Mrs. Dan. Sweitzer has sold her piano to Miss Dora Link. She intends returning to Algonquin Park in a few days and spend the winter there.

Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Baker and daughter of London visited Dr. and Mrs. Orme on Monday.

We are pleased to see Fred Young on the street again. His many friends hope he will soon regain his health.

The raising of Frank Sims' new bank barn took place last Saturday. A good crowd was in attendance and everything passed off fine. The barn will have a slate roof and when completed will be modern in every respect.

Last Friday Mathew Finkbeiner had his auction sale and on Tuesday, Geo. Fahner had his. Both sales were well attended and the different chattels brought good figures. Mr. Finkbeiner intends to move to town in a few weeks and take a well-earned rest.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Roedding and family o London visited Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Trewethick during the holidays.

On Sunday evening a special Thanksgiving song service took place in the Evangelical Church. Solos were sung by Miss Clara Wand, Miss Ella Link and Rev. Burn. Several selections were given by the Male Chorus and the choir. A very enjoyable evening was spent by all. More services of this kind will be appreciated.

Last Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Albert Morlock, Edward Morlock and Chas. Eilber motored to Morriston, where they spent the holidays with friends.

A traveller on the London, Huron & Bruce train reports a loss of $60.00 through a pickpocket on Monday Morning.

The United States general election takes place on Tuesday next with the odds in favor of Woodrow Wilson, the democratic candidate.

AILSA CRAIG—Gerald Trickett, aged 23 yrs., a farmer who resides near Ailsa Craig, is suffering from a triple fracture of his right arm and numerous bruises sustained in a corn-cutting machine, when he was whirled about as he endeavored to slip a new belt on a revolving pulley. Before his arm was released he was lifted from his feet and hurled about the pulley twice.

PARKHILL.—The jury which under Coroner Dr. Anderson last night investigated the recent wreck at Parkhill station, in which Fireman Scott, of Goderich, was killed, brought in a verdict exonerating the train crews from any blame in the matter. The evidence showed that the orders issued made it necessary for the extra way freight to run as fast as possible in order to make the scheduled time.

USBORNE.

A native of Usborne in the person of Eleanor Carlisle, beloved wife of Robt Carlisle died of gastralgia, at her home on Albert street, Hensall, on the evening of October 18th, just one week past, the 74th anniversary of her birthday. Deceased, with her parents, came to Canada from County Down, Ireland, in her early girlhood. She was a daughter of James and Mary Carlisle, of the Thames road, Usborne. Fifty-seven years ago she was married to Mr. Robert Carlisle. They then settled on the second concession of Hay, being among the first settlers, and where they resided until four years ago, removing to their comfortable home in Hensall. The deceased leaves a husband and family of five sons and six daughters. The sons are Robert J. and Barnard J. of Indian Head, Sask., and William E., of Winnipeg; Alfred E. of Detroit, and C. Percival of Toronto. The daughters are Mrs. Andrew Buchanan of Usborne, Mrs. W. H. Thompson of Toronto, Mrs. G. A. Halliday of Indian Head, Sask., Mrs. G. A. Found of Winnipeg, and Mary and Anna at home.

WHALEN.

The anniversary services of the Methodist church proved a great success. Large congregations heard Rev. George of Lucan on Sunday and appreciated his excellent sermons. The fowl supper on Tuesday evening attracted a very large crowd, and while many of them were unable to hear the program they were all highly pleased with the fine supper provided by the ladies, who know the business to perfection. The program provided by Cortese Bros. of London, Mr. S. Coxon of Granton, Miss Rossence of St. Marys and the ministers was a delightful treat.

HARPLEY

Miss Lloyd and Miss Edith Taylor spent Thanksgiving holidays with friends at Egmondville.—Miss Maude Hodgins is visiting her sister Miss Mattie in Detroit for a couple of weeks.—Mrs. Hobbs and daughter of Lucan visited with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Sherritt a few days over Thanksgiving. — The apple packers are busy packing apples in our vicinity this week.—Miss Neva McMillan of Lamon, spent the week end with her school friend, Miss Muriel Fallis.

CLANDEBOYE

Mr. Thos. Canning of Brinsley had the misfortune while engaged operating a gasoline engine to get his hand badly crushed and cut. Dr. Orme of Lucan dressed the wounds and Mr. Canning is doing nicely.—Mr. R. S. Lang of Toronto is shipping apples at the G. T. R. depot here for Glasgow, Scotland. He will have several cars.—Mr. Albert Carter and wife of Fort Francis, are spending a few days with relatives in this vicinity.—Mr. Thos. Atkinson, of London is visiting relatives here. —Wm. Haskett of Lucan had the misfortune to be attacked by a couple of cows, while engaged helping to load a carload of cattle. Mr. Haskett was knocked down by the animals and run over. He sustained a broken collar bone.

Question—A farmer hires a boy 20 years of age for six months for $155. He works faithfully and there is no kick until the expiration of the time. The farmer says the boy was no good and frightened him by saying he would law him if he would not accept $120 and give a receipt. The boy accepted and gave receipt for summer's wages. Can the boy or his father collect the remaining $35, or is the receipt lawful? Answer—The receipt is not conducive. The boy can, on proof of the facts stated by evidence, collect the balance of his wages.

LUMSBY

Miss Mary McQueen of London spent the holidays with her parents here.—Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Horton returned Tuesday evening from a pleasant visit with relatives in London and Aylmer.—Mr and Mrs. Herbert Goodfellow of Toronto spent Thanksgiving under the parental roof.—Mr. Priest of Hensall is busy these days cleaning up the lots at the cemetery. Those wishing to have their burial lots fixed up would do well to speak to him about it or to the trustees. He does the work for one dollar for the firstyear and after that fifty cents a year.—The remains of the late Annie Slavin of London, whose sad death occurred in the Tecumseh House, were interred in the cemetery here on Monday. Much sympathy is felt for the sister Maggie.—Master Harold Glen of Crediton spent the holiday with his parents here.

GREENWAY.

Mrs. Florence McPherson and daughter Beatrice of Buffalo were holiday visitors with Mr. and Mrs. H. McPherson.—Miss Vina Sherritt of Hartley and Miss Bunce Duer of Mossy visited Mrs. W. T. Usher last week.—Miss Stevens visited her home in Arva over the holiday.—Mrs. Stewardson and Alma were guests of Mrs. Cobbledick of Exeter last week.—Mr. Selbourne English, who is attending Business College in London, was home for the week end.—Mr. and Mrs. C. Laughton visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Wickert.—Mrs. C. H. Wilson and Hugh spent the week in Kerwood guests of Rev. and Mrs. R. L. Wilson.—Mrs. A. Pollock and Milroy spent Thanksgiving in Port Huron.—Miss Mae Wilson attended an Epworth League meeting in Exeter on Friday last.—We welcome Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hutchinson to their new home on the Town Line west.—Mr. and Mrs. J. Scatchard of London were guests of Mrs. R. English on Sunday.—Large congregations attended the services in the Methodist church on Sunday when Miss Morton gave her farewell sermons, which were full of power. We trust much lasting good will result from her work here. A reception service was held at the close of the afternoon service, when eleven united with the church.—Rev. and Mrs. Jas Foster and Lamx, and Mr. and Mrs. D. Foster and family were guests of their mother on Sunday.—On Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sherritt gave a reception in honor of their eldest daughter, Alberta, who was married last week to Mr. H. Harlton of Shipka, and on Tuesday returned from their honeymoon in Toronto. We extend congratulations.

Broken Into.—The summer cottages of several London people here were broken into recently by unknown parties. Entrance was effected by breaking off the shutters of several of the houses and then prying the windows up with a jimmy. The doors in several houses were also smashed. As far as can be learned nothing of value was taken, as most of the things had been removed when the tourists went home at the close of the summer season. Among the places entered were the houses of Messrs Harry Jones and George Heaman, of London.

TATTERSALL'S IN LONDON.

In 1776 a certain Richard Tattersall, a wool comber of Yorkshire, who had lost his fortune during the Jacobite rebellion, obtained a ninety-nine years' lease of a tract of ground in London and thereon built an establishment for the sale of horses and hounds.

Tattersall was on friendly terms with the prince regent, Lord Bolingbroke and others whose patronage greatly aided the enterprise. Such, indeed, was the friendship between the prince and Tattersall that the bust of George on top of the fountain in the sale yard was so placed at the prince's own request.

In due time a huge slice of luck came Tattersall's way. Lord Bolingbroke ran heavily into debt and by way of settlement passed on to Tattersall his famous racer, Highflier, which became the father of three Derby winners. The progeny of this horse in eighteen years are said to have won races to the value of no less than £170,000. Tattersall built himself a palatial country residence near Ely, calling it Highflier Hall.

Tattersall's came to be the headquarters for the laying of turf wagers. Immense sums were won and lost there. The Marquis of Hastings lost more than £100,000 on one race alone, and, it is said, not infrequently similar amounts changed hands on "settling days" at "Old Tatt's," or "the Corner," as the place was sometimes called.

All classes of society mingled at Tattersall's. Dukes and stable boys were brothers in the excited crowd, prepared to wager on anything and everything. This state of things led to such a scandal that upon the expiration of the lease the firm was refused a renewal. In its new establishment no betting was permitted.

At the modern Tattersall's some enormous prices for racers are occasionally obtained. Flying Fox is said to have been sold to a French owner for 37,500 guineas and Ormonde to an American for 30,000 guineas. Here also Scepter as a yearling was sold for 10,000 guineas, La Fleche for 12,600 guineas and Blair Athol for only 100 guineas less.—Harper's Weekly.

Some Quaint Hotels.

The hotel that stands out the most prominently in my recollection is one in Iquique, where, even while you are sitting at the dining tables, venders come in from the streets to sell you food. At this same hotel they have two charges for baths—8 shillings if you insist upon clean water and about 4 shillings if you are willing to take a second turn at the tub.

Another instance of a quaint hotel is in the town of Africa, in Peru. Here they are using at the present time the hull of an old American man-of-war, which was taken inland by a great tidal wave many years ago and has since been fitted up as a hotel and is in great demand.—London Answers.

Everlasting Yeast.

A yeast that is always ready, in hot weather or cold, in town or on the farm, may be had if at each baking is saved a small quantity of the bread sponge before any salt has been used. To this must be added about one-half the same amount of sugar for a preservative. I have used the same yeast in this way for two and one-half years now, and it is as good as ever. Freezing does it no harm. No salt should be used. If in warm weather it seems to be without life, try it with a little flour and water, and it will be all right. This makes the finest possible bread.—National Magazine.

A Problem He Hadn't Solved.

In 1865 there went to Paris a young Belgian named De Groof, who was fully convinced that he had solved the problem of aerial flight. He did not succeed in interesting French experts, but later in England met with some encouragement. Finally, in the presence of a large crowd De Groof made his attempt. His machine was attached to a balloon, and after reaching a height of 4,000 feet he cut himself loose. The machine fell like a stone and crashed down upon the rough pavement of Robert street, Chelsea, with a sickening thud. De Groof was dead.—New York Tribune.

The Way They Struck.

A company of Italian laborers engaged in the construction of a railway in Germany had their wages reduced. They said nothing, but during the night each of the men cut an inch of the end of his shovel. In reply to the foreman who took them to task about it one of them said, "Not so much pay, not lift so much earth. So much longer last work. Italian not fool like German. Italians not strike!"—London Mail.

Another Way to Put It.

"After all," said the moralist, "the almighty dollar is man's greatest enemy. It"—

"If that's so," interrupted old Roxley, "I guess that young wife of mine merely loves me for the enemies I've made."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Discrimination.

"Did you ever tell that young man that late hours were bad for one?" asked the father at the breakfast table.

"Well, father," replied the wise daughter, "late hours may be bad for one, but they're all right for two."—Yonkers Statesman.

Blot out vain pomp, check impulse, keep reason under its own control.—Marcus Aurelius.

ST. MARYS—Mrs. Martin, of St. Marys, who drank some liniment on Monday in Toronto died Thursday in the Western Hospital, never having recovered consciousness. Her body was removed to the morgue and an inquest was held. She was 45 years of age but nothing is known of her relatives.

KIPPEN—Mr. James Miller, of the village, who is eighty-seven years of age, has just finished digging and preparing his garden for another season. Mr. Miller, after completing this work, took his first walk of the summer to our post office.

MCGILLIVRAY—Geo. G. Gilbert, of Outlook, Sask., died recently, aged 70 years, from an attack of fever. There appears to have been an epidemic of fever in the residence, no less than eight being ill in the house, three daughters and five of their children. Mr. Gilbert was a former resident of McGillivray, having lived for several years on the town line, east of Parkhill. He is survived by his widow, one son and three daughter also four brothers.

FREE TO YOU—MY SISTER

FREE TO YOU AND EVERY SISTER SUFFERING FROM WOMEN'S AILMENTS.

I am a woman.
I know woman's sufferings.
I have found the cure.

I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from women's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure — you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhoea or Whitish discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths, also pains in the head; back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete 10 days' treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial; and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer, if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhoea, Green Sickness and Painful or Irregular Menstruation in Young Ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all woman's diseases and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten days' treatment is yours, also the book. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address:

Nature's Way Is The Best.

Buried deep in our American forest we find bloodroot, queen's root, mandrake and stone root, golden seal, Oregon grape root and cherrybark. Of these Dr. R. V. Pierce made a pure glyceric extract which has been favorably known for over forty years. He called it "Golden Medical Discovery."

This "Discovery" purifies the blood and tones up the stomach and the entire system in Nature' own way. It's just the tissue builder and tonic you require when recovering from a hard cold, grip, or pneumonia. No matter how strong the constitution the stomach is apt to be "out of kilter" at times; in consequence the blood is disordered, for the stomach is the laboratory for the constant manufacture of blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach—puts it in shape to make pure, rich blood—helps the liver and kidneys to expel the poisons from the body. The weak, nervous, run-down, debilitated condition which so many people experience at this time of the year is usually the effect of poisons in the blood; it is often indicated by pimples or boils appearing on the skin, the face becomes thin—you feel "blue."

J. G. KENT, Esq.

"More than a week ago I was suffering with an awful cold in my head, throat, breast, and body," writes MR. JAMES G. KENT, of 710 L. Street, S. E., Washington, D. C. "Some called it La Grippe, some pneumonia. I was advised by a friend to try a bottle of your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I tried a bottle and it did me so much good that I feel safe in saying it is the greatest and best medicine that I ever took. My health is much better than it was before using your medicine. It does all you claim for it and is satisfactory."

NERVOUS, LIFELESS DEBILITATED MEN

YOUNG MEN AND MIDDLE-AGED MEN, the victims of early indiscretions and later excesses, who are failures in life—you are the ones we can restore to manhood and revive the spark of energy and vitality. Don't give up in despair because you have treated with other doctors, used electric belts and tried various drug store nostrums.

Our New Method Treatment has snatched hundreds from the brink of despair, has restored happiness to hundreds of homes and has made successful men of those who were "down and out." We prescribe specific remedies for each individual case according to the symptoms and complications—we have no patent medicines. This is one of the secrets of our wonderful success as our treatment cannot fail, for we prescribe remedies adapted to each individual case. Only curable cases accepted. We have done business throughout Canada for over 20 Years.

CURABLE CASES GUARANTEED OR NO PAY

READER Are you a victim? Have you lost hope? Are you intending to marry? Has your blood been diseased? Have you any weakness? Our New Method Treatment will cure you. What it has done for others it will do for you. Consultation Free. No matter who has treated you, write for an honest opinion Free of Charge. Books Free—"Boyhood, Manhood, Fatherhood." (Illustrated) on Diseases of Men.

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT. No names on boxes or envelopes. Everything Confidential. Question List and Cost of Treatment FREE FOR HOME TREATMENT.

ALLIES WIN BIG BATTLES

Utmost Bravery Displayed on Both Sides—Another Bulgarian Army Invades Turkey By Way of Black Sea

A despatch from London says: The news from the seat of war on Wednesday night tells of the continued successes of the allies. The Servians have captured Novi Bazar and are the virtual masters of Kumanova. The victories, however, have been purchased at heavy sacrifices.

The situation in Thrace is becoming clearer. A great battle is being fought over a wide semi-circular front before Adrianople, upon which town the Bulgarians are gradually closing in. On the east they have occupied Vasilika and Tirnove, and are continuing their advance southward.

On the west the Bulgarians, according to official Sofia accounts, have reached the Arda River, close to Adrianople, which is being vigorously bombarded. Already the two outer forts have fallen. Some positions to the north of Adrianople are also said to have been taken after fighting of the severest character.

It is significant that Wednesday night's Constantinople despatches have a less confident tone than previous despatches from the Capital, while they admit a heavy struggle, in which both sides are showing the utmost bravery.

Information concerning the Montenegrin progress is meagre, but the Turkish authorities claim that Scutari has been reinforced and is safe.

Rift in Balkan Concert.

A Salonika despatch asserts that the Malissori tribes are offended because the Montenegrin commanders are proclaiming the sovereignty of King Nicholas in the captured Albanian towns. They demand that King Nicholas give a guarantee that he evacuate Albanian territory and secure autonomy for Albania. So far they have received no satisfactory reply, and it is reported that they are refusing to fight further for the Montenegrins, whose advance has been thereby checked.

About 1,000 Bulgarian prisoners of war have arrived in Constantinople, according to a special despatch from the Turkish capital.

Greeks Capture Servia.

A despatch from Athens says: The Greeks have occupied the town of Servia, and have also captured the bridge over the River Aliakmon (Indje Karasa), thereby cutting off the retreat of the Turks.

Another Bulgarian Invasion.

A despatch from Sofia says: Another Bulgarian army has invaded Turkey, this time along the shores of the Black Sea. After occupying the coast town of Vasilika they captured Tirnovo, and are now advancing southward upon the important town of Visa.

The prisoners taken by the Bulgarians say the vigorous offensive movement of the invaders took the Turks by surprise. The Turks are demoralized, ill-fed and badly disciplined.

Varying Reports of Fight.

According to one report, a decisive movement against Kirk-Kilissch began Monday evening, when cavalry and infantry, under cover of a heavy artillery fire, attacked the town on two sides. The Bulgarians have completely surrounded Kirk-Kilissch, which the Turks regard as of almost equal importance with Adrianople. Its defence has been entrusted to Muktar Pasha, son of the Grand Vizier, and Hazim Pasha.

Severe fighting is also reported in the Struma Valley. The Bulgarians on Tuesday occupied important strategic points in Kresna Pass. The Turks fled, abandoning munitions and supplies.

Servian Victories.

A despatch from Belgrade says: Official announcement was made here on Thursday night that the Servians have captured Novi Bazar, Prestina, Kumanova, Kratova and Kotschana. Detachments of the Servian army entered Kumanova on Thursday afternoon after annihilating the Turkish batteries. The fighting around that town lasted three days.

The Turks Defeated.

In an engagement Tuesday at Marash, at the junction of the Miritza and Arda Rivers, close to Adrianople, the Bulgarians were attacked by 8,000 Turks. After an hour of heavy artillery and rifle fire the Turks were defeated and fled in disorder, leaving the field strewn with dead and wounded. The Bulgarians captured 300 prisoners, a dozen quick-firers and quantities of munitions. Many Turks drowned themselves in the river because they believed the Bulgarians massacred their prisoners.

Drove Greeks Back.

A despatch from Athens says: General Sapountzakis, the Greek commander, wires from Arta that throughout Wednesday fighting in the Kamatsades defile was indecisive. At night the Turks made a surprise attack with greatly superior forces and succeeded in driving back two Greek battalions occupying the defile. The engagement continued all night.

At Grimbove the Turks were driven with great loss by a counter attack from the position they had captured. The fighting continued on Tursday, during which the Turks lost seventy killed.

KILLED DURING DEER HUNT.

Farmer Slain When Companion Trips Over Stump.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Samuel Green, a farmer residing in East Templeton, was accidentally shot and killed by Arnold Frappier, also of Templeton, a companion, while on a deer hunt near Tasse Lake, Gore Township, Wright County, Quebec, on Wednesday morning. According to the story told Coroner Dr. Lyster, of Hull, by eye-witnesses of the shooting, a party of five huntsmen were encamped near Tasse Lake. Green and Frappier, accompanied by the others, left camp early Wednesday morning, the two former being some distance ahead of the others. Coming to a clearing, Green saw four deer and started to run, calling to Frappier to follow. The latter started to run, but tripped over a stump, his gun discharging as he fell. The bullet took effect in Green's back, killing him instantly.

TORONTO CORRESPONDENCE

INTERESTING GOSSIP FROM ONTARIO'S CAPITAL.

Some Characteristics of the City's New Mayor—The Duke's Popularity—Sir Thomas Lipton.

A dozen years ago Horatio C. Hocken was a reporter for a Toronto paper on the City Hall assignment. To-day he is Mayor of the town, with a salary of $7,500 a year and a position of power and influence equalled by few men in this country.

Mayor Hocken is a real journalist. He began "at the case" and became a journeyman printer in the old Globe office under George Brown, as did his predecessor in the Orange Sentinel and in the Mayor's chair, the late R. F. Clarke. It is now thirty years since he left the Globe for the News, where he became foreman, and ten years later, when a lot of the News staff went out on strike, owing to the introduction of linotype machines, Mr. Hocken helped them found the Star, of which he was the first business manager. In a few months he returned to the News, where he remained until 1902, when for a year he edited the St. Thomas Journal, after which he returned to the News for a period and then purchased the Orange Sentinel, which he has since edited.

What is the secret of his success in politics? For one thing he is an optimist. Two years ago last January he was beaten for the Mayoralty by a large majority by Mr. Geary. It had been a hard fight and Mr. Hocken's friends had been confident. Some soreness might have been forgiven, Mr. Hocken shewed none. "Oh, it will do my business good to have me out of the City Hall for a year," he said. "And, anyway, I'll be the next Mayor."

And true enough he is. As soon as Mr. Geary steps out he steps in. He will be a candidate for re-election in January, and with the odds in his favor. Tommy Church says he will run against him, but nobody knows what Tommy will do. Maybe Tommy is just getting in line to succeed Hocken when he drops out.

Typically Torontoesque.

Mr. Hocken is a clean, creditable type of public man, not particularly brilliant perhaps, but an earnest student and conscientious worker. On the platform he is a ready speaker, and in debate puts his case clearly and well. He is not the wire-pulling type of ward politician who will sell his support in return for support for some pet measure. Nevertheless, he has several times proved his popularity with the electors by heading the poll for Board of Control. And the Council unanimously chose him for the Mayor's chair. He is a strong church worker, temperance man, a Sons of England (Cornish descent), and, of course, an Orangeman. So, in many respects he is typically Torontoesque. He is inclined to be tenacious of enmities. R. J. Fleming of the street railway is a personal bete noir of long standing, and he is inclined sometimes to embrace half-baked propositions, as, for example, his early advocacy of "tubes." But on the whole he will undoubtedly prove to be a credit to the Mayor's chair.

The Duke Was Hearse.

The Duke of Connaught further popularized himself on his latest visit to Toronto, though he stopped off only long enough to have luncheon with the Canadian Club. It was not that he said anything important, but rather his democratic demeanor that pleased everyone. He intimated that he could not speak very well and excused himself accordingly, because he had a bad cold and was therefore hoarse. He said it just as would any other ordinary mortal who is called upon to make a speech, and it amused immensely the four hundred members of the Canadian Club who were present. It is the sympathy with the rest of mankind in little things that makes the Royal family of England so popular. The Duke's "cold" recalls the cheers that used to greet a scene in the cinematograph which showed his late brother, King Edward, on board ship, rise from his seat and walk a few paces past some ladies to the rail to flick his cigar ash overboard, just like any other man.

During the luncheon, Mr. J. S. Willison spoke, as always, gracefully and acceptably, dwelling specially on the growth of national spirit in Canada, but pointing out that this growth was not resulting in any weakening of the Imperial bond, but rather the reverse. The function throughout, at his Royal Highness' special request, was thoroughly democratic. The Canadian Club members attended, as usual, in their business dress, and absolute informality prevailed. As a matter of fact, however, they did go to a better restaurant and order a better luncheon than usual in honor of the occasion.

Sir Thomas Lipton and Royalty.

Sir Thomas Lipton was a guest at the luncheon to the Duke of Connaught, and his presence was quite appropriate, for the famous yachtsman, no matter how numerous are his enemies in high places, he has not, in recent years, lacked for friends among the Royal family. The late King Edward was always a strong backer of Sir Thomas, though he didn't secure his election to the Royal Yacht Squadron, the premier yachting club of the world. The King and Queen of Spain, the Empress Eugenie, the Queen of Norway and other royalties are all friends, frequently accepting his hospitality and, it is said, being sometimes associated with him in business ventures.

This friend of Kings and Queens began life at the bottom as a grocer boy, but he never hesitates to talk of his early struggles, or of his "trade." They say he is too proud to attempt to hide anything. He has long held the reputation of being the foremost advertiser in England, and no doubt he is a good one. Even the money he has sunk in yacht races has no doubt returned to him many times over in the form of free publicity. A certain type of Englishman is contemptuous of advertisers, and of trades people, a fact which explains many of the rebuffs Sir Thomas has received in English society.

His First Employe.

Sir Thomas is a typical Irishman who talks Scotch. He always has a story on tap. Here is one he told in Toronto:

"In my first little shop I was so poor I could afford only one assistant, a boy of fourteen, who was faithful, honest and willing. He complained that his clothes were so shabby he was ashamed to go to church. 'There's no chance of my getting a new suit this year,' he told me. 'Dad's out of work and it takes all my wages to pay the rent.'

"I thought the matter over and took a sovereign from my carefully hoarded savings and bought the boy a stout, warm suit. He was so grateful I felt rewarded. Next day he didn't come to work. I met his mother and asked her why.

"'Sure, Mr. Lipton,' she said, curtsying, 'Jimmy looks so respectable, thanks to you, sir, that I thought I would send him around town to see if he couldn't get a better job.'"

Remembered Reporter.

Sir Thomas demonstrated his remarkable faculty for remembering faces during his visit. One of the newspaper men who called on him had been a reporter on a New York paper nine years ago, when Sir Thomas was challenging for the America Cup. Sir Thomas remembered him immediately, and recalled how on board the Erin he had spilled a cup of tea over the reporter's knee.

Dr. Herridge as Revivalist.

Something new in special services—"revivals" they may be called in other places and by other people—is being tried by Rosedale and Westminster Presbyterian Churches situated in one of the fashionable residential districts. Conducting the services is Rev. W. T. Herridge, D.D., of Ottawa, one of the most scholarly men in the Presbyterian, or any other church, in North America. The services are, however, distinctly evangelical, and much good is expected to result therefrom.

Dr. Herridge has been minister of St. Andrews Church, Ottawa, for nearly thirty years and is one of the distinguished alumni of Toronto University, of which he was for many years a Senator. He has numbered among the members of his church Lord and Lady Aberdeen, while Lord and Lady Minto, though members of another denomination, were frequent attendants, attracted by his eloquence, thought and learning. Ten years ago he was called to Frognal, a fashionable West End London church, but declined, and other solicitations from the United States and elsewhere have not shaken his attachment to his church in Ottawa, which has been his sole charge since graduation. He is an author of repute, having written essays on Beethoven, Browning, Milton and "Woman—Her Work and Place." He has recently been placed in nomination for the position of Moderator of the General Assembly, at whose deliberations he has long wielded a strong influence. Naturally, the congregations at Westminster and at Rosedale church, which is one of the newest congregations in the city, are greatly pleased at having so distinguished a preacher to work among them.

BECKER IS FOUND GUILTY

Verdict In the Famous New York Murder Case Returned by Jury

A despatch from New York says: "Guilty of murder in the first degree," was the verdict returned three minutes before midnight on Thursday night by the jury in the case of Lieutenant Becker, charged with killing Herman Rosenthal.

The jury had been out exactly seven hours and 57 minutes. The length of its deliberation, and the frequency of its requests for exhibits, together with an unmistakable sign of hot arguments in the jury-room, had led most of those who waited late at the Criminal Courts building to believe that there would be no agreement. So that when the blow finally fell upon the defendant its force was all the more crushing. Becker's lawyers had grown more confident as the hours sped. Becker himself, chatting pleasantly with his wife, the Plitt brothers, and a former reporter, Frederick H. Hawley, who had testified in his behalf, was serenely confident that there could be no answer fro mthe jury-room save not guilty.

The convicted man bore up under the shock with the grimness and resolution that had characterized him all through the trial. When the momentous answer came to the question of the clerk of the court, "Gentlemen, have you agreed upon a verdict?" the Lieutenant turned calmly toward Harold B. Skinner, the foreman, and displayed no emotion whatever as Mr. Skinner pronounced a few short words that spelled his fate. The only sign of agitation, the only visible appearance of shock, was a grayness that spread over his dark face, the narrowing of the fierce eyes, and a contraction of the muscles of the throat. Presently when he lifted his right hand and gave oath as to the facts of his age and circumstances there was not a quiver of the big arm or a waver of a finger. He could answer the formal questions put to him only in husky tones, barely audible a few feet from where he stood at the bar of the court.

BACK FROM THE ARCTIC.

Survey Parties Which Marked Alaska Boundary Return.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The members of the Dominion Government survey parties engaged all summer between the Porcupine River and the Arctic Ocean, have all returned. It was stated that the work of determining the international boundary line was delayed for several weeks by volcanic dust from Mount Katmai. The eruption was also responsible for a five-weeks delay of survey operations engaged in at Glacier Bay.

DANISH WOMEN TO VOTE.

Will Also Be Eligible to Seats In Parliament.

A despatch from Copenhagen says: Premier Bernsten on Wednesday introduced a franchise reform bill whereby women will be allowed to vote, and will be eligible for seats in the Folkething.

WOMEN START FOOD RIOT.

Result of German Butchers Refusing to Sell Imported Meat.

A despatch from Berlin, Germany, says: Hundreds of Berlin housewives joined in a wild riot on Wednesday because the butchers in the municipal markets refused to handle meat imported so as to reduce the cost of living. The principal trouble occurred in the Wedding District, which is entirely inhabited by working people. Hundreds of women went to the municipal market there on Wednesday morning hoping to profit by the reduced prices settled on by the Municipal Council. They found, however, that the butchers had agreed not to deal in meats imported by the municipality. They then stormed the butchers' stalls, seized all the native-raised meat, trampled it on the ground, and fought with the butchers, who were trying to protect it from destruction. The police were forced to close the market to put an end to the riot.

Fierce darting pains, pains like red hot needles being driven through the legs to the ankles — that's sciatica. None but the victim can realize the torture of this trouble, and many suffer from it hopelessly in the belief that it cannot be cured. This is a mistake; sciatica is a nerve trouble, and if the starved nerves are properly nourished with rich, red blood the trouble will soon disappear. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make just the new, pure blood needed to feed the sciatica nerve and drive out the racking pain. It has been proved over and over again that they can do this and we offer now the following additional piece of evidence. Mr. E. H. Pastorious, Harrow, Ont., says: "Some years ago I was terribly afflicted with sciatica, starting just in my hip and then extending through the leg to the foot. At the time I was attacked I was away from home and had to be brought home on a mattress in a spring waggon, and the agony of the trip was almost more than I could endure. Reaching home I was not able to sit up and remained in bed for six weeks. The doctor did not help me and I tried a number of medicines recommended by neighbors. I paid $5.00 a bottle for one preparation, but it was no better than the rest, and I began to think there was no cure for me. While suffering this untold misery Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were recommended, and my wife got me a supply. In the course of a few weeks I began to feel better and could get around with the aid of a cane. I kept on taking the Pills until all the pain disappeared and I felt as well as ever I did. I have never had an attack of the trouble since, and although I am now 65 years of age I feel as vigorous as I did at 40, all of which I ascribe to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

If you are suffering from sciatica or any nerve or blood trouble, begin to cure yourself to-day by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which will assuredly do for you what they have done for others, if you give them a fair trial. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Useful Singing Lessons.

Nothing improves a child's voice as much as singing easily, quietly and sweetly. An imperfect ear can be trained by persistent effort, and even if the child's singing voice is not perfect, the benefit of its trying to vocalize pleasantly will be felt in the speaking voice. Neither children nor adults should sing higher or lower than nature intended them to. When a boy's or girl's voice is changing in pitch they should be advised not to sing. The voice should be used sparingly when one is suffering from a cold in the head, sore throat, or weakness after illness. In such cases muscular action has to make up for lack of lung power and energy. The result is a thickening of the vocal cords and an added huskiness and harshness which may not pass away.

Eight Years of Bad Eczema on Hands

Miss Mary A. Bentley Montreal

Cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment

Miss Mary A. Bentley, 93 University St., Montreal, writes, in a recent letter: "Some nine years ago I noticed small pimples breaking out on the back of my hands. They became very irritating, and gradually became worse, so that I could not sleep at night. I consulted a physician who treated me a long time, but it got worse, and I could not put my hands in water. I was treated at the hospital, and it was just the same. I was told that it was a very bad case of eczema.

"Well, I just kept on using everything that I could for nearly eight years until I was advised to try Cuticura Ointment. I did so, and I found after a few applications the burning sensations were disappearing. I could sleep well, and did not have any itching during the night. I began after a while to use Cuticura Soap. I think to the Cuticura treatment, and thought if I could use other remedies for over seven years with no result, and after only having a few applications and finding ease from Cuticura Ointment, it deserved a fair trial with a severe and stubborn case. I used the Cuticura Ointment and Soap for nearly six months, and I am glad to say that I have hands as clear as anyone. It is my wish that you publish this letter to all the world, and if anyone doubts it, let them write me."

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 53 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

PUNCH'S EDITOR.

When Sir Francis Burnand, during his editorship, was once asked if he thought "Punch" was as good as it used to be he promptly replied, "It never was." This reply was both witty and true, and no doubt Mr. Owen Seaman is tempted to answer in the same strain when those individuals who are always glorifying the past are descanting on the present position of "Punch." It is hardly necessary to state that under Mr. Seaman's editorship "Punch" was fully maintained its reputation, and Mr. Seaman is a worthy successor to the illustrious humorists who preceded him in the editorial chair.

Mr. O. S. Seaman.

Mr. Seaman in his youthful days had no intention of adopting a literary career, and after leaving Cambridge, where he attained high honors, he settled down as a master at Rossall School. Later he acted as Professor of Literature at Durham College of Science, Newcastle-on-Tyne. In 1894 he began writing for "Punch," joining the staff three years later. In 1902 he was appointed assistant editor, and in 1906 he assumed full control. Mr. Seaman has gained a great reputation as a writer of satirical verse, and among his well-known efforts in this direction are "The Battle of the Bays," "In Cap and Bells," and "A Harvest of Chaff." Mr. Owen Seaman has lamented in verse the strain of being funny once a week, but he apparently bears up well under this strain, for his wit remains fresh and sparkling.

WHEN BABY IS ILL.

When baby is ill—when he is troubled with constipation, colic, worms or cold; when his teeth are bothering him or when he is restless and cross and does not sleep well, give him Baby's Own Tablets. They are the mother's greatest aid in keeping her little ones well—thousands of mothers give their babies no other medicine because they know the Tablets to be absolutely safe. They are guaranteed by a government analyst to be free from opiates and other harmful drugs found in so-called "soothing" mixtures. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Because He Took GIN PILLS

Mr. M. A. Jukes of Winnipeg writes: "I have been a sufferer from Lumbago for some years past. I met your Mr. Hill and he advised me to take GIN PILLS. I have been taking them at intervals during the early part of the present winter, and up-to-date have had no return of my old trouble—in fact I feel better than I have for years, and think that my old enemy has vanished for good and all."

Or Late, for That Matter.

"What's your opinion of the high price of coal this year?"

"Well, for one thing, it's liable to prevent my wife doing her Christmas shopping early."

Trial is Inexpensive.—To those who suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism or any ailment arising from derangement of the digestive system, a trial of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is recommended, should the sufferer be unacquainted with them. The trial will be inexpensive and the result will be another customer for this excellent medicine. So effective is their action that many cures can certainly be traced to their use where other pills have proved ineffective.

Displacement.

"Do you think the automobile will displace the horse?"

"No," replied the reckless driver. "We can't even get the pedestrians off the roads."

All mothers can put away anxiety regarding their suffering children when they have Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator to give relief. Its effects are more sure and lasting.

A Rebuke for Father.

Little Mary's father had denied her a pleasure which she had confidently expected to enjoy. That night when she said her prayers at her mother's knee, she concluded with this petition:

"And please don't give my papa any more children. He don't know how to treat those he's got now."

A Modest Order.

Mr. Martin—"Now, then, Bennie, what part of the chicken would you prefer?"

Bennie (who has been invited to Sunday dinner)—"Why, I'll take a drum stick, a little white meat off the breast, the gizzard, a wing, the neck and a spoonful of the stuffin'. 'Mom made me promise not to ask for a second helping."

LIVES WITHOUT AIR.

Snails Can Exist Indefinitely Without Inhaling It.

While the snail has lungs, heart, and a general circulation and is in every respect an air-breathing creature, it can nevertheless exist indefinitely without inhaling the least breath of air, the element that is usually considered the essential in existence in all creatures supplied with lungs.

"To all organized creatures," said Leppert, "the removal of oxygen, water, nourishment and heat causes death to ensue." When that statement was made Leppert did not appear to consider the snail as one among the great host of "organized beings," for experiments by Spallanzani have proved that any or all the usual life conditions can be removed in the case of the snail without terminating its existence or in any way impairing its functions.

The common snail retreats into his shell on the approach of frosty weather and the opening or mouth of its shell is hermetically sealed by a secretion which is of a silky texture and absolutely impervious to air and water. In this condition it is plain that it is deprived of three of the four elements of life mentioned above—air, water and nourishment.

These Pills Cure Rheumatism.—To the many who suffer from rheumatism a trial of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is recommended. They have a pronounced action upon the liver and kidneys and by regulating the action of these organs act as an alternative in preventing the admixture of uric acid and blood that causes this painful disorder. They must be taken according to directions and used steadily and they will speedily give evidence of their beneficial effects.

Not Always the Rule.

Stop the Cough.—Coughing is caused by irritation in the respiratory passages, and is the effort to dislodge obstructions that come from inflammation of the mucous membrane. Treatment with Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil will allay the inflammation and in consequence the cough will cease. Try it, and you will use no other preparation for a cold.

The mechanism can be so adjusted that these announcements cease at a certain time and continue again automatically after a stipulated interval.

MOTHERS! DO YOU KNOW—

That when you put a salve onto your child's skin, it passes through the pores and enters the blood, just as surely as if you put it into the child's stomach?

You would not put a coarse mass of animal fat, colored by various mineral poisons (such as many crude salves are) into your child's blood by way of the stomach? Then why do so by way of the pores?

Take no risk. Use always the pure herbal essences provided in Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk contains no trace of any animal oil or fat, and no poisonous mineral coloring matter. From start to finish it is purely herbal.

It will heal sores, ulcers, abscesses, eruptions, varicose ulcers, cuts, burns and bruises more quickly than any other known preparation. It is antiseptic, quickly stops the smarting of a sore or cut, cures piles, inflamed sores and blood-poisoning. It is a combination of healing power and scientific purity. Ask those who have proved it.

J. M. Armstrong of Locust Hill and C. M. McCall of Thamesville were here on Tuesday on stallion inspection duty. Many of the stallion owners of this neighborhood brought their animals to Exeter to be inspected.

Mrs. Wm. Stewart and family last week moved to Toronto to reside, after living in Exeter only a few months. Previously they resided on the N. E. Boundary of Usborne. Mr. Stewart is at present on fruit inspection duty in Fort William.

It is not necessary to express the hope that the boys will remember that to-night is Hallowe'en, but the citizens of Exeter do hope that the boys will remember that the boy-life of a town is largely judged by their actions on Hallowe'en, and that they will be wise in their generation and avoid doing damage to person or property.

Somebody has suggested the idea of painting the lowest cellar step white, if your cellar is dark, thereby preventing mishaps and also doing away with the feeling for the last step as you go down. A white strip in the centre of the sidewalk, might be of advantage to some pedestrians on dark nights, but others would require a phosphoric paint to guide their wandering feet.

We are always glad to get local items just as you, reader, would like yourself, and if you have any on hand at any time send them along. Don't sandwich an advertisement into them, for they belong to the cashier's department, and if they are not worth paying for in a legitimate way they are no good to us. If you have any friends visiting you, or you expect to go away just say so. The latter clause may gratify your creditors and the first your friends

Do not meddle with a business you know nothing of unless you commence at the bottom round of the ladder and work towards the top. For if you are successful enough to reach the top round you will then find plenty to applaud and assist. But he who commences at the top of the ladder finds it an easy matter to descend, and oft times with great rapidity. And when he has reached the bottom he will find hundreds there waiting to kick him.

BIG COON.—Messrs David Russell and Richard Quance while visiting at Nelson Clark's, Usborne, on Thanksgiving Day, shot a big coon, which on being weighed tipped the scales at 36 holiday.

DIVORCED.—Mrs. Hunt, wife of Rev. Ernest Hunt, of Boston, Mass., last week secured a divorce from her husband. Rev. and Mrs. Hunt were residents of Exeter for several years, the former being rector of Trivitt Memorial church while here.

THE HUMAN BIRD—One of the many features with Guy Brothers Famous Minstrels this season is "Herman", known as the Human Bird. His is really a wonderful Act and will astonish you. See him at the Exeter Opera House on Thursday next, Prices 35c. and 50c.

PROTHER DEAD.—Mrs. Silas Handford received word on Tuesday of the death of her brother, Mr. Geo. Lewis of Elkhorn, Wis., who had been sick only a few days of blood-poisoning, the result of a scratch on his hand. Mr. Lewis, who was in his 78th year, was well-known here, having visited in town seven times.

HORSE HAD GONE.—After attending a patient at Centralia on Thursday Dr. Hyndman came out of the house only to find that his horse and buggy had vanished. On looking down the road he saw the buggy but the horse was not to be seen. Sometime later, however, it was found about three miles west across the river. Some damage was done to the buggy and harness. It is supposed that the horse broke the tie-line and escaped

DIED IN WAPELLA—The sad news was received here last week of the death of Mrs. Charles Kydd, who died at Wapella, Sask., on Monday Oct. 21 at the age of 63 years. On the 16th inst., deceased was operated on for appendicitis, and while the operation was a success complications set in and she passed away as above stated. The deceased was a former resident of Usborne, but left these parts over twenty-five years ago, first living at Listowell and later the family moved to the West. Besides the husband she is survived by five sons and two daughters; also one brother and one sister.—Mr. Wm. Westcott of Usborne, and Mrs Wm. Snell of Winnipeg, Man., The late Mrs. John Delbridge was also a sister.

ARM NEARLY CUT OFF.—On Friday morning last while Mr. Robert Kydd of the 4th concession of Usborne was engaged with other men in cutting rails with a circular saw the saw became loosened from the frame and flying off struck Mr. Kydd on the left arm, about four inches below the shoulder, severing the big muscle and the bone and left it hanging by the lower muscle and flesh. He was knocked down by the blow and it was only when the men attempted to raise him that the extent of his injuries was ascertained. He was immediately taken to the house and Drs. Hyndman & McGillicuddy summoned. They set the bone and connected the muscles, and every hope is entertained that the arm will be saved, and become almost as useful as it was before. The patient stood it all without chloroform, although he was and is suffering great pain.

Democrats Win In United States

WOODROW WILSON NEXT PRESIDENT

The greatest political upheaval in the history of the States has just taken place in the United States. From the northern border to the Gulf of Mexico, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific come returns of a Democratic landslide, and though a few corrections may have to be made in the final accounting, no material difference will be shown in the final result. It was a Waterloo for the Republican party, and its ignominious defeat may forever blast its hope of dominating America. Woodrow Wilson, the school-master of New Jersey, has been elected president of the United States by a united Democracy, and Thomas R. Marshall of Indiana has been elevated to the vice presidency. Theodore Roosevelt, twice president of the United States, will run a poor second to Wilson, and William Howard Taft is a bad third.

The united Democracy must give Theodore Roosevelt credit for adding to their overwhelming victory, for he rent asunder the rock-ribbed Republican party, which now bids fair to establish itself upon foundation once occupied by the Republican party, and become its successor.

Wilson carried his own state of New Jersey. President Taft lost his own State of Ohio to Wilson, and Roosevelt lost his own State of New York, which Wilson carried by a plurality of 130,000, 4 years ago President Taft carried New York by over 200,000.

Out of 531 electoral votes Wilson has about 390, Taft 51, and Roosevelt 90. Later returns will show some changes no doubt but these will not be material.

Local Items

Many a man is afraid to run for office for fear he will have to walk back.

The Clinton Gun Club will hold their 22nd annual shoot on Thursday and Friday, Nov. 21 and 22.

The Ladies of Caven Church intend holding a tea down town on Saturday evening, Nov. 30th (St. Andrew's Day) from 5 to 10 o'clock. Notice later.

The trouble with the man who stops smoking is that he appears to think the matter of sufficient interest to the public to justify him in giving a parade.

Copy from St. Marys Journal, October 16th.—"Miss Edythe Warrine Nash of London, gave a dramatic and humorous recital in the Opera House on Tuesday evening. She was assisted by Miss Estelle MacConnell, Soprano, of London. Miss Nash is a young artiste of great promise, and proved herself to possess exceptional histronic ability. Her various numbers were all greatly enjoyed by a sympathetic audience. Miss MacConnell proved an efficient assistant and rendered a couple of solos with great acceptance. The recital was Miss Nash's first in St. Marys, and those who heard her Tuesday evening are hoping to have the opportunity of hearing her again." In the Opera House, Exeter, on Wednesday, Oct. 18. Tickets 25c, children 15c., reserved seats 35c Plan of Hall at Cole's Drug Store.

THE HUMAN BIRD—One of the many features with Guy Brothers Famous Minstrels this season is "Herman" known as the Human Bird. His is really a wonderful Act and will astonish you. See him at the Exeter Opera House on Thursday next, Prices 35c. and 50c.

POND—HODGSON—As will be noticed in another column Miss Daisy Blanche Hodgson, daughter of the late Thomas Hodgson, was united in marriage on Friday, October 18th, to Mr. Allan Pond, book-keeper and stenographer at the Union station, Toronto. Oil was used for burning in lamps so far back as the twentieth century before Christ.

At the tender age of three, masculine conceit had gripped that small boy with a relentless clutch. He had kissed a little girl of three, and she was rubbing her lips vigorously. "You mustn't do that again," said the boy's mother, "She doesn't like it. Just see how hard she is trying to rub your kiss off." "Oh, no she ain't," said the boy, "she's rubbin' it in."

It is Criminal to Neglect the Skin and Hair

THINK of the suffering entailed by neglected skin troubles — mental because of disfiguration, physical because of pain. Think of the pleasure of a clear skin, soft, white hands, and good hair. These blessings, so essential to happiness and even success in life, are often only a matter of a little thoughtful care in the selection of effective remedial agents. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment do so much for poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, and cost so little, that it is almost criminal not to use them.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a postal to "Cuticura," Dept. 5M, Boston, U.S.A., will secure a liberal sample of each, with 32-page booklet on Skin and Scalp Treatment.

CHINESE LAUNDRIES.

Manchester Sees Them Increasing Rapidly.

Manchester, England, is about to take measures to bring about better hygienic conditions amongst the Chinese laundries, so many of which have lately been established in the city. The Manchester correspondent of the Lancet says: "It appears that the number of small Chinese laundries conducted by Chinamen has increased at an astonishing rate, and at present about 40 are established within the city area. On the advice of the medical officer of health, the sanitary committee has now decided to issue special notices in Chinese characters warning against spitting on the premises, and pointing out that penalties will be imposed for any offence in that direction. There is a prevalent belief—but whether based on fact or not, it is difficult to say—that spitting is very prevalent in some Chinese establishments, and that this act is not confined to spitting on the floor. Spitting is said to be a part of the process in some laundering businesses, as in the ironing process it is stated that the operator expectorates freely on the articles which are being dealt with, and that as an aid to the sustained secretion of saliva chewing gum is largely practised by the laundry men.

YOUR HAIRS NUMBERED!

Method Has Been Devised For Planting Scalps.

Dr. Szekely Ferencz has devised a method of implanting hair into the scalps of bald-headed persons. In carrying out the process the scalp is first carefully cleansed and anesthetized with a solution of novocaine. The operator uses a number of small hooks, made of gold wire, and in the eyelet of each hook a doubly folded hair is inserted. The hook is then pushed into the scalp with the aid of a Pravatz needle, of which from 300 to 400 are in readiness all prepared with hook and hair, and, of course, thoroughly sterilized before use. When the needle has been pushed into the scalp it is turned at a right angle and then pulled out, leaving the hair under the skin fastened by the outstanding end of the book. As at one sitting not more than from 300 to 400 hairs can be implanted, a full head of requires from twenty-five to forty sittings, assuming that from 10,000 to 20,000 hairs will cover a head. Dr. Szekely is sometimes able to apply the treatment every alternate day. If there is an inflammation around a hair this is pulled out and the inflammation promptly ceases.

Minard's Liniment Cures Colds, &c.

Mutual deception is a popular game during courtship.

The following conversation once took place between two Quakers:—"Martha, does thee love me?" asked a Quaker youth of one at whose shrine his heart's holiest feelings had been offered up. "Why, Seth," answered she, "we are commanded to love one another, are we not?" "Ah, Martha, but does thee regard me with the feeling the world calls love?" "I hardly know what to tell thee, Seth. I have greatly feared that my heart is an erring one. I have tried to bestow my love on all, but I may have sometimes thought perhaps that thee was getting rather more than thy share."

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

WEAK STOMACHS

Need New, Rich Blood to Restore Them to a Healthy Condition.

Actually in need of food to nourish the body and yet afraid to eat because of the racking pains that follow. That is the condition of the sufferer from indigestion—a choice between starvation or merciless torture.

The urgent need of all dyspeptics, of everybody whose organs of digestion have become unfit to perform their important duty, is for stronger stomachs that can extract nourishment from food. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give weak stomachs just the strength they need by enriching the blood supply, thus giving tone and strength to the stomach and its nerves, and enabling it to do the work nature intended it to do. Thousands of cases of indigestion have been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, of which the following is but one instance. Miss L. A. Brown, Port Albert, Ont., says: "For a number of years I was a terrible sufferer from indigestion, and as a result I became completely run down, and suffered from backaches and nervous troubles as well. I had to force myself to eat, but never enjoyed a meal owing to the awful pains that followed eating. Life was becoming a burden, and as medicine after medicine failed to help me I felt I was doomed to go through life a constant sufferer. Finally a married sister strongly urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I have reason to be thankful that I followed her advice, as they have fully restored my health, and I can now enjoy all kinds of food without the least discomfort, and my friends say I am looking better than I have done for years. At all events I know I feel like a new person, so shall always praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

REINDEER FOR CANADA.

Experiment Successful in Northern Districts.

Shortly before Earl Grey left Canada on his return to England he suggested the establishment of a herd of reindeer in the northern parts of western Canada. Earl Grey had always taken a deep interest in the work of Dr. Grenfell on the Labrador coast and in northern Newfoundland, mindful of the great boon the reindeer has been to the people there in furnishing transportation, meat and milk. Last year the forestry branch of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa purchased fifty reindeer from Dr. Grenfell and shipped them into the Great Slave Lake district. Now that experience has shown that the deer can be shipped with a fair degree of success and that the animals can quickly adapt themselves to the climatic and other conditions of the remote parts of the north-west, the herd will be increased by other large shipments. There is now no doubt that the reindeer will be a boon to these northern districts. The policy which the United States Government is following in Alaska might be laid down in Canada. The plan followed in Alaska is that any responsible man who wishes to establish a herd of reindeer for himself may do so by making application to the Government for as many as he can feed and care for. He is given over twenty or thirty animals, as the case may be, and at the end of a certain period—three or five years, as agreed upon—he must return the same number to the Government, and keep for himself all the surplus stock bred and raised from the herd during the allotted term.—London Globe.

NOT MUCH LARGE TIMBER.

But Much Pulpwood Found in Lac Labiche Region.

The Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior has had a number of parties out during the past season continuing the examination of the unexplored districts to find out the supply of timber on Dominion Lands and determine the lands which should be reserved permanently for timber purposes. These parties are generally in charge of graduates of the Forest School of the University of Toronto. The work for the season is almost completed and the parties are now returning from the field. Two of the parties have already reported.

Mr. S. H. Clark examined during the past season the district lying north of Lac Labiche and east of the Athabaska River in Northern Alberta, which is along the route which was proposed for the Alberta Great Waterways Railway. The season was wet, and, as the district was found to be covered largely by muskeg, the examination of it was difficult. The muskegs were almost impassable, and the few trails that were found are in poor condition. In spite of the condition of the trails quite a large number of people were going in to Fort McMurray to locate.

It had been reported that there was considerable large timber north of Lac Labiche, but the examination brought out the fact, which has too frequently been the case, that the quantity of large timber is small and only in a few scattered areas. There is, however, a large quantity of immature spruce and jack pine, which needs only protection from fire to be a valuable crop for pulpwood or lumber. The land is generally covered with muskeg, and the soil, nowhere first-class, becomes lighter and sandy towards the east, where it consists of sandy jack pine ridges with muskeg between. The undrained muskegs make the timber growth slow, but the whole district is more suited for timber than for agriculture.

Vegetable Battery.

Scientists tell us that there has been discovered in the forests of India a strange plant which possesses in a very high degree astonishing electric and magnetic power. The hand that breaks a leaf from it receives instantly a shock equal to that which is produced by the conductor of an inductive coil. At a distance of six metres a magnetic needle is affected by it. The energy of this singular force varies, but in times of storms its intensity increases in striking proportion. One never by any chance sees a bird or an insect light on an electric plant; nature seems to warn them that they would find their death.

NEW FOREST RESERVE.

Recommended in Prince Albert District, in Saskatchewan.

The Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior has again, during the past summer, had parties out examining the timber on some of the regions still in the hands of the Dominion Government, with a view to reserving from settlement lands more suitable for forest growth than for farming. Some of these parties have finished the work assigned them and have made their reports.

Mr. C. H. Morse made an examination of a district north-west from Prince Albert lying between the Shelbrook branch of the Canadian Northern Railway (on the west) and the third Dominion meridian (longitude 106 degrees), and recommends that the tract between the meridian on the east and the Sturgeon River on the west should be made a forest reserve. This land is not pure sand, but has some stretches of sand among lands of better quality; none of it, however, can be classed as good agricultural land. At the present time this tract carries, in places, a good stand of spruce, as good a stand as will be found anywhere in the country. The reproduction of the forest is good, and this should make one of the most valuable forest tracts in the west. The rate of growth is good. As it is calculated that the present stand of timber, which is held under license, will be cut out in ten years, it will be seen that the necessity for looking for a future supply is close at hand.

The tract lying between the railway and Sturgeon River was found to be of good agricultural quality, and, as the timber is pretty well cut out, it was not considered necessary to recommend any further reservation beyond the time required for the removal of the present stand.

It takes a truly great man to convince other people that he is great.

Cold-Sores

Are your hands chapped, cracked or sore? Have you "cold cracks" which open and bleed when the skin is drawn tight? Have you a cold sore, frost bite, chilblains, or a "raw" place, which at times makes it agony for you to go about your household duties? If so, Zam-Buk will give you relief, and will heal the frost-damaged skin. Anoint the sore places at night, Zam-Buk's rich healing essences will sink into the wounds, end the smarting, and will heal quickly.

Mrs. Yellen, of Portland, says: "My hands were so sore and cracked that it was agony to put them near water. When I did so they would smart and burn as if I had scalded them. I seemed quite unable to get relief from anything I put on them until I tried Zam-Buk, and it succeeded when all else had failed. It closed the big cracks, gave me ease, soothed the inflammation, and in a very short time healed my hands."

Zam-Buk also cures chafing, rashes, winter eczema, piles, ulcers, festering sores, sore heads and backs, abscesses, pimples, ring-worm, etc., cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, sprains. Of all druggists and stores, or post free from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Price 50c a box.

TURKISH ARMY CRUSHED

A despatch from Sofia says: A few more details have reached here of the four days' battle between Adrianople and Constantinople, which resulted in the utter rout by General Savoff, Bulgarian Commander-in-Chief, of the Turkish army of 250,000 men, under Nazim Pasha, the War Minister. The battle extended along the line from Lule Burgas eastward to Serai. The Turkish front was over 31 miles long. The Turkish forces greatly outnumbered the Bulgarians, the latter not exceeding 150,000, many having been left investing Adrianople.

The eastern wing of the Turkish army, at Viza, was able to maintain its ground at first against the Bulgarian troops, but could gain no success, and, after three days' fighting, fled. The Bulgarian army vigorously pursued the Turks, who retreated in disorder and panic on Serai and Tchorlu. On Thursday they were driven from this stand. Many guns and large quantities of ammunition have been captured. Aivali, near Lule Burgas, and Maras have been burned. All the Christian inhabitants, according to the Bulgarians, were massacred.

Turkey to Sue for Peace.

A despatch from Constantinople says: The Cabinet is in session. It is believed to be discussing the question of suing the Balkan States for peace. It is known that grave news has been received from the front, but its exact nature has not been divulged.

On to the Capital.

A despatch from London says: The Vienna correspondent of the Daily Chronicle sends the following:—

"The Servian Foreign Minister and the Greek Premier, who brought about the Balkan alliance, started for Paris on Friday, it is supposed to negotiate with Premier Poincare. It is understood that the Bulgarian army in following up its successes will advance on Constantinople. The Balkan allies will not accept an armistice, but are willing to negotiate peace direct with Turkey."

Servians Push Forward.

A despatch from London says: The Servian troops are extending the area of territory conquered by them in Macedonia. It was reported on Thursday that they have crossed the mountains and taken the Town of Prisrend, where they captured a considerable quantity of Turkish war material. They are said also to have taken Diakovo, still farther to the west.

500 Prisoners and 7 Guns.

A despatch from London says: Describing the defeat of the Turks at Kailar, Macedonia, a despatch to the Chronicle says they left 2,000 dead, while 500 were taken prisoners. Seven guns fell into the hands of the Greeks. The main body of the Greek army is now marching in force to attack Salonica.

Roasted on Gridiron.

A despatch from London says: The Servian Legation has received a despatch from Belgrade giving accounts by returned Servian officers of atrocities committed by the Turkish troops before abandoning the country conquered by the Servians.

"Wherever the Turks passed," says the despatch, "the Servian army found only land strewn with bodies of men, women and children, mutilated in the most barbarous fashion. Bodies of men were also found bound to trees. They had been burned alive by means of fires kindled under their feet. One body bore indications of having been roasted on a gridiron."

Turks Again Defeated.

A despatch from London says: The Times Sofia correspondent, telegraphing Friday, says: "The Turks on Thursday made a desperate effort to retrieve the situation. The retreating troops rallied between Tchorlu and Istrandia, and were reinforced by a division sent from Constantinople. They were completely defeated, however, by the Bulgarians, who captured Tchorlu, Istrandia and Rodosto. Altogether some 50,000 Turks had assembled at Tchorlu, and a fresh series of battles occurred over the district extending from Tchorlu to Istrandia and along the heights dominating Rodosto. A diversion was attempted on the Turkish right wing. General Torgut, of Albanian fame, landed at Midia with 20,000 men and advanced toward Viza, where he encountered the Bulgarian troops, under General Kutincheff. The turks were completely defeated, but whether they succeeded in regaining their ships or retreated eastward is not stated.

Enormous Sacrifices.

A despatch from Sofia says: Whether the European concert holds together or breaks up there is reason to believe that the allied States will hold firmly to their programme. They already have undergone enormous sacrifices, and are prepared to face every eventuality. Only those who have been brought into close contact with the terrible realities of this war can estimate the extent of those sacrifices. In Sofia the wounded are arriving literally in thousands. All the larger public and many private buildings have been transformed into hospitals. Even at that some have to be laid on the bare floors. The wounded from the last great battle have yet to arrive. How arrangements can be made to accommodate them it is hard to say.

TWO HUNTERS DROWNED.

Winnipeg Young Men Victims of Storm in North Country.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Two families of this city were plunged in grief on Tuesday night when one member of a hunting party returned with the news that his two companions, Edgar Guy Lees and Henry Keane, had been drowned at Netley's Portage in the storm that swept over this section Monday night. Edgar Lees was the son of the superintendent of the Industrial Bureau and the Exhibition Grounds. Henry Keane was the eldest son of a widowed mother.

MANIA FOR SETTING FIRES.

John Bradshaw Found Guilty of Starting One in Bush.

A despatch from Nelson, B. C., says: John Bradshaw, accused of setting fire to the bush at Hock Ranch, on Granite road, was found guilty by the jury. This is the fourth time Bradshaw has been tried in connection with incendiary fires in Nelson, which resulted in the destruction of the Hall Mines smelter, the Yale Columbia Saw Mills, great damage to the Nelson Brewery, two city blocks and various other buildings.

ONE AND QUARTER PER CENT.

A despatch from Montreal says: Failing on Thursday in the Appeal Court to get back the $13,778 that Mrs. S. C. Matthews won on the last day that the blind pool investment system, invested and run by Charles D. Sheldon, the curators of his estate on Friday morning announced that creditors would only get one and a quarter per cent. on the dollar. The ex-financial wizard, who is in St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, is engaged in mending the shirts of his fellow convicts.

"PROUD AND GLAD"

Because Mother Looked So Well After Quitting Tea and Coffee.

A woman was almost distracted with dyspepsia and heart trouble.

Like thousands of others, the drug—caffeine—in coffee was slowly but steadily undermining her nervous system and interfering with natural digestion of food. (Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it contains caffeine, the poisonous drug found in coffee.)

"For 30 years," she writes, "I have used coffee. Have always been sickly—had heart trouble and dyspepsia with ulcers in stomach and mouth so bad, sometimes, I was almost distracted and could hardly eat a thing for a week.

"I could not sleep for nervousness, and when I would lie down at night I'd belch up coffee and my heart would trouble me. It was like poison to me. I was thin—only weighed 125 lbs., when I quit coffee and began to use Postum.

"From the first day that belching and burning in my stomach stopped. I could sleep as soundly as anyone and, after the first month, whenever I met any friends they would ask me what was making me so fleshy and looking so well.

"Sometimes, before I could answer quick enough, one of the children or my husband would say, 'Why, that is what Postum is doing for her'—they were all so proud and glad.

"When I recommended it to anyone I always tell them to follow directions in making Postum, as it is not good to taste if weak, but fine when it has the flavor and rich brown color." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

AUDITOR'S STRONG CRITICISM

REPORT ON TORONTO HYDRO-ELECTRIC COMMISSION.

Civic Official Points Out Apparent Deficit—Mayor Makes Reply.

The city of Toronto auditor's report upon the finances of the Municipal Hydro-Electric Power Commission for the period from June 1, 1911, to June 30, 1912, was presented to the City Council Oct. 14. It says that at the close of 1911 an unadjusted balance of $16,795.62 was carried forward. However, it declares that the making of a good inventory disclosed a shortage of $113,477.40 between the amount standing in the books and the actual amount of stores on hand. The report declares that it was apparently decided to charge the whole of the working deficit on the books of 1911 to construction account. "Entries were consequently made," says the report, "charging the several construction accounts with a pro rata percentage of the total deficit as found amounting to $117,803.35." This sum, it explains, is obtained after crediting the income earned during the period, and in addition to it there is an outstanding capital charge due the Provincial Hydro-Electric Power Commission amounting to $248,245.80. The following figures show the position of the civic plant on Dec. 31, 1911:—

Cash from city	$2,400,993 11
Interest, etc., charged by city, carried to debit of capital expenditure	92,198 54
Deficit on operating and general expenses to date	117,803 25
Total charge to 31st December, 1911	$2,610,995 00
Outstanding liabilities:—
Unadjusted items of city account	16,795 62
Unadjusted stores shortage	113,477 40
	$ 378,518 83

Finds a Deficit.

The City Auditor is of the opinion that a portion of the $117,803 should have been carried forward as a charge against future earnings. He gives a general review of the figures for the six months ending June 30, 1912. He reaches the conclusion that there was a deficit of $85,642.31 on the operations of the period. His statement of operating expenses and earnings is as follows:—

Wages, material, etc	$213,674 85
Current, etc.	76,522 61
Carried to credit of depreciation reserve	35,027 16
Accrued sinking fund (half year)	21,274 28
Interest on bonds and advances (one-half charged to revenue)	36,305 92
Earnings	297,162 51

The auditor calls attention to the fact that for the half year preceding June 30, 1912, no amount had been provided to meet accrued sinking fund charges, but that an item of $50,888 had been written into the balance sheet to cover the amount. Added to the deficit this made a total of $136,530 to be carried forward against future earnings. In addition, $36,305, the remainder of the interest account, would have to be added to capital account. The City Auditor thinks that such items should be charged directly to revenue. Treating them in this way, the present position, he says, would be:—

Total charge to 31st Dec., 1911, as above	$2,610,995 00
Int. credited by Com.	72,611 94
Total charge to 30th June, 1912	$3,398,606 94
Summary.
Deficit to 31st Dec., 1911, carried to capital expen.	117,803 35
Deficit to 30th June, 1912	85,642 31
Accrued sinking fund at 30th June, unprovided for	50,888 07
Proportion of int. charged to capital	36,305 92
Net shortage to 30th June, 1912	$ 290,639 65
Outstanding liabilities:—
Unadjusted items in City Treasurer's account	16,795 62
Shortage, stores account	113,477 40
Prov. Hydro Com.	248,245 81
	$ 378,518 83

Income Accounts.

A comparison of the principal income accounts for the six months ending December 31st, 1911, and 30th June, 1912, respectively, is as follows:—

	1911. 31st Dec.	1912. 30th June.
Com. lighting	$ 57,104 78	$ 68,562 75
Com. power	9,277 33	24,574 39
Mun. bldg. light	636 05	333 34
Mun. power	4,311 00	54,664 05
Mun. st. lighting	75,893 90	120,058 50
Meter rents	30 00	130 00
	$147,254 06	$268,313 03
Sundry credit items	3,542 56	28,849 48
	$150,796 62	297,162 51

The City Auditor says that the system of bookkeeping in use by the commission is "cumbersome and smothered in detail." He thinks that the volume of business of the civic electric department is, and has been, over-stated. He believes that considerable saving could be made in expense accounts. He points out that by the close of the year sinking fund and interest charges will have to be met out of earnings. He asks why "renewal and depreciation funds" and "sinking funds" should be charged against the annual cost of the undertaking, and expresses the opinion that the system of purchasing electricity on the peak load plan might well be superseded.

Mayor Makes Reply.

Mayor Geary, speaking of the auditor's report, said that the bookkeeping system of the civic commission had been built up under expert advice after years of experience, that the department was not overstaffed, and that the system of purchase of current had been decided upon by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of the province. The Mayor explained that the unadjusted balance of $16,795 at the close of 1911 represented a difference between the revenue estimated by the City Council and the actual revenue, and, in the opinion of the commission, should not be charged to it at all. Of the item of $113,477 described as shortage on the stores' account, the Mayor said that it was merely a question of bookkeeping. Certain invoices were charged to stores, while as a matter of fact the goods went directly to the job and were never credited when used. A great proportion of the amount had already been traced. The Mayor said that the sum of $248,245 given as due the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario was not correct. The amount, which referred to the eastern entrance, represented claim plus interest to July 1, 1912, not the amount of the claim on Dec. 31, 1911. The so-called working deficit of $117,803, he described as a technical deficiency which might properly be included in the capital cost of the undertaking. It was due, he believed, to the disorganization introduced into the operation service by the concurrent demands of construction operations.

Analyses the Deficit.

The Mayor says that the loss for the quarter ending March 31, 1912, was $55,768, and the loss for the quarter ending June 30 was only $29,873. Of the first quarter's loss, $17,056 is interest on investment, $17,065 is written off for depreciation of the new plant, and $12,639 is put aside for sinking fund. The loss for the quarter ending June 30 includes also allowances for interest, depreciation and sinking fund.

Mr. Geary declared that the loss for the quarter ending September 30, the net loss was only $4,647, and this, after allowing for interest $20,999, depreciation $19,443, and sinking fund $15,000. As a matter of fact, he said the months of August and September had each shown a small profit got by civic enterprise. The gain, he asserted, was proceeding and the initial loss was being made good. Business, he said, had grown wonderfully. The city had 12,000 customers and a plant which could do many times the business with little additional cost, even for current. "We carry," he declared, "against future profits the charge for sinking fund prior to January, 1912, $50,888, and our deficit for the first nine months of the first year, which is not an operating year, but rather a year of construction is $90,290, included in which is $51,470 depreciation and $36,381 for sinking fund."

POTATO REPORTS WORSE.

Yield From Heavy Clay Land Is Practically Valueless.

A despatch from Toronto says: Reports from all parts of York county indicate that now that the farmers are taking their late potatoes out of the pits, where they were stored since digging, the loss and depreciation from rot is much greater than was thought likely. Little of the crop will be available for shipping. In nearly every case the yield was very large, but the greatest loss is found where this is the case. Heavy clay land is practically useless, but the sandy and lighter soils will give probably half a crop. Some good yields are reported from the light lands of Whitchurch, in North York.

TUBERCULOSIS SUNDAY.

December 1st Is the Day Set Apart for the Purpose in Ontario.

Following the worthy example set in the United States, where Sunday, October 27th, was observed as Tuberculosis Day in over 50,000 churches, it is proposed that Sunday, December 1st, shall be devoted to a similar purpose throughout Ontario. The Inter-Denominational Ministerial Association of Toronto, representing all the Protestant churches of the city, have already agreed to the proposal, and appeals are now being made to the prelates of the Roman Catholic and Anglican bodies, and to the leading clergymen of the other churches, to have that day generally observed throughout the province. It is suggested that in the sermons of the day, the clergy should review the work already done in fighting the white plague, outline the possibilities of future effort, give practical instruction as to home treatment, and issue warnings against the use of numberless fraudulent, worthless and positively dangerous so-called "cures" for tuberculosis. Replies already received indicate that the churches throughout Ontario will fall into line with the Toronto denominations. Tuberculosis Sunday in the United States was endorsed by President Taft, ex-President Roosevelt, and scores of leading statesmen and churchmen, and it is expected that the public men of Canada will not be behindhand in approving of the movement here.

HEALTH OFFICERS.

Must Pass Examination Test Before Appointment is Confirmed.

A despatch from Toronto says: The medical officers of health for the several districts into which the Province has been divided have nearly completed their course of instruction under Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, Secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, and Professor Amyot, Provincial Bacteriologist. It is expected that they will go out to their posts about the fifteenth of November. Before their appointments are confirmed, however, each will have to pass an examination on the health act, sanitation, bacteriology, hygiene and other subjects coming within the sphere of the work assigned. The doctors have been studying for some months and have been given special training at the Provincial Laboratory. The department looks for greatly improved results from the new organization.

THURSDAY NOV. 7, 1912

November 5th was Guy Fawkes' Day. Back in the time of the reign of Queen Elizabeth attempts were being made to murder or intimidate princes and rulers of Europe. In England a few religious fanatics burrowed under the Parliament buildings and placed barrels of gunpowder which were to have been exploded when the building was crowded with the Royal family and those of the lords and commons at the opening of Parliament. Luckily the plot was discovered in time to prevent the awful loss of life that must have resulted had the gunpowder been fired.

Through the re-construction of the Cabinet made necessary by the resignation of Hon. F. D. Monk, Hon. Dr. Roche, Secretary of State, has gone to the Department of Interior. His appointment has been received with general approval throughout the country. He is one of the most popular men in the House, and his elevation to the important post of Minister of the Interior is regarded as a fitting recognition of his ability, both as an administrator and as a parliamentarian. The Interior is particularly a western department and the news of his appointment has been especially well received in his home province, Manitoba, and in Saskatchewan and Alberta. By birth Dr. Roche is an Ontario man, although of Irish parents, he was born at Brandeboye in 1859. He was educated at Lucan and London High schools and then studied for medicine. He is enrolled as the first graduate in medicine of Western University, London. Last fall his alma mater honored him by bestowing on him an honorary degree. He graduated in 1883, and the same year he removed to Manitoba, locating at Minnedosa, where he has been actively practising ever since. He is thus one of the pioneers of the west, and probably no man in parliament has such a thorough knowledge of western conditions and western affairs as Dr. Roche.

Not as much is heard of or is known of the Agricultural Department at Ottawa as should be. After all is said and done it is one of the most important branches of the government for Agriculture is Canada's basic industry and the progress and prosperity of the Dominion depends upon the progress and prosperity of the farmer. Hon. Martin Burrell, the Minister of Agriculture, is a poor advertisement. He is a modest man, too modest some say for a politician. He works night and day and talks little. Since he came into office he has worked many reforms looking towards the advancement of agriculture. He has initiated many schemes for the betterment of the farming industry. He found a department which was in a rut. There was no other department at Ottawa where the whole service was so plainly marking time. The agriculture department has many experts, yet initiative was discouraged and depart. seemed to have set in. Mr. Burrell has wakened up the department, has infused a new spirit in every branch of the service and has succeeded in inoculating his own energy and enterprise into the department.

A WONDERFUL BARGAIN

For a great big dollar's worth, the offer this season by the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal cannot be beaten. A sample copy of their new picture, "Mother's Treasures," size 23 by 29 inches, already for framing, has reached this office. It certainly is beautiful and every home in Canada will be the better of having a copy in the house. The Family Herald and Weekly Star, bigger, brighter and better than ever, along with such a beautiful picture, all for one dollar, is a bargain that should be taken advantage of. It is only the Family Herald and Weekly Star that can offer such a picture free with a year's subscription. People wonder how it can be done, yet still it is done, and the people get the benefit.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

EXPENSIVE.

SING a song of dollars,
Pocket full of dough,
Four and twenty barrels
Wouldn't make a show.
Keeping things in motion,
Money has to run,
Bless me, it's expensive
Running a campaign.

Money goes for speakers,
Money goes for stamps,
Uniforms are costly,
So are flaming lamps.
Money goes to printers
And for pen and ink;
Also buying speakers,
Food, cigars and drink.

Money comes from only
Ones with cash to spare.
Those who haven't got it
Nothing is their share.
So the wealthy captains
Have to send their check
Or some rosy prospects
May enjoy a wreck.

On the bargain counter,
With a frowzy pile,
Is no office waiting
If it's worth the while.
We begin to wonder
In these doubting days
If the paying person
Finds the paying pays.

Its Equal.

"I don't know anything more idiotic than the way women follow freak fashions."

"Don't you?"

"No."

"I do."

"What?"

"The comments men make about it."

Before and After.

"He comes to see her every night in the week."

"That is nice for her."

"Yes, but wearying."

"She should put up with it, though. A girl should see as much of her future husband as possible before marriage, for after that he may not be around evenings."

Foxy.

"Jones is mighty solid with his wife."

"How does he do it?"

"Simple enough. When he goes to see his mother he tells his wife that he likes to get back to wife's cooking."

Reason For Change.

"Clarice is a beautiful blond."

"She was a stunning brunette the last time I saw her."

"Oh, well, she decided that she would like to wear sky blue and mauve this season."

"I hear you are bringing up your children by rule."

"Sure thing!"

"How does it work?"

"Fine! The children make the rules."

BIDDULPH.—John McIlhargey, aged 68, a life-long resident of this district, dropped dead at his home near Elginfield just after eating his dinner on Friday. He had been in his usual good health just before. Besides his wife he leaves eight daughters. The funeral to St. Patrick's church and cemetery Biddulph, was held on Monday morning.

ST. MARYS.—Samuel Dusty, aged 87 years, died here last week, after a residence here of 60 years. He is survived by four sons and one daughter.

BLANSHARD—The death occurred in this township on Oct. 25, of Eliza Miller, relict, of the late James Henry Morphy, in her 91st year. She was one of the oldest settlers of the township, having come to Blanshard with her husband 60 years ago. She came from Ireland to Canada when 2 years of age.

BRUSSELS.—Mr. Eneas Crich, Division Court bailiff, died very suddenly here on Wednesday night. He left home on Wednesday morning in the best of health, calling on Mr. John Shortreed in the township of Morris, about five miles out, where he was seized with a paralytic stroke.

BRUCEFIELD.—Dr. David McIntosh met with a severe accident. He was driving in Stanley, a mile from our village, when the horse threw him out of his buggy. Dr. McBride of Walland who was driving behind him saw the accident and went to his aid, and brought him home. Dr. Rodgers attended him. His hand was cut, necessitating several stitches. He was also badly shaken up, but is now thought to be doing well.

LUCAN—Thieves are beginning their work in the vicinity. Mr. John McFalls had fifteen fine turkeys stolen and no trace has been found of them.

C. Kalbfleisch expects to have the school house ready by December 1st.—Messrs. Jackson of Clinton were in town last week, with a view to establishing a branch of their clothing business here. The matter of power seems to be in the way. —The late Mrs. Julius Bloch was a daughter of the late Henry Steinbach and was in her 44th year. We made short mention of her death last week. Although ailing for years she had been around most of the time, and her sudden death was a surprise to all. She collapsed without warning. Besides her husband she is survived by one son, Herbert, one daughter, Mrs. Wm. Walper her mother and a number of brothers and sisters.—A very interesting match was held here on Monday of last week, when two men on a side, captained by C. Fritz and H. Yungblut sallied forth in search of game. The contest was for a goose supper, the winners to have the feast at the expense of the losers. C. Fritz, the old-time sportsman, won out by 30 points, the score being 585 to 555. The game brought home comprised 43 rabbits, 5 partridge, 1 woodcock, 1 snipe and 4 crows.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN H. SMITH

INDEPENDENCE.

THE man who works without a boss
Is he who makes the killing,
Who doesn't need a whip or spur
To make him keep on drilling,
Who doesn't feel that it would mean
Starvation and disaster
For all his folks if he should try
To work without a master.

The man who cannot turn his hand
Unless he has direction,
Who cannot with a simple task,
Unguided, make connection,
Can never be the captain grand
Of simple deals the scorner,
Who organizes big combines
Or run a steel trust corner.

It isn't holding down a job
Which keeps a man in bacon,
That makes him strong financially
By heavy winds unshaken.
It isn't sticking to a task
That pays him steady wages,
That serves to make his name adorn
The heavy tax book's pages.

'Tis he who dares to make a strike
And keeps the strike a-going,
Who wins the money, marbles, chalk
And makes the bravest showing,
And if he tumbles once or twice
And fails in many a venture
He will succeed as well as those
Who never did adventure.

Desired to Know.

"What on earth are you talking about?"

"I don't know."

"Then why do you talk?"

"To find out."

"Find out?"

"Yes. You seem to know it all, so I thought perchance you could enlighten me."

Next in Command.

"I'm looking for the man who runs this office."

"He is out just now."

"But I have a big deal I want to put over."

"You might see the office boy."

Exasting.

"What is he kicking about?" asked the manager.

"Wants his nickel back," replied the beautiful ticket seller.

"What's the complaint?"

"The moving pictures didn't talk."

Things to Be Avoided.

Drafts, either from windows or banks.
Policemen.
Corns.
Locomotives.
Garden tools.

Near It.

"I found one honest man."

"Was he in the poorhouse?"

"No."

"Where, then?"

"On the way to it."

A Change.

"Does he like politics? He fairly eats 'em."

"That's better. Most men drink theirs."

A Careless Remark.

"Well, sad to say, I'll have to tear myself away."

"That'll be rippin' won't it?"

Stopping and Starting.

'Tis money makes the auto go,
A dollar you can drop
And hardly know that it is spent—
A tack will make one stop.

HOT FLASHES.

Women in middle age often complain of hot flashes. They are at that stage of life—when their delicate organism needs a tonic and helping-hand which only Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription can give them. Many women suffer needlessly from girlhood to womanhood and from motherhood to old age—with backache, dizziness or headache. A woman often becomes sleepless, nervous, "broken-down," irritable and feels tired from morning to night. When pains and aches rack the womanly system at frequent intervals, ask your neighbor about Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

MRS. J. IRNOF, of 321 S. Bentalon Street, Baltimore, Md., says: "I wrote you about nine months ago, telling you of my condition. I have a fine baby girl—she weighed nine pounds when born. She is my third child and the strongest of them all. My suffering was only for two hours. I took several bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of Dr. Pierce's Smart-Weed. I never had a well day before I took your medicines. I was surprised how well I felt—could eat—was always hungry, and never had a sick stomach. The nurse who was with me said the medicine was wonderful because I got along so nicely after having had so much trouble before. She intends to recommend it to all her suffering patients. Everybody is astonished at me because I only weighed 102 pounds before and now I weigh 125. I have had several ladies come to me and ask about Dr. Pierce's medicine. I am willing to recommend it to all who suffer and want help. If any want information I will be glad to give it to them." MRS. IRNOF & CHILD.

NERVOUS DEBILITY

Thousands of young and middle-aged men are annually swept to a premature grave through Early Indiscretions, Excesses and Blood Diseases. If you have any of the following symptoms consult us before it is too late. Are you nervous and weak, despondent and gloomy, specks before the eyes, with dark circles under them, weak back, kidneys irritable, palpitation of the heart, bashful, dreams and losses, sediment in urine, pimples on the face, eyes sunken, hollow cheeks, careworn expression, poor memory, lifeless, distrustful, lack energy and strength, tired mornings, restless nights, changeable moods, weak manhood, premature decay, bone pains, hair loose, sore throat, etc.

YOU WILL BE A WRECK

Our New Method Treatment can cure you and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified, so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers disappear, the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness and despondency vanish, the eye becomes bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body and the moral, physical and sexual systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. Don't let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard earned dollars. We will cure you or no pay.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Dr. Morrison, the English newspaper correspondent now political adviser to President Yuan Shih Kai of the Chinese republic, suggests for the comprehending of Chinese development a consideration of the fact that the people of this nation literally are just emerging from darkness. They are being given light—lamps, oil, and electricity.

Social darkness was a fact, not a figure. Night did not bring a leisure to be turned to pursuits which would raise the intelligence, widen the comprehension, and increase the knowledge of the nation It forced inaction. The Chinese people worked all day, and night found them without means of illumination. If the Chinese citizen had anything to read—and he had—he had no proper light by which to read it. Oil now is being introduced throughout the republic and the reading lamp lighted.

"I wonder if it ever has occurred to you," Dr. Morrison said to a Pall Mall Gazette interviewer, "that not long ago the greater part of the country was without adequate means of illumination at night! Do you realize what such a simple thing as the introduction of oil is doing! It is literally brightening the lives of the people and relieving them from the dullness and monotony of evenings spent almost in the dark. No wonder so many were formerly driven to smoke opium. But to distribute oil efficiently more railways are needed. Of course the big cities are getting the electric light. These changes are not all the result of the revolution; they rather helped to produce it. Millions and millions of people suddenly lifted out of darkness and placed in possession of intelligent newspapers and light to read them by—think what that means in the oldest empire on earth!"

Of course the police can never bring themselves to hear with patience of the exploits of the "book detective." His test tubes, his microscope, his elaborate analysis—all these, as exemplified in Sherlock Holmes, are repugnant to the professional thief catcher. If you wish to know the full weight of human scorn go to the police station and sound the praises of the "book detective." Nevertheless, there is something to be said for Sherlock's method, as even the official police in some parts of the world are beginning to admit. The Irish government has been glad to avail itself of the skill of Dr. E. J. McWeeney, whose paper entitled, "Remarks on the Biological Method of Differentiating Bloodstains," recently awakened much interest in police circles in England.

The expert has long been able to detect, with the aid of a microscope, the difference between blood stains and rust, paint or faded tobacco stains. He could tell also whether the blood was that of a mammalian or a nonmammalian animal, but his analysis stopped there. But Dr. McWeeney is able to determine with certainty the exact species from which a sample of blood is taken. And this discovery is regarded as of great importance in assisting the police in their work of detecting and punishing those guilty of the most serious crime. Is it fantastic to suppose that in time analysis of the blood may reach so fine a point that it will be as much dreaded by criminals as the Bertillon system now is!

STANDARD OF ILLITERACY.

Some Statistics Issued by the U. S. Bureau of Education.

Only three persons out of 10,000 in Germany are unable to read or write, while the proportion of illiteracy in Great Britain is 150 in 10,000, as against 770 in 10,000 in the United States.

These figures are based on a comparison of illiteracy among some of the leading nations, which has just been made and issued by the United States bureau of education. The figures for America include the entire population over ten years of age, while the German figures cover only the army recruits, and the British statistics are based on data drawn wholly from official marriage registers.

Hence the German and British statistics deal only with adults and generally speaking with physically and mentally normal adults, while the United States census includes without discrimination everyone above the ten-year age limit, even feeble folk.

Selected Recipes.

German Rolls.—Mix together 2 ounces of sugar, 2 eggs, 6 ounces of flour and 1 ounce of anisee seed. Cut into long rolls. Twist them. Glaze with yolk of egg and bake a nice brown.

Currant Muffins—Cream together two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one of butter. Add one beaten egg, a little salt, two and one-half cups of flour into which has been stirred three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, and one-half cupful of currants. Bake in buttered gem pans.

Baked Macaroni with Cheese.—Make a white sauce in the following manner: Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, and when hot add two tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until blended; add gradually one cupful of hot milk, stirring constantly; season with salt; put a layer of boiled macaroni in a buttered baking dish and sprinkle with grated cheese. Repeat and pour over the macaroni the white sauce, then cover with buttered breadcrumbs and bake till brown.

King's Pudding.—Two cupfuls of breadcrumbs, one-half cupful of suet, one-half cupful of molasses, one egg, one cupful of milk, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of soda, one cupful of raisins and one-half teaspoonful of cloves. Soak breadcrumbs one-half hour, then add the other ingredients; stir well; steam three hours. Serve hot with a hard sauce.

Nut Sandwiches.—English walnuts or almonds, lettuce leaves, bread and butter, mayonnaise dressing. Chop the nuts finely and mix them with mayonnaise. Spread between slices of bread and place a lettuce leaf between the parts of each sandwich. Sprinkle over with a bit of cayenne pepper. Variations may be obtained by first mixing the nuts with very finely chopped celery, with chicken, with olives, or with figs. First mince the ingredients finely and add the nuts; then soften with sweet cream or with mayonnaise to a paste that will spread easily before putting it on the bread. Season with salt and pepper or paprika.

Stuffed Eggplant.—Wash and wipe a large eggplant and parboil for ten minutes in boiling salted water. Let it get perfectly cold; cut it in half lengthwise and scrape out the center, leaving the walls of the eggplant three-quarters of an inch thick. Chop the extracted pulp fine and add to it any cold white meat you may have, or if you have none make the forcemeat without it with half a cupful of fine crumbs, a tablespoonful of melted butter, salt and pepper to your taste. Mix well, moisten with a little soup stock and fill the hollowed halves with this. When they are full and rounded, sprinkle the surface of the forcemeat with dry cracker crumbs and lay the halves side by side in the baking pan. Pour two cupfuls of weak stock around them and bake nearly an hour, basting every ten minutes with the stock in the pan. Then lift the eggplant to a hot dish and thicken the gravy left in the pan with browned flour; boil up once on the top of the range, stirring constantly, and pour this browned sauce about the base of the halved eggplant.

How to Cook a Round Steak.—While getting your steak buy a nice bit of suet, and while you are preparing your steak fry the suet in the pan, and have it well tried out, but hissing hot, by the time the steak is ready to go into the frying pan. To make it ready lay it upon a board and pound it from end to end and on both sides with the potato beetle or a mallet. This done, sprinkle with salt and pepper lightly and flour upon both sides, covering the meat almost out of sight. Then put into the hot fat and cook quickly. Turn when half done. When done take it out of the pan and keep hot over boiling water while the gravy is making. Pour a little boiling water into the pan and stir in with the fat and the flour that has dropped from the meat. If there is not enough of this fat add a little boiling water. Stir in a teasponful of lemon juice and the same of onion juice with a quarter teaspoonful of French mustard. Boil up once and pour over the steak. Cover and let it stand in the oven three minutes that the gravy may soak into the meat. You will be surprised to find that your cheap steak is equal to an expensive cut.

Tips to Housewives.

To whiten clothes add one tablespoonful of turpentine to a boilerful of washing.

Clothes-lines should be boiled once a month for a few minutes and then quickly dried. By doing this they will last much longer.

A little sugar added to lemon juice is better than vinegar for making up vegetable and fish salads, especially for children.

By placing a few lumps of loaf sugar in the oven nearest the fire when baking pastry the top crusts will cook a lovely brown.

Dull and shabby leather bags should be rubbed over with the well-beaten white of an egg. They will then look almost as good as new.

To keep down dust when using the carpet sweeper moisten the brush of the sweeper with kerosene. This will also brighten the carpet.

A combination of nutmeg and cinnamon makes a nice flavoring for plain cookies, while nutmeg and mace are delicious in buns.

To keep your sponge in good condition, you should occasionally wash it in warm water with a little tartaric acid or soda, afterwards rinsing it in clean warm water.

To clean vinegar or oil cruet break up egg shells very small, add to warm soap water, fill in to cruets and shake well. This is simple and does not injure the glass.

Cutglass will take a brilliant polish if washed, first, in hot suds, and then dipped into cold water in which a handful of starch has been dissolved. Allow the glasses to drain before rubbing with a dry cloth.

To make an ordinary candle serve as a night lamp, pack finely powdered salt around the wick as far up as the blackened part. In this way a mild, steady light may be obtained all night from even a small piece of candle.

Celery and lettuce may be kept fresh by standing the roots in cold water and throwing over them a damp cloth or dry manila paper. They should, before using, be washed thoroughly, soaked in ice water and dried on a towel.

To remove milk stains from a navy serge suit apply a mixture of glycerine and water, in equal parts, to the cloth, then sponge with strong indigo-blue water. Allow the moisture to evaporate, then press with a hot iron, laying a muslin over the material.

To make corks fit in catsup bottles take those that are a little large and boil them in clear water for twenty minutes. This decreases their size. Insert them in the mouths of the bottles while hot, as they expand in cooling, thus making perfectly tight stoppers.

To freshen rugs and carpets when putting them down for the fall and winter, after stretching take a pail of lukewarm water, add to it two tablespoons of household ammonia and wipe the carpet with a cloth wrung out of the solution. This brightens the color, removes the dust and will kill insects.

Silencers for tables and chairs can be made at home by cutting pieces of old felt the size of a shilling and glueing them to the bottom of table and chair legs. These save the wear and tear upon oilcloth more than anything else.

Onions that are overstrong in flavor may be rendered less by slicing, then putting in a colander and pouring boiling water over them. After this plunge into ice water and let remain for half an hour. This will leave them sweet and crisp.

In England, the first dock was constructed at Liverpool in 1708.

Entitled to vote at all elections in the United States, there are considerably over a million women.

NEW ST. PAUL'S OF METHODISM.

New Wesleyan Central Hall which has been formally opened at Westminster, London. These premises have taken five years to erect, and have cost a quarter of a million; the dome is 200 feet high, is the third largest in London, coming after that of St. Paul, and that of the British Museum, while the new hall will seat 3,000 persons. It is under the shadow of Westminster Abbey, the sacred shrine of the Established Church of England.

HEALTH

Drinking Water.

Every twenty-four hours there passes out through the pores of your skin about a quart of water. This "insensible perspiration" goes on in the body of every healthy man without his knowing it. This evaporation from the skin is necessary in order that the body may remain at an even temperature, and able to resist sudden chills, severe cold or extreme heat. At the same time, a still greater amount of water is passing out of the body through the lungs and other organs.

Now if you allow the body to part with all this water without supplying the loss, every tiny cell in the system is robbed of its opportunity to grow, and one of the many ailments due to poor cell growth is bound sooner or later to develop. Thus, the importance of drinking enough pure water to keep the tissues of the body supplied is at once apparent.

Water taken in great quantities and at long intervals is not so beneficial to you as small amounts taken at frequent intervals. Nor does the large amount you drink after exercising or when perspiring in hot weather repair the loss from "insensible perspiration," for at such times you only quench your thirst, which is a hurried demand of the drying cells for nutriment due to the unusual loss of water.

To keep in perfect health and to prevent the arteries from growing brittle in middle age, you should drink two or more glasses of pure, cool water every morning before eating breakfast. Between meals a glass or two should be taken. Do not wait for thirst, but try to keep the moisture of the body at a perfect balance.

Do not drink iced water at any time. Bad complexions and troublesome indigestion may often be traced to its habitual use.—Youth's Companion.

Avoiding Eye Strain.

Eye strain is said to be largely a defect of civilization. To counteract it children should be encouraged to use their eyes at long range and older persons should so train themselves.

A teacher who has a surprisingly small amount of eye strain among her pupils attributes it to her practice of having the scholars drop their work at the end of each hour and look out of the window. There is a contest over who sees furthest. This rests and trains eyes and teaches observation.

A woman who does fine sewing for her living found her eyes strained and weak. She was advised to drop her sewing every half hour and look for a minute into space. Relief was quick and the eye strain disappeared.

Near-sighted persons who hold their book or work close will ease eye strain and lengthen their vision if they frequently remove their glasses and look at some object on their furthest horizon.

This long distance training will not, however, relieve eye strain that comes from astigmatism, reckless disregard of the eyes or from glasses that do not suit the eyes.

HE KNEW WHAT WAS IN MAN

That Is Why Jesus of Nazareth Did Not Give Us Up —He Saw Below the Surface.

In all that you have learned within or without the schools, there is nothing more important than what you know or believe you know about human nature. You have been told many conflicting things. You have been told that men are on the whole very good, that they are friendly, generous, trustworthy, and that the joy of life lies in friendship and in co-operation with your fellows. You have been told that where men do fall short of what they should be they are teachable, that they can be reached and touched and changed and made right, and that the highest and happiest life work is in some way to make men better, and then to live and die compassed about by their gratitude.

On the other hand, you have heard an entirely different story. You have heard from many high sources that life is essentially tragic, that under all the shows of civilization and religion, life is war, as relentless as ever it was in the jungle, and that the hope of making society really better is forever an illusion. The honorable Brutus, it is said, the noblest Roman of them all, is never able to regenerate Rome. He comes at last to his Philippi and is slain by the corrupt society which he has sought to save. The generous Timon, they say, who lavishes his wealth upon those about him, always finds himself forsaken in his adversity, and can only turn upon mankind with rage and curses. Prince Hamlet, we are told, finds always that the

and can only cry, "How weary, flat, stale, and unprofitable seem to me all the uses of the world." According to this tragic view of life, Moses, the nation maker, who leads the people out of Egypt through the desert toward the Holy Land, is always stricken with despair, not by his enemies but by the perversity and treachery of his own people, and is always forced to cry to God as Moses did for death as an escape from his intolerable burden.

Now, in hearing and weighing these and other conflicting views as to what the truth is about human nature, it is surely worth while to hear and to weigh the view of Him of whom it was said, "He knew what was in man." What did He see in us?

For one thing, He saw the evil. No man hater ever saw it blacker. He knew that there is in man lust and murder and treachery and a covering of hypocrisy. He knew no philosophy with which to take these things lightly. They were to Him infinitely more dreadful than the lash or the crown of thorns. The worst of them was disloyalty—the disloyalty of his friends. "He came unto his own and his own received him not." He wept over Jerusalem and said: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets and stonest them that are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered your children together even as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not." He was betrayed by one of the twelve for money. On the last night they all forsook him and fled. And one of them, that night, three times denied that he knew his Master.

If ever a man was justified in turning with tragic hopelessness away from the human race, it was Jesus of Nazareth.

Why Did He Not Give Us Up?

The answer is, because He knew what was in man. Because underneath the man of lust and murder and treachery He saw another man who cannot be given up. He knew the passion of the prodigal, the passion which led him from his father's house into every iniquity; but he also knew that in the prodigal there was a deeper passion, which, if awakened, would lead him from among the swine back to the life where he belonged. He knew the disloyal cowardice of Peter, but He knew that below the cowardice and disloyalty there was a Peter who would stand like a rock in a storm. He looked out from His cross upon the jeering multitude, symbol of the vaster multitude who forever jeer and crucify the good, and there He performed His supreme miracle. He believed in them. He saw what was in them. He saw through the darkness and through the whirlwind of evil passion the real multitude, whose deepest law, whose deepest necessity is that they shall be loyal to each other and to their Father in heaven.

My children, believe this man. Life is as tragic as He saw it. Life is as terrible as you will know. You may fight as the tigers do until your turn comes to perish. You may curse with Timon. You may despair with Hamlet. Or, with Jesus of Nazareth, you may find a place within where there are neither curses nor despair nor war, but where there lives an unconquerable courage for every circumstance and for every task which can come to you before the going down of the sun. —Dr. William Lowe Byran.

The Call of the Home.

(By Gertrude Mercia Wheelock.)

The city charms with its pulse and throb,
Its surging and seething crowds;
And the heart is stirred by the measured beat
Of its turmoil long and loud;
The charm is there of a life that thrills,
With its throngs of young and old,
With its strife and stress for a higher place
In the markets of shimmering gold.

But the wind sings low at eventide
When the fret of the day is still,
And calls me away to the old farm home
Whose light shines over the hill.
In fancy's dream I am lulled to rest
By the sound of the woodland night;
And I catch a glimpse of the dear old rooms
With their halo of welcome light.

Oh, I weary much of the busy mart,
Of the quenchless thirst for gain,
Of looking on at the toil and tears
That are spent in the field of fame;
For its winding ways are fraught with woe,
And I shrink from the ceaseless glare,
From the crude harsh notes of its ruling tone
That bids for the chaff and tare.

And the wind sings low at eventide
When the fret of the day is still,
And calls me away to the old farm home
Whose light shines over the hill.
Like music sweet to my weary heart,
Come the tones I have loved the best;
And I follow fast where the fancy leads
To its haven of perfect rest.

Fashion Hints

Seen in Paris Shops.

Picot edged ribbons are in great demand by milliners.

Double faced cloths are much used for children's hats.

Designs of negligee sacques are practically the same as ever.

Rhinestones continue fashionable, especially on the evening gowns.

Novelty materials, rough and rich looking, are used for auto coats, and cut very loose or semi-fitted.

Large flat round bags are of velvet, plush, or fur to match the gown.

All black is received with much favor in furs, millinery, and costumes.

Striped designs are used in the newest furs, running in all directions.

There is a fancy edged taffeta ribbon with a drawing string to be had.

Velvet ribbon roses are also seen at the waist of a velvet or panne robe.

Linings of the new fur coats are the extreme of richness. Some are veiled.

Narrow lace flounces will be worn on the edges of cutaway draperies.

Magpie Shetland veils are liked as much as ever, but white are less wanted.

Mole leads among the new furs—in fact, gray furs generally are in demand.

White coats of polo cloth, zibeline, velour, and chinchilla are being ordered.

CHAPTER XXXIII.—(Cont'd)

Mr. Boniface was much of the same opinion when he noticed Frithiof later on in the day.

"Frithiof," said Mr. Boniface, "you have got one of your bad headaches."

"Yes," replied the Norwegian, candidly; "but it is not a disabling one. I shall get through all right."

"What plans have you made for your Whitsuntide holiday?"

"I don't think we had made any plan at all."

"Then I want you all to come away with us for a few days," said the shop-owner. "You look to me as if you wanted rest. Come to us for a week; I will arrange for your absence."

"You are very good," said Frithiof, warmly. "But indeed I would rather only take the general holiday of Saturday to Tuesday. I am not in the least ill, and would rather not take extra days when there is no need."

"Independent as ever!" said Mr. Boniface, with a smile. "Well, it must be as you like. We will see what the three days will do for you."

Where and how this holiday was to be spent only Mr. and Mrs. Boniface knew, and Cecil and Roy were as much astonished as any one when, at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon, a coach-and-four stopped at the gate of Rowan Tree House.

"What! are we to drive there?" asked Cecil. "Oh, father, how delightful! Will it be very far?"

"Yes, a long drive; so keep out plenty of wraps; in case the evening is chilly. We can tuck away the children inside if they get tired. Now, are we all ready? Then we will drive to the model lodgings."

So off they started, a very merry party, but still merrier when the three Norwegians had joined them, the girls, as usual, dressed in black, for economy's sake, but wearing very dainty little white sailor's hats, which Sigrid had sat up on the previous night to trim.

"I feel like the 'linen-draper bold,' in the ballad," said Mr. Boniface, with his hearty laugh. "But I have taken precautions, you see, against a similar catastrophe. We have had more than the 'twice ten tedious years' together, have we not, Loveday?"

"Yes," she said, with her sweet, expressive smile, "we are just beginning the twenty-seventh, Robin, and have had many holidays unlike Mr. and Mrs. Gilpin."

They were still like lovers, this husband and wife of twenty-six years' standing; and it was with a sort of consciousness that they would be happier if left to themselves that Frithiof, who sat between Mrs. Boniface and Cecil, turned toward the latter, and began to talk to her.

"This is a thousand times better than a cariole or a stolkjaerre," said Frithiof. "What a splendid pace we are going at, and how well you see the country! It is the perfection of traveling."

"So I think," said Cecil. "At any rate, on such a day as this. In rain, or snow, or burning heat, it might be rather trying. And then, of course, in the old days we should not have had it all snugly to ourselves like this; which makes such a difference."

On they drove, free of houses at last, or passing only isolated farms, little villages, and sleepy country towns. The trees were in all the exquisite beauty of early June, and the Norwegians, accustomed to less varied foliage, were enthusiastic in their admiration.

"If we can beat you in mountains, you can certainly beat us in trees!" cried Sigrid, her blue eyes bright with happiness.

At last, after a great deal of tea and bread and butter had been consumed, they mounted the coach again, leaving a sort of reflection of their happiness in the hearts of the people of the inn.

"There's merry-makers and merry-makers," remarked the landlord, glancing after them; "yon's the right sort, and no mistake."

And now Mr. Boniface began to enjoy to the full his surprise. How he laughed when they implored him to say where they were going! How triumphant he was when the driver, who was as deaf as a post, utterly declined to answer leading questions put to him by Roy!

"I believe we are going to Helmstone, or some great watering-place, where we shall have to be proper and wear gloves," said Cecil.

This was received with groans.

"But to get a sight of the sea one would put up with glove-wearing," said Sigrid. "And we could, at any rate, walk out into the country, I suppose, for flowers."

At length Frithiof started to his feet with an eager exclamation.

"The sea!" he cried.

And sure enough, there in the distance, was the first glimpse of a long blue line, which made the hearts of the Norwegians throb with eager delight.

"It seems like being at home again," said Swanhild, while Frithiof seemed to drink in new life as the fresh salt wind blew once more upon him, bringing back to his mind the memory of many a perilous adventure in his free, careless boyhood.

"A big watering-place," groaned Roy. "I told you so. Houses, churches, a parade, and a pier; I can see them all."

"Where? where?" cried every one, while Mr. Boniface laughed quietly and rubbed his hands.

"Over there, to the left," said Roy.

"You prophet of evil!" cried Cecil, merrily; "we are turning quite away to the right. "How did you hear of this delightful place, father?" cried Cecil; "it is just perfect."

"Well, I saw it when you and Roy were in Norway two summers ago," said Mr. Boniface. "Mother and I drove out here from Southbourne, and took such a fancy to this farm that, like Captain Cuttle, we made a note of it, and kept it for a surprise party."

Mr. Horner, in his suburban villa, was at that very moment lamenting his cousin's absurd extravagance.

"He was always wanting in common sense, poor fellow," observed Mrs. Horner. "But to hire a coach and four just to take into the country his own family and that criminal's children, and those precious Norwegians, who apparently think themselves on a level with the highest in the land—that beats everything! I suppose he'll be wanting to hire a palace for them next bank holiday!"

As a matter of fact, the farmhouse accommodation was rather limited, but no one cared about that. Though the rooms were small they had a most delicious smell of the country about them, and every one, moreover, was in a humor to be as much out-of-doors as possible.

To Roy those days were idyllic; and Sigrid, too, began to understand for the first time that he was something more to her than Frithiof's friend. The two were much together.

They sat down to rest in a little sheltered nook under the high chalk cliffs, and it was there that he poured out to her the confession of his love, being so completely carried away that for once words came readily to his lips, so that Sigrid was almost frightened by his eagerness. How different was this from Trovald Lundgren's proposal!

What was it that had made everything so bright to her since then? Was it not the goodness of the man beside her—the man who had saved her brother's life—who had brought them together once more—who now loved her and asked for her love?

When at last he paused, waiting for her reply, she was for a minute or two quite silent; still her face reassured Roy, and he was not without hope, so that the waiting-time was not intolerable to him.

"If it were only myself to be thought about," she said at length, "I might perhaps give you an answer more readily. But, you see, there are other people to be considered."

The admission she had made sent a throb of delight to Roy's heart. Once sure of her love he dreaded no obstacles.

"You are thinking of Frithiof," he said. "And of course I would never ask you to leave him; but there would be no need. If you could love me—if you will be my wife—you would be much freer than you now are to help him."

But of this she was not quite sure. All had come upon her so suddenly that she felt as if she must have time to think it out quietly before making a definite promise.

"Give me a fortnight," she said, "and then I will let you have my answer. It would not be fair to either of us if I spoke hastily when so much is at stake."

Roy could not complain of this suggestion; it was much that he was able at least to plead his own case with Sigrid, and in her frank, blue eyes there lurked something which told him that he need fear no more.

Meanwhile time sped on, and, unheeded by these two, the tide was coming in. They were so absorbed in their own affairs that it was not until a wave swept right into the little bay, leaving a foam wreath almost at their feet, that they realized their danger. With a quick exclamation, Roy started up.

"What have I been thinking of?" he cried, in dismay. "Why, we are cut off!"

Sigrid sprung forward and glanced at Britling Gap. It was too true. Return was absolutely impossible.

"We could never swim such a distance," she said. And turning, she glanced toward the steep white cliff above.

"And that, too, is utterly impossible," said Roy. "Our only hope is in some pleasure-boat passing. Stay, I have an idea."

Hastily opening his knife, he began to scoop out footholds in the chalk. He saw that their sole chance lay in making a standing-place out of reach of the water, and he worked with all his might, first securing a place for the feet, then, higher up, scooping holes for the hands to cling to; he spoke little; his mind was too full of a torturing sense of blame, a bitter indignation with himself for allowing his very love to blind him to such a danger.

In their terrible position all sense of time left them; they could not tell whether it was for minutes or for hours that they had clung to their frail refuge, when at length a shout from above reached their ears.

"Courage!" cried a voice. "A boat is coming to your help. Hold on!"

It was Frithiof who had first discovered them; the rest of the party, after seeing over the light-house, had wandered along the cliffs talking to an old sailor, and, Lance being seized with a desire to see over the edge, Frithiof had set Cecil's mind at rest by lying down with the little fellow, and holding him securely while he glanced down the sheer descent to the sea. A little further on, to the left, he suddenly perceived to his horror the two clinging figures, and at once recognized them. Dragging the child back, he sprung up and seized the old sailor's arm, interrupting a long-winded story to which Mr. Boniface was listening.

"There are two people down there, cut off by the tide," he said. "What is the quickest way to reach them?"

"Good Lord!" cried the old man; "why, there'll be naught quicker than a boat at Britling Gap, or ropes brought from there and let down."

"Tell them help is coming," said Frithiof. "I will row round."

At Britling Gap not a soul was in sight, and he dared not waste time in seeking help. The boat was in its usual place on the beach. He shoved it out to sea, sprung into it, paused only to fling off his coat, then with desperate energy pulled toward the place where Roy and Sigrid awaited their rescuer with fast-failing strength.

How his pulses throbbed when at length he caught sight of Sigrid's figure! and with what skill he guided his boat toward the cliff, shouting out encouragement and warning! The two were both so stiff and exhausted that it was no easy task to get them down into the boat, but he managed it somehow, and a glad cheer from above showed that the watchers were following their every movement with eager sympathy.

"Let us walk back quickly," said Mr. Boniface, "that we may be ready to meet them," and with an intensity of relief they hurried back to Britling Gap, arriving just in time to greet the three as they walked up the beach. Sigrid, though rather pale and exhausted, seemed little the worse for the adventure, and a glad color flooded her cheeks when Mr. Boniface turned to Frithiof and, grasping his hand, thanked him warmly for what he had done. Cecil said scarcely anything; she could hardly trust herself to speak, but her heart beat fast as, glancing at Frithiof, she saw on his face the bright look which made him once more like the Frithiof she had met long ago at Bergen.

Instead of "patching up" your house, repair for good with concrete
A FEW bags of "Canada" cement, some stone and sand and water, mixed and placed where needed, will make an old house look like new. What is more important, the improvements,—be they porch floor, foundations, steps, chimney-caps, or column-bases—are made to last. Time, wear and weather have no effect upon concrete, except to make it stronger.
Even if you have never used concrete, you can quickly learn how from our 160-page book,
"What the Farmer can do with Concrete"
Which we will send to you free upon request. It will show you how to build a concrete porch as well as how to use concrete for scores of other purposes around the home and on the farm.

"A chip of the old block" may be the reason for so many blockheads.

Few of us ever suffer from hoarseness when we are singing our own praises

Don't forget Miss Nash's concert in Opera House, on Oct. 18. It is really a first-class entertainment.

Ministers love to crack jokes about marriage, but there are dozens in the audience who think that marriage is no joke.

The 2-inch fall of the beautiful snow on Friday night is a reminder that we are now heading straight for the Merry Christmas.

As anticipated Hallowe'en passed off very quietly in Exeter. The dark and rainy night made even the harmless pranks too much trouble for the boys.

Magistrates Kay and Sanders on Wednesday afternoon of last week fined Mr. Carlin, a Hensall hotelkeeper, $40 and costs for selling liquor to an Exeter "lister."

A Local Option petition was presented to the clerk of the corporation of Exeter on October 31st, with the intention of having the vote taken at the time of the municipal election.

The new law in Ontario provides that in future when Division Court cases are to be tried before a jury the jurors must be selected from different municipalities over which the court has jurisdiction. The old law allowed the jurors to be selected from any one municipality.

Regarding plans for next year's potato crop, it will be advisable not to plant potatoes where this year's crop was grown. Diseased tubers may have been overlooked and remain to further contaminate the soil, and should next season be wet in the early months your crop will be in jeopardy. It will also be advisable to thoroughly clean up the tops and rotten tubers remaining on the field and burn them.

Correspondence between the Boards of Trade of Goderich and Clinton has resulted in an agreement to call a conference meeting in Clinton at an early date to discuss the question of a Publicity Campaign for the County of Huron. In addition to representatives of the different Boards of Trade in the County the Municipal Councils of townships, villages and towns will be asked to send representatives so that both rural and urban municipalities with their different interests, will be in a position to state their views on the question of how best to meet the changing conditions of the county, in both agriculture and manufacturing. We trust that the Council of Exeter and those of the surrounding municipalities will see their way clear to do their part to helping along the good work of setting before the world the great possibilities of this great county. We must recognize that Huron has decreased greatly in its population in the last few years, and it is time something was being down to improve matters.

BOARD OF HEALTH.—The Board of Public Health met on Oct. 30th, for organization. The Board consists of Dr. Quackenbush, Medical Health Officer; H. E. Huston, Chairman; W. J. Heaman, Reeve. Sometime was devoted to a discussion of the imperative necessity of cleanliness in the back yards and privies, cleanliness in the dairy stables slaughter houses, etc. The clerk, T. B. Carling, was instructed to write the Provincial Health Department for copies of the law as to the duties and powers of the Board. It is a good time now to clean up back yards. "Do it now" is a good maxim. Nobody wants to be pulled up for being dirty or having dirty premises. Get ready to do warfare with the common house fly (typhoid fly) next spring. Adjourned to the call of the chair.—H. E. Huston, chairman.

SCHOOL AT HOME.—Under the auspices of the boys and girls of the Exeter High School Department an "At Home" was given in the school rooms on Friday evening last, when besides the students a large number of invited guests were present and a most enjoyable time was spent. The rooms were gaily decorated with bunting, flags, Japanese and pumpkin lanterns and blackboard drawings appropriate to Hallowe'en. A pleasing program was given by the teachers and scholars, presided over by the principal, Mr. W. B. Weidenhammer. The program consisted of the chairman's address, a school chorus, piano solo by Howard Quackenbush, recitations by Willie Manson and Miss Edmunds, trio by Misses Lillian Boyle, Mary Acheson and Madeline Carling, a solo by Maurice Senior, violin solo by Melville Gladman, a chorus by ten boys, and addresses by Revs. McAllister, Sharp and Collins. At the conclusion of the program a delightful tea was served, after which all enjoyed a series of promenades. The "At Home" this year took the place of the regular Field Day Sports.

S. S ASSOCIATION CONVENTION.—The forty-seventh convention of the Provincial Sunday School Association was held in Hamilton from Oct. 21 to the 24. Over one-thousand delegates were present, it being the largest convention in the history of the association. A proposal was made to have dual conventions in 1913 and 1914. The convention for 1915, being as it is the Semi-centennial, will, no doubt, be a large single convention, and will possibly be held in Toronto Leading Sunday School workers from all parts of the province were in attendance. The visitors from the United States, who took part in addressing the convention, were, Mrs. M. J. Baldwin, Philadelphia, Rev. W. H. Kellogg, D. D., Columbus, Ohio, and Rev. W. A. Brown, B. D., Chicago. Prof. E. O. Excell of Chicago was in charge of the music. The music book used was Coronation Songs. One of his favorite pieces was the "Little Brown Church in the Vale." The playing of Prof. Alvin Roper, planist, Winona Lake, Ind., was a treat of a life time. It is quite pleasing to know that South Huron ranks among the banner counties of this province in S. S. standard. This result has been largely brought about by the energy of our Mr. W G Medd of Winchelsea.

Owing to the menace of a coal famine and industrial paralysis in parts of the United States an investigation has been made and shows that many of the great institutions are practically out of fuel, and that if not immediately remedied many people will have cold feet.

We have been creditably informed that a party of shooters in Biddulph on Thanksgiving Day killed upwards of half a grain bag of squirrels. That a slaughter of this kind should take place and the offenders go unpunished seems to be an extreme looseness in bringing offenders to justice. Here is a chance for a gamewarden to get busy.

Dr. Tamlin, inspector of dairy herds, in an address at London last week, said,—"There are more people killed by impure milk than by liquor. Death by impure milk is not as spectacular as by train or violence, and hence there is not so much attention paid to it, but in my opinion it is the cause of many deaths. The principal ones to suffer are the children, and death comes in the form of fevers, tuberculosis, etc. At the time the disease is probably attributed to other causes but in many instances milk is the real cause."

MORE BERRIES.—A whole handful of raspberry stems, literally heavy with berries was handed to us on Thursday by Mr. H. M. Dignan. If our climate changes much more we may look for a full second crop of this fruit soon.

SMITH VS. TORONTO FAIR.—The divisional court at Toronto on Monday heard the case of Smith vs. Canadian National Exhibition W. C. Chisholm, K. C., for defendants; J. M. McEvoy, London, for plaintiff. An appeal for defendants from the County Court of Middlesex of June 14, 1912. An action by plaintiff for $500 damage for expense he was put to in shipping his cattle to the exhibition, and then having to re-ship them home, because no accommodation had been provided for them by defendants, and for being allowed to exhibit them. At the trial judgment was awarded plaintiff for $500 damages. Appeal argued and dismissed with costs. The plaintiff in this case is Mr. H. Smith of the Lake Road, Hay Township, who in 1911 shipped his cattle to Toronto and they did not provide him with stabling. He entered suit and as appears by above he won, and also won in the appeal.

WEDDED.—A quiet and pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents on Thursday morning, October 31st, at 8 o'clock, when Miss Venetta Frayne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Peter Frayne of Andrew Street, became the bride of Mr. Asa Penhale, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Penhale of Huron Street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Jas. Kestle, uncle of the groom, in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Penhale took the morning train for a short trip to Brantford and Toronto, the bride wearing a handsome suit of navy blue with large black hat. On their return they will reside immediately west of town. The young couple are both popular and have the congratulations and the best wishes of their many friends.

HICKS' NOVEMBER FORECASTS.—A reactionary storm period falling on the 6th, 7th and 8th, with new moon on the 8th, threatening weather will continue over from the 55th bringing a return of falling barometer, change to warmer and increasing storms of rain and wind on and touching the 8th and 9th. These storms will end in dashes of snow and change to very much colder about the 9th, 10th and 11th. From the 5th to the 11th, central on the 8th, general seismic unrest will be very natural and probable. A regular storm period involves the 11th to the 16th, being central on the 13th. At this period the moon will be in extreme south declination and atmospheric tides will flow from northerly directions, increasing the probability of cold rains and winds, added to snow and sleet over northern parts of the country. The Mercury and Venus periods will both be felt in the disturbances of this period, and to the end of the month. Storms of this period will culminate on the 18th and following days first west and progressing eastward. High barometer and change to westerly winds and much colder will push the western flanks of the storm centre all the way to the Atlantic.

EXETER COUNCIL

Members all present. Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

A communication was read from Messrs. Dickson & Carling re Mr. John Taylor's drain on the corner of Victoria Albert and Wellington streets, stating "unless, gentlemen, some effort is made on your part at once to abate the nuisance, we are instructed to take such action against the Municipal Corporation of the Village of Exeter, as we deem necessary for the recovery of damages for this continual overflowing of Mr. Taylor's premises, and for a mandamus compelling the said corporation to abate such nuisance". The council agreed to meet Mr. Taylor and take the matter up with him.

A communication was read from Mr. John Ransford, president Clinton Board of Trade, re- the County of Huron's decreasing population and the calling of a meeting to be held in the Town Hall, Clinton, on Thursday, Nov. 21 at 1 p.m. to take into consideration the advisability of advertising the County of Huron, and in that way endeavor to direct a part of the stream of immigration and consequent wealth that is pouring into Canada to-day into our own County. Levett—Rivers—That the Reeve and as many of the Council who can, attend said meeting.—Carried.

"Sour Grapes"

In the Times last week we note a senseless tirade on the Canning Co'y, and The Advocate, growing out of the fact that their legal writer has taken exception to the truth as told by us, in regard to the judgments of the recent law-suit, Canning Co. vs. Bissett.

If we were possessed of the warped mind that stoops to the twisting of phrases, to the coining of meaningless words, to the self-puffery, and to the hypocritical posing; if we cared to stoop to the level of these things, if we desired to go back over the evidence, if we wished to resort to the jumbling of words in a senseless manner; if we fancied the style of the legal writer who adopts the school-boy method of talking of matter foreign to the point in question; if we cared to adopt the style of language which says "your another liar"; if we cared a single iota for the opinion of the legal puffers, as compared with evidence and judgment of witness and judge; if all their jumbled rigmarole and guesswork mattered in the least, we might write a half column of so of fanciful stuff to tickle the eye and ear of those who care for that kind of nonsense; we might, as he has done, befog the minds of the public as to the actual nature of the judgments in question, we could give some marvellous guesses as to the matter of costs.

But, since we do not stoop to our friend's level in that regard, nor do we wish to drift from the little matter of "Who wins", suffice it to say that our previous statements of what the judgments mean were the same, only differently worded, and we stand on the same ground now. The Canning Co'y claimed the straw was not a nuisance, the judge and jurymen sustained the claim and awarded damages, and the court of appeal re-affirms the judgment in that regard. The Company was given damages and costs—one judge said the defendent should pay the costs on the county court scale, the other judges said the defendent should pay the costs on the division court scale. Isn't that correct? Our learned friends would surely acknowledge that, then they must acknowledge that the Canning Company won the case. Isn't that sufficient?

The matter of who pays the difference in the two court cost scales has no bearing on "Who wins the case."

If a man chooses to go to London from Exeter by way of Clinton and Stratford, instead of by the direct route it comes a little costlier, but he gets there just the same. By taking the case to Goderich it will cost the plaintiff only the excess of the county court scale over the division court scale, as we have repeatedly said. Now if those costs are greater that the other costs then will the company have to pay more than the defendent in costs; and if the matter is the other way around the defendent will pay the bulk of the cost. This we have stated before.

But, the proportionate amount of the costs that each will pay has not yet been settled. As we have also said before, that is a matter that the lawyers have yet to jangle over. But, no, our friend thinks he knows all about it—and has it already settled—in his own mind. Why try to tell the public a lot of balderdash about what it is going to be? If all people were as wise as he there would be no need of lawsuits, or lawyers, or judges, who so often disagree.

What we took exception to in the legal puffery bureau's first article was the statement told by the "knowing one" that the defendent won the case and that the company was ordered to pay the costs on the county court scale. All of which is purely and simply false. Last week they went further and said that the plaintiffs "have been ordered to pay all their opponent's solicitor's expenses." And that is also false. Is that plain enough?

By trying to twit the Canning Co. and The Advocate with their supposed display of borrowed wealth our friend is not just as discreet as he might be. We never noticed a display. We never knew the company to be rich, and we never felt that way ourselves. In fact, we are only sorry we are not rich. But, in order to become rich we never did lead the innocent shareholders of a good institution, that was a help to the town, and on a paying basis, into selling their stock at 75 cents on the dollar, that we might get a rake-off on the sales and increase our bank account, and incidentally, or otherwise attempt to secure revenge for a fancied wrong, and then chuckle in the newspaper over the thought that we had beaten out those who afterwards secured the control of the institution, and saved an industry to the town because they had faith in the business.

Oh, no, the whole trouble with our friend is that he is suffering from the disease known as "sour grapes."

Miss Minnie Triebner, daughter of Mr. Frank Triebner of Stephen, was taken suddenly ill of hemorrhage while in town shopping at Mr. J. A. Stewart's store on Saturday last, and it was at first thought that the attack might prove fatal. A physician was immediately called and after being removed to the home of Mrs. Quance the patient showed signs of improvement, and on Monday was taken to her home, and is now making rapid progress to recovery.

On Sunday last a valuable cow belonging to Mr. Wm. Sweet, London Road South, became choked with a potato. Dr. Sweet was called and all possible means were resorted to to dislodge the obstruction, but without avail when it was deemed advisable to operate. An incision was made in her throat and the potato was carved into small pieces until the whole of it was removed. By this means the cow's life was saved and she now seems to be out of all danger.

STEPHEN WEDDING

Fahner—Triebner.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Triebner of the 4th concession of Stephen was the scene of a joyous and happy event yesterday (Wednesday) afternoon when his second daughter, Minnie, became the bride of Mr. Albert Fahner, a prosperous young farmer of the same township. About sixty guests were present from Detroit and different parts of Michigan London, Toronto and elsewhere, gathered to witness the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. C. W. Sanders, B. A., rector of Brantford, and cousin of the bride. At four o'clock in the afternoon the bridal couple took their place beneath a graceful arch of evergreens and other beautiful decorations, when the mystic words that made them man and wife were spoken. The bride's gown was particularly beautiful, being made of white silk, trimmed with sequence and shadow lace over satin, while her sister, Miss Julia Triebner, looked charming in a dress of silk Santoy, trimmed with all-over lace and bead trimming. The groom was assisted by Mr. Fred Penhale of Toronto, formerly of Exeter, The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome cheque, while that to the bridesmaid was a pretty brooch, and a pearl tie pin to the groomsman. The ceremony over and congratulations extended a dainty wedding supper was served. The evening was afterwards spent in chat and social amusements. The gifts to the bride formed a magnificent array, comprising articles of use, beauty and value. Owing to the indisposed condition of the bride the honeymoon trip has been postponed to some future time. The young couple will have the best wishes of a host of friends for a long and happy wedded life.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Residence at Oxford will doubtless be rendered more agreeable to the republican leanings of the Rhodes scholars by the presence there this term of the Prince of Wales. The education of a future king being a concern of the greatest moment to the entire empire, the terms on which the prince will mingle with his fellow students are discussed by the British press with impressive fullness.

King George is establishing a precedent in sending the crown prince to Oxford. It is true that King Edward was an Oxford man, but he was plentifully surrounded by "the divinity that doth hedge a king." He occupied a separate house and attended no college lectures. Far otherwise will the young prince prepare himself for the business of ruling. He will occupy college rooms, dine with the undergraduates and mix with them freely in their sports.

As we read of the studies outlined for the young prince we see that even at college the lot of a future king is not a happy one. The deficiencies of his early training in the classics will debar him from the "honor school" of his university, and he will devote most of his time to modern studies, history, etc. If he should happen to have any taste for those classical studies which have made Oxford famous for generations, he may even find himself envying the freedom of choice allowed the Rhodes scholars.

Russia, it is announced, will abolish the Siberian exile system. There can be no doubt that the use of Siberia as a dumping ground for political offenders has created a mistaken idea in western minds of the severity of Russian justice. Observers assure us, however, that in the administration of criminal law in the czar's country there is an inexplicable mingling of brutality and kindliness.

That the taking of human life is obnoxious to the Russian nature is shown by the fact that capital punishment, except for political offenses, has been in abeyance since the middle of the eighteenth century. A murderer whose crime is non-political may escape with a few years at hard labor, and in the penal colonies to which he is sent he enjoys much greater freedom than he would in western prisons. In fact, M. Leroy-Beaulieu affirms that the Russian penal code is the most lenient in Europe.

The severity which is withheld in dealing with criminals of even the lowest type is mercilessly visited upon the political offender, and that is the outstanding fact in the administration of justice in Russia. It is a phenomenon easily explained by the backward political condition of the country.

AN OLD-TIME PROPHECY.

Has Come True in Nearly Every Instance.

Much has been heard of prophecies within the past few years, and old Moore's Almanac has been credited with predicting many of the big catastrophies during that time. True, old Moore predicted the wreck of the Titanic, the death of two reigning sovereigns, and the present Balkan crisis, but surely none of these things can be classed as prophetic with one first published in 1488, and later republished in 1641.

It was called the "Mother Shipton's Prophecy," and it will be noticed that all the events predicted in it, except that mentioned in the last two lines, have already come to pass:—

Carriages without horses shall go,
And accidents fill the world with woe,
Around the world thoughts shall fly
In the twinkling of an eye.
Waters shall yet more wonders do;
Now strange, but shall be true.
The world upside down shall be,
And gold be found at root of tree.
Through hills men shall ride,
And no horse or ass be at his side.
Under water men shall walk,
Shall ride, shall sleep, shall talk.
In the air men shall be seen
In white, in black, in green.
Iron in the water shall float
As easy as a wooden boat.
Gold shall be found and found
In a land that's not yet known,
Fire and water shall wonders do,
England shall at last admit a Jew.
The world to an end shall come
In eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

Vegetable and Cream Salads.

It is, of course, needless to mention that lettuce and cress should be carefully washed in two waters, the water salted to kill stray insects, and shaken dry in a towel. The salads, except the potato, should not be mixed until just before serving. All should be served as cold as possible. A small pitcher of the dressing should be sent to the table, as some like more than others.

Cream salad dressing is as delicious as it is easy to make. The following quantities may be doubled for a family, as, in a stoppered bottle in a cool place, it will keep for weeks. One-quarter tablespoon salt, half-tablespoon mustard (dry), quarter tablespoonful sugar, one egg, slightly beaten (white and yolk together), 2½ tablespoons melted butter, three-quarters cup cream or milk, quarter cup vinegar. Mix ingredients in the order given, adding the vinegar very slowly. Cook in an earthen or enamelled saucepan over boiling water (stirring constantly) until the mixture thickens. Properly made, it should not need straining. The dressing made, combinations of vegetables, vegetables and meats, and meats and fruits in season are legion. The following are merely a few suggestions that will be varied by every housewife who attempts to carry one out.

Potato Salad.—Cut in cubes or mash with a fork cold boiled potatoes, toss them in a few spoonfuls of the dressing, pile lightly with a fork on a bed of crisp lettuce or cress, or both, decorate the top with slices of hard-boiled egg, cucumber, carrot, shreds of olive interspersed with spoonfuls of the dressing, and finish with a tuft of heart lettuce leaves or a sprinkle of young cress.

Bean or Pea Salad.—Use cold green beans or peas, or both, or a can of baked beans, mixed with cut celery and salad dressing and decorated after the fashion of the potato salad. Celery cut in small pieces may be mixed with the beans or potatoes.

Tomato Salad.—Wipe and cut a slice off the tops of medium-sized tomatoes; scoop out the inside and mix with equal quantities of cold beef, lamb, veal, chicken or turkey, and some celery cut fine; mix all with a few spoonfuls of dressing, fill the "baskets" high, lay on the "cover" with a slab of dressing and a spring of parsley, and serve each on a crisp lettuce leaf, either on a platter or on individual plates.

Fruit salads are in particular demand in the "dog days"; bananas, apples, pears for a foundation, with or without celery, according to taste. Lay in your salad bowl a bed of heart lettuce leaves, heap your fruit, previously mixed with some of the dressing, in the centre, decorate with spoonfuls of dressing and the heart lettuce leaves, and sprinkle over a handful of coarsely broken walnuts.

Banana Salad.—Sliced bananas and apples in equal quantities could be decorated with spoonfuls of dressing and handsome bunches of white and red currants, or with cherries stoned and the holes filled with a hazel-nut kernel.

Dainty Dishes.

Ham Toast.—Mix with four tablespoonfuls of finely chopped ham the beaten yolks of two eggs and a little milk. Heat over the fire without boiling. Spread on thin buttered toast.

Minced Pancakes. — Take any good pancake mixture, bake a nice brown, taking care that the pancakes are of uniform size and shape. Spread each cake with finely minced and creamed lamb, roll and serve with a brown gravy.

Lamb Timbales.—Six cups of finely chopped cooked lamb, left from Wednesday; two cups of fresh bread boiled in four cups of milk; yolks of four eggs, two teaspoonfuls of salt, three-quarters of a teaspoonful of pepper, beaten whites of four eggs. Bake in greased molds in a pan of boiling water, covered with greased paper. Serve with tomato sauce.

Chestnut Soup.—Peel and blanch one-half pound of chestnuts; cut in pieces. Add one quart of water, one onion and a half cupful of rice, a little butter and seasoning. When the chestnuts are tender, mash and put through a sieve. Before serving add one cupful of cooked macaroni, broken in half-inch pieces, and one-half cupful of grated cheese. Serve toasted crackers with this.

Chicken a la King.—Cut the fowl into neat pieces and chop very fine a tiny onion. Heat a cupful of milk in a saucepan, adding a pinch of soda to prevent curdling, and stir into this the onion and chicken meat. As soon as it bubbles, stir in the beaten yolk of an egg and set the saucepan in a pan of boiling water for three minutes, stirring from the bottom several times. Season with a teaspoonful of minced parsley, salt and paprika to your taste.

Arrowroot Pudding.—One heaping teaspoonful of arrowroot, one cupful of milk, one teaspoonful of sugar, a little grated nutmeg. Put the arrowroot into a basin, mix with a tablespoonful of the milk, put the remainder of milk in a saucepan and boil up, stir the mixed arrowroot into the boiling milk, add the sugar and stir over the fire until it thickens. Pour into a buttered baking dish. Bake for fifteen minutes in a hot oven. A nicely browned meringue on top greatly improves it.

Brown and White Sandwiches.—Boston brown bread, white bread, creamed butter, chopped olives, celery salt, red peppers. Season the butter with a bit of celery salt, finely chopped red peppers and olives, work to a paste. Cut the brown and white bread into thin, even slices, and trim off the crusts until the pieces of bread are of the same size; then spread on the butter. Place the slices alternately, first a white and then a brown slice, until you have five layers. Press these down firmly but evenly and with a sharp knife cut down slices about half an inch thick.

Stuffed Onions on Toast.—Peel three or four large white onions; boil until tender, taking care to keep them whole. Remove the inside portion, leaving a cup-shaped shell. Take the centers, chop them, and add to them one cupful of finely chopped ham and some cold boiled rice, the yolk of one egg and milk enough to form a thick paste. Fill the onion cups with this mixture, sprinkle with grated cheese and bake till a light brown. Have ready some nicely toasted rounds of bread, place an onion on each piece of toast, and serve with a cream sauce.

Tips to Housewives.

All vegetables except potatoes should be cooked in uncovered dishes. If cabbage is rather strong and loses color it is because it has been put on in cold water, or the kettle has been covered.

To keep white enamelware from discoloring, make a strong solution of baking soda and rainwater and put the utensils in it and boil them hard. They will be as white as when new.

Mayonnaise dressing will separate when too much salt has been added to the egg yolks, or when the oil has been dropped too fast or if the ingredients are not thoroughly chilled when used.

To Wash Feather Pillows.—Fill your tubs with hot soda and plunge the pillows one at a time into this. Souse them up and down and scrub with a stiff brush. Then rinse in clean warm water and hang upon the line in hot sunshine. As the ticks dry, beat and shake the feathers violently up and down and over and over, grabbing the tick with both hands and separating the bunches of feathers you feel inside. Do this again and again, hanging on the line in a different position after each shaking and separating. By the time the feathers are dry they will be light and fluffy, and if they were a little musty at first they will be sweet and nice when you have done with them.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, NOVEMBER 17.

Lesson VII.—The great question, Mark 8. 27 to 9. 1. Golden text, Matt. 16. 16.

MARK 8. 27-38.

Verse 27. Caesarea Philippi—The most northerly point reached by Jesus so far as recorded in the gospel narrative. A Roman city, beautifully situated on a rocky terrace on the slopes of Mount Hermon, a few miles east of Dan, the old frontier city of Israel. Named after Herod Philip, and to be carefully distinguished from Caesarea on the Mediterranean coast.

Who do men say that I am?—Many ancient authorities read, Who do men say that I, the Son of man, am? (Compare Matthew 16. 13; Luke 9. 18.)

28. They told him—In response to his inquiry concerning public opinion regarding himself, they report the various conjectures of different people. In each case he is regarded as an extraordinary person, but not as the Messiah.

John the Baptist—Even Herod looked upon Jesus as a reincarnation of the martyred prophet of righteousness. His opinion seems to have been shared by others.

Elijah—The famous prophet of the northern kingdom in the time of Ahab. (Compare 1 Kings 17. 1 to 2 Kings 2. 12.)

One of the prophets—Matthew's account names Jeremiah (Matt. 16. 14).

29. Who say ye?—Jesus desires their personal estimate in order that he may in turn use this as a point of departure for further teaching them concerning himself.

Peter answereth—The ever-ready spokesman of the apostolic group.

The Christ—Literally, the anointed one, that is, the Messiah.

30. They should tell no man—The charge to secrecy is very positive.

31. Began to teach—Peter doubtless had expressed the belief of all of the disciples, and with this common verdict of his followers concerning himself clearly expressed and mutually understood, Jesus enters upon a new epoch of further teaching concerning his mission as the Son of man. The added element of his teaching concerns especially his approaching death.

Elders . . . . chief priests . . . . scribes—All represented in, if not actually members of, the Sanhedrin, the highest ecclesiastical court in Jerusalem. They were the recognized religious leaders of the people.

After three days—Matthew says "the third day" (16. 21). The two expressions, however, mean the same thing, as is shown by Matt. 27. 64.

32. Openly—Plainly and in the presence of all. Heretofore Jesus had spoken concerning these things only with reserve and in figurative language. (Compare John 2. 19; 3. 12-16; Matt. 9. 15; Mark 2. 20.)

Took him—Perhaps by the arm in order to lead him aside and speak with him alone. The thought of humiliation and suffering associated with him whom he had just confessed to be the Christ was inconceivable to Peter, and the fact that Jesus should speak of it publicly and with such calmness and resignation was more than he could bear. Therefore he would remonstrate with him in private.

To rebuke him—Peter's words of remonstrance are given by Matthew: "Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall never be unto thee" (16. 22).

33. Turning about—Jesus turns sharply round and faces Peter before addressing him. Then, seeing his disciples, he administers the stronger rebuke, addressing Peter as their spokesman as well as individually.

Get thee behind me, Satan — Jesus had used precisely the same words at the time of his temptation (Matt. 4. 10; Luke 4. 8). The suggestion of Peter brought to Jesus a renewal of the temptation to follow a worldly course of temporal advantage rather than the clearly apprehended pathway of duty.

Thou mindest not—Thou art not considering.

34. And he called unto him the multitude with his disciples—The remaining verses of our lesson passage constitute a separate unit of thought. They contain the declaration of Jesus concerning self-denial, even unto death, as the condition of discipleship and the secret of the way to life eternal. The multitude referred to were the crowds of curious spectators and listeners which gathered about him even in these remote parts.

Deny himself—In rigid self-discipline refuse to yield to the passive demand of impulse and preference.

Take up his cross—Jesus is speaking in symbols. The figure he uses is one familiar to his hearers, it being customary in connection with the Roman method of capital punishment by crucifixion to require the condemned person to carry his own cross to the place of execution. The use of this figure at this time was intended to foreshadow the manner of his coming death.

35. Life—Or, soul. New Testament usage makes a distinction between the Greek word "psyche," soul, the word here used, and the word "pneuma," usually rendered spirit. Soul is the term used to designate conscious personal physical life. Spirit designates the life coming from God.

36. Gain the whole world—The contrast passes from the saving and losing of life to the possible gain for the life forfeited. The term "world" is used in its ordinary sense, referring to the material, visible order of things.

38. When he cometh in the glory of his Father—The New Testament speaks of a "coming" or "presence" of Christ, which it describes as an objective event of the future, a visible return of Christ, and the establishment of the kingdom of God in its final completeness and glory, following a general resurrection of the dead and the last judgment.

MARK 9. 1.

Taste of death—Experience it. The announcement here recorded is given in all three synoptic accounts. The account of Luke is the most simple, he saying merely, "Till they see the kingdom of God." All that we can insist upon as included in the meaning of the words of Jesus is that some of those whom he addressed were in their lifetime to see the coming of the kingdom of God in power. The further interpretation of his words must be made in the light of the events which actually did subsequently occur.

INSPIRATION FOR SERVICE

Faith Will Remove Many Obstacles, Even Supposedly Insuperable Mountains.

Faith is a favorite word with Jesus. He used it a good deal, and He not only used the word, but He possessed an immense amount of it. His power came largely through His faith. He believed in himself thoroughly and in His Father absolutely. He never hesitates, he never doubts; His faith is supreme and sublime.

Humanity is weak on account of the lack of faith. Jesus complained of the lack of faith in His disciples; He could and would complain of the same lack in His Church to-day. His followers in general lack faith. They are weak-kneed on account of the lack of faith. What might not be accomplished if the men and women in the churches only had some of the Master's faith! You would no longer hear expressions so often heard like this one, "You cannot do this or that," or "You cannot remove this or that evil, and so cover it up."

That is the saying of the doubter, of the pagan,

Not of the Real Christian.

True Christianity is all conquering, it knows no "I cannot" or "You cannot." The effects of faith are wonderful, stupendous. The man or woman of real faith is practically omnipotent.

Real success is doing things against odds and difficulties, and the greater the obstacles overcome the greater the success.

The Church as a whole, I say, is weak to-day on account of the lack of faith. It may sing:—

"Faith, faith is the victory,
O glorious victory, that overcomes the world."

but it really does not know what an all conquering, overcoming faith is. It knows it only by hearsay.

Don't make faith something mysterious. It is not. It is simply belief in yourself, in your work, in God's work, in Christ's purpose to establish the Kingdom of God on earth, in Christ and in God himself. Our strength is in proportion to our faith. To the true and complete faith nothing is impossible, because it reflects the almightiness of God. The power of faith simply cannot be measured, but there are many "religious" people who do not realize this. They may have much "religion," but no faith. They may have Much Creed, But No Faith.

They do not really and actively trust God.

When there is no sap in the tree the leaves and branches and twigs must wither. Faith is the sap in human activity.

The great question with us all is not, How many things do we believe? but, How firm and how much faith have we? How much belief in ourselves, our work, God's work, our leader, Christ, and our God?

Faith is the great inspiration for service. The man or woman of faith is the man or woman of action. He or she has within a fountain of energy. Have we this living, real faith? If we haven't, let us by all means get it and get it quickly. It will enable us as individuals and as a church to do great things, things that cannot be accomplished without it.

God help us all to acquire this faith and be real followers of the Jesus who was full of such faith and who ever rebuked those who lacked this great source of power in accomplishing grand results.—Rev. William Milton Hess.

HEALTH

Nervous Prostration.

Nervous prostration is a more or less complete collapse of the nervous system; it occurs when the sufferer has urged himself beyond the limit of his nervous endurance. It is most common in early or middle life, when the nervous system is most constantly taxed. When it occurs in the very young, excessive work at school is usually the cause. When it comes on later in life, it is because the struggle for existence is proving too severe.

The breakdown is not always caused by actual overwork; sometimes it means, in old-fashioned phrase, that "the candle is being burned at both ends." Only very strong people can work hard and keep late hours as well. The man of average physical powers must make up his mind to devote himself to his work, and get his recreation in healthful occupations outdoors. As a means of rest and amusement for the tired business or professional man nothing is better than a quiet game of golf—not taken too seriously.

Nervous prostration does not declare itself without warning. There are many danger-signals. It may be no longer possible to accomplish the usual quantity or quality of work, because of impaired memory or loss of the power of concentration; peevish irritability and a tendency to constant fault-finding may appear in a person formerly equable and serene; headaches may return each day at about the same time—that is to say, as soon as a certain degree of fatigue is reached; there may be nervous indigestion, and the simplest food may cause distress. In some cases the mental depression is so great that a strong man, at the least provocation, will burst into tears like a girl.

Most cases of nervous prostration could have been prevented if taken in time. The ordinary man is intelligent enough to recognize in himself the many signs of overstrain, and there are few so driven by circumstance that they cannot, if they choose, relax a little ,and evade the coming trouble. If another hour is added to the night's sleep, another mile added to the daily walk, an occasional day deliberately taken for complete rest, an interesting hobby taken up, the habit of worry firmly checked, the nervous system will quickly right itself. Worry is the greatest spendthrift of nervous force; we should all learn to be as obstinate about not worrying as we often are about worrying unnecessarily.—Youth's Companion.

SURPRISING STATISTICS.

Great Britain Grows Over Half Her Food at Home.

R. H. Rew, C.B., assistant secretary to the British Board of Agriculture, has issued in the agricultural statistics of the Board of Agriculture a report respecting food supplies.

Nothing perhaps will more surprise the average Englishman than this report. The man in the street is convinced that the great mass of the nation's food is imported. It is a perfectly common estimate to hear the home-grown quantity put down at one-fifth. Mr. Rew's report shows that, in reality, it is upwards of one-half and that, in value, the home-grown produce is no less than £14,000,000 more than the value of the imports. This is a revelation which will cause considerable enlightenment to the ordinary man in connection with the question of food imports in war time.

The chief sources of wheat imports will also be a matter of surprise to many people. It is popularly imagined that Canada supplies the bulk of the imported grain and that the United States is a close second while next to none is grown at home. As a matter of fact, the greatest individual supply is the home-grown crop and after this comes India, with Canada third and Australia and Argentina not very far behind.

Perhaps the most remarkable thing about these figures is that the home-grown supply has risen slightly on an average for the last septennial period and that while there has been a small increase in the Canadian imports and a large increase in the Indian and Australian imports, there has been a correspondingly large decrease in the imports of the United States, the actual figures being as follows:

Country	1911	1907
United Kingdom	20.7	19.1
Australia	10.3	7.5
Canada	13.4	13.1
India	14.3	10.5
Other Bri. Possessions.	0.5	0.3
Argentina	10.5	14.8
Roumania	1.5	1.1
Russia	12.8	11.6
United States	14.2	19.4
Other countries	1.8	2.6

If a quart fruit jar is slipped over the outlet of the grinder as far as possible and held there while grinding with the other hand, all crumbs will be caught, instead of a lot of them flying around the room, causing unnecessary disorder.

WRECK OF ROYAL GEORGE

A Passenger Describes It and Tells of The Sudden Orders That Came Too Late.

A despatch from Quebec says: We picked up the pilot off Father Point on Wednesday, says a passenger on the Royal George. Quarantine and medical men arrived about four o'clock, and then the passengers went below to finish preparations for disembarking. A slight haze hung over the river, but lights were plainly visible and full speed was maintained. We had one of the oldest pilots on board, and no one thought of danger. Suddenly those on the upper deck heard a sharp cry: "Hard a-port," from one voice, and in the same breath, "Hard astern" from the pilot. A sudden check, followed by a wrenching, grinding, bumping motion, told of the futility of both orders. The Royal George was hard and fast on the rocks of the Isle of Orleans, about eight miles below Quebec, apparently held from stem to stern.

The reversed engines made no impression. There was no shadow of disorder or confusion on board. The officers went about their duties quietly, and it was difficult to believe that a shipwreck had occurred. Unquestionably the pilot must have mistaken a bright light on the Island for one of his lights and simply laid the ship's bow on across the Rocks. The boats were swung outside as a precautionary measure, and then the order came to prepare to transfer to tugs.

Fearful of Listing.

The tide was at full when she struck. As it began to recede there was possibility of serious listing and a possible catastrophe. In view of this danger and the rapidly receding tide, the coming of the tugs seemed long delayed. Finally about 10 p.m., the old ferryboat North came alongside. But the tide was out, and she could not transfer. About midnight she stood by and about half the passengers were placed on board.

On the way up the river another ship-wreck and tragedy was averted by a hairsbreadth. There is an occasion to discuss that event. The Franch-Canadian, as a skilful navigating officer on a night as black as Egypt, is not impressive. There were shouts of "Sans Vapare" from the bridge that did not impress a dull engineer. The ferry was old and shaky, and the sleet and rain beat in or dropped through the porous sailcloth covering, and through it all women and children huddled without semblance of fear or panic, with no murmur, no cries, and no visible dread, save the drawn face and the tears of a mother hastily concealed, as she held her babe and drew her little boy to her side.

The Women Were Brave.

The British soldier and the British sailor have been extolled. I cannot express my admiration for the British woman. She is the very essence of self-control in an emergency and a model of discipline. Some of the officers feared a crush when the dock was reached. The old ferry not only reached the dock, she crashed into it, and lurched back. Two or three women laughed quietly and held their babes closer. Old men swore quietly at the haphazard carelessness with an overloaded rotten scow. Then the passengers filed out and the ferry started back for the four hundred who stopped behind without a complaint to spend a sleepless night on a stranded vessel. Apparently the only excited person in evidence was a portly Yankee, who took care to be first on shore, and he was palpably and ostentatiously first down the gang plank to the ferry. His trembling limbs and nerve-twisted features only emphasized the worth of a British woman and a British mother.

NAZIM'S ARMY IS CRUSHED

The Victorious Pursuing the Broken and

A despatch from Sofia says: The Turkish army commanded by Nazim Pasha was completely crushed in the great battle of the last two days on the Serai-Tchorlu line. According to the semi-official Mir, the Turks lost in killed and wounded more than double the losses at Lule Burgas. The Bulgarians are now pursuing the defeated enemy.

The sanguinary character of the recent engagements, which it is reported have involved losses to the Turks of 40.000 men, has been due to the extraordinary energy of the Bulgarian attack. The view of the Bulgarian staff is that the Turks are so demoralized that frontal attacks may be undertaken even against the strongest positions without superior forces, and the Turkish shortage of artillery and ammunition has contributed to the success of these tactics.

The Bulgarian vanguard, it is said, has reached Lake Derkas, one detachment passing between the lake and the sea. Another line of the Bulgarian advance is reported to be attacking the forts in front of the town of Tchatalja, while still another column, which marched down the main road from Tchorlu ... gados for the pur... passage along the coast of the sea of Marmora.

These are, however, only flying columns. The main body has not yet commenced the attack on Tchatalja fortifications.

According to statements made by prominent public men in Sofia, Bulgaria will reject mediation until Tchatalja has been captured and Adrianople has fallen, and although it is said that entry into Constantinople is no part of the allies plans, Bulgaria will not listen to the suggestion of peace negotiations unless Turkey gives an undertaking to bring no more reinforcements from Asia.

Tchataldja's Forts Taken.

A despatch from London says: The victorious Bulgarians made one swift, vicious assault on the fortifications of Tchataldja on Thursday, and won them. The disheartened Turks are now scattered over the 25-mile district between those captured lines of defence and Constantinople, and the Bulgarians are pursuing them, capturing some and killing others. There is now nothing save these disorganized, fleeing bands of Turks to stop the Bulgarians in their conquering march towards the capital of their enemies.

Bulgarians Occupy Drama.

The Bulgarians occupied the town of Drama on November 5. The Turkish troops in that region have been scattered in all directions. Most of them have surrendered their arms and are returning to their homes. Other remnants are so demoralized that the peasants terrorize them and compel them to disarm and flee. Throughout the district the inhabitants have warmly welcomed the Bulgarians, and the Bulgarian administration has been established.

It is officially announced that the port of Rodosto, on the Sea of Marmora, and the city of Visa, to the southeast of Adrianople, were occupied by the Bulgarian troops on November 5.

Adrianople in Rebellion.

A despatch from London says: Adrianople is reported to be in a state of rebellion. There is word from that beleaguered city that the Turkish soldiers are flatly refusing to fight any longer, and have to be driven to the defences at the point of the sword. That city is apparently to be starved into surrender. The Bulgarian commanders realize that its fall is but a matter of days, and that they cannot afford to lose any more men in an assault. They are contenting themselves with sweeping down on Turkish wagon trains and isolating Adrianople from the world.

LITTLE CHILD KILLED.

Shot Through Head in Struggle to Get a Revolver.

A despatch from North Bay says: On Saturday morning Arthur, the three-year-old son of Jos. Leclair, was shot through the head with a bullet from a revolver, and died on Sunday. His mother had occasion to leave the children alone in the house, and had barely left the house when the children went into the room of an uncle, who lived with the family, and, finding the keys of his trunk, opened it and found a revolver. There were three children in the room at the time, the oldest being a boy of twelve. The children all reached for the revolver, and the older boy realizing the danger of the weapon, tried to take it away from the younger children, when his finger closed on the self-cocking trigger and the explosion followed.

WOODROW WILSON.
Elected President of the United States.

TORONTO CORRESPONDENCE

INTERESTING GOSSIP FROM ONTARIO'S CAPITAL.

Sir George W. Ross at the Canadian Club —Senator Jaffray and Sir Mackenzie Bowell—The New Judge—Real Estate.

Sir George W. Ross does not often make public addresses now, but whenever he does he is sure of a large audience and rapt attendance. Nor does he ever disappoint expectations either in the matter of his addresses or the manner of his delivery, for he takes rank as one of the first, if not the very first, orator that this Province has produced.

The general esteem in which the former Premier is held was expressed on the occasion of his addressing the Canadian Club the other day by Mr. T. A. Russell, the presiding officer. It was not every one, he said, who could retire from high office to private life, and particularly to the Senate, and could retain such a grip on affairs and such influence with the public.

Sir George's subject was "The Panama Canal." He briefly traced its history and then referred at length to the various treaty obligations in connection therewith entered into by the United States, demonstrating clearly that up to the present year the United States, by the utterances of its public men and by unequivocal language in the most solemn treaties, has again and again declared that the Canal is to be open on equal terms to the subjects and citizens of all nations, and that there should be no discrimination against any. The action of the States now in seeking to exempt its own vessels from the terms of this treaty was inexplicable.

A Masterly Address.

Sir George's marshalling of the facts was masterly. It is the first time any Canadian of prominence has grappled with the issue in public, and Sir George did so fearlessly and forcefully. The address will, no doubt, furnish the cue for others. As to future action, Sir George advocated, first, vigorous protests from Parliament, second, an appeal to the Hague, and, lastly, if Uncle Sam refused to submit to the Hague, it was hinted that perhaps some form of retaliation might be made effective. Sir George said he was opposed to retaliation except as a last resort.

The occasion was one of the high spots in the Canadian Club history. The luncheon hall was filled to overflowing, and though Sir George "talked across the table," that is, from his seat, his voice carried to every part of the room and ... lightest indication of his ... and political ... of the United ...

BAD FIRE AT BLIND RIVER.

Fifty Thousand Dollars Damage—Several Buildings Gone.

A despatch from North Bay says: Blind River, on the Soo branch of the Canadian Pacific, was visited by a disastrous fire on Saturday. The flames originated in Kennedy's general store and spread quickly to the adjacent buildings, five stores, the Post-office and a poolroom being destroyed, besides the Grand View Hotel. Loss estimated at about $50,000, with little insurance.

MONTREAL CARS COLLIDE.

Single Truck Trolley Ran Away and Nine People were Hurt.

A despatch from Montreal says: With the motorman hanging out of the vestibule shrieking a vain warning, a single truck tram-car whizzed down a 5 per cent. grade on St. Lawrence Boulevard on Thursday morning, and smashed into another car standing at the corner of Ontario Street. Nine people were taken to the hospital in ambulances, of whom two are seriously injured and the others cut by glass, and a score badly shaken up. While Miss Bessie Laub was lying on the ground someone stole her purse, with $10 in it and her engagement ring.

ber of ... example of the ... Canadian public men. Senator ... over 80 years old, but he is literally as lively as a cricket.

Indeed, during the last ten years Senator Jaffray has been much more in the public eye than he was in earlier years. He takes the keenest personal interest in all public affairs, rarely missing any address at the Canadian Club, or elsewhere, for that matter, where any issue affecting Canada is under discussion.

It is perhaps not generally known that Senator Jaffray is the one man more than any other who stands for the Globe newspaper, and whom that paper represents. His nominal connection with it is that of President of the company. There are, of course, other directors and shareholders and a number of editors, but the man who is the court of last appeal on any matter of detail or in matters of large general policy is the Senator.

Formerly, his attachment to the Globe was much more slender than it is now. He had other business interests—he has been in business in Toronto for sixty years—and the Globe was but a side line with him. He was content to leave its conduct to editors and department heads. But in recent years it has become more and more the engrossing object of his life and not a day passes that he does not spend several hours in its various departments.

A Boy at Ninety Years.

But in point of years the grand old man of Ontario public life is Sir Mackenzie Bowell. At the time this is written he is lying in the Wellesley private hospital in this city recovering from the effects of a fall. His physicians have not noted any disquieting symptoms, but he is so old they are almost afraid to say he will get altogether well again. If he lives until December 27 next he will be ninety years old. When he met with his recent accident he was on his way home to Belleville from a trip to the Pacific Coast. And when he travels he asks for no special concessions in the way of luxury either.

Though members of different political parties, Senator Jaffray and Sir Mackenzie Bowell are quite cronies. A year or two ago together they accompanied a press party to New Ontario and electrified every one by the activity and energy they showed in going down mines and climbing through the wilderness.

Canadian politics will furnish no more striking romance than that of Sir Mackenzie, who rose from printer's devil to be Premier of Canada, quite equalling Lincoln's from log cabin to White House.

Mr. Justice Hodgins.

The appointment of Frank E. Hodgins to a judgeship in the Court of Appeal is regarded by Liberals and Conservatives alike as an excellent appointment. As a lawyer he has been devoted to his profession and, in addition to ability as a counsel, he is generally recognized as having that quality so requisite to his present position, known as the judicial temperament. He is known to the public chiefly through his connection with various public inquiries, including the Ontario Government's License Investigation of five years ago, the New Ontario Bush Polls Investigation, the inquiry into over-classification on the Grand Trunk Pacific construction, in which he acted as counsel for his cousin, Mayor Hodgins, and more recently in the Dominion Government's investigation into the affairs of the defunct Farmers' Bank.

In personal appearance he is tall and slight, with keen features. He is a high-minded type of citizen, and one of the leading laymen in the Anglican Church in Canada. Altogether he may be expected to maintain the high reputation of the Bench in this country. He is a product of the city where he was born and raised and has spent his entire life, excepting for vacations, which he has frequently spent in the old land.

Some Critics Here.

Not so unanimous is the approval of the elevation to a judgeship of Mr. James Leitch, formerly of Cornwall. The criticism finds root in dissatisfaction with his record as Chairman of the Ontario Railway Board, where he came in close contact with the public by reason of the frequent clashes between corporations and municipalities, which had to be decided. However, that position was one of peculiar difficulty, and while there is in some quarters a lurking suspicion that his translation to a new sphere may have some connection with the criticism his administration of the Railway Board has caused to be directed against the Government, his known abilities as a lawyer may make his appointment to a judgeship a good one.

"Welcome, Little Sister."

Just when most people were reconciling themselves to indefinite delay in the matter of the annexation to the city of the town of North Toronto, owing to the stubborn opposition of a section of that municipality's citizens and threatened legal entanglements, along came a peremptory order of the Ontario Municipal Board and annexation is practically an accomplished fact. Thereby, Toronto adds at one stroke a population of 6,000 souls, and an area of 2,400 acres, including large tracts of vacant lands. The annexation opens the way for a more symmetrical development of the city's territory, for the new area is much nearer to the corner of King and Yonge streets than are the outlying eastern and western sections. It lies along Yonge street, up "over the hill," and where it has not been spoiled by cemeteries or inferior buildings, lends itself to development as a high class residential district. Indeed, it may interest those who are inclined to take a "flyer" in Toronto suburban real estate to know that the probabilities are that North Toronto subdivisions are likely to be the next to be built up. After them will probably come Mr. Home Smith's Humber Valley property.

Real Estate Still Booms.

One hears constantly the prediction that the reaction in real estate must come soon. But as yet there is no sign of the break. Perhaps it is the fact that so many persons are suspicious of a break and are consequently cautious that is permitting the period of advancing prices to continue so long.

The chief problem in connection with North Toronto's annexation will arise out of the street railway service. The town is served by the Metropolitan Railway branch of the York Radial, which is controlled by the Mackenzie interests, who also own the Toronto Street Railway, but it is a different gauge, so that interchange of cars is impossible. North Toronto passengers coming into the city have therefore to transfer and have also, as yet, to pay two fares. Needless to say, the railway people will keep on making them pay two fares as long as they can.

A Sunday Car Agitation.

The Metropolitan cannot run cars on Sunday, so that that section of the city is going to remain "dead" on that day unless and until a special Act of the Legislature is passed, changing the present ... is expected that this will not be ... opposition, though

THURSDAY NOV. 14, '12

The prospect of serious opposition to a Canadian contribution toward the naval defence of the Empire is growing daily more remote. There are evidences that wiser and more patriotic counsel within the Liberal party is prevailing and will prevail. Not the least of these evidences is found in the refusal of the Liberal leaders to authorize a contest in the riding of Hochelaga in the by-election made necessary by the entry of Hon. Louis Coderre into the Dominion Government. The opposition leader has sent a letter to the Liberal executive in the riding advising that the re-election of Hon. Louis Coderre be not contested by a Liberal candidate. The general knowledge that some form of immediate aid from Canada is likely to be proposed to parliament, has been common property since the resignation of Hon. F. D. Monk. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has shared that general knowledge and in the light of it he wrote to the Liberal executive of Hochelaga advising them not to run a Liberal candidate. The executive accepted the advice. A day or two afterwards Arthur Beremont decided to contest the riding as an independent Liberal, but he has since withdrawn.

A noted scientist recently made an experiment which proves that the man with a moustache or beard is a far greater menace to the healty of a community than the clean shaven man. This scientist had two assistants. One was bearded, the other had no hirsute adornments at all. He decided to experiment with them. He also had a lady assistant, and it was with her the experiment was made. She was placed in a bacilli-cleansed, germ-proof room. Her face was thoroughly sterilized. She was positively innocuous; absolutely harmless. Now he of the beard was taken for a two-hour walk up and down, hither and yon throughout the main streets of the city, into its byways and highways. After coming in contact with all the bacilli in the air for two hours he was brought to the doctor's office and placed in the room with the young woman for two minutes. In that time he was to continually kiss her. At the end of that time the doctor entered and scraped the girl's lips and face and deposited the germs in a jar. Later the clean-faced assistant suffered the same fate. The germs after each experiment were put in different jars and later counted. He of the beard had transmitted to the young lady's face one 10,000,000 more germs than the smooth one.

It takes money to run a printing office, the same as any other kind of business. Wages, stock and a hundred other things must be paid for in cash. We do not grow this cash in our back yard; it must come from those who owe us and it should come regularly before a big bill has run up. It is much easier to settle a comparatively small account than when it accumulates and becomes a formidable total. Some newspaper readers have a strange idea that editors do not count much on subscriptions. A dollar is one hundred cents, whether it is for subscription, job work or advertising. Also one hundred subscriptions two or three years in arrears amount in just two or three hundred dollars—a sum worth considering from the newspaperman's point of view. It might also be pointed out that "dunning" is not a pleasant thing to do and if those who owe money would run around and pay up or explain that they can do so at some specified time, it would be much more satisfactory for all concerned.

Here is something that maybe of interest to dog owners. A recent Supreme Court decision outlines responsibilities of owners of dogs. The decision was a case were action had been brought to recover damages from the owner of a dog that barked and frightened the plaintiff's horse. The plaintiff was thrown and injured, and brought suit for $1500 damages. The jury gave him a verdict for that amount and the owner of the dog appealed to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court sustained the verdict and said in strong words that the owners of barking and vicious dogs are responsible for all damage caused by such dogs, and owners keep them at their own peril.

UNAMINOUS VERDICT

Newspaper publishers and citizens generally throughout the Dominion are unanimous in their opinion that the picture entitled "Mother's Treasure," given with The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal this season, is a most delightful and beautiful subject. Here is the opinion of one publisher. "Mother's Treasure," is a marvel of beauty. The subject is one that will have a tendency to strengthen home ties. We, in the same business, wonder how you can afford to give such value in pictures besides the vast amount of good things in The Family Herald and Weekly Star." Signed E. W. Richards, The Mirror, Millbrook. No home in Canada should be without this beautiful picture. One dollar pays a full year's subscription to The Family Herald and Weekly Star, including the picture, which is ready for framing, size 28 by 29 inches. It is a big dollar's worth, indeed.

Death of Mrs. Keatie.—Another of the oldest and most respected residents of the township passed peacefully away at her home on Thursday, Nov. 7th, in the person of Jane Amy, widow of the late Joseph Keatie, at the age of 74 years, 8 months and 6 days. Mrs. Keatie had been ailing since last June but was able to be up and around until about a week previous to her death, when she took her bed and being afflicted with heart trouble she daily sank until death overtook her. Deceased was a native of England, being born in Cornwall in the year 1837, and she came to Canada with her parents about eight years later, first settling in Clark, Durham County. Between fifty-five and sixty years ago deceased moved to this township and continuously resided here ever since. About 1855 deceased married Joseph Keatie, and to them a large family was born, the surviving ones being four sons and four daughters,—Nelson of Exeter, William, Henry and Albert of Stephen, Mrs. George Brodrick and Mrs. Richard Johnston of London, Mrs. Thos. Trevethick of Crediton and Miss Lilya at home. Her husband predeceased her about 14 years. Mrs. Keatie was of an amiable and lovable disposition, kind-hearted and true, and those who knew her best loved her most. She was a member of the Methodist Church and when able was regular in her attendance at the means of grace. The funeral took place from her late residence, Lot 21, Con 8, Stephen, to the Exeter cemetery on Sunday afternoon.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Ford Lake Road, was the scene of a pleasant time on Tuesday evening, when about fifty friends gathered to-gether and presented them with an address, and suitable tokens of friendship on the eve of their departure for Detroit, where they intend to reside. The address was read by Bert Proszcator and the presentation made by John Harrison. Mr. Ford made a suitable reply, after which a good time was spent by all. Mr. and Mrs. Ford, who have always been worthy citizens leave for Detroit next week.

BIDDULPH

James Keefe, a young farmer living on the Chapel Ens, Biddulph, lost control of a spirited team of horses hitched to a wagon hayrack while driving home from Lucan on Friday night about 9 o'clock, and was thrown to the ground without being seriously injured. He walked back to the village hired a horse and rig and started in search of the runaway teams. Arriving at his home he found no trace of them there and started back to town, and when within half a mile of the village he found the horses standing in a deep ditch on the roadside. One was dead having been drowned, and the other, although uninjured, was tangled up and wedged so tightly it required the efforts of another team of horses to pull him out.

SAINTSBURY

Mr. Thos. Dickens has purchased the residence of Mr. Wellington Rollins in Lucan and will move to that village shortly. Mr. and Mrs. Dickens have been residents of this neighborhood for over thirty five years and their departure from our midst will be very much regretted by the whole neighborhood, but they will have the best wishes of all for a long and happy residence in their new home.

Death of Mrs. O'Neil.—A sad death took place in this township on Tuesday last, Nov. 12th, when one of its most respected residents, in the person of Mrs. John O'Neil, passed away. Mrs O'Neil was stricken down with an attack of paralysis about two weeks ago from which she never recovered, and gradually sinking death claimed her. Deceased was formerly Miss Flannagan, being a daughter of Mr. Wm. Flannagan, and was 47 years of age. Besides the sorrowing husband she is survived by one son and one daughter. The funeral takes place to-day (Thursday) at 10 o'clock to St. Peter's church Cemetery.

DISTRIBUTION OF SEED GRAIN AND POTATOES

By instructions of the Hon. Minister of Agriculture a distribution of superior sorts of grain and potatoes will be made during the coming winter and spring to Canadian farmers. The samples for general distribution will consist of spring wheat (5 lbs.), white oats (4 lbs.) barley (5 lbs.) and field peas (5 lbs.). These will be sent out from Ottawa. A distribution of potatoes (in 3lb. samples) will be carried on from several of the experimental farms, the Central Farm at Ottawa supplying only the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. All samples will be sent free, by mail.

Applicants must give particulars of the soil on their farms, and some account of their experience with such kinds of grain (or potatoes) as they have grown, so that a promising sort for their conditions may be selected.

Each application must be separate and must be signed by the applicant. Only one sample of grain and one of potatoes can be sent to each farm. Applications on any kind of printed form cannot be accepted. If two or more samples are asked for in the same letter only one will be sent.

As the supply of seed is limited, farmers are advised to apply early; but the applications will not necessarily be filled in the exact order in which they are received. Preference will always be given to the most thoughtful and explicit requests. Applications received after the end of January will probably be too late.

All applications for grain (and applications from the provinces of Ontario and Quebec for potatoes) should be addressed to the Dominion Cerealist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. Such applications require no postage. If otherwise addressed delay and disappointment may occur.

Applications for potatoes, from farmers in any other province should be addressed (postage prepaid) to the Superintendent of the nearest Branch Experimental Farm in that province.

J. H. GRISDALE,
Director, Dominion Experimental Farms

Beware Young Man

IT'S THE LITTLE DANDRUFF GERMS THAT ARE CAUING YOUR HAIR TO THIN OUT

PARISIAN SAGE STOPS FALLING HAIR AND DOES NOT CONTAIN POISONOUS LEAD OR DYES

The clever young man of to-day does not take any chances on losing his hair. A man who is baldheaded at 30 looks like 45, and is placed at a disadvantage when seeking employment.

If you have dandruff it means down near the roots of your hair an army of dandruff germs are attacking the hair root and destroying its vitality. Then hair falls out; and grows thin, and baldness results. Young man; put your faith in delightful PARISIAN SAGE, it will stop falling hair, kill dandruff germs, abolish dandruff and itching scalp, or money back.

PARISIAN SAGE in only 50 cents a bottle at W. S. Cole and dealers everywhere. Girl with Auburn hair on every carton. Ask for PARISIAN SAGE.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN N. SMITH

THE AUTO RACES.

SPEED, speed, speed,
A demon is set free
That space and time annihilates,
That for the whirlwind never waits,
That from the lightnings flee,
A demon that has legs and wings
And wheels and all the moving things.

Chug, chug, chug,
It rushes to the goal,
As strong electric currents race
Without single breathing space
From pole to farther pole.
On beds of air it spurns the ground
And in a twinkling gets around.

Strain, strain, strain,
In every rod and bolt
It pushes past the starting place
And enters wildly in the race
As frisky as a colt;
In scooting round a five mile track
Front wheels almost run down the back.

Crash, crash, crash,
Another victim low,
A mass of ribs and driving rods,
Comingled with the inert clods;
A call for music slow,
A finish that is just debris
And what the crowd had paid to see.

Nothing to It.

"Green and Brown are having a terrible row down the street."
"What seems to be the matter?"
"I don't know, but they are calling each other 'thief and liar'"—
"Did you say Green and Brown?"
"Yes?"
"I thought so. They are just having a friendly political discussion. Come on; let's go home."

Sad Case.

"He's a hard man to get along with."
"Well, why don't you do the other thing?"
"What is that?"
"Get along without him."
"Because he insists on going along with me. He's my husband, you see."

The Only Kind That Will.

"Angelina is a great friend of mine."
"Awfully fascinating, I suppose?"
"Oh, no; but she is so comforting. She always helped me out of all my difficulties."
"Gee! Is she as homely as that?"

The Way It Goes.

"Some women are born ugly."
"I suppose so."
"And others are both ugly and awkward."
"Yes, and still others wear pink high heeled shoes."

Described.

"Have you seen Mrs. Greene's new hat?"
"I have."
"What do you think of it?"
"It looks as if her husband had chosen it for her."

Selection In Suits.

"Did he propose to her?"
"Well, he pressed his suit."
"Why wouldn't he suit?"
"Because he hadn't pressed his suit before he came."

Explained.

"Pa, what is meant by the sins of omission and of commission?"
"Those that are committed by a commission house, I guess."

Why He Wasn't.

"Are you superstitious?"
"Not a bit. I always think bad luck comes to superstitious people."

Up to Date.

Maud Muller on a summer's day
Determined she would wed.
She started out to rake the hay,
But raked the judge instead.

Most men regret that they have been civilized beyond the point of taking their pie in their fingers.

No man is sure of himself, which is perhaps the reason he asserts his opinions so positively.

County fairs may get along without stock, races or agricultural exhibits. But they must have peanuts, taffy, a merry-go-round, an orator and a flying machine.

ZURICH.

Miss Katie Stroeder is visiting at her home at Deemerton for a few weeks —Bans were published on Sunday at St. Boniface church for the marriage of Mr. August Miller of the 14th con., to Miss Laura Miller of Dashwood.—Mr. Alfon Foster had his hand injured last week while working with Merner's threshing machine.—Mrs. Henry Weber and family are moving to Hesperler, where they will make their future home.—Mr. Edwin Koehler of Hamilton is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Koehler.—Miss Daller of Howard City, Mich., visited at the home of of Mr. C. He will be absent from Zurich till the end of the week.—J. J. Merner, M. P., has returned from the West, where he has nearly 1,200 acres of land under cultivation. He is satisfied with his venture in the Dominion's great wheat fields. Mr. Merner is a busy man. Besides his interests in the Northwest, he operates a large general store, the evaporator and the cider mill in Zurich. He also owns a 200-acre farm, which is of a sand and loam mixture, he intends planting several acres of tobacco next year. Mr. Merner is an extensive dealer in live stock and all kinds of farm products. He shipped a carload of apples to the Northwest last week.

Mr. Peter Lamont, ex-warden of the County of Huron, is another extensive dealer in live stock, feeding a large number of cattle at the present time. He has one of the finest appointed bank barns in the province. Water pipes and drinking troughs are placed in the basement. A windmill is used to force the water from a well thrpughout the building

WOODHAM

The funeral of John Copeland, held from the family residence to Kirkton Union Cemetery, was largely attended. The pall-bearers were his four sons Gifford, Robert, Henry and Hiram and John Hanna and J. Hanna of Woodham. Mr. Copeland died in St. Joseph's Hospital, London, following an operation. He was 75 years old, and leaves a widow and eight sons four in Woodham and four in the West and one daughter, Mrs. John Hanna, of Woodham.

McGILLIVRAY.—The Township council met on the 4th, when a number of accounts were passed, and adjournment was made to the 30th November.

SEAFORTH—The funeral of Mrs. Gabriel Reeves was held last Tuesday from the family residence. Deceased died on Monday after a short illness with heart trouble. She had been ill with bronchitis some time ago, but had recovered and been in very fair health until Sunday morning, when she suffered an attack of heart trouble, followed in the evening by a similar attack. She was in her 58th year, was a daughter of the late Abram Worth, and leaves a husband and grown-up family of sons, Thomas, of Stratford, and Fred, George and Manson, of Seaforth.

VARNA—A pretty wedding took place on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Lawrence, near Milton, when their eldest daughter, Mabel A., became the wife of Mr. William Lightfoot of Clarkson, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lightfoot of Peel County. Rev. D. Johnston of Varna, uncle of the bride, assisted by Rev. Mr. Terry, Omagh, performed the ceremony.

THEDFORD—Cutting feed at James Laird's, Con. 6, Bosanquet, Frank McDonnell had all his fingers cut off the right hand.

TUCKERSMITH—At the last regular monthly meeting of the Tuckersmith Council, John Walker, proprietor of the Dixon House, Brucefield, appeared before the Council with a request that the Council submit to the electors a by-law to repeal the local option by-law now in force in Tuckersmith. The request being backed by a petition signed by 126 ratepayers, the Council granted the request of Mr. Walker and authorized the clerk to prepare a by-law to be presented to the electors at the municipal elections in 1913.

HOW BLOOD IS MADE.

The liquids and the digested foods in the alimentary canal pass through the wall of the canal into the blood. This process is called absorption and takes place chiefly from the small intestine. After absorption the blood carries the food through the body, and each cell takes from the blood the food it needs. A pure glyceric extract made from bloodroot, mandrake, stone, queen's root and golden seal and sold by druggists for the past forty years under the name of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, gives uniformly excellent results as a tonic to help in the assimilation of the food and in the absorption by the blood of the food it requires. Eradicate the poisons from the blood with this alterative extract which does not shrink the white blood corpuscles, because containing no alcohol or other injurious ingredients. Thus the body can be built up—strong to resist disease. This is a tonic taken from Nature's garden that builds up those weakened by disease. Dr. Pierce, founder of the Invalids' Hotel at Buffalo, N.Y., has received many letters similar to the following:

F. R. MUNRO, ESQ.

MR. FRED R. MUNRO, of Paradise, N. S., writes: "I take great pleasure in writing you as regards my case and its cure. In September I was taken with Typhoid Fever, which put me in a dreadful condition. I was weak, run down, nervous and was reduced to a mere skeleton. I had tried most everything I could get but nothing did me any good until, at last, I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and 'Pleasant Pellets,' which I did. Before I had used one bottle I saw a great improvement and when I had used this treatment two months, using only a few vials of 'Pleasant Pellets,' I returned to perfect health. I cannot find words to express my thankfulness for this wonderful medicine. I advise all sufferers to write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, as he cures when others fail."

CHAPTER XXIV.

Mr. Boniface insisted on keeping them all till the following day, when once more they enjoyed the delights of coaching, getting back to London in the cool of the evening, laden with wild roses, hawthorn, and the field flowers, which gladdened more than one of their neighbors' rooms in the model lodgings.

It was not till Wednesday in Whitsun week that Frithiof found himself in his old place behind the counter, and it took several days before they all got into working order again, for though the holiday had done them good, yet it was not very easy to get back into the routine of business. But by Monday everything was in clock-work order again, and even Mr. Horner, though ready enough at all times to grumble, could find nothing to make a fuss about. It happened that day that Mr. Horner was more in the shop than usual, for Roy had unexpectedly been obliged to go to Paris on business, and it chanced, much to his satisfaction, that, while Mr. Boniface was dining, Sardoni the tenor called to speak about a song. There was nothing that he enjoyed so much as interviewing any well-known singer; he seemed to gain a sort of reflected glory in the process, and Frithiof could hardly help smiling when at the close of the interview they passed through the shop, so comical was the obsequious manner of the little man toward the tall, jolly looking singer, and so curious the contrast between the excessive politeness of his tone to the visitor, and his curt command, "Open the door, Falck."

Frithiof opened the door promptly, but the tenor, whose mischevious eyes evidently took in everything that savored of fun, saw plainly enough that the Norseman, with his dignity of manner and nobility of bearing, deemed Mr. Horner as a man beneath contempt.

"Oh, by the way, Mr. Horner," he exclaimed, suddenly turning back just as he had left the shop; "I quite forgot to ask if you could oblige me with change for a five-pound note. I have tried to get it twice this morning, but change seems to be short."

"With the gleatest pleasure," said Mr. Horner, deferentially.

And, pushing past Frithiof, he himself deposited the note in the till and counted out five sovereigns, which he handed with a bow to Sardoni.

Then, with a friendly "good-day," the singer went out, and Mr. Horner, rubbing his hands with an air of great satisfaction, retired to Mr. Boniface's room.

The afternoon passed on just as hundreds of afternoons had passed before it, with the usual succession of customers, the usual round of monotonous work; there was nothing to mark it in any way, and no sense of coming evil made itself felt. In the most prosaic manner possible, Frithiof went out for the few minutes' stroll in the streets which he called tea-time. He was in good spirits, and as he walked along he thought of the days by the sea, and of the boating which he had so much enjoyed, living it all over again in this hot, dusty London, where June was far from delightful. Still, it was something to be out in the open air, to get a few moments of leisure and to stretch one's legs. He walked along pretty briskly, managing to get some little enjoyment out of his short respite; and this was well; for it was long before he could enjoy anything again in that unconcerned, free-hearted way. Yet nothing warned him of this; quite carelessly he pushed open the double swing-doors and re-entered the shop, glancing with surprise but with no special concern at the little group behind the counter. Mr. Horner was finding fault about something, but that was a very ordinary occurrence. A thin, grave-looking man stood listening attentively, and Mr. Boniface listened, too, with an expression of great trouble on his face. Looking up, he perceived Frithiof, and with an exclamation of relief came toward him.

"Here is Mr. Falck," he said; "who no doubt will be able to explain everything satisfactorily. A five-pound note has somehow disappeared from your till this afternoon, Frithiof; do you know anything about it?"

"It was certainly in the till when I last opened it," said Frithiof; "and that was only a few minutes before I went out."

"Very possibly," said Mr. Horner. "The question is whether it was there when you shut it again."

The tone even more than the words made Frithiof's blood boil.

"Sir," he said, furiously, "do you dare to insinuate that I—"

But Mr. Boniface laid a hand on his arm and interrupted him.

"Frithiof," he said, "you know quite well that I should as soon suspect my own son as you. But this note has disappeared in a very extraordinary way, while only you and Darnell were in the shop, and we must do our best to trace it out. I am sure you will help me in this disagreeable business by going through the ordinary form quietly."

Then, turning to the private detective who had been hastily called in by Mr. Horner, he suggested that they should come to his own room. Mr. Horner shut the door with an air of satisfaction. From the first he had detested the Norwegian, and now was delighted to feel that his dislike was justified.

Darnell was a rather handsome fellow, with a short dark beard and heavy mustache; he looked a trifle paler than usual, but was quiet and collected, perhaps a little upset at the unusual disturbance in the shop where for so long he had worked, yet without the faintest sign of personal uneasiness about him. Beside him stood the tall Norwegian, his fair skin showing all to plainly the burning color that had rushed to his face the instant he knew that he lay actually under suspicion of thieving.

"I will examine you first," said the detective; and Frithiof, seeing that there was no help for it, submitted with haughty composure to the indignity.

In solemn silence two pockets were turned inside out. The right-hand waistcoat pocket was apparently empty, but the careful detective turned that inside out too. Suddenly Mr. Boniface started forward with an ejaculation of astonishment.

"I told you so!" cried Mr. Horner, vehemently.

And Frithiof, roused to take notice, which before he had not condescended to do, looked down and saw a sight that made his heart stand still.

Carefully pinned to the inside of the pocket was a clean, fresh, five-pound note. He did not speak a word, but just stared at the thing in blank amusement. There was a painful silence. Surely it could be nothing but a bad dream!

He looked at the unconcerned detective, and at Mr. Horner's excited face, and at Mr. Boniface's expression of grief and perplexity. It was no dream; it was a most horrible reality—a reality which he was utterly incapable of explaining. With an instinct that there was yet one man present who trusted him, in spite of appearance, he made a step or two toward Mr. Boniface.

"Sir," he said, in great agitation, "I swear to you that I knew nothing of this. It has astounded me as much as it has surprised you. How it came there I can't say, but certainly I didn't put it there."

Mr. Boniface was silent, and glancing back Frithiof saw on the thin lips of the detective a very expressive smile. The sight almost maddened him. In the shock of the discovery he had turned very pale; now the violence of his wrath made him flush to the roots of his hair.

"If you didn't put it there, who did?" said Mr. Horner, indignantly. "Don't add to your sin, young man, by falsehood."

"I have never spoken a falsehood in my life; it is you who lie when you say that I put the note there," said Frithiof, hotly.

"My poor fellow," said Mr. Boniface, "I am heartily sorry for you, but you must own that appearances are against you."

"What! you too, sir!" cried Frithiof, his indignation giving place to heart-broken wonder.

The tone went to Mr. Boniface's heart.

"I think you did it quite unconsciously," he said. "I am sure you never could have taken it had you known what you were about. You did it in absence of mind—in a fit of temporary aberration. It is, perhaps, a mere result of your illness last summer, and no one would hold you responsible for it."

A horrible wave of doubt passed over Frithiof.

"No one in absence of mind could deliberately have pinned the note in," he said. "Besides, my head was perfectly clear—not even aching or tired."

"Quite so; I am glad that so far you own the truth," said Mr. Horner. "Make a free confession at once and we will not press the prosecution. You yielded to a sudden temptation, and, as we all know, have special reasons for needing money. Come, confess!"

"You are not bound to incriminate yourself," said the detective. "Still, what the gentleman suggests is by far the best course for you to take. There's not a jury in the land that would not give a verdict against you."

"I shall certainly not tell a lie to save open disgrace," said Frithiof. "The jury may say what it likes. God knows I am innocent."

The tone in which he said the last words made Mr. Boniface look at him more closely.

"Now I know that you are lying!" Mr. Horner cried; "don't add blasphemy to your crime. You are the most irreligious fellow I ever came across—a man who, to my certain knowledge, never attends any place of public worship; and do you dare to call God to witness for you?"

Nothing but the strong consciousness of this new Presence kept Frithiof from making a sharp retort. "God knows I am innocent," he repeated; "and only He can tell how the note got here; I can't."

"One word with you, if you please, Mr. Harris," said Robert Boniface. He led the way back to the shop, where, in low tones, he briefly gave the detective his own opinion of the case. He was sure that Frithiof firmly believed that he was telling the truth, but unable to doubt the evidence of his own senses, he was obliged to take up the plausible theory of temporary aberration. The detective shrugged his shoulders a little, and said it might possibly be so, but the young man seemed to him remarkably clear-headed. However, he accepted his fee and went off, and Mr. Boniface returned sadly enough to his room.

"You can go back to the shop, Darnell" he said.

The man bowed and withdrew, leaving Frithiof still standing half bewildered where the detective had left him, the cause of all his misery lying on the writing-table before him, just as fresh and crisp-looking as when it had been issued from the Bank of England.

"This has been a sad business, Frithiof," said Mr. Boniface, looking with his clear, kindly eyes at the young Norwegian. "But I am convinced that you had no idea what you were doing, and I should not dream of prosecuting you, or discharging you."

"MY STOMACH IS FINE

Since Taking Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets"

Mrs. J. Merkhuger, Waterloo, Ont., enthusiastically recommends Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets. Her experience with them, as she outlines it, explains why.

"I was greatly troubled with my stomach", she writes. "I had taken so much medicine that I might say to take any more would only be making it worse. My stomach just felt raw. I read of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, and a lady friend told me they were very easy to take, so I thought I would give them a trial and really they worked wonders. Anyone having anything wrong with his stomach should give Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets a trial, they will do the rest. My stomach is fine now and I can eat any food."

One of the many good features of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets is that they are so pleasant and easy to take. The relief they give from heartburn, flatulence, biliousness and dyspepsia is prompt and permanent. Try one after each meal—they'll make you feel like a new person.

SAVED BY A BUOY—AND A BOY

How a Pleasure Trip Almost Ended In Disaster.

The yacht—it was a six-ton schooner, and belonged to a Mr. Carsdale—had put out from Manakau, New Zealand, on a pleasure trip up the coast. There were six aboard, the owner, his wife, a boy named Squires, who acted as "crew," two young girls, and a man friend of the skipper. It is the latter who tells the story in the Wide World Magazine:

The Miramar was sailed up through the narrow channel of the Aivitu River, between the boiling breakers on the bar, where ebbing tide and current meet the heavy Pacific swell. The wind was fair, and the boat went through on tiptoe, and a half-mile up the river.

Then the wind suddenly fell flat, the sails slatted idly, and the yacht began to drift with the hurrying tide back toward the reef and the breakers.

The word was given to drop anchor, and young Squires let it go. The chain rattled through the hawse to the very end, and then fell with a splash into the water. Harry Squires, set to chip rust from the cable that morning, had removed the shackle-bar from the ring-bolt, and forgotten to replace it! Anchor and cable were gone forever, and on the breast of a five-knot current the yacht was racing down to the bar!

In that tumble of angry water, among jagged rocks and hard stretches of wave-pounded sand, the little Miramar could not live a minute, and some of the party—perhaps all—would surely lose their lives.

Young Squires alone had his wits about him. He seized a loose end of fishing-line, knotted it round his waist, kicked off his shoes, and went overboard.

Inside the reef, a hundred yards above the line of breakers, was moored a channel buoy. It was on the port, perhaps two hundred yards below the drifting Miramar. With a short, choppy stroke, Squires struck out for this buoy.

Could he reach it? Would the sag of the dragging line prove too much for him? Already the yacht was abreast of the buoy, and to the eager watchers the swimmer seemed to be flagging—and the white line of the surf was near. Mrs. Carsdale clung to her husband's neck, and the two girls wept in each other's arms.

Then suddenly we saw that Harry had judged his distance well, after all. He was above the buoy, and breasting the current bravely. We saw him turn, shoot down on the current, throw up an arm and grasp the ring of the buoy. As it swung over to his weight, he pulled himself up and sat astride. Hand over hand he hauled in the two-inch rope we had tied to the end of the fishing-line, took a half-hitch round the ring-bolt, and waved his hand to us.

We were saved, but it was a near thing. As we swung at the end of that line, the boil of water on the bar was hardly fifty yards away. Under our stern the water was smoothing to the curl of the first surf line.

We hung there for two hours, "serving" the swaying line with pocket-handkerchiefs against the chafe of the gunwale. All that time Harry remained astride of the buoy, watching the other end of the rope. Death was only a biscuit-toss away, but the rope held.

At last the tide turned, and as we floated up-stream we picked young Squires off his perch. Carsdale wrung his hand with tears in his eyes, and the ladies, weeping also, kissed him. The young scamp! I'll be sworn, he thought more of those kisses than of the sovereign I slipped into his palm!

CURE FOR DIABETES.

New Serum Said to Have Been Very Successful.

Eleven cases of diabetes, a disease which physicians have come to look upon as incurable, have been cured by the use of bacillus bulgaricus, a new serum, according to a statement made by Dr. J. Walter Beveridge, New York.

In making the announcement Dr. Beveridge disclaimed any sovereign cure for the disease had been discovered, but said he merely was setting forth the results of the work undertaken by a trio of physicians, consisting of himself, Dr. George Llemann, of Bellevue Hospital, and Dr. I. Horowitz.

The three physicians determined to make a test of the bulgaricus culture, which they obtained from Europe. The tried it in eighty cases of diabetes. Of these one showed four and nine-tenths per cent. of sugar in the blood at the start, and at the end of the third month there was less than one-tenth of one per cent. of sugar shown in the index. Eleven cases were cured absolutely in six months, and sixty showed marked improvement, said Dr. Beveridge.

The explanation of the action of the bacillus bulgaricus offered by Dr. Beveridge is that it has formed by a process of fermentation a nascent lactic acid, which is a natural cleanser and purifier of the digestive tract in conditions such as those which obtain in cases of diabetes.

"This is the first time a bacillus culture has been used successfully in the cure of a disease," said Dr. Beveridge. "I do not say that it is a sovereign cure for diabetes or any disease, but I do know what we have been able to do with it, and I am convinced that it may open up an entirely new field in medical research and progress. It is one of the most important discoveries in medicine of the present generation."

GROWING GIRLS AND ALL WOMEN.

Should Keep Their Blood Supply Rich, Red and Pure.

On every hand you see women and growing girls in the deadly clutches of anaemia. Slowly but surely a palor as of death, settles on their cheeks; their eyes grow dull; their appetite fickle; their steps languid. Daily they are being robbed of all vitality and brightness. The trouble, if neglected, becomes more acute until the signs of early consumption become apparent. What women and young girls in this condition need is new, rich, red blood, and there is no other medicine can do the work of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, in making this new, good blood. These Pills make girls and women well, and bring back the charm and brightness of perfect, regular health. Here is a bit of proof. Miss Lillie O'Carroll, Norwood, Ont., says:—"About two years ago my health began to fail. I was weak, run down and had no ambition for anything. I had frequent headaches, would be completely tired out after the least exertion, and had little or no appetite. A doctor who was giving me medicine finally told me he feared I was going into consumption, which, of course, made me very much downhearted. As the medicine I was taking was not doing me any good I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I shall ever feel grateful that I did so. My story may be summed up in the words "nine boxes of the Pills fully restored my health—perhaps saved my life, and I am now as strong and healthy as any girl."

Every anaemic sufferer can obtain equally good results through a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Skin All Covered With Eruption

N. Henri Tardif.

Tried Many Remedies 3 or 4 Years. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

A Quebec man, N. Henri Tardif, of St. Casimir, writes in a letter dated Mar. 31, 1911:

"I had a very bad skin, all covered with eruption, eight years ago. I have had all of both my shoulders covered with it, and the high part of my arms, and my face, but it was the worst on my shoulders. I tried many different remedies to cure it, but nothing was any good. At last I went to an apothecary. He asked me if I had ever used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I told him no, and I bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap. I used three boxes of Cuticura Ointment, but I am glad of the same, for Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured me of my skin eruption. I spread the Cuticura Ointment on all my sore parts, and I think that in washing my face with the Cuticura Soap, it hindered my eruption from itching and burning. I tried many remedies during three or four years but Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me." (Signed) N. Henri Tardif.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, but to those who have suffered much, lost hope and are without faith in any treatment, a liberal sample of each with a 32-p. booklet on the skin and scalp will be mailed free, on application. DAMAGE BY RATS.

Authorities Put Annual Loss In France at $40,000,000.

Forty million dollars yearly is the estimated figure of the damage done by rats to crops and property in France. The publication of these statistics by the Incorporated Society for the Destruction of Vermin has given an impetus to the campaign for the extermination of the rodent, which is also known to be a transmitter of disease.

The examples set by several American cities have been followed with great interest in France and have led Dr. Fontenelle to make a special study of the subject. He finds that the role of the rat and the mouse has been very serious in connection with cases of pneumonia. For a long time it has been noticed that this disease was more deadly in hospitals than other places. The pneumonia microbe becomes extremely virulent in the blood of a mouse and, if a sick person comes in contact with a mouse microbe, he will be gravely attacked by the disease.

Dr. Fontenelle says that the hospitals of Paris, especially the old ones, are alive with rodents. The pneumonia microbe exists, therefore, in conditions calculated to increase its virulence and its murderous powers of destruction. He urges the necessity of an immediate and relentless extermination of rodents in every hospital establishment in France or in any other country where the rat or mouse may be found.

The depredations of the rat in France on property are enormous. It is reckoned that for a farm of 50 hectares of wheat and pasture lands the losses caused by rats reach an annual minimum of $200. The destruction by rats about $1 to each inhabitant. Dr. Fontenelle says: "This is too high a tax to pay to the rat tribe and the ever-present danger from the rodent's propagation of maladies like the plague and pneumonia shows the wisdom of carrying on a determined war of extermination."

NO MEDICINE.

But Change of Food Gave Final Relief.

Most diseases start in the alimentary canal—stomach and bowels.

A great deal of our stomach and bowel troubles come from eating too much starchy and greasy food.

The stomach does not digest any of the starchy food we eat—white bread, pastry, potatoes, oats, etc.—these things are digested in the small intestines, and if we eat too much, as most of us do, the organs that should digest this kind of food are overcome by excess of work, so that fermentation, indigestion, and a long train of ails result.

Too much fat also is hard to digest and this is changed into acids, sour stomach, belching gas, and a bloated, heavy feeling.

In these conditions a change from indigestible foods to Grape-Nuts will work wonders in not only relieving the distress but in building up a strong digestion, clear brain and steady nerves.

A woman writes:

"About five years ago I suffered with bad stomach—dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation—caused, I know now, from overeating starchy and greasy food.

"I doctored for two years without any benefit. The doctor told me there was no cure for me. I could not eat anything without suffering severe pain in my back and sides, and I became discouraged.

"A friend recommended Grape-Nuts and I began to use it. In less than two weeks I began to feel better and inside of two months I was a well woman and have been ever since.

"I can eat anything I wish with pleasure. We eat Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast and are very fond of it." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Natural for Them.

Husband (impatiently)—"Is it possible, my dear, that you cannot keep those children quiet for a moment?"

Wife (soothingly)—"Now, John, don't be harsh with the poor little innocent things; it is natural for them to be full of spirits, and they're doing the best they can."

Husband—"Well, if I could have a moment's peace I would sit down and write that cheque for fifty dollars that you've been bothering me for."

Wife (sternly)—"Children, go upstairs at once, and if I hear another word from you to-night I will punish you severely."

GOOD FOR ALL BABIES.

Baby's Own Tablets are good for all babies. They are good for the newborn babe or the growing child—the babe who suffers from constipation or the one whose teething is difficult or who has indigestion, colic, worms or any of the other babyhood ailments. The Tablets banish all these troubles—they are perfectly safe; being guaranteed by a government analyst to contain no opiates or harmful drugs. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PRINCE AS AUTHOR.

The Crown Prince of Germany has written a book anent his hunting experiences in Great Britain and India. He recalls them with evident pleasure, and throughout he adopts a very appreciative attitude. He was particularly impressed with country house life and English hospitality, as the following excerpt shows: "These English country houses are, to my taste, the most elegant and at the same time the most comfortable places imaginable. In my Indian sketches I have already paid tribute to the wonderful hospitality of the Briton, and I should like to mention it again now. Each guest is delightfully cared for in a house of this kind, and the care is so quietly and charmingly exercised that the recipient is never allowed to realize that the host is putting himself to any trouble on his behalf. The English excel in this art of genial and thoughtful entertaining."

He contrasts the mistaken idea that prevails in Germany that a guest must be always amused: "There is nothing of the kind in England. The meals are all at settled hours, and at these the 'house party' foregathers. Unless there is something special on foot, such as a shoot, each one is absolutely his own master in the intervals. As these 'house parties' are usually composed of light-hearted young men and very often of beautiful women, there is every reason why you should have a delightful time. The whole house and home of the host is in the fullest sense of the word at the guest's absolute disposal. He has only to say the word, and he can ride, motor, fish, shoot, sail, play tennis, or golf, flirt—everything is at his hand. He has only got to choose. The Scottish castle in which I found myself was typical of this perfect hospitality."

To Prevent Small Frauds.

Fraud is practised in many forms in France, but it is news that snails are receiving the attention of the tricksters. It seems that small frauds have become so serious that a society has been formed to stop it. It is called the "Syndicate of the Preparers and Dealers of Snails in France." As a comestible the snail has an enormous clientele. Snails are sold by millions. But the consumers are not quite certain of the origin of the snails they eat. The fraud consists of putting the snails called the "Little Greys," into the empty shells of Burgundy snails, which are of superior quality.

A WONDERFUL CASE.

Three Months in Hospital and Came out Uncured.

Zam-Buk Cured Him in Few Weeks

Mr. Fred Mason, the well-known upholsterer and mattress manufacturer of St. Andrew's, N.B., says:—

"I had eczema on my knee, which caused me terrible pain and inconvenience. The sore parts would itch and burn and tingle, and then when rubbed or scratched, would become very painful. When the knee got warm, it burned worse, and the itching and burning and smarting were almost unbearable. I tried various remedies, but got no better, so I decided to go to Montreal and take special treatment. I received treatment at the Montreal General Hospital for thirteen weeks, but at the end of that time I was not cured, and almost gave in. A friend advised me to give Zam-Buk a trial.

"Almost as soon as applied Zam-Buk stopped the itching and the irritation. I persevered with the balm, and it was soon evident that it would do me good. Each day the pain was reduced, the sore spots began to heal, and by the time I had used a few boxes of Zam-Buk I was quite cured.

"Since then Zam-Buk has cured blood-poison in my finger.

For eczema, blood-poisoning, piles, ulcers, sores, abscesses, varicose ulcers, bad leg, cold sores, chapped hands, cuts, burns, bruises and all skin injuries and diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal.

MARRIED IN WINNIPEG—As will be seen elsewhere in our columns Mrt Harry Bissett, son of Mr. George H. Bissett of Winnipeg, Man., formerly of Exeter was married in that city on Wednesday, Oct. 30th, to Miss Verda Rollins, daughter of Mr. Ed. Rollins of Crystal City, Man., formerly of Exeter. The marriage was a quiet affair, being performed at the Zion Methodist church parsonage by the Rev. W. A. Cooke. The Advocate extends congratulations.

FORMER EXETER MAN DEAD—The death occurred at Kingsville, Ont., on Nov. 6th, of a former well-known resident of Exeter, in the person of James Swinerton, who was in his 82 year. It is many years since deceased resided here, and of late he has been spending the summers in Kingsville and the winters in California. The remains were brought to Exeter on Tuesday morning and interment was made in Exeter cemetery, which is situated on the farm Mr. Swinerton formerly owned.

ANNIVERSARY—The anniversary services of Main Street Methodist church were held on Sunday last, when Rev. W. H. Barraclough of Sarnia preached morning and evening, appropriate and interesting sermons. The music by the choir was very pleasing, particularly a solo by Miss Edna Follick rendered at the evening service. The church was well filled on both occasions. A Sunday School Rally was held in the afternoon. The Collections and subscriptions amounted to over $400.00.

HICKS FORECAST FOR NOVEMBER
A Reactionary Storm Period falls on and touching the 18th, 19th, and 20th There will be electrical storms centering on and touching the 19th, the date of the Moon's crossing the Celestial equator. Under strain of Mercury and Venus periods decided storms, culminating in snow and sleet, may be expected at this period. A general low barometer at this time will be ample warning of dangerous autumnal gales, especially on the Atlantic and over the lake regions.

GUY BROS—Guy Bros. Minstrels, who appeared in the Opera House on Thursday evening, drew a full house and pleased the large audience. The equal to their show in minstrelsy would be hard to find. The music was good, the songs first-class, the jokes mostly new, the specialties excellent, the dancing clever, club swinging and acrobatic stunts were brilliant, and altogether it was an evening of fun for everybody. The program was entirely free from anything approaching vulgarity and nothing was said or done to provoke the least criticism in that respect. Their neat, tidy and gentlemanly appearance and conduct on the street was the subject of many favorable remarks from all classes of citizens. The Guy Bros. will always be welcomed in Exeter.

The city of London is about to experiment on the raising of the school age from 14 to 16 years. The idea is not to force children to over 14 years of age to attend day school but to see that they attend night school for a time in order to take lessons in manual training and domestic science. The idea is a good one and the result will be watched with interest.

When a man is nearly frozen from a ten-mile drive on a cold winter day he will hardly stop to read a plank advertisement. But at home in his armchair with his legs crossed before a cheerful fire he reads his local paper, and while he is feeling good and has plenty of time, picks out the live business men of the town from the advertisements on the paper and makes up his mind where he will trade on his next trip to town.

Reports from all parts of the county indicate that now that the farmers are taking their late potatoes out of the pits, where they were stored since digging, the loss and depreciation from rot is much greater than was thought likely. Little of the crop will be available for shipping. In nearly every case the yield was very large, but the greatest loss is found where this is the case, Heavy clay land is practically useless, but the sandy and lighter soils will give probably half a crop.

ANNUAL BAZAAR—The Annual Bazaar, in connection with the Trivitt Memorial church will be held in the Town Hall, on Friday, Dec. 6th. Sale of fancy work will take place in the afternoon and tea will be served. In the evening a choice program will be rendered, 10 cents admission for each.

W. J. CARLING

DEATH OF USBORNE RESIDENT.

The sudden death took place on Friday, Nov. 15th, of one of Usborne's highly respected residents, in the person of Mary Ann Horney, widow of the late William Westlake, at the age of 72 years, 5 months and 11 days. Although the infirmities of old age were telling upon her somewhat, she was in her usual health until about 4.30 Friday afternoon when she dropped dead. Born in United States of English parents, she, with her parents, came to Canada when a girl, residing near Bowmanville for some years, after which they settled on the 5th concession of Usborne. With the exception of a year or two in Hibbert she has resided in Usborne ever since. Of late she has resided with her son, Henry, on the 4th concession. Her husband predeceased her eight years. She is survived by four sons and two daughters, John of the Thames Road, Jas. of Hibbert, William of North Dakota, Henry of the 4th concession, Mrs. J. S. Hays and Mrs. E. Payler of Kenmare, N. D. Deceased was a consistent member of the Methodist church, and a kind and loving mother and friend and her death will be greatly regretted by all who knew her. The funeral took place to the Exeter cemetery on Monday afternoon.

KEEP WINDOWS OPEN.

The advent of colder nights prompts the issue of a Government health bulletin with the slogan, "Keep Your Windows Open" and under this heading says,—"With the onset of cold weather, into the houses go the people," the bulletin reads, "down go the windows and up goes the death rate from the impure air. The air of a closed house is dirty, stagnant, disease-breeding air—air in which no human being can live in safety. Pneumonia is the winter plague, because of indoor conditions. If we must spend our time indoors we must keep the air pure and the only way to do it is to keep the windows open. The man who keeps his window closed and who affords such heavy armour as chest protectors, mufflers and galoshes when he ventures into the open is in infinitely greater danger of contracting pneumonia than is the woman who affects lace hosiery, peek-a-boo waists and half shoes who passes her sleeping hours in fresh air. Better be a fresh air fiend."

Another surprising thing is the manner in which a popular young man drops out of the social world when he marries.

WHITE SQUIRRELS.—We have seen a white elephant, a white crow, a white bird of the black bird species, and many other white things, but it has never been our privilege to see a white squirrel until Tuesday night. On Tuesday Messrs. Samuel Sweet and Wm. Adl Balkwill were out shooting in Hibbert Township, and in the course of their day's sport Mr. Sweet ran across two of this particular species of squirrel and shot both of them. Strange to say they were not together, being over three-quarters of a mile apart, but it is supposed that they came from the same litter. They were pure white without a spot of any kind. They are evidently a freak of nature, and being excellent specimens they will be stuffed.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Armstrong, Huron Street, celebrated the 30th anniversary of their wedding day on Friday last. A few neighbors and friends were present and a very pleasant evening was spent.

Mr. Thos. Newell received the sad news Wednesday afternoon of the death of his brother, Alfred W. Newell at Stratford in his 29th year. Deceased had been ill for some time of pulmonary trouble, and the end has been expected for some time. Mr. Newell visited Stratford Tuesday and had only been home a few hours when the sad news came over the phone.

DEATH OF ORVILLE SNELL—The death took place on Monday morning of Mr. Orville W. G. A. Snell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Snell, Lot, 15, Con. 7, Usborne, at the age of 26 years 1 month, 26 days. Death was due to lung trouble from which he had been suffering for some months. The late Mr. Snell went to London about ten years ago where he worked in a wholesale house for three years. Then he accepted a position as commercial traveller and travelled through Ontario for five years. The past two years he spent on similar business in Western Canada, returning home last July, since which time he had been confined to the home of his father. During the past few weeks he has been quite ill, but the end was not expected so soon. The funeral took place to the Exeter cemetery on Wednesday afternoon. The bereaved parents and family have the sympathy of the entire community.

The Countryside

MOUNT CARMEL

Bishop Fallon spent Sunday, Nov. 10, at R. C. church here. The people of the parish responded generously toward the fund for the building of the new seminary in London. The amount subscribed was $3,530.—Rev. Fr. Goodwin of St. Thomas visited Fr. Forster for a few days last week.—A large number from this neighborhood attended the funeral of the late Mrs. John O'Neil of Mooresville.—Mr. Jos. Zeler and family leave this week for London. Their departure from our midst will be much regretted, but they will have the best wishes of all for a long and a happy residence in their new home.—Messrs. Thomas and Augustus Morrisey left on Thursday for Detroit to attend the funeral of their brother-in-law, Mr. Samuel Cassidy, who died in that city on the 13th.—Miss Lavey of Dashwood visited Miss Marie Gunnan on Sunday.—Miss Pearl Breen of Moray was the guest of Miss Mary O'Brien on Sunday.—Mr. Frank Lavin of Seaforth visited his sister Mrs. P. Glavin, for a few days last week.—The farmers in this neighborhood are busy with their fall plowing, and if the weather continues fine they will soon have it completed.

Death—Another of the oldest residents of this township passed away at his home on Tuesday, Nov. 12, in the person of James Hayes, aged 80 years. He had been in failing health for some months so that his death was not unexpected. Mr. Hayes leaves to mourn four daughters, Mrs. Ed. Hall of this place, Mrs. P. Glavin of Stratford, Mrs. Delaney and Miss Teresa of Detroit, and one son John, with whom he lived. The funeral took place to the R. C. cemetery here on Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

ELIMVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Griff of London visited Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Hunter on Sunday last.—Miss Mills of Woodham is visiting her cousin Miss Meda Coultis.—Anniversary services will be held in the Methodist church next Sunday. Rev. McAllister of Exeter will preach in the morning at 10 o'clock, and the pastor, Rev. Steadman, in the evening at 7. A liberal offering is asked for.—Mrs. Greason and children left for their new home in St. Marys on Tuesday.—Mrs Earl is visiting in Seaforth.—The W. M. S. met on Thursday last. Short bright papers were given by Miss Upshall, Miss Othella Heywood, Mrs. Eli Coultis and others. The December meeting will be held at the parsonage. The ladies will also serve lunch. Mrs. R. Skinner will have charge of the mission study for the next meeting. A collection is asked for in aid of the rest fund.—Rev. Steadman was in Hensall on Tuesday.—Mr. and Mrs. Balkwill visited at Mr. Robt. Selery's Sunday.—Mr. Robt. Woods is visiting his daughter in Strathroy.

GRAND BEND.

Messrs. S. Pedler and P. George from Allen Craig were here Saturday.—Cyrus Green's home has been brightened by the arrival of a daughter.—Mrs. John Baird entertained some of her friends to a quilting Thursday afternoon.

Ethel Oliver of Greenway visited Margaret Carriere Saturday.—Miss Steward son of Greenway is visiting her sister Mrs. George Oliver.—Mr. Robert Pollock is moving onto his farm which he recently bought from James Rush.—Mr. Maxim Gratton moved into A. Dejardine's house Thursday.—Greta, daughter of William Baker, is on the sick list.

Fire.—On Saturday morning Mr. John Southcott's house caught fire and before anything could be done burned to the ground, only a few things being saved. This is quite a loss to Mr. Southcott. The cottage being brick for the first storey it was very little damaged and he has started to build on it again.

CENTRALIA

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hodgert of Farquhar visited with Mr. and Mrs. T. Wilks Sunday.

Mrs. Coughlin has returned from a visit in London. Her son, Adrian, who resides in the west, accompanied her, and will visit here for a time.

The Ladies' Aid held a social Monday night last, at which a goodly number was in attendance and a pleasant time was spent. The music was furnished by the husbands of the ladies, while Mr. McAllister of Exeter gave an interesting address on "People I have met." The proceeds amounted to about $20.

Mrs. H. Mills was in St. Thomas on Sunday visiting relatives.

The sad intelligence was received here this week of the death of Mr. Thos. Godsave, who died in Duluth Hospital on Tuesday from the effects of an attack of pneumonia. Deceased was a native of Stephen and left here about six years ago for Duluth, where he has since resided. His brother James was called to that city about two weeks ago. Deceased was aged about 40 years.

Death of Mrs. O'Neil.—On Tuesday, Nov 12th, at her home here, one of the foremost and faithful parishioners of Adair R. C. church, died. She was a daughter of Mr. William Flanagan formerly of McGillivray, but now of Bellingham, Wash. Some twenty-five years ago she was joined in holy matrimony to John O'Neil, son of Arthur O'Neil of Parkhill. During these short, but happy years, she spent some time in the Western States, and nine years ago with her husband and family settled on the fine farm formerly owned by the late P. Curtin. On the eve of the 31st of October she was suddenly stricken with a stroke of paralysis. She received the best care a loving family, doctors and nurses could give, but in spite of all she hovered between life and death till Tuesday morning, when her soul passed peacefully and calmly out of this world. The respect in which Mrs. O'Neil was held was strongly and duly shown by the very large crowd that followed the funeral to the church on Thursday morning. Solemn High Mass was chanted at 10 o'clock by Rev. Fr. Forester, assisted by Fr. Goodwin of St. Thomas, as deacon, and Fr. O'Neil of Parkhill as sub-deacon. During the offertory the choir rendered beautifully "Hark, Hark My Soul." After Mass Fr. Goodwin delivered a very interesting eloquent and impressive sermon, pointing out in beautiful illustrations, the amiable and lovable life of the deceased, showing that her whole attention was centered in her home and church, both in the spiritual and temporal welfare of all within her care. A distinguished position she held was the honor of being president of the Altar Society. She is survived by her father and mother, brothers and sisters, who were unable to attend the funeral. Besides these she also leaves to mourn her loss, her husband one daughter, Leona, and one son, Arthur, at home, all of whom have the deepest sympathy of a large circle of relatives and friends.

ONLY A MONTH;

OR, A CURIOUS MYSTERY EXPLAINED.

CHAPTER XXIV.—(Cont'd)

Poor Frithiof was far too much stunned to be able to feel any gratitude for this. Mr. Horner, however, left him no time to reply.

"I think you have taken leave of your senses, Boniface," he said vehemently. "Save yourself the annoyance of prosecuting, if you like; but it is grossly unfair to the rest of your employees to keep a thief in your house. If there is one thing noticeable in all successful concerns it is that uncompromising severity is shown to even trifling errors, even to carelessness."

"My business has hitherto been successful," said Mr. Boniface, quietly, "and I have never gone on that principle, and never will. Why are we to have a law of mercy and rigidly to exclude it from every-day life? But that is the way of the world. It manages, while calling itself Christian, to shirk most of Christ's commands."

"I tell you," said Mr. Horner, who was now in a towering passion, "that it is utterly against the very rules of religion. The fellow is not repentant; he persists in sticking to a lie, and yet you weakly forgive him."

"If," said Mr. Bonifare, quietly, "you knew a little more of Frithiof Falck you would know that it is quite impossible that he could consciously have taken the money. When he took it he was not himself. If he had wanted to hide it—to steal it—why did he actually return to the shop with it in his possession? He might easily have disposed of it while he was out."

"If that is your ground, then I object to having a man on my premises who is afflicted with kleptomania. But it is not so. The fellow is as long-headed and quick-witted as any one I know; he has managed to hoodwink you, but from the first I saw through him, and knew him to be a designing—"

"Sir," broke in Frithiof, turning to Mr. Boniface, "this is more than I can endure. For God's sake call back the detective, examine further into this mystery; there must be some explanation!"

"How can any man examine further?" said Mr. Boniface, sadly. "The note is missed, and is actually found upon you. The only possible explanation is that you were not yourself when you took it."

"Then the least you can do is to dismiss him," resumed Mr. Horner. But Mr. Boniface interrupted him very sharply.

"You will please remember, James, that you are in no way concerned with the engagement or dismissal of those employed in this house. That is entirely my affair, as is set forth in our deed of partnership."

"Which partnership will need renewing in another six months," said Mr. Horner, growing red with anger. "And I give you fair warning that if this dishonest fellow is kept on I shall then withdraw my capital and retire from the business."

With this Parthian shot he went out, banging the door behind him.

Frithiof had borne in silence all the taunts and insults showered on him. "Sir," he said, trying in vain to govern his voice, "you have been very good to me; but it will be best that I should go."

"I would not have you leave for the world," said Mr. Boniface. "Remember that your sisters are dependent on you. You must think first of them."

"No," said Frithiof, firmly; "I must first think of what I owe to you. It would be intolerable to me to feel that I had really brought any loss on you through Mr. Horner's anger. I must go."

"Nonsense," said Mr. Boniface; "I can not hear of such a thing. Why, how do you think you would get another situation with this mystery still hanging over you? I, who know you so well, am convinced of your perfect freedom from blame; but strangers could not possibly be convinced of it."

Frithiof was silent; he thought of Sigrid and Swanhild suffering through his trouble, he remembered his terrible search for work when he had first come to London, and he realized that it was chiefly his own pride that prompted him never to return to the shop.

"If you are indeed willing that I should stay," he said at length, "then I will stay. But your theory—the theory that makes you willing still to trust me—is mistaken. I know that there is not a minute in this day when my head has not been perfectly clear."

"My dear fellow, you must allow me to keep what theory I please. There is no other explanation than this, and you would be wisest if you accepted it yourself."

"That is impossible," said Frithiof, sadly.

"It is equally impossible that I can doubt the evidence of my own senses. The note was there, and you can't possibly explain its presence. How is it possible that Darnell could have crossed over to your till, taken out the note and pinned it in your pocket? Besides, what motive could he have for doing such a thing?"

"I don't know," said Frithiof; "yet I shall swear to my dying day that I never did it myself."

"Well, there is no use in arguing the point," said Robert Boniface, wearily. "It is enough for me that I can account to myself for what must otherwise be an extraordinary mystery. You had better go back to your work now, and do not worry over the affair. Remember that I do not hold you responsible for what has happened."

After this, of course nothing more could be said.

CHAPTER XXV.

As he walked down the sort of avenue of pianos and harmoniums in the inner shop, there came to his mind, why, he could not have told, words spoken to him long before by that customer who had left on his mind so lasting an impression, "Courage! the worst will pass." Though he could not exactly believe the words, yet he clung to them with a sort of desperation. Also he happened to notice the clock, and practically adopted Sydney Smith's wise maxim, "Take short views."

None of them said good-night to him when he left for home; they were not intentionally unkind, but they were awkward, and they felt that the strange affair of the afternoon had made a great gulf between them and the culprit. Very slowly he walked through the noisy streets, very reluctantly crossed the great court-yard, and mounted flight after flight of stairs. At the threshold he hesitated, wondering whether it would be possible to shield them from the knowledge. He could hear Sigrid singing in the kitchen as she prepared the supper, and something told him that it would be impossible to conceal his trouble from her. With a sigh he opened the door into the sitting room; it looked very bright and cheerful; Swanhild stood at the open window watering the flowers in the window-box, red and white geraniums and southern-wood, grown from cuttings given by Cecil. She gave him her usual merry greeting.

"Come and look at my garden, Frithiof," she said. "Doesn't it look lovely?"

"Why, you are late," said Sigrid, coming in with the cocoa, her face a little flushed with the fire, which was trying on that summer day. Then, glancing at him, "How tired you look! Come, sit down and eat. I have got a German sausage that even Herr Siverstsen would not grumble at. The heat has tired you, and you will feel better after you have had something."

He eat obediently, though the food almost choked him; Swanhild, fancying that he had one of his bad headaches, grew quiet, and afterward was not surprised to find that he did not as usual get out his writing materials, but asked Sigrid to go out with him for a turn.

"You are too tired to try the translating?" she asked.

"Yes, I'll try it later," he said; "but let us have half an hours' walk together now."

She consented at once, and went to put on her hat, well knowing that Frithiof never shirked his work without good reason; then leaving strict orders with Swanhild not to sit up after nine, they left her absorbed in English history, and went down into the cool clear twilight. Some children were playing quietly in the court-yard; Sigrid stopped for a minute to speak to one of them.

"Is your father better this evening?" she asked.

"Yes, miss, and he's a-goin' back to work to-morrow," replied the child, lifting a beaming face to the friendly Norwegian lady.

"I should have thought you had troubles enough of your own," he said, moodily, "without bothering yourself with other people's."

"But since our own troubles I have somehow cared more about them; I don't feel afraid as I used to do of sick people, and people who have lost those belonging to them. I want always to get nearer to them."

"Sigrid," he said, desperately, "can you bear a fresh trouble for yourself? I have bad news for you to-night."

"Roy?" she asked, breathlessly, her mind instinctively turning first to fears for his safety.

"Oh, no! Roy is still at Paris. They heard to-day that he could not be back in time for the concert. It is I who have brought this trouble on you. Though how it came about God only knows. Listen, and I'll tell you exactly how everything happened."

By this time they had reached one of the parks, and they sat down on a bench under the shade of a great elm-tree. Then very quietly and minutely he told exactly what had passed that afternoon.

"I am glad," she exclaimed when he paused, "that Mr. Boniface was so kind. And yet, how can he think that of you?"

"You do not think it, then?" he asked, looking her full in the face.

"What! think that you took it in absence of mind? Think that it would be possible for you deliberately to take it out of the till and pin it in your own pocket! Why, of course not! In actual delirium, I suppose, a man might do anything, but you are as strong and well as any one else. Of course, you had nothing whatever to do with it, either consciously or unconsciously."

"Yet the thing was somehow there, and the logical inference is, that I must have put it there," he said.

"I don't care a fig for logical inference!" she cried. "All I know is that you had nothing whatever to do with it. If I had to die for maintaining that, I would say it with my last breath."

He caught her hand in his, and held it fast.

"If you still believe in me the worst is over," he said. "With the rest of the world, of course, my character is gone, but there is no help for that."

"But there must be help," said Sigrid. "Some one else must be guilty. The other man in the shop must certainly have put it there."

"For what purpose?" said Frithiof, sadly. "Besides, how could he have done it without my knowledge?"

"I don't know," said Sigrid, beginning to ponder the difficulties of the case. "What sort of a man is he?"

"I used to dislike him at first, and he naturally disliked me because I was a foreigner. But latterly we have got on well enough. He is a very decent sort of fellow, and I don't for a moment believe that he would steal."

"One of you must have done it," said Sigrid. "And as I certainly never could believe that you did it, I am forced to think the other man guilty. Look, Frithiof, why should we wast time and strength in worrying over this? After all, what difference does it make to us in ourselves? Business hours must, of course, be disagreeable enough to you, but at home you must forget the disagreeables; at home you are my hero, unjustly accused, and bearing the penalty of another's crime."

PLANTS AND TOBACCO SMOKE

Many Varieties of Growth Killed by Influence of Tobacco.

Prof. Molisch, the plant physiologist of the University of Prague, has shown in some of his earlier work that large numbers of micro-organisms, plants as well as animals, and the seedlings of higher plants are extremely sensitive to the influence of tobacco smoke, some being even killed thereby. Many of the deleterious effects experienced were formerly attributed to the small quantities of illuminating gas which frequently vitiates the atmosphere of such rooms; but Molisch's experiments left no room for doubt that it is really tobacco smoke that does the harm. His pictures showing the growth of pea and vetch seedlings in the presence and in the absence of tobacco smoke are very striking.

In his more recent experiments he used older plants of various species, including species of spider-wort, echeveria, eupatorium, selaginella and others. None of these plants showed any ill effects from the treatment, although exposed for a long time to an atmosphere filled with tobacco smoke. Other plants, however, responded in various striking ways.

Brehmeria utilis and Splitgerbera bilaba changed their manner of growth. When placed in a large bell jar and a few puffs of smoke from a cigar or cigarette were blown in, the leaves of these plants, ordinarily growing at right angles to the stem—that is, in a horizontal position—began to turn on their stalks, in the course of from twenty-four to forty-eight hours, until they were in a vertical plane. In the case of the brehmeria they continued their rotations beyond this point, describing a spiral. Similar disturbances were produced upon these two plants by illuminating gas. But other plants used in the experiments showed similar effects of tobacco smoke, but did not respond to the illuminating gas.

Earlier experiments showed that various narcotics provoke abnormal developments of the breathing holes on the shoot of the potato. Experiments with tobacco smoke on the potato and on other plants led to the same results, often with the accumulation of masses of liquid under the swollen areas.

In some plants of the bean family the tobacco smoke caused the leaves to drop off in a very short time. The sensitive plant (Mimosa pudica) and the black locust (Robina pseudocacia) and others lost all or nearly all of their leaves in from twenty-four to forty-eight hours after being placed in an atmosphere containing tobacco smoke. To a smaller degree smoke from wood and paper and illuminating gas produced similar results. The fumes of nicotine had very little influence.—Scientific American.

108 Canadian farmers will receive cash prizes (twelve in each Province) in our big

1912 FARMERS' PRIZE CONTEST

WE held a contest last year in which 36 prizes were offered. This year there will be three times as many prizes (108) and therefore three times as many chances for you to win one of them. You do not have to use a large quantity of cement to win a prize. Many of last year's prize-winners used comparatively little cement.

THE contest is divided into three classes and in only one of these (Class "A") does the amount of cement used count in deciding prize winners. Class "B" is for doing the best concrete work (the size makes no difference). Class "C" is for sending in the best and clearest description of how any piece of concrete work was done.

THERE will be four prizes (First, $50; Second, $25; Third, $15; Fourth, $10) in each class in each Province. Thus you have only to compete with other farmers in your own Province, and not with those in all parts of Canada. This gives you the best possible chance to win a $50 prize.

IT COSTS NOTHING TO ENTER—There are absolutely no "strings" to this offer. There is no entry fee or red tape to bother with. You cannot lose, because the improvements you make of concrete in competing for the prizes will be more than worth their cost. We have a book, "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete," that will give you all the information about the use of concrete you can need. It will be sent to you free when you ask us for complete particulars of the Prize Contest. Ask for particulars to-day. Just say "Send me, free, your book and full particulars of the 1912 Prize Contest," on a post card and mail it to-day. Address Publicity Manager,

NOTES AND COMMENTS

What can society do with the habitual criminal? This question, old as it is, presents itself constantly for an answer from a civilization that strives for the cure rather than the punishment only of crime. In The Nineteenth Century and After a well-known English writer, W. S. Lilly, proposes that a criminal colony be established for the incorrigibles—those who have been convicted a third time of a serious offense. He would have Britain select some island as a permanent colony and deprive the convict of liberty for the rest of his life. The man sentenced to this colony, he says, "should be humanely treated, sufficiently fed, not overworked and provided with the means of moral and religious culture; but a stern discipline should be enforced, the chief instruments of which would be the lash and reduced rations for the mutinous. Possibly, like the slaves of ancient Rome, he might be allowed a peculium or, at all events, the privilege of receiving for himself and of employing as he might choose the proceeds of his own labor in excess of the cost of his maintenance."

In support of this proposition Mr. Lilly points out that England has many habitual criminals, 70 to 80 per cent. of those who have been in jail returning thither. Every great city, as he says, is infested with these enemies of society. Regardless of whether they are what they are by reason of themselves or of society, they would no longer be a social menace and would have a chance to better themselves in such a colony. The proposition is worth thinking about in every country. One great advantage, which Mr. Lilly does not mention, is that in a well regulated colony the criminals would not marry or reproduce. The eugenists have well shown the danger of the perpetuation of a distinctly criminal class.

Although he habitually confesses to boredom in exercising the function, there can be no doubt that England has hit upon a happy use for Lord Rosebery in employing him to open libraries in the ampler leisure that is now his. In the first place, he is a bookman and, therefore, not inclined to attach too much importance to reading. In the second place—and this is, of course, a consequence of the first—he remains cheerfully unimpressed in the presence of a vast array of books he has never read and never desires to read.

In the multiplication of libraries it is necessary to resist the tyranny of books as one would resist any other evil. The most tyrannical, Lord Rosebery implied in opening a library recently, are the 100 best books which competent gentlemen are willing to furnish on the least possible occasion. He firmly believed that if anyone should undertake to read such a list through he would never want to read again.

The truth is, of course, that the bookman is the wariest of all men in escaping the tyranny of books. A bookman is not a man who can read all books; rather, he is a man who can read the books he likes with increasing zest as he gets older. For the rest, he faces the books he can't read with a philosophic calm that has in it absolutely nothing of resignation. Such is Lord Rosebery's way, and the result is a refreshing absence of cant in his "chats about books."

Cause and Effect were Similar.

Emma sent her plate back three times to be filled with turkey, and was helped bountifully each time. Finally, she was observed to look regretfully at the unfinished portion of her dinner.

"What's the trouble, Emma?" asked Uncle John. "You look mournful."

"That's just the trouble," said Emma. "I am more'n full," and then she wondered why all the others laughed.

HOME

Peanuts' Place in the Kitchen.

The peanut contains from 40 to 50 per cent oil, clear, odorless, colorless, resembling olive oil in many respects, and having the property of resisting change under all ordinary exposure for a great length of time. It is used for lubricating and soapmaking, and is a good substitute for olive oil for salads and other culinary purposes, and takes the place of lard and butter in cooking.

Peanut Soup. — One pint of shelled and blanched peanuts; two tablespoonfuls of onion, two tablespoonfuls of celery, one pint of white stock, four tablespoonfuls of butter, one pint of milk, salt, red pepper and paprika; chop the peanuts in a meat chopper; cooked the chopped nuts, the onion and the celery in the white stock for 20 minutes; melt the butter, add the flour, the milk and the seasoning; cook for five minutes; combine the mixtures, strain and sieve.

Salted Peanuts.—Shell and skin the raw nuts, and to each half pint of peanuts allow a teaspoonful of salt and a tablespoonful of melted butter or olive oil; let them stand for one hour, then put them on tins, and brown delicately in the oven. Shake and stir frequently, that they will brown evenly. They should be prepared as needed, as they grow rancid and soft if kept on hand too long.

Peanut Salad.—Soak half a pint of peanut meats in olive oil, drain, and mix with one pint of cut celery and 12 ripe or green olives, pitted and chopped; mix with mayonnaise, and serve on lettuce. This is particularly good to serve with duck or game.

Peanut Sandwiches.—There are several ways for using peanuts for sandwiches. They may be simply pounded or chopped fine, well sprinkled with salt, moistened with a few drops of olive oil, and spread thickly between slices of buttered bread. Or they may be powdered and stirred in mayonnaise for the filling, mixed with cream cheese, and spread between crackers or slices of thin buttered bread. Another way: With a biscuit cutter cut slices of bread round, cover with whipped cream (not sweetened); mash some peanuts fine, and sprinkle thickly over the cream. Nice for afternoon luncheons.

Peanut Caramels.—Put into a saucepan over the fire one cupful of molasses, one cupful of sugar and a quarter of a tablespoonful of butter, cook until the syrup crisps when dropped into water, then stir in quickly one cupful of chopped peanuts and pour into buttered tins. When nearly cold mark into squares.

Peanuts and Macaroni.—Half a pint of macaroni broken into one-inch pieces, half a pound of peanuts, one pint of milk, three tablespoonfuls of flour, three tablespoonfuls of butter; the macaroni is put into two quarts of rapidly-boiling water, in which one tablespoonful of salt has been dissolved, and is cooked 30 minutes; it is then drained; melt the butter in a saucepan, add the flour, stir till smooth, then gradually add the milk and cook for 10 minutes; salt, pepper and the ground peanuts are next added to the sauce; now a layer of macaroni is put in a buttered pudding dish, and a layer of the sauce and peanuts is poured on; then another layer of macaroni, and next more sauce and peanuts are used until the materials are consumed; buttered crumbs are now placed on top and the dish is put in the oven until browned on top.

Peanut Butter. — Take freshly roasted peanuts, hulled and thoroughly winnowed, put them through a meat grinder several times until they look smooth and buttery, then add salt and cayenne pepper to taste. Sometimes a lump of sweet melted country butter is added. Beat till the whole is light and creamy.

Peanut Fudge Filling.—Two cupfuls of sugar, one pint of milk, four squares of chocolate, four tablespoonfuls of butter, one teaspoonful of vanilla essence, one cupful of chopped peanuts. Put all ingredients into a saucepan and let this stand at the back of the range until the mixture liquefies. Boil until a soft ball is formed; beat until creamy; spread between cakes.

Home Hints.

Clean oil cloth with skimmed milk or milk and water; soap will ruin it.

If the teapot becomes musty, put a lump of sugar in it before putting it away. It will smell sweet when you want to use it.

If after peeling onions one peels a raw potato the odor of the onions will entirely disappear from the hands.

It is now quite the proper thing to have one's tablecloths scalloped and button-holed instead of hemstitched, as formerly.

If iodine stains are upon wood, wet the wood with corn starch and let stand a minute; then rub until the same disappear.

Do not starch linens. To give the garment the much-desired stiffness, iron it while it is damp and until it is perfectly dry.

Use hot water for all things that grow under ground, such as potatoes and turnips, and cold water for those growing above ground.

It is said that if common table salt is added to gasoline, spots can be cleaned on silks or other delicate fabrics without leaving a ring.

Half an eggshell with a hole in the end makes a useful little funnel. It will be more desirable if the shell is slightly browned in the stove.

When cooking mushrooms it is safe to put a silver spoon in the pan. If the spoon turns dark, you can be sure there is a toadstool in the pan.

The skirt worn in the business office is apt to wear shiny. This can be prevented if there is provided a small cushion or strip of baize to fit the office chair or stool.

When a patient cannot retain nourishment, albumen water is very often given. Beat up the whites of two eggs, add half a pint of tepid water and a pinch of salt.

In poaching eggs, stir the water till it is whirling rapidly. Then drop your egg in quickly and the edges will be round and smooth.

If a sugary crust is desired on meringue, sift powdered sugar over it before it is placed in the oven, and have the latter cool.

BRITAIN'S FUTURE KING.

"Contingent Coming of Age" For the Prince of Wales.

It is commonly said and supposed that a Prince of Wales "comes of age" on his eighteenth birthday. In point of fact he does, and he does not. The occasion has been well described as "a contingent coming of age," for the words are only applicable to the prince as heir to the throne, while they are not applicable to him in his private capacity. From and after the completion of his, or her, eighteenth birthday, the heir is qualified to succeed to the full possession of the throne on the occurrence of a vacancy, as was actually the case of the Princess Victoria, who became queen less than a month after her eighteenth birthday. Had William IV. died a year earlier a Regent would have been necessary; but as it happened, and as we all know, there was no question of anything of the kind, and Queen Victoria presided at her first council with all the authority of a reigning queen. In the case of the death or declared incapacity of the sovereign, the heir having reached the age of eighteen, becomes ipso facto king or regent as the case may be. In this sense, then, "full age" means eighteen years. But in all others the minority of the Prince of Wales continues.—London Times.

BEST TEST OF CHARACTER

It Is What in Man's Innermost Self He Loves and Continually Strives to Be

St. Luke xviii., 10.—Two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican.

Jesus was not an artist, and yet He painted some wonderful word pictures, which have made a more powerful and enduring impression on the world, and have had a far deeper influence over men, than has any masterpiece on cavnas. Such, for example, are His pictures of "The Lost Sheep and the Seeking Shepherd," "The Good Samaritan" and "The Prodigal Son."

In this particular instance of which the text speaks, Jesus wished to paint a characteristic picture of His times and of His people. The subject which He chose was the temple and the people as they entered it. This picture was not only characteristic of His own day and His own people, but of every age and every nation. Men are able to do without many things, but one thing they have not been able to do without is God. For the individual to live is to be poor and bereft, and history teaches that woe is to the nation which neglects Him. Peace and joy fall to the lot of him who serves God, and welfare and prosperity to the nation which truly honors Him.

"Two men went up into the temple." Out in the world they occupied different stations in life, but once they entered the temple doors they were equal—they knelt side by side and offered their prayers to the same God before the same altar. God is no respector of persons. In His house, whatever may be their station outside, all have an equal right. If there is any place where the rich and the poor may meet together, that is in God's house, for "the Lord is the maker of us all."

Outside, men judged them by their dress, their possessions, their culture, their friends, but when they come into God's presence He looked beneath these things, and judged them by their character. Men see the superficial and external things of our life, they see us as we appear to be. God sees and takes account of the real things of our life. He sees us as we are.

"Thou, God, Seest Me."

While the Pharisee did good things, he was satisfied with himself. The publican did wrong, but he was dissatisfied with himself and desired to do better. God judges us not so much by our acts as by our purpose. Many men do good not because they love the right, but because they are constrained by public opinion, by expediency or other cause. Other men do wrong even when they wish to do right, because circumstances are against them. "The things which I would I do not, but the things I would not those I do," says St. Paul. The surface of the ocean is moved by winds and currents, but deep down in its bosom lies its true and changeless nature. So the real test of a man's character is what in his innermost self he loves and continually strives to be.—Rev. Francis L. Frost.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, NOVEMBER 24.

Lesson VIII.—The Transfiguration, Mark 9. 2-13. Golden text, Luke 9. 35.

Verse 2. After six days—So in both Mark and Matthew; Luke, however says "about eight days," which is obviously intended to be a less precise statement, as the word "about" indicates.

Peter, and James, and John — The selected group of disciples, forming an inner circle within the larger company, and selected on several other occasions to be the exclusive companions of Jesus at crucial moments in his ministry.

A high mountain—Luke uses the definite article "the," while in 2 Peter 1. 18 the scene of the transfiguration is referred to as "the holy mount." For the place compare introductory paragraph above.

Transfigured — Literally, metamorphosed, or, as Luke, following more nearly the literal sense of the word, has it, altered. Jesus himself refers to what happened as a vision (Matt. 17. 9). However we may explain the event, it was clearly a revelation of reality and no mere mockery of the senses.

3. Glistering — An exceptional word, not occurring again in the New Testament, though used elsewhere in describing the flashing of burnished brass or gold.

As no fuller on earth can whiten them—The fuller's art seems to have consisted in "washing the material with some preparation of lye, beating or rubbing it, and exposing it to the rays of the sun." The cleaning and bleaching involved in this process achieved exceptional results in the whitening of the cloth, as remains of ancient Egyptian linen testify.

4. Elijah with Moses—Usually regarded as representing the two great stages of Old Testament revelation, prophecy and legislation. In reality, however, Moses was as much of a prophet as Elijah, while Elijah was constantly insisting upon the requirements of Jehovah's law.

Talking with Jesus—Concerning his impending decease at Jerusalem (compare Luke 9. 31).

5. Peter answereth—All three synoptists represent Peter as the spokesman of the apostolic group His action under the circumstances is wholly in keeping with his eager, ardent, and impulsive nature.

Rabbi—A customary title by which a pupil addressed his teacher.

Three tabernacles—Or, booths. These on the slopes of Mount Hermon could easily be made from branches of trees. Peter is wholly unselfish and forgetful of the needs of both himself and his two companions, thinking only of the Master and his distinguished visitants.

6. Knew not what to answer—The overwhelming impression of the vision seemed to demand some word in response. Its marvelous nature, however, was conducive to awe and fear rather than to sober reflective thought.

7. There came a cloud—Peter's well-meant but only half coherent proposal is not answered, except in the progress of events incident to the divine manifestation as a whole; of this the overshadowing cloud and the voice out of the cloud were a part.

Hear ye him—Not Moses and the prophets, but Jesus, is hereafter to be their guide and authority.

8. They saw no one any more, save Jesus only—The actual departure of Moses and Elijah it was not given the disciples to witness.

9. As they were coming down—According to Luke, apparently on the morning following the transfiguration.

Save when—The time of the resurrection is left indefinite and contingent.

10. Kept the saying—Obeyed his command to tell no man, though among themselves the strange words of Jesus concerning his resurrection from the dead, together with the event itself, was a matter of frequent conversation and questioning.

11. And they asked him—A further difficulty presents itself to their thinking. According to the teaching of the scribes, the advent of the Messiah was to be preceded by the reappearance of Elijah; but here was an appearance of Elijah after the Messiah's advent, concerning which Jesus had charged them to say nothing.

12. Elijah indeed cometh first — Jesus interpreted this prophecy as having been fulfilled in the life and work of John the Baptist, who came and taught in the spirit of the Old Testament prophet.

Restoreth all things—In the sense of inaugurating a great moral reform movement for the religious betterment and renovation of Israel.

Suffer many things and be set at nought—The humiliation of being despised and rejected by those whom he came to redeem was the severest part of the Master's suffering.

13. They have also done unto him—The three disciples understood that Jesus meant to identify Elijah with John, Matthew's account clearly pointing out the fact that he did. (Matt. 17. 13.)

As it is written of him—What is recorded in the Old Testament regarding Ahab's and Jezebel's treatment of Elijah (1 Kings 19) was typical of Herod's and Herodias's treatment of John.

PROGRESSIVE ONTARIO.

Provincial Map Has Been Rolled Back Beyond Albany River.

Maritime Ontario, with ports on tidewater, is one of the glimpses given of the future by the Provincial Government's undertaking to develop and people the upper and greater portion of the province. The Government is pledging Ontario's credit for five million dollars and as much more as may be necessary for the opening up of this virgin country the size of a European empire.

The District of Patricia is the latest challenge to the trail blazer. No longer is the territory from the Height of Land to James Bay a strange country. The names of its great rivers are now familiar, and its valleys "filled with hush to the brim" are being stirred from their solitude.

Ontario's only maritime outlet has been over the unsalted seas of her south. Now the men in charge of the Ontario Government Railway have declared that the province is in possession of at least one good harbor on James Bay. This railway, the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario, is within 175 miles of the Bay. Surveys for the extension of the road to the mouth of the Moose are being made, and the addition of the District of Patricia has given a shoreline of six hundred miles of tidewater and has resulted in Ontario securing a great share of the grain port to be established at the terminus of the Hudson Bay railway.

The new epoch in Ontario's history suggests a review of the progress made by the province that is regarded by its citizens as being still the back-bone of Confederation. That it is a far cry from the Ontario of to-day to the Upper Canada of 1866 is obvious. Seven years are declared to work a complete change in the physical life of man, and if that be true, the last seven years of Ontario's history have wrought a transformation and have witnessed events and movements that mark these as great times in which to live. The strides made by Ontario in the last decade have been made in such busy times that he who stops to contemplate them feels compelled to stop longer and make sure that he is borne out by the record.

From a revenue of $6,128,359 in 1904 to one of $9,370,833 for the latest fiscal year indicates that Ontario has increased in material wealth. In seven years her field crops have increased in value by over forty million, eight hundred thousand dollars and the lands which produced them have increased in value by a like sum. Ontario's field crops to-day represent over one hundred and seventy-five millions in cash and the fields in which they grow by over six hundred and eighty millions. Live stock on farms to-day is worth twenty-five millions. The total permanent assets of the agricultural industry exceed one billion three hundred millions—an increase in seven years of nearly one hundred and fifteen millions.—C. J. Boylen, in The Canadian Magazine.

BORDEN NAVAL POLICY SAME AS WHEN IN OPPOSITION

The policy of the Borden Government in regard to the problem of naval defence will be absolutely consistent with the stand repeatedly taken by the Prime Minister when as Leader of the Opposition he opposed the Laurier naval policy. Mr. Borden always insisted on two things, an emergency contribution in the event of an emergency being found to exist, and a reference to the electors of any measure of permanent naval defence.

Speaking in the House on January 12, 1910, Mr. Borden on the day the Liberal navy bill was brought down by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, took strong ground in favor of, first, an emergency contribution, and secondly, consulting the people on the question of permanent naval defence. To Sir Wilfrid Laurier he said, "Do not forget that we are confronted with an emergency which may rend this empire asunder before your proposed service is worthy of the name. In the face of such a situation immediate, vigorous, earnest action is necessary. We have no Dreadnoughts ready, we have no fleet unit at hand. But we have the resources, and I trust the patriotism to provide a fleet unit or at least a Dreadnought without one moment's unnecessary delay."

This position was emphasized by Mr. Borden and his followers on February 3, again on April 20, and yet again on November 21 in the same year. On February 3 Mr. Borden said that "to attempt to force a permanent policy of this kind upon the people of this country without giving them an opportunity of saying yea or nay with regard to it, would be one of the worst mistakes that could be made by any man who really favored that policy."

On April 20 Mr. Borden again declared that "I regard the subject of permanent co-operation by Canada in the naval defence of the Empire as one that should properly be submitted to the people of this country before any plan of permanent co-operation is entered upon by Canada." In the same speech he said, "We stand as we have always stood in that respect on two considerations—first, that the emergency conditions of the empire do demand immediate and effective aid, and in the second place that before a basis of permanent co-operation in the naval defence of the empire is entered upon, the people of this country have a right to be consulted and to give their mandate."

On November 21 Mr. Borden gave the House an outline of the course he would follow if in power, "The government of this country are able to ascertain and to know, if they take the proper action for that purpose, whether the conditions which face the empire at this time in respect of naval defence are grave. If we were in power we would endeavor to find that out, to get a plain, unvarnished answer to that question, and if the answer to that question based upon the assurance of the government of the mother country, and the report of the naval experts of the admiralty were such—and I think it would be such—as to demand instant and effective action by this country, then I would appeal to parliament for immediate and effective aid, and if parliament did not give immediate and effective aid I would appeal from parliament to the people of the country. Then, sir, as to the permanent policy, I think the people have a right to be consulted. It would be the duty of any government to go to the people of Canada to receive their mandate and accept and act upon their approval or disapproval of that permanent policy."

Everything possible is being done by the government to prevent a grain blockade this season, and the present outlook is that for the first time for years the wheat of the Western farmers will be marketed without a serious congestion. Navigation will be kept open until the latest possible period, and Hon. J. D. Hazen has given orders to the Marine and Fisheries Department to put its whole equipment at work in assisting shippers in transporting wheat from the head of the lakes eastward.

The announcement that the Government intends to reintroduce the Canada Highways Improvement Act which was killed by the Liberal majority in the Senate at the close of the last session, shows that the Borden government does not intend to be prevented by one setback from carrying into effect its pre-election pledges. The policy of federal aid to highways was an important feature of the platform which the people of Canada approved at the last general election in placing the present ministry in power. The bill introduced by Hon. Frank Cochrane last session was intended to make good the promise made to the people. The Liberal party in Parliament, by means of the Liberal majority in the Senate, succeeded in the dying hours of the session in preventing the passage of the Cochrane Bill, and the expenditure of one million dollars under it.

The amounts provided in the estimates on a population basis and lost to the provinces through the action of the Liberal Opposition, were as follows:—

Alberta	$52,189 90
British Columbia	54,669 52
Manitoba	63,460 10
New Brunswick	49,019 86
Nova Scotia	68,576 90

When times are good people are loath to acknowledge prosperity. When conditions change, people are altogether too willing to join in any panic cry of hard times that may be raised. This is a foolish, not to say ungrateful policy. Hard times exist more in the imagination than in external circumstances. Undoubtedly this year of 1912 has been in many respects a backward and disappointing one; but people are suffering little injury, and the country at large was never more prosperous. Rains may wash away spring crops, but they can not remove the parent soil. Winds may beat down standing grain, but cannot prevent forever the sowing of seed. And so long as any man's title is good to a few acres of soil his credit in these days of high land values is equal to any emergency. Like Rob Roy on his native heath, our Canadian farmers stand firmly on a heritage which makes them strong and independent and is not easily imperiled.

After December 1st the Immigration Department's regulations requiring that every immigrant shall be insured against being a care on the State during the winter months, by having in his possession upon landing on Canadian soil the sum of $50 in cash will come into effect in connection with all classes of immigrants. The department's provision against vagrancy, as a matter of fact, came into effect on November 1st in the case of all but British immigrants with sure prospects of positions; in connection with the latter the time was extended for one month by special request from the authorities on the other side. After December 1st the regulations will be enforced upon all classes and the $50.00 cash insisted upon.

Hon. Louis Coderre, the new Secretary of state in the Borden Cabinet won out in Hochelaga by a majority of 2206, his opponent losing his deposit.

Crediton

Our farmers have taken advantage of the fine days to do their fall plowing. Our wish is that this weather will continue until Xmas.

Sam Brown, J. H. Holtzman, Herb Eilber and Albert Morlock made a business trip to London on Monday.

Mrs. Rogers and Chas Fahner returned to their home in Salem, Mich., on Monday after a short visit here with friends.

Aug. Hill and Chas. Wolf had a good day's shooting one day this week They returned home amply rewarded for their long walk.

H. Eilber, M. P. P., left for Toronto on Monday to attend the special session of a committee (of which he is a member) to revise the present Assessment Act.

An agent of the Sherlock-Manning Co. of London has been placing a number of Pianos in the homes of our farmers the past week.

The teachers of our Public School are hard at work training the pupils who will take part in the School concert to be given some time near Christmas It is a long time since we had a school concert They were always a success so save your money for the coming event.

Last Sunday morning Rev J. A. Schmitt of Berlin preached a very acceptable sermon in the Evangelical Church. The Rev. gentleman has many friends here who are always pleased to hear him and shake his hand.

Miss Linda and Theodore Walper of Exeter spent last Sunday with friends here.

Mr. Felix Wild had the misfortune on Thursday night of last week to have his dry house destroyed by fire. It had been in use and caught fire from the stove.

Mr. Wm. Siebert has moved into the house recently vacated by Mr. Wm. Schroeder.

Several from here attended the auction sale at Mt. Carmel of Mr. Jos. Ziler's property and effects. There was no bid put on the property consequently it was not sold. We think in all fairness to Mr. Ziler that the people who were instrumental in taking away his License and thus rendering his property useless should go down in their pockets and come up with the long green sufficient to compensate Mr. Ziler for his loss.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Gossman of Pt. Huron is spending a few days with friends in this place.

Messrs Henry Willert and Herman Zimmer spent a few days last week in the pinery duck shooting. They were successful in bagging a goodly number.

Mr. Abe Bean of Springbank called on friends here on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Schroeder of Mitchell spent a few days with friends in this place the past week.

Mr. Wm. Morenz and Miss Clara Muser of this place were quietly married at Grand Bend on Tuesday the 12th we extend congratulations.

This week on Tuesday the home of Mr. and Mrs. Miller was the scene of a festive occasion it being the day when their daughter Miss Laura became the wife of Mr. August Miller of this place After the ceremony was over which took place in St. Boniface Church, Zurich a reception was held at the home of the Bride's parents and a number of invited guests did honor to the occasion. We wish the young couple a long and happy married life.

The Auction sale of the Stock and Implements of the late Mr. George Schroeder was held on Wednesday and was well attended.

A choice carload of dairy cows will be sold here on Saturday next.

LUCAN—Mrs. E. J. White of Brooklyn N. Y., who has been spending a few days here with Mrs. George A. Stanley, while attempting to board No. 2 express train at the G. T. R. station at 1.30 o'clock on Monday, was thrown violently to the platform and sustained a severe injury to her ankle. She is still suffering from the shock, and is under the doctor's care.

OSBORNE

Mrs. Robert Monteith, a former respected resident of this township, died at her home in Killarney, Manitoba recently Although Mrs. Monteith had been in poor health for some years, never having fully recovered from a severe illness about four years ago her death was totally unexpected. Mrs. Monteith, whose maiden name was Mary Kilpatrick, was born in Ontario on the 4th of April, 1838, of Scotch parentage, her father, Mr. George Kilpatrick, emigrating from Scotland at an early age. It was in the later sixties she became the bride of Robert Monteith and afterwards lived successively on the Thames Road, Usborne and Crediton and Exeter, in the county of Huron. In 1882 with their family of five small children, the eldest of whom was barely fourteen they went west to Manitoba.

FARQUHAR.

Rev Mr. J. A. Turnbull, who has been visiting in the vicinity for some time past, and conducted services for Rev. Fletcher, returned to his home in Toronto last week.—There is quite an epidemic of whooping cough in the neighborhood at present.—A joint meeting was held in Bethany church on Sunday evening, when reports were heard from the S. S. convention at Hamilton. Mr. Doupe, the chairman of the meeting, gave an address, also Mrs. (Rev.) Fletcher and Mr. Medd of Winchelsea. The reports were very interesting as well as profitable, setting forth the different methods of teaching the young in the Sunday Schools.—A Sunday School Convention is to be held in the Presbyterian church on Thursday of next week. Afternoon and evening sessions will be held.—Mr. And. Hodgert, who was away on a two weeks' trip to New York, returned home on Monday last, he being there in the interest of the Frost Fence Co.

KIRKTON

The auxiliaries of the Women's Missionary Society of the Kirkton and the Woodham circuits were recently favored by a visit from Mrs. A. M. Wilson, District Organizer, of Greenway. At Woodham, owing to the inclemency of the weather, the attendance was small but at both Anderson and Salem, where Mrs. Wilson gave addresses to the auxiliaries and to the Mission Bands, the attendance was good. Mrs. Wilson's devotion to Mission Work, and her faithfulness in discharging the duties of her office as organizer, should be an incentive to her co-workers in the district, and should stir them up to cultivate that much neglected seventh sense—a sense of duty—the development of which has made Mrs. Wilson such a fine example of consecrated zeal and earnestness.

MONEY BACK IF IT DOESN'T

Don't say "I've read all that before"—just go to your dealer right away, lay down 50c say "I want a bottle of that PARISIAN SAGE that so many sensible people are using." Then take it home and use it as directed and then if you are not satisfied that it is just as advertised take back the empty bottle and your money will be refunded.

"Pretty risky offer" you'll say; not at all, dealers know just what PARISIAN SAGE will do and have the promise of the Canadian distributors, the R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont., that they will back him up in his strong guarantee. Pretty fair and square offer isn't it?

Ask for PARISIAN SAGE Hair Tonic and firmly refuse substitutes. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package and your druggist will tell you that Parisian Sage is a splendid hair dressing free from poisonous lead or other dangerous ingredients. W. S. Cole guarantees it.

Friendship's Tribute.

Gladys—Did you see what the society column of the Daily Bread said about Nin Gilliard the other morning? "She moves with ease and grace in our most exclusive circles." May belle—Yes, I read it. It's dead certain that the editor who wrote that had never seen her on roller skates. Chicago Tribune.

Against His Convictions.

"Have some of this Welsh rabbit, Bjonson?" asked Bjones as he stirred the golden concoction in the chafing dish.

"No, thanks, Bjonesey," returned Bjonson, patting his stomach tenderly. "I am unalterably opposed to all corporation taxes."—Harper's Weekly.

SAINTSBURY

The auction sale of Mr. Elisha Carroll on Tuesday last, Nov. 12th, was of marked success, the total proceeds amounting to $2400. The weather was fine and buyers were out in large numbers. Mr. Stanley did his usual good work in wielding the hammer. Mr. and Mrs. Carroll will for the next two months visit amongst Ontario friends prior to leaving for their future home in British Columbia.

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble, Mrs. M. Summers, Box W, 840, Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

GRAND BEND.

Mr. P. Baker met with a very painful accident the other day. He was going to get some help to assist in dressing some poultry for his daughter Mrs. Gill and when at the gate was thrown with considerable force onto the hard road sustaining a bad cut in the forehead. A doctor was called and dressed the wound which required several stitches to close.

ZURICH.

Messrs. Elmore and Oscar Klopp attended the funeral of his brother-in-law Mr. John H. Liebler at Tavistock last week.—Mr. Solomon Kipfer has purchased Mr. Chas. Walper's property and will take possession in a few weeks.—Mr. T. Jackson of the Jackson Mfg. Co., Clinton, and Mr. Davis of their Exeter branch, were in town Tuesday and final arrangements were completed for a branch of this well-known firm. The demands of the firm were very moderate, all they ask being $200 a year for the purpose of providing for the power to run the plant. A by-law will be submitted to the ratepayers, as soon as possible.
While delivering furniture for Mr. Hartleib, Arnold Wurm was kicked by a horse and seriously injured.
John Weild's team of horses made an exciting runaway from the flour mill on Monday scattering the contents of the wagon along the street. The horses were cut considerably and the wagon and harness were badly smashed.

HENSALL

We are pleased to learn that Mrs. Smillie is recovering rapidly from the effects of the operation.—We understand that John B. Stewart, who recently sold his farm, contemplates moving to Hensall before long.—Wm. Moir and family moved last week into his residence on King street.—C. A. McDonell and Alf Taylor are home from Rockland, New Ontario, where they have been hunting deer. They secured one fine specimen.—Abe Chesney of Toronto visited his parents last week.—Mrs. David Rowatt who formerly resided here, is quite ill at her home in Brucefield.—Geo. F. Gerrie, who formerly resided here with his uncle James Beverley, and left 15 years ago for the States, was in town last week.—A. McPherson received the sad intelligence last week, that the wife of his brother Murdock, of Salmon city Idaho, is so seriously ill that no hope of recovery is entertained. She is in California, where Mr. McPherson and wife always spend the winter.

HOW TO CONQUER RHEUMATISM AT YOUR OWN HOME

If you or any of your friends suffer from rheumatism, kidney disorders or excess of uric acid, causing lameness, backache, muscular pains; stiff, painful, swollen joints, pain in the limbs and feet; dimness of sight, itching skin or frequent neuralgic pains, I invite you to send for a generous Free Trial Treatment of my well-known, reliable Chronicure, with references and full particulars by mail. (This is no C. O. D. scheme.) No matter how many may have failed in your case, let me prove to you, free of cost, that rheumatism can be conquered. Chronicure succeeds where all else fails. Chronicure cleanses the blood and removes the cause. Also for a weakened, run-down condition of the system, you will find Chronicure a most satisfactory general tonic that makes you feel that life is worth living. Please tell your friends of this liberal offer, and send today for large free package, to MRS. M. SUMMERS, Box E 940 —Windsor, Ont.

COLOR ILLUSIONS.

Curious Effects From Red and Blue on a Black Background.

If on a screen of black velvet placed at a distance of ten feet from the spectator large letters are pasted, some blue, some red, they will not appear to be at an equal distance from the eyes. To some persons the red letters will seem nearer than blue letters, while to other persons the contrary effect will be manifested.

To produce this effect both eyes must be employed. When one eye is closed the letters are all seen at the same distance. On opening the other eye one set of letters immediately appears to take a position in advance of the others.

The explanation offered for this effect is that a sort of stereoscopic illusion is produced in the eye itself, depending upon color. The image of a blue object is shifted by the eye toward one side and that of a red object toward the other side.

If on looking at blue and red letters on a black background placed ten or twelve feet away you see the red letters nearer than the blue, screen off one-half of the pupil of each eye on the outside and you will see the red letters retire behind the blue ones.

If you screen the pupils on the side toward the nose you will see the red letters advance apparently still farther ahead of the blue ones.

If, on the other hand, you naturally see the blue in advance screen the inner side of the pupils of your eyes and the red will come to the front.

Beautiful effects are produced with one eye alone when, instead of letters, red or blue rings are pasted on a background of the opposite color. Placing red rings on blue paper and using the right eye with the inner side of the pupil covered the appearance is that of circular red hillocks resting on a blue ground.

To produce this effect in its highest degree the paper must be held to the left and sloping in that direction. When the outer side of the pupil is screened the red rings will become circular trenches in the blue paper.—New York Sun.

A SYMBOL OF FREEDOM.

The Liberty Cap Dates Away Back to Early Greek Times.

From very early times one of the distinguishing marks of a slave, both in Greece and oriental countries generally, was the lack of any covering for the head. Accordingly the cap came to be considered the insignia of liberty, and when slaves were given their freedom they were presented with a cap as an emblem of it.

In Sparta the helots wore a cap of dogskin, and this was reckoned a badge of servitude, but upon gaining their freedom this was replaced by a cap of a different material, of another shape and ornamented with flowers. A similar custom was observed in Rome, where the presentation of the pileus, or cap, was always a part of the ceremony of manumitting a slave; hence arose the proverb, "Servos ad pileum vocare."

Also on medals the cap is the symbol of liberty and is unsually represented as being held in the right hand by the point. When a cap was exposed to the people's view on the top of a spear, as in the case of the conspiracy against Caesar, it was intended as a public invitation to them to embrace the liberty that was offered them.

The Goddess of Liberty on Mount Aventine was represented as holding a cap in her hand as a symbol of freedom. The Jacobins wore a red cap during the French revolution, and in England a blue cap with a white border is used as a symbol of liberty.

The custom which prevails among university students of wearing a cap is said to have had its origin in a wish to signify that the wearers had acquired full liberty and were no longer subject to the rod of their superiors.

The Bird of Death.

In New Guinea there is said to be a venomous bird called the bird of death. It is about the size of a pigeon, with a tail of extraordinary length ending in a tip of brilliant scarlet. It has a sharp, hooked beak and frequents marshes and stagnant pools. The venom with which it inoculates is distilled in a set of organs which lie in the upper mandible, just below the openings of the nostrils. Under them, in the roof of the mouth, is a small fleshy knob. When the bird sets its beak in the flesh of a victim this knob receives a pressure which liberates the venom and inoculates the wound.

Baby Seals.

Baby seals are at first snow white, which makes them invisible on the white ice on which they are born. Their eyes and noses are, however, black, and when the little ones are suddenly alarmed they close their eyes, bury their noses and lie quite still. It is only when they grow and begin to seek their own food that they become dark and sleek.

Too Full For Utterance.

"He invented a dandy story to tell his wife when he got home after mid night."
"Good one, was it?"
"A peach; it would satisfy any woman."
"Did it satisfy her?"
"It would have, but he couldn't tell it."—Houston Post.

No Fatted Calf.

ST. MARYS—Fred Parsons, son of R. Parsons of Parson's Fair, while trying to revive the fire in the furnace at the store, with coal oil, the blaze flew out with explosive effect, and he had his face badly scorched.

PARKHILL.—The remains of John McDonald, who was killed at Burlington Junction on Monday, were brought here to-day. He was a member of a G. T. R. floating gang that has been relaying some track between Hamilton and Toronto. The Ontario Limited struck him in the head while he was engaged shovelling up ballast to one side. When picked up life was extinct. The only mark was on the side of the head, his skull having been crushed.

Will Give $500 To Sick Readers of The Advocate

Famous Scientist Who Originated the Now Wonderful "Home Treatment" Offers $1.00 Package Free to Sick and ailing

In order that every reader of the Advocate who may not have heard of this wonderful "Home Treatment" may have an opportunity to test this celebrated medicine, the now famous scientist, Dr. James W. Kidd, offers to give absolutely free a full size $1.00 package to five hundred readers of this paper, to prove the wonderful claims which have been made for it. In making this offer the scientist said, I know that there are many people who have been suffering for years with some chronic disease and many of them have spent large sums of money seeking a cure. I know that these people hesitate about investing money in medicine because they have despaired of ever getting well. Thousands have told me that story and many thousands of the same people have told me afterwards that my treatment had cured them after doctors and everything else had failed. I want to prove to a limited number—no matter what the disease, no matter how long they may have suffered, no matter how blue and discouraged—that my treatment really and actually does accomplish the wonderful results that have been reported."

People who suffer from Rheumatism, Kidney Trouble, Stomach Trouble, Liver or Bowel Disorders, Catarrh, Bronchitis Asthma, Chronic Coughs, Weak Lungs, Lumbago, Piles, Urinary Disorders, Female Weaknesses of any kind, the weak worn out, broken-down, and despondent will be delighted at the effect of a few doses. This wonderful treatment creates a fine appetite and helps the digestive organs to carry on their functions as they should. It strengthens the kidneys, too, and drives rheumatism poisons from the blood as if by magic. That is why people who try it become so enthusiastic.

Any reader of The Advocate who will try this extraordinary medicine that has created so much excitement by its cures can obtain absolutely free a full $1.00 treatment by simply filling in the coupon below or writing a letter describing their case in their own words, if they prefer, and mailing it to-day to James W. Kidd, Toronto, Canada. No money need be sent and no charge of any kind will be made.

As this offer is limited, you should write at once, in order to be sure to receive free treatment.

Why Have "Nerves?"

This is the reason why women have "nerves." When thoughts begin to grow cloudy and uncertain, impulses lag and the warnings of pain and distress are sent like flying messages throughout limbs and frame, straightway, nine times in ten, a woman will lay the cause of the trouble to some defect at the point where she first felt it. Is it a headache, a backache, a sensation of irritability or twitching and uncontrollable nervousness, something must be wrong with the head or back, a woman naturally says, but all the time the real trouble very often centers in the womanly organs. In nine cases out of ten the seat of the difficulty is here, and a woman should take rational treatment for its cure. The local disorder and inflammation of the delicate special organs of the sex should be treated steadily and systematically.

Dr. Pierce, during a long period of practice, found that a prescription made from medicinal extracts of native roots, without the use of alcohol, relieved over 90 per cent. of such cases. After using this remedy for many years in his private practice he put it up in form of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that would make it easily procurable, and it can be had at any store where medicines are handled.

MRS. LILA B. HAWKINS, of Zeus, Va., writes: "I had been failing in health for two years—most of the time was not able to attend to my household duties. Female weakness was my trouble and I was getting very bad but, thanks to Doctor Pierce's medicines, I am well and strong again. I took only three bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' and used the 'Lotion Tablets.' I have nothing but praise for Doctor Pierce's wonderful medicines."

NERVOUS DEBILITY

OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT will cure you and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers heal up; the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness and despondency disappear; the eyes become bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and mental systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. You feel yourself a man and know marriage cannot be a failure. Don't let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard earned dollars.

THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS

BEFORE TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience:
"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the NEW METHOD TREATMENT and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

FEAR OF CHOLERA PLAGUE

King Ferdinand Will Stop at the Gates of the Turkish Capital.

A Massacre is Feared.

A despatch from Sofia says: King Ferdinand has decided not to enter Constantinople if he takes the Tchataldja lines, because of a fear that a massacre of Christians will occur before he can secure full control of the city and feel sure of keeping order. Fear of a cholera plague aided him in this decision. Ferdinand's Government favors his decision. M. Natchovitch, Bulgarian Foreign Minister, in an interview with the correspondent of the Neue Freie Presse, said that Bulgaria wants Constantinople and Salonica made free cities, and that the Bulgarian army will halt before the gates of Constantinople and leave the fate of the Turkish capital to the powers.

The Balkan allies at Salonica are displaying a fine crop of petty jealousies. The Bulgarians who followed the Greeks into that city wired to King Ferdinand that the city was now under his rule, thereby stirring in the breasts of the Greeks a feeling that due credit had not been given to them.

A despatch from London says: From the accounts of correspondents on the Bulgarian side, their wounded are in just as bad condition as the Turks. One correspondent in describing the poor ambulance service of the Bulgarians, whose wounded are driven for miles in jolting oxen carts, says this is not the worst part of their sufferings. He continues:—

"After several battles the wounded were left lying on the bare fields where they had fallen for two or three hot days and bitterly cold nights, and the worst sights in the hospitals are the rows of poor fellows with swollen and gangrened limbs, for whom there is no hope of recovery."

The correspondent adds that many are dying from exposure and not from wounds.

Grim Toll at Yenidje.

A despatch from Athens says: It is announced that 35,000 Turks were engaged in the battle against the Greeks at Yenidje. They had 42 heavy guns. The Turkish losses numbered 2,000 killed, 500 made prisoners and 22 guns captured. The Greek losses were 500 killed and wounded, including fifteen officers.

Six Thousand Massacred.

A despatch from Athens says: Six thousand women and children, 25 men and two priests have been massacred in the neighborhood of Janina by 750 men of the Turkish infantry and 300 Bashi-Bazouks, who pillaged and set fire to the villages.

Murderous Fighting.

A despatch from Bulgarian headquarters says: After four days' murderous fighting, the Bulgarian army has succeeded in breaking through the Turkish position at Tchatalja in the centre of the lines and completely rolling up the Turkish defence. The Bulgarian advance is being pushed forward with the greatest energy with the view of forcing the Turkish troops away from Constantinople.

Cholera Stops Bulgaria.

A despatch from London says: Cholera at Tchataldja and Constantinople is doing more than all the men under Nazim Pasha to stop the march of the Bulgars. Eye-witnesses tell of horrible scenes in the beleaguered forts, where hundreds of bodies of victims of the disease are piled into shallow trenches.

It is doubtful if King Ferdinand will risk the lives of any more of his men by marching them into a plague-stricken city, and there is a report that already many of the Bulgarian troops have been stricken with cholera, which they caught in positions from which they had routed the diseased Turks.

A Constantinople despatch to the Cologne Gazette declares that Bulgaria has abandoned her intentions to enter Constantinople, being thus advised by Russia and Great Britain. Altogether, although the report that an armistice already has been arranged has not been confirmed, all indications point in that direction, and it may be supposed that the terrible conditions of famine and destitution prevailing among the refugees in the neighborhood of Constantinople, which are calculated to provide a hotbed for the spread of cholera, may have had something to do with Bulgaria's decision.

Constantinople still waits her fate in the calm of despair. So far, in spite of alarmist reports, there has been no great disorder there.

THE PANAMA CANAL TOLLS

Merchant Vessel Rate To Be $1.20 Per Net Ton Carrying Capacity.

A despatch from Washington says: President Taft on Wednesday night issued a proclamation fixing the rates that the foreign shipping of the world shall pay for passage through the Panama Canal. The proclamation, made under authority of the canal act passed by Congress in August, establishes a merchant vessel rate of $1.20 per net ton of actual carrying capacity, with a reduction of 40 per cent. on ships in ballast.

The provisions of the proclamation are as follows:

1. On merchant vessels carrying passengers or cargo, $1.20 per net vessel ton—each 100 cubic foot—of actual earning capacity.

2. On vessels in ballast without passengers or cargo, 40 per cent. less than the rate of tolls for vessels with passengers or cargo.

3. Upon naval vessels, other than transports, colliers, hospital ships and supply ships, 50 cents per displacement ton.

4. Upon army and navy transports, colliers, hospital ships and supply ships, $1.20 per net ton, the vessels to be measured by the same rules as are employed in determining the net tonnage of merchant vessels.

"The Secretary of War will prepare and prescribe such rules for the measurement of vessels and such regulations as may be necessary and proper to carry this proclamation into full force and effect."

American coastwise shipping was exempted from toll payment by Congress. It was to this provision of the act that Great Britain diplomatically protested, but no reference to the incident is made in the President's proclamation.

ENGINE BOILER EXPLODES.

Fireman Fatally Hurt and Engineer Critically Injured.

A despatch from Hamilton says: Two men were injured, one fatally and the other critically, and several persons were shaken up early on Friday, when the engine of G.T.R. train No. 11, an accommodation running between Niagara Falls and Windsor, exploded at the "Y" near the Desjardins Canal. The victims were:—George E. Cook, engineer, Niagara Falls, Ont., aged 55 years, badly scalded about the breast, face and hands, lacerated about the shoulders, and suffered from shock, will probably recover; Samuel Sault, fireman, Niagara Falls, N. Y., aged 38, right leg crushed, had to be amputated at the knee; skull fractured; terribly scalded about the upper portion of the body. Taken to City Hospital, where he died at 1.30 in the afternoon.

In the fullest sense of the words Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are "A Household Remedy"

TORONTO CORRESPONDENCE

INTERESTING BITS OF GOSSIP FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

A Fakir Gets His Just Dues—A Loquacious Alderman—Graft in the City—New Railway Board Chairman.

"Doctor" James Gevalia Evans, who has just been sentenced to fifteen months in Kingston penitentiary on a charge of forgery, never made much of a splash in Toronto, though he has been travelling around the Province for several years.

Until the last year or two "Dr." Evans made his headquarters in Kingston, where he now returns in a different capacity. He arrived there about eight years ago from whence no one knows. He forthwith became active in missionary work. And, among many activities, evolved one pet scheme of establishing a missionary boat on the river Jordan. The boat would travel up and down the river carrying Christianity to the Jews and the Mahommedans of the Holy Land. In advocating this and other schemes "Dr." Evans often assumed Oriental costume, which added to his picturesqueness and impressiveness, and the sensation his appearance caused will be recalled at many points. Subscriptions for his missionary house-boat flowed in until one day a traveller just returned from Palestine asserted that the river at that point would hardly float a chip, let alone a house-boat. "Dr." Evans was not perturbed. He simply switched to some other scheme.

The truth about Evans is that he was a morphine fiend. His arms are a mass of punctures where the needle has been injected. That accounts for his visionary schemes and his absolute irresponsibility.

Duke Saw Medals.

Recently, when the Duke of Connaught was visiting Toronto, there was to be a review of the Veterans' Association. Evans hurried up and got in line as a veteran. Lo and behold his immaculate frock coat was decorated with a string of medals and badges for valor, long service and other military accomplishments, that turned the heart of the proudest veteran green with envy. When the Duke of Connaught passed along the line his sharp eye caught the array. He stopped, examined the medals keenly, and, it is said, detected the fraud. Shortly afterwards came "Dr." Evans' arrest and subsequent exposure.

Some years ago, when the Russian Japanese war broke out, there was practically no one on this continent who knew much about conditions at the scene of fighting. Clubs and associations searched everywhere for lecturers who could deal with the subject, but none was forthcoming. "Dr." Evans jumped into the breach. He knew. Needless to say, his lectures were a frost, although the first ones were largely attended. He advertised pictures, and fulfilled his promise by showing pictures of a boat sailing into various ports all around the world, but when she got to Japan he calmly announced that from this point on the censor would allow no pictures out.

In the 1911 election "Dr." Evans jumped to the front as an Imperialistic orator, and in one capacity or another he is widely known throughout the Province.

His "schemes" rarely did anybody any harm. Even the forgery on which he was connected, arising in connection with a private College here, was not serious in its consequences.

Loquacious "Sam" McBride.

One of the spectacular figures of the Toronto City Council is Alderman Sam McBride. Sam is decidedly loquacious. That is one of his chiefest claims to fame. A favorite pastime of the reporters at Council meetings is to keep track of the number of times Sam speaks. Sometimes the record runs to surprising figures—once it ran to 75 different speeches, which for a session of five hours' duration means that he averaged one speech every four minutes throughout the performance. Naturally Sam does not talk very long at a time, and sometimes what he says is not much to the point. Again it is too pointed for some of his fellow aldermen, for he has the faculty of getting under the skin of his companions with personal remarks. Generally he is good-natured, but the other day he threatened across the Council board to shove his fist down the long throat of Controller Church. The good people of the town were greatly shocked and the newspapers read the Council lectures on the indecency of bear garden exhibitions. But Sam afterwards apologized and said he did not mean what he said.

Picks Unpopular Side.

Another claim to fame Alderman McBride has is that he generally votes with the minority. He seems to have a faculty of picking out the unpopular side of an argument. As an "opposer" he is an expert. He was instrumental in blocking the Humber Boulevard scheme for a year, his ground ostensibly being that it is a scheme to make a millionaire of Mr. Home Smith at the expense of the city. If the project had been unpopular Ald. McBride would have probably supported it.

Newspapers and others threaten Ald. McBride with defeat at the polls for his obstructive tactics. But he doesn't worry. Every First of January since 1905, with one exception, he has bobbed up serenely near the top of the poll in ward three. He seems to go on the theory that by opposing everything he gathers in all the votes of the knockers and soreheads. They are the ones who don't forget.

In private life Sam is known to fame for his support of harness racing. He is an ardent follower of trotting races in Toronto and throughout the Province and illumines the meetings of Council with horsey talk and the picturesque atmosphere of the race track.

Graft in Toronto.

A Toronto journalist has been making an investigation into various forms of "graft" that are practised here, and has found some surprising illustrations.

One charge he makes is against undertakers whose charges, he says, are often extortionate. A simple, though thoroughly decent funeral, can be made up on the following charges and still allow the undertaker a good profit of $13:

Coffin	$15 00
Outside box	5 00
Hearse	8 00
Embalming	10 00
Shroud	5 00
Total	$43 00

Yet the charges often run up over $100. Not long ago a Toronto undertaker sent in a bill for $534, but in this case the executors contested the bill in court and had it cut to $129. The casket, which was a fine one, had been charged at $250, though the undertaker admitted in the box that it had cost him only $41. Probably ninety-nine out of a hundred people pay the charge, even if extortionate, rather than appear to be mean about such a matter. And this feeling is played upon.

It is charged, too, that nurses in the institutions stand in with undertakers and receive from them gifts of candies, flowers, theatre tickets, etc., in return for which they give prompt notice of death, so that the undertaker can get on the job before a rival.

Some doctors are also charged with getting concessions from undertakers.

Then there is the janitor's "graft." This flourishes in an apartment house, where from ten families up may reside. Naturally, each family would expect to patronize the grocer, or the butcher, or the dairy they preferred. But the janitor recommends certain people. If his advice is not accepted the deliveries never come right. There is always something wrong, until he gets his way. The presumption is that he gets his "rake off."

The Barber's Graft.

Then there is the barber's "graft." A few years ago it used to cost a modest 15 cents to get a hair-cut. Now the same service costs 40 cents, made up this way:

Hair-cut	25c.
Barber's tip	10c.
Tip to boy with whisk	5c.
Total	40c.

And the boy may be sore because he only gets five cents.

Another form of graft goes on among foremen on construction work where casual labor is employed. They make a practise of collecting a commission from the men they take on. Some foremen are said to collect from $15 to $20 a week in this way.

New Railway Board Chairman.

The appointment of Donald M. McIntyre, K.C., of Kingston, to the chairmanship of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board is regarded as a promising one. His knowledge of municipal law is admitted. He has now the opportunity to show the other qualities which will enable him to stand up to the job. He can easily make it one of the biggest in the Province.

Mr. McIntyre is unmarried. Once, when asked why, he replied that he had never had time. He lives with two maiden sisters.

It is again remarked that Sir James Whitney in his appointments shows a strong predilection to go outside Toronto.

NINE PERSONS DROWNED

Old Mayflower Springs Leak In Madawaska River Near Barry's Bay, and Sinks.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Nine lives are believed to have been lost in the Madawaska River on Tuesday night soon after 7 o'clock, when the old wheel steamer Mayflower, a small 50-foot boat, capsized and sank three miles out of Barry's Bay, after springing a leak. Of the twelve people aboard, ten of whom were passengers and two members of the crew, three passengers, namely, Gordon C. Peverley, J. S. Imlach and M. J. Harper, all of Ottawa, and commercial travelers, are alive to tell the story of the terrible disaster. They were found by a search party who rowed out from Barry's Bay to an island about three miles down the river, in a very exhausted condition.

From the brief story of the disaster that could be obtained from the three survivors, they say that the Mayflower sprang a leak soon after she left Barry's Bay. Her hold rapidly filled with water, and those on board quickly realized that death was imminent. There was hardly a moment to decide on how their lives could be saved. A howling wind was sweeping down over the river, which is nearly a mile wide at the point where the boat sprang a leak, and the water was lashing the sides of the ill-fated boat with a vengeance. All around was black.

Not a light could be seen anywhere. The boat began to lurch a little, a little more and then terribly, when the old coal-oil lamps went out by being crashed to the floor, and in a few minutes when all was in darkness the boat keeled over broadside and sank suddenly, throwing passengers, crew, freight and all, of which there was a good deal aboard, and machinery, into the icy water. The wooded shores threw back the echoes of the cries of the drowning souls. The three survivors were able to discern some spars of timber floating near to where they had been hurled into the water. Each tried to cheer the other with words of encouragement, and half perished in water that was clogged with ice, and almost numbed to the point of unconsciousness they drifted ashore, but more dead than alive.

Words, they say, could not describe those hours of suffering on the island up to the time they were found. They were too exhausted to walk, or even to get to their feet. Throughout the long, cold night, and terrible, even colder day, in a blinding snow storm, they waited and prayed that help would come to them. Death seemed inevitable until at last, when hope seemed practically gone, they heard the quiet swish of oars and the sound of human voices, and from that moment from sheer joy they remembered nothing more until they awoke in a house with kind faces around them and kind hands to attend to their wants.

MORMON PROPAGANDA.

Great Mission in Southern Alberta is Planned.

A despatch from Raymond, Alta., says: Three hundred Mormon missionaries from the Mormon town south of Lethbridge are to engage in what will be the greatest mission propaganda ever inaugurated in southern Alberta. The work is to be conducted during the winter months, and all the territory south of the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway will be touched. The mission is under President Grandley, former President of the Swiss Mission, and he will have assisting him business men and farmers of the best ability procurable. The plan is one which has recently been adopted in Utah, where it was found to be very successful.

MAN HURLED TO DEATH.

Oliver Poirier Caught in Shafting in Cornwall Mill.

A despatch from Cornwall says: Oliver Poirier, aged about sixty-two, met a horrible death in the basement of the weave shed of the Canada Mill here on Thursday afternoon, when he was in the act of oiling the shafting. His clothing caught in the shafting, and before the speed could be shut off he was dead. Both arms, both legs, his neck and every rib were broken, while his body was a mass of bruises. Poirier was born near Coteau, Que., and is survived by his mother, his wife, two sisters and two brothers.

MILLIONS IN BLACK FOXES.

P. E. Islanders Prosper Also in Agricultural Products.

A despatch from Charlottetown, P. E. I., says: "Prince Edward Islanders at home never before made so much money in a single year as this year," said Publicity Agent McCready in an interview. "The farmers had bountiful crops and are getting top prices. Butter, cheese, eggs and poultry will this year bring in more than before. Of 187 lobster canneries the product will be somewhat less in quantity than in some former years, but better prices will make this good. In black foxes alone the gain has run into millions. Of say 400 old foxes, the increase has been at least $2,000 each, making $800,000, while as many more young ones littered last spring, sold easily for $5,000 each, making $2,000,000 more. There is already quite brisk bidding for options to purchase the coming crop of young, due to arrive in April, 1913, at $5,000 to $6,000 each."

BRITISH NAVAL GUN BURST.

Some of the Fragments Were Blown Three Miles.

A despatch from London says: While the new naval 13.5 inch gun was being tested on Friday at Shoeburyness it burst, some of the fragments being blown three miles. Thirteen persons were injured.

ANAEMIC GIRLS SEEM EVERYWHERE

Nine Out of Every Ten Show Symptoms of This Serious Trouble.

So steadily does anaemia undermine the health of young, growing girls and young women that it is rightly regarded as one of the greatest enemies of her sex. Nine women out of ten are bloodless, more or less, and in many cases neglect has allowed anaemia to develop into hopeless decline. There is a security and new strength for weak tired girls and women in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They actually make the new, good blood of health that banishes the "always tired" weakness, and the continual backaches of anaemia. They drive away headaches, the low spirits, the palpitation of the overworked heart and the fits of nervousness that mark the women whose weak blood is unable to nourish their wasting frames. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have given health to unhappy anaemics in cases too numerous to record. Here is one example. Miss Hattie B. White, Whitehall, Ont., says:—"Some two years ago I became very much run down. I consulted a doctor who told me that it was a bad case of anaemia and nervousness. I had most of the symptoms that accompany this trouble, such as headaches, a tired feeling, poor appetite, and pallor. The doctor's medicine did not seem to help me and then I began changing from one medicine to another, but with no better results. Finally at the suggestion of my mother I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I got two boxes and by the time I had taken them I began to feel better. This cheered me very much, and I continued using the Pills until I had taken nine or ten boxes. When I was again enjoying the very best of health, and had gained in weight as well. I have proved in my case that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a cure for anaemia, and can recommend them to similar sufferers."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A New Way to Make Money.

I am making a fortune selling Pure Fruit Candy. Any brainy person can do likewise; so if you want to make more money than you ever possessed send ninety-six cents in Canadian stamps to cover the expense of mailing Seventy-seven Pure Food Candy Formulas, and the moulds to make the candy. I will send them prepaid, and help you start in business. I am glad to help others, who, like myself, need money. People say "the candy is the best they ever tasted"—therein lies the beauty of the business—the candy is eaten immediately and more ordered. You don't have to canvas; you sell right from your own home. I made $12.00 the first day; so can you. Isabelle Inez, Block "L" Negley, Pittsburg, Pa.

'MARVELLOUS' CURES OF SKIN ERUPTION

Four Children Constantly Scratching, Nearly Tore Limbs Off. Cured in a Month by Cuticura Soap and Ointment

"Two of my daughters and two of my sons were suffering from very bad heads, the doctor ordering my daughters to have all their hair cut off so as to prevent it from spreading all over their heads, and to get to the seat of the trouble in order to be able to rub some ointment, which he gave them, well into the sores. These sores started in small blotches which got larger and larger and then burst and spread all over their heads, and in some cases down their backs and bodies. The doctor said it was eczema, but they seemed to be daily getting worse. The sores formed like little boils, then filled with matter, and looked like abscesses. They became all inflamed and irritated, causing them to be constantly scratching themselves. This made the sores burst, and the matter flowed all over their heads. We had to cut their finger nails and at times to put gloves on their hands, the irritation was so bad, to keep them from digging into the flesh, and at night they would nearly tear their limbs off. The boisters would be literally covered with blood.

"The teachers would not let them attend school for fear of infection spreading among the other children, so I resolved to try the Cuticura Remedies, which I found to benefit my children greatly. I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for one month, and the result is a marvelous cure." (Signed) George Arthur Robinson, 87, Fitzwilliam St., Hoyland Common, nr. Barnsley, Yorks., Eng., Jan. 3, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin will be sent free, on application to Potter D. & C. Corp., 46 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

WHEN HINDUS MAY BEG.

Nine Cases in Which One May Be a Mendicant.

The Hindu Shastras (says the Times of India) consider that begging is allowable and "virtuous" in nine cases, namely:

Where a man wants to marry and is unable to defray the expenses of marriage, or wishes to perform a costly sacrifice, or to travel;

Where he has given away all his wealth to priests, or seeks wealth for his Guru, or for the maintenance of his father, or his mother;

Where he seeks wealth for his own study or is ill.

The ascetic may beg; having given up all concern with the world, his case may be placed on a par with that of the person who has made over all his wealth to priests.

It is degrading for an able-bodied person who does not fall under any of the nine categories mentioned to throw himself on the charities of others. A person in distress, as for example during a famine, may be treated as one who is ill. The Buddhist and Jain ascetics may beg like their Brahmin brethren; and a multiplication of the ascetic orders has led to a multiplication of mendicants.

In many cases the asceticism is nominal and is a cloak for avoiding work and the anxieties connected with it. But such dishonest mendicancy finds no support in the Shastras.

In the permissible cases certain rules are to be observed.

Thus a man may beg for the expenses of his first marriage, which is enjoined as a duty, but not for his second marriage during the lifetime of the first wife.

If he begs in the latter case, he is told, somewhat coarsely, that he must look upon the offspring by the second wife as if it belonged to the donors of the expenses.

Similarly the Hindu ascetic should not go out on his begging round early in the day; he must beg when the householders have eaten, and the dishes have been removed. If he gets no alms, he should not despair, and when he does get food he should not unduly rejoice. He should barely support life, and not indulge his palate.

SCOFFERS

Often Make the Staunchest Converts.

The man who scoffs at an idea or doctrine which he does not fully understand has at least the courage to show where he stands.

The gospel of Health has many converts who formerly laughed at the idea that tea and coffee, for example, ever hurt anyone. Upon looking into the matter seriously, often at the suggestion of a friend, such persons have found that Postum and a friend's advice have been their salvation.

"My sister was employed in an eastern city where she had to do calculating," writes a Western girl. "She suffered with headache until she was almost unfitted for duty.

"Her landlady persuaded her to quit coffee and use Postum, and in a few days she was entirely free from headache." (Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.) "She told her employer about it, and on trying it, he had the same experience.

"My father and I have both suffered much from nervous headache since I can remember, but we scoffed at the idea advanced by my sister, that coffee was the cause of our trouble.

"However, we finally quit coffee and began using Postum. Father has had but one headache now in four years, due to a severe cold, and I have lost my headaches and sour stomach which I am now convinced came from coffee.

"A cup of good, hot Postum is satisfying to me when I do not care to eat a meal. Circumstances caused me to locate in a new country and I feared I would not be able to get my favorite drink, Postum, but I was relieved to find that a full supply is kept here with a heavy demand for it." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

One must be a genius to be a successful barber. One is reminded of the tonsorial artist who operated in the same village for fifty years and never made a mistake. In his early days a handsome boy sat into his chair. "Shave, sir?" asked the barber. "You flatter me," laughed the youth. "You flatter me. No, I can only use a hair-cut." Years passed. In fact, thirty years did it. The same man came to the same barber. "Hair-cut, sir?" asked the barber. "You flatter me!" sighed the man. "No—only a shave."

ARE YOUR HANDS CHAPPED?

Zam-Buk Will Cure Them.

The particular danger of chapped hands and cold cracks (apart altogether from the pain) is that the cold is likely to penetrate and set up inflammation, festering, or blood-poison. Directly the skin is broken by a cut, graze or scratch, or chaffed and cracked by the action of the cold winds and water, the one necessary precaution is to apply Zam-Buk freely.

The pure herbal juices from which Zam-Buk is prepared are so perfectly combined and refined that the immediate effect of these Zam-Buk dressings is soothing, antiseptic, and healing.

Mrs. O. M. Phoen, Neuchatel, Alta., writes:—"I must tell you how pleased I am with Zam-Buk. My husband had an old frostbite on his foot for many years, and had tried almost every known remedy, without any effect, but the first application of Zam-Buk seemed to help him so much that he persevered and the sore is now cured. We would not be without Zam-Buk in the house."

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for piles, eczema, ulcers, abscesses, scalp sores, blood-poison, bad leg, eruptions, etc. Its purely herbal composition makes it the ideal balm for babies and young children. All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk 50c. box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Try also Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet.

BULGARIA'S KING.

Bulgaria's success in her great struggle for freedom is almost entirely due to her ruler, King Ferdinand, who four years ago assumed the title of Tsar. He is reputed to be the most autocratic ruler in Europe, for virtually the feudal system prevails in Bulgaria, and the monarch is recognized as owner of the soil.

That King Ferdinand has not abused his power is evident from his record. He has extended the railway system in a very enlightened manner, and has adapted his principal ports to modern shipping, thus opening up the commerce of his country. Moreover, he has reorganized the Bulgarian army.

King Ferdinand of Bulgaria.

King Ferdinand is a grandson of Louis Philippe of France. At the age of twenty-six he was elected Prince of Bulgaria, and since that time his sole object in life has been to increase the power and independence of the country over which he rules. He has been married twice and possesses a family of two sons and two daughters. The union with his second wife, who was the Princess Eleanor of Reuss Kostrich, was in the nature of romance. When the pair were young there was some talk if a union between them, but negotiations fell through. The Princess remained single, and when King Ferdinand found himself a widower his thoughts turned to the woman who had attracted him in his youth. They were married four years ago, both being well on the way to fifty.

The country over which King Ferdinand exercises sway has a total population rather less than that of Ireland, though it slightly exceeds the latter country in area. The Zadruga, or house-community, is still popular in Bulgaria, and is ruled by a house-father and house-mother, who organize the work and lay down the law as was the custom with primitive communities. Peasant proprietorship is universal throughout the country, and only the monasteries and one or two individuals own large estates. The peasants are extremely conservative in their methods of agriculture, and oxen and buffaloes are generally used for draught purposes. Military service is compulsory, though Moslems are permitted to buy themselves off if so they wish.

BRINE CURE FOR HORSES.

Novel Bath Experiment at Droitwitch for Afflicted Animals.

A brine bath, in which four horses can stand in hot brine, is now in existence at Droitwitch, England. The bath has been built at the rear of Mr. Everett's garage, in St. George's Square, with a sloping way down which the horses can walk in four stalls, where they will find themselves in about 2 feet 6 inches of warm brine. After standing in this for the number of hours ordered by a veterinary surgeon, they will be brought out, dried, and properly bandaged, to avoid all risk of catching cold.

Droitwitch brine is twelve times as strong as ordinary sea water, and the cure is intended for race horses, polo ponies, and hunters. Mr. Everett says that he has for years used the brine, made hot, on lame horses, by dipping bandages in it and applying them to the legs. He has found the cure successful for strains, bangs, and rheumatism. He also found it very good while he looked after his father's stud farm at Finstall Park for foals and yearlings who were weak in the legs.

THE BEST MEDICINE FOR YOUNG CHILDREN.

Mrs. Ulderic Roberge, Lac Long, Que., writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my baby who suffered from stomach trouble and vomiting, also from constipation and they completely cured him. I can recommend them to all mothers as the very best medicine for young children. The Tablets are superior to all other medicines, not only because they promptly cure stomach trouble, constipation, colic, etc., but because they are guaranteed to be absolutely safe and free from all harmful drugs. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"And to whom do you pray, dear, and ask to forgive your naughty little ways?"

"Why," said Bessie, "sometimes I pray to mother's knees and sometimes to the bed."

"What caused the coolness between you and that young doctor? I thought you were engaged." "His writing is rather illegible. He sent me a note calling for 10,000 kisses." "Well?" "I thought it was a prescription, and took it to be filled."

INTERNATIONAL STOCK FOOD
Makes Cows Give More Rich Milk.

International Stock Food conquered England, just as it conquered Canada and the United States, by proving to the Dairy Experts that it is the greatest milk producer and health restorer in the world.

The test was made on three cows from the dairy herd of S. W. Hackney, Esq., Leeds, England, Chairman of the Yorkshire Federation of Dairy Farmers.

Quantity and quality of milk was tested for a certain time—then "International Stock Food" was added to the regular feed.

INTERNATIONAL STOCK FOOD showed an Increase in Milk of 14.2 pints daily, and 1.21 pounds of butter daily.

This proves that International Stock Food, added to the regular feed will increase the quantity and improve the quality of milk from every cow.

It shows that International Stock Food aids digestion and keep cows in better condition. It proves that International Stock Food is a money-maker for the farmer—that every farmer who owns one, or a hundred, cows should feed International Stock Food every day.

Make the test yourself—weigh the milk you are getting now—then feed International for a few weeks, and weigh again. Then you'll see how International Stock Food will make money for you.

LOCAL DOINGS.

Mr. John Essery is confined to his bed, and continues in a very low state of health.

Messrs. Prouty of Usborne lost a valuable driver this week through inflammation.

Marrying a man to reform him is a good deal like trying to make an omelet out of a bad egg.

Cecil, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Dearing of Stephen is confined to his bed owing to an attack of pleurisy.

Rev. W. M. Martin of London occupied the pulpit of Caven Presbyterian church on Sunday last. The congregations were pleased to hear Mr. Martin again.

And now approaches the time when the fellow looking for office has the glad-hand for everybody—even the fellow that he did not take much notice of during the rest of the year.

Friday last was the great day for the squirrel hunters, but a bad day for squirrels. In some cases the luck was very indifferent, even nil, but in other cases the shooters got full bags.

According to the Brussels Post Local Option will not be tried in Brussels this year, as the committee decided that the chances of its passing were not favorable enough, and they thought it wiser to wait than have the way barred for three years should it be defeated.

The Annual Meeting of the Huron Old Boys' Association of Toronto, will be held in the Queen's Hotel, that city, on Friday evening, Nov. 29, for election of officers and other business. Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, and Mayor Hocken will address the meeting.

The many friends here of Miss M. E. Brown, nurse, in Harper Hospital, Detroit, will be sorry to learn that she has been compelled to relinquish her duties through illness, and is now under treatment at the hospital. She is expected home when her condition will permit

After recently losing several thousand dollars by the burning of his evaporator John Joyce decided that probably the best thing he could do was to give something away on top of it; and so he purchased about 150 barrels, packed them full of good fruit from Kenneth Cameron's orchard, and donated them, freight paid, to be distributed for charity in Toronto.—Lucknow Sentinel.

Mr. Thos. Lawson of Detroit, formerly of Stephen, has sent us an interesting account taken from the Detroit News of the paying of an unique election bet. The penalty imposed upon the loser was to roll a peanut along a considerable stretch of pavement with a gaily decorated sausage. The scene was witnessed by 5000 people, who blocked the street traffic for several minutes. The loser had bet on Teddy.

Have a will of your own, but be sure your will is right. No one has much use for the wavering, faint-hearted, undecided individual who cannot make up his mind to a thing and then put it through. To count in the right way, however, the way best for himself and everybody else concerned, a boy's will must be trained to unselfishness, to consideration, to kindness, to aiming at the noblest things of life, and to rest satisfied with nothing less.

Those who were privileged to hear Edythe Warine Nash in her dramatic and humorous recital in the Opera House on Nov. 13th, were well repaid for the time they spent. Miss Nash is an artist of much more than average merit and every selection was well received. She was assisted by Miss Estelle MacConnel, Soprano, whose selections were also very pleasing. The entertainment deserved a larger patronage.

While we are constantly hearing of conferences of men interested in the development of our agricultural, mineral, power and timber resources, it is gratifying to learn that a body of men are also coming together to devise ways and means for raising the standard of our Canadian Youth. The Provincial Young Men's Christian Association, and the Ontario Sunday School Association have united to conduct the greatest gathering of Workers with Boys ever held inthis country, at Galt, on Friday evening, Saturday and Sunday, November 22nd, 23rd and 24th.

The Library Institute of the Stratford District, which comprises the counties of Perth, Huron and Bruce, met in Stratford on Nov. 14th and 15th. There were 31 out of a possible 45 libraries represented at that meeting. Mr. H. E. Huston represented our Free Library of Exeter. A clause in the Public Library Act states, "That the Minister of Education may withhold a sum not exceeding $5 from the next government grant from the library not represented at the Institute," hence the importance of being in attendance. Several of the representatives came from towns and villages in possession of a Carnegie library, all of whom speak highly of the advantages derived from this gift. Exeter seems to be somewhat behind in this matter. There is at present time a Carnegie library being built at Seaforth. These places that have these libraries got them by simply asking for them. Shall we ask?

SOLD CLANDEBOYE BUSINESS.—Mr R. G. Selden, who has been conducting a grain and coal business in Clandeboye for some years, has sold the business to Mr. Laughton of Strathroy.

FINGER CRUSHED.—Frank Triebner jr., who is engaged at the grist mill, met with a painful accident last week by getting the second finger of his right hand caught in some part of the machinery, crushing it badly.

HICKS' FORECASTS—A regular storm period involves the 23rd to 28th. Watch your barometer. This period calls for violent autumnal storms, Rain, sleet and snow, fierce gales and sweeping, cold wave following will be the order. The Venus period which begins about the middle of November will intensify and aggravate storm conditions all the last half of November, but the culmination of the period will fall in December.

Mr. Chas. Fahner and sister, Mrs. Rodgers of Michigan; Mrs. Charles Waldock of Sandusky, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Pumroy of London, and Mr. Fred. Penhale of Toronto, who were attending the Fahner-Triebner wedding, returned to their respective homes Monday, while Mr. and Mrs. Baker of Wingham returned Thursday.

Many stories are like ashes; when thoroughly sifted there is not much left.

Mr. Barr of Crediton, who recently purchased the south residence on Main Street, erected by Messrs Snell and Marchand, is moving with his family thereon on Tuesday of this week. Mrs. Anthony Allen and family of Russeldale have also moved to town, occupying the corner residence, recently vacated by Mr. Jas. Dennis on Andrew Street. Both are worthy families and we welcome them as citizens to Exeter.

GEO A. CASE DIES IN TORONTO. —Death came without a moment's warning to George Allen Case, a prominent Toronto real estate man, and a former resident of Exeter, being a son of the late William Case, who for a number of years resided south of the village. On Saturday afternoon he was out riding and returned in the evening apparently in the very best of health. About 3.30 next morning he awoke in much pain, but neither he nor Mrs. Case could understand the cause, and when his sufferings did not abate word was sent to a physician, but before he arrived life was extinct, his death being due to heart trouble. Born at Exeter in 1858 he was in his 54th year. He had lived in Toronto for the greater part of his life. He is survived by a widow, one son and one daughter.

MRS. MUTTART DIES IN LONDON. —Mrs. Jane Muttart, widow of the late George Muttart, and a pioneer of Usborne, died in London on Saturday last after an attack of paralysis, in her 94th year. Mrs. Muttart will be remembered by many of our older residents, she having resided in Exeter North for several years, after retiring from the farm. Her husband predeceased her 20 years. About 13 years ago she went to London to reside. The remains were brought to Exeter Monday morning and interred in Exeter cemetery, Rev. Wm Martin, a former pastor officiating. Although of so great an age she was active and retained all her faculties until a week prior to her death. Her surviving children, three sons and three daughters, are Robert E. of Goodells, Mich., George of Rainy River, Victor J. of Wisconsin, Mrs. Wm. Howard of Mineola, Man., Mrs. A. M. Connor of Norwich, Conn., and Miss Janet of London, several of whom were in attendance at the funeral.

SOME OF EXETER'S NEEDS.

Nearly every town of note in Western Ontario has a Board of Trade, or a Canadian Club, or both, and why should not Exeter also have them? Almost any week one can see accounts of visits of distinguished men to Clubs and Boards in the surrounding towns, when interesting and profitable addresses are heard, discussions take place, united action is made in various ways for the betterment of the town.

It is now almost beyond the memory of man that anything of this nature has taken place in Exeter.

Is everybody satisfied with the present condition of the town, or do we desire any improvement?

Is there no possibility of the men of Exeter getting together and being agreeable and working together for the advancement of conditions here?

If you have an idea along this line let us hear from you..

The columns of The Advocate are open for the discussion of all subjects leading toward a bettering of the conditions.

And when you write do not forget to deal with your matter in such a manner that you may always father it.

DEATH OF JOHN ESSERY — There passed away at his home, Andrew Street, on Saturday last, Nov. 23rd, Mr. John Essery, one of the oldest and most respected residents of Exeter and one of the very earliest pioneer settlers of Usborne Township Apart from the infirmities of old age, the deceased enjoyed his usual health until about two months ago, when he was compelled to take his bed, and gradually waning in strength from day to day the vital cord was snapped on Saturday. Born in Hatherleigh, Devonshire, England, in the year 1827, the deceased came to Canada with his parents when but seven years of age, first settling on the farm in Usborne, now occupied by his son, William, on the London Road, a little north of Centralia, when this country was nothing short of a dense wilderness. He contributed more than the average pioneer settler in transforming the wilds of this district into the beautiful farms now enjoyed by those following. Mr. Essery was known as a prosperous farmer and a worthy citizen, being a man of strict integrity and honesty of purpose. In the year 1855 he married Grace Hicks his now bereft wife and to the happy union were born two sons and three daughters all of whom survive.—William on the homestead. Robert of Stephen and Mrs. L. Braund of Brantford. He is also survived by one brother.—Joseph in Chicago,—and three half brothers and three half sisters.—Samuel, London; Charles, Edmonton, Alta., Harry, and Mrs. Thos. Greenway, Crystal City, Man.; Mrs. Evans, Centralia, and Mrs. Eastcott of Michigan, about twenty-eight years ago deceased with his family retired from the farm and has since resided in Exeter, proving himself a worthy and esteemed citizen. In politics he was a Reformer, and in religion a consistent member of the Methodist church. The funeral took place to the Exeter cemetery on Tuesday.

HURON TO TRY FOR A PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN

A number of representatives from several municipalities of Huron County met in Clinton on Thursday last to discuss a publicity campaign for Huron.

The following officers were elected,—President, Mayor J. C. Greig, Seaforth; vice-president, Rev. Leckie, Brussels; secretary, James Mitchell, Goderich; treasurer, Reeve B. C. Munnings, Goderich; executive committee, Reeve Govenlock, McKillop Township; Mayor Spotton, Wingham; John Ransford, Clinton, Reeve Heaman, Exeter; Reeve Livingstone, Grey Township; Warden Stothers.

Parliamentary representatives of the county, A. H. Musgrove, M.P.P.; W. Proudfoot, M.P.P., H. Eilber, M.P.P.; E. N. Lewis, M.P.; J. J. Merner, M.P., and J. Bowman, M.P., were named honorary vice-presidents. None of them were present, the members of the House of Commons being in Ottawa, and the representatives in the Legislature absent for the same reason.

Mr. Joseph Elliott of Goderich, who represented the immigration department of Ontario in the old land, told of handing out Lambton literature in London, when he would have taken at least equal pleasure in informing intending emigrants of Huron's agricultural resources. Delegates expressed themselves as strongly in favor of thoroughly "writing up" the district in the near future and furnishing Canadian agents in Great Britain with literature.

John Ransford of Clinton occupied the chair. It will be remembered that an attempt was made at the last session of the County Council to secure a grant of $2000, but it failed. Mr. Ransford and others urged that a campaign be undertaken to raise funds from the municipalities, supplement it with the provincial grant provided in such cases and then go to the council for aid. A good many of the representatives considered that the County council would be ready with substantial aid. And the meeting finally decided to have the executive committee wait on the council at the December meeting.

The chairman in his address went on to show that Huron had lost nearly 1000 in population annually for a decade, and yet the land in Huron is the cheapest in Canada when you consider climate, railway facilities, roads, and the social, educational and religious facilities. The very large number of immigrants last year went principally to the places that were advertised. His idea was that the County Council ought to spend four or five thousand dollars a year for three years. Pamphlets should be prepared and a man sent to England to boost Huron County. Of course, he considered it necessary that each municipality should give a grant

While all were in favor of the campaign some delegates thought that the municipalities should be approached first and others that the County Council should act first, and this idea will be furthered by the committee.

BOOSTING.

Help your town along by boosting Wear a bright and hopeful face. Do not be forever roosting somewhere near the wailing place. You can't help your town by knocking, if its in a backward groove, but some optimistic talking does a lot to make things move In the mud one town was sticking, evidently anchored there for her people all were kicking, all were dishing up despair. All were groaning o'er their taxes, shedding teardrops in a stream, all had hammers, clubs, and axes ready for each helpful scheme. So the village sat and rotted till a booster landed there; soon the trouble's seat he spotted, saw the fungus in the air, and he jarred the village croakers, stirred them up to hump along, till the place was full of jokers and the breeze was full of song. Citizens forsook the habit of bewailing this and that, and the timid business rabbit rustles like a tiger cat, and they all turned in kerwhooping, singing forth the hamlet's praise, and that hamlet, lately drooping, filled its neighbors with amaze. Now, this story, true as preaching shows what one lone man can do, if instead of doleful screeching, he yells "cockadoodledoo" For you stimulate your neighbors every time you give three cheers, and the harvest of your labors will be reaped in coming years. —Walt Mason.

Mr. Frank Sweet was home from Sarnia over Sunday.

Only four weeks to Christmas. Have you started your shopping yet.

BLACK, GREEN OR MIXED

ONLY A MONTH;

OR, A CURIOUS MYSTERY EXPLAINED.

The next morning, as a natural consequence, he began the day with a dull, miserable headache; at breakfast he hardly spoke, and he set off for business looking so ill that Sigrid wondered whether he could possibly get through his work.

About half past nine there arrived a telegram which did not mend matters. Mr. Boniface was seriously unwell, would not be in town that day, and could not be at St. James's Hall that evening for the concert. Mr. Horner would take his place. Frithiof's heart sunk at this news; and when presently the fussy, bumptuous little man entered the shop the climax of his misery was reached. Mr. Horner read the telegram with a disturbed air.

"Dear! dear! seriously ill, I'm afraid, or he would at least make an effort to come to-night. But after all the annoyance of yesterday I am not surprised—no, not at all. Such a thing has never happened in his business before, ay, Mr. Foster?"

"Oh, no, sir," said the foreman, in a low voice, sorry in his heart for the young Norwegian, who could not avoid hearing every word.

"It was quite enough to make him ill. Such a disgraceful affair in a house of this class. For his own sake he does well to hush it up, though I intend to see that all proper precautions are taken; upon that, at any rate, I insist. If I had my own way there should have been none of this misplaced leniency. Here, William!" and he beckoned to the boy, who was irreverently flicking the bust of Mozart with a duster.

"Yes, sir," said William.

"Go at once to Smith, the ironmonger, and order him to send some one round to fix a spring bell on a till. Do you understand?"

"Quite, sir," replied William.

Frithiof went on arranging some music which had just arrived, but he flushed deeply, and Mr. Horner, glad to have found a vulnerable point of attack, did not scruple to make the most of his opportunity.

"Why should I mind this vulgar brute?" thought Frithiof, as he forced himself to go on with his work with the air of quiet determination which Mr. Horner detested. The miserable hours dragged on somehow, and at last, late in the afternoon, Foster came up to him with a message.

"Mr. Horner wishes to speak to you," he said; "I will take your place here." Then, lowering his voice cautiously, "It's my opinion, Mr. Falck, that he is trying to goad you into resigning, or into an impertinent answer which would be sufficient to cause your dismissal."

"Thank you for the warning," said Frithiof, gratefully.

Mr. Horner replied to his knock, but did not glance round as he entered the room.

"You wished to speak to me, sir?" asked Frithiof.

"Yes, when I have finished this letter. You can wait," said Mr. Horner, ungraciously.

Mr. Horner signed his name with a flourish characteristic of his opinion of himself, then swung round his chair and glanced at Frithiof.

"Mr. Boniface left no instructions as to whether you were to attend as usual at St. James's Hall to-night," he began. "But since no one else is used to the work I suppose there is no help for it."

He paused, apparently expecting some rejoinder, but Frithiof merely stood there politely attentive.

"Since you know the work, and are used to it, you had better attend as usual, for I should be vexed if any hitch should occur in the arrangements. But understand, pray, that I strongly disapprove of your remaining in our employ at all, and that it is only out of necessity that I submit to it, for I consider you unfit to mix with respectable people."

Whatever the Norwegian felt, he managed to preserve a perfectly unmoved aspect. Mr. Horner, who wanted to stir him into indignant expostulation, was sorely disappointed that his remarks fell so flat.

"I see you intend to brazen it out," he said, crushingly. "But you don't deceive me. You may leave the room, and take good care that all the arrangements to-night are properly carried out."

"Yes, sir," said Frithiof, with the quietness of one who knows that he remains master of the situation. Owing to the concert, his release came a little sooner than usual, and it was not much after seven when Sigrid heard him at the door. His face frightened her; it looked so worn and harassed.

"You will have time for some supper?" she asked, pleadingly.

"No," he said, passing her quickly, "I am not hungry, and must change my clothes and be off again."

"He might fancy some coffee," said Sigrid to herself. "Quick, Swanhild, run and get it ready while I boil the water. There is nothing like strong cafe noir when one is tired out."

Perhaps it did him some good; and the glimpse of his home certainly cheered him, yet, nevertheless, he was almost ready that night to give up everything in despair.

Physical exhaustion had dulled the glow of inner comfort that had come to him on the previous day. His old hatred against those who succeeded once more filled his heart and thought at one time he had felt curious to see Donati, and had heard all that Cecil had said in favor of the Italian's courage and unselfishness, yet now, in his bitterness of soul, he began to hate the man merely because of his popularity.

The architects of most English music-halls have scant regard for the comfort of the artistes. Here, sitting face to face on hard benches, were ranged to-night many of the first singers of the day. There was Sardoni, the good-natured English tenor and composer. There was Mme. Sardoni-Borelli, with her noble and striking face and manner; besides a host of other celebrities. But Carlo Donati had not yet arrived, and Mr. Horner kept glancing anxiously through the glass doors on to the staircase in hopes of catching sight of the great barytone. Frithiof lived through it all like a man in a dream.

Mr. Horner turned to Frithiof at that moment.

"Go and see whether Signor Donati has come," he said. "His song is next on the programme."

Frithiof made his way to the cloak room, and, as he walked through the narrow room leading to it, he could distinctly hear the words of some one within. The voice seemed familiar to him.

"Badly received! Well, you only failed because of nervousness. In your second song you will be more used to things, and, you will see, it will go much better."

"But you surely can never have had the same difficulty to struggle with?" said the young tenor, who, with a very downcast fact, stood talking to the newly arrived barytone.

"Never!" exclaimed the other, with a laugh which rang through the room, "Ask Sardoni! He'll tell you of my first appearance."

Then, as Frithiof gave his message, the speaker turned round and revealed to the Norwegian that face which had fascinated him so strangely just before his illness—a face not only beautiful in outline and coloring, but full of an undefined charm, which made all theories as to the conceit and objectionableness of successful men fall to the ground.

"Thank you," he said, bowing in reply; "I will come down at once."

All went smoothly until, early in the second part, the Italian barytone was to sing a song with violin obligato. By some unlucky accident Frithiof forgot to place the music-stand for the violinist; and perceiving this as soon as they were on the platform, Donati himself brought it forward and put it in position. It was but a trifling occurrence, but quite sufficient to rouse Mr. Horner. When the singer returned he apologized profusely, and turned upon Frithiof with a rebuke, the tone of which made Donati's eyes flash.

"Pray do not make so much of it," he said, with a touch of dignity in his manner. Then returning again from one of his journeys to the platform, and noticing the expression of Frithiof's face, he paused to speak to him for a moment before returning to give the encore that was emphatically demanded. It was not so much what he said as his manner of saying it that caused Frithiof's face to brighten, and brought a frown to James Horner's brow.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Carlo Donati had considerable insight into character; not only had he been born with this gift, but his wandering life had brought him into contact with all sorts and conditions of men, and had been an excellent education to one who had always known how to observe. He was, moreover, of so sympathetic a temperament that he could generally tell in a moment when trouble was in the air, and the ridiculously trivial affair about the music-stand, which could not have dwelt in his mind for a minute on its own account, opened his eyes to the relations existing between Mr. Horner and the Norwegian. That something was wrong with the latter he had perceived when Frithiof had first spoken to him in the cloak-room, and now, having inadvertently been the cause of bringing upon him a severe rebuke, he was determined to make what amends lay in his power.

He cut short Mr. Horner's flattering remarks and reiterated apologies as to the slight contretemps.

"It is of no consequence at all," he said. "By the bye, what is the nationality of that young fellow? I like his face."

"He is Norwegian," replied Mr. Horner, glancing at Frithiof, who was arranging the platform for Mme. Gauthier, the pianiste. "You think, no doubt, that I spoke too severely to him just now, but you do not realize what a worthless fellow he is. My partner retains him merely out of charity, but he has been proved to be unprincipled and dishonest."

The last few words reached Frithiof distinctly as he came down the steps; he turned ghastly pale, his very lips grew white; it was as though some one had stabbed him as he re-entered the little room, and the eyes that turned straight to the eyes of the Italian were full of a dumb anguish which Donati never forgot. Indignant with the utter want of kindness and tact which Mr. Horner had shown, he turned abruptly away without making the slightest comment on the words, but often through the evening, when Frithiof was engrossed in other things, Donati quietly watched him, and the more he saw of him the less he was able to believe the truth of the accusation. Meantime he was waiting for his opportunity, but he was unable to get a word with the Norwegian until the end of the concert, when he met him on the stairs.

"Are you at liberty?" he asked "Is your work here over?"

Frithiof replied in the affirmative, and offered to look for the great barytone's carriage, imagining that this must be the reason he had addressed him.

"Oh, as to the carriage!" said Donati, easily, "it will be waiting at the corner of Sackville Street. But I wanted a few minutes' talk with you, and first of all to apologize for having been the unwilling hearer of that accusation, which I am quite sure is false."

On the Farm

The Round Dairy Barn.

The round barn has a special advantage in the work of distributing silage to the cows. Feeding commences at the chute where it is thrown down and continued around the circle ending with the silage cart at chute again ready for the next feeding. The same is true in feeding hay and grain, writes Mr. W. J. Fraser.

Another great advantage is the large, unobstructed haymow. With the self-supporting roof there are no timbers whatever obstructing the mow, which means no dragging of hay around or over posts or girders. The hay carrier runs on a circular track around the mow, midway between the silo and the outside wall and drops the hay at any desired point, which means the saving of much labor.

The circular construction is the strongest, because it takes advantage of the lineal instead of the breaking strength of the lumber. Each row of boards running around the barn forms a hoop that holds the barn together. Any piece of timber is many times stronger on a lineal pull than on a breaking stress.

All exposed surfaces of a round barn are circular, as both the sides and roof are arched, which is the strongest form of construction to resist wind pressure. Besides, the wind in striking it glances off, and can get no direct hold on the walls or roof as it can on the flat side or gable ends of a square or rectangular structure.

If the lumber is properly placed in a round barn much of it will perform two or more functions. Every row of siding boards running around the building serves also as a brace and the same is true of the roof boards and the arched rafters. If the siding is put on vertically and the roof built dome shape, no scaffolding is required inside or out. These are points of economy in the round construction.

Another item of economy in the circular barn is less framing lumber. This form has the strongest possible construction with the least lumber in the frame and the least bracing, not a single timber larger than a two by six being required above the sill. The arched circular roof requires no support and no scaffolding is needed inside during its construction. In comparing the 60-foot round barn with a rectangular barn of the same area, the two barns should afford the cows the same amount of space on the platform. Allowing each cow in the 60-foot round barn three feet six inches in width at the rear of the platform, it will accommodate 40 cows and leave space for two passageways. But, in a rectangular barn only three feet four inches platform space need be allowed for each cow and the 78½-foot barn, with two three-foot passageways across it for convenience in feeding, will accommodate 42 cows. While the rectangular barn has stall room for two or more cows, the round barn contains space in the centre for a silo eighteen foot in diameter.

The complete bills for materials for these barns show the exact saving in lumber on the 60-foot round barn over the plank and mortise frame rectangular barns, 36x78½ feet.

The lumber bills of the rectangular barn show an increase in cost of 28 per cent. for the plank frame and 54 per cent. for the mortise frame. The round barn 60 feet in diameter, contains 118⅓, and the rectangular barn 225 lineal feet of wall.

The 90-foot round barn would hold 100 cows in two rows, headed together, 65 of which would be in the outer circle and have three feet six inches each in width at the gutter. This leaves sufficient room for feed alleys and walks and two passageways, one three feet and the other seven feet wide for the manure and feed carrier. All of this is outside of the central space for a silo twenty feet in diameter and 71 feet high, with a capacity of 620 tons of silage and in the mow there would still be an excess above the capacity of the rectangular barn of 33,000 cubic feet, which would hold 66 tons of hay or as much as the entire mow of a barn 32x36 feet with twenty-foot posts.

In the final summing up of the cost of all the material for the completed dairy barns with silos show the saving of from 34 to 58 per cent. in favor of the round barn and silo, or an actual money saving of from $379 to $1,184, depending upon the size and construction of the barn.

Thoughtless men go on building rectangular barns, but what would this reckless disregard of a possible saving of 34 to 58 per cent. mean in a year's business on the farm? If the dairymen discarded the idea of a rectangular barn and built a round barn instead, with the money thus saved he could buy one of the best pure bred sires for his herd, and also from three to ten pure bred heifers or fine grade cows. Either of these purchases might double the profit of the herd, or this saving properly applied, would purchase many labor saving devices, which would make life less of a drudgery on many dairy farms.

HOUSEHOLD

Dainty Dishes.

Nut Bread.—One egg, one cupful of white sugar, a pinch of salt, a cupful of sweet milk, three cupfuls of flour sifted with four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one cupful of nut meats worked in at the last. Put into loaf tins, let stand for twenty minutes, and bake for three-quarters of an hour.

Brown Betty.—Put into a greased pudding dish a layer of peeled and chopped apples, sprinkle lightly with granulated sugar, bits of butter, a few drops of lemon juice, and a little ground cinnamon and grated nutmeg. Then dust the whole lightly with a powdering of cracker crumbs. Put in more apples, and proceed as before. When the dish is full, have the top layer of fine crumbs, dot thickly with bits of butter, and bake for from half to three-quarters of an hour. Serve in the dish which it was baked, with a hard sauce.

Tomato and Tapioca Soup. — A can of tomatoes, run through a sieve; a ten cent can of beef tea; half a cup of pearl tapioca, soaked two hours in a little cold water; two teaspoonfuls of onion juice; a teaspoonful of white sugar; a saltspoonful of salt; a teaspoonful of chopped sweet herbs, and paprika to taste. Put ingredients over the fire (leaving out the tapioca) to heat and bring slowly to the boil. Keep this up for five minutes and stir in the soaked tapioca. Simmer five minutes more and serve. Any good stock you happen to have may be substituted for the canned soup to flavor the above.

Fruit Cake.—Cream together a cupful of sugar and half a cupful of butter. Add two eggs, a cupful of molasses, and half a cupful of strong cold coffee, in which dissolve a scant teaspoonful of baking soda. Three cupfuls of sifted flour, one cupful of raisins, figs, and dates, cut fine and mixed; one cupful of washed and dried currants, a quarter pound of citron minced fine, a quarter pound of blanched and shredded almonds, and a teaspoonful of mixed pulverized cinnamon, cloves, mave, nutmeg, and ginger. Favor with the strained juice of a lemon. Bake in a moderate oven one hour in a mold or pan lined with buttered paper. This cake will keep sweet and soft for several months if put into a tin box with a cover. Line the box with waxed paper.

Stuffed Pork Tenderloins.—Split pork tenderloins almost through; make a stuffing as for fowls, using bread crumbs, a seasoning of salt, pepper, a little thyme and grated onion, and two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Spread a thick layer of this over one of the loins and place the second on top of this; tie firmly together in several places. Put a little butter or dripping into a frying pan and when it is hot, brown the meat nicely in it on all sides. Then add two cupfuls of boiling water and cook over a slow fire for thirty minutes. The meat should be covered after adding the water. A little browned flour may be stirred in after the meat is taken out, and this will make a delicious gravy. Cooking it in the frying pan saves the trouble of heating the oven when the meat is the only thing to be roasted for dinner. One has in this a good and economical dish. It is equally good sliced cold for luncheon.

White Bread.—Chop into quart of wheat flour a tablespoonful of butter or other shortening, add a quart of lukewarm water, a tablespoonful of sugar, and a half yeast cake dissolved in a gill of lukewarm water. Beat hard for fifteen minutes, cover the sponge and set aside to rise for six hours (or until light) in a warm room where it will not get chilled. Sift into another receptacle two quarts of flour sifted with a tablespoonful of salt. Make a hollow in the center of this flour and work into it gradually the risen sponge or batter. When the dough is just stiff enough to handle easily, transfer it to a floured board and knead for at least ten minutes. Cover and set to rise as before until twice its present size. When light, knead again for ten minutes, make into loaves, put these in pans, and set to rise for an hour, or until they are a third larger than at first. Be sure that the oven is at a good steady heat, put the loaves in, cover with brown paper for the first three-quarters of an hour of baking. Then uncover and brown for fifteen minutes more.

Hints to the Cook.

Care of the Stove.—Before polishing the stove, wash it with vinegar. This removes all grease, leaving the surface smooth, and keeps the blacking from burning off so quickly, saving much time and labor. A little sugar added to the blacking is a good thing to try.

To Clean the Nickel on Stoves and Ranges.—Take a woolen cloth, wipe the soot from the bottom of the teakettle and with this rub the nickel. If there is grease or other dirt, first remove this with a damp cloth rubbed well with soap.

When food burns, quickly seize the kettle or pan from the range and set into a larger pan containing cold water. This will cause the steam to escape from the outside, instead of passing upward through the food. Remove to another vessel and continue cooking; if careful not to disturb the burnt part there will be no taint or odor to be detected by the most critical person.

Salt sprinkled on any substance burning on the stove will stop the smell.

Boiling Meat.—When boiling meat of any kind, add a tablespoonful of vinegar to the water when first put over the fire. This makes the meat tender, without leaving any flavor of the vinegar.

To Soften Tough Meat. — Brush over with oil (or butter) and vinegar, using one part of vinegar to two parts of oil or butter, and let stand for a few hours. This is often done in tropical countries. A little vinegar served in the platter with the steak adds to the flavor of the meat.

To Improve Griddle Cakes. — A teaspoonful of brown sugar or molasses added to the griddle cake batter makes it brown better and more easily.

Substitute for Cream (good on fruit)—Beat together the whites of two eggs, a level tablespoonful of sugar, one tablespoonful of cornstarch, and butter the size of a nut. Stir in one half cup of cold meat and beat very hard. Put a cup of cold milk over the fire; when it boils draw the dish to a cooler part of the range and pour in the egg mixture. Simmer till the milk thickens and when cold strain.

Care in Serving Food.

Scrupulous neatness should always be observed in keeping, handling and serving food. If ever cleanliness is desirable, it must be in the things we eat, and every care should be taken to insure it for the sake of health as well as of society.

Cleanliness in this connection means not only absence of visible dirt, but freedom from undesirable bacteria and other minute organisms, and from worms and other parasites. If food, raw or cooked, is kept in dirty places, peddled from dirty carts, prepared in dirty rooms and in dirty dishes, or exposed to foul air, disease germs and other offensive and dangerous substances can easily get in.

Food and drink may, in fact, be very dangerous purveyors of disease. The bacteria of typhoid fever sometimes find their way into drinking water, and those of typhoid and scarlet fevers and diphtheria into milk, and bring sickness and death to large numbers of people.

Oysters which are taken from the salt water where they grow and "floated" for a short time in brackish water near the mouth of a stream have been known to be infected by typhoid fever germs brought into the stream by the sewage from houses.

Celery or lettuce grown in soil containing typhoid germs has been thought to convey this disease.

TURKEY BETRAYED, IS STORY.

King Ferdinand Bought Military Secrets of Enemy.

Has Turkey been sold? The following story from Bucharest, if true, would go far to prove that the mighty dollar has played a leading part in the disaster that has overtaken the Ottoman arms:

"Turkey was sold to King Ferdinand before he took the field. He had used part of his enormous private fortune through his agents in Contsantinople to such effect that not only was he in possession of the most treasured secrets of the Turkish War Office, but he was assured of the masterly inactivity of some of the leaders of the Turkish forces.

"If you will look at the direction and daring of Gen. Savoff's policy it becomes at once apparent that he had other forces to help him than those which were under his direct command. He could not have dared to face half the risks before him if money had not spoken.

"Dissensions between Generals, unwise night attacks, unsupported movements, a policy of waiting and of fighting at the wrong moment, the evacuation of strategic positions and the checkmate always awaiting the movements of Generals who thought that they were about to surprise the enemy—these facts tell their own story.

"There is reason to believe the authorities in Constantinople know by now that King Ferdinand's purse has been at least as long as his arm."

Everything comes to him who waits—including the woman who said she'd be ready in a minute.

Many intemperate people say that misfortune drove them to drink. It is more likely that drink drove them to misfortune.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, DECEMBER 1.

Lesson IX.—The lunatic boy, Mark 9. 14-29. Golden text, Mark 9. 23.

Verse 14. They came — Jesus, Peter, James, and John, returning from the Mount of Transfiguration.

Scribes—The professional teachers of the common people and therefore influential with the multitude.

Questioning with them—The subject of discussion was the failure of the disciples to cure the epileptic boy. The scribes seem to have made this an opportunity for undermining the authority and influence of Jesus and his disciples with the multitude.

15. Straightway . . . saluted him—As with a common impulse the multitude turned from the scribes and the disciples alike to Jesus.

Amazed.—Perhaps at the suddenness and opportuneness of his appearance.

16. What question ye with them?—The words are addressed to the multitude, the second pronoun referring to the disciples. Jesus entirely ignores the presence of the scribes.

17. Dumb—Speechless.

A . . . spirit—Compare introductory paragraph above.

18. Wheresoever it taketh him—The epileptic fits to which the boy was subject were often of great violence and came upon him at unexpected times and without warning.

They were not able—The inability of the disciples to effect a cure was evidently a sore disappointment to the distressed father. This disappointment is reflected in his words addressed to Jesus.

19. Answereth them—The father of the afflicted boy had responded to the question of Jesus addressed to the multitude, "What question ye with them?" (the disciples). The man's complaint against the disciples brings forth the exclamation of Jesus, O faithless generation, how long shall I be with you?—Words referring apparently to the disciples, whose lack of faith seems to have been the obstacle in the way of their performing a cure.

20. Tare—Or, convulsed.

21. He asked his father — Only Mark gives the details recorded in this and the next succeeding three verses (21-24).

22. To destroy him—The violent seizures sometimes took the form of suicidal frenzy.

But if thou canst do anything—The man's faith in the ultimate recovery of his son had been severely tested. It, however, rises anew to meet the challenge of Jesus.

23. If thou canst!—The emphasis is on the pronoun. Jesus takes up the father's own words and places the burden of responsibility upon him. The possibility of a cure hinges upon his ability to believe.

All things are possible—The question of ability turns on the question of faith. In other words, Jesus would have the father realize the universal truth that faith recognizes no insurmountable obstacles, no surrender to disappointing experiences.

24. Cried out, and said—Some ancient manuscripts add "with tears." The father realizes that the words of Jesus throw him back in the first instance upon himself and upon his own spiritual and mental attitude toward the power of Jesus, the exercise of which he implores.

Help thou my unbelief—True faith is not inconsistent with a consciousness of its own infirmity.

25. A multitude came running together—Out of idle curiosity, such as was always distasteful to Jesus. He therefore hastens to heal the unfortunate lad, the last obstacle to whose cure had been removed with the strengthening of the father's faith.

Come out of him, and enter no more into him—The second word of command may well have been added for the father's sake, who, in view of the periodical nature of the ailment, might easily have been tempted to doubt the permanency of the cure.

26. As one dead—In utter exhaustion from the severity of the final attack of convulsions.

27. And he arose—Matthew adds, "The boy was cured from that hour." Luke further explains that Jesus "gave him back to his father."

28. His disciples asked him privately—Luke records the impression made by the miracle upon the multitude in the words, "They were all astonished at the majesty of God."

29. By nothing, save by prayer—Some ancient manuscripts add "and fasting." The cause of the disciples' inability to cure the child, Jesus explains as due to their "little faith" (Matt. 17. 20) and their lack of spiritual readiness. Trusting in their commission, they seem to have neglected the means of grace and spiritual equipment, prayer and faith, on which the efficiency of their gift depended.

ORIGIN OF CUSTOMS.

Shaking Hands and Giving Arm to a Lady.

Certain customs in vogue at the present day, such as shaking hands or offering the left arm to a lady are of considerable antiquity. It is said that Phoenicians, introduced the former habit into Britain, and that upon the shores of Mounts Bay many a bargain in tin between eastern merchant and Cornishman was ratified by this method of clasping hands.

Certain other customs no less widely observed have come down to us from a later period, says the London Globe, and yet one sufficiently remote. In Mediaeval times he who shook hands, whether in salutation or as a defensive measure—retaining the sword hand, while some treaty was being arranged—must needs strip off his steel gauntlet.

So at the present time men pull off their right glove before shaking hands with a lady. The wearing of glove or gauntlet, indeed, at one period was something of a challenge in itself; thus no men wore gloves in the presence of royalty, an absence which indicated also absence of hostile intent.

Still a man offers a lady his left arm, a practice which recalls times when escort was by no means solely a matter of politeness, but when, in order to guard against sudden attack, it was necessary to have the sword arm free.

Still when a stranger calls for the first time, he sends in his card, partly, no doubt, in order that his name and possible business may be made clear, but partly, also, because in olden days he who desired entrance to palace or castle must send some token as warrant of peaceful intent.

This token was, perhaps, a ring or some jewel known to the lord of the castle, which would serve as a guarantee for the sincerity of its bearer. In a less artistic age the stranger who desires admission contents himself with a slip of pasteboard whereon his name is printed in black letters.

A fifteen storey office building is announced for Winnipeg.

The man who borrows anything usually borrows trouble along with it.

When a man says he can do something without half trying he usually fails because he doesn't half try.

Brown—I wonder if Smith would endorse my note? Jones—How long has he known you? Brown — A month. Jones—I'm afraid that's too long.

SUICIDES IN GERMANY

Boys and Girls Ending Their Lives Opens a Problem.

The recent suicide of a sch[illegible] of 15 years at Frankfort-[illegible] Main, coming after a series [illegible] tragedies, has once more ra[illegible] question of school exami[illegible] and the too strenuous upbri[illegible] youthful Germany.

In the case under notice [illegible] a son of a well-to-do and v[illegible] orable family of Magdebur[illegible] $175 and then disappear[illegible] police were asked to arrest [illegible] already he had shown hi[illegible] exceedingly headstrong ch[illegible] For a week no trace of him could be found. Finally he was discovered dead in a hotel in Frankfort, having shot himself in the head.

More recently still, in Berlin, the son of a hostler, only 13, hanged himself in the cellar, having been sharply scolded by his stepmother for not being able to give an account of a penny piece that accidentally fell from his overcoat pocket. At all events, that was the explanation given to the authorities, and which was accepted for want of a better. Last week, again, a boy of 14 years shot himself in bed after showing extraordinary deliberation and invention in fixing up the apparatus by means of which he discharged the pistol.

These were three of the more remarkable cases. One may also remember a case of double suicide in which two school children, a boy and a girl, ended their lives, and many almost inexplicable cases of the suicide of young servant girls. Indeed, a casual glance at the suicide lists might lead one to believe that in Germany suicide is more common under 20 than in adult ages.

The general reasons are not very clear. School examinations and the strenuous programme of the German schools have undoubtedly been a factor in some cases. It is even said that the education system, which has certainly done so much toward the greatness of modern Germany is one that ultimately "sends the weak ones to the wall." Perhaps a greater factor is the psychological upheaval coming in the wake of a commercial rise of great rapidity. Parents who were brought up with Spartan simplicity now find themselves able to bring up their children in the lap of luxury. Indeed, there is possibly a tendency toward too much luxury. The mode of living of a part of the German race is thought to have produced a vein of degeneration. Still another cause may be seen in the precocious reading of philosophy, which seems to have as strong a hold on young Germans in some quarters as the "penny dreadfuls" in other countries.

THE REAL TEST.

Brave and Happy in Spite of Great Misfortune.

"Of course they are happy," said a neighbor of the Lacys. "They have never known any real trouble; they are always well, and they have plenty of means. It is easy to be happy under such conditions."

"I think that they are happy," said a second neighbor, "because of their sincere and deep religious faith."

"They have never had to depend on that," returned the first. "Any one could be happy with their good luck. Let them lose that, and we should soon see what their religion would do for them."

Two hours later Mrs. Lacy was called to the telephone. The message made her heart stand still.

"My husband! A serious accident! They are taking him to the hospital? O God, be merciful! Oh, I need Thy help!"

The next day the stricken wife learned that her husband would never walk again.

Blow after blow fell upon this hitherto fortunate family. A serious illness impaired the sight of the youngest child. Then Mr. Lacy's income was suddenly cut in two by the dishonesty of a business partner. The family faced actual poverty.

One day the two neighbors met and talked again. "It is astonishing!" cried the skeptical one. "I cannot believe it!"

"What?"

"The Lacy's. I have just been to see Mrs. Lacy. She is the same brave, happy woman, and he, too, seems as cheerful as ever. How do you account for that?"

"It is their religion," said the other. "It is real; it supports and comforts them."

"I cannot understand it. She said to me, 'We are happy. I cannot tell you how near the Heavenly Father has seemed to us through all these days. God is very good to us.' There must be something in a religion like that."

"Yes; did not Job say, 'Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him?' Isn't that what we all need—a religion that is sufficient for any experience in life? Unless we have it, can we call ourselves happy? I was sure the Lacys had it, and the test has proved it. In spite of their misfortunes, they are the happiest of us all."—Youth's Companion.

Art In Opening Letters.

In Russia one letter in every ten passing through the post is opened by the authorities as a matter of course. Indeed, the postal authorities of every country have experts who have raised letter-opening to a fine art. Some kinds of paper can be steamed open without leaving any traces, and this simple operation is finished by reburnishing the flap with a bone instrument. In the case of a seal a matrix is taken by means of new bread before breaking the wax. When other methods fail the envelope is placed between pieces of wood with edge projecting one-twentieth of an inch. The edge of the envelope is first flattened, then roughened, and finally slit open. Later a hair line of strong white gum is applied and the edges united under pressure.

BLACK, GREEN OR MIXED

ONLY A MONTH;

OR, A CURIOUS MYSTERY EXPLAINED.

The next morning, as a natural consequence, he began the day with a dull, miserable headache; at breakfast he hardly spoke, and he set off for business looking so ill that Sigrid wondered whether he could possibly get through his work.

About half past nine there arrived a telegram which did not mend matters. Mr. Boniface was seriously unwell, would not be in town that day, and could not be at St. James's Hall that evening for the concert. Mr. Horner would take his place. Frithiof's heart sunk at this news; and when presently the fussy, bumptuous little man entered the shop the climax of his misery was reached. Mr. Horner read the telegram with a disturbed air.

"Dear! dear! seriously ill, I'm afraid, or he would at least make an effort to come to-night. But after all the annoyance of yesterday I am not surprised—no, not at all. Such a thing has never happened in his business before, ay, Mr. Foster?"

"Oh, no, sir," said the foreman, in a low voice, sorry in his heart for the young Norwegian, who could not avoid hearing every word.

"It was quite enough to make him ill. Such a disgraceful affair in a house of this class. For his own sake he does well to hush it up, though I intend to see that all proper precautions are taken; upon that, at any rate, I insist. If I had my own way there should have been none of this misplaced leniency. Here, William!" and he beckoned to the boy, who was irreverently flicking the bust of Mozart with a duster.

"Yes, sir," said William.

"Go at once to Smith, the ironmonger, and order him to send some one round to fix a spring bell on a till. Do you understand?"

"Quite, sir," replied William.

Frithiof went on arranging some music which had just arrived, but he flushed deeply, and Mr. Horner, glad to have found a vulnerable point of attack, did not scruple to make the most of his opportunity.

"Why should I mind this vulgar brute?" thought Frithiof, as he forced himself to go on with his work with the air of quiet determination which Mr. Horner detested. The miserable hours dragged on somehow, and at last, late in the afternoon, Foster came up to him with a message.

"Mr. Horner wishes to speak to you," he said; "I will take your place here." Then, lowering his voice cautiously, "It's my opinion, Mr. Falck, that he is trying to goad you into resigning, or into an impertinent answer which would be sufficient to cause your dismissal."

"Thank you for the warning," said Frithiof, gratefully.

Mr. Horner replied to his knock, but did not glance round as he entered the room.

"You wished to speak to me, sir?" asked Frithiof.

"Yes, when I have finished this letter. You can wait," said Mr. Horner, ungraciously.

Mr. Horner signed his name with a flourish characteristic of his opinion of himself, then swung round his chair and glanced at Frithiof.

"Mr. Boniface left no instructions as to whether you were to attend as usual at St. James's Hall to-night," he began. "But since no one else is used to the work I suppose there is no help for it."

He paused, apparently expecting some rejoinder, but Frithiof merely stood there politely attentive.

"Since you know the work, and are used to it, you had better attend as usual, for I should be vexed if any hitch should occur in the arrangements. But understand, pray, that I strongly disapprove of your remaining in our employ at all, and that it is only out of necessity that I submit to it, for I consider you unfit to mix with respectable people."

Whatever the Norwegian felt, he managed to preserve a perfectly unmoved aspect. Mr. Horner, who wanted to stir him into indignant expostulation, was sorely disappointed that his remarks fell so flat.

"I see you intend to brazen it out," he said, crushingly. "But you don't deceive me. You may leave the room, and take good care that all the arrangements to-night are properly carried out."

"Yes, sir," said Frithiof, with the quietness of one who knows that he remains master of the situation. Owing to the concert, his release came a little sooner than usual, and it was not much after seven when Sigrid heard him at the door. His face frightened her; it looked so worn and harassed.

"You will have time for some supper?" she asked, pleadingly.

"No," he said, passing her quickly, "I am not hungry, and must change my clothes and be off again."

"He might fancy some coffee," said Sigrid to herself. "Quick, Swanhild, run and get it ready while I boil the water. There is nothing like strong cafe noir when one is tired out."

Perhaps it did him some good; and the glimpse of his home certainly cheered him, yet, nevertheless, he was almost ready that night to give up everything in despair.

Physical exhaustion had dulled the glow of inner comfort that had come to him on the previous day. His old hatred against those who succeeded once more filled his heart and thought at one time he had felt curious to see Donati, and had heard all that Cecil had said in favor of the Italian's courage and unselfishness, yet now, in his bitterness of soul, he began to hate the man merely because of his popularity.

The architects of most English music-halls have scant regard for the comfort of the artistes. Here, sitting face to face on hard benches, were ranged to-night many of the first singers of the day. There was Sardoni, the good-natured English tenor and composer. There was Mme. Sardoni-Borelli, with her noble and striking face and manner; besides a host of other celebrities. But Carlo Donati had not yet arrived, and Mr. Horner kept glancing anxiously through the glass doors on to the staircase in hopes of catching sight of the great barytone. Frithiof lived through it all like a man in a dream.

Mr. Horner turned to Frithiof at that moment.

"Go and see whether Signor Donati has come," he said. "His song is next on the programme."

Frithiof made his way to the cloak room, and, as he walked through the narrow room leading to it, he could distinctly hear the words of some one within. The voice seemed familiar to him.

"Badly received? Well, you only failed because of nervousness. In your second song you will be more used to things, and, you will see, it will go much better."

"But you surely can never have had the same difficulty to struggle with?" said the young tenor, who, with a very downcast face, stood talking to the newly arrived barytone.

"Never!" exclaimed the other, with a laugh which rang through the room, "Ask Sardoni! He'll tell you of my first appearance."

Then, as Frithiof gave his message, the speaker turned round and revealed to the Norwegian that face which had fascinated him so strangely just before his illness—a face not only beautiful in outline and coloring, but full of an undefined charm, which made all theories as to the conceit and objectionableness of successful men fall to the ground.

"Thank you," he said, bowing in reply; "I will come down at once."

All went smoothly until, early in the second part, the Italian barytone was to sing a song with violin obligato. By some unlucky accident Frithiof forgot to place the music-stand for the violinist; and perceiving this as soon as they were on the platform, Donati himself brought it forward and put it in position. It was but a trifling occurrence, but quite sufficient to rouse Mr. Horner. When the singer returned he apologized profusely, and turned upon Frithiof with a rebuke, the tone of which made Donati's eyes flash.

"Pray do not make so much of it," he said, with a touch of dignity in his manner. Then returning again from one of his journeys to the platform, and noticing the expression of Frithiof's face, he paused to speak to him for a moment before returning to give the encore that was emphatically demanded. It was not so much what he said as his manner of saying it that caused Frithiof's face to brighten, and brought a frown to James Horner's brow.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Carlo Donati had considerable insight into character; not only had he been born with this gift, but his wandering life had brought him into contact with all sorts and conditions of men, and had been an excellent education to one who had always known how to observe. He was, moreover, of so sympathetic a temperament that he could generally tell in a moment when trouble was in the air, and the ridiculously trivial affair about the music-stand, which could not have dwelt in his mind for a minute on its own account, opened his eyes to the relations existing between Mr. Horner and the Norwegian. That something was wrong with the latter he had perceived when Frithiof had first spoken to him in the cloak-room, and now, having inadvertently been the cause of bringing upon him a severe rebuke, he was determined to make what amends lay in his power.

He cut short Mr. Horner's flattering remarks and reiterated apologies as to the slight contretemps.

"It is of no consequence at all," he said. "By the bye, what is the nationality of that young fellow? I like his face."

"He is Norwegian," replied Mr. Horner, glancing at Frithiof, who was arranging the platform for Mme. Gauthier, the pianiste. "You think, no doubt, that I spoke too severely to him just now, but you do not realize what a worthless fellow he is. My partner retains him merely out of charity, but he has been proved to be unprincipled and dishonest."

The last few words reached Frithiof distinctly as he came down the steps; he turned ghastly pale, his very lips grew white; it was as though some one had stabbed him as he re-entered the little room, and the eyes that turned straight to the eyes of the Italian were full of a dumb anguish which Donati never forgot. Indignant with the utter want of kindness and tact which Mr. Horner had shown, he turned abruptly away without making the slightest comment on the words, but often through the evening, when Frithiof was engrossed in other things, Donati quietly watched him, and the more he saw of him the less he was able to believe the truth of the accusation. Meantime he was waiting for his opportunity, but he was unable to get a word with the Norwegian until the end of the concert, when he met him on the stairs.

"Are you at liberty?" he asked "Is your work here over?"

Frithiof replied in the affirmative, and offered to look for the great barytone's carriage, imagining that this must be the reason he had addressed him.

"Oh, as to the carriage!" said Donati, easily, "it will be waiting at the corner of Sackville Street. But I wanted a few minutes' talk with you, and first of all to apologize for having been the unwilling hearer of that accusation, which I am quite sure is false."

(To be continued.)

MR. J. PIERPONT MORGAN, The Great American Financier.

On the Farm

The Round Dairy Barn.

The round barn has a special advantage in the work of distributing silage to the cows. Feeding commences at the chute where it is thrown down and continued around the circle ending with the silage cart at chute again ready for the next feeding. The same is true in feeding hay and grain, writes Mr. W. J. Fraser.

Another great advantage is the large, unobstructed haymow. With the self-supporting roof there are no timbers whatever obstructing the mow, which means no dragging of hay around or over posts or girders. The hay carrier runs on a circular track around the mow, midway between the silo and the outside wall and drops the hay at any desired point, which means the saving of much labor.

The circular construction is the strongest, because it takes advantage of the lineal instead of the breaking strength of the lumber. Each row of boards running around the barn forms a hoop that holds the barn together. Any piece of timber is many times stronger on a lineal pull than on a breaking stress.

All exposed surfaces of a round barn are circular, as both the sides and roof are arched, which is the strongest form of construction to resist wind pressure. Besides, the wind in striking it glances off, and can get no direct hold on the walls or roof as it can on the flat side or gable ends of a square or rectangular structure.

If the lumber is properly placed in a round barn much of it will perform two or more functions. Every row of siding boards running around the building serves also as a brace and the same is true of the roof boards and the arched rafters. If the siding is put on vertically and the roof built dome shape, no scaffolding is required inside or out. These are points of economy in the round construction.

Another item of economy in the circular barn is less framing lumber. This form has the strongest possible construction with the least lumber in the frame and the least bracing, not a single timber larger than a two by six being required above the sill. The arched circular roof requires no support and no scaffolding is needed inside during its construction. In comparing the 60-foot round barn with a rectangular barn of the same area, the two barns should afford the cows the same amount of space on the platform. Allowing each cow in the 60-foot round barn three feet six inches in width at the rear of the platform, it will accommodate 40 cows and leave space for two passageways. But, in a rectangular barn only three feet four inches platform space need be allowed for each cow and the 78½-foot barn, with two three-foot passageways across it for convenience in feeding, will accommodate 42 cows. While the rectangular barn has stall room for two or more cows, the round barn contains space in the centre for a silo eighteen foot in diameter.

The complete bills for materials for these barns show the exact saving in lumber on the 60-foot round barn over the plank and mortise frame rectangular barns, 36x78½ feet.

The lumber bills of the rectangular barn show an increase in cost of 28 per cent. for the plank frame and 54 per cent. for the mortise frame. The round barn 60 feet in diameter, contains 118¼, and the rectangular barn 225 lineal feet of wall.

The 90-foot round barn would hold 100 cows in two rows, headed together, 65 of which would be in the outer circle and have three feet six inches each in width at the gutter. This leaves sufficient room for feed alleys and walks and two passageways, one three feet and the other seven feet wide for the manure and feed carrier. All of this is outside of the central space for a silo twenty feet in diameter and 71 feet high, with a capacity of 620 tons of silage and in the mow there would still be an excess above the capacity of the rectangular barn of 33,000 cubic feet, which would hold 66 tons of hay or as much as the entire mow of a barn 32x36 feet with twenty-foot posts.

In the final summing up of the cost of all the material for the completed dairy barns with silos show the saving of from 34 to 58 per cent. in favor of the round barn and silo, or an actual money saving of from $379 to $1,184, depending upon the size and construction of the barn.

Thoughtless men go on building rectangular barns, but what would this reckless disregard of a possible saving of 34 to 58 per cent. mean in a year's business on the farm? If the dairymen discarded the idea of a rectangular barn and built a round barn instead, with the money thus saved he could buy one of the best pure bred sires for his herd, and also from three to ten pure bred heifers or fine grade cows. Either of these purchases might double the profit of the herd, or this saving properly applied, would purchase many labor saving devices, which would make life less of a drudgery on many dairy farms.

Dainty Dishes.

Nut Bread.—One egg, one cupful of white sugar, a pinch of salt, a cupful of sweet milk, three cupfuls of flour sifted with four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one cupful of nut meats worked in at the last. Put into loaf tins, let stand for twenty minutes, and bake for three-quarters of an hour.

Brown Betty.—Put into a greased pudding dish a layer of peeled and chopped apples, sprinkle lightly with granulated sugar, bits of butter, a few drops of lemon juice, and a little ground cinnamon and grated nutmeg. Then dust the whole lightly with a powdering of cracker crumbs. Put in more apples, and proceed as before. When the dish is full, have the top layer of fine crumbs, dot thickly with bits of butter, and bake for from half to three-quarters of an hour. Serve in the dish which it was baked, with a hard sauce.

Tomato and Tapioca Soup. — A can of tomatoes, run through a sieve; a ten cent can of beef tea; half a cup of pearl tapioca, soaked two hours in a little cold water; two teaspoonfuls of onion juice; a teaspoonful of white sugar; a saltspoonful of salt; a teaspoonful of chopped sweet herbs, and paprika to taste. Put ingredients over the fire (leaving out the tapioca) to heat and bring slowly to the boil. Keep this up for five minutes and stir in the soaked tapioca. Simmer five minutes more and serve. Any good stock you happen to have may be substituted for the canned soup to flavor the above.

Fruit Cake.—Cream together a cupful of sugar and half a cupful of butter. Add two eggs, a cupful of molasses, and half a cupful of strong cold coffee, in which dissolve a scant teaspoonful of baking soda. Three cupfuls of sifted flour, one cupful of raisins, figs, and dates, cut fine and mixed; one cupful of washed and dried currants, a quarter pound of citron minced fine, a quarter pound of blanched and shredded almonds, and a teaspoonful of mixed pulverized cinnamon, cloves, mace, nutmeg, and ginger. Favor with the strained juice of a lemon. Bake in a moderate oven one hour in a mold or pan lined with buttered paper. This cake will keep sweet and soft for several months if put into a tin box with a cover. Line the box with waxed paper.

Stuffed Pork Tenderloins.—Split pork tenderloins almost through; make a stuffing as for fowls, using bread crumbs, a seasoning of salt, pepper, a little thyme and grated onion, and two tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Spread a thick layer of this over one of the loins and place the second on top of this; tie firmly together in several places. Put a little butter or dripping into a frying pan and when it is hot, brown the meat nicely in it on all sides. Then add two cupfuls of boiling water and cook over a slow fire for thirty minutes. The meat should be covered after adding the water. A little browned flour may be stirred in after the meat is taken out, and this will make a delicious gravy. Cooking it in the frying pan saves the trouble of heating the oven when the meat is the only thing to be roasted for dinner. One has in this a good and economical dish. It is equally good sliced cold for luncheon.

White Bread.—Chop into quart of wheat flour a tablespoonful of butter or other shortening, add a quart of lukewarm water, a tablespoonful of sugar, and a half yeast cake dissolved in a gill of lukewarm water. Beat hard for fifteen minutes, cover the sponge and set aside to rise for six hours (or until light) in a warm room where it will not get chilled. Sift into another receptacle two quarts of flour sifted with a tablespoonful of salt. Make a hollow in the center of this flour and work into it gradually the risen sponge or batter. When the dough is just stiff enough to handle easily, transfer it to a floured board and knead for at least ten minutes. Cover and set to rise as before until twice its present size. When light, knead again for ten minutes, make into loaves, put these in pans, and set to rise for an hour, or until they are a third larger than at first. Be sure that the oven is at a good steady heat, put the loaves in, cover with brown paper for the first three-quarters of an hour of baking. Then uncover and brown for fifteen minutes more.

Hints to the Cook.

Care of the Stove.—Before polishing the stove, wash it with vinegar. This removes all grease, leaving the surface smooth, and keeps the blacking from burning off so quickly, saving much time and labor. A little sugar added to the blacking is a good thing to try.

To Clean the Nickel on Stoves and Ranges.—Take a woolen cloth, wipe the soot from the bottom of the teakettle and with this rub the nickel. If there is grease or other dirt, first remove this with a damp cloth rubbed well with soap.

When food burns, quickly seize the kettle or pan from the range and set into a larger pan containing cold water. This will cause the steam to escape from the outside, instead of passing upward through the food. Remove to another vessel and continue cooking; if careful not to disturb the burnt part there will be no taint or odor to be detected by the most critical person.

Salt sprinkled on any substance burning on the stove will stop the smell.

Boiling Meat.—When boiling meat of any kind, add a tablespoonful of vinegar to the water when first put over the fire. This makes the meat tender, without leaving any flavor of the vinegar.

To Soften Tough Meat. — Brush over with oil (or butter) and vinegar, using one part of vinegar to two parts of oil or butter, and let stand for a few hours. This is often done in tropical countries. A little vinegar served in the platter with the steak adds to the flavor of the meat.

To Improve Griddle Cakes. — A teaspoonful of brown sugar or molasses added to the griddle cake batter makes it brown better and more easily.

Substitute for Cream (good on fruit)—Beat together the whites of two eggs, a level tablespoonful of sugar, one tablespoonful of cornstarch, and butter the size of a nut. Stir in one half cup of cold meat and beat very hard. Put a cup of cold milk over the fire; when it boils draw the dish to a cooler part of the range and pour in the egg mixture. Simmer till the milk thickens and when cold strain.

Care in Serving Food.

Scrupulous neatness should always be observed in keeping, handling and serving food. If ever cleanliness is desirable, it must be in the things we eat, and every care should be taken to insure it for the sake of health as well as of society.

Cleanliness in this connection means not only absence of visible dirt, but freedom from undesirable bacteria and other minute organisms, and from worms and other parasites. If food, raw or cooked, is kept in dirty places, peddled from dirty carts, prepared in dirty rooms and in dirty dishes, or exposed to foul air, disease germs and other offensive and dangerous substances can easily get in.

Food and drink may, in fact, be very dangerous purveyors of disease. The bacteria of typhoid fever sometimes find their way into drinking water, and those of typhoid and scarlet fevers and diphtheria into milk, and bring sickness and death to large numbers of people.

Oysters which are taken from the salt water where they grow and "floated" for a short time in brackish water near the mouth of a stream have been known to be infected by typhoid fever germs brought into the stream by the sewage from houses.

Celery or lettuce grown in soil containing typhoid germs has been thought to convey this disease.

TURKEY BETRAYED, IS STORY.

King Ferdinand Bought Military Secrets of Enemy.

Has Turkey been sold? The following story from Bucharest, if true, would go far to prove that the mighty dollar has played a leading part in the disaster that has overtaken the Ottoman arms:

"Turkey was sold to King Ferdinand before he took the field. He had used part of his enormous private fortune through his agents in Contsantinople to such effect that not only was he in possession of the most treasured secrets of the Turkish War Office, but he was assured of the masterly inactivity of some of the leaders of the Turkish forces.

"If you will look at the direction and daring of Gen. Savoff's policy it becomes at once apparent that he had other forces to help him than those which were under his direct command. He could not have dared to face half the risks before him if money had not spoken.

"Dissensions between Generals, unwise night attacks, unsupported movements, a policy of waiting and of fighting at the wrong moment, the evacuation of strategic positions and the checkmate always awaiting the movements of Generals who thought that they were about to surprise the enemy—these facts tell their own story.

"There is reason to believe the authorities in Constantinople know by now that King Ferdinand's purse has been at least as long as his arm."

Everything comes to him who waits—including the woman who said she'd be ready in a minute.

Many intemperate people say that misfortune drove them to drink. It is more likely that drink drove them to misfortune.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, DECEMBER 1.

Lesson IX.—The lunatic boy, Mark 9. 14-29. Golden text, Mark 9. 23.

Verse 14. They came — Jesus, Peter, James, and John, returning from the Mount of Transfiguration.

Scribes—The professional teachers of the common people and therefore influential with the multitude.

Questioning with them—The subject of discussion was the failure of the disciples to cure the epileptic boy. The scribes seem to have made this an opportunity for undermining the authority and influence of Jesus and his disciples with the multitude.

15. Straightway . . . saluted him—As with a common impulse the multitude turned from the scribes and the disciples alike to Jesus.

Amazed.—Perhaps at the suddenness and opportuneness of his appearance.

16. What question ye with them?—The words are addressed to the multitude, the second pronoun referring to the disciples. Jesus entirely ignores the presence of the scribes.

17. Dumb—Speechless.

A . . . spirit—Compare introductory paragraph above.

18. Wheresoever it taketh him—The epileptic fits to which the boy was subject were often of great violence and came upon him at unexpected times and without warning.

They were not able—The inability of the disciples to effect a cure was evidently a sore disappointment to the distressed father. This disappointment is reflected in his words addressed to Jesus.

19. Answereth them—The father of the afflicted boy had responded to the question of Jesus addressed to the multitude, "What question ye with them?" (the disciples). The man's complaint against the disciples brings forth the exclamation of Jesus, O faithless generation, how long shall I be with you?—Words referring apparently to the disciples, whose lack of faith seems to have been the obstacle in the way of their performing a cure.

20. Tare—Or, convulsed.

21. He asked his father — Only Mark gives the details recorded in this and the next succeeding three verses (21-24).

22. To destroy him—The violent seizures sometimes took the form of suicidal frenzy.

But if thou canst do anything—The man's faith in the ultimate recovery of his son had been severely tested. It, however, rises anew to meet the challenge of Jesus.

23. If thou canst!—The emphasis is on the pronoun. Jesus takes up the father's own words and places the burden of responsibility upon him. The possibility of a cure hinges upon his ability to believe.

All things are possible—The question of ability turns on the question of faith. In other words, Jesus would have the father realize the universal truth that faith recognizes no insurmountable obstacles, no surrender to disappointing experiences.

24. Cried out, and said—Some ancient manuscripts add "with tears." The father realizes that the words of Jesus throw him back in the first instance upon himself and upon his own spiritual and mental attitude toward the power of Jesus, the exercise of which he implores.

Help thou my unbelief—True faith is not inconsistent with a consciousness of its own infirmity.

25. A multitude came running together—Out of idle curiosity, such as was always distasteful to Jesus. He therefore hastens to heal the unfortunate lad, the last obstacle to whose cure had been removed with the strengthening of the father's faith.

Come out of him, and enter no more into him—The second word of command may well have been added for the father's sake, who, in view of the periodical nature of the ailment, might easily have been tempted to doubt the permanency of the cure.

26. As one dead—In utter exhaustion from the severity of the final attack of convulsions.

27. And he arose—Matthew adds, "The boy was cured from that hour." Luke further explains that Jesus "gave him back to his father."

28. His disciples asked him privately—Luke records the impression made by the miracle upon the multitude in the words, "They were all astonished at the majesty of God."

29. By nothing, save by prayer—Some ancient manuscripts add "and fasting." The cause of the disciples' inability to cure the child, Jesus explains as due to their "little faith" (Matt. 17. 20) and their lack of spiritual readiness. Trusting in their commission, they seem to have neglected the means of grace and spiritual equipment, prayer and faith, on which the efficiency of their gift depended.

Two colors of silk are combined in the Gaby silk sweater, so that the garment has a striped effect, cuffs, collar, and other trimmings matching the darker color. This sweater has a blue and white striped ground with plain blue trimmings. A blue cap trimmed with white matches the silk sweater, which is warm as toast in addition to its charming lines.

ORIGIN OF CUSTOMS.

Shaking Hands and Giving Arm to a Lady.

Certain customs in vogue at the present day, such as shaking hands or offering the left arm to a lady are of considerable antiquity. It is said that Phoenicians, introduced the former habit into Britain, and that upon the shores of Mounts Bay many a bargain in tin between eastern merchant and Cornishman was ratified by this method of clasping hands.

Certain other customs no less widely observed have come down to us from a later period, says the London Globe, and yet one sufficiently remote. In Mediaeval times he who shook hands, whether in salutation or as a defensive measure—retaining the sword hand, while some treaty was being arranged—must needs strip off his steel gauntlet.

So at the present time men pull off their right glove before shaking hands with a lady. The wearing of glove or gauntlet, indeed, at one period was something of a challenge in itself; thus no men wore gloves in the presence of royalty, an absence which indicated also absence of hostile intent.

Still a man offers a lady his left arm, a practice which recalls times when escort was by no means solely a matter of politeness, but when, in order to guard against sudden attack, it was necessary to have the sword arm free.

Still when a stranger calls for the first time, he sends in his card, partly, no doubt, in order that his name and possible business may be made clear, but partly, also, because in olden days he who desired entrance to palace or castle must send some token as warrant of peaceful intent.

This token was, perhaps, a ring or some jewel known to the lord of the castle, which would serve as a guarantee for the sincerity of its bearer. In a less artistic age the stranger who desires admission contents himself with a slip of pasteboard whereon his name is printed in black letters.

A fifteen storey office building is announced for Winnipeg.

The man who borrows anything usually borrows trouble along with it.

When a man says he can do something without half trying he usually fails because he doesn't half try.

Brown—I wonder if Smith would endorse my note? Jones—How long has he known you? Brown — A month. Jones—I'm afraid that's too long.

SUICIDES IN GERMANY.

Boys and Girls Ending Their Lives Opens a Problem.

The recent suicide of a schoolboy of 15 years at Frankfort-on-the-Main, coming after a series of such tragedies, has once more raised the question of school examinations and the too strenuous upbringing of youthful Germany.

In the case under notice the boy, a son of a well-to-do and very honorable family of Magdeburg, stole $175 and then disappeared. The police were asked to arrest him, as already he had shown himself an exceedingly headstrong character. For a week no trace of him could be found. Finally he was discovered dead in a hotel in Frankfort, having shot himself in the head.

More recently still, in Berlin, the son of a hostler, only 13, hanged himself in the cellar, having been sharply scolded by his stepmother for not being able to give an account of a penny piece that accidentally fell from his overcoat pocket. At all events, that was the explanation given to the authorities, and which was accepted for want of a better. Last week, again, a boy of 14 years shot himself in bed after showing extraordinary deliberation and invention in fixing up the apparatus by means of which he discharged the pistol.

These were three of the more remarkable cases. One may also remember a case of double suicide in which two school children, a boy and a girl, ended their lives, and many almost inexplicable cases of the suicide of young servant girls. Indeed, a casual glance at the suicide lists might lead one to believe that in Germany suicide is more common under 20 than in adult ages.

The general reasons are not very clear. School examinations and the strenuous programme of the German schools have undoubtedly been a factor in some cases. It is even said that the education system, which has certainly done so much toward the greatness of modern Germany is one that ultimately "sends the weak ones to the wall." Perhaps a greater factor is the psychological upheaval coming in the wake of a commercial rise of great rapidity. Parents who were brought up with Spartan simplicity now find themselves able to bring up their children in the lap of luxury. Indeed, there is possibly a tendency toward too much luxury. The mode of living of a part of the German race is thought to have produced a vein of degeneration. Still another cause may be seen in the precocious reading of philosophy, which seems to have as strong a hold on young Germans in some quarters as the "penny dreadfuls" in other countries.

THE REAL TEST.

Brave and Happy in Spite of Great Misfortune.

"Of course they are happy," said a neighbor of the Lacys. "They have never known any real trouble; they are always well, and they have plenty of means. It is easy to be happy under such conditions."

"I think that they are happy," said a second neighbor, "because of their sincere and deep religious faith."

"They have never had to depend on that," returned the first. "Any one could be happy with their good luck. Let them lose that, and we should soon see what their religion would do for them."

Two hours later Mrs. Lacy was called to the telephone. The message made her heart stand still.

"My husband! A serious accident! They are taking him to the hospital? O God, be merciful! Oh, I need Thy help!"

The next day the stricken wife learned that her husband would never walk again.

Blow after blow fell upon this hitherto fortunate family. A serious illness impaired the sight of the youngest child. Then Mr. Lacy's income was suddenly cut in two by the dishonesty of a business partner. The family faced actual poverty.

One day the two neighbors met and talked again. "It is astonishing!" cried the skeptical one. "I cannot believe it!"

"What?"

"The Lacy's. I have just been to see Mrs. Lacy. She is the same brave, happy woman, and he, too, seems as cheerful as ever. How do you account for that?"

"It is their religion," said the other. "It is real; it supports and comforts them."

"I cannot understand it. She said to me, 'We are happy. I cannot tell you how near the Heavenly Father has seemed to us through all these days. God is very good to us.' There must be something in a religion like that."

"Yes; did not Job say, 'Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him?' Isn't that what we all need—a religion that is sufficient for any experience in life? Unless we have it, can we call ourselves happy? I was sure the Lacys had it, and the test has proved it. In spite of their misfortunes, they are the happiest of us all."—Youth's Companion.

Art In Opening Letters.

In Russia one letter in every ten passing through the post is opened by the authorities as a matter of course. Indeed, the postal authorities of every country have experts who have raised letter-opening to a fine art. Some kinds of paper can be steamed open without leaving any traces, and this simple operation is finished by reburnishing the flap with a bone instrument. In the case of a seal a matrix is taken by means of new bread before breaking the wax. When other methods fail the envelope is placed between pieces of wood with edge projecting one-twentieth of an inch. The edge of the envelope is first flattened, then roughened, and finally slit open. Later a hair line of strong white gum is applied and the edges united under pressure.

PARLIAMENT OPENS.

Last week saw the opening of the second session of the twelfth parliament of Canada under the most auspices circumstances. It is generally recognized that this session will be an epoch-making one as far as Canadian history is concerned.

The session started with the legislative program in good shape. The cabinet has been working long and hard, and seldom has parliament opened with a ministry so well prepared. The departmental reports also are nearly all in shape, while the estimates will also be presented at an early date.

The big outstanding question of the session is of course the proposal of Premier Borden to make an emergency contribution to the navy of the empire. An early announcement of the policy of the government is expected from the Premier. Without anticipating the policy of the government it may be said that he will present to the House proposals for aid to the navy which will be in keeping with Canada's position as the most important of the over-sea Dominions. Consistent with the policy the Premier advocated while in opposition, the permanent navy policy will be drafted later after mature consideration, and it will be submitted to the people before finally becoming law.

One of the first measures which will be brought down by the government will be the Bank Act, which will be introduced by Hon. W. T. White. A number of important amendments looking towards the protection of depositors and the general public, and towards the prevention of the serious failures which have occurred within recent years. The bill will be sent to the Banking and Commerce committee, where it will be thoroughly threshed out in every phase. Westerners will ask for amendments to the act which allow banks to loan money on grain in store as well as on cattle. At present no loans can be made until grain reaches a wholesaler and is in the elevator. The western farmer thinks this is a discrimination, and it is also claimed that if loans could be made on farmers' grain there would not be the rush to market in the fall, with the consequent congestion.

Another important bill which will be introduced shortly after the opening of the House will be a measure to assist agriculture in the provinces. This was one of the planks of the party in opposition to give further encouragement to agriculture and to co-operate more closely with the provincial governments in fostering the industry.

Last session the senate killed a bill introduced by Hon. Frank Cochrane designed to carry out another plank in Premier Borden's pre-election platform, a measure to encourage the building of highways by a plan of co-operation between the Dominion and the Provincial governments. It will again be introduced by the government, and it is believed in view of the popular sentiment behind the measure that the senate will not dare to again defeat it.

TO SAVE THE POTATOES.

Many complaints are heard in this district and from various parts of the province that potatoes are rotting so fast that a large portion of the crop which has been harvested is threatened with destruction. The blame is usually placed upon the wet season; but the explanation is more popular than scientific. The wet weather no doubt was very favorable for the development of the germs of decay; but the germs must have been there in order to develope. The way to remedy the trouble is to prevent or destroy the germs, and this is done by spraying the plants with Bordeaux mixture. All fruit growers are familiar with the good results that follow the spraying of fruit trees; apparently similarly good results may be expected from the spraying of potatoes. Where this has been done this year the plants did not blight during growth and the potatoes themselves are now entirely free from rot. The cost of applying the mixture is about $2 per acre. The expenditure does not seem very much in comparison with the results obtained. Close and intelligent observation reveals the fact that the blight is due to an invisible parasitic plant which at first forms under the lower leaves of the stalks and gradually overspreads the whole plant. It finally finds its way down the tubers, first attacking those nearest to the surface, and the whole plant soon succumbs to the march of the destroyer. But like other enemies of plant life and plant production, it can be overcome. The remedy is spraying with a Bordeaux mixture, which consists of four pounds of fresh slacked lime, four pounds of bluestone and forty gallons of water. This mixture is applied by means of a hand force pump attached to a barrel, mounted on a cart drawn by a horse. It is said that the spraying may be done five or six times during the season at intervals of ten days, at a cost of little more than two dollars per acre. The first spraying should be done towards the end of July. Potato growers should cut this out and preserve it till next year.

A POPULAR ANTI-SEPTIC

Professor Wenck, Ph. D., of the Imperial Institute, Berlin, has made the interesting discovery that tobacco and tobacco smoke has the property of destroying the germs of that grimmest of diseases, Asiatic cholera. The saliva is purified from all fear of infection by tobacco smoke almost immediately. For many years, a number of medical men have been in the habit of employing tobacco as a rough and ready preventive of small-pox, and probably had good reason for their smoking in the contagious disease hospitals. But smallpox has never been such a scourge to the world as has cholera. Canada held the battle against it in the first half of last century, and the remembrance of its awful ravages has not yet passed away.

Scientific men are already expressing their fear that the Balkan war will be followed by frightful diseases, owing to the privations endured, especially by the Turks. Cholera is especially dreaded, and Dr. Wenck's discovery will occasion much satisfaction, and accomplish much good, if only by preventing fright, which in former visitations had a good deal of influence in bringing on the disease.

Ladies, we notice, are taking to the use of tobacco, perhaps from that preference one commonly associate with their sex, and because of its prophylactic properties. Not many of the male sex are likely to require excuses for their devotion to "My Lady Nicotine." But those who suffer at home from opposition to their use of the weed, have good reason to thank Dr. Wenck for his discovery. They will for the future smoke as a matter of duty, to keep their homes and their country free from the scourge of cholera.—The Canadian Journal of Commerce.

The example which St. James church set on Monday evening when they opened their parish room for the entertainment of the Band Boys and their friends might be widely copied with good results. We deplore the fact that the boys go to questionable places of amusement, yet we are so afraid of getting out of the beaten path of decorous conduct. We know, too, the strong grip which churches have when the social as well as the religious life of the people is under the guidance of the church. Yet we do not go after the boys. We wait for them to come to church. If they do not come, we are sorry, but we feel that we have done our duty. But the man who goes out after the boys, who mingles with them in their amusements and recreations, who meets them on a common footing which they can understand and who places the sanction of the church on what the boys want to do themselves, has, we believe, the proper conception of the way to win souls.—Parkhill Gazette.

A woman in Hamilton is in a sweat to find out why the police do not punish the men as well as the women who frequent houses of ill repute. It would be a surprise to the woman who is so anxious to see the names of the men published were she to find her own husband's, father's, brother's or cousin's name in a list of men frequenters of houses of this kind in police court. The work in front of the woman of Hamilton is not the reformation of men who, long ago, got past their control; nor is it the punishment of a few frequentens of a few houses of ill fame. But their real duty is the education of the young boys and girls who often are left to themselves to roam the streets night after night while their mothers are attending to the social engagements or endeavoring to reform a class of people who were hopeless cases long ago.

Mr. A. E. Copping returned to London, on Monday after a brief stay in town.

The usual cottage prayer meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Finkbeiner, north of here, on Tuesday night last. After the prayer meeting was over an interesting address was given by Rev. Bunn of this place. About forty of the neighbors took advantage of the occasion and gathered as a surprise party to pay a tribute of respect to Mr. and Mrs. Finkbeiner before their departure to their new home in Crediton. After all were nicely settled the worthy host and hostess were called forward and presented with a mahogany parlor table and a beautiful parlor lamp as tokens of respect and esteem to them. After the presentation a lunch was served and all enjoyed a very pleasant evening. Mr. and Mrs. Finkbeiner have been long and worthy residents of this neighborhood and although not going far distant the many friends and neighbors will regret their departure from the farm. As neighbors Mr. and Mrs. Finkbeiner were kind and obliging and were always ready to lend a helping hand in the time of need. May they be long spared to enjoy their new home is the wish of all.

CENTRALIA

The funeral of the late Thomas Godeave, who died in Duluth, will take place from the home of his sister at Lucan to St. James cemetery, Clandeboye, on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mr E. Colwill of this place has a pullet just six months old that has layed 20 eggs in 21 days, or 50 cents worth of eggs in three weeks. If anyone can beat that we would like to hear from them.

GODERICH—Coroner Dr. W. J. R. Holmes' jury here Monday found that the death of the little child of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Reeves of this place which occurred in the local hospital on Monday night last, was due to starvation and roundly censured the parents for not looking after the child and providing it with proper food.

MONEY BACK DANDRUFF REMEDY

WE GUARANTEE PARISIAN SAGE FOR DANDRUFF AND FALLING HAIR

ONE APPLICATION OF PARISIAN SAGE MAKES THE SCALP FEEL FINE AND ADDS LUSTER TO THE HAIR

Destroy the dandruff germs that's the only known way to eradicate dandruff and PARISIAN SAGE contains just the ingredients that will destroy germs.

Dandruff causes falling hair and baldness because the little dandruff germs rob the hair roots of the nourishment that should go to supply life, luster and vigor to the hair.

PARISIAN SAGE costs but 50 cents a bottle at druggists and toilet goods counters everywhere. It is guaranteed to banish dandruff, stop falling hair or scalp itch, or moneyback. The girl with the Auburn Hair is on every bottle. It is a most delightful and daintily perfumed dressing that quickly invigorates the scalp.

Mail orders filled, charges prepaid, by the R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Canadian distributors, Fort Erie, Ont. W. S. Cole guarantees it.

FREE TO YOU—MY SISTER

FREE TO YOU AND EVERY SISTER SUFFERING FROM WOMEN'S AILMENTS.

I am a woman.
I know woman's sufferings.
I have found the cure.

I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from women's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure — you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhoea or Whitish discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Prolapse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths, also pains in the head; back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete 10 days' treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial; and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer, if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhoea, Green Sickness and Painful or Irregular Menstruation in Young Ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all woman's diseases and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten days' treatment is yours, also the book. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address:

James Street Church Shed

There is a large number of people who use this shed who do not in any way give any support to the church.

The Trustees think that all such should contribute in some way to the funds of the church for the splendid accommodation which they avail themselves of, and would intimate that any wishing to do so should remit or hand same to their secretary-treasurer, Mr S. Martin.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN H. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

SOME persons are so unlucky that they always get the seat in the car next to the large lady who has been eating onions.

It is hard to make some people understand that what is yours isn't all their own and that things that are disagreeable to them may be odious to you.

You have to show up the cocksure fellow occasionally or there's no living with him.

Anyway, the people who are in the limelight can't have many dark secrets.

We hate to have our friends pity us and think them hard hearted if they don't.

Don't find fault. If you must work off your meanness, just get some sharp tongued person started on the subject you want to see ventilated.

Don't feel hurt if somebody else does your work better than you do it and gets your job if you don't properly attend to it yourself.

Some people wouldn't be satisfied with a chance to go to heaven unless they were furnished with a return ticket.

Probably the chief difference between being a schemer and a dreamer is merely one of practicability.

There is no sense in being a fool for then you wouldn't be a fool.

Man of Blood.

See the mighty hunter
From the city
Without pity
Coming forth to slay
Just in play
Wild, ferocious quail,
With no salt on the tail
Of a single one,
To have fun
With the plover
That hover
Over the stubble,
To bubble
With enthusiasm
Over prairie chickens
While the plot thickens.
Will there be game left
When he is through?
Will each bird family be bereft
By what he will do?
Well, not Exactly. His plot
Sounds large,
But when he makes the charge
The birds may be elsewhere,
Feeling pretty fair,
While the owner of the Nearby cow
May allow
That he'll have to be paid a lot
For picking out the birdshot
From Bossy's wide
Side.
Oh, the city hunter,
Wild, ferocious man
That he is; his plan
Goes oft astray.
For, say,
Instead of picking the prize
He is in luck to get Exercise,
But it is nice
To know that a few birds may generally
Be bought at a reasonable price.

He Knew.

"I can prove to you the power of mind over matter," said the professor.

"You needn't bother to," said the big, fat man.

"But you may not understand it."

"Yes, I do! My wife weighs only eighty-five pounds."

Explained.

"All the world loves a lover."

"Is that so?"

"Yep."

"Why?"

"Huh! Why? Because he is such an easy mark!"

Not a Clear Title.

"Does Thompson bear a good reputation?"

"Let me see—Thompson?"

"Yes."

"No, I don't think so."

"Why?"

"He ran for office once."

Couldn't Be.

"The people of the law firm are no gentlemen!"

"What makes you say so?"

"Because they all three belong to the same college sorority."

His Ruse.

"He doesn't know much."

"He talks as if he did."

"Oh, that's just to confuse you so you won't find him out."

His Viewpoint.

"What are you doing for a living?"

"Working."

"Is that the best you can do?"

"No; the worst."

Had Doubts.

"I am dying to go up in an airship.'

"I'd sort of like to do that, too, only I am afraid that the dying might materialize."

That Razor.

"Does your husband ever swear?"

"Well, he shaves himself."

TUCKERSMITH.—Turner's Church celebrated its 50th anniversary on Sunday last, when Rev. J. E. Ford, president of the London Conference, conducted the services.

PARKHILL—Falling into a cellar while fixing a furnace, T. L. Rogers, manager of the Bank of Commerce, sustained a broken nose, bruised and swollen eyes, and two severely sprained wrists one day last week.

CLINTON—Reuben Graham, of the Graham House, Clinton, was Saturday fined by Police Magistrate Andrews of this place $200 and costs or three months in jail for selling liquor on a recent Sunday. The costs were $29.23 owing to their being two adjournments.

AILSA CRAIG—While flourishing a jackknife in the presence of some playmates, Chester Alexander ran his knife into the palm of Carl Robinson's hand, with the result that the wound required several stitches.

MITCHELL—As a result of injuring his spine several weeks ago while assisting a neighbor in picking apples, Thomas Rodgers is dead at his home near here. He was 62 years old, and had resided in this district for over a half a century. Three brothers and four sisters survive. They are Harry and William, Stratford; John, Hibbert; Mrs. William Vivian, Logan; Mrs. Clark Strathroy; Mrs. Watson, Ingersoll, and Mrs. Beer Mitchell.

ZURICH.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Randall have gone to London to reside with their daughter, Mrs. Harry Parker.—Wm. Caldas had the misfortune of breaking a small bridge East of town on Friday evening last with his traction engine. They had to leave the outfit on the road all night. The damage was not heavy.—Word was received here Tuesday by Mr. Hartlelt that his brother-in-law, Mr. Wm. Otto, of Elmira dropped dead in his store on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Otto was a prosperous merchant in Elmira.—Rev. Chris Stabler, D. D., of Cleveland, Ohio, will deliver his interesting and instructive lecture on "Glimpse of Egypt, the Garden of God" in the Evangelical Church on Dec. 2nd at 8 p. m.—Mrs. H. Weber and family left for their new home in Hespeler.—Mr. B. H. Brown of Toronto, is visiting at the home of his parents, Rev. and Mrs. Brown.—Mr. Daniel Schrag of New York State visited his brother Chris, and his brother-in-law, Mr. S. Kipfer for a few days last week.—The annual Sunday School Convention of Central Huron was held in the Evangelical church, here, on Tuesday. Among others Mr. T. G. Orwig of Toronto, superintendent of the Ontario Sunday School Association gave an interesting address.

When the new school is completed Zurich would have the facilities for the developement of the continuation class as the principal has the qualifications to make it a success.

ROYAL PURPLE Stock & Poultry Specifics

FREE We will send absolutely free, for the asking, postpaid, one of our large 64-page books (with illustrations), on the common diseases of stock and poultry. Tells how to feed all kinds of heavy and light horses, colts and mares, milch cows, calves and fattening steers, also how to keep and feed poultry so that they will lay as well in winter as in summer. It contains 300 recommends from all over Canada, from people who have used our goods. No farmer should be without it.

You can fatten cattle and hogs in a month's less time by using our Royal Purple Stock Specific than you could possibly do without it, thereby saving a month's feed and labor and the cost to you will not be more than $1.50 for six pigs or $1.00 for one steer. It will keep your horses in show condition with ordinary feed. If you have a poor, miserable-looking animal on your place try it on this one first and see the marvellous result which will be obtained. Our Stock Specific will increase the milk flow three to five lbs. per cow per day, while being fed in the stable. A 50c package will last a cow or horse 21 days.

ROYAL PURPLE POULTRY SPECIFIC will make your hens lay just as well in the winter as in the summer, and will keep them free from disease. These goods are pure and unadulterated. We do not use any cheap filler to make a large package, entirely different from any on the market at the present time.

Royal Purple Stock Specific, 50c package, four 50c pakgs., in an air-tight tin, for $1.50.
Royal Purple Poultry Specific, 25c and 50c pckgs., and $1.50 air-tight tins that hold four 50c pckgs.

Are You Blue and Worried?

Nervous? Some of the time really ill? Catch cold easily and frequently suffer from biliousness or headache? The reason is that your system does not rid itself of the poisons in the blood; just as impossible as it is for the grate of a stove to rid itself of clinkers. The waste does to us exactly what the clinkers do to the stove; make the fires burn low until enough clinkers have accumulated and then prevent its burning at all. Your liver is sluggish—you are dull and heavy—sleep does not rest, nor is food appetizing. In this condition illness develops. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery eradicates the poisons from the body—a glyceric alterative extract made from bloodroot, golden seal and mandrake root, stone and queen's root, without the use of alcohol. No matter how strong the constitution the stomach is apt to be "out of kilter" at times; in consequence the blood is disordered, for the stomach is the laboratory for the constant manufacture of blood.

MRS. BLAKE.

MRS. BENJ. BLAKE, of Port Dover, Ont., Box 36, writes: "I have been a great sufferer for years from throat trouble, catarrh, indigestion, female troubles, bloating, constipation and nervousness—at times I would be in bed, then able to be up again. Was under many different doctors' care, and would get better for a little while, then I would go down with chronic inflammation all through me. For nineteen years I had this poison in my blood. After trying nearly everything I got worse. I read in The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. I have taken the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets,' and have used five bottles of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. I am now able to do my work and walk with pleasure. I feel like a new woman. I enjoy everything around me and thank God for letting me live long enough to find something that made me well again."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate liver and bowels.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the scaling would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. Headvised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skillful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

OPENING OF PARLIAMENT

Speech From the Throne Read by the Duke of Connaught at a Gorgeous Opening

A despatch from Ottawa says: The second session of the twelfth Parliament of Canada was opened by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, on Thursday afternoon, with all the splendid formalities characteristic of the yearly function. The event was graced by glorious Indian summer weather with a soft haze hovering over the Gatineau hills, and the skies cloudless and blue. There was not a breath of wind and the boom of the guns from Nepean Point announcing the arrival within the gates of the royal party reached the ears of the waiting multitudes with startling reverberation. Larger multitudes than usual thronged the hills.

Speech From the Throne.

"Honorable gentlemen of the Senate:

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

"I have during the past summer spent several months in visiting the principal cities and towns of Canada from coast to coast, and have endeavored to make myself as far as possible acquainted with the conditions prevailing.

"It has been a source of the deepest satisfaction to me to see the almost universal prosperity which reigns throughout the Dominion, and to witness the energy and enterprise which are shown in developing the rich resources of the land.

"It is most gratifying to observe that the trade of the Dominion is increasing rapidly and steadily, the aggregate trade for the last fiscal year being the largest on record. During the present year the same steady increase has been noted, and it is anticipated that the total volume of our trade for the present fiscal year will greatly surpass that of any previous year in our history.

"The revenues of the Dominion continue to expand, and in every branch of business and industry there is a remarkable activity which gives assurance of continued progress and prosperity.

More Britishers Came.

"A copious and welcome stream of immigration has poured into our country during the past summer. The volume of immigration during the present year is greater than during any corresponding period of our history, and in larger measure than usual it has been drawn from the British Islands.

"The labors of the husbandmen have been blessed with an ample return; and, although in some districts the weather has been unpropitious for the harvest, it is expected that the total value of our field crops will be greater than in any previous year.

"Papers will be laid before you which embody trade arrangements that have been consummated between the Dominion and certain of his Majesty's possessions in the West Indies. It is hoped that these arrangements will prove of great advantage, not only to those possessions, but to Canada as well. A bill will be introduced for the purpose of carrying this agreement into effect.

The Emergency Grant.

"During the past summer four members of my Government conferred in London with his Majesty's Government on the question of naval defence. Important discussions took place, and conditions have been disclosed which in the opinion of my advisers render it imperative that the effective naval forces of the Empire should be strengthened without delay. My advisers are convinced that it is the duty of Canada at this juncture to afford reasonable and necessary aid for that purpose. A bill will be introduced accordingly.

"A contract for the construction of the Hudson Bay Railway from Le Pas to Port Nelson has been awarded, and the work is being pushed forward with all possible speed.

"It is abundantly evident that the highways of Canada constitute an important part of an efficient scheme of transportation. The necessity for improving our existing facilities in this regard is manifest, and a bill will be introduced for the purpose of enabling the Dominion to co-operate with the Provinces in the accomplishment of this most desirable purpose.

Agricultural Co-operation.

"It is satisfactory to know that the proposal of my Government to co-operate with the Governments of the various Provinces in promoting the agricultural industry has met with hearty approval. The appropriations which were made last session in connection therewith have proved to be of marked benefit to the country.

"After careful study of the whole question my advisers are convinced that co-operation with the Provinces on well defined terms and conditions will achieve the best results along the lines of agricultural instruction. Any such policy to be effective must be continuous. Accordingly, a bill will be introduced by which a substantial amount of money will be set apart from the consolidated revenue fund for the purpose of assisting the Provinces for a term of years in this highly important national work.

Reduced Cable Rates.

"My Government has succeeded in securing certain reductions in cable rates, and will continue its efforts to obtain still further reductions.

"Under existing legislation the charters of the banks will expire on the 1st day of July next. A bill revising and extending these charters will be submitted for your consideration and approval.

"Several other bills will be submitted, including measures providing for increased representation of the Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba in the Senate.

Estimates at Early Date.

"Gentlemen of the House:

"The accounts for the last fiscal year will be laid before you. It will be satisfactory to you to learn that the revenue has been ample to cover both ordinary and capital expenditure.

"The estimates for the next fiscal year will be submitted at an early date. They have been prepared with due regard on the one hand for economy and on the other hand for the necessary development of the resources of the Dominion.

"Hon. Gentlemen of the Senate:

"Gentlemen of the House:

"I invite your earnest consideration of the subjects to which I have alluded, and I invoke the blessings of Divine Providence upon your deliberations."

Nothing is worse than a bad loser unless it be a poor winner.

they have earned, instead of compelling an unconditional capitulation.

A Naval Engagement.

Two more chapters of the war are reported—a naval engagement off Varna between the Turkish cruiser Hamedieh and Bulgarian torpedo boats, and the occupation of Florina by the Greeks. The Bulgarians report that they did great damage to and probably sank the cruiser. The Turks report that they sank two torpedo boats and that the cruiser was only slightly damaged.

By the occupation of Florina, which lies to the south of Monastir, the Greeks, according to the Athens report, have cut off the rear guard of the Turkish army to the number of 30,000, retreating from Monastir.

Turks Lost Heavily.

Bennett Burleigh wires to The London Daily Telegraph from Meustafka Pasha, under date of Friday morning:—The great bombardment of Adrianople proceeds furiously. It became intense about 2 o'clock this morning. The Turks, who used electric searchlights, replied hotly for a time with all their guns. There were attempted sallies, but these were repulsed with much slaughter. New positions and forts have been captured. In this fighting there was by far the heaviest fire of the siege.

Greeks Torpedo Gunboat.

A despatch from Athens says: A Greek torpedo boat entered the harbor of Aivala on Sunday and attacked a Turkish gunboat there. On the appearance of the Greeks the Turkish sailors abandoned the gunboat after opening the vessel's stop-cocks. Greek marines went on board, but were unable to stop the inrush of water. They then blew up the gunboat with a torpedo.

Peace Negotiations Resumed.

A despatch from Constantinople says: Negotiations for an armistice were begun on Sunday at a place near the town of Tchatalja between three Bulgarian and three Turkish delegates. The Turkish Commander-in-chief, Nazim Pasha, Gen. Hadi Pasha, and Rechid Pasha, Minister of Commerce, are the three Ottoman delegates. Nazim Pasha had a conversation on Saturday with General Savoff, the Bulgarian Commander-in-chief. If the conditions for an armistice recently proposed by the Bulgarians are modified negotiations for peace probably will begin immediately.

KILLED IN PICTURE SHOW.

Fifty Children Lose Their Lives in Spanish Circus.

A despatch from Bilbao, Spain, says: A terrible panic was caused on Sunday afternoon by the cry of "Fire!" at a moving-picture show here. About fifty children and others were killed. Only one woman up to a late hour at night had been found among the dead. The number of injured is not known, as most of them were taken to their homes by friends.

More Praise for Dr. Hamilton's Pills!

"For a period last summer the thought of food excited feelings of nausea," writes Mrs. C. A. Dodge, of Bloomsbury. "The heat had made me listless and the distaste for food reduced me to a condition of semi-starvation and brought me to the verge of nervous collapse. Tonics were useless to restore an active desire for food. The doctors told me my liver and kidneys were both at fault, but the medicines they gave me were too severe and reduced my strength so that I had to abandon them. At the suggestion of a friend who had been cured of blood and skin trouble, I began the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The difference I first noticed was, that while they cleansed the system, instead of feeling weaker I felt better after taking them. Indeed their activity was so mild it was easy to forget I had taken them at all; they seemed to go right to the liver, and in a very brief time not only did all source of nausea disappear, but I began to crave food and I digested it reasonably well. Then I began to put on weight until within three months I was brought to a condition of good health. I urge Dr. Hamilton's Pills for all who are in poor health."

Get this best of all medicines today and refuse a substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Sold by all druggists and storekeepers, 25c. per box or five for $1.00. Sent postpaid by The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

TORONTO CORRESPONDENCE

INTERESTING BITS OF GOSSIP FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

Reminiscences of a Politician—Toronto and Normal School Square—Harbor Commissioners' Plans.

The publication of a volume of reminiscences by the late Sir Richard Cartwright has caused something of a sensation in political circles. Sir Richard deals with the men and events of his time with great frankness and his book contains more than one surprise.

A particularly significant chapter is one in which he pays a tribute to the intelligence and ability of the Ontario farmer. In part he says: "No one thing has been made more clear to me during my political experience than the extreme ignorance of a vast number of otherwise intelligent and well-informed professional and business men of the political doings of the day. There is, curiously enough, in Ontario at least, a very great deal more interest taken, and a very great deal more accurate idea of the aims and proceedings of the several political parties, among the better class of farmers than among the so-called more highly educated classes. I am myself a city man, more or less of the public school and university type, but I have always represented agricultural constituencies, and from the very first I was immensely struck with the attention and intelligence with which many of my auditors would listen to and discuss political questions. They were very critical, and by no means given to enthuse on any subject, but they would listen for hours to an analysis of the public expenditure or an explanation of the reasons for adopting a particular line of policy, and, what is more, would consider and remember what you told them. Many a time, and sometimes after the lapse of twenty years, I have been reminded of statements made by myself in times past and called on for explanations if they thought there was any discrepancy between my then and former position.

Ontario of Scotch Origin.

"Of course the percentage of such men would vary in different ridings. But taking the farm populations of Ontario as a whole you would have found in most constituencies a considerable number of just such men as I have described—earnest, thoughtful, intelligent and well-read men, at least as far as the political history of Canada was concerned. They had their limitations, no doubt, but as a whole they stood for honest government. If they had a fault, it lay in their staunch devotions to their respective parties, which sometimes made them condone conduct which at the bottom of their hearts they really condemned. Once they had taken a side it was a matter of extreme difficulty to induce them to change it. In some respects they answered very nearly to the class of old English yeomen in the days when they owned the lands they cultivated. They were largely of Scotch origin, and as you know Ontario is to a great extent a Scotch colony. At any rate they were a class of whom any country might be proud, and the men from whom most of our leading public and professional men have sprung. They would study our blue books, and even such a formidable document as the Auditor-General's report, with a zest which very few of our members of Parliament ever bestow upon them."

Criticism of Blake.

Perhaps the most surprising thing about Sir Richard's book is his criticism of Edward Blake. He rarely mentions Blake except to censure him. He accuses him of disloyalty to Alexander Mackenzie and of repeatedly ruining the prospects of the Liberal party in the House of Commons and in the Province of Ontario by his bungling politics. His conduct in trying to publish his famous West Durham letter previous to the election of 1891 is described as "treacherous" to Laurier and Cartwright, the Dominion and Ontario leaders respectively in the House of Commons. His resignation of the Liberal leadership in 1887, one is led to infer, was the act of a quitter, when victory was within sight.

One of the most serious charges against Blake is that he deliberately and needlessly estranged the Orange Order from the Liberal party, particularly by his attitude on Riel and by his direct attack on the Order in Parliament. This, Sir Richard affirms, will take generations to counteract.

Of Sir John A. Macdonald he speaks vehemently, but with some mellowness. Repeatedly he declares that Sir John's Pacific deal and his subsequent re-endorsation by the country did more to degrade the public life of Canada than will be overcome for generations.

Of Laurier.

Of Laurier he speaks cordially, but without any apparent enthusiasm. No doubt he will have more to say on this subject in a second volume, which the publishers promise later, the present one stopping short at the year 1896. Alexander Mackenzie is praised for his personal qualities, and his weaknesses as a politician pointed out. McGreevy is described as an honest man, but a scapegoat. Of course, Sir Richard, during a long life, came in contact with all the prominent men of an interesting era, and he gives his estimate of most of them.

His views on public questions were made known pretty thoroughly during his lifetime, but he leaves a succinct account of them for future generations. The depopulation of Ontario and the issue of protection receive the fullest consideration.

There is little doubt but that the book will have influence on future generations. Sir Richard had undoubted ability, and a turn of the wheel of fortune might at more than one stage in his career have made him Premier of Canada. Doubtless he would have made a judicious Prime Minister, but in that case he would have scarcely left us his delightful reminiscences.

No Gift for Toronto.

Sir James Whitney has replied in characteristic fashion to the request of the city of Toronto that the Normal School grounds should be turned over to the city as a civic park. The Square is worth probably a million dollars now, though it was originally purchased by the Government for a few thousand. The argument that the increase should be handed over to the city because it was the city's growth that gave it the increased value is knocked into a cocked hat by the Premier, who points out that "the Province as a whole has been unquestionably the chief factor in the increased values of property and of the great increase of wealth in the city."

The Premier dictated his reply, but it was not delivered until he was on the middle of the Atlantic on his way to England, where he and Dr. Pyne are spending a flying visit preparatory to the session. The Minister of Education is one of Sir James' strongest personal friends, dating from long before Sir James was called to the Premiership. They are both fond of an ocean trip and will no doubt manage to get some enjoyment out of it even during the chill days of December.

Toronto's Harbor Plans.

No proposed civic improvement has ever created more, perhaps not as much, enthusiasm as has the plans of the recently appointed Harbor Commission. They call for a total expenditure of $19,000,000, of which $6,000,000 is to be contributed by the Dominion Government, and most of the rest will be raised by the Commission itself by the sale of bonds on which the interest will be paid by revenues from docks and rentals.

Doubting Thomases smile when members of the Commission declare that the whole expenditure will be made and the scheme carried out within ten years. But the Commission insists that it means it. The Dominion Government work, consisting chiefly of dredging, will begin at once, and plans for the Commissions' own expenditure are well under way.

The chief effects of the improvement plan will be to make Toronto practically an ocean port, to turn the vast area of Ashbridge Bay, now chiefly waste, into exceptionally desirable industrial sites, and to beautify the city by a ten-mile waterfront boulevard and driveway extending from the Humber to the Don.

The results of these changes is hard to foretell without some imagination. The Ashbridge's district can easily support an industrial population of 100,000, and the establishment of real shipping facilities will give Toronto a stronger grip than ever on the distributing business of Canada. It may be that after all, Toronto's dream of a million people may not be so far in the distant future.

SIR EDWARD CLOUSTON DEAD

Famous Montreal Financier Passes Away in a Few Hours.

A despatch from Montreal says: Death came with startling suddenness Saturday afternoon to Sir Edward Seaborn Clouston, Bart., formerly General Manager of the Bank of Montreal. The well-known financier appeared to be in his usual health Saturday morning, and drove down-town to his office at 10 o'clock, later going to the office of the Royal Securities Corporation. While there he was stricken with an attack of heart failure and lost consciousness. He was hurried in an ambulance to the Royal Victoria Hospital, where he passed away at three in the afternoon, in spite of all that medical science could do. Death was due to heart trouble, from which he had been a sufferer for a number of years.

THE ROYAL GEORGE FLOATED.

Steamer Lord Strathcona Pulls Her Into Deep Water.

A despatch from Quebec says: When Pilot Roux of the Royal George sent a wireless message ashore some days ago that the steamer would be floated off on the 24th inst., he evidently left a margin of twelve hours in case of accident, as the tide was high at 5.42 a.m. on Sunday, while, as a matter of fact, she was floated off at 4 o'clock, or an hour before high water, on Sautrday afternoon. The steamer Lord Strathcona, having a hawser attached to the Royal George, commenced to pull her into deep water, which she reached without any grating sound. The Royal George, at 6 p.m. left for Quebec under her own steam, making eight knots an hour.

The Bank of Montreal has raised the salaries of 1,000 employees, the increases averaging $100.

John Connell, St. Thomas, and Charles Ryckman, London, were killed in a radial railway collision near London, on Saturday.

BALKAN TERMS REJECTED

Kiamil Pasha, Turkey's Grand Vizier, Declared That the Allies Overtures were Im possible

Turks Resume Fight.

A despatch from Constantinople says: The battle at the Tchatalja lines has been resumed. Cannonading was reopened with great violence on Thursday evening, and is plainly audible here.

A despatch from London says: The formal suspension of the Eastern war proved only for a day. Turkey rejected the Balkan terms for an armistice apparently before the plenipotentiaries had time to come together at Hademkeui.

Kiamil Pasha, the Grand Vizier, declared that the allies' overtures were impossible. He ordered the Commander-in-Chief to continue fighting.

Decision of the Porte.

A despatch from Constantinople says: The official announcement of the Porte's decision with regard to the armistice is as follows:—

"The Bulgarian Premier has addressed to the Ottoman Government a document containing conditions for an armistice which were communicated on Thursday to the Council of Ministers and were considered to be unacceptable.

"Consequently, and likewise in view of the fact that the Commander-in-Chief has been entrusted in principle with the task of negotiating conditions with the plenipotentiaries of the belligerent States—if these plenipotentiaries are invested with the necessary powers—and has also been directed to communicate the result of such negotiations to us, the Commander-in-Chief has been instructed to continue military operations, with the help of the Almighty, until reasonable and moderate conditions are proposed to us."

The continued successful defence of Tchatalja lines would undoubtedly strengthen Turkey's diplomatic position, but defeat, after prolonged fighting of her own choosing, would inflame the Bulgarians' desire to make a triumphal progress into Constantinople.

Popular clamor in Sofia is demanding more strongly each day that the advance shall stop only at the Bosphorus.

European military officials consider the allies' terms harsh in one respect, that is, they should concede to the garrisons of Adrianople and Scutari the right of marching out with the honors of war, which

DISEASE IS DUE TO BAD BLOOD.

To Cure Common Ailments the Blood Must Be Made Rich and Red.

Nearly all the diseases that afflict humanity are caused by bad blood—weak, watery blood poisoned by impurities. Bad blood is the cause of headaches and backaches, lumbago and rheumatism; debility and indigestion, neuralgia and other nerve troubles, and disfiguring skin diseases like eczema and salt rheum show how impure the blood actually is. No use trying a different remedy for each disease, because they all spring from the one cause—bad blood. To cure any of these troubles you must get right down to the root of the trouble in the blood, and that is just what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do. They make new, rich blood and thus cure these diseases when common medicine fails. Mrs. John Jackson, Woodstock, Ont., suffered from both nervous troubles and a run-down condition and experienced a complete cure through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says: "I was a sufferer for a number of years from neuralgia, and a genaral debility of the nerves and system. I had tried several doctors and many medicines, but to no avail, until I began Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. At the time I began the Pills I had grown so bad that I could hardly be on my feet and was forced to wear elastic bandages about the ankles. The pain I suffered at times from the neuralgia was terrible. I had almost given up hope when I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In the course of a few weeks I felt an improvement, and I gladly confined the use of the Pills until I was once more quite well and able to attend to all my household duties."

If you are ailing begin to cure yourself to-day with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FOR TOURIST AND HUNTER.

The Great Athabaska Region Offers New Delights.

The rapid linking together of the Grand Trunk Pacific to form a new transcontinental highway across central Canada opens another hinterland for the tourist. It makes easy of access a vast new section of the Rockies in central Alberta and the sunset province, and of all this area it is doubtful if there is a more interesting and inviting region than that embraced by the upper watershed of the Athabaska River and its several southern tributaries. The natural starting point for tourists intending to visit any of this country is Fitzhugh, a picturesquely situated frontier town in Jasper Park, some two hundred and fifty miles west of Edmonton.

How little of this region has been actually trodden by white men is evidenced by the fact that only four short summers ago the largest sheet of water on the entire east slope of the Rockies was found in its recesses. This beautiful mountain lake, some seventeen miles in length and lying between green wooded slopes, forms a broad expansion of the Maligne River, and resembles a Scotch tarn in its far melting vistas of water and crag. This lake is some thirty miles southeast of Fitzhugh, and twenty miles further south is another large lake, where the trout fishing is excellent. The latter body of water forms the chief source of the Brazeau River. To the west of it, in Alpine grandeur, lies the region of wild, lofty peaks, dominated by Mount Alberta, where enormous glaciers give birth to the Athabaska and North Saskatchewan Rivers.

This region is also a noted game country. It lies far enough north to have escaped in part, during recent years, the far searching reach of the Stoney Indian; bears of all kinds are still fairly numerous; the sheep (and more especially the goat) hunting is good, while scattered moose, deer, and even elk may be occasionally seen.

Meantime the crying need of the district, for tourist and fire-ranger alike, is the need for more and better trails. Hence, to provide a good and adequate system of trails will be the first and constant effort of the Dominion Forestry Branch in carrying out its recently assumed duty of administering this region, so as to protect its forests from fire and make every auxiliary resource contribute its part to the public welfare. During the present season, the rangers in charge made a good start on this work, and next year it will be again pushed with vigor. Already, between Laggan or Morley on the C.P.R., and Fitzhugh, an old through trail is in existence: a trail which promises to be a very popular Alpine tourist route when improved. It traverses the Brazeau, Clearwater and Bow River forests and everywhere its improvement will be promptly undertaken by the Forestry Branch.

The scenery in this upper Athabaska country is varied and beautiful in its color effects, and especially so in early autumn. From the deep green carpet of pine and spruce on the valley floor, the eye passes to intermingled belts of blushing gold, poplar and light green lodgepole, fringed above to timber line by sombre masses of Alpine fir. Higher still, the warm reds and ochres of disintegrating ferruginous rocks form a Joseph's coat of many colors, while over all loom the background of summits wrapped in their eternal snows!

A FRIEND'S ADVICE.

Something Worth Listening To.

A young man was advised by a friend to eat Grape-Nuts because he was all run down from a spell of fever. He tells the story:

"Last spring I had an attack of fever that left me in a very weak condition. I had to quit work; had no appetite, was nervous and discouraged.

"A friend advised me to eat Grape-Nuts, but I paid no attention to him and kept getting worse as time went by.

"I took many kinds of medicine but none of them seemed to help me. My system was completely run down, my blood got out of order from want of proper food, and several very large boils broke out on my neck. I was so weak I could hardly walk.

"One day mother ordered some Grape-Nuts and induced me to eat some. I felt better, and that night rested fine. As I continued to use the food every day, I grew stronger steadily, and now have regained my former good health. I would not be without Grape-Nuts, as I believe it is the most health-giving food in the world." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Read the book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

CHEATING THE GALLOWS.

Ingenious Contrivance Which Prevented Death.

A very ingenious attempt to cheat the gallows was made by a man named Richard Johnson, who was hanged at Shrewsbury in 1696, says the London Chronicle. He hung half an hour, and his body was about to be handed over to his relatives, when the hangman thought he detected some signs of life. On examination it was found that Johnson had wreathed cords round and under his body connected with a pair of hooks at his neck by which the usual effect was prevented, the apparatus being cleverly concealed under a frilled shirt and a flowing periwig. He was taken down and then promptly rehanged with success.

Perhaps the most startling story about resuscitation after hanging is told of the famous anatomist, William Hunter, under whose hands the body of a man who had just been hanged revived while being dissected. This was not all, however, for the fellow insisted on considering Hunter what lawyers term "in loco parentis," as being the author of his renewed existence. In this filial character he repeatedly applied for, and finally demanded, financial assistance. But, to Hunter's great relief, he one morning received a "recent subject from Newgate . . . the same criminal executed a second time for some fresh offence. The experiment of resuscitation was not again attempted."

5 Years' Rheumatism Really Cured!

Your Case Isn't Likely to Be Worse, and Can Be Cured Quickly by Nerviline.

Here Is The Proof.

"After being an enthusiastic user of Nerviline for years, I feel it my duty to tell you personally what your wonderful preparation has done for me.

"I suffered torture from rheumatism and heart trouble, tried scores of so-called remedies, consulted for weeks and months with Toronto's most eminent physicians, but derived only slight benefit.

"A friend insisted on my using Nerviline, and to my surprise a vigorous rubbing of this powerful liniment eased the pains and reduced the stiffness in my joints. I continued to use Nerviline and was permanently cured. I am now perfectly well, and for three years have had no rheumatism at all. I know many families where no other medicine but Nerviline is kept—it is so useful in minor ailments like earache, toothache, neuralgia, coughs, colds, lumbago, and sciatica. I call Nerviline my 'Life Guard,' and urge all to try its merit."

Dec. 17th, 113 Palmerston Avenue, Toronto.

(Signed) FLORA CHAPMAN.

It is almost criminal to keep on suffering when Nerviline can be had in any drug store. 50c. buys a large bottle, 25c. for the trial size. Prepared by The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

THE UNKINDEST CUT.

"What are the boys saying?" asked Sir Glenholm.

"They are calling out, Controllers, Controllers!" explained the gentleman next to him.

"Ah! that is one of the cruelest things I ever had said to me," replied Sir Glenholm sadly.

LETTERS FROM MOTHERS.

Every day we have letters from thankful mothers telling us what Baby's Own Tablets have done for their little ones. Some praise them for constipation, others for teething troubles, and still others for vomiting, indigestion and the many other ills of babyhood and childhood. We have received thousands of letters—all giving praise. Mrs. W. G. Crowe, Midland, Ont., says: "I think very highly of Baby's Own Tablets. I gave them to my baby when troubled with constipation and they helped her so much I always keep them in the house and now use no other medicine." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Growing of Cinnamon.

The aromatic spice, called cinnamon, is the inner bark of a beautiful tree, attaining the size and similar in appearance to our pear-tree. The small, smooth and shiny branches, or young shoots, are alone available. To produce the commercial bark the trees are allowed to grow for from five to seven years, when they are felled and the stumps allowed to produce new shoots, called "coppice." The same methods, says the Scientific American, are followed in the East Indies to grow straight and smooth shoots of cinnamon as the basket-willow grower adopts in this country. It is kept coppiced in order to induce the formation of long, willowy shoots.

A Remarkable Canal.

Between Worsley and St. Helms, in the north of England, is a remarkable canal. It is underground, from end to end, and is 16 miles long. In Lancashire the coal mines are very extensive, half the country being undermined, and many years ago the Duke of Bridgewater's managers thought they could save money by transporting the coal underground instead of on the surface. The canal was constructed and the mines connected and drained at the same time. Ordinary canal boats are used, but the power is furnished by men. On the roof of the tunnel arch are crosspieces, and the men do the work of propulsion by lying on their backs on the coal and pushing with their feet against the cross-

Beyond Her.

As a slight diversion the teacher suggested that each child in the class draw a picture from which she could guess what the child wanted to be when grown. All sorts of articles were illustrated: books for bookkeepers, hats for milliners, etc. One little girl, however, had a blank sheet.

"Why, Doris, don't you want to be anything when you are grown?"

"Yessum," said Doris, "I want to be married, but I don't know how to draw it."

BEWARE OF BLOOD-POISON

Zam-Buk is a Sure Cure.

Mr. Jas. Davey, of 786 Ellice Avenue, Winnipeg, says:—"A few months since I was cured of a poisoned finger through the timely use of Zam-Buk.

"I cut a deep gash across the knuckle on the first finger of my right hand in opening a lobster can. I suffered at the time with the soreness and pain, but had no idea it would become a serious wound. However, in about two days my whole hand and arm to the elbow became inflamed, and the finger was much discolored, showing signs of blood-poisoning.

I then decided to start the Zam-Buk treatment, and having first bathed the cut, I applied the healing balm. It soothed the pain almost instantly.

"In a week's time, through perseverance with Zam-Buk, a complete cure was brought about."

Zam-Buk is just as good for eczema, ulcers, scalp sores, abscesses, piles, ringworm, boils, varicose ulcers, running sores, cold sores, chapped hands, etc. Use it, too, for cuts, burns, bruises and all skin injuries. Zam-Buk Soap should be used in conjunction to the balm for washing wounds and sore places. Excellent, too, for baby's bath.

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box and Zam-Buk Soap at 25c. tablet. Post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

Hydro Electric Discussed

Mr. Castor, Hydro Electric Engineer, was here on Thursday last and examined the present electric plant, the waterworks engine, and interviewed users of power.

In the evening he met quite a large number of the citizens in the Town Hall and discussed the probabilities of Hydro coming to Exeter and the surrounding country.

A mass of figures were quoted, wats kilowats, horsepower, etc., were discussed until the ordinary layman's head reeled in trying to grasp the meaning of it all.

But from the whole we are able to deduce the following ideas which we think give the meaning,—

The Hydro Electric Commission is prepared to extend the lines from Seaforth to Clinton and Goderich, and run a branch line south to Exeter and other points where a sufficient amount of power could be used to warrant the expenditure of building the lines.

The Commission would require the district touched to use 1500 horsepower. Goderich, we believe, proposed to take 700, Clinton 400, and Exeter district would need to take another 400.

The contracts the municipalities would be required to sign would provide that they must take at least three-quarters of the power contracted for at the contract price, which price would be according to the amount contracted for.

Provided Exeter contracted for 200 horsepower we would be required to take at least 150, although the three-quarters provision the engineer frankly stated had never been enforced in places where the three quarters had not been used. The price in Exeter, under the above conditions would be in the neighborhood of $42 per horsepower.

The point is,—Can Exeter secure sales for 150 or 200 horsepower at the price quoted?

With regard to the taking over of the Electric Light plant Mr. Castor stated that the present plant, while seeming to work satisfactorily for present purposes, would be of no use to the Hydro Electric Commission, as the wiring would have to be replaced, the steam engine and boiler would have to be discarded, and other arrangements would have to be made for the sub-station.

The engineer also stated that he thought at the present rate of cost it would be advisable to leave the present gasoline engine and pump in the waterworks power house, as it would be as cheap as to instal Hydro.

It was difficult just on the spot to secure figures as to the cost of the present power to the present power users, so that it was impossible to make a comparison, and without a proper comparison discussion is not of much practical value.

We believe that steps are now being taken to secure this information, and we trust that conditions will be found such that the Hydro power may be secured, as it is undoubtedly the proper system.

Since the above was written a representative of The Advocate in conversation with Mr. Castor has secured information which goes to show that there are three services supplied by the Commission for large consumers of power, and three for small consumers, as follows,—

Class A.—Continuous service, that is, 24 hours a day for 365 days a year.

Class B.—Unrestricted 10 hour service that is, any ten hours of the day (day or night). With a 10 per cent. discount, which is given in consideration of the shorter service.

Class C.—Restricted 10 hour service, that is, any 10 hours of the day, except when the service is carrying its highest load (peak load), which means closing down from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. With a 30 per cent. discount.

On all three classes there is also a discount of 10 per cent. for prompt cash payment.

For Example. If Class A is at $50 per horsepower per year, then Class B would be $50 less 10 per cent., and Class C $50 less 30 per cent. And on each would be allowed another 10 per cent for prompt payment.

Consider a case for small consumers, say of 15 horsepower The service charge per month up to 10 horsepower is $1.85 per horsepower, or $18.50; and $1.00 per horsepower per month on all over 10 horsepower, or $5.00,—Together $18.50. That is the cost of the flat service to a consumer putting in a 15 horsepower motor, whether using it or not.

To estimate the amount of power he would have also to pay for it is necessary to know that 1 horsepower equals ¾ of a kilowat, and 15 horsepower equals 12 kilowats. In one month there are approximately 600 hours. Power costs 8½ cents per hour per kilowat for the first fifty hours, 2½ cents for the next 50 hours, and ½ cent for the remaining 500 hours. Then the 12 kilowats (15 horsepower) for the first 50 hours would cost 3½c.x12x50, equals $21.00; for the next 50 hours 2½c.x12x 50, equals $15.00; for the remaining 500 hours ½c.x12x500, equals $30.00. Then the cost of running a 15 horsepower engine for a month continuously would be $18.50 added to the above three amounts, or $84.50, which of course is subject to a 10 per cent. discount for prompt payment.

Worked out on the Class B basis the cost would be $56.25, and on the Class C basis $43.75 per month.

If these figures are correct, and as far as we could ascertain, they are, then basing the cost on the $50 a horsepower rate, Hydro for Exeter does not look feasible.

AT THE SAME TIME WE BELIEVE THAT HYDRO IS A BETTER PROPOSITION THAN THE ABOVE WOULD INDICATE.

CURE FOR WHITE PLAGUE

Berlin Physician Has Finally Given to the World a Destroyer of Tuberculosis

A despatch from Berlin says: Dr. Freiderich Franz Friedmân, a Berlin physician, after a decade of experimenting, has finally solved the problem where Dr. Koch failed, and has given to the world a destroyer of the white scourge which such men as Professor Schleich, of the Virchow Hospital, declare will mark one of the greatest epochs in the history of medicine.

A newspaper correspondent visited and interrogated numerous patients who had been treated for tuberculosis, including pulmonary throat trouble and glandular and knee bone tuberculosis. These patients all asserted that they had been cured after one to three injections of the serum. Several of these cases of bone tuberculosis were of long standing, which showed scars where once there had been running sores, which healed up in a few weeks. In two of these cases amputation had failed to cure.

In the course of the investigation the correspondent visited a poor working family, whose child had not walked in four months, owing to tuberculosis of the knee, and also of the lungs. The child received an injection of the serum seven weeks ago, and is now able to run and dance. Another case was that of a young man whom amputation of a limb had failed to cure. The doctors declared that amputation of the leg at the hip was necessary, but the young man was cured in less than three months by the use of the serum, according to statements made by himself and his mother.

The correspondent also talked with the father of two children, both of whom had been suffering from bone tuberculosis. One was cured by Dr. Friedman in six weeks. The other has been under treatment by one of Berlin's most famous specialists for seven months. The specialist has now asked Dr. Friedman to take the case.

Numerous physicians and tuberculosis specialists are on the way to Berlin from Australia, the United States, South America, and other countries to study and investigate the new discovery. Australia is said to be sending a Government commissioner. English physicians are already here.

Dr. Friedman is so deluged with letters and pathetic pleas for treatment and by telegraphic and cable requests from physicians for the serum, and offers to buy the rights, that for the moment his work has almost stopped. Dr. Friedman will not distribute the serum until he is properly protected in the principal countries, but will personally treat cases here. He will open an institute in Berlin next week. Up to the present he has treated about 1,100 cases.

LUNACY DUE TO DRINK.

French Statistics Have Just Been Made Public.

A despatch from Paris says: Some idea of the appalling ravages made by the drink scourge in present-day France may be formed by the terrible series of statistics showing the relation between alcohol and madness which specialists attached to the principal Paris lunatic asylums have just made public. These figures reveal that since 1868, when exact records were started, the proportion of male lunatics whose loss of reason is caused by drink has increased from 14 per cent. to 47 per cent.; while on the female side the percentage has risen from less than 2 to 20. "Most of these unfortunates," say the authors of the report, "are psychopaths descended from other alcoholics."

ONLY CHILDREN DROWNED.

The Sad Bereavement of an Ottawa Family.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Harold, aged five years, and Albert, aged three, the two only children of Lewis J. Turner, a Grand Trunk Railway engineer, residing at 59 Waverley street, broke through the ice and were drowned in the Rideau Canal Saturday afternoon. They had been allowed out to play by their mother, who was engaged with her housework, and wandered down to the canal, a short distance away from home. Their absence was not noticed until an hour later, when search was immedfiately made, the finding of a hole in the thin ice near the bank of the canal confirming the mother's worst fears.

CARNEGIE TO DIE POOR.

Will Turn Over all His Wealth but a Beggarly $25,000,000.

A despatch from New York says: Andrew Carnegie announces that all but $25,000,000 of his fortune, which will be disposed of under his will, will be left to the Carnegie Corporation of New York, which will carry on his educational and charitable work.

COUNT ALVARO DE ROMANONES.

Count Alvaro de Romanones, the President of the Spanish Chamber of Deputies, has been selected by King Alfonso to form a new Spanish Cabinet in consequence of the assassination of Premier Canalejas.

It was announced that Count de Romanones had decided to retain all the Ministers belonging to the Cabinet of the late Premier Canalejas.

ASSAULT ON JAIL MATRON.

A Colored Woman Prisoner Beats Her Insensible.

A despatch from Owen Sound says: Mrs. Percy Ringo a colored prisoner made a murderous attack upon the county jail matron Miss Jennie McNeil, on Wednesday, and the matron lies in a precarious condition as a result of the beating she received. Her assailant, Mrs. Ringo, will be sent to an asylum, as she has latterly developed maniac tendencies, which culminated in the brutal assault on Miss McNeil. Mrs. Ringo, who had been acting queerly, had, among other hallucinations, the idea that Miss McNeil was trying to poison her, and her insane attack may be attributed partly to this belief. The matron was rescued by County Jailer John Miller after she had been thrown down and beaten, kicked and choked into insensibility.

OUR CRIMINAL FIGURES

Population of the Canadian Penitentiaries Increased Slightly During the Year

A despatch from Ottawa says: Statistics respecting Canada's criminal population are set forth in the annual report of the penitentiaries tabled in the House by the Minister of Justice, Hon. C. J. Doherty, on Wednesday. The average daily population was shown to have been 1,853 last year, as compared with 1,834 in the year previous.

The actual population at the end of the financial year was 1,895, divided as follows:—Kingston, 494; St. Vincent de Paul, 442; Dorchester, 229; Manitoba, 183; British Columbia, 331; Alberta, 167; Saskatchewan, 58.

The parol system works admirably according to W. P. Archibald, Dominion Parole Officer. Since the Act was passed 3,780 sentences have been completed on parole. Of this number only 237 may be characterized as delinquents. The percentage of failures is 5.17. Last year 848 prisoners were thus released.

To the penitentiary population of the year, Montreal contributed the most and Ottawa the fewest. The figures from the principal centres are:—Montreal, 293; Vancouver, 174; Winnipeg, 114; Toronto, 96; Quebec, 51; Victoria, 42; Edmonton, 39; Hamilton, 35; Sydney, 34; Halifax, 33; Calgary, 31; New Westminster, 27; Regina, 21; Ottawa, 19.

By creeds the penitentiary population comprises 934 Catholics, 925 Protestants, 36 Hebrews and 39 Buddhists. The total cost of maintenance was $565,472, or 84 cents per head per day.

MAN FOUND DEAD.

Gas Heater in His Room in Toronto was Turned on Full.

A despatch from Toronto says: Andrew Latta of Belleville, aged sixty-seven years, was found asphyxiated in his bedroom at 83 Ann street on Friday morning. He had arrived in the city the night before from Manitoba and intended visiting relatives in the city for a few days before returning to Belleville.

Valuable Horse Saved By "Nerviline"

Was Too Sore and Lame to Work Quickly Cured by Nerviline.

"I have had a long experience in treating horses, and I can safely say that I know of no liniment for strains, sprains, and swelling that is so useful around the stable as Nerviline." Thus writes Mr. J. E. Murchison, from his home, Crofts Hill P.O. "I had a fine young mare that wrenched her right foreleg, and from the shoulder down she was stiff, sore, and swollen. I applied Nerviline, and it worked like a charm; in fact, that mare was in shape to work a day after I used Nerviline.

"We have used Nerviline on our farm for twenty-five years, and never found it wanting. For man or beast it is a wonderful liniment."

Five thousand letters recommend Nerviline as a general household liniment, as an all-round cure for aches and pains. Try it yourself.

TORONTO CORRESPONDENCE

INTERESTING BITS OF GOSSIP FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

Principal Hagarty and the University—Attorney-General Foy—Big New Hotels—Michael Fraser Case—The New Archbishop.

Principal Hagarty's fighting Irish blood has got him into hot water with the Toronto University students. The trouble arose the other night when Harbord Collegiate Institute, of which Mr. Hagarty is head, was giving a dance. Two or three old boys came to the function without invitation, whereupon the Principal asked them to leave. In resentment, the boys got about two hundred Varsity students, who had been attending a theatre, to come up to the Collegiate, break in the doors and generally "rough house" the dance. After about ten minutes' uproariousness they departed.

Principal Hagarty wrote a hot letter to the newspapers, in which he said, among other things, that the students acted as if they were drunk. 'Varsity," the College paper, hotly denied the Principal's allegations. The Principal retorted with a threat of a libel action. "Varsity" came back with more denials. The verbal melee meanwhile was enlivened with a threat from Dr. Orr, one of the University Governors, to have Principal Hagarty dismissed, and by letters from parents and citizens telling the Principal to stand by his guns.

The drunkenness allegation is the thing the students resent most. But Mr. Hagarty replies that he didn't say they were drunk, but merely that they acted as if they were, and that, if they weren't, their conduct was all the more reprehensible.

A Perennial Controversy.

The incident has served to bring to notice the perennial outbreaks of the students and the controversy they always arouse. It may be said that ninety per cent. of public opinion is solidly against the boys and their pranks. Nobody objects much to a parade occasionally and a little noise or singing, but the worthy citizens will not stand jostling on the sidewalks or pulling trolley poles off, or the destruction or invasion of private property. City nerves have their limitations. And so the police are urged more and more strongly "to do their duty," and year by year the student outbreaks are getting less and less objectionable.

Principal Hagarty is impulsive and did not handle his case against the boys as a more moderate man might have done, but he is not in much danger of losing his job, nor are the boys in much danger of going to jail for libel. Mr. Hagarty is one of the prominent educationists of Ontario. In his younger days he was in the staff as classical master of Aylmer and of Seaforth High Schools, and later was headmaster of Mount Forest High School. He has been at Harbord Street Collegiate for twenty-one years, during which period the institution has taken a place in the front rank. Some of his books are used as Latin text books throughout the Province. Mr. Hagarty is an ardent Imperialist, and is greatly interested in the cadet movement, his son being a crack shot. He is active in the propaganda for a great extension of military training throughout the country.

The Acting Premier.

There have been repeated rumors that Attorney-General Foy, who is Acting Premier in Sir James Witney's absence, was about to retire from politics, and many people wonder why he has not done so. The answer probably is because he doesn't want to, and because Sir James Whitney doesn't want him to.

Mr. Foy is not the type of man one usually thinks of as in the hurly-burly of politics. He is in manner and appearance and manner of speech much more the lawyer than he is the politician. He is also a man of considerable wealth, probably a millionaire. For many years he has had an exceedingly lucrative practice and is connected with many financial institutions. While he does not give the impression that he is very enthusiastic about politics, there is no doubt he enjoys the game and that he gives freely of his undoubted legal abilities to the administration of his department. Critics he has, who charge him with indolence, but to these he rarely pays any attention.

Mr. Foy's position as first lieutenant to Sir James dates back to the cold days of opposition. In former times Oliver Mowat had secured a pretty solid support from the Irish population of Ontario. When into this Mr. Foy began to make inroads there came one day an offer of a Judgeship, but he was loyal to his chief, and to him he has remained loyal ever since. He is by no means a bitter partisan, and has many warm friends on the opposite party, one of whom is the present Lieutenant Governor, Sir John Gibson. Should he decide to retire any day, however, the announcement would not occasion great surprise. Hon. W. J. Hanna is regarded as his logical successor, but, of course, nothing is ever certain in politics.

New Hotels Promised.

Every few days a rumor is published about a new big hotel going up in Toronto. One day it is the C. P. R. that is going to add to its chain of hotels in Quebec, Montreal, Winnipeg, Banff and elsewhere, by a fitting palace in the Queen City. Next it is the C. N. R., with occasionally the G. T. R. as a variation. Then it is the O'Neil's, proprietors of the St. Charles, a moderate sized restaurant on Yonge street, whose property has been purchased by the Dominion Bank and who will have to move somewhere to save their license, who are going to head a big hotel syndicate. And the latest announcement is to the effect that E. G. McConkey, of the King street restaurant of that name, is to put up a $3,000,000 hostelry not far from his present site. And every time any of these plans seem to be approaching fruition the King Edward comes along with a statement that it is going to double its capacity.

Meanwhile, the city is suffering from lack of accommodation. It is not likely that any of the railways will ever build a hotel in Toronto. Generally they build only where private enterprise has not provided high-class tourist traffic with high-class accommodation, as in Ottawa or the Muskoka district. None of the others can put up the cash necessary without assistance. And the financing is rendered difficult, they say, by the uncertainty as to the license situation. But it looks as though now some one was getting ready to move. The latest announcements are quite definite as to both McConkey and the King Edward, and the O'Neil's case seems to require action on their part as well.

A lot of people in Toronto would like to know whether Mr. Rowell's "Abolish the Bar" policy is making progress in the Province. But it is not merely the Provincial issue the hotel keepers are keeping their weather eye on. One of these days there will be a local option campaign in Toronto itself, and when it comes the result will be worth watching.

A chapter in the Reminiscences of Sir Richard Cartwright denouncing the Scott Act and similar temperance legislation has been occasioning some comment.

The Case of Michael Fraser.

In a conversation I had the other day with a man who, in an official capacity, comes in contact with a large number of Canada's newly arrived citizens, he told me that the American settlers told him that they could not see much difference in the laws here and in the United States, but there was a mighty big difference in the way they are administered.

It is a question whether Canada's enviable reputation in this respect will stand many Michael Fraser cases. Michael Fraser was the eccentric old bachelor near Midland who when nearly eighty years old married a young woman, daughter of Rev. Mr. Robertson, of Dundas. Miss McCormick, a niece of Fraser's, brought action to annul the marriage on the around that her uncle was of unsound mind.

An estate of $80,000 was at stake. The case in one phase or another has been dragging along for almost three years, and yet when old Michael Fraser died the other day the case was as far from settlement as ever. This is not quite true either, for, as a matter of fact, the case was $20,000 nearer ending than when it began, $20,000 being the amount estimated as the costs which have already piled up in the fight for an $80,000 estate.

The case is, of course, one with plenty of contentious elements on both sides, but it would have added to the respect in which the administration of justice is held if some way had been found to have settled it one way or the other speedily and cheaply.

The New Archbishop.

The arrival of the new Roman Catholic Archbishop of Toronto within the next week or two is anticipated with interest. The appointment of Archbishop McNeil of Vancouver to the vacant Toronto See created some surprise, because of the fact that he has not had direct relations with the activities of the Church in this Province. But for all that he has made a name for himself as one of the stalwarts of the Church and his work in Vancouver during the past two years has brought his name prominently before the Roman Catholics and others of the entire continent. On his removal to Vancouver he was at once imbued with the tremendous possibilities for growth on the Pacific coast. Vancouver he described as the potential New York of the West. And he matured and secured the adoption of plans for the extension of the Roman Catholic Church there, which promise important developments. Among other things he advocated and has carried into effect a plan by which in many districts the Roman Catholics will be to a certain extent segregated.

Archbishop McNeil is a Nova Scotian by birth, being now 61 years old. He was educated in Rome and served as a priest and missionary in the Eastern Provinces and in Newfoundland. For some years he acted as editor of a newspaper in Nova Scotia. Curiously he combines an expert knowledge of mathematics and astronomy, of which he is extremely fond, with an unusual linguistic equipment, speaking as he does, English, French, Italian and Gaelic, which he inherits from his Orkney paternal ancestors. To these and his Irish forbears on his mother's side he owes a fine physique.

Archbishop McNeil is described as a dreamer of dreams, but also a man of action. Typically a man of the Church, he is quiet, humble and retired. The diocese of Toronto is rapidly growing in importance and influence in the affairs of the Church on this Continent and the appointment to it of a man like Archbishop McNeil is not without significance.

MINER BECOMES INSANE.

He Suddenly Attacks Two Fellow-Workmen.

A despatch from South Porcupine says: A French-Canadian suddenly went crazy in the Dome bunk-house on Wednesday afternoon and attacked two Austrian miners with a knife and an iron bar. They were lying quietly in their bunks when he drew a knife and slashed one man in the face and struck another savagely with an iron bar. Both men are severely hurt, but not seriously injured. The Frenchman was arrested by the Provincial Police, and will be medically examined. All three men had come to work but a few days ago at the Dome, and are unknown, except by number.

WORLD'S BUSINESS BOOMED.

Grand Total for Present Year Will Reach $35,000,000,000.

A despatch from Washington says: In the present year the world's international business will reach the enormous total of $35,000,000,000, according to a report issued on Friday by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. The estimate is made on official returns of exports and imports from virtually every commercial country in the world. Nearly every nation reported a greater exchange of commodities than ever before had been known.

SERVIANS OCCUPY DURAZZO

Autrian Government Preparing for Any Development in the Balkan Crisis

A despatch from London says: The Servians, ignoring the proclamation of Albanian independence, have occupied the port of Durazzo without resistance. This information comes in a direct despatch from that town on Thursday night. No resistance was offered to the entry of the Servian troops.

"We have now occupied Durazzo for perpetuity," is the telegram which General Jankovitch, the Servian commander, has sent to the Belgrade Government.

The fact that the Belgrade Government has made public this telegram, says the Vienna correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, is regarded as proving Servia's irreconcilable attitude.

Budapest papers assert that Servia is mobilizing against Austria, and intends to form a new army, armed with the weapons captured from the Turks.

Warlike Feeling in Vienna.

A despatch from Vienna says: Much excitement has been occasioned by the action of the Government in arranging for the mobilization of the Austrian army, which proves the Ministers' determination to be fully prepared for any development in the Balkan crisis. The Parliamentary leaders met on Thursday night and decided to allow the Premier's three bills dealing with matters connected with the mobilization to go to committee without the customary first reading.

Turkish Force Captured.

A despatch from Sofit says: Two entire divisions of Turkish reserves surrendered on Friday to the Bulgarian troops near the village of Narhamli, between the port of Dedeabhach and Demotica, according to an announcement made by the official news agency here. A very fierce fight between the Turks and Bulgarians preceded the capitulation of the two divisions of Turkish reserves. The Turkish force was commanded by Yader Pasha. Two Generals, 252 Turkish officers and 8,879 men surrendered. The loot captured by the Bulgarians included eight mountain guns, two machine guns, 1,000 horses and large quantities of munitions. The Turkish prisoners have been sent to Demotica.

CHRISTMAS STAMPS.

National Sanitarium Association Will Issue 3,000,000.

Every person in Ontario will be given an opportunity of assisting in a small but practical way the work carried on by the National Sanitarium Association for the cure and prevention of tuberculosis. Three million little red Christmas stamps are being placed on sale at one cent each, and the proceeds will go to the funds available for combatting the white plague in Ontario. These attractive little stickers are designed to be affixed to all classes of mail during the holiday season, and serve to remind the recipient of the needs of the sick and suffering. They are being distributed through various business, social, religious and philanthropic organizations, or may be purchased direct from the Association secretary, at 347 King St. West, Toronto. "These stamps will not carry any mail, but all mail can carry these stamps," is the legend on the envelope in which the stamps are sold.

COLLEGE AWARDED $139,607.

For Land Expropriated by the Transcontinental Railway.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Judgment was given by Mr. Justice Audette in the Exchequer Court on Wednesday, awarding the College of St. Boniface, Manitoba, 139,607, with interest and costs, for forty acres of land expropriated by the National Transcontinental Railway.

Frank Doyle was sentenced at Parry Sound to four years for burglary.

Money Talks

THE first consideration, when investing surplus funds, is the security of the money invested. Investment in First Mortgage bonds, guarantees security of principal, and at the same time yields the Investor from 5 to 6 per cent.

We can offer high-class bonds in denominations of $100, $500, and $1,000 each, so that the small investor has the same opportunity of investment as have Banks, Trust Companies and large investors.

We shall be glad to submit particulars of certain issues which we now have on hand.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Synthetic milk follows synthetic rubber as a novelty in English scientific circles. The glory of synthetic rubber, it is true, has been somewhat dimmed by the fact that rubber making seems not likely to become possible on a commercial scale for several years, however successful the experiments and demonstrations up to the present time. Will synthetic milk fare any better?

Only time will answer this question satisfactorily. For the present it is worthy of note that a milk, made according to a process devised by three indefatigable Germans after three years of labor, may be prepared from vegetable substances, chiefly Soja beans, which seems to be superior to cow's milk. The product, it is said, contains all the elements of cow's milk, is free from disease germs and can be kept longer than cow's milk. It is good for cooking purposes and makes good cheese, but cannot be used for butter making. More digestible than cow's milk and containing more nourishment, it can be sold at a profit at 6 cents a quart, according to the English demonstrators, while cheese from it can be produced at 6 cents a pound.

Perhaps all these claims can be verified and the world has gained a valuable food product. As a food for babies, however, it may be questioned whether any vegetable substitute for cow's milk can prove satisfactory. Vegetable proteids are not the equivalent of animal proteids in nourishing qualities, in the opinion of food experts, however they may stand analysis.

Several veterans of note have recently given advice as to the mode of living that insures longevity. Nothing new has been added to the familiar set of rules. Simplicity, moderation, fresh air, exercise, healthful occupation for body and mind, avoidance of worry—these are the things usually and properly recommended. How much sleep one needs, whether tobacco should be wholly eschewed, are among the open questions, but it is surprising how few questions are really open in connection with the subject of longevity.

According to recent German statistics, Europe has about 7,000 persons who have passed the one hundredth year. They are distributed as follows: Bulgaria, about 4,000 centenarians; Roumania, over 1,000; Servia, 573; Spain, 410; France, 213; Italy, 197; England, 92; Germany, 76, etc.

The meaning of these figures is clear. The simpler and more natural the life of a nation the more centenarians it is likely to have. It is worry, artificiality, excess, congestion and the diseases of such a condition to which the shortening of life is to be attributed. We cannot all go back to nature; we cannot all live on land and by land; but we can all profit by the moral of the figures above given, to some extent at any rate. Simpler living, hygienic living, and the cultivation of a patient and a hopeful spirit are possible to most of us. The very poor and submerged present a problem everywhere, but it is true that worry is more fatal than even extreme poverty.

IS AN IDEAL PORT.

Only World Harbor That Has Double Tides Daily.

The position of the port of Southampton is that of England's premier passenger port, and no further evidence of this is needed than the fact that 304,045 passengers and 47,968 troops, giving a total of 352,013 persons, arrived in the port and departed from the docks in 1910.

The geographical position of the port is not only unique, in that it is situated almost midway on the coast line of the English Channel, and within easy access by rail to the Metropolis, but it is blessed with the unusual natural advantage of double tides, which gives it virtually four hours of high water twice a day—an advantage enjoyed by no other port in the world. The harbor itself is landlocked, but for the east and west entrances, and the very moderate tidal range with a slow flood tide, is a boon that cannot be too highly valued, for it not only makes the port very acceptable, but minimizes the cost of dredging.—Cassier's Magazine.

Selected Recipes.

Pecan Cakes.—Use two eggs, one cupful of brown sugar, one-half cupful of flour, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter teaspoonful of baking-powder and two cupfuls of chopped pecans. Make a dozen and a half cakes in shallow gem-pans, lay half a pecan on each cake, and bake them for twelve to fifteen minutes in a moderate oven.

English Gingerbread.—Rub one-quarter of a pound of beef drippings into one pound of flour. Add two heaping tablespoonfuls of sugar, one tablespoonful of baking-powder, one-half cupful of hot milk, one cupful of molasses, and one-half ounce of caraway seeds. Mix these ingredients well; pour the batter into a well-greased pan, and bake it in a moderate oven for half an hour.

Pork Balls.—They cost little and are easily made. Chop half a pound of lean pork, and add to it pepper, salt, a slice of bread soaked in milk and an egg with the white and yolk beaten separately. Mix well. Form balls by rolling about a teaspoonful of the mixture upon a well-floured board. Melt butter in a pan, and when it sizzles put in the balls and fry. Serve them on a hot dish, with pickles cut into rounds.

Tomato Honey.—Take large yellow tomatoes, and having scalded them, remove the peel. Weigh the tomatoes; then press them through a sieve, and add one pound of sugar for each pound of tomatoes, and the juice of two lemons to each five pounds of sugar. Cook the ingredients together, being careful to keep them from burning, until they are of the consistency of strained honey. Pour into small jars and seal tightly.

Vermont Jolly Boys.—Delicious breakfast cakes are made as follows: Sift together three and one-half tablespoonfuls of corn-meal, two and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour, one heaping tablespoonful of sugar, and three-quarters teaspoonful each of salt and baking-powder. Beat one egg, and add it to the dry mixture, with enough sweet milk to make a drop batter; quickly stir in one-half teaspoonful of melted butter; drop the batter by small spoonfuls in hot lard, and fry it to a rich brown.

Apple-Cranberry Sauce. — Use one quart of cranberries and two large apples—or three small ones. Pick over the cranberries, quarter and core the apples, but do not peel them. Wash both apples and cranberries, and put them in a kettle with a little water—enough to show, but not enough to cover the fruit. While it is boiling add a pinch of soda and a pinch of salt. Cook until the apples are tender, and then rub everything through a strainer. Add one and a half cupfuls of sugar, or a sufficient amount to suit the taste.

Potato Fritters.—Boil, peel and mash two pounds of white potatoes; add one-half cupful of granulated sugar, one teaspoonful of baking-powder, and salt to suit the taste. Beat the seasoned potatoes, and add slowly one-half pint of milk, stirring meanwhile until the mixture is smooth and white. Then add enough flour to make a thick batter, and fry in deep, hot lard. When the cakes are golden brown, take them from the pan and serve them on a hot platter. This recipe makes enough potato fritters for a family of four.

Cheap Salad Dressing.—Beat the yolk of an egg light, dissolve a teaspoonful of dry mustard in a little water and add to the egg yolk, stir in a cupful of water, one-half cupful of vinegar, two heaping tablespoonfuls of sugar, and one-third teaspoonful of salt. Beat all together in a saucepan, put over the fire, and, when hot, thicken with a little corn starch dissolved in water. Set aside until cool, then set on the ice until needed.

Plain Cake.—Stir three ounces of melted butter into a cupful of granulated sugar and when well blended, work in one-half cupful of pastry flour, one cupful of plain flour, a pinch of salt, and a scant teaspoonful of baking powder. Break two eggs into a cup, fill the cup with milk, and add to the other ingredients. Beat all well together and add flavoring to taste. Bake in a loaf tin.

White Cake.—Cream a lump of butter the size of an egg with a cupful of sugar, add one-half cupful of milk and one-half cupful of water. Sift together three times one and one-half cupfuls of flour and a teaspoonful of baking powder and add to the other ingredients. Last of all, fold in the stiffened whites of two eggs. Bake in a very moderate oven. If gas is used, do not heat the oven until the cake is in. Make a boiled frosting, cover the cake with it, let it cool, then pour over this unsweetened chocolate that has been melted over steam. A pinch of cream of tartar in the boiled frosting will improve it.

ON TIP-TOE—WEARING SHOES WITH SIX-INCH HEELS.

Fashions in feminine gait and modes of progression change with the shape of woman's clothes. The hobble skirt, for instance, brought in a peculiar style of walking. If the six-inch heel becomes popular, woman will have to walk on the tips of her toes.

Tips to Housewives.

Salt fish should always be soaked with the skin side up.

Turquoise ornaments should never be wet, but cleaned with a dry chamois.

When chestnuts are in season, they are a delicious addition (boiled) to a simple salad.

To make bananas perfectly digestible, bake them on a grid in a hot oven for fifteen minutes.

When next making doughnuts, add a pinch of ground ginger. The change is well worth while.

If lace is rinsed in milk and ironed while still damp, it will have just a little body—and this is quite desirable.

If, when measuring, a tablespoon is not convenient, remember that three teaspoonfuls is the equivalent of one tablespoonful.

To keep some kinds of flowers from making a vase top-heavy, put a quantity of clear white sand in the bottom to serve as weight.

Candles in glass candlesticks are the prettiest illumination for a dinner table, and with rose-colored shades the effect is most becoming.

Before using finnan haddie in making any dish, parboil and skin it; then it will be infinitely more delicate.

A delicious fish salad is made from cold sturgeon, smoked salmon or finnan haddie mixed with endive, cold potatoes and a little celery.

Instead of a single blade chopping knife, use a wheel with 12 sharp blades revolving on a single axle. These are to be found in up-to-date stores.

If fish must be kept in the refrigerator, take the precaution of rubbing well with salt and then wrapping it in paraffin paper so that the flavor will not be imparted to other foodstuffs.

In place of the simple dish of mashed potato, scoop out the potato with an ice cream scoop or mold gently into pyramids, brush each over with melted butter and put them in the oven until brown.

To clean feather ticking and khaki or duck suits, use a rice-root horse brush and a tub of hot suds. Dampen the article, rub the worst spots with washing soda, dip brush into suds and rub vigorously. Rinse and hang in the sun.

It is often difficult when arranging flowers to make them stand up nicely. If a piece of wire netting is crushed up into a ball and placed in the bowl, the flower stems can be stuck into the wire and they will stand up satisfactorily.

Certain tall flowers—lillies among them—are best arranged in a wide-mouthed vase with a stem holder in the bottom. Or wire stem-holders may be had that fit over the top of the vase or jar.

Sweet potatoes are delicious served in the following way: After they have been boiled until done, mash them and put in a generous supply of cream and butter, then beat them until very light, put them in a baking dish and bake them in the oven until they are a nice brown.

MAN IS A VOLUNTARY AGENT

No Other Earthly Creature Shows Its Possibility of Fellowship With God

One of the facts which make man chief among God's creatures is that he has a yearning after God. He has such an intellect that he can know God. Into his finiteness can come knowledge of infinity. Into his impotence can come knowledge of omnipotence. He can look into the depths of his own nature and find there in the moral law proofs of the character of God. He can look at nature about him and think back of it to God; and as his knowledge of nature increases, his wonder and adoration can increase. There is more in man than intellect—there is heart, affection, love. And it is with this side of his nature that he reaches out most eagerly for God. But even if he should not yearn after God, God knows he can do so, and desires his love. That yearning of God for human love and trust came to pathetic voice when the God-man stood on Olivet looking across upon the holy city. I have never heard the cry he then gave quoted without feeling that its deepest meaning cannot be put into this human voice. Standing there with consciousness of divinity, he cried: "How often would I have gathered thy children together—but ye would not!" No man could say that, however great he might be; but a God-man could say it and Only God Could Feel It.

Here we reach the very apex of the human character—its possibility of fellowship with God.

There are four traits in man's nature that answer the question of God's care for him: his conscience, whereby he becomes able to know God's moral law; his will, whereby he becomes a responsible, voluntary agent under that law; his consciousness of immortality, whereby he ceases to be the creature of a day and becomes a partaker of God's unending life; his yearning after God, whereby, through divine response, he comes into fellowship with God through all eternity.

In view of all that, true for you and for all of us, how are you, my brother, taking life? How did you live your yesterday? Did you go on the errands of your business or your profession, walking God's earth as chief in it? Did you live in sight of the law of God? Did you live as one whose will might hold him to the right or wreck him in the wrong? Did you live as though the day were but a part of the endless life, its deeds fitting into the plans of the eternal purpose? Did you live as one with a right to look up into the face of God and see him there your Father and your Friend? And how did you estimate the man whose life you touched yesterday? Did he seem to you a being whose fellowship might mean great things to God? Did you touch him for eternity. Or did he pass on from your life unhelped, his soul unnoticed, his life left the petty thing of this day?

For We Are Great In God's World.

We are set on high. Shall we then go our way proud and self-satisfied, ready to patronize God and underestimate the marvellous grace that makes us meet for such fellowship? A few weeks ago I received a catalogue of the output of a fine pottery works. As I looked at the illustrations of fine cases and ewers and cups, it was difficult to remember that they were of themselves but clay, ready to thicken and clot at every rainfall, only waste and wreck, until skilled hands laid hold upon it and worked it over and moulded it and decorated it and burned it. Then the potter might take the clay and count it joy to have it in his home, might tell his friends of its beauty and grace. But shall the clay which owes all it is to the Potter lift up proud voice against him and claim honor for itself? Or shall it say as did the great Apostle to us Gentiles: "By his grace I am what I am!" Surely, this befits our manhood—that we should find greatness completed by his grace who has made us all we are.—Dr. Cleland B. McAfee.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, DECEMBER 8.

Lesson X.—The Child in the midst, Matt. 18. 1-14. Golden text, Matt. 18. 10.

Verse 1. In that hour—Following the arrival of Jesus and his disciples at Capernaum.

Who then is greatest? — The "then" is explained by Mark's statement that on the way to Capernaum the disciples, prompted, perhaps, by the hopes aroused by the transfiguration and the following miracles, had been debating this question among themselves. debated by the rabbis and scribes among themselves.

The kingdom of heaven—Popularly conceived in the time of Jesus as an earthly kingdom, of which Jerusalem was to be the capital and the expected Messiah the king. The disciples had already come to believe in Jesus as the Messiah, although they still clung to the hope of an early kingdom, in which they expected, because of their relationship to Jesus as his chosen apostles, to be assigned positions of authority and honor. The question which they asked had therefore a personal bearing, referring to their own relative positions and rank in the kingdom.

2. A little child—From the context we may imagine a timid, modest child that responded with mixed hesitation and confidence to the kindly summons.

In the midst of them—In the center of the group.

3. Verily—The same word which at the end of a sentence is usually translated Amen. It is an expression used for emphasis only.

Except ye turn—Turn from the vain and selfish spirit that prompted their question to a humble, teachable frame of mind, trustful and anxious to learn as little children.

Enter into—Participation in the kingdom of heaven had been taken for granted by the disciples. The spiritual nature of that kingdom makes such participation dependent upon the attitude of mind and heart.

5. In my name—In the name of Jesus in conscious emulation of his example and in participation of his spirit.

Receiveth me—He who emulates the example of Jesus, acquires thereby a fuller measure of his spirit, becomes more like him.

6. These little ones that believe on me—Jesus has used the little child as typifying the right-minded Christian, to whom the reference is in this verse. The humblest and weakest disciple is not to be despised.

A great millstone—The marginal reading is a millstone turned by an ass. Smaller millstones were turned by women. (Compare Matt. 24. 41.)

7. Woe unto—An exclamation of distress, not a threat. The sense is "O, the woe and sorrow that comes to the world because of the occasions of stumbling (evil examples) which abound!"

It must needs be—It is unavoidable that occasions come. This general condition, however, in no case constitutes an excuse for the individual whose conduct causeth another to stumble.

8. Thy hand or thy foot—Symbolical of that which seems most essential and indispensable. Those who are sorely tempted should discipline themselves with the greatest severity, remembering that it is better always to lose part than all, to sacrifice the lesser good for the greater.

Eternal fire—Fire of the ages or eternities. Compare Lesson Text Studies for May 5, introductory paragraph on Hades and Hell.

9. Hell of fire—Or, Gehenna of fire. Compare same reference as in preceding comment.

10. See that ye despise not—An exhortation addressed to all who, like the disciples, are tempted to regard themselves as in any sense or degree superior to or above others.

These little ones—Here referring not to children, but to Christians of humble estate. The reason given why we are not to despise even the humblest believers is that God himself honors such by appointing for them guardian angels. Regarding angels, see introductory paragraph above.

11. The sentence which in older versions of the English Bible constituted verse 11, and which is found in some ancient manuscripts of this Gospel, reads: "For the Son of man came to save that which is lost." The connection here seems less clear and the sentiment less appropriate than in Luke 19. 10, where it occurs in connection with our Lord's conversation with the repentant Zachaeus. For this reason the translators of more versions of the New Testament accept the reading of the majority and the best manuscripts and omit the sentence here, but retain it in Luke. So important a saying may, however, have been oft repeated by Jesus, and is closely connected in thought with the parable that follows (verses 12-14), if not with what precedes.

12. How think ye?—The parable that follows is intended to make plain how contrary to God's desire for human salvation it would be to lead astray one of "these little ones" and cause him to be lost.

A hundred sheep—Few shepherds in Palestine would have so many. If, perchance, one should own so many, he would not be any more willing to lose one.

Leave the ninety and nine—Not exposed to danger, of course, but in safety.

14. Not the will—More correctly, not a thing willed. The Father has not absolutely determined that any shall perish.

Fashion Hints

Boa, Muff and Big Blue Rose.

Three accessories in matching shades belong with the smart street costume of this autumn. One of them is the neck-piece of chiffon, lace or satin trimmed with fur or feathers and brightened by a tiny nosegay of silken flowers, another is the muff of matching materials and ofttimes of freakish shape, and still another is the huge rose of velvet and silk entirely in the ruling tone of the boa and the muff. A great rose, its foliage and stem all in taupe, may seem like an absurdity, and so it would be if used alone, but obviously it is the smartest sort of trimming for a hat of white plush or of black velvet that is worn with a boa and muff of taupe chiffon trimmed with taupe ostrich feather fringe or with bands of moleskin.

Another horticultural surprise furnished by the milliners is a deep blue rose that belongs with a boa and muff of deep blue brocaded silk, trimmed with bands of ermine. Clasping the neckpiece under the chin and trimming the front side of the rug-shaped muff, is a butterfly bow of crocheted white floss, and falling from under it is a shower nosegay of white silk rosebuds mingling with bits of swansdown supposed to represent snow balls. The deep blue rose with its wealth of deep blue foliage is provided as a trimming for whatever hat is to be worn with the boa and muff set. All of these accessories are genuine "creations." For an amateur to attempt to copy them would be to court the discouraged state of mind usually produced by failure.

Sapphires Favored.

Sapphires are coming into favor again, the reason attributed to the revival being that the stone of azure hue is the only gem which cannot be imitated successfully and made to suffer from undue popularity. While imitation pearls, rubies and diamonds can be manufactured to look exactly like the real thing, sapphires stand alone as the inimitable gem.

According to a well known jeweller sapphires have not been really fashionable for years, although they are becoming to women of almost any colored hair.

Sapphires bring out all the shades of color in blue-eyed women, and they can be worn with equally pleasing results by women with eyes in that indefinite shade of gray which changes to blue in certain lights. A drawback, however, is the fact that sapphires cannot be worn with certain colors in dress.

Feathered Hats.

Many of the latest feather hats are entirely in white or all black. Some have two small mercury wings as their only trimming. The effect is severely tailored, and will be becoming to very young women more than those of mature years. Probably the most peculiar hat of the year is one fashioned of ostrich feathers. It is a frame covered on the plan of lays of feathers, which go dome-fashion from the crown to the edge. Two immense ostrich plumes mount up diagonally from the crown, and one good, hard wind would undoubtedly demolish the whole affair. The color is elephant gray, and the two plumes shade to almost white at their tips. It costs $37.50, which amount might be better invested.

Revival of Braid.

The revival of braid is a great factor in the evolution of this year's frocks. Not only does it add a desirable note of solidity and smartness so essential to winter clothes, but, further, it is strongly suggestive of hard-wearing properties. Braid, again—in very fine, silky makes—is admirable as a trimming for the ninon bodice of the three-pieced costume.

THURSDAY DEC. 5, '12

Colonel the Hon. Sam Hughes has recently made an advance in the militia by increasing the establishment of companies of infantry and rifles. Each company heretofore has been allowed three officers and forty-two non-commissioned officers, and men That is, the captain is given pay and uniform for these men and for no more. This is a very small establishment, rendering military efficiency exceedingly difficult to attain. In the city corps companies often out of zeal recruit up to a strength of 60 or more but the men in excess of 42 neither pay nor uniforms and the regiment must provide for them at its own expense. Col. Hughes accordingly has increased the establishment in city corps to three officers and 56 others. It amounts to adding fourteen or fifteen additional privates to the company. In doing this Colonel Hughes is removing a very old grievance of the militia. When the volunteers were raised in 1855 the companies were given an establishment of 55 and this was kept 20 years. The Mackenzie government, however, in its desire for economy, cut the establishment down to the meagre figure of 45 and at this it stayed until Col. Hughes took hold of the matter

The following from the Seaforth Expositor needs no comment.—It is not surprising that the Conservative party should gloat over the action of the Liberal senators. The Senate has done some queer things in the past, but that ancient relic has never done a stranger thing than was done by the Liberal members of the Senate when they selected Sir George Ross as their leader and chief spokesman. It was Sir George Ross and Sir John Gibson who wrecked the Liberal party in Ontario and gave Sir James Whitney his opportunity. It was the speeches and writings of Sir George Ross as much as any other one thing that defeated the Liberal party in September, 1911, and unless he is gagged and manacled he will keep Sir Wilfred Laurier and his followers in the cold shades of Opposition so long as he occupies his present position. It is an awfully long step downwards from Sir Richard Cartwright, the late Liberal leader in the Senate, to Sir George Ross, the present leader.

We hope the farmer boys of this section are not as described by Prof. Cooke head of the department of physical education in the University of Minnesota According to him the physical defects found in students from rural communities are Flabby muscles, stoop shoulders, curved spine, low right shoulder, muscular weakness of heart action, small chest expansion, small lung capacity. "In the boy from the farm," said Dr. Cooke, the muscles of the arms and shoulders usually are well develop while nearly every other part of the physical organization falls below the general average The city youth who usually has had more or less physical training and possesses a much better physique."

While the Post Office department is multiplying mail routes the officials are casting about to make them self-supporting in some way and have hit upon the plan of raising the postage on all letters posted on these routes. Last week the following new department regulation was promulgated. "The rate of postage applicable to letters mailed at any post office for delivery on a rural mail route starting from that post office is two cents for each one, and this rate applies to letters mailed on a rural mail route for delivery either on that route or at the local post office."

STEPHEN COUNCIL.

The Council of the Township of Stephen convened in the Town Hall, Crediton on Monday, the 12nd of December 1912 at 1 p.m. All members were present. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted.

Crediton

Fred Harris of St. Thomas spent a few days this week in town visiting friends.

Alonzo Hodgins, the tax collector, is a busy man these days taking in the taxes.

On Tuesday evening, Rev. C. Staebler, D. D., of Cleveland, O. gave an illustrated lecture in the Evangelical Church on a trip through Egypt. The lecture was very interesting and instructive and much enjoyed by all who attended.

Mr. and Mrs Mathew Finkbeiner are now comfortably located in their new home in town and we welcome them in to our midst and hope they will be spared for many years to come to enjoy a well needed rest. They were pleasantly surprised by the Ladies Aid of the church on Monday evening, who gave them a royal welcome to town.

Messrs Jones and Parker and Miss Jones of S. Thomas were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. August Hill last week.

Harrison Holtzman has accepted a position as clerk at C. Zwicker's.

The annual mercersups are now the order of the day. This means many a happy gathering and a good time.

S. Martin & Son of Exeter have placed a piano in the Evangelical Sunday School rooms.

The Ladies Aid of the Methodist Church held a very successful bazaar in the basement of the church last Wednesday. Several beautifully decorated booths were erected and the Ladies did a flourishing business. Lunch was also served and the ladies are well pleased with the enterprise.

Council meeting was held in town on Monday. Rumors are afloat as to who will be candidates for Municipal honors in 1913. If you see a fellow walk toward you with a profound bow, a big smile and a glad hand, you can expect to hear him ask you for your vote and influence

Mr and Mrs. John Mallet of Exeter spent Sunday in town the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Mathew Finkbeiner.

Dashwood

Messrs Siebert & Co. who have conducted a general store here for the past three years disposed of the business last week to Mr. Geo. Kellerman & Son. As Mr. G. Kellerman has been a life-long resident of this community and a good business man, and Norman very popular with the people, we expect they will do a good business. They have purchased a nice new assortment of goods and it will be their supreme delight to please all who may give them a call.

Little Ada Fassold, gave a birthday party to her little friends on Monday evening.

Miss Tillie Engeland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Engeland, was married on Tuesday, November 26th, to Mr. Disjardine of near Grand Bend. We extend our best wishes and hope that their journey through life may be one of pleasantness and sunshine.

Messrs Jacob Schroeder and Otto Miller are in the Ottawa district, attending the funeral of their Father in law.

Mr. Charles Baumgarten is offering his property he recently purchased in Dashwood known as the Goodman property to rent, for particulars apply to S. M. Brokenshire.

Several from the village are now busy hauling their supply of winter wood in Ratz's bush.

The Countryside

SAINTSBURY

On Friday evening last about 60 of the friends and neighbors met at the home of Elisha Carroll and spent a pleasant evening with them prior to their departure. During the evening the following address and presentation was made the worthy couple.—

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Carroll,—

It is with feelings of sympathy and regret that we are assembled here tonight before your departure from among us. It has been impressed upon our minds that it is our duty in some slight way to show our appreciation of you both as friends and neighbors. We have lived together those few years many of us with the closest feelings of good fellowship, and have found you ever ready to lend a helping hand in any of our daily toils. We, therefore, ask you to accept this purse as a small token of our esteem and goodwill, not for its intrinsic value, but that it may refresh the many pleasant memories of the years we have spent together. To you both we extend our best wishes for your future happiness and prosperity, and also trust that God's choicest blessings may be strewn along your pathway.

Signed on behalf of all by A. McFalls and T. C. McLeod.

USBORNE.

A quiet wedding took place at the Main Street Methodist parsonage, Exeter, on Dec. 4th, when Miss Maude Cann, second youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Cann of Usborne became the bride of Mr. James A. Earl, son of Mrs. Wm. Earl of Zion. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. G. Powell in the presence of a few friends. The bride wore the gift of the groom, a beautiful gold locket and chain. The happy couple left on the 5 p.m. train for Niagara Falls and Buffalo, N.Y., and on their return will reside on the groom's fine farm near Zion.

WHALEN.

Mr. Clarence Gunning, who left here last spring for the West, has just returned home looking hale and hearty; also Fred Foster, Orville Cann and George Squire, son of Henry Squires, who went out this fall, have all returned and feel much improved by their trip.—Don't forget the sale of cows, heifers, and young cattle at J. V. Millson's here next Tuesday.—Mr. and Mrs. B. Butler, who were here attending the wedding of her brother Mr. Hector Millson, visited with friends in this neighborhood, and left for their home at Ingersoll on Friday.—Rev. Mr. Redmond from Hensall preached here on Sunday in behalf of missions, and delivered a most enthusiastic missionary discourse.—Mr. Geo. Millson is doing an extensive business here this fall in the line of fowl. Last Wednesday they took in $345 worth in the one day. All kinds of fowl are handled, and the public are invited to come and get the highest price at Whalen store.—Parties are now starting in this vicinity. Watch the items next week for news.—Miss Hannah Raycraft of Granton is visiting friends around here this week.

FARQUHAR.

Mr. Q. Francis of Tavistock spent a few days the past week with friends here.—Mr. Bert Francis who has been away for a time in the interests of the fence company, returned home on Saturday last.

Silver Wedding.—A very pleasant time was spent on Friday evening last at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Hunkin, it being the 25th anniversary of their wedding. Upwards of 50 guests were present. Mr and Mrs. Hunkin were the recipients of many valued presents. After having enjoyed themselves to the satisfaction of all the party dispersed, each wishing the host and hostess many happy returns of the anniversary of their wedding day.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

CLANDEBOYE

A very interesting event took place at St Patrick's R. C. Church of Lucan, Nov. 27, when Miss Kathleen Heenan daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Heenan of Biddulph was united in marriage to Mr. Patrick Casey of this place. Promptly at 10 o'clock a. m., to the strains of the wedding march, the bride entered the altar, leaning on the arm of her father. Rev. Fr. Arnold of St. Patrick's Church, performed the ceremony. After the ceremony the bride and groom were accompanied to the home of the bride's father, where a sumptuous repast awaited them. Later in the afternoon the happy couple left on an extended trip to points east and upon their return they will reside in this place.

LOVELY HAIR FOR WOMEN

PARISIAN SAGE PUTS LIFE AND LUSTRE INTO FADED HAIR.

ONE APPLICATION STOPS SCALP ITCH.

If you haven't enjoyed the marvelous benefit derived from using delightful, refreshing PARISIAN SAGE, the modern hair grower, beautifier and dandruff remedy you have missed a real treat.

Every woman should use PARISIAN SAGE. Hair Tonic not only to banish dandruff and other hair troubles, but to prevent falling hair, baldness, grayness, and faded hair. PARISIAN SAGE puts life and lustre into any person's hair. It keeps the scalp and hair immaculately clean, and causes the hair to come in thick and abundant.

PARISIAN SAGE HAIR Tonic is not a dye. It does not contain a particle of poisonous lead to discolor the hair, or any injurious ingredient.

Get a bottle to-day, madam. It only costs half a dollar and is sold at drug and department stores and at toilet goods counters everywhere. W. S. Cole guarantees it.

The telegraph will reach your man quickly. If you are sure just where he is the telephone will do it quicker. But if it is good help you want and do not know just where to find it, our Want Ads. are quicker than either.

TATTERSALL'S IN LONDON.

Romantic Story of the World's Most Famous Horse Market.

The most famous horse mart in the world is Tattersall's in London. A romantic history attaches to this establishment.
In 1776 a certain Richard Tattersall, a wool comber of Yorkshire, who had lost his fortune during the Jacobite rebellion, obtained a ninety-nine years' lease of a tract of ground in London and thereon built an establishment for the sale of horses and hounds.
Tattersall was on friendly terms with the prince regent, Lord Bolingbroke and others whose patronage greatly aided the enterprise. Such, indeed, was the friendship between the prince and Tattersall that the bust of George on top of the fountain in the sale yard was so placed at the prince's own request.
In due time a huge slice of luck came Tattersall's way. Lord Bolingbroke ran heavily into debt and by way of settlement passed on to Tattersall his famous racer, Highflier, which became the father of three Derby winners. The progeny of this horse in eighteen years are said to have won races to the value of no less than £170,000. Tattersall built himself a palatial country residence near Ely, calling it Highflier Hall.
Tattersall's came to be the headquarters for the laying of turf wagers. Immense sums were won and lost there. The Marquis of Hastings lost more than £100,000 on one race alone, and, it is said, not infrequently similar amounts changed hands on "settling days" at "Old Tatt's," or "the Corner," as the place was sometimes called.
All classes of society mingled at Tattersall's. Dukes and stable boys were brothers in the excited crowd, prepared to wager on anything and everything. This state of things led to such a scandal that upon the expiration of the lease the firm was refused a renewal. In its new establishment no betting was permitted.
At the modern Tattersall's some enormous prices for racers are occasionally obtained. Flying Fox is said to have been sold to a French owner for 37,500 guineas and Ormonde to an American for 30,000 guineas. Here also Scepter as a yearling was sold for 10,000 guineas, La Fleche for 12,000 guineas and Blair Athol for only 100 guineas less.—Harper's Weekly.

ARABIAN JUSTICE.

The ordeal of the redhot knife is thus described by Abdullah Mansur (I Wyman Bury) as he saw it in "The Land of Us." The case was one of theft from a caravan. Two young men were implicated, one a palace slave, the other a young Arab, a native of the oasis. Each accused the other, with many oaths and much mutual vilification. Finally both invoked the ordeal of the knife.
In due course a venerable Arab appeared, bringing the instrument with him. His family for generations had possessed the hereditary right to administer the ordeal. The knife seemed a very ordinary piece of hoop iron shaped roughly into a sort of blade about eighteen inches long. The name and attributes of Allah were engraved upon it, and it was fitted with a plain wooden haft.
An attendant brought a bowl of water and a brazier of live charcoal, in which the knife was inserted. The Arab youth received the ordeal first He repeated his assertions of innocence and, rinsing out his mouth with water, put out his tongue, which was seized at the tip by the owner of the knife. The instrument, glowing dull red, was drawn from the brazier, and with it three light blows were struck upon the victim's tongue, which was then inspected. It merely showed slight white marks where the hot iron had fallen.
The slave's turn then came, and whether he flinched at the contact of the hot iron or had failed to keep his tongue sufficiently moist I cannot say, but the heat of the blade picked off a small patch of skin and showed a bleeding surface. According to the rules of the ordeal, that proved his guilt, and he was led away to durance vile.

LUNA'S MIGHTY PEAKS.

The moon is really and truly a great planet of mountains, its whole visible surface being dotted with elevations of curious shapes and of extraordinary height. We say "its whole visible surface" and hasten to explain that we make this statement simply because the eye of man has never seen but one side of the surface of the moon.
What we see convinces us that the little planet is extremely mountainous, for on the "end" exposed to our view there are no fewer than 30,000 peaks, varying in height from 2,000 feet to four miles. When we consider the fact that this lunarian world is only one thirty-second part as large as the earth we can easily see why it deserves the title of the "planet of great mountains."
There is a peculiar thing about these 30,000 moon peaks. Each and every one of them has a ringlike form, the open end of the conical point being of greater or lesser diameter, according to the height of the mountain. In a low grade telescope these peaks resemble true volcanoes, but when viewed through a high grade glass it is seen that the depression in the center of the queer "ring mountain" is often so great as to be below the general level of the surrounding country.
The depth of these depressions is calculated in a curious manner, by figuring on the relative shadows they cast when the sun is shining full upon them. The diameter of these "ring mountains" varies greatly, some of the larger ones being 50, 100 or even 150 miles, while the smaller look like post holes when viewed through a good telescope.

Straw Hats.

The straw hat is a relative newcomer in the world of dress. It was not until 1784, according to Les Nouvelles, that it first appeared, and its adoption was originally exclusive to women. Men did not make use of it until the Waterloo year, and the foundation of the great Alsatian industry was only in 1854, when the first big factories were erected. Our contemporary adds that it is not generally known that many so called "straw" hats are made entirely of wood. But they are none the less efficient as protectors against the effects of glare and sunshine.

Home Treatment.

"Here," began a woman known to the writer in the Canadian Courier—"here's an article in the evening paper on 'Women's Work For the Feeble Minded.'"
Her husband grunted, being in a reactionary mood. "I'd like to know," he said, "what women have ever done for the feeble minded."
"They usually marry them, dear," replied his wife sweetly.

Practical Consideration.

"You have no magnificent ruins such as we have in Europe."
"No," replied Mr. Cumrox. "I thought of putting up a few, but I gave it up They're mighty artistic looking, but they're too hard to keep in repair."—Washington Star.

Happy Days.

Fred—Mamma, our principal says his school days were the happiest days of his life. Do you believe that? Mamma—Certainly He wouldn't say so if it were not true Fred—Well, I suppose he played hookey and didn't get caught.

Very.

Friend—Then you had a satisfactory season?

FOR WOMEN ONLY.

That is the nature of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—the one remedy for women which contains no alcohol and no habit-forming drugs. Made from native medicinal forest roots. Dr. Pierce tells its every ingredient on the bottle-wrapper. Prominent physicians and some of the best medical authorities endorse these ingredients as being the very best known remedies for ailments and weaknesses peculiar to women.

Mrs. Coffey.

This is what Mrs. Genetti E. Coffey, of Longstreet, Ky., says: "I feel it my duty to write and tell you what your medicines have done for me. I was a great sufferer for six years from a trouble peculiar to women, but I am thankful to say, after taking four bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' I am not bothered with that dreadful disease any more. I feel like a new woman. When I first wrote you for advice I only weighed 115 pounds—now I weigh 135.
"I thank you very much for your kindness. You have been as a father to me in advising me what to do, so may God bless you in every effort you put forth for good.
"I hope this testimonial will be the means of some poor suffering woman seeking health."

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition, answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know.

SOWING HIS WILD OATS

REAPING A HARVEST OF SORROW

How many young men can look back on their early life and regret their misdeeds. "Sowing their wild oats" in various ways. Excesses, violation of nature's laws, "wine, women and song"—all have their victims. You have reformed but what about the seed you have sown—what about the harvest? Don't trust to luck. If you are at present within the clutches of any secret habit which is sapping your life by degrees; if you are suffering from the results of past indiscretions; if your blood has been tainted from any private disease and you dare not marry; if you are married and live in dread of symptoms breaking out and exposing your past; if you are suffering as the result of a misspent life—DRS. On the Farm

Raising Hogs.

It is very necessary that we recognize hog cholera and swine plague in the very early stages in order to prevent them from spreading. In some outbreaks the symptoms are not typical and we cannot diagnose the disease by the symptoms alone. In such cases we should destroy a sick hog and make a careful post-mortem examination, says Prof. R. A. Craig.

If the disease proves to be hog cholera or swine plague, and it is practical under the conditions the herd should be divided into small bunches. The sick animals should be separated from the well ones and all possible precautions taken against the spread of the disease.

Do not move the hogs to different parts of the farm, nor scatter the disease over the farm. If the yards and hog houses are in such a condition that they cannot be properly cleaned and disinfected we should move the herd to some convenient place and build temporary quarters.

When the weather is warm the only protection needed is shade. In cold weather it is necessary to provide quarters warm enough to prevent the hogs from piling up and catching cold. Portable hog houses are very useful for this purpose.

The yards, feeding floors, troughs and hog houses must be kept clean. All litter must be removed daily, and the frequent spraying of the hogs, feeding floors and sleeping quarters with a water solution (two per cent. or more, of a tar disinfectant is a necessary part of the care.

Both the sick and well hogs should be fed a light diet of sloppy food, shorts, bran and the like. Water or slops must not be left in the trough for the hogs to wallow in. Copper sulphate dissolved in the water and slop in the proportion of four or five ounces to the barrel may lessen the chance of infection.

As soon as a hog comes down with the disease it should be removed to the pens set aside for the sick animals. These pens should not communicate in any way with the pens where the well hogs are kept.

The dead hogs should be burned. This is not a difficult task if the body is placed on top of a pile of wood that will burn quickly and make a hot fire. If disposed of by burying is should be well done and the body covered with lime. However, this is not as satisfactory as burning.

The length of time that the hog houses and their surroundings will remain infected will depend on the care taken in cleaning them. In filth the germs may live for five months. All litter about the yards must be burned or removed to a place where the hogs cannot come in contact with it.

Whitewash and disinfectants must be used freely about the hog house and yards. If the cleaning and disinfecting is carefully done we may be able to stock up again within a few weeks afte the hogs have stopped dying and suffer no further loss, but it is usually best to wait two or three months before we do this, or depend on the hogs that have survived for a fresh start.

Where it is practical we should move the hogs to some other part of the farm and build new and better yards.

The pure-bred hog will mature and come into money more quickly than a scrub, and bring more money for the same weight at that.

If sows are closely watched at farrowing time and the pigs immediately be placed in a position to suck they are not so apt to devour them.

The farmer who marketed his corn in the hog yard and who is now marketing the hogs, can look any man in the face and tell him to go to any old place.

One acre of alfalfa will furnish more forage for hogs than two acres of clover, and it grows faster and keeps on growing as fast as the hogs eat it down.

Pigs will live and grow on rape without a supplement of grain, but a small addition of the latter is profitable. Dry sows will, however, do well on the rape alone.

Never feed more than hogs will eat up freely. Many farmers do not practice this, but keep a quantity of uneaten food lying in the lot at all times.

A few coals from the wood fire of the kitchen put into the houses now and then, where the hogs can grind them up into charcoal, help to keep the hogs healthy.

Steaming food for hogs is an easy matter. All that is required is a large box connected with a small boiler by a one-inch pipe. The pipe should connect the box at the bottom.

If you are in doubt kill the bigger hog, for it makes better meat and the ham of a light hog is hardly worth curing, if you are fond of the meat, for it dwindles far too rapidly.

FOREST RANGERS' HOUSES.

Are To Be Built On Many Dominion Reserves.

In order to protect and administer the Dominion Forest Reserves to the best advantage, they are being subdivided into ranger districts and houses are being built at strategic points for the use of the rangers in charge. The first of such houses to be occupied on the Duck Mountain Forest Reserve is located at Madge Lake, a few miles from Kamsack, Sask.

Madge Lake is a beautiful, island-studded sheet of water, covering seven square miles, and this ranger-dwelling is picturesquely placed on its southern shore. It is a comfortable house, well planned and well lighted, containing living rooms, as well as office. It will be painted a dark green with white trimmings.

The trail from this ranger station to Kamsack will next year be widened and otherwise improved. This will benefit the ranger, convenience the public who have forest business to transact, and induce an increasing number of people to enjoy the many delights of a summer outing at Madge Lake.

The ranger at this station has direct charge of some two hundred and thirty square miles of highly valuable, young, second-growth spruce and poplar forest, and his central object and work will be to safeguard it from fire by every possible means, so that in two or three decades it may yield welcome and abundant supplies of fuel and lumber to the dwellers on the prairies.

ONLY A MONTH;

OR, A CURIOUS MYSTERY EXPLAINED.

CHAPTER XXVI.—(Cont'd)

Frithiof's clouded face instantly cleared.

"Thank you," he said, simply.

"Well, now, is it possible for an outsider to help in unraveling the mystery?" said Donati. "For when a man like you is accused in this way I take it for granted there must be a mystery."

"No one can possibly explain it," said Frithiof. "I can't tell in the least how the thing happened, but appearances were altogether against me. It is the most extraordinary affair, but God knows I had no hand in it."

"I want to hear all about it," said Donati. "I am leaving England to-morrow; can't you come back and have supper with me now, and let me hear this just as it all happened?"

Even if he had wished to refuse, Frithiof could hardly have done so; and, as it was, he was so miserable that he would have caught at much less hearty sympathy. They walked along the crowded pavement toward Sackville Street, and had almost reached the carriage when a conversation immediately behind them became distinctly audible.

"They make such a fuss over this Donati," said the speaker. "But I happen to know that he's a most disreputable character. I was hearing all about him the other day from some one who used to know him intimately. They say you know that—"

Here the conversation died away in the distance, and what that curse of modern society—the almighty "They"—said as to Donati's private affairs remained unknown to him.

Frithiof glanced at the singer's face.

"No matter," said Donati in a minute, "I do not sing for a gossiping public. I sing for Christ."

"But that they should dare say such a thing as that!" exclaimed Frithiof.

"For one's self," said Donati, "it is—well—not much; but for the sake of those belonging to one it certainly does carry a sting. But every one who serves the public in a public capacity is in the same boat. It doesn't make one immoral to be considered immoral, and it doesn't make you a thief to be considered dishonest. But now I want to hear about this accusation of Mr. Horner's. When did it all happen?"

In the dim light Frithiof told his story; it was a relief to tell it to sympathetic ears; Donati's faith in him seemed to fill him with new life, and though the strange events of that miserable Monday did not grow any clearer in the telling, yet somehow a hope began to dawn in his heart.

"It certainly is most unaccountable," said Donati as the carriage drew up before a pretty little villa in Avenue Road. He paused to speak to the coachman. "We shall want the carriage in time to go to the 9.40 train at Charing Cross, Wilson; good-night."

"But if you start so early," said Frithiof, "I had better not hinder you any longer."

"You do not hinder me; I am very much interested. You must certainly come in to supper, and afterward I want to hear more about this. How unlucky it was that the five-pound note should have been changed that day by Sardoni!"

At this moment the door was opened; Frithiof caught a vision of a slim figure in a pale rose-colored tea-gown, and the loveliest face he had ever seen was raised to kiss Donati as he entered.

"How nice and early you are!" exclaimed a fresh, merry voice. Then catching sight of a strange, and blushing a little, she added: "I fancied it was Jack and Domenica you were bringing back with you."

"Let me introduce you to my wife, Herr Falck," said Donati.

The house was prettily, but very simply, furnished, and about it there was that indefinable air of home that Frithiof had so often noticed in Rowan Tree House.

"You must forgive a very unceremonious supper, Herr Falck," said Francesca, "but the fact is, I have sent all the servants to bed, for I knew they would have to be up early to-morrow, and they feel the traveling a good deal."

"Much more than you and I do," said Donati. "We have grown quite hardened to it."

"Then this is not your regular home?" asked Frithiof.

"Yes, it is our English home. We generally have five months here and five at Naples, with the rest of the time either at Paris or Berlin or Vienna. After all, a wandering life makes very little difference when you carry about your home with you."

"And baby is the best traveler in the world," said Donati, "and in every way the most model baby. I think," glancing at his wife, "that she is as true a gypsy as Gigi himself."

"Poor Gigi! he can't bear being left behind! By the bye, had you time to take him back to school before the concert or did he go alone?"

"I had just time to take him," said Donati, waiting upon Frithiof as he talked. "He was rather doleful, poor old man; but cheered up when I told him that he was to spend the summer holidays at Merlebank, and to come to Naples at Christmas. It is a nephew of mine of whom we speak," he explained to Frithiof; "and, of course, his education has to be thought of, and can not always fit in with my engagements. You go in very much for education in Norway, I understand?"

Frithiof found himself talking quite naturally and composedly about Norwegian customs and his former life, and it was not until afterward that it struck him as a strange thing that on the very day after his disgrace, when, but for Mr. Boniface's kindness, he might actually have been in prison he should be quietly, and even for the time happily, talking of the old days.

They did not linger long over the supper-table, for Frithiof was suffering too much to eat, and Donati, like most of his countrymen, had a very small appetite. Francesca, with a kindly good-night to the Norwegian, went upstairs to her baby, and the two men drew their chairs up to the open French window at the back of the room looking on to the little garden to which the moonlight gave a certain mysterious charm.

"I have thought over it," said Donati almost abruptly, "but I can't find the very slightest clew. It is certainly a mystery."

"And must always remain so," said Frithiof, despairingly.

"I do not think that at all. Some day all will probably be explained. And be sure to let me hear when it is, for I shall be anxious to know."

"It will never be explained," Frithiof said. "I was born under an unlucky star; at the very moment when all seems well something has always interfered to spoil my life, and with my father it was exactly the same—it was un undeserved disgrace that actually killed him."

And then, to his own astonishment, he found himself telling Donati, bit by bit, the whole of his own story. The Italian said very little, but he listened intently, and in truth possessed exactly the right characteristics for a confidant—rare sympathy, tact, and absolute faithfulness.

"It is to this injustice," said Frithiof, as he ended his tale, "to this unrighteous success of the mercenary and scheming, and failure of the honorable, that Christianity tells one to be resigned. It is that which sets me against religion—which makes it all seem false and illogical—actually immoral."

Probably Donati would not even have alluded to religion had not his companion himself introduced the subject. "Pardon me, if I venture to show you a flaw in your argument," he said, quietly. "You say we are told to be resigned. Very well. But what is resignation? It was well defined once by a noble Russian writer who said that it is 'placing God between ourselves and our trouble.' There is nothing illogical in that. It is the merest common sense. When finite things worry and perplex you, turn to the Infinite from which they may be safely and peacefully viewed."

Frithiof thought of those words which had involuntarily escaped his companion after the remark of the passer-by in Picadilly—"No matter!—I do not sing for a gossiping world." He began to understand Donati better—he longed with an intensity of longing to be able to look at life with such eyes as his.

"These things are so real to you," he said, quickly. "But to me they are only a hope—or, if for an hour or two real, they fade away again. It may be all very well for you in your successful, happy life, but it is impossible for me with everything against me."

"Impossible!" exclaimed Donati, his eyes flashing.

"If not impossible, at any rate very difficult," he replied.

"Yes, yes," said Donati, his eyes full of sympathy. "It is that to all of us. Don't think I make light of your difficulties. It is hard to seek God in uncongenial surroundings, in a life harassed and misunderstood, and in apparent failure. But—don't let the hardness daunt you—just go on."

"Do you know," said Frithiof, smiling, "that is almost what you said to me the first time I saw you. You have forgotten it; but a year ago you said a few words to me which kept me from making an end of myself in a fit of despair. Do you remember coming to the shop about a song of Knight's?"

"Why, yes," said Donati. "Was that really you? It all comes back to me now—I remember you found the song for me though I had only the merest scrap of it, without the composer's name."

"It was just before my illness," said Frithiof. "I never forgot you, and recognized you the moment I saw you to-night. Somehow you saved my life then just by giving me a hope."

When at length he rose to go, Donati had, as it were, saved Frithiof from moral death, had drawn him out of the Slough of Despond, and started him with renewed hope on his way.

"Wait just one moment," he said, as they stood by the door; "I will give you one of my cards and write on it the Italian address. There 'Villa Valentina, Napoli.' Don't forget to write and tell me when this affair is cleared up."

Frithiof grasped his hand, and, again thanking him, passed out into the quiet, moonlit street.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The events of Monday had cast a shadow over Rowan Tree House. Cecil no longer sung as she went to and fro, Mr. Boniface was paying the penalty of a stormy interview late on Monday evening with his partner, and was not well enough to leave his room, and Mrs. Boniface looked grave and sad, for she foresaw the difficulties in which Frithiof's disgrace would involve others.

"I wish Roy had been at home," she said to her daughter as they sat together in the veranda.

Cecil looked up for a moment from the little frock which she was making for Gwen.

"If he had been at home, I can't help thinking that this never would have happened," she said. "And I have a sort of hope that he will find out some explanation of it all."

"My dear, what explanation can there be but the one that satisfies your father?" said Mrs. Boniface. "Frithiof must have taken it in a fit of momentary aberration. But the whole affair shows that he is not so strong yet as we fancied, and I fear is a sign that all his life he will feel the effects of his illness. It is that which makes me so sorry for them all."

"I do not believe that he took it," said Cecil. "Nothing will ever make me believe that."

"Did you see him last night at the concert?" asked Mrs. Boniface.

"Yes," said Cecil choking back her tears; "just when he arranged the platform. He was looking very ill and worn."

"That is what I am afraid of. He will go worrying over this affair, and it is the very worst thing in the world for him. I wish your father were better, and I would go and have a talk with Sigrid; but I hardly like to leave the house. How would it be, dearie, if you went up and saw them?"

TWO POINTERS ON HOW TO CURE A COLD

When you begin to sniff and feel a burning sensation in the nasal passages, or when a tickling irritation in your throat starts you coughing, the first important thing is to act at once. It's the neglected cold that becomes troublesome and dangerous.

The second important thing to do is to take Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne, and keep it up till the cold disappears entirely.

Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne is absolutely free from harmful drugs, and can safely be given even to moderately young children. It is pleasant tasting and quick acting, promptly relieving the irritation of the throat and nostrils, loosening the mucus, promoting expectoration, and checking the cold.

Your druggist has Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne in 25c. and 50c bottles, or can quickly get it for you. Compounded by the National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited. 318

How Much of Your Road Money is Spent in Filling Ruts?

IF the millions of dollars that have been spent repairing worn-out, washed-out streets and roads had been used to build more miles of good highways, fewer farmers would now be wasting valuable time and money taking "round-about" routes to town.

FIRST cost of an ordinary dirt or macadam road is usually only a "starter." The cost of upkeep soon equals that first cost and there is always an ever-increasing annual expense for repairs. The worst feature of it is that such a road is never a really first-class highway.

IN estimating the cost of a road you should include the expense of keeping it in good condition for at least twenty years. If you don't, you're figuring on the first payment for that road, only. And the remaining payments are as certain as taxes. The upkeep cost of concrete roads is practically nothing.

Concrete roads are the best roads from the first—and the best and cheapest roads at the end of ten, fifteen and twenty years.

CONCRETE is the ideal paving material for streets in small towns as well as for main highways in the country.

Edward N. Hines, Wayne County, Michigan, Road Commissioner, and one of America's foremost authorities on good roads, says:

Any community that wants a good road, a road that is cheaper for even a short time under fairly heavy traffic than any other good road, a road that is inexpensively maintained, a road that is sanitary and dustless, a road that is not slippery, a road that affords good traction for any type of vehicle 365 days in the year, a road that in the long run, say 10, 15, 20 years and longer, is the cheapest of all good roads, should investigate the merits of concrete.

WRITE for the facts about Concrete highways. When convinced, use your influence to have the roads for which you pay built to last.

We have highway experts who will visit any community intending to build more roads and explain just why and how concrete roads are best and cheapest.

ARE YOU AS WELL AS A YEAR AGO?

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Point the Way to Health and Strength

Ask yourself the important question whether you are as strong as you were a year ago, as bodily fit as you should be. Many a reader has to confess "No." Some weakening ailment has during the past year laid hold of the system, unfitting you for the duties of life and seriously clouding the outlook of the coming days. It may be rheumatism with its sharp twinges of pain, indigestion, headache, nervous debility, depression and lack of energy, or the pains and ailments which only common folk know. It is well to know that all these weakening disorders arise from an impoverished condition of the blood. Renew and enrich your blood and all your troubles will cease. This is a strong statement, but it is made on the testimony of thousands who once suffered, but who have gained health and strength by the aid of the new, rich blood supplied by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. We can quote thousands of cases similar to the following: Mr. Jos. Grandmaison is a young man well known in the town of St. Jerome, Que. He says: "For a couple of years I began to find my strength failing, but did not dream that the trouble was serious. As I grew weaker I began to doctor, but it did not help me. The least exertion made my heart palpitate violently, my stomach seemed out of order and my whole system became so run down that I was finally forced to quit work. I had now been doctoring for almost six months and was very naturally growing discouraged. At this juncture I read of a case similar to mine, cured through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and decided to try them. I took the Pills faithfully for about two months, gradually growing stronger and at the end of that time I was as well as any man could be. I shall always praise the medicine that raised me from dispair to the blessing of good health."

WARDROBE OF KING GEORGE.

Cleaned Twice a Year—Discarded Suits Are Sold.

King George's wardrobe is cleaned out twice a year—in the autumn and in the spring. The matter is left largely in the hands of the chief valet, who has been with the English monarch for many years and understands his ideas upon economy. About a score of suits are discarded every six months. They are disposed of to two dealers—one in Paris and the other in New York. None is sold in London. The proceeds are devoted to charity. There is no question of bargaining over the price to be paid. Many years ago it was fixed at the uniform figure of $12.50 a suit, and the two dealers, especially the one in New York, are able to make a handsome profit on each lot. There is no restriction upon their resale except that the dealers are warned that any hint to customers that the clothes at one time belonged to King George will be followed immediately by a loss of the opportunity of buying the old clothes.

But while King George is able to recover a fair proportion of the amount he spends on his ordinary clothes, the same is not true of the $10,000 he spends every year an uniforms. Before they are sold to the second-hand dealers they must be stripped of the lace, braid, gold cord and buttons, so that they bear small resemblance to their original appearance. Thus a uniform which costs the king $100 or even $500 brings even less than a sack suit which cost him a tenth as much.

The late King Edward, especially during the later years of his life, confined the bulk of his patronage to one tailor, although there were half a dozen who, on the strength of single orders, had the privilege of sporting the lion and the unicorn over the front door. The present monarch, however, splits his orders up pretty evenly between four firms. At fixed intervals these firms send to Buckingham Palace enormous selections of woollens for their Royal customer's inspection.

LONDON TOWER FELINES.

On Two Occasions Cats Befriended Prisoners.

Two stories of the intelligence and sympathy of our feline friends were told me during one of my numerous visits to the Tower of London while I was living in England, writes a correspondent.

Southampton was a prisoner in the Tower with the Earl of Essex during Elizabeth's reign. In some strange way, or by some unrecognized faculty, a favorite cat of his found his abode and suddenly appeared to him, having made an entrance down the chimney. After his release by James I., Southampton had his picture painted with his faithful friend at his side. This portrait, I believe, can to-day be seen at Welbeck Abbey.

The other tale is of Sir Henry Wyatt, who was committed to the Tower during the reign of Richard III., and suffered much from want of clothing and food. He would have perished if a cat had not come down into his room and warmed him by lying on his breast, and saved him from starvation by bringing in an occasional pigeon caught on the leads. Although the keeper was under orders not to improve his food, he agreed to cook anything which Sir Henry provided, and the pigeons which the cat brought saved his life. He also had a picture painted showing the cat offering a pigeon through the bars of a cell.

A DOCTOR'S SLEEP

Found He Had to Leave Off Tea and Coffee.

Many persons do not realize that a bad stomach will cause insomnia.

Tea and coffee drinking being such an ancient and respectable form of habit, few realize that the drug—caffeine—contained in tea and coffee, is one of the principal causes of dyspepsia and nervous troubles.

Without their usual portion of tea or coffee, the caffeine topers are nervous, irritable and fretful. That's the way with a whiskey drinker. He has got to have his dram "to settle his nerves"—habit.

To leave off tea or coffee is an easy matter if you want to try it, because Postum gives a gentle but natural support to the nerves and does not contain any drug—nothing but food.

Physicians know this to be true, as one from the South writes:

"I have cured myself of a long-standing case of Nervous Dyspepsia by leaving off coffee and using Postum," says the doctor.

"I also enjoy refreshing sleep, to which I've been an utter stranger for 20 years.

"In treating dyspepsia in its various types, I find little trouble when I can induce patients to quit coffee and adopt Postum."

The doctor is right and "there's a reason." Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum now comes in concentrated, powder form called Instant Postum. It is prepared by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water, adding sugar to taste, and enough cream to bring the color to golden brown.

Instant Postum is convenient; there's no waste; and the flavor is always uniform. Sold by grocers—50-cup tin 30 cts., 100-cup tin 50 cts.

A 5-cup trial tin mailed for grocer's name and 2-cent stamp for postage. Canadian Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Windsor, Ont.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Great Presence of Mind.

One of the best stories given in the newly published life of Mark Twain is the one illustrating his presence of mind in an emergency.

"Boys," said Mark, "I had great presence of mind once. It was at a fire. An old man leaned out of a four-storey building, calling for help. Everybody in the crowd below looked up, but nobody did anything. The ladders weren't long enough. Nobody had any presence of mind—nobody but me. I came to the rescue. I yelled for a rope. When it came I threw the old man the end of it. He caught it, and I told him to tie it round his waist. He did so, and I pulled him down."

Girl Cured of Disfiguring Pimples

By Cuticura Ointment. Broke Out on Face when Twelve or Thirteen. Were Most Embarrassing. Had Tried Everything.

A Nova Scotia girl, Miss Mabel Morash, of Dover West, writes: "When I was about twelve or thirteen years of age, my face broke out with pimples, and I tried everything to get rid of them, but failed. The pimples were the worst on my forehead and chin. They came out in groups and developed later into sores. Being on my face they caused great disfigurement, and were most embarrassing.

"After trying so many remedies without success, I saw the Cuticura Ointment advertised, and I sent for a box. I then applied it to the pimples, and in a week I saw a great change in my face. I kept using it, and in a few months it rendered a complete cure. Now you cannot tell I ever had pimples, thanks to the Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Miss Mabel Morash, Mar. 31, 1911.

Baby's Face Like Raw Beef

"My baby boy had a large pimple come on his forehead. It burst and spread all over his face which soon looked like a piece of raw beef, all smothered with bad pimples. It was awful to look at. The poor little thing used to scratch it and cry terribly. I took him to a doctor but he only got worse until I was quite frightened that he would always be disfigured. Then I got two tins of Cuticura Ointment, together with Cuticura Soap, and in two months had quite cured him. Now of course I use Cuticura Soap for all my children (Signed) Mrs. E. Perry, 99, Waterloo Rd., Aldershot, England, May 21, 1910.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, but to those who have suffered much, lost hope and are without faith in any treatment, a liberal sample of each with a 32-p. booklet on the skin and scalp will be mailed free, on application. Address Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 50 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

Are You Droopy, Tired, Worn Out?

Here is Good Advice to All Who Feel as if Their Vigor and Life Had All Oozed Away.

This Condition Can be Quickly Cured by a Good Cleansing Medicine.

Your experience is probably somewhat similar to that described by Mr. J. T. Fleming in the following letter from his home in Lebanon: "I think I must have the most sluggish sort of a liver. In the morning my mouth was bitter, and that foul, soft feeling that tells you, 'No breakfast needed here this morning.' A cup of coffee would sort of brace me up, but in two hours I was disposed to quit work, all energy having oozed out of me. Supper was my only good meal, but I guess I didn't digest very well, for I dreamt to beat the band. A friend of mine put me wise to Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I think they must have taken hold of my liver, perhaps my stomach, too, because at the very start they made things go right. Look at me now—not sleepy in the daytime, but hustling for the mighty dollar and getting fun out of life every minute. That's what Dr. Hamilton's Pills have done for me—they have rebuilt and rejuvenated my entire system."

To keep free from headaches, to feel young and bright, to enjoy your meals, to sleep sound and look your best, nothing can help like Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, five for $1.00 at all druggists and storekeepers or postpaid from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

VAN HORNE'S MEALS.

Professor Knight, of Queen's University, Kingston, while addressing his biology class recently on the relation of sleep and food, and how the abnormal use of viands often serves nature in place of lost slumbers, took Sir William Van Horne as an illustration of what the human body can stand when deprived week after week of a fair share of rest.

The professor stated that in the days when the pressure on the executive officers of the Canadian Pacific demanded an almost constant service and unwearying vigilance and initiative, Sir William allowed himself only three hours' sleep in each day, sometimes for a week at a time. That he could keep up his strength and handle gigantic problems under such treatment was due, declared Prof. Knight, to the fact that he temporarily increased his meals to three times their usual quantity, thereby giving nature a substitute for the loss of vitality occasioned by his grind of twenty-one hours a day.

Use Luminous Bait.

The fishermen in some parts of Portugal make material increases in the amount of their catch by the use of luminous bait. This is done by a fluid secured from the body of a fish which is quite plentiful in the waters of that country, while it is quite rare in other parts of the world. The fluid is spread on a piece of meat bait and the effects of the application may be observed at once. The luminosity increases as the bait is placed in the water, and the attention of the fish is attracted to it once.

He that does good to another man does also good to himself, not only in consequence, but in the very act of doing it—for the consciousness of well-doing is very ample reward.

THE MAGISTRATE'S STORY.

What He Owes to Zam-Buk.

Mr. C. E. Sanford, of Weston, Kings Co., N.S., a Justice of the Peace for the county, and a deacon of the Baptist Church in Berwick, says: "I have used Zam-Buk for piles and found it a splendid remedy. It cured me."

Mr. Thomas Pearson, of Prince Albert, Sask., writes: "I must thank you for the benefit I have received from the use of Zam-Buk. Last summer I had a fever, which left me with piles. I started to use Zam-Buk and found it gave me relief, so I continued with it. After using three or four boxes it effected a complete cure."

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers eczema, blood-poison, varicose sores, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, cuts, burns, bruises, and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse substitutes.

He Opposes Everything.

"Your father is just a bit—well—opinionated, you know, dear," said young Jenkins; "and I'm rather afraid as to what he will say when I ask him."

"That's all right, Charlie," said the girl. "He opposes everything, and that's how I'll manage him."

The next morning she went to papa in a state of great indignation and exclaimed:—

"What do you think has happened? That absurd young man, Mr. Jenkins, has had the impertinence to propose to me."

"Absurd young man!" exclaimed her father. "Absurd, indeed—nonsense! Let me tell you that I consider Mr. Jenkins a hard-working, steady, respectable, young fellow—just the very sort of husband for you. You'll die an old maid, Matilda, if you're so confoundedly particular. Just you tell Mr. Jenkins to see me, and I'll make it all right!"

The Things He Made.

He had the appearance of a typical "out-of-work," and a friend accosted him:

"Out of a job?"

"Yes; the guv'nor said he was losing money on the things I was making."

"Wasn't there anything else you could do about the place?"

"Don't think so. Anyhow he said I didn't seem able to do anything else."

"And what were you making?"

"Mistakes!"

"Really," began the collector, "I cannot understand why a man of your resources will refuse to pay his honest debts." "Then I'll tell you," said the well-to-do citizen confidentially. "If I paid up I'd throw you and several others out of work, and I haven't the heart to do it."

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows.

Why Bread Gets Stale.

The staleness of bread is not due to the bread's becoming actually drier by the gradual loss of water, for stale bread contains almost exactly the same proportion of water as new bread after it has become completely cold. The change is merely in the internal arrangement of the molecules of the bread. A proof of this is that if a stale loaf is placed in a covered tin and exposed for half an hour or an hour to a heat not exceeding that of boiling water and then allowed to cool, it will be restored in appearance and properties to the state of the new bread.

"How's your husband this morning, Mrs. Finnigan?" "Oh, he's very poorly, ver riverence! An' it's a mighty expinsive disease he's got. The doctthor says I've to kape him in good spirits."

WHY HAY HEATS.

Bacteria in Stack Makes Centre Sterile.

The familiar phenomenon of the heating of hay in the stack has usually been ascribed to purely chemical reactions. Recent researches carried out by Michel, however, show that the process is a physiological one, and due to bacteria and other lowly organisms. It was found that sterilized hay would not heat, but that if sprinkled with water contaminated with earth or ordinary hay it did so. A species of bacillus and a fungus were found to be chiefly responsible for temperatures up to 50 degrees centigrade. For higher temperatures another species of bacillus was found to be responsible. The work of the bacteria in the heating of hay illustrates the curious fact that these organisms usually end by killing themselves. In the centre of a large heated stack the hay is found to be sterile. And this is attributed to the killing of the bacteria by the heat which they themselves evolved. In other cases they are poisoned by the toxins which they themselves produce.

IF YOUR BABY IS SICK GIVE BABY'S OWN TABLETS

The little ills of babyhood and childhood should be treated promptly, or they may prove serious. An occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets will regulate the stomach and bowels and keep your little ones well. Or they will promptly restore health if sickness comes unexpectedly. Mrs. Lenora M. Thompson, Oil Springs, Ont., says:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my little girls as occasion required, and have found them always of the greatest help. No mother, in my opinion, should be without the Tablets." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Beating the Law.

DOES IT ENDANGER A COMMUNITY'S BEST INTERESTS?

The issue before the electors is a moral one. Is the license system right? All must answer, No. No legislature and no parliament, either by license or segregation, can make wrong right. With due reverence we declare that even God Himself connot make wrong right. Who, then, can give an individual or a community authority to place in his brother's way that which admittedly destroys body, mind and spirit? Behold the tremendous expense of the traffic. The Canadian Liquor Bill for 1911 was $81,392,969, $11.30 per capita for the entire population of 7,204,500, while Protestant gifts to Home and Foreign Missions for the Protestant population of 4,665,500 the same year was $2,216,432 or 47½ cents per capita. Strong drink $11.30 per individual, Home and Foreign Missions 47 cents per individual. Yet we boast of our religion and flaunt our flag ecstatic with patriotism. Now add to $81,392,969 (Canada's Liquor Bill) that which it engenders, which per se, must follow in its trail. A Canadian Judge says Canada's loss in efficient labor is $75,000,000. Add to this 80 per cent of what crime costs. Add to this the cost of poverty and broken lives. Subtract from this sum total $2,000,000, which is Canada's revenue from Liquor. How long will the Church true patriots, in whose veins Covenanter blood flows, Statesmen and Publicists permit it?

Golden Anniversary of James Street Methodist Church

On Sunday and Monday last James Street Methodist Church, Exeter, celebrated the Fiftieth Anniversary of the establishment of the church in Exeter.

Until the Methodist union took place this church was of the Bible Christian denomination, and below we give a history of the origin of the Bible Christian church, with particular reference to the Exeter appointment.

The services on Sunday were particularly bright and interesting. The church both in the auditorium and basement was profusely decorated with flowers. The choir furnished music in choice anthems, solo, quartette, and instrumentals, appropriate to the occasion. The services on Sunday were taken by Rev. Dr. Pascoe, who was the first minister in charge of the congregation after the union took place, assisted by the present pastor, Rev. W. Geo. H. McAllister. Dr. Pascoe preached both morning and evening highly interesting and instructive sermons to very large congregations. Always a favorite with the people of Exeter Dr. Pascoe was listened to with rapt attention during his discourses. He is now nearing his sixtieth anniversary as a preacher, and still retains his old time eloquence and powerful expression of scriptural truth.

On Sunday next a continuance of the anniversary will take place, when Rev. A. L. Russell, another old favorite, will occupy the pulpit.

On Monday evening a Fowl Supper was given, when a very large number sat down to tea. After the supper a program was rendered, consisting of reminiscent speeches by Dr. Pascoe of Hamilton, Rev. S. J. Allin of Windsor, Rev. John Holmes of Talbotville, Mr. Brooks of Owasso, Mich., an old resident, and the pastor, who occupied the chair, musical selections by the choir, solos by Mr. Goodwin, Miss Carling and Miss Chowan, a reading by Miss Edmunds, and an instrumental by Miss Jennie Frayne. Features of the occasion were the playing of the melodeon by the organist of 50 years ago, Mr. D. Braund, and the presence of the following persons, who were present at the opening of the church, and who have since had a group photograph taken—John Kerslake, Richard Delbridge, Mrs. James Pickard, Mrs. Richard Pickard, E. Jory, C. H. Horney, Mr. and Mrs. R. Keddy, William Westcott, Mrs. T. Clark, Mrs. Geo Samwell, Mrs. Jane Smith, Mrs. R Blatchford, Thomas May, Mr. and Mrs D. Braund, Dr. and Mrs. W. Sweet, Mrs. Geo. Fisher, Mrs W. Dearing, Mrs. H. Horney, C. T. Brooks, and J. Brooks. There are a number of others who attended both services, but they did not report as such.

A Social was held on Tuesday night. The Thank Offering and receipts for the supper amount to nearly $400, while the subscription to wipe off the church debt of $2000, will amount to nearly that sum.

AN HISTORICAL SKETCH

This church traces its ancestry thru spaces which reach back to Devonshire, Eng., where William O'Bryan, a lay preacher began in 1815 to warn man to flee from the wrath to come and be saved from their sins.

Men heeded his earnest exhortations and 20 persons were gathered into a Society at Shebbear. This was the first "Society," others followed. The glowing flames spread, and the icy chill of the frozen religiosity of the time gave way to the warmth of experimental and personal religion.

At Moorwinston revival fires broke out and spread to Cornwall. Many hundreds were converted. The splendid work moved on. Active co-workers enlisted. By the year 1819 there were 2000 members enrolled. At Baddash, Cornwall, August 17, 1819 a conference assembled from which 30 preachers, some of whom were women, were sent to 12 circuits. Two years later, 1821, a missionary society was organized and 92 pounds raised.

In 1831 the Missionary income was 104 pounds, and the membership 6000. An act of parliament secured a legal status for the denomination, and the Bible Christian Church designated Francis Metherall missionary elect to North America, where he arrived June 26th, 1832, and located at Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island.

In 12 months Metherall had organized 36 preaching stations. Philip James was despaghed by the home Conference to aid in the work. He is on record at a quarterly meeting in Colborne Township, Feb. 27, 1847.

A man now appears on the scene whose life and work is registered in the annals of earth and heaven.

John Hicks Bynon had chosen the law for a profession. Through curiosity he went to hear a sermon by Elizabeth Dart who afterwards was his wife. If he went to be entertained he certainly remained to pray. The meeting changed the whole course of his life. He became a preacher and was designated Missionary to Upper Canada by the Conference of 1832.

After setting out the ship was driven back to port by storms. While waiting for calm he married Miss Dart and again set out for Upper Canada. They arrived at Cobourg in July, 1833. His oversight grew to a circuit 200 miles in length. This titanic man toiled in territory East, West and North from his base like Hercules of old. Bynon had the instinct of the missionary scout The regions beyond no matter what intervened had a fascination for him. His spirit went home to God from Exeter March 22, 1888, aged 86 years. His ashes were reverently borne to Darlington, Ont., and there rest awaiting the Resurrection Morn.

In 1839 Rev. John Edwards, the celibate, arrived for pioneer work in Canada It is said that the pioneer preachers were fond of horses. It is not much wonder when one stops to remember the weary miles they spent together. The elders will still remember Charlie, the black French Canadian pony ridden by Rev. John Edwards. Charlie spent his superannuated years on the farm of Mr. J. May, London Road, Exeter.

In the annals of the church there is a record of the "Huron Tract". Here on horseback, following blazed trails, where the smoke from the Indian's wigwams rose in 1847 might have been seen the well wrought frame and form of James Hicks Bynon, bent like Joshua of old, spying out the land. The level ground, rich soil, and well timbered country told this prescient man of coming decades when Huron would stand with the best.

TORONTO CORRESPONDENCE

INTERESTING BITS OF GOSSIP FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

The C. N. R.'s New Townsite—Generals Lessard and Otter—Interesting Law Suit—Hamilton's Feat.

It has long been recognized that Toronto's great handicap as compared to Montreal lies in the fact that the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Grand Trunk Railway both have their headquarters in the seaport town. In recent years the prospect of the third transcontinental railway, the C. N. R., keeping its headquarters in Toronto has given rise to the hope that in the near future Toronto might rival Montreal even as a railway centre. But so far this has been mostly taken out in hope, because up to date having the headquarters of the C. N. R. here has not meant any great acquisition to the city in population or in industries. Now, however, all this is to be changed. The C. N. R. has purchased some 1,200 acres at Leaside Junction and has announced that it will immediately establish there its main railway shops. It has prepared a plan for the subdivision of the entire area. The subdivision is to be laid out along model lines with wide avenues, one running as wide as 110 feet, diagonal thoroughfares headed for the centre of the city and curving streets. It is estimated that in the subdivision as laid out, 30,000 people will find comfortable homes.

This area is as yet entirely outside of the city limits. It is located at the north-eastern corner, contiguous to the old limits of the city on the south side and to the municipality of North Toronto on the West side. As North Toronto is about to be annexed to the city it is natural to suppose that the C. N. R. subdivision will soon come also. An interesting feature is that it forms a connecting link with Donlands, the estate of Mr. W. F. Maclean, M.P., proprietor of the Toronto World, an estate comprising some 1,200 acres purchased in small lots some years ago at exceedingly moderate prices as farm land, but which now at a moderate valuation as suburban property will easily put the owner in the millionaire class.

A French-Canadian General.

A shift among the higher officers of the Canadian Militia, which has just gone into effect, brings to the head of the force at Toronto Brigadier-General François Louis Lessard. It is curious that the position in this ultra Protestant, ultra English centre should be given to a French-Canadian, for General Lessard is decidedly French in appearance, manner and speech. Though reversing the usual order of French-Scottish inter-marrying in the province of Quebec, his mother being of Scottish birth, while his father was a French-Canadian, General Lessard's native tongue is the French and he speaks English with a decided accent.

General Lessard has made a good reputation as a soldier. He entered the militia thirty-four years ago, when he was but 18 years old. He saw his first service in the North-West Rebellion of 1885 and came into prominence during the South African War, where he commanded the Royal Canadian Dragoons. He was present at the relief of Kimberley and saw much service in the field. For his conduct he received a Queen's Medal with five clasps.

While not a man of wealth, General Lessard, like many Military men, is prominent socially. Like many officers who served in South Africa, his pay was allowed to accumulate and amounted to a tidy sum at the conclusion of the war.

Other changes include the retirement of Major General W. D. Otter, C.B., Chief of Staff, who retires from the militia after over 50 years service. While his duties have taken him away from Toronto in recent years, General Otter has a host of friends in this city, where he spent practically all his life. General Otter saw service in the Fenian Raids, now 46 years gone by. As Colonel of the Queen's Own Rifles he saw much service in the North-West Rebellion in 1885, and the embers of the controversy over his tactics at the battle of Cutknife Hill have not entirely died out. He, of course, was a prominent figure in the South African war, being in command of the first Canadian contingent that went to the front in 1899. He was always a strict disciplinarian and did a great deal for the morale of the Canadian Militia. He is succeeded at Ottawa by Major General Cotton, who has been in command in Toronto for several years and who is now succeeded by Brigadier General Lessard.

A Piquant Law Suit.

The High Court is still considering the law suit of Mr. G. G. S. Lindsey against Dr. W. D. Le Sueur. The case has attracted a great deal of attention, partly on account of the Prominence of the litigant, partly on account of the interesting point of law at issue, and partly also on account of the exceedingly interesing recollections which came up in the course of the trial. Mr. G. G. S. Lindsey is a grandson of William Lyon Mackenzie. He is a son of the late Mr. Charles Lindsey, for many years a prominent journalist of Toronto, and in later years registrar, and of Janet L., one of the daughters of the rebel-patriot. The Lindsey family have had in their possession for many years practically all of the documents relating to Mackenzie, which are now extant. This collection is said to be exceedingly profuse and interesting, containing documents which are to be found nowhere else in the world.

Briefly, the story of the present law suit is that Dr. Le Sueur, who is a literary light of Ottawa, being commissioned by the publishers of the "Makers of Canada" series to write a biography of William Lyon Mackenzie, secured permission to have free access to the Lindsey library and its documents. In the course of time Dr. Le Sueur handed over his manuscript for the biography, but on the ground that it was a partisan manuscript, unfair to the memory of Mackenzie, it was rejected by the publishers and not included in the "Makers of Canada" series. Mr. Lindsey claims that Dr. Le Sueur had access to these documents for the specific purpose of writing a biography for that series and when his manuscript was rejected his rights ceased. Mr. Lindsey, therefore, sues to restrain Dr. Le Sueur from making anw use whatever of the information he secured from the Lindsey library. The fact that Dr. Le Speur is an ardent Tory and Mr. Lindsey is the grandson of his grandfather adds piquancy to the situation which is heightened by the fact that Dr. Le Sueur is represented by a Liberal counsel and Mr. Lindsey by a Conservative.

W. L. Mackenzie's Grandson.

Mr. Lindsey has one of the keenest intellects in Toronto, and may be heard from politically some day, though in recent years he has shown a disposition to retire into the background. As a young man he was prominent in political affairs in Toronto, and over 20 years ago, when only 30 years of age, was elected as alderman for two terms. He was one of the group of young men whose weekly meetings and discussions on public questions are still recalled with the keenest pleasure by everyone who participated.

Afterward, Mr. Lindsey became manager of the Crow's Nest Coal Co., of which corporation he was elected President in 1907. For the past three years, having retired from that position, he has lived in Toronto. He is still interested in mining affairs and is understood to be the possessor of a considerable fortune.

It is of passing interest that he was the founder of the "Varsity," the student publication which has recently been in the limelight in connection with the dispute with Principal Hagerty.

Hamilton to the Front.

The winning of three football championships in one day by the city of Hamilton has brought that rival of Toronto more prominence in these parts than it has had in many a day. Football publicity may not be the best kind of publicity, but the Ambitious city's feat is undoubted evidence of the existence of a more than ordinary civic spirit.

Hamilton used to be a continuous butt of all stock jokes in Toronto. On the stage this continues to some extent, but it would seem that the practice is dying out. Perhaps one reason is that Toronto is getting so big that it no longer considers Hamilton as a serious rival. Toronto now points with pride to the fact that its population is increasing every year by more than 10,000 births, apart altogether from additions to population by immigration and annexations. Some six or seven years ago Hamilton put on a considerable spurt and secured the location of a large number of important American industries, but in recent years its increase in population has not been so marked. At the same time it has nearly every natural advantage that Toronto has and with the right kind of civic spirit and enterprise there is no reason why it should not become a large city.

82 LOST IN A STORM.

Only 11 of 100 Fishing Vessels Returned Safe to Ports.

A despatch from Lisbon says: Eighty-two Portuguese fishermen lost their lives during a recent storm on the coast of Portugal. Four days ago a fleet of one hundred fishing vessels whose crews totaled 192 men were caught in the gale. Up to the present only eleven of them have returned, and it is almost certain the remainder went down with their craft. The survivors suffered severe privations. They were without food or water for three days, while the seas were very heavy and cold winds prevailed. Four of the fishermen became insane, jumped overboard and were drowned. Six bodies have been washed ashore on the northern coast.

CANADA'S GIFT TO BRITAIN

Thirty-five Million Dollars to Build the Three Strongest Battleships Afloat

A despatch from Ottawa says: The three most powerful battleships in the world is Canada's proposal for supplementing the royal navy, the cost to be $35,000,000. Premier Borden so announced on Thursday afternoon, saying:

"The situation is, in my opinion, sufficiently grave to demand immediate action. We have asked his Majesty's Government in what form temporary and immediate aid can be given by Canada at this juncture. The answer has been unhesitating and unequivocal. Let me again quote it:

"'We have no hesitation in answering, after a prolonged consideration of all the circumstances, that it is desirable that such aid should include the provision of a certain number of the largest and strongest ships of war which science can build or money supply.'

"Upon enquiry as to the cost of such a battleship, we were informed by the Admiralty that it is approximately £2,350,000, including armament and first outfit of ordnance stores and ammunition. The total cost of three such battleships which, when launched, will be the most powerful in the world, would be approximately thirty-five million dollars, and we ask the people of Canada, through their Parliament, to grant that sum to his Majesty, the King of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the overseas Dominions, in order to increase the effective naval forces of the Empire to safeguard our shores and our sea-borne commerce, and to make secure the common heritage of all who owe allegiance to the King.

Control of Ships.

"The ships will be at the disposal of his Majesty the King for the common defence of the Empire. They will be maintained and controlled as part of the Royal Navy, and we have the assurance that if, at any time in the future, it should be the will of the Canadian people to establish a Canadian unit of the British navy, these vessels can be recalled by the Canadian Government to form part of that navy, in which case, of course, they would be maintained by Canada and not by Great Britain. In the meantime, I am assured that special arrangements will be made to give Canadians the opportunity of serving as officers of these ships."

Information From Admiralty.

Some of the information from the Admiralty was "necessarily of a very confidential character," but he submitted their memorandum, which laid especial emphasis on the naval race between Britain and Germany. But while the Admiralty "set the greatest store on the important material, and still more important moral assistance it is within the power of Canada to give," it was made plain that no pressure was being exerted on Canada to give a decision "which clearly belongs solely to Canada." And whatever might be done, the assurance was given that Britain "has not lost her capacity, by a wise policy and strenuous exertions, to watch over and preserve the vital interests of the Empire."

"The Empire," said the Premier, "was peculiarly dependent on the supremacy of the navy, for not being a military power, a decisive defeat at sea would shatter the Empire.

"Twelve years ago the British navy and the British flag were predominant in every ocean in the world, and along the shores of every continent. To-day they are predominant only on the North Sea," he declared. "In 1902 there were 160 ships on foreign and colonial stations, as against 76 to-day, although naval expenditure had increased by 50 per cent.

"The real test of our action is the existence or non-existence of absolute security," he asserted. "History was full of warnings of the fate of the unprepared. The British flag was not known now on Canada's coasts.

Fleet For Canada.

"I am assured that the aid which we propose will enable such specific arrangements to be consummated, that, without courting disaster at home, an effective fleet of battleships and cruisers can be established in the Pacific, and a powerful squadron can periodically visit our Atlantic seaboard."

"We are now undertaking or beginning a system of regular and periodical contributions," said the Premier, and he proceeded to outline the Government's proposals. He was certain that it would take Canada 25 or 50 years to build a navy that would be "a poor and weak substitute" for "the splendid organization the Empire now possesses." Canada could render aid now "upon just and self-respecting terms."

Aid for Ship-Building.

The ships would be built in Britain. Canada had not the facilities to build the hulks, and to provide them would be to waste twelve million dollars additional expense. But to assist Canadian ship-building the Admiralty was prepared to give orders to Canadian yards for cruisers, oil-tank vesels, etc., and Canada would defray the extra cost. Canada's three ships would bear historic Canadian names.

Sum Not Excessive.

The amount involved was "moderate and reasonable." Argentina in four years had spent over $65,000,000 on the navy. From 1870-90 Britain had spent $125,000,000 to $150,000,000 on the North Atlantic squadrons, and from 1853-1903, over $100,000,000 on military defence in Canada.

The Premier described the work of the British committee on Imperial defence, and added:—

"I am assured by H. M. Government that pending a final solution of the question of voice and influence, they would welcome the presence in London of a Canadian Minister during the whole or portion of each year. No important step in foreign policy would be undertaken without consultation with such a representative."

And in conclusion he said: "We invite the statesmen of Great Britain to study with us the real problem of Imperial existence."

British Opinion.

A despatch from London says: The announcement of Canada's proposed purchase of three Dreadnoughts for the Imperial navy is made the leading feature of the entire press. Premier Borden's speech in introducing the bill appropriating $35,000,000 for this purpose is printed in full by all the papers, which in editorials welcome Canada's gift and eulogize the patriotism of the Dominion in unstinted and glowing terms.

Coincident with the announcement of the Canadian gift the Admiralty issued a statement prepared for the Canadian Government at its request setting forth the requirements of the Empire for naval defence.

Bright, Ruddy Cheeks For Pale Girls

No Longer Any Need to be Pale, Weak or Anaemic.

By Following the Advice of Miss McEwen You Can Quickly Become Strong Again.

The pallid girl always lacks appetite. What little she eats is badly digested.

At night she is restless, she dozes, but doesn't sleep soundly.

Vital force must be increased, new blood must be supplied and a general rebuilding take place before she will feel like she ought.

Dr. Hamilton has invaluable experience in these cases and found nothing so prompt in building up young women as his vegetable pills of Mandrake and Butternut.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills begin by cleansing the system and purifying the blood; they also improve digestion and render food ready for absorption. Additional nourishment is quickly supplied and the patient is fast strengthened and invigorated.

Full of spirit, ruddy and strong is the girl that assists her system by the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

The following recent letter from Miss Etta McEwen, of Haliburton, speaks for itself:

"In using Dr. Hamilton's Pills I find my system is wonderfully built up. It is certainly the most effective remedy I ever used. I have now a good appetite, sleep more soundly, and awaken in the morning feeling quite refreshed.

"Formerly I felt tired and depressed. I looked as if a severe illness were hanging over my head.

"Nothing could give quicker results than Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I strongly advise every young woman to use them."

All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00, by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

SUFFRAGETTES ACTIVE.

Pour Paint Into Letter Boxes and Make Addresses Illegible.

A despatch from London, England, says: Fleet street letter boxes, which hitherto have been immune from the attentions of the suffragettes, received a visit on Friday from some of them, who poured a quantity of pale yellow liquid, resembling paint, into two boxes. No letters were destroyed, but the addresses of some were made illegible. Similar outrages were reported in various suburbs. At every city post-office yesterday an official was stationed to watch the public posting letters.

GREECE IS NOW IN LINE

Declares She Acted in Accordance With Wishes of the Other Balkan States

A despatch from Athens says: It is officially announced that Greek plenipotentiaries will participate in the peace negotiations. A semi-official statement, issued on Thursday night, protests against interpreting the fact that Greece did not sign the armistice as proof that dissensions exist among the allies, and declares that it was by agreement of the allies that Greece adopted an attitude different from that of the other States. The explanation is given that Greece's course was due to her anxiety that her naval action should not be interrupted in the Ionian Sea, in order to prevent the revictualling of the Turkish army in Epirus, and in the Aegean Sea, in order to prevent the transport of Turkish troops to Thrace, with respect to which Greece considered the interest of her allies rather than her own. The chances for the conclusion of peace would have suffered from the reinforcement of the Dardanelles and Tchatalja garrisons.

The statement refers to the Turco-Italian treaty recently signed as proof that it is not necessary that peace negotiations shall be preceded by an armistice.

Turkish Guerilla Attacked.

A despatch from Salonika, European Turkey, says: A force of Greek troops on Thursday severely defeated and punished 1,000 Turks who were pillaging the village of Boyatisco, according to a report from the headquarters of the Greek army. The Turks are said to have lost 330 men killed and wounded. Forty of them were taken prisoners. The Turks are alleged to be carrying on guerilla tactics, pillaging, burning, and committing outrages.

Austria's Demands.

A Vienna despatch to the London Daily Telegraph says: "The Austrian Government is looking forward with calm confidence to the end of the peace negotiations in the belief, which I am trustworthily informed is justified, that her demands will be satisfied. But peace must be made quickly, for the commercial losses caused by the prolonged crisis are making the whole people daily more discontented, and undue delay would cause fresh trouble.

"There is no reason, however, why the negotiations should not be brief. Bulgaria and Turkey are already as one, and when peace is concluded they will be still closer together. The treatment of Albania is the most likely to occupy time in the negotiations. Servia is sure to raise the question of Durazzo and Alessio, but Turkey knowing that whatever happens Albania will never again be a part of the Turkish Empire, will probably not raise a dispute over any claims put forward for any portions thereof. Turkey knows also that the final arrangements for Albania will not be for the Balkan allies, but for the European powers."

A SELF-MADE CHRISTMAS

Letty Ashworth, only eighteen, desperately homesick in an institutional boarding-house, and almost at the end of her money! Is it any wonder that she saw everything through a blue haze? The fact that it was the day before Christmas aggravated the situation. She had sent every dollar she could spare up to her country home to go into the ever-gaping mouth of the farm mortgage, and now in the midst of all the Christmas chatter and planning she felt an outcast—she who loved to give and could not.

"I haven't a single thing to give to anybody," she said to herself. "O dear! I do hope none of the girls will wish me a Merry Christmas. If they do, I shall just scream—or cry."

She looked about her cell-like room. It was very clean and very dreary; differentiated from the fifty other rooms in the Young Women's Home only by the faces in the photographs tucked into the mirror frame and hanging from the gas fixture. Her room-mate had gone home for the holidays, and although she was not specially fond of her, her absence added an atom to the general depression.

But it was breakfast time, and we must eat even if our hearts break, so Letty started for the dining-room three floors below. As she closed her door, a girl dashed out of a room near by and came running after her. At the top of the stairs the newcomer tripped and would have fallen headlong but for Letty's quick grasp.

"Bless you, Miss Ashworth! you've saved my life this time," cried the girl, steadying herself by a hand on Letty's shoulder, while she stood on one foot and tried to untangle the other from a loop of dress braid. "I expected this wretched braid would bring me to grief before it was fixed. I've had a new braid in my work-basket for a week, and haven't had a minute to put it on. There!" freeing her foot by a sudden jerk which tore off still more of the braid. "Now, I've got to get into another skirt," and she hurried back to her room.

Down in the dining-room an animated conversation rippled up and down the long tables. "Did you see those lovely combs at Hofner's—only fifty cents?"

"No, I shouldn't dare select a necktie for him. I'm going to give him handkerchiefs."

"Did you finish dressing your little sister's doll?" etc.

Letty bore it as long as she could, then, leaving her half-eaten breakfast, went back to her room. The underwear factory where she worked had shut down till after Christmas, to repair the engine, so she had the day before her. If she only had some money, what a nice chance to go round the stores and buy things; or to go home for Christmas. Home! The thought was too much, and the clouds began to drop rain.

There was a knock at the door, and the chambermaid came in.

"Why, what's the matter, Katy?" asked Letty detaching herself from her own misery enough to notice the girl's swollen face and the dark circles round her eyes.

"It's an ulcerated tooth," groaned the girl. "Not a wink of sleep did I get all night."

"I'll take care of my room today," said Letty, "and I just as lief tend to the other rooms on this corridor. I'm not working to-day, and it will do me good to be busy about something.

As Letty went from room to room making beds and straightening rugs and chairs with the precision required in the Young Women's Home, somehow her heart grew lighter, and when she came to the room where a skirt with trailing braid was thrown over a chair, a pleasant thought came to her. Finding a new braid in the work-basket, she took the skirt to her room, rebound it neatly, darned a tiny tear, sewed on a loose hook, and pinning a Christmas greeting on it, hung it on the chair again.

As she finished her rounds she stopped at the laundry door. "You seem to be flying round in here," she said.

"We're a little short-handed," said the laundress. "Katy helps us sort the clothes, but she has gone to bed sick, and it looks as if our work would run over into Christmas day."

"Can you use a green hand?" asked Letty. "I've nothing to do, and I'd like to help. You can call my services a Christmas present," she added, with the first smile of the day on her face.

"'Twould be the best kind of a Christmas present. Come right in. These clothes on the racks are ready to sort, and then be sent round to the rooms."

So Letty stood up to the long racks and sorted and folded with willing hands, and the neat piles of clothes disappeared like magic. And when the tables were cleared the laundry girls came up with smiling faces and said. "Thank you for our Christmas present, Miss Ashworth," and Letty went down to dinner with quite an appetite. And there a new chance for service presented itself. Two or three of the girls were bewailing belated errands which required daylight.

So, after dinner, Letty went hither and thither, matching ribbons and silks and tassels, and coming home with loaded arms, found a box from her country home, a box filled with holly. If the waxen leaves suddenly gained a new luster, the dewdrops which caused it were not wholly tears of unhappiness.

The day had been lived through, but the long evening was to be raced. Many of the girls had gone home for the holidays, and others were busy with their Christmas gifts, so Letty sat alone, the tide of homesickness rising higher and higher. She heard the occupant of the next room come in and shut her door, "I wonder if Miss Wilbur is homesick, too," she mused. Miss Wilbur was a comparatively newcomer, a silent, reserved girl who had no intimates in the Home. Letty had always stood a little in awe of her, but now she felt a sudden impulse to go to her.

"May I come in?" said Letty, as the door opened to her knock, showing the room to be in darkness. "I'm just dying of homesickness."

"Then there are two of us," said the other girl, extending her hand and drawing her in.

"You see," Letty hurried on, with a catch in her voice, "My mother is two hundred miles away, and it may be a year before I see her."

"My mother is farther away than that," said Miss Wilbur, "and it may be a good many years before I see her again," and remembering the other's black garb, Letty understood.

For a time the two girls wept together, and when their tears had lightened their hearts a little, they talked tenderly, of their homes and kindred, and came nearer together than in a year of ordinary intercourse. Then Letty had an inspiration.

"There are two or three of the girls I wanted to remember," she said, "there's Miss Crosby—she's going to the hospital in a few days, for an operation, and she dreads it awfully, and Gertrude Gray's brother has gone wrong and she's just broken-hearted; and Milly Bishop is very sad over her broken engagement. I'm awfully "short" just now, but I have just thought of some bright pieces I have which would make little cushions or headrests, and I've plenty of fir balsam to fill them. Will you come in my room and help me?"

In a few minutes the girls were busy over their scraps of silk, and when the dainty little gifts were finished, Letty brought out her box of holly and fastened a spray on Miss Wilbur's shoulder, saying, "Now let's make some big wreaths for our windows."

"Yes," said the other, "or"—

"Or what?" asked Letty.

"Wouldn't it be nice to put a piece at every plate, so all the girls could enjoy it? You suggested it, pinning this piece on me."

Letty caught at the idea at once. "We'll be breaking it up, and after everybody is abed, we'll go down and distribute it, and won't they wonder where it came from?"

A couple of hours later, the two girls crept noiselessly upstairs and as they parted at Letty's door, Miss Wilbur stooped and kissed her cheek, whispering, "I believe you saved my heart from breaking, tonight," and slipped into her room before Letty could answer.

When the girls trooped down to breakfast Christmas morning and saw the long white tables bordered with shining leaves and bright berries, there were many "Ohs" and "Ahs," and much wonderment, and soon the girls were pinning them on their dresses or tucking them in their hair. Everybody was in high spirits, and Letty found herself giving and receiving "Merry Christmases," right and left. She had no thought that she had helped toward the cheer of the day but Katy and the girl with the hanging dress-braid and the laundry girls and the girls with errands and the night watchman—or to speak accurately, the night watch-woman—had told tales, and when Letty went up to her room, she found on her table a vase of tall chrysanthemums, and the card with them said, "For the one who has done the most to give the Home a Merry Christmas."

As Letty settled herself to sleep that night, she gave a sigh of thankfulness, and said to herself, "It has been a good Christmas, if it did start in a little teary, and I've had a beautiful Christmas present — a new friend."

And upon the girl who in homesickness and poverty had lived the Christmas spirit, fell the Christmas peace.

Often a man who has great conversational ability has little else.

OLD CHRISTMAS REVELS . . . .

How the pulses beat to the lilt of the old-time Yuletide revelry, "when England was Merry England," and

"'Twas Christmas broached the mightiest ale;
'Twas Christmas told the merriest tale."

Close your eyes on drab to-day, and you can see the fire "with well-dried logs supplied," leaping and roaring up the wide chimney of the baronial hall; the huge table groaning under its burden of lusty brawn, of boar's head "crested with bays and rosemary"; the huge sirloin, the plum-porridge and Christmas pie, and the wassail "in good brown bowls garnished with ribbons."

We watch the merry masquers pouring into the hall, and laugh aloud at their frolics and antics, and from the snowy wastes without our snug sanctuary we hear the carols "roared with blithesome din."

Our Host.

And our host. Was ever man so ruddy of visage, so jovially rotund, so large of heart? Like Sir Roger de Coverley, his prototype, he loves to "rejoice the hearts of the poor at this season, and to see the whole village merry in his great hall." For twelve days he sets his "small beer running to everyone that calls for it," and mountains of cold beef and mince-pies vanish before the lusty appetites of tenants and villagers alike.

But his proudest moment is that which ushers in the boar's head, as prelude to the great Christmas-day feast with which he regales his guests. Heralded by a flourish of trumpets, borne aloft on a dish of gold or silver, and escorted by doughty knights and fair ladies, 't makes its stately entry into the banqueting hall to the strains of—

"The boar's head in hand bring I, Render praise to God on high!"

In the wake of this lordly dish follows the peacock, "food for lovers and meat for lords," with gilt beak and gay-colored plumage, carried by the fairest lady guest, with her retinue of singing ladies, little less fair than herself.

And these are but the heralds of the feast, which includes geese and pheasants, capons, and pies of carp-tongues, hams and sirloins—and so on, through the long and succulent list of Christmas fare to furmety, plum-porridge, and mince-pies of Gargantuan proportions.

Lord of Misrule.

And now, the feast ended, the last toast drunk, and the last song sung, the "Lord of Misrule"—the "Master of Merry Disports"—takes up his sceptre, and under his rule fun and jollity reign supreme. The mischievous pranks of himself and his satellites keep the hall in jovial disorder and uproarious gaiety until sides ache with laughter, and the coming of the mummers is hailed as a relief.

Here they come, streaming into the hall—Father Christmas, with holly-bough and wassail-bowl, followed by his retinue—St. George, the gallant knight, the Grand Turk and the Dragon of fearsome mein, the little girl bearing a branch of mistletoe, the doctor armed with a mammoth pill-box, and the parish beadle swelling with the dignity of his office. To the beating of drums and the discordant sound of weird instruments they enter to play their drama and to convulse all once more with their absurd antics.

And now the mummers have gone, regaled and rewarded, to give place to the carollers, and to the waits, who distend purple cheeks almost to the bursting-point in their efforts to extract the last blatant ounce out of their frozen instruments. And what weird instruments they are! One is a brassy affair carried round the musician's neck; the fiddle is much in evidence, and there is another curious article, a kind of coach horn-bugle.

Banqueters and revellers, Lords of Misrule and mummers, have long been dust. But how they did live in their day!

Stamp Will Carry

A lace or mull tie.
A pair of gloves.
Flat leather pen wiper.
Bodkin case with three bodkins.
A favorite poem made into a booklet.
A pair of fine lisle or silk stockings.
A home made booklet of a dozen reliable chafing dish recipes.
A blotter, the upper side made of a picture postcard of yourself.
An envelope of lavender linen filled with dried lavender flowers to perfume household linen.
And last, but not least, a Christmas letter full of good cheer to some one who is lonesome or ill or discouraged.

MERRIE OLDE ENGLAND . . .

It is certain that very early in the Christian era Christmas was celebrated in Britain, mingling in its festivities some of the winter festival customs of the ancient Britons and the Roman invaders, for traces of those celebrations are still seen in some of the Christmas customs of modern times.

The ancient Goths and Saxons called their festival Yule. Throughout the middle ages and down to the reformation the festival of Christmas ingrafted on the pagan rites of Yule continued throughout Christendom to be universally celebrated with every mark of rejoicing. On the adoption of a new system of faith by most of the northern nations of Europe in the sixteenth century the Lutheran and Anglican churches retained the celebration of Christmas and other festivals which Calvinists rejected absolutely, denouncing the observance of all such days except Sunday, as superstitious and unscriptural.

Alfred Set Twelve Days.

During the reign of Alfred the Great a law was passed in relation to holidays, by virtue of which the twelve days after the Nativity of our Saviour were set apart for the celebration of the Christmas festival. Some writers are of the opinion that but for Alfred's strict observance of the "full twelve holy days" he would not have been defeated by the Danes in 878, for it is charged that his enjoyment of the festivities of Christmas hindered him from preparing for the battle.

We find that in 961 King Edgar celebrated the Christmas festival with great splendor at York, and in 1013 Ethelred kept his Christmas with the brave citizens of London who had defended the capital with a siege and stoutly resisted Swegen, the tyrant king of the Danes.

Edward the Confessor, it is noted, celebrated the first Christmas festival of his coronation with great rejoicing, and in 1066 on Christmas day, William the Conqueror was crowned King of England at Westminster. The Norman kings and nobles who now became rulers of England, displayed their taste for magnificence in the most remarkable manner at their coronations, tournaments and their celebrations of Christmas, Easter and Whitsuntide.

Minstrels Made Merry.

At the Christmas feast minstrels played on various musical instruments during dinner, and sang or told tales afterwards, both in the hall and in the chamber to which the king and his nobles retired for amusement. Thus it is written of a court minstrel:

"Before the King he set him down,
And took his harp of merry sound;
And, as he full well can,
Many merry notes he began."

In 1067 the Conqueror kept a grand Christmas in London, having invited a number of the Saxon chiefs to participate, and also caused a proclamation to be read in all the churches declaring it to be his will that "all the citizens of London should enjoy their national laws as in the days of King Edward."

"In the hall, the serf and vassal
Held, that night, their Christmas wassail;
Many a carol, old and saintly,
Sang the mistrels and the waits."

Puritans Barred Gayety.

Thus for a long time all the succeeding rulers observed with great ceremony the coming of Christmas, until in 1644 when an ordinance was passed decreeing that Christmas day should be observed as a feast instead of a festival, and that the workaday world should not cease from its labors. Preaching in churches was proscribed, the hanging of Christmas greens prohibited. Instead of the churches which had formerly welcomed Christmas from every church tower the crier passed along the silent streets of the town, ringing in a monotone, "No Christmas! No Christmas!" The people received what they regarded as an infringement of their ancient rights with sullen disapproval, "and no public act," says Macaulay, "seems to have irritated the common people more."

The joy with which the restoration of Charles was received was due, no doubt, to the uncompromising strictness of the extreme Puritans. With the "merrie monarch" there came back all old customs, and it was at a Christmas feast that he knighted a loin of beef, giving the world the highly prized sirloin.

In no country to-day is Christmas observed with more joyous celebration than in England, with its Christmas carols, its Christmas decorations, its plum pudding, and its many customs which have been handed down from a very early period.

Some Quaint Customs of Old England at Christmas Time

According to Lord Rosebery, Christmas would long ago have died out as a popular festival if it had not been for Charles Dickens. There is much to be said for that view, but it would be easy to show that from the very earliest days the Feast of Yule has been observed as a time of rejoicing and special merrymaking, except for the interval of Puritan rule, when an abortive attempt was made to suppress the observance altogether.

It was probably to bring a little merriment into men's lives at this dull season that the Pope Julius I., in the middle of the fourth century, altered the observance of Christmas from the time of the Jewish Passover in March to the present date. The festival is, in fact, a perpetuation of the Saturnalia of the Romans, and not a few of its oldest customs have been borrowed from those pagan roysterers.

But whatever their origin, these observances were calculated to provoke that boisterous mirth which is the best antidote to the spleen produced by winter skies. Every merry party dragging in the Yule log is unconsciously perpetuating an ancient rite of the Scandinavians, who, at their feast of Jul or Yule, lit great bon fires in honor of their god, Thor.

Sunset on Christmas Eve is the proper time for observing the custom. At that hour the able-bodied men should sally forth to the Yule log, decorate it with ribbons and sprays of holly, and fasten round it a strong rope by which to drag it indoors. At the entrance a royal reception is prepared, under the direction of the Lord of Misrule, who has been previously chosen to take charge of the Christmas revels. The furniture is all put back against the walls, so as to leave a clear avenue for the party, who with a mighty stamping of feet, drag their weighty burden to the wide open hearth, while the rest of the company sing the old refrain.

"Ho! bring with a noise, my merry, merry boys,
The Christmas log to the firing."

Each member of the party is invited in turn to sit or stand on the log and sing a song or tell a story, while the wassail bowl of steaming ale is passed round, in token of the ushering-in of the season of hospitality and good-will towards men. Then the great log is rolled on to the hearth, and kindled with a brand saved up from last year's fire, and the flames are soon leaping up the wide-mouthed chimney with a welcome roar.

Carolling Necessary.

No Christmas in England is considered complete even now without its carol-singing, which has enjoyed a distinct revival in recent years. Carols originated probably in the songs sung between the scenes of the mystery and miracle plays of the Middle Ages, when bands of itinerant minstrels toured from place to place and received usually a hearty welcome at the big halls and village inns throughout the countryside. Of similar ancient origin are the "Waits," those disturbers of Yuletide slumbers, who were formerly known as "musical watchmen."

The mummers, maskers, or guizards, were once as regular visitors at this season as the carol-singers, and also traced their descent from the minstrel players of the Middle Ages. Now their appearance at Christmas time is considered something of a rarity; but in Staffordshire the mummers are still an annual institution, and even in London a party of grotesque characters sometimes goes the round of the West End on Christmas Eve.

There were several old stock plays, of a more or less martial character, the favorite one being "St. George and the Dragon." The cast includes Old Father Christmas, the Grand Turk, the gallant Knight St. George, a ferocious-looking Dragon, Robin Hood in Lincoln green, and Maid Marian in scarlet bodice and kirtle. The mummers, having announced their arrival by the beating of a drum and the playing of any other musical instruments they have been able to secure, being admitted to the kitchen, and performed their bloodthirsty play, before the assembled household. Whatever may be the play, the ending invariably hints that some recognition of the performance in money will not be taken amiss.

Wassailing the Orchards.

In Devonshire, and some districts of Wales, the picturesque custom of wassailing the orchards on Christmas Eve or Twelfth Night is still preserved. The neighboring farmers provided with their guns and a large jar of cider, gather at an appointed spot, where they are joined by the parson, the clerk and the schoolmaster. The party then adjourn to the nearest large orchard, where the best tree is anointed with cider by the beadle or other well-known resident who apostrophises it thus: "O tree! bear fruit and flourish; thine owner nourish, give wealth and fruit. O tree." The farmers fire their guns through the branches, and drink cider for good luck before passing on to perform a similar office for the next orchard on the list.

The boar's head, which made so imposing a display at every Christmas banquet in olden days, is now a fast disappearing institution, though toothsome imitations of the original are consumed every Christmas at the tables of the rich. The custom is a survival from the Middle Ages, when a whole boar, richly gilt, was served up by way of brawn.

"The Devil's Knell."

Many quaint observances are kept up in different parts of England, where they can be traced back for many centuries. Thus, in Norfolk, Gloucester, Somerset, and one or two other countries, the "Devil's Knell" is tolled on the church bells in Christmas week. At Hazey, in Lincolnshire, there is a peculiar custom known as "Throwing the Hood," in which all the people of the place engage, and whoever succeeds in capturing the hood is regaled liberally with good cheer.

In Oxfordshire it has been the privilege of the maidservant for many centuries to ask a manservant at Christmas time for holly and evergreen with which to decorate the premises; and if he refuse or neglect to bring in a supply, the maids are justified in stealing a pair of his trousers, and nailing them to the gate in the yard or highway. By his refusal the unfortunate manservant also incurs the penalty of being debarred from the privilege of the mistletoe.

The Christmas Tree, with its lighted candles and many colored baubles, has been a comparatively recent importation from Germany, from whence also hails Santa Claus, who pays his mysterious visits to the little ones' bedsides on Christmas Eve, and fills their stockings with toys and sweets.

The Spirit of Christmas.

Christmas comes but once a year, says the old song, but this would be a sadder and colder world if the spirit of Christmas were with us only once a year. That spirit makes us merry and glad, but there is nothing selfish about the gladness. The sordid, mean men has his pleasures, but he cannot be happy and glad in the spirit of this gracious and cheerful season. The Christmas spirit is that of forgiveness, generosity and good-will. It is altruism that brings us quiet inner joy. We are truly glad only when and because we have, within our means and resources, material and moral, made others glad.

Christmas is essentially a children's holiday, and the grown-ups enjoy it in proportion to their imaginative and spontaneous sympathy with the spirit of childhood. To create for every one a merry Christmas is to be young and free again—to forget care, resentment, petty rivalries, malice and uncharitableness. It is to rejoice in a deep consciousness of human brotherhood and peace. It is "to pledge a hand to all our friends," to think kindly even of utter strangers and enemies, to relieve misery and diffuse well-being.

We cannot, this side of Utopia, make every day a Christmas in this full sense, but we can strive to live up more and more to the Christmas spirit during the other days of the long year. We can resolve to be more considerate, more thoughtful, more helpful, more open-minded and open-hearted, more optimistic, more human and sympathetic. Many of our difficulties would melt away or become far less formidable if we carried more of the Christmas mood or spirit over into the prosaic and strenuous days. This spirit never fails: it always "works" and blesses those who display it even more than those toward whom it is displayed.

A merry Christmas, and more scope and space to its beautiful, ennobling spirit!

What Always Happens.

"Does your rich uncle send you something for Christmas?"

"Oh, yes. Every year he sends along just enough to make us think how much he might have sent if he'd wanted to."

Christmas stockings should be provided for all the young children. A child's stocking will not be large enough, so let him borrow one of "daddy's." Let him hang it at the end of his bed before going to sleep. He will have much enjoyment in the anticipation of his pleasure.

Exeter Advocate.

Sanders & Gresch, Props.

THURSDAY DEC. 18, 1913

The following from the St. Marys Journal is to the point.—"Why should Canadian ham and bacon be ten or twelve cents dearer here than in England? There is no use in making the excuse that labor is better paid in Canada than in England. The excuse is bad, because the bacon is produced by Canadian labor. The Englishman in England pays this cost of production, and also the cost of transportation by rail and ocean. Therefore we ought to get the bacon and ham for a good deal less than is paid in England, instead of ten or twelve cents a pound more. Canada is a storehouse of food, producing more than it can consume, and helping to feed the rest of the world. Yet the price of food is far higher here than in England, which does not produce nearly enough food for its own needs. The very best of our own products are carried past our doors and sold in England at prices which would not buy the inferior foods in Canada. WHY?

For some time after the winter fair was established at Guelph there was a doubt in the minds of many as to the ultimate success. People who had been disappointed by the fall fairs were rather skeptical regarding the future of an exhibition established solely for educational purposes. People would not attend a fair merely to see a live stock display, or to receive information by means of lectures and demonstrations that would be helpful in their business. Special attractions, something to entertain, must be added in order to get the people out. These skeptical views have been entirely disproved, not only by the experience at Guelph but that of every other winter fair in Canada. The attendance at these fairs grows larger every year. A large number of farmers from the vicinity of Exeter are attending the fair at Guelph this week.

The predominant feature of the Dominion Parliament during the past week was the Premier's presentation of the Naval Bill, which has been received by the people of Great Britain as a magnificent stroke of statesmanship. The gift of $35,000,000 for the building of three Dreadnoughts, with the privilege of their becoming a part of the Canadian Navy, should the people decide to have one, has been received with favor all over the Empire, and Mr. Borden has been showered with congratulations on his magnificent policy. A sketch of the bill will be found on another page. The Liberals oppose the bill because it does not accord with their own program as brought out in 1910.

Twenty years ago turkeys sold for 7c. a pound; to-day they sell at 20c. Twenty years ago The Advocate sold for one dollar a year; to-day it sells for one dollar, and the editor is expected to wait ten years for his money, whereas the farmer gets cash for his turkeys. But the cost of living high never bothers the editor. His worry is that he has to live low.

$1500 FOR PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN

After nearly two hours discussion on Wednesday the County Council, by a vote 15 to 12 made a grant of $1500 as the start for a Publicity Campaign which will bring the County of Huron before the outside world by means of well prepared and reliable literature, and also advance its interests in such other ways as may be seen advisable.

Following is the motion carried.—"That this Council grant the sum of $1500 to aid in starting a Publicity Campaign for the County of Huron, as outlined by the committee appointed for that purpose, and that said amount shall remain in the treasury and shall be paid out by the treasurer only on the certificate of the president, vice-president or treasurer of the association accounts for the same to be placed in the hands of the Council at each session."

The Executive committee met in the Court House on Wednesday evening, and an outline of the subjects to be dealt with in the proposed booklet on the County, was drawn up and arrangements inaugurated for collecting the necessary information and compiling it. The subjects are divided into sets of three classes each, which are to be written up by sub-committees of three, who have power to incur any reasonable expense which will help in making their write up as complete and authoritative as possible. Another meeting of the whole Executive will be held at Clinton early in January, when it is hoped to have the pamphlet fully compiled and revised and ready for publication.

FLYING SAW KILLS FARMER.

A fatal accident of a shocking nature occurred at about 5 o'clock on Thursday afternoon on the farm of Mr. Steven Hickey, near the Village of Hamley Mr. Mark Tinny, of the Crediton Road, Stephen Township was the victim. The unfortunate man was cutting wood with a circular saw driven by a traction engine, when the bolt on the shaft of the saw became loosened, and without a moment's warning the saw flew from the frame and struck him on the left side of the face and on the left shoulder. His shoulder was almost completely torn off, and he survived the accident only a few moments. He leaves a widow and two children.

HAND CUT OF

Kincardine, Dec. 3.—Wm. Wylie, a farmer residing near Amberley, had his left hand so badly mutilated in a straw cutter that it had to be amputated at the wrist. Something went wrong with the machine, and in an effort to remove the obstruction, Mr. Wylie put his hand in. It started suddenly, and all the fingers were cut off, and the hand was drawn in and squeezed so horribly that it had to be ampu[illegible]

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY OF THE JAMES-ST. METHODIST CHURCH.

The "Adams Settlement" was established one and a quarter miles east of Exeter. Here Byron arrived July 5th, 1847. Here also another "Philip the Evangelist," arrived whose name was Philip James. He had preached at H. Adams' house March 9, 1847. Philip James died March 1st, 1851. Another like him was Arthur Doble. He had emigrated to America, and seeing the need invested his life in the ministry. In April, 1848, Rev. John Williams sailed from Bristol and arrived at Quebec and is remembered by the elders. A church called Ebenezer was built in the Adams Settlement. It was the modest Cathedral of those early days and the light of its altar fires still shines.

In 1842 the Welsh came to Canada and settled in Usborne. In 1844 the Shaptons, Perhakes and Sanders arrived. In 1847 another group of families arrived. In 1852 Exeter was a few houses surrounded by primeval woods. Rev. R. Hurley was the first resident B.C. minister in Exeter, 1851.

In 1852 James Pickard came to Exeter. The first religious service was in the house of James Pickard. The first B.C. church still stands on Main St. and is used as a shoe shop. It was dedicated Feb. 24th, 1856. The assemblies were so large at the three services that there were three overflow meetings in the store house of James Pickard. The ministers on the occasion were Revs. J. Edwards, J. Webster and J. Tucker. On Monday evening Feb. 25th, five hundred persons were present, again the storehouse was commissioned. The total proceeds of the opening amounted to 57 pounds.

Revs. J. Williams and J. Dix were together on the Exeter circuit in 1856. Providence, west of Exeter, then flourished. Four features characterize these times—Liberality, Spiritual Life, Missionary Zeal and Temperance.

Rev. John Edwards and D. Canteion were yoke fellows. The latter was colleague and married. He occupied the parsonage and his superintendent lived with him. This was a reversal of the ordinary, but serves as an example of what the Fathers called "elasticity of Methodism" to meet the necessity of the time.

A Missionary deputation visited in Jan. 1856, Madge's School House, Adams Settlement and Providence, and secured $150.00.

Next in the apostolic succession appears Rev. John Hooper and colleagues, H. J. Colwell and H. Ebbott. By 1862 Exeter was prominent in Huron. Larger propositions for church and state were in evidence.

The church on Main Street was too small and again the princely generosity of James Pickard is in evidence in the plan for the new church, James Street. Willing hands and hearts co-operated some of whom still survive. When the brick wall on the west side was completed a wind blew it down. This, however, was only an incident in the construction.

The church was dedicated in 1862 with delightful dedicatory ceremonies. Vast concourses assembled. Fourteen hundred persons took tea.

In 1863 the B. C. Conference was held in this church, beginning the 4th of June. It was the 9th annual conference in Canada. In 1870 side galleries and the tower were added. In more recent years the eastern vestibule and a vestry were built.

In the succession of ministers Rev. E. Roberts with his colleague L. W. Wickett, followed by Rev. John Hooper. Next came Rev. Wm Hooper, who was pastor for four years. With him were associated R. T. Curtis, Wm. Beer J. H. Collins, S. H. Rice, W. Quance, Mrs. Wm. Bissett is a daughter of Rev. Wm Hooper.

Rev. Henry Kenner, now of Manitoba Conference, and Mark Hardy follow. Then appears the name of the now venerable Jesse Whitlock, 28 Oak St., Toronto. He was succeeded by Rev. J. W. Butcher, with John Holmes and S. J. Allin. Mr Butcher entered the B C. Conference in 1843. He began assisting Rev. F Metherall in 1842.

From 1879 to 1883 the last period before the Methodist Union in Canada, Rev. Geo. Webber was pastor. This pastorate he always declared was the most enjoyable of his ministry. Dr. W. S. Pascoe succeeded and in turn was followed by Rev. Jas Graham, who was the first to occupy the present parsonage. Mr Graham was the father of the present Secretary of Education, Dr. J. W. Graham, Toronto.

In succession the following names appear,—B. Clement, A. L. Russell, Geo. Jackson, N R. Willoughby, C. W. Brown, James Hannon, A. H Going, R. Hobbs and W. Geo. H. McAllister.

The Alliance is in a very flourishing condition, not only in membership, but also financially. The most important item of the evening's business was the report of the Penny Bay contest, which has been going on the past fall to help pay for the new piano. The captains were chosen at the start, Miss Hilda Schenk, leader of the white and Freeman Motlock of the green. When all had reported the proceeds amounted to $94, and the whites winners by about $3. The contest was a close one and the interest keen.

Our stores are beginning to put on the Xmas appearance. Holiday goods are being displayed. What makes the children so good and willing to do their best to please their parents? The poor old man will know when he digs down—and then taxes are so high.

Miss Myrtle Hintzel and Ivan Hintzel spent a few days the past week visiting friends in Guelph.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

CLANDEBOYE

A very interesting event took place at St. James Church, Clandeboye, Wednesday Dec. 5th, when Miss Bertha daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Flannery Cunningham, of this place, was united in marriage to Mr. Elmer Henry of Biddulph. Promptly at 12 o'clock to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding March, played by Mrs Rev. Wm. Lowe the bride entered the alter leaning on the arm of her father.

The bride looked very pretty in a gown of white silk, trimmed with pearl and carried a huge bouquet of pink and white carnations and wore the customary veil with orange blossoms.

The bridesmaid, Miss Lillian Henry, looked very handsome in a gown of white satin with silver trimmings and carried a bouquet of roses. Mr. Wm. Cunningham was best man. Rev. Wm. Lowe, rector, performed the ceremony.

After the ceremony the bride and groom were accompanied to the bride's home in an automobile. Later in the afternoon the happy couple left on an extended wedding trip to Toronto and other eastern points. Upon their return they will reside in this vicinity

Last Wednesday evening Miss Cunningham was presented by the congregation of St. James' Church with a beautiful carving set. An address was read by Miss Clara Lewis and the presentation made by Miss Letta O'Neil.

James Street Church Shed

There is a large number of people who use this shed who do not in any way give any support to the church.

The Trustees think that all such should contribute in some way to the funds of the church for the splendid accommodation which they avail themselves of, and would intimate that any wishing to do so should remit or hand same to their secretary-treasurer, Mr S. Martin.

ROYAL PURPLE Stock & Poultry Specifics

FREE We will send absolutely free, for the asking, postpaid, one of our large 64-page books (with insert), on the common diseases of stock and poultry. Tells how to feed all kinds of heavy and light horses, colts and mares, milch cows, calves and fattening steers, also how to keep and feed poultry so that they will lay as well in winter as in summer. It contains 300 recommends from all over Canada, from people who have used our goods. No farmer should be without it.

You can fatten cattle and hogs in a month's less time by using our Royal Purple Stock Specific than you could possibly do without it, thereby saving a month's feed and labor and the cost to you will not be more than $1.50 for six pigs or $1.00 for one steer. It will keep your horses in show condition with ordinary feed. If you have a poor, miserable-looking animal on your place try it on this one first and see the marvellous result which will be obtained. Our Stock Specific will increase the milk flow three to five lbs. per cow per day, while being fed in the stable. A 50c package will last a cow or horse 70 days.

ROYAL PURPLE POULTRY SPECIFIC will make your hens lay just as well in the winter as in the summer, and will keep them free from disease. These goods are pure and unadulterated. We do not use any cheap filler to make a large package, entirely different from any on the market at the present time.

LOCAL OPTION

ssince we voted on local option and no attempt has been made to repeal it. The town was never more prosperous and its future is the brightest.—J. E. Addis Chairman Citizens League.

BUSINESS INCREASED—COLLECTION EASIER.

Maxville, Ont.—This is to certify that I have lived in Maxville all my lifetime under a License System and under Local Option, and in my opinion there is no comparison between the two systems

We have two good hotels here and the traveller is well used. My business has increased and collecting is easier. —Alex. H. Robertson, Notary Public for Ontario, Commissioner High Court of Justice.

BAD DEBTS DECREASE

Southampton, Ont.—There has been marked progress in our town under Local Option, and our people are better satisfied now than ever before with the results. We have been in business in Southampton for nearly sixteen years and under Local Option business with us steadily improves and bad debts decrease.—Burns Bros., Bakers and Grocers.

TRADE NEVER BETTER

Paisley, Ont.—Local Option in Paisley in my opinion, has done a great amount of good. My own business has improved and several men in other lines of business have told me that their trade never was better.

Drunkenness on the street is very rare, even on Race or Fair Day, and it is a striking contrast to towns where license is granted.—H. B. Putman, General Dry Goods Merchant.

INCREASES CAPABILITY OF WORKMEN

Southampton, Ont.—For eleven years I have been Superintendent of the Southampton branch of the Knechtel Furniture Company. I have ninety men in employment. My experience has been that from the standpoint of a manufacturer conditions are very much improved. By careful observation I find that men are more regular at their work and more capable of doing it. We have by far fewer accidents. From this standpoint it is a matter of economy.

I am convinced that Local Option is a good thing and heartily commend it. H. Grasser.

BANK DEPOSITS INCREASE

Winchester, Ont.—Without hesitation we state that morally Winchester has been greatly improved.

Our largest employers of labor are strong advocates for local option on the ground that men are steadier, lose less time and do better work than they did unter the license system.

We are informed that Bank deposits have materially increased during the past five years.

The rate of taxation has not increased it has in fact averaged lower for the five years of local option than for several years previous and is a very low rate for the present year.

The above extracts are from a statement signed by twenty-five business and professional men. The genuineness of the signatures is attested by N. W. Beach, Manager of The M. F. Beach, Co. Limited.

Woman's Hair Made Glorious

PARISIAN SAGE STOPS FALLING HAIR AND DANDRUFF.

Nothing so detracts from the attractiveness of woman as dull, faded, lusterless hair.

There is no excuse for this condition nowadays, because notice is hereby given to the readers of The Advocate that Parisian Sage, the quick acting hair restorer, is sold with a money back guarantee at 50 cents a large bottle.

Since its introduction into Canada, Parisian Sage has had an immense sale, and here are the reasons.

It is safe and harmless. Contains no dye or poisonous lead.

It cures dandruff in two weeks, by killing the dandruff germ.

It stops falling hair.

It promptly stops itching of the scalp

It makes the hair soft and luxuriant.

It gives life and beauty to the hair

It is not sticky or greasy.

It is the daintiest perfumed hair tonic

It is the best, the most pleasant and invigorating hair dressing made.

Fight shy of the druggist who offers you a substitute, he is unworthy of your confidence.

Made only in Canada by the R. T. Reed Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package.

ZURICH

Mrs J. K. Wink and daughter Florence are visiting the former's mother, Mrs P Hauch.—Miss Myrtle Horner has just completed a quilt containing 4149 patches. This is the record and certainly requires lots of patience.—Mr. Samuel Eidighoffer, who has been in Western Canada for some months has returned to his home on the 14th Con.—Mr. Conrad Keller who has recently disposed of his farm at the 16th Con. has purchased Mr. Chas. Erll's dwelling recently vacated by Mrs. H. Weber. The new owner and his family will move in at once.—John Curry, a pioneer of Goderich, died on Tuesday last. He was 74 years of age. Deceased was a half brother of Mr. J. C. Conway, of this village.—Among those who attended the funeral of the late Mrs. H. Kalbfleisch were her son William from Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. John Schilbe and daughter Miss Georgina, of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Abel Schilbe of Waterloo, and her brother Mr. Henry Rickbeil of Cavalier, N. D.—Fire destroyed an apple drying building and shed, the property of Jacob Meiddinger, of the Zurich road, at an early hour on Friday morning, involving a loss of $1,000, with no insurance. The dwelling house had a close call.

The cabin and other parts of the schooner Julia Larsen, which went to pieces on the rocks near Michigan in September, have drifted onto the shore of the lake near Dryadale. — The necessary $200.00 having been raised by subscription, the Jackson Manufacturing Company, of Clinton, will now proceed to put in a plant for the manufacture of boys' clothing at Zurich. A gasoline engine will supply the power. A dynamo for light and heat for the pressing irons will be a part of the plant. The Baptist church, now used as a schoolhouse, will be used by the company. Help to operate the machinery has been secured.

Routley of Sunshine is in Victoria Hospital, London undergoing treatment. We hope for his speedy recovery.—Mr. Geo. Godbolt of Sunshine is acting on the jury at Goderich this week.—Rev. Mr. Fletcher held a Cottage prayer meeting at the home of Mr. Andrew Turnbull on Thursday evening last.—Mr. W. Penwarden of Chatham was called home to the bedside of his mother on Friday last; since then she has slightly improved. We hope for her recovery. —Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Medd gave an Oyster Supper on Saturday night to the old and New Executive committees of Elimville Adult Bible Class in honor of Mr. Medd's Birthday. A enjoyable evening was by all.—A number from here took in the Golden Anniversary at the James St. Church, Exeter.

HARPLEY

Mr. John Sherritt, who has spent a time in the west arrived home on Saturday evening.—A very sad and fatal accident happened to Mr. Mack Kenny on Thursday evening of last week just as they were about to quit work. He was operating a circular saw cutting rails for Mr. Joseph Hickey when a bolt came loose allowing the saw to swing around striking him in the left cheek and left shoulder inflicting a deep wound in both cases. Dr. Hotson of Parkhill was immediately called by telephone and was quickly on the scene and dressed the wound to-gether to make it presentable. The Coroner Dr. Dr Campbell of Zurich (according to law) was notified and he also made an examination of the wound and the scene of the accident reporting the same to the Crown Attorney of Goderich who called for an inquest. A jury was empannelled and met on Friday at 12 o'clock and after viewing the remains adjourned to meet on the 12th inst at Hannan's Hall of Shipka. The funeral was held on Saturday to Grand Bend cemetery and was largely attended Rev. Mr. Carriere officiating. He leaves to mourn his untimely end a widow and two small children who have the sympathy of the communirty in their sad affliction.

Mr. Geo. B. Patrick of Lucan is visiting his daughter Mrs. Roy Sherritt for some time.

WHALEN.

Mr. Samuel Gunning gave a party and supper to the trustees, their wives and a number of other friends on Wednesday evening of last week in honor of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Millson who leave in a few days for there future home at Hensall. The sumptuous repast of oysters and fowl did credit to Mr. and Mrs. Gunning. A very sociable time was spent in conversation, games and singing.—Mr. Frank Squire and sister Lottie spent Sunday with friends at Exeter.—Clarence Willson visited a friend in London Township on Sunday.

SILVER WEDDING—On Friday evening the neighbors and relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. John Morley gathered at the home of Mr. Morley to help celebrate the anniversary of their 25th wedding day, about 65 were present and were treated by the kind host and hostess to a very sumptuous wedding dinner after which all amused themselves in games of one kind and another. Mrs. Morley's friends brought with them some beautiful and useful presents which testifies to the esteem that Mr. and Mrs. Morley are held in Mrs. Morley thanked the friends for the beautiful shower of silverware they bestowed upon her.

Will Give $500 To Sick Readers of The Advocate

Famous Scientist Who Originated the Now Wonderful "Home Treatment" Offers $1.00 Package Free to Sick and ailing

In order that every reader of the Advocate who may not have heard of this wonderful "Home Treatment" may have an opportunity to test this celebrated medicine, the new famous scientist, Dr. James W. Kidd, offers to give absolutely free a full size $1.00 package to five hundred readers of this paper, to prove the wonderful claims which have been made for it. In making this offer the scientist said, I know that there are many people who have been suffering for years with some chronic disease and many of them have spent large sums of money seeking a cure. I know that these people hesitate about investing money in medicine because they have despaired of ever getting well. Thousands have told me that story and many thousands of the same people have told me afterwards that my treatment had cured them after doctors and everything else had failed. I want to prove to a limited number—no matter what the disease, no matter how long they may have suffered, no matter how blue and discouraged—that my treatment really and actually does accomplish the wonderful results that have been reported."

People who suffer from Rheumatism, Kidney Trouble, Stomach Trouble, Liver or Bowel Disorders, Catarrh, Bronchitis Asthma, Chronic Coughs, Weak Lungs, Lumbago, Piles, Urinary Disorders, Female Weaknesses of any kind, the weak worn out, broken-down, and despondent will be delighted at the effect of a few doses. This wonderful treatment creates a fine appetite and helps the digestive organs to carry on their functions as they should. It strengthens the kidneys, too, and drives rheumatism poisons from the blood as if by magic. That is why people who try it become so enthusiastic.

Any reader of The Advocate who will try this extraordinary medicine that has created so much excitement by its cures can obtain absolutely free a full $1.00 treatment by simply filling in the coupon below or writing a letter describing their case in their own words, if they prefer, and mailing it to-day to James W. Kidd, Toronto, Canada. No money need be sent and no charge of any kind will be made.

As this offer is limited, you should write at once, in order to be sure to receive free treatment.

NATURE'S ESSENCE.---Extracted From Forest Plants.

Nature's laws are perfect, but disease follows if these laws are not obeyed. Go straight to nature for the cure, to the forest; there are mysteries here that we can fathom for you. Take the bark of the wild-cherry tree, the root of mandrake, stone, Oregon grape root, queen's root, bloodroot and golden seal, make a scientific, non-alcoholic extract of them with just the right proportions and you have Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It took Dr. Pierce, with the assistance of two learned chemists, eight years of hard work experimenting to make this pure glyceric extract and alterative of the greatest efficiency and without the use of a particle of alcohol.

E. Williams, Esq.

Just the sort of remedy you need to make rich, red blood, and cure that lassitude and feeling of nerve exhaustion. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery bears the stamp of Public Approval and has sold more largely in the past forty years than any other blood purifier and stomach tonic.

"Some time ago I got out of health—my stomach seemed to be the seat of the trouble," writes Mr. Ezra Williams, of Belleville, Kans. "I commenced to doctor with all the doctors at home as well as with other specialists on stomach and digestive organs. None seemed to do any good—in fact, most of the medicines did me harm. Finally, I wrote to Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., who replied, stating that I had liver complaint with indigestion and constipation, and advised Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets.'
"The 'Discovery' and 'Pellets,' have 'put me on my feet again'—seemed to be just what I needed. I could not have recovered without them."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are for liver ills.

"I should like to go," said Cecil, quickly. "But it is no use being there before seven, for Madame Lechertier has her classes so much later in this hot weather."

"Well, go up at seven, then, and have a good talk with her; make her understand that we none of us think a bit the worse of him for it and that we are vexed with Cousin James for having been so disagreeable and harsh. You might, if you like, go to meet Roy; he comes back at half-past eight, and he will bring you home again."

Cecil cheered up a good deal at this idea; she took Lance round the garden with her, that he might help her to gather flowers for Sigrid, and even smiled a little when of his own accord the little fellow brought her a beautiful passion-flower which he had gathered from the house-wall.

"This one's for my dear Herr Frithiof!" he exclaimed, panting a little with the exertions he had made to reach it. "It's all for his own self, and I picked it for him, 'cause it's his very favorite."

"You know, Cecil," said her mother, as she returned to the seat under the veranda and began to arrange the flowers in a basket, "I have another theory as to this affair. It happened exactly a week after that day at the sea-side when we all had such a terrible fright about Roy and Sigrid. Frithiof had a long run in the sun, which you remember was very hot that day; then he had all the excitement of rowing and rescuing them, and though at the time it seemed no strain on him at all, yet I think it is quite possible that the shock may have brought back a slight touch of the old trouble."

"And yet it seemed to do him good at the time," said Cecil. "He looked so bright and fresh when he came back. Besides, to a man accustomed as he once was to a very active life, the rescue was, after all, no such great exertion."

Mrs. Boniface sighed.

"It would grieve me to think that it was really caused by that, but if it is so, there is all the more reason that they should clearly understand that the affair makes no difference at all in our opinion of him. It is just possible that it may be his meeting with Lady Romiaux which is the cause. Sigrid told me they had accidentally come across her again, and that it had tried him very much."

Cecil turned away to gather some ferns from the rockery; she could not bear to discuss that last suggestion. Later on in the afternoon it was with a very heavy heart that she reached the model lodgings and knocked at the door that had now become so familiar to her.

Swanhild flew to greet her with her usual warmth. It was easy to see that the child knew nothing of the trouble hanging over the house. "What lovely flowers! How good of you!" she cried.

But Sigrid could not speak; she only kissed her, then turned to Swanhild and the flowers once more.

"They are beautiful," she said. "Don't you think we might spare some for Mrs. Hallifield? Run and take her some, dear."

When the child ran off, she drew Cecil into their bedroom. The two girls sat down together on the bed, but Sigrid, usually the one to do most of the talking, was silent and dejected. Cecil saw at once that she must take the iniative.

"I have been longing to come and see you," she said. "But yesterday was so filled up. Father and mother are so sorry for all this trouble, and are very much vexed that Mr. Horner has behaved badly about it."

"They are very kind," said Sigrid, wearily. "Of course most employers would have prosecuted Frithiof, or, at any rate, discharged him."

"But, Sigrid, what can be the explanation of it? Oh, surely we can manage to find out somehow. Who can have put the note in his pocket?"

"What?" cried Sigrid. "Do not you, too, hold Mr. Boniface's opinion, and think that he himself did it unintentionally?"

"I!" cried Cecil, passionately. "Never! never! I am quite sure he had nothing whatever to do with it."

Sigrid flung her arms round her.

"Oh, how I love you for saying that!" she exclaimed.

She was recalled from her thoughts by Cecil's voice; it was sweet and gentle again now, and no longer vehement.

They went back to the sitting-room and began to prepare the evening meal; and when, presently, Frithiof returned from his work, the first thing he caught sight of on entering the room was Cecil's sweet open-looking face. She was standing by the table arranging flowers, but came forward quickly to greet him. Her color was a little deeper than usual, her hand-clasp a little closer, but otherwise she behaved exactly as if nothing unusual had happened.

"I have most unceremoniously asked myself to supper," she said, "for I have to meet Roy at half-past eight."

"It is very good of you to come," said Frithiof, gratefully.

His interview with Carlo Donati had done much for him, and had helped him through a very trying day at the shop, but though he had made a good start and had begun his new life bravely, and borne many disagreeables patiently, yet he was now miserably tired and depressed, just in the mood which craves most for human sympathy.

"Lance sent you this," she said, handing him the passion-flower and making him smile by repeating the child's words.

He seemed touched and pleased. Then, while Sigrid and Swanhild were busy in the kitchen, she told him what she knew of Donati's previous life, and how it was that he had gained this extraordinary power of sympathy and insight.

"I never met anyone like him," said Frithiof. "He is a hero and a saint, if ever there was one, yet without one touch of the asceticism which annoys one in most good people. That the idol of the operatic stage should be such a man as that seems to me wonderful.

"You mean because the life is a trying one?"

"Yes; because such very great popularity might be supposed to make a man conceited, and such an out-of-the-way voice might make him selfish and heedless of others, and to be so much run after might make him consider himself above ordinary mortals, instead of being ready, as he evidently is, to be the friend of any one who is in need."

"I am so glad you like him, and that you saw so much of him," said Cecil. "I wonder if you would just see me into a cab now, for I ought to be going."

He was pleased that she had asked him to do this; and when she had said good-bye to Sigrid and Swanhild, and was once more alone with him, walking through the big courtyard, he could not resist alluding to it.

"It is good of you," he said, "to treat me as though I were under no cloud. You have cheered me wonderfully."

"Oh," she said, "it is not good of me—you must not think that I believe you under a cloud at all. Nothing would ever make me believe that you had anything whatever to do with that five-pound note. It is a mystery that will some day be cleared up."

"That is what Signor Donati said. He, too, believed in me in spite of appearances being against me. And Sigrid says the same. With three people on my side I can wait more patiently."

Cecil had spoken very quietly, and quite without the passionate vehemence which had betrayed her secret to Sigrid, for now she was on her guard; but her tone conveyed to Frithiof just the trust and friendliness which she wished it to convey; and he went home again with a fresh stock of hope and courage in his heart.

Meanwhile Cecil paced gravely up and down the arrival platform at Charing Cross. Perhaps the anxiety had already left its traces on her face, for Roy at once noticed a change in her.

"Why, Cecil, what has come over you? You are not looking well," he said, as they got into a hansom and set off on their long drive.

"Father has not been well," she said, in explanation. "And I think we have all been rather upset by something that happened on Monday afternoon in the shop."

Then she told him exactly what had passed, and waited hopefully for his comments on the story. He knitted his brows in perplexity.

"I wish I had been at home," he said. "If only James Horner had not gone ferreting into it all this would never have happened. Frithiof would have discovered his mistake, and all would have been well."

"But you don't imagine that Frithiof put the note in his pocket?" said Cecil.

"Why, who else could have put it there? Of course he must have done it in absence of mind. Probably the excitement and strain of that unlucky afternoon at Britling Gap affected his brain in some way."

"I can not think that," she said. "And even if it were so, that is the last sort of thing he would do."

"But that is just the way when people's brains are affected, they do the most unnatural things; it is a known fact that young innocent girls will often in delirium use the most horrible language such as in real life they can not possibly have heard. Your honest man is quite likely under the circumstances to become a thief. Is not this the view that my father takes?"

"Yes," said Cecil. "But somehow—I thought—I hoped—that you would have trusted him."

"It doesn't in the least affect my opinion of his character. He was simply not himself when he did it. But one can't doubt such evidence as that. The thing was missed from the till and found pinned into his pocket, how can any reasonable being doubt that he himself put it there?"

"It may be unreasonable to refuse to believe it—I can not help that," said Cecil.

"But how can it possibly be explained on any other supposition?" he urged.

"I don't know," said Cecil; "at present it is a mystery. But I am as sure that he did not put it there as that I did not put it there."

"Women believe what they wish to believe, and utterly disregard logic," said Roy.

"It is not only women who believe in him. Carlo Donati has gone most carefully into every detail, and he believes in him."

"Then I wish he would give me his recipe," said Roy, with a sigh. "I am but a matter-of-fact, prosaic man of business, and can not make myself believe that black is white, however much I wish it. Have you seen Miss Falck? Is she very much troubled about it?"

"Yes, she is so afraid that he will worry himself ill; but, of course, she, too, believes in him. I think she suspects the other man in the shop—Darnell; but I don't see how he can have anything to do with it, I must own."

There was a silence. Cecil looked sadly at the passers-by, lovers strolling along happily in the cool of the evening, workers just set free from the long day's toil, children reveling in the fresh sweet air. How very brief was the happiness and rest compared to the hard, wearying drudgery of most of those lives!

CHRISTMAS APPEAL TO THE
PEOPLE OF ONTARIO
FOR
The Hospital for Sick Children

Dear Mr. Editor:—

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done by the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, in a few words, tell you of the steady growth of this Hospital.

In the year 1875 there were only six cots and beds, one nurse, 44 in-patients and 67 out-patients. In 1912 there were 250 cots and beds, 64 nurses, 1,294 in-patients and 17,862 out-patients.

During the 37 years of the Hospital's existence, 19,370 in-patients have been admitted, and 133,724 out-patients have been treated, a total of 153,094, or an average of 4,138 per year. Of the 19,370 in-patients, 5,495 were from places outside of Toronto. 9,644 of the total in-patients were cured, and 5,711 were improved. This is a great record.

Of the 1,294 in-patients last year, 341 came from 218 places outside of Toronto, so that the Hospital is not a local, but a Provincial Institution.

In the Orthopedic Department in 37 years, nearly 700 boys and girls have been treated for clubfeet, and about 600 were corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto, so surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

The Corporation of Toronto grants $25,000, not only for the city children, but towards the maintenance of all patients in the Hospital, and the citizens of Toronto donate an average of $15,000 annually to the funds of the Hospital.

Will you, kind reader, think of what your money will do? It helps to restore health and strength, and gives sound limbs and straight feet to crippled boys and girls.

Remember that your pocket-book must be the Hospital's friend, if the Hospital is to be the children's friend.

Remember that Christmas calls you to open the purse of your kindness to the Hospital, so that the Hospital may open the heart of its help to the children.

Remember that your money can help the Hospital build a bridge over which the feet of little children may travel on the journey from sorrow to joy, from sickness to health—aye, from death to life.

Please send a dollar, or more if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or J. Ross Robertson, Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

Raising Calves.

Several systems of raising calves are in vogue among different stockmen. The calves may be allowed to run with the cows and suck at will. They may be confined and allowed to suck two or three times per day. In this system one calf may be allowed to suck one or two cows, or two calves may be allowed to suck the same cow, according to the flow of milk and size of the calves. Calves may be confined and fed fresh whole milk from the pail. Again, they may be fed on fresh, sweet skim milk or separator milk or on sour skim milk, or even buttermilk or whey.

On the western ranges and in other localities where beef is the chief object and where the milk is not desired for other purposes, the calf is allowed to run with its mother. Under range conditions this is the only possible economic way of raising calves. The sucking calf develops into a more promising yearling than the skim milk calf, especially if the latter is fed in a careless or irregular manner. Without proper care skim milk calves make small pot-bellied yearlings.

Whatever cattle are raised on a small scale and there is a good market for milk, it does not pay to let calves suck the cows. Only calves which will bring fancy prices for breeding purposes can profitably be allowed to run with the mother. Milk will bring a larger price as butter than ordinary calves can make from it.

The results of numerous experiments in the United States and Canada are in substantial agreement with regard to the most economic method of raising calves. They should be allowed to suck the cows for three or four days. They will thus get the colostrum or first milk and exercise a favorable influence in preventing inflammation of the udder.

About the fourth day the calves should be separated from the cows and fed on whole milk by means of an artificial feeder, or taught to drink whole milk from a pail. As soon as they have learned to drink the whole milk should be gradually replaced with warm sweet skim milk so that the calves are receiving nothing but skim milk at the end of four weeks. The skim milk should be fed sweet and warm (95 to 100 degrees F.). The change from whole milk to skimmilk should cover a period of about two weeks. The skimmilk ration may begin at ten pounds per day and increase to fifteen pounds at four weeks of age, after which it may range from eighteen to twenty-four pounds.

It is best to teach calves to drink by using the fingers as artificial feeders are not very satisfactory. Scouring in calves is usually due to feeding too much milk, or sour, cold or unclean milk. Careful attention should be given to these details. If scouring persists the calves may be fed small quantities of wheat bran or rye bran or a little lime may be added.

For their best development calves require milk for four or five months. After that time milk may be omitted from the ration. Small quantities of grain should be fed from the time the calves are two or three weeks old. Corn meal, kaffir corn meal, oatmeal and ground flaxseed or linseed meal are best for this purpose. Calves may be taught to eat by placing a handful of dry meal in the mouth.

Calves which come in the fall are less subject to scouring than spring and summer calves, and there are many other excellent reasons why fall calving should be practiced.

Concerning Your Tongue.

As a matter of fact there are only four distinct tastes—sweet, bitter, salty and acid. All the others are a mixture of the sensations of smell and touch. Nor are all parts of the tongue equally sensitive to all the tastes. For example, the tip of the tongue tastes sweet things best, while the base of the tongue can best detect the presence of bitter substances. Salty material is most easily tasted at the side of the tongue. Sour or acid tastes, however, are felt on all sides. So closely linked is the sense of taste with those of odor and vision that with eyes shut and nostrils closed it is hard to distinguish between an apple and an onion. Try it and see!

WAY ROYALTY IS GUARDED.

Special Soldiers or Attendants Watch Over Sleeping King.

Every night the palace at which King George is sleeping is patroled by night-watchmen, who pass along the corridors throughout the night inspecting doors and windows. These watchmen wear carpet slippers to deaden the sounds of their footfalls, and are specially trained to know exactly what to do in case of fire. In addition to the night patrol, there is always a sentry on duty outside the chamber in which the King sleeps.

King Alfonso of Spain is guarded at night by specially selected soldiers, who take charge of the keys of all the palace doors each night. These men pledge themselves that the doors shall not be unlocked until daybreak, and no one is allowed to enter or leave the palace until the night is over. The guards sleep outside the royal bedchamber, so that no one may enter during the night.

King Albert of Belgium is another carefully guarded monarch whom no one may disturb once night has set in. Soldiers patrol the corridors of the king's palace, and his special valet locks himself in the king's ante-chamber, which no other person is allowed to enter. The valet is forbidden to open either door until morning under penalty of death.

The Czar of Russia, the closest guarded of any monarch, is protected at night by several companies of soldiers, including Englishmen, members of the secret police, and a body of Cossacks. The various companies work independently of one another.

The Sultan of Turkey is nightly watched over by a very large number of soldiers and councillors, who remain within the neighborhood of his bedroom until morning. The Sultan changes his sleeping apartment oftener than any other monarch. He has the choice of two score bedchambers, and he visits many of these in turn throughout the year.

His Holiness the Pope is guarded by an attendant who is able to watch the welfare of his master through a spyhole in the wall of his bedchamber, so that the Pope is always under observation.

SEVEN YEARS PAIN FROM ACUTE NEURALGIA

Cured Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Neuralgia is not a disease—it is only a symptom. It is the surest sign that your blood is weak, watery and impure, and that your nerves are literally starving. Bad blood is the one cause—good, rich, red blood its only cure. There you have the real reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure neuralgia. They are the only medicine that contains, in correct proportions, the very elements needed to make new, rich, red blood. This alone reaches the root of the trouble, soothes the jangled nerves, and drives away the nagging, stabbing pain, and brace up your health in other ways. Mr. M. Brennan, an ex-sergeant of the 2nd Cheshire Regiment, now a resident of Winnipeg, Man., says: "While serving with my regiment in India, on a hill station, I contracted a severe cold, which brought on acute neuralgia, at times lasting for three weeks. I was constantly suffering almost every month in the year for over seven years, the pain being sometimes so severe that I wished I was dead. On my return to England I seemed to get no better, though I spent large sums of money for medical advice and medicine. Then I came to Canada, and about a year ago saw the advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in a Winnipeg paper. Although I had begun to think my complaint was incurable I told my wife that I intended giving the Pills a fair trial. I was suffering from terrible pains when I began taking the Pills, but before the second box was finished the pain began to disappear, and under a further use of the Pills it disappeared entirely, and I have not had a twinge of it during the past year. Only those who have been afflicted with the terrible pains of neuralgia can tell what a blessing Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been to me, and you may be sure I shall constantly recommend them to other sufferers."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PROBABILITIES.

Experts Are Engaged in Studying the Law of Chance.

You probably do not know that one of the most important laws—perhaps the most important—that govern your daily life is the law of probabilities.

If it is a cloudy day when you start to business you take an umbrella. You are unconsciously applying the law of probabilities. All day long you are, consciously or unconsciously, applying this law to your actions, to your engagements, to your eating.

If you refrain from eating fish at luncheon, it is probably because you feel that your wife will have it for dinner. Professor Virgil Snyder of London, who is an authority on the law of probabilities, says if it were expressed in figures "it would be a fraction whose numerator expresses the number of favorable ways, an event may happen and whose denominator is the total number of ways a thing can happen.

"Under the law of probabilities things will happen in the same proportion that their probabilities call for. This was proved many years ago by the Bernoulli brothers at Berns, Switzerland. They took 1,000 perfect coins and tossed them in the air 1,000 times. A careful count was made of the number of coins that fell heads at each experiment.

"At the conclusion of the test—and it was certainly a fair one—it was found that practically as many coins fell heads as tails.

"All life insurance premiums are determined by the law of probabilities. For instance, to determine the premium on people between twenty and twenty-five years of age, a life insurance company finds out how many people die annually between those ages. That number divided by the total number of people alive between those ages is a fraction that expresses the chances that people between the ages of twenty and twenty-five have of living, and it is, of course, a simple matter for the company to fix the premiums accordingly.

SALT RHEUM CAME OUT ON HANDS

Formed Watery Pimples. Itchy and Had Horrible Burning Sensation. Lost Some of Finger Nails. Could Not Open Hands. Cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

235 N. Lisgar St., Toronto, Ontario.—"For seven years I have been troubled with salt-rheum. It came out on my hands and formed kind of watery pimples all over them which became itchy and it had a horrible burning sensation which caused me a good deal of pain. It came out on my hands in the fall and remained there till after spring. I might mention that I lost some of my finger-nails by the disease. During this length of time I was utterly useless, as I could not open my hands. I tried several other patent medicines without a bit of relief. Some of my friends advised me to try Cuticura Remedies so I sent for samples and by using them there was a great improvement. Then I went to the druggist and bought one cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment; after using them I am glad to say I am completely cured. I had given up all hope of being cured. I can say to all those who have suffered as I have, not to lose courage but to give Cuticura Remedies a fair trial." (Signed) Miss Lillian Irwin, Oct. 18, 1911.

NEVER TIRES

Of the Food That Restored Her to Health.

"Something was making me ill and I didn't know the cause," writes a Western young lady: "For two years I was thin and sickly, suffering from indigestion and inflammatory rheumatism.

"I had tried different kinds of diet, and many of the remedies recommended, but got no better.

"Finally, Mother suggested that I try Grape-Nuts, and I began at once, eating it with a little cream or milk. A change for the better began at once.

"To-day I am well and am gaining weight and strength all the time. I've gained 10 lbs. in the last five weeks and do not suffer any more indigestion, and the rheumatism is all gone.

"I know it is to Grape-Nuts alone that I owe my restored health. I still eat the food twice a day and never tire of it." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

The flavor of Grape-Nuts is peculiar to itself. It is neutral, not too sweet and has an agreeable, healthful quality that never grows tiresome.

One of the sources of rheumatism is from overloading the system with acid material, the result of imperfect digestion and assimilation.

As soon as improper food is abandoned and Grape-Nuts is taken regularly, digestion is made strong, the organs do their work of building up good red blood cells and of carrying away the excess of disease-making material from the system.

The result is a certain and steady return to normal health and mental activity. "There's a reason." Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Family Pleases Merchants.

The merchants of Lead Hill, Ark., rubbed their hands in gleeful anticipation last week when Will R. Little, a farmer, appeared in town with his family to do his annual shopping. Little's family consists of a wife and 22 children. Each year at the beginning of winter Little lays in a year's supplies and togs out the individual members of his family from head to toe. When he left the town this year his wagon was loaded with provisions and wearing apparel.

"What is this domestic science?" inquired the engaged girl. "It consists of making hash out of the left-over meat, and croquettes out of the left-over hash," explained her more experienced friend.

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

Sore Chest Cured in One Night

Broke Up a Heavy Cold, Relieved Pain in the Side, Stopped an Irritating Cough.

"Anyone that goes through all that I suffered last winter will appreciate the value of a remedy that cures like Nerviline cured me." These are the opening words of the solemn declaration of E. P. Von Hayden, the well-known violinist. "My work kept me out late at night and playing in cold, drafty places brought on a severe cold that settled on my chest. I had a harsh, racking cough and severe pains darted through my sides and settled in my shoulders. I used different liniments, but none broke up my cold till I used Nerviline. I rubbed it on my neck, chest, and shoulders, morning and night, and all the pain disappeared. Realizing that such a heavy cold had run down my system, I took Ferrozone at meals, and was completely built up and strengthened. Since using Nerviline I have no more colds or pleurisy, and enjoy perfect health."

NERVILINE CURES CHEST COLDS

It's because Nerviline contains the purest and most healing medicinal principles, because it has the power of sinking through the pores to the kernel of the pain—these are the reasons why it breaks up colds, cures lumbago, stiffness, neuralgia, sciatica, and rheumatism. Refuse any substitute your dealer may suggest—insist on Nerviline only. Large family size bottles, 50c.; trial size, 25c.; all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

FISH THAT FELL UPWARD.

Brilliant Colors at a Depth of 3,000 Feet.

According to Sir John Murray, one of the greatest authorities on oceanography, the bottom of the sea is a desert of pitch black darkness, penetrating cold and eternal silence. Worms, sea puddings and coral polyps sluggishly crawl or sway in the almost currentless depths, and only two species of fish, both of them small, with much head and little body, have been found deeper than a mile and a quarter down, says the London Standard.

The range of fishes in the sea is as though it were divided into layers, one above the other, and no fish can live above or below his layer. Thus many of the deeper fish—three-quarters of a mile below the surface—have been found floating at the top; they had swallowed a fish as large or larger than themselves and its buoyancy had lifted them out of the strata to which they were accustomed.

The physiology of a bottom fish is almost impossible to know, because they are built to resist a tremendous pressure of water, and when this pressure is released—as when they are brought to the surface in a net—sometimes the fish has burst: the organs are crushed beyond reconstruction.

Similarly, if a fish of a higher strata attacks a bottom fish in the neutral zone where both can live, and—as sometimes happens—his teeth become entangled so that he cannot let go, and he is dragged into deeper water, he strangles instantly, for his breathing arrangements are of no use to him under the pressure of water in the lower strata of the sea. As a rule, however, the fish of the various depths rarely feed on those above or below them.

There have been brought to light an astonishing number of forms of fish, and especially of prawns of a brilliant red color, living in the ocean at a depth of 3,000 feet. But astonishing as it may seem, these brilliantly colored fish and prawns, instead of being conspicuous in the water at that depth, are almost invisible, when almost any other color could be easily seen.

The best way to feel for the poor and needy is to feel in your pockets.

Charlie—"That was a splendid trick done last evening! I saw a man actually turn a handkerchief into an egg." Billy—"That's nothing! I saw a man, only about a week or two ago, turn a cow into a field!"

COLD SORES AND ULCERS ARE HEALED BY ZAM-BUK.

Cold sores, chapped hands, ulcers and winter eczema are common troubles just now, and for all these, Zam-Buk will be found the surest and quickest remedy. Sometimes cold sores arise from chilblains on the toes or fingers, and in the former case, where colored socks are worn, there is a danger of blood-poisoning from the dye. Zam-Buk being so powerfully antiseptic removes the danger as soon as applied.

Mr. W. J. Halliday, of Ash Grove, Ont., says: "I had my little finger frozen, and it cracked at the first joint, causing a bad sore, which discharged freely and would not heal. The pain was very bad, and the whole of my hand became swollen.

"A friend advised me to try Zam-Buk, and in a very short time it healed the sore."

Miss Lillie May, of Stoney Creek, Ont., says: "A few weeks since, several nasty, disfiguring cold sores suddenly broke out on my lips, which became much swollen. I tried Zam-Buk, and after a few applications of this balm, every sore was healed."

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for eczema, blood-poison, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, cuts, burns, bruises, and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Refuse harmful imitations and substitutes.

Use also Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet. Best for baby's tender skin!

Hopeless.

A woman had lost her husband, and being anxious to discover his whereabouts, sought out a private inquiry agent. "Did he possess any prominent facial characteristics?" asked the latter, taking down a description of the missing man. "Yes, he had a big Roman nose." "Then he can't be found, madam." "Why?" "Because a nose of that kind never turns up!"

ONCE A PALACE.

Stafford House Was Built for the Duke of York.

Stafford House, London's finest mansion, the new ownership of which is variously attributed to Graham Miller and to Sir William H. Lever, although a ducal residence to-day, was actually built as a royal one. Its splendors were acclaimed once for all by Queen Victoria when, early in her reign, she said to the Duchess of Sutherland under its roof, "I have come from my house to your palace."

It was for Frederick Augustus, Duke of York, that York House, as it was then called, was built. When the Prince, whose effigy surmounts the York column, had been acquitted of the misuse of the military patronage, had seen the last of Mary Anne Clarke, and had been re-established by George IV. as Commander in Chief, he came to the conclusion that his virtues were somewhat unworthily housed in the stable yard at St. James's Palace.

To use his own famous expression, he regarded the quarters as the equivalent of a "shocking bad hat," and he proposed to build York House on the site of a building which had once been known as Queen Caroline's Library, or the Queen's Library. He raised the necessary money by a loan from the Marquis of Stafford, afterward first Duke of Sutherland, and appointed Benjamin Wyatt his architect. Although the great new house rose apace, the Royal Duke lay dying when its top story was reached, and it is probable that in his sick room in the Duke of Rutland's house in Arlington Street he heard the hammers, which, so far as he was concerned, were being plied in vain.

THAT EXASPERATING TICKLING IN THE THROAT

which keeps you coughing away, night and day, will quickly disappear if you take Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne.

Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne quiets the throat-tickling almost instantly, loosens the phlegm, promotes expectoration, and cures the inflammation of the mucus membrane.

Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne has the great advantage of being absolutely free from harmful drugs of any kind. In support of this statement we are willing to give to any physician or druggist in Canada a full list of its ingredients.

You can therefore give Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne to any member of your family, with perfect confidence that it will be altogether beneficial.

Your druggist can supply you with either 25c. or 50c. bottles. The National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited. 316

The farmers who are subscribers for The Weekly Sun, Toronto, have reason to congratulate themselves on the enlargement and improvements to their paper. These improvements have only been possible by the support given the paper by its readers. They are ample rewarded by the knowledge that in The Sun they have a paper that voices their opinions without fear or favor The Sun should be in every Ontario farm home. It is a duty the farmer owes to himself and his business

An Exeter woman, not knowing that her neighbor, a woman who had been on an extended visit, was expected home that evening, and not knowing that the returning one had forgotten her key, and noticing a pair of feet disappearing through a window, gave the burglar alarm one night last week, with the result that in a very few moments a band of men had surrounded the house determined on a sensational catch, when they were surprised, but not disappointed, to notice a lamp being lighted in the house, and on investigation the intruder proved to be the owner who had unexpectedly returned and was blissfully unaware that her unusual entrance had aroused so much excitement.

HYDRO.—At a meeting in Clinton on Tuesday Secretary Pope of the Hydro Commission met representatives from the various towns and quoted prices as follows,—Goderich $37; Clinton $39; Exeter $43, Hensall to be fixed later. The Town of Clinton acted at once and will submit a by-law at the January election.

LAST CONCERT—The Exeter Band completed their "summer" engagement in town on Saturday evening last when they gave the last of their open air concerts for 1912. The newly organized band has made rapid progress under the able leadership of Mr. E. Treble and the presidency of Mr. W. J. Mallett and they have been generous with their concerts this season, in return for the generous treatment accorded them by the council and the citizens. The band concerts have been thoroughly appreciated by all.

SUCCESSFUL BAZAAR.—The Bazaar under the auspices of the Ladies Guild of Trivitt Memorial Church, was held in the Town Hall on Friday afternoon and evening, and proved very successful in every respect. The buyers were plentiful, and nearly every one of the pretty, useful, and ornamental articles were sold, the Guild realizing $110. In the evening an interesting program was rendered, presided over by the rector, Rev. Collins. It consisted of recitations, readings, solos, and instrumentals, the artists being Miss Edmunds, Miss Gladys Hazett, Mr. Goodwin and Mr. N. D. Hurdon.

A NEW TRIAL—The case of James Ryder vs the Usborne and Hibbert Fire Insurance Company, which was tried at the sittings of the Division Court at Exeter last spring before Judge Holt is again being tried before a jury at Goderich this week in the County Court It will be remembered that the case was non-suited here, and Mr. Ryder applied for a new trial in which he claims the full value of the horse which he believes was killed by lightning. A large number of witnesses and several jurymen went to Goderich on Tuesday morning to be present at the trial.

FROM EXETER, ENG.—Mr Wheaton of Exeter, England, spent an evening in town last week in pleasant converse with several of the citizens of town. Mr. Wheaton is a printer and book publisher and was closely identified with the exchange of flags and pictures that took place a few years ago between the public schools of Exeter, England, and Exeter, Canada. He is a particularly well informed man on church, educational and imperial topics and his talks with the men of Exeter proved very interesting and instructive to those who had the pleasure of meeting him. He spent an hour going through the school and was pleased with its structure and appointments He was particularly delighted with the beauty of Trivitt Memorial Church, which he also had the opportunity to see. Owing to pressure of business his visit was only over night, and we hope that on a future date he may visit the Canadian Exeter for a longer time. Mr. Wheaton is a particular friend of Mr Harry Hems who visited here some years ago.

WES SNELL IS HIGH MAN AT LIVE BIRD SHOOT.

Mr John Hunkin conducted a live bird shooting match on Thursday last on the shooting ground in which sixteen gunmen took part. The honors went to Mr. Wes. AUTHORITATIVE VOICES

(1) Biblical—"But if the ox were wont to gore in times past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man or a woman; the ox shall be stoned and his owner also shall be put to death." Exodus 21, 29.

This passage marks the stage of progress in the evolution of society. The deepened sense of reverence for mankind is evidenced in that if the owner knew his ox was dangerous, yet for gain kept it, thus a man and woman lost their lives, being gored, the ox was not only despatched but the man himself suffered death guarding itself and the great worth of human life was exalted. The majesty of Law is also evidenced. The people possess the rights of self-defence in preservation Well does Canon Farrar say-Salus populi suprema lex-The saftey of the people is the highest possible rule. All acknowledge the curse of strong drink, its destructiveness of human life, yea, its utter regardlessness of the sacredness of human life. In this day should not the will of the people be supreme.

"Woe unto him that giveth his neighbour drink, that addest thy venom thereto, and makest him drunken also, that thou mayest look on their nakedness". Habakuk 2; 15.

This prophet hurls against the Chaldean this taunt in poetic imagery Woe is he who insatiates his brother, causing him to fall, bringing ruin upon him by making him drunken. The modern Bar could not exist unless there was a continuous recruiting and in this recruiting there is the luring, yea the pressing of the intoxicating cup to the innocent and unwary. Its awful cruelty is seen in that it lures the pure, uses them for its own ends, then hurls them forth to death.

"Wherefore, if meat maketh my brother to stumble, I will eat no flesh for ever more, that I make not my brother to stumble"1 Cor. 8; 13.

Here from Paul's life we have the Magna Charta of the New Testament against the use of intoxicants. Men answer, I will not permit you to legislate in reference to what I eat or drink. Yes, but if your eating and drinking is a menace to your neighbor causing his fall, then it is of vital importance. Your drinking at a licensed bar means the fall of some life. Here note how the Missionary Apostle feels

DAN McGILLICUDDY DEAD.

Toronto, Dec. 12.—Daniel McGillicuddy, a prominent Canadian newspaperman, died at his home here last night, after an illness extending over two years and a half. He was in his 63 year and for the past two years had lived in Toronto, coming here from Calgary, where he was publisher of the News-Telegram, giving it up on account of ill health. He is survived by a widow and two sons and two daughters, all of Toronto. Mr. McGillicuddy was born in Carlisle, England, and came to Canada when quite young, settling in Halifax, where his father was connected with the British garrison. When a boy he entered newspaper work. Many years ago he established the Goderich Signal and the Brussels Post and later the Calgary News-Telegram.

Easter in 1913 will be observed on March 23rd. The date is the earliest since 1865, a matter of 48 years ago. It is also interesting to note that never again until 2008, or some 95 years hence, will it come as early. March 23 is the earliest date on which it can fall and April 25th the latest.

JAMES RYDRE WINS HIS SUIT AGAINST THE USBORNE AND HIBBERT FIRE INSUR. CO'Y

This suit, which has created much public interest, and which was first tried in the Division Court at Exeter, was again tried at the general sessions in Goderich last week.

It will be remembered that Mr. Ryder sued in the Division Court for $100 as the value of a horse which he claimed was killed by lightning while insured under a policy of the above company. The trial here resulted in a non-suit, as set forth in the judgment published in the Advocate at the time.

Mr. Ryder then increased his claim and sued in the County Court, and at the trial of the case before His Honor Judge Holt and a jury, was awarded $160 and all costs. It is estimated that it will cost the Insurance Company from $700 to $800. Mr. Ryder, before and after the Division Court proceedings was willing to accept $100.

At the trial in Goderich the Court submitted four questions to the jury and all four were answered in favor of the plaintiff.

Men's Overcoats

The largest selling of any season in our time has been our experience this year. We have coated hundreds of men but we still have a heavy stock, and in order to lessen the load we are carrying now, lowering prices must rule. It is an acknowledged fact, proved by actual comparison, that our Coats, in general appearance (embodying good style of design, appropriate cloth and tailoring of the garment) so far surpass anything shown by other stores that very few people have any difficulty deciding where they shall purchase the winter coat.

BEST DAY AT WINTER FAIR

Sale of the Prize Heifer, "Mischief E," Sets a Record Price

A despatch from Guelph says: The sale of the grand champion beef animal exhibited at the Winter Fair, "Mischief E.," the pure Scottish shorthorn heifer, has established a record price for Canada. W. R. Elliott of Guelph, the breeder of the champion, received on Thursday from Robert Miller of Stouffville a cheque for $600, which gives an average of sixty cents per pound live weight. Correspondingly high prices were realized for the champion dairy cow and the international grand champion wether, "Cherry," the grade cow that won the dairy test in competition with Canada's best pure-bred stock, was sold by George B. Ryan of Courtland to R. Reid & Company of Ottawa for $200, and Mr. John Campbell of Woodville, Ontario, disposed of his champion wether, conceded to be the best mutton cheep in America, to the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. The best steer in the show was sold by John Lowe of Elora to a Toronto abattoir for fifteen cents per pound live weight.

Thousands watched the judging of the finest horses ever seen in a Canadian arena. "Macaroon," the Clydesdale stallion that won the Cawdor Cup, emblematic of the championship of Scotland in 1911, was awarded the premier honors in a class embracing several outstanding horses. It was at Stranrear, Scotland, that Mr. Hassard, of Markham, Ont., purchased "Macaroon," and the consideration was well over $5,000. As in the Clydesdales, the Percherons and heavy-draughts, brought out strong classes. The string of Percherons included seventeen horses, and the winner was declared by the judges to be Canada's best. The heavy-draughts, sleek as silk, showed up to perfection under the glittering electric lights, and a better ring would have been hard to find. Fine harness combined to make them one of the sights of the show.

FROM COCHRANE TO HEARST.

New Train Service Along National Transcontinental.

A despatch from Cobalt says: Temporary arrangements have been made whereby O'Brien, McDougall & O'Gorman are giving a train service both east and west of Cochrane along the National Transcontinental. They are now running a train from Cochrane to Hearst, leaving Cochrane at 9 o'clock in the morning and reaching Hearst at 2 in the afternoon, an immense improvement on the old, desultory service. O'Brien, McDougall & O'Gorman have the contract practically to Superior Junction, and it is this firm that is laying the last rails that will complete the chain between Winnipeg and Cochrane. They are making great efforts to bridge the gap by the first of the year.

FALSE FIRE ALARMS.

Only Way to Stop Them is by Granting Votes to Women.

A despatch from London, England, says: A militant Suffragette named Elsie Howey was sentenced on Wednesday to a term of two months' imprisonment for turning in a number of false alarms of fire Tuesday night. Counsel representing the Government described the defendant as "One of a band of Suffragettes who are at present trying to terrorize London." Elsie Howey informed the police magistrate that the only way in which the Government could stop the women was to give them votes.

ARRESTING TURKISH LOOTERS.

This drawing of the London Graphic's artist, Philip Gibbs, shows a Bulgarian soldier making three looters hold up their hands in a burning village of Mustapha Pshha.

TORONTO CORRESPONDENCE

INTERESTING BITS OF GOSSIP FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

The Municipal Elections—Are "Good Times" Drawing to a Close?—High Cost of Living—Toronto's Street Railway.

At the time of writing no candidate in opposition to Mayor Hocken has appeared on the horizon. No one in the present Council is prepared to take the plunge, and any opponent must, therefore, come from outside. One man whose name continues to be mentioned as a possible candidate is Dr. Charles Sheard, formerly Medical Health Officer of the city. Dr. Sheard is a man of independent means and an independent turn of mind, who at one time was exceedingly popular as head of the Medical Department on account of the way he used to "talk up" to the Aldermen. Since retiring from official life he has several times threatened to run for something, but has always lacked the nerve to go through with it. His friends think he would give Mayor Hocken a good run, particularly if he holds off his candidature until the last week and then makes a whirlwind campaign of it. They figure that he would get the anti-temperance vote, the "Sunday slides" vote, the Roman Catholic vote, a section of the Liberal vote, he being a less prominent Conservative than Mayor Hocken, and even a goodly section of the Orange vote.

Even if there is no Mayoralty contest, that does not mean that New Year's Day will not be an interesting voting event. Never before has there been such a big field for Board of Control. All the old members are seeking re-election and new aspirants are springing up on all sides. Controller Foster, who has been spoken of as a possible Mayoralty candidate, will stand on his platform of economy. He may possibly head the poll, even in a large field. Controller Church, in his role of being all things to all men, will try to glad-hand his way back. Controller McCarthy, the only Liberal elected to the Board last January, while a disappointment in some respects on his year's record, is a capable man of business. Controller Maguire, another Liberal, who has served out Mr. Hocken's unexpired term, has had his taste of blood and wants more. Then there is James Simpson, running as a Socialist, who may not get elected, but will poll a strong vote, drawing, as he will, from labor unions, church workers, temperance societies, Orange lodges, Sons of England and Liberals. Ex-Controller F. S. Spence, always a keen student of municipal problems, and drawing upon the same support as Mr. Simpson (with the exception of the lodges), wants to come back. So does ex-Controller J. J. Ward, another Liberal, labor champion, and Roman Catholic. Ald. O'Neil, another Liberal Roman Catholic and personally popular, also has his hat in the ring. Ald. Yeomans, who has made a specialty of water works questions, and ex-Ald. Sweeney, a brother of the Bishop of Toronto, completes the list at the moment.

It is curious that in the list of ten candidates in "Tory Toronto," only four should be Conservatives. Of these four only two, Controller Foster and Church are regarded as strong "runners." The task of guessing the winners is, therefore, more than usually difficult.

A "High Brow" for Alderman.

Of the new Aldermanic material offering the most interesting candidate is Dr. S. Morley Wickett, formerly of the staff of the University of Toronto, but now engaged in the leather manufacturing industry. Dr. Wickett is what is sometimes called a "high brow" candidate. He is a B. A. of Toronto University, Ph. D. of Leipsic University, and studied also at Vienna, Berlin, Paris and Cambridge. He is prominent in the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and is greatly interested in technical education. He has written a good deal about the theory of municipal government, but this is his first venture into the hurly-burly of practical politics.

The last "high brow" candidate Toronto had was Sir Edmund Walker, who a few years ago was elected to the Board of Education. He served one term, and then promptly retired. Why he did so has not been very definitely explained.

Croakers Getting Noisy.

One is hearing rather persistent forebodings these days that our "good times" are in danger of being checked temporarily. Of course, there are always a certain number of croakers who continuously draw a poor month. Present forebodings may emanate from them only, but they seem just a little more numerous than usual.

The theory of the croakings is that there has been a too rapid expansion and exploitation in Canada, particularly in real estate. Too much money has been borrowed. Too little of it has been made productive. Then the Balkan war, like every other war, has eaten up great chunks of capital—wined it off the earth, this, of course, has a tendency to cut off the supply of capital available for investment.

Every autumn there is a certain amount of money tightness caused by millions of dollars being sent west to pay the farmers for their crops as they begin to come to market. But this year it is just a little tighter than usual, and the fear is that the stringency may last longer.

The Town Lot Speculation.

That there has been a vast overdoing of the real estate business is undoubted. One calculator says that there are a million and a quarter town lots in Canada on the market. To put a family on each of these lots would mean an added population equal to the total present population of Canada. And to support this additional population in towns and cities would require at least another 7,000,000 people on the land. So that to occupy all the town lots now sub-divided would require a Canadian population of some 21,000,000 souls.

Then the high cost of living is assuming serious proportions. If any person had foretold ten years ago what rents and prices in 1912 would be in Toronto he would have been regarded as crazy. One living in the country has little idea of the struggle to make ends meet that goes on in many Toronto homes, where the incomes received would ordinarily be considered quite adequate.

However, no one predicts that there will be any serious break in Toronto's growth.

A Municipal Railway.

Toronto's first experiment in the municipal ownership and operation of street car lines is taking a modest form. A mile or two of railway has been constructed on Gerrard street east, a street which the Street Railway Company refused to serve, and which was therefore open to the city to do as it liked with. As there was no other way to develop the district than by a car line, the city went ahead. The line is now complete, four cars have been placed in operation and the city is more or less securely launched in the street railway business. The fare has been fixed at two cents, or six tickets for ten cents, but, of course, to get anywhere passengers have also to pay a fare on the Street Car Company's system.

Two other similar stub lines in other districts are also shortly to be opened by the city. There is no expectation that they can be made to pay. The only question is as to the size of the deficit. The hope of advocates of municipal ownership is that the deficit will not be so large as to discourage the city from taking over the Toronto Street Railway when its franchise expires in 1921.

$20,000,000 WORTHT OF WHEAT.

Three Miles of Loaded Freighters at Buffalo.

A despatch from Buffalo says: Three miles of giant freighters, their hulls filled with millions of bushels of grain, are riding at anchor inside the breakwater of Buffalo's outer harbor, forming one of the heaviest blockades of grain in the history of the port. Fifty-three vessels in this line carry cargoes aggregating 15,000,000 bushels of export grain, practically all of it being wheat. In the inner harbor are 20 more vessels, and a like number is expected from upper lake ports before the lakes become unnavigable. The total cargo value of the fleet in winter quarters here is estimated at $20,000,000. The grain will be transshipped at the rate of 500 to 1,000 carloads a day during the winter, and the remainder will be shipped by canal in the spring.

FELL 3,000 FEET.

But Prof. Wolcott Lived Seventeen Years Afterward.

A despatch from Edmonton, Alberta, says: Professor Charles Wolcott is dead here following an illness of several months. He came to Edmonton at the time of the Exhibition in the fall, and was taken ill. Professor Wolcott's death was indirectly the result of a fall of three thousand feet from a balloon in South America seventeen years ago. Practically every bone in his body was broken by the fall, and it was necessary in the operation which followed to lay bare the spinal cord for a distance of nine inches. The case attracted world-wide attention at the time, and newspapers and magazines devoted pages to the sensational fall and no less sensational recovery.

READS BIBLE EVERY DAY.

King George Respects the Promise Made to His Mother.

A despatch from London says: King George, through Lord Knollys, his secretary, has sent a letter to the Scripture Gift Mission, in reply to one from the secretary of that organization, in which he says that it is quite true he promised his mother, Queen Alexandra, so long ago as 1881, that he would read a chapter of the Bible every day, and that he has adhered to this promise ever since.

WIFE'S AMAZING STORY.

Planned With Lover to Marry Warwick, He Then to Murder Him.

A despatch from Moose Jaw, Sask., says: The murder of Ralph Warwick, on a homestead near Iverman, on the night of November 18, was explained on Thursday night by his wife at the Coroner's inquiry. She told an amazing story of how she and Stanley Price planned the details. Looking the Crown prosecutor squarely in the eye, she told of having met Stanley Price nearly a year ago. She fell in love with him, and six months later went to live at his homestead as housekeeper and common-law wife. She had been there a month when Price proposed she should marry Ralph Warwick, get him to turn all his belongings over to her, and make a will in her favor. To this she consented and laid her snares for Warwick. After wooing him two months he proposed marriage. She lived with her husband until he was beaten to death, but all the time kept up relations with Price. Price last week committed suicide in Regina.

ELDERLY LADY KILLED.

Walking Along Track in Parry Sound, Did Not Hear Train.

A despatch from Parry Sound says: An old lady about seventy years of age, widow of the late William Cornfield of this place, was killed by the Toronto train on the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Cornfield lived on Forest Street, near where the railway track crosses Forest Street, and just before the mail train was due, took the short cut to the centre of the town along the railway tracks and was overtaken by the train in a rock cut a short distance from her home. She was quite deaf, and it is thought she did not hear the train as it approached.

ADJOURN FOR THREE WEEKS.

Premier Announces Christmas Recess Dec. 20 to Jan. 7.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Parliament adjourned for the Christmas recess on Thursday for three weeks, re-assembling on Wednesday, January 8. Premier Borden on Friday night gave notice of motion to that effect.

THE NEWS IN A PARAGRAPH

HAPPENINGS FROM ALL OVER THE GLOBE IN A NUTSHELL.

Canada, the Empire and the World in General Before Your Eyes.

Canada.

G.T.P. Railway shops will soon be opened at Transcona.

Earthquake shocks were reported from St. John, N.B., and Hamilton, Ont.

Kingston Board of Trade will consider commission government for the city.

The reciprocal trade measure with the West Indies received its first reading in the Commons.

Wright County, Quebec, has been deprived of liquor licenses by a vote of the county council.

An amendment to the election law is to be introduced to permit railwaymen to vote in special polls at terminal points.

The Canadian Northern expects to have its transcontinental line completed from Montreal to Vancouver in eighteen months.

Mrs. Henry Machin, of Fernie, B.C., aged 51, en route to England on a holiday trip with her husband, died at White River, Ont.

Lambton County Council passed a resolution favoring local option because fifty per cent. of the inmates of the county House of Refuge are there because of intemperance.

Hamilton and Brantford were in darkness and the street car and radial services were stopped on Thursday through ice clogging the Dominion and Cataract Power Companies' plants.

Great Britain.

Sir Edward Grey was not over-optimistic as to conference of powers.

The militants started a new campaign in London, putting in false fire alarms all over the metropolis.

The London Express revives the story that the Russian Czarewitch was the victim of a Nihilist attack which has left him incapable of ascending the throne.

A letter from Sir Edward Grey was read at a London suffragette meeting, stating that the Government would support the suffrage amendment to the Reform Bill, if the House did.

United States.

Members of the Housekeepers' League of Philadelphia, sold 150,000 dozen eggs in an attempt to break extortionate prices.

Sidna Allen was sentenced at Wytheville, Va., to 35 years, and Wesley Edwards to 27 years, for murder, growing out of the wholesale shooting in the Hillsville courthouse.

General.

The tension between Austria and Servia still continues.

Captain Ackford, of the British army, has been killed by tribesmen near Shiraz, Persia.

Villagers near Valencia, Spain, set fire to the house in which several tax collectors were sleeping.

Spain has decided to increase her naval programme by three powerful dreadnoughts and several smaller vessels, and to build docks capable of taking 30,000-ton warships.

It is alleged that Black Sea Turks have been burning villages and massacring the inhabitants around Gallipoli and Lalos. In the Keshani district of Thrace 300 Greeks have been massacred.

Troops were called out in Lisbon to quell a riot caused by tenants and working people attacking a hall in which aristocratic property owners had met to protest against a proposed tax on real estate.

KRUPP WAR PROFITS.

A Surplus of $12,500,000 Show by Annual Report.

A despatch from Berlin, Germany, says: The past twelve months of war, in which much-badgered Turkey has fought Italy and the Balkan States, have been a period of huge profit for the Krupp gun works in Essen. The fiscal report of the company, made public on Wednesday, showed a surplus for the year of $12,500,000. The payment of $1,250,000 for taxes, $1,100,000 workmen's insurance, and $1,750,000 for welfare work among the families of the 50,000 employees of the gun works, left a net profit of more than $8,000,000. A 12 per cent. dividend was declared, 5 per cent. added to the reserve fund, and $500,000 to the pension fund.

ROYAL GEORGE INQUIRY.

Pilot Removed for Three Years and Captain for One Year.

A despatch from Montreal says: The Royal George wreck investigation finding suspends Pilot Rioux for three years, Captain Harrison for twelve months, and Chief Officer Edwards for three months. The decision read by Captain Lindsay in the wreck commissioner's court on Wednesday afternoon refers to the carelessness of the pilot, who, it says, had no business to be running the vessel at seventeen knots an hour at the point where she stranded without clearly knowing his position. The court was of the opinion that had Captain Harrison remained on the bridge the accident would not have happened. Chief Officer Edwards was also partly responsible for the grounding.

LITTLE HOPE FOR REMOVAL.

No Chance That English Ban on Canadian Cattle Will be Lifted.

A despatch from London says: In view of an order having been issued on Wednesday by the Board of Agriculture removing the ban on the landing of Irish cattle in England for slaughter purposes, the Canadian Associated Press made official enquiries in regard to the possible removal of the embargo on Canadian stock, and was informed that such a possibility was as remote as ever. "Before it can be done," said an official, "fresh legislation will be necessary in consequence of the measure passed in 1896 prohibiting their admission." He scouted the suggestion that there was any discrimination against Canadian farmers owing to Irish influence in the House of Commons.

CHRISTMAS STAMPS.

May be Used This Season if Put on Back of Envelope Only.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Christmas stamps issued to raise money by such organizations as the National sanitarium Association will have to be used as seals on letters, and not affixed to the face of the envelope on which the postage stamp is placed. If this rule is not observed letters bearing the special stamp may not reach their destination, particularly if they are addressed to Great Britain or other European countries belonging to the Postal Union. This announcement was made by Hon. L. P. Pelletier in the House on Wednesday.

SUICIDES IN PRISON.

Two Convicts Cut Their Throats In Maidstone Prison.

A despatch from London says: Two convicts undergoing life sentences in Maidstone Prison committed suicide in their cells by cutting their throats with a knife. The prisoners left farewell messages to relatives, stating they had taken their lives in despair.

FOR THE HOUSE AND TABLE

It is a pity that the jolly custom of welcoming the Christmas tree into the house with great ceremony and merry-making has fallen into disuse. Our great-great-grandfathers, we are told, set out several days before Christmas behind Old Dobbin, who kicked up his heels, frivolously, flinging back soft feathers of snow onto the sleigh full of noisy youngsters, to hew down a sturdy evergreen that was hauled home and into the huge kitchen in great state. Now, alas, we have no Old Dobbins, nor troops of youngsters, nor forests of evergreens around the corner. So the grocery boy smuggles our flat-size Christmas tree into the basement, and on Christmas eve father and mother work till midnight trimming it, while wistful Willie and longing Lucy peer over the balustrade until sent back to bed.

Even if you prefer that the children first behold the tree only in all its glittering, bedizened glory, let them help a little in decorating the house, and even in fashioning little trinkets that will help out in trimming up the tree. Kindergarten beads, that may be bought for five and ten cents a box, in all the bright colors, when strung on fine wire, are an effective decoration that little fingers may make. All manner of tiny lanterns may be cut off from gilt colored paper, and nuts may be gilded and tied with gilt cord so that they can be suspended from the tree.

When one does not feel like spending a great deal on the expensive, tinsel baubles with which to trim a tree, there are numerous little home-made articles that will answer every purpose. Dolls made of tissue paper and dolls made from cotton batting will delight the little tots. The latter are tied into shape with red wool, and have quaint little faces inked on. Snowy popcorn fastened to the ends of the tree twigs with a pin through each kernel, makes the tree look as though it were bursting into little blossoms.

In decorating the house with wreaths and holly and other Christmas greens, you will find that massing the trim will produce better effects than scattering sprays and bunches about aimlessly. Remove all the small ornaments from the mantel shelf, for instance, and fill two big vases or jars with twigs of holly. If there is a picture above the mantel, carry a rope of laurel about the frame, and if it is an oval frame, or mirror, perhaps, cross the laurel at the top and let the ends fall to the corners of the mantel.

Bay windows adapt themselves beautifully to graceful decoration. One attractive manner is to hang a wreath in the center of each window, and outline the side draperies with laurel which should extend across the top of the windows also. Strands of laurel used to drape back portiers or curtains add a gala touch. Wreaths hung at regular intervals from the balustrade of the stairway by wide red ribbons will brighten the hall wonderfully. A simple treatment for the dining-room is to lay a rope of laurel about the plate rail, carrying it up over the doors and windows. Wreaths of laurel hung on the walls in each space left by the doors and windows will add greatly to the effect.

The Christmas dinner table affords unlimited opportunity for carrying out clever ideas, that range from the simple pyramid of polished fruit rising from a wreath of greens, to the representation of jolly old Kris Kringle alighting on a snow-covered roof with his reindeers and pack of toys.

A doll dressed up like a tiny Santa Claus with prodigious cotton whiskers and ample cotton girth beneath a scarlet coat makes an amusing centerpiece when seated on a little sleigh almost buried in cotton snow, generously sprinkled with diamond dust. At each place a cardboard sleigh filled with green and red candles would be pretty and the red candles might have shades cut from red cardboard in the shape of bells.

A great deal can be done with crepe paper, which comes printed with an all-over design in holly, with St. Nicholas flying over the snow in his sleigh, with big wreaths of holly, or sprays of poinsettia, with red and gold. Christmas bells, and in many other appropriate designs.

A very successful table that had the holly-wreath paper draped about the edge so that the table seemed to be encircled with hanging wreaths, had for a centerpiece a great bunch of white carnations with a holly wreath around the bottom of the vase. At each place the plate rested on a doily that had been made by cutting out the wreaths from the paper. Crepe paper was also used for the candle shades. It was first mounted on heavy paper, lined with red tissue paper, and strips about five inches wide laid in plaits enough to form a full shade. Red ribbon was run through the top to hold these plaits in place.

A pretty star trimming for the center of the table was arranged with the aid of a hoop suspended from the chandelier. This hoop was wound with tinfoil and a perfect shower of silver stars fell from it, held by fine wires. The star motive was easily carried out in the almond cups, the candle shades, the shape of the bread and butter, the salad with its stars of red beets, and the candies and nuts served on plates with star-shaped doilies.

If the children are to have a little table to themselves on Christmas Day, or if they are given a holiday party, they are sure to be delighted with the following decoration. Build a good-sized mound of cotton in the center of the table to stimulate a rugged hill, sprinkling it plentifully with mica. Bits of twigs from the Christmas tree will serve for tiny trees. Dress small dolls in plain little scarlet coats, set scarlet caps—formed of two triangular pieces stitched together—rakishly on their heads, and fasten them in grotesque positions onto little sleds, upon which they appear to be coasting down hill. The candles should be inclosed in black matboard, and the shades, with a little trouble may be made from the matboard and red tissue paper, so that they look like old-fashioned lamp posts.

A simpler idea is the use of little red stockings for decoration. These may be festooned about the edge of the table and hung from a hoop wound with laurel suspended over the table. Little doll's stockings at each place might contain odd gifts for each child.

Be sure that no way of distributing the Christmas gifts will ever produce quite the same amount of mirth and mystery as the time-honored method of clapping a flowing beard onto Father or Uncle Bill, upholstering him with all the pillows in the house, smothering him in a red suit trimmed with eiderdown and slinging over his shoulder a huge bag overflowing with packages.

A snow man may also be depended upon to send the children off into ecstacies of glee, and add to the general hilarity of the occasion. Make him a loose suit of white cotton batting, and a mask of the same. He should wear white gloves and an old stove pipe hat perched perilously on his cotton hair, and should be sprinkled liberally with diamond dust. Suggest that he display his histrionic abilities, even in so humble a role as snowman, and his stiff, awkwardness should insure his howling success.

A pretty way to indicate where the gifts of each member of the family may be found is to place a card bearing the name and greetings within a wreath of holly, from which a long satin ribbon falls to the pile of gifts on the table or floor below.

A jolly way to distribute the presents is to have some one fish them out of a huge stocking that has been made from red cambric and trimmed with holly, and into which all the gifts have been put as they were sent to the house, or as they were finished by members of the family. A big box covered with crepe paper and made festive with wreaths or holly will answer.

A clever woman surprised the family on Christmas morning by throwing open the library door, and disclosing any number of little gifts that appeared to be hanging by slender threads from the ceiling. A glance upward showed the same number of red and green toy baloons, clinging snugly to the ceiling and holding aloft the little packages.

On Christmas Day.

A Christmas gift, O Lord—
Some fiery vision,
Not drowsy promises
Of fields Elysian.

It was but now we came
Out of the jungle;
And how can beasts contrive
Save botch and bungle!

Since half is still the beast
And half is human
Sorrow must follow hard
On man and woman.

But let Thy kindness thrill
Through hateful places;
Our wicked streets are paved
With baby faces—

For these, Thy little ones,
Strew Christmas graces;
Let each one have a toy,
Forget not any
And think upon their tears—
The sad too many!

For their sake come once more
Down to Thy Manger,
Once more drive from thy church
The money changer.

Again where all may see
Die for us, Master:
Because we shrink too much
From death's disaster.
Master, once more die Thou,
And show us how.

EASILY MADE PRESENTS

At a cost of ten cents each you can make a little jewel bag, a lovely ribbon card case, a dainty pincushion cover, a small treasure bag of white kid for "rings and things," two sets of baby cap strings, ribbon talcum box cover, ribbon cover for medicine glass or a baby's silk beanbag. You may make them for practically nothing, if you happen to have some new bits of handkerchief linen, scraps of chamois skin, small lengths of ribbon, some bits of lace beading, and narrow edging, and a few hours time in which to put them together. They will neither look like, nor be, "10 cent" gifts when done, for each will be a dainty, handmade piece of needlework that would cost a purchaser in the store five times the dime outlay you make for mere materials.

To begin with the jewel bag: It is to be made out of handkerchief linen, and a piece 3 by 6 inches (or two three inch pieces), and chamois skin equal in size will be needed. If you already have such pieces there will be nothing new for you to buy for the jewel case but one and one-fourth yards of narrow 4 cent white wash ribbon with which to draw it up.

Calls for Careful Sewing.

As the bag is so small and the materials so fine the stitches must be daintily put in. French-fell the pieces of linen together around three sides and run a hem at the top wide enough to carry a number one ribbon. Make the hem only one-fourth that width. If beading and lace are to be sewed on as a finish cut the chamois a little smaller, so that it will fit inside the linen bag easily. With white embroidery silk carefully buttonhole three sides of the chamois together and finish the top tdge all around in like manner. About half an inch below this buttonholed edge of the chamois skin clip little interstices through which to run the opposite rows of narrow ribbon for drawing it up, tying a small bow at each side as a finish.

The top of the linen bag may be simply finished by sewing on an edge of narrow lace, running a row of white silk feather stitching over the hem through which the wash ribbon is run in opposite directions, the ends being either tied in small bows or left long to go around the neck. Or, a more festive appearance may be obtained by running the ribbon through lace beading, edged in lace, sewed around the top of the hem. Instead of the feather stitching, if you prefer, embroider the initials or monogram daintily in white silk on the center of the jewel bag. This will give it an individual touch.

Card Case Quickly Made.

Then here is a lovely ribbon card case which any one can make for 10 cents or less in ten minutes by the clock. Twelve inches of some pretty flowered ribbon at a quarter a yard will be all that is needed. Carefully blind stitch a small hem at each end of the ribbon and using embroidery silk to match some bright color in the ribbon, feather stitch across these hems on the right side.

Now find the exact middle of the piece of ribbon, and fold back each end two and one-half inches, which will leave a space of one-half inch between. Whip the folded edges along the sides neatly together, and the pretty card case is done. Place in it your calling card with "Christmas Greetings."

From a four inch square "left over" piece or handkerchief linen and less than a yard of narrow lace at about 6 or 8 cents a yard, a lovely pincushion cover can be made. Measure about one inch in all around from the four edges of the linen, draw the threads and hemstitch with fine thread No. 200. Then again draw threads one-half inch in around all edges and again hemstitch. The corners will cross. This will leave a space in the middle of about one and one-half inches, in which you can embroider the initial of the friend for whom it is intended. Run a narrow and dainty hem around the edges. Divide the lace into fourths and gather on, being sure to leave plenty of fullness at the corners. This will be an unusually fine and sheer little cushion cover.

Two nice little ring or jewel bags of white kid can be made for only the price of a 4 cent No. 1 yard of ribbon with which to draw it up, if you have a discarded pair of cream elbow length kid gloves just home from the cleaners. Measure down seven inches from the tops of the gloves. From this point cut diagonally up and out to the sides, forming a deep V shaped end. This will be the bottom of the bag. Around the top cut openings at regular intervals through which to run the ribbon each way for drawing the bag open or shut. Tie the ends of the ribbon together in pretty bows, and with embroidery silk to match the ribbon in color buttonhole around the top and bottom pointed edges as a decorative finish. Any one will be glad to receive such a dainty and useful gift.

Bean Bags Easily Made.

Children delight in bean bags, and two 5 cent balls of mercerized crochet cotton will crochet an entire bean bag. Bright red pleases children, or alternate stripes of red and black make a pretty bag when crocheted together. Before sewing it up line the bag with strong cambric, silk, or satin in corresponding colors to give it added strength as well as to prevent the beans from coming through.

If a sixth gift must be provided, and one has the necessary time to spare, one of the new scalloped edged handkerchiefs can be made for 15 or 20 cents from one-fourth yard of handkerchief linen, according to the quality. Out of this one-fourth yard two handkerchiefs may be cut. It is not necessary to pay even to have the scallops stamped, for a ten cent piece may be used for the outer edge of the scallops and a five cent piece for the inner.

A little Russian "kopec" is better, if you have it, for the outer edge, and the ten cent piece for the inner, making the scallops smaller in size. Any one can mark off the scallops with a pencil, but first be sure that the handkerchief is cut absolutely straight, or the result will be bad. This can be done by pulling a thread on each of the four sides as a guide. The scallops must, of course, be padded before working. An initial in the corner will add to the gift. These handkerchiefs cost from 95 cents to $2 when bought in the stores.

TWO NAUGHTY DOGS.

Jack one day put down his plate.
"Pudding's hot," he said; "I'll wait.
Have's my pretty picture-book—
I'll have time for just one look."

But he looked still more and more
As he sat upon the floor;
And his doggies, Spot and Pup,
Gobbled all his pudding up!

CHRISTMAS CANDIES.

Apple a la Mode.—Remove the cores from large apples and fill up with mince meat, adding a little water and sugar. Bake slowly until the apples are tender. These should be served hot, and may have a tablespoonful of meringue, browned quickly in the oven, placed on the top and sprinkled lightly with chopped nuts.

Candy Apples.—Fill with nuts the apples from which the cores have been removed. Dip in a syrup of sugar and water which has been boiled until it is crisp, fasten on skewers and let harden. The children will be delighted with these simple, wholesome sweets.

Peanut Kisses.—Shell a half pint of peanuts, removing the brown skins, and chop or roll rather fine. Beat the whites of four eggs to a stiff froth, but not dry. Add carefully two cups of granulated sugar, stir in the nuts and drop by teaspoonfuls on oiled paper. Bake in moderate oven until a golden brown.

Chocolate Caramel Walnuts. Beat the white of one egg slightly, and add three tablespoonfuls of maple or caramel syrup, one tablespoonful of water, about two squares of chocolate, melted over hot water, one teaspoonful of vanilla extract, and sifted confectioner's sugar, as needed. Work with a silver plated knife and knead until thoroughly mixed, then break off small pieces and roll them into balls, flattening them into patties and setting a half of an English walnut on top of each.

Panocha—Put four cups of brown sugar, one cup of milk and two ounces of butter over the fire and stir until the sugar is dissolved. Boil until the mixture forms a soft ball when dropped into cold water. Add one-half pint of pecan nuts, and stir until it begins to thicken. Then turn quickly into a shallow greased pan, and when cold cut in squares.

How to Do It.

"I want to surprise you this Christmas," said he.

"Well," replied she, "you can; by buying me exactly what I tell you I want."

The Lesser Evil.

"Mercy, do you allow your husband to smoke in the house?"

"Well, if I didn't let him smoke, he'd fume, and that would be a good deal worse."

Sure of It.

I'm sure there is a Santa Claus,
My mind no doubting fills,
I know he is real because
I have to pay his bills.

PUDDINGS

Plum Pudding. — The same proportions of flour and suet and half the quantity of fruit, with spice, lemon, a glass of wine, or not, and one egg and milk, will make an excellent pudding if long boiled.

Another.—Lay a pound of beef suet in lumps the size of nutmegs in a basin, half a pound of raisins, a large spoonful of fine sugar, three eggs, a spoonful and a half of flour and a glass of brandy. Tie a wet cloth, doubled and well floured, over the basin. Put it into a pot of water that boils very fast and move it about for some minutes. Boil five or six hours.

Another, Light. — Mix grated bread, suet, and seeded raisins, four ounces each, with two well beaten eggs, three or four spoonfuls of milk and a little salt. Boil four hours. A spoonful of brandy, sugar and nutmeg, in melted butter, may be served as sauce.

English Plum Pudding. — Mix suet, raisins, and currants, one pound each, four ounces of crumbs of bread, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one ditto of grated lemon peel, half a nutmeg, a small blade of mace, a teaspoonful of ginger, and six well beaten eggs. Boil it five hours.

Black Cap Pudding.—Rub three tablespoonfuls of flour, smooth by degrees into a pint of milk, strain it and simmer it over the fire until it thickens; stir in two ounces of butter; when cool add the yolks of four eggs beaten and strained and half a pound of currants, washed and picked. Put the batter into a cloth well buttered, tie it tight, and plunge it into boiling water, keep it in motion for about five minutes that it may be well mixed.

Suet Pudding.—Shred a pound of suet, mix with a pound and a quarter of flour, two eggs beaten separately, a little salt, and as little milk as will make it. Boil it four hours. It eats well next day, cut in slices and broiled. The outward fat of loins or necks of mutton, finely shred, makes a more delicate pudding than suet, and both are far better for the purpose than butter, which causes the pudding to be black and close.

Pudding Hints.—All boiled puddings should be put on in boiling water, which must not be allowed to stop simmering, and the pudding must always be covered with the water; if requisite the saucepan should be kept filled up. To prevent a pudding boiled in a cloth from sticking to the bottom of the saucepan place a small plate or saucer underneath it; if a mold is used this precaution is not necessary, but care must be taken to keep the pudding well covered with water. For dishing a boiled pudding as soon as it comes out of the pot, dip it into a basin of cold water, and the cloth will then not adhere to it. Great expedition is necessary in sending puddings to table, as, by standing, they quickly become heavy, batter puddings particularly. For baked or boiled puddings the molds, cups, or basins should be always buttered before the mixture is put in them, and they should be put into the saucepan directly they are filled.

Baking Puddings.—Try setting pudding pan in double meat roaster with just a little water in bottom; cover and bake. It bakes perfectly and does not stick to pan.

Graham Pudding.—One and a quarter cupfuls of graham flour, one-fourth cupful of white flour, one-half cupful of molasses, one egg, one cupful of raisins, one-half cupful of sour milk, one teaspoonful soda, salt and spices to taste. Steam two hours, serve with pudding sauce.

Christmas Pudding.—One pound of finely chopped beef suet, one pound of good currants, one pound of seeded raisins, one pound light brown sugar, one-half pound flour, three-fourths pounds stale bread crumbs, one pound mixed candied peel chopped fine, eight eggs, a wine-glass of milk or brandy, ten ounces of chopped almonds, two teaspoonfuls of mixed spices. Mix suet, currants, raisins, sugar, flour, and bread crumbs together; add the well beaten eggs with milk or brandy, then the spice and almonds; let stand twelve hours, then place in a well greased mold and steam eight hours. Or it may be divided in smaller puddings and cooked in proportion. This pudding will keep for a whole year and it improves with age. A good brandy sauce to eat with it is the following: Half cupful of fresh butter, two cupfuls of powdered sugar, one wine glass of brandy, one teaspoonful of mixed cinnamon and mace. Warm butter slightly, work in sugar, and when light add spice and brandy, beat hard, shape in a mold, and set in a cool place until needed.

The Usual Result.

"What do you want for Christmas this year, John?" asked his wife.

"I don't know," he replied.

"All right," she said. "I'll get you something for the house."

WHITE GETS OVER THAT "JOKER" CLAUSE

An important move has been taken by Hon. W. T. White designed to save Canada some eight millions of dollars. He proposes to devote part of the 15 or 20 millions dollars surplus which he will be able to announce in his budget speech this year to the purchase of Grand Trunk Pacific three per cent. bonds guaranteed by the government.

And thereby hangs a story.

When the agreement was drawn up between the Laurier government and the Grand Trunk Pacific a clause known as the "implementing" clause was inserted. This clause provided that the difference between the selling price of the company's bonds and the par value, provided that the selling price was below par, should be paid by the Dominion government. This little Laurier joker has already cost the country some five million dollars, and but for the action of Mr. White would cost Canada eight million dollars more.

The Grand Trunk Pacific bonds have not brought very high prices on the money market. At present they stand at 78. Bonds have been issued for $75,000,000. The government has had to pay the difference between the selling price and par to the company, and last year a check for a cool five millions was paid over to the G.T.P. It was a direct gift to the company and an absolute loss to the country.

There still remains to be issued within the next two or three years 6,800,000 of these bonds. After allowing for commission, etc., these bonds would on the basis of the present market price realize net about 74, thus leaving 26 points the difference between par to be made up by the government amounting to $8,000,000. Under the joker "implementing" clause in the agreement the government would have no alternative but to pay over this amount to the company. What Mr. White proposes to do is to devote part of the surplus of purchasing these bonds, and in the ensuing two or three years the remainder will be taken up. Thus the Grand Trunk Pacific will get its money and the country, instead of making a free gift of $8,000,000 in addition to the $5,000,000 already paid over, will invest its surplus and receive 3 per cent. on its money. The result should also be to strengthen all Dominion guaranteed securities on the London market.

MUNICIPAL SLATE

"Who are to be members of the Exeter Council for next year" does not seem to be worrying the people very much yet, at least very little discussion is taking place regarding it. Undoubtedly there will be plenty of opposition to the present council develop before Nomination Day, Dec. 30, but no one seems to have announced themselves as yet.

In Usborne we are given to understand that the present reeve will retire and that the contest for that chair will be between Mr. Fred Ellerington, one of the very capable young men of the township, and Mr. Samuel Routley.

In Stephen the big fight will be between the rivals of last year for the reeve's chair—Reeve Henry Willert and Mr. W. D. Sanders, with the probability of the other councillors seeking re-election.

Local Items

John A. Campbell of the Marsh section near Leamington, this year realized $2,600 from the sale of pickling onions from a tract of two and five-eighth acres. The yield was 1,500 bushels. Mr. Campbell grew this season, 2,000 bushels of potatoes.

FORECAST FOR DECEMBER

Violent storms of rain, turning to snow and high winds will prevail over land and sea during the 18th, 19th 20th and 21st. Ships on the North Atlantic will encounter fierce boreal storms and be baffled by wind, wave and ice. Storms and weather conditions generally, will be of similar character, calling for prudence and foresight for protection of man and beast. Make your plans before the storms for safety and comfort in the storms and for the dangerous cold that will follow them. A reactionary Storm Period will bring renewed storms of wide extent and great force on and touching the 23rd, 24th and 25th. The Moon is full on the 23rd, at extreme declination north on the 24th and in perigee on the 25th. Most parts will get a supply of snow for Christmas, before and during this period, with a cold wave rushing from west to east from about the 24th to 27th. A seismic period extends from the 20 to 26, central on the 23rd. Rain, sleet and snow—a Vulcan Mercury period—winds up the month and year.

MOUNT CARMEL

Rev. Mr. Foster left last week for Mt. Clement where he expects to take treatment for Rheumatism.—The remains of the late Dr. Wm. Quarry of Windsor were interred in R. C. cemetery here on Saturday afternoon, he is survived by two brother's J. G. Quarry of this place and Benjamin of Centralia.—Miss Josephine spent a few days in London last week.—Mr. John Hogan is all smiles these days at the arrival of a son.—Mr. Jos. Sullivan of London is home to spend his holidays.— Miss K. Regan of Detroit is visiting at her home.—Mr. Patrick Glavin arrived home from the west, last week looking fine.—Dennis Quarry of London attended the funeral of his uncle Dr. Quarry on Saturday.—The farmers in this neighborhood are busy threshing their clover and bean crop and report a fairly good return.—Mrs. McPhee's new house is about to be completed and will make an improvement to the village.—Mrs. Neil McPhee of Parkhill called on friends here on Sunday.

COUNTY COUNCIL ECHOES.

Dr. Shaw, Physician for the House of Refuge, reports that the health of the inmates has been very satisfactory, considering the number of inmates, 106 during the year, with six deaths. There has been no epidemic of a serious nature. Two severe cases of fracture of the hip and leg were the only major accidents. During the year the physician had made 81 visits and treated 945 medical and surgical cases.

The manager of the House of Refuge submitted the following report of the crops for the past season:—Hay 15 tons; oats 300 bushels; barley, 180 bushels; beans 15 bushels; onions 50 bushels; garden carrots 20 bushels; garden beets 25 bushels; potatoes 100 bushels; mangolds 600 bushels; parsnips 25 bushels; clover seed 9 bushels; cabbage 900 head; fodder corn half an acre; tomatoes 105 baskets; raspberries 678 boxes; one acre dutch setts netted back $1,155.25; 3 acres sugar beets netted back $109.35; live hogs sold, $556.79.

The Inspector of the House of Refuge reported among other things that 425 had been admitted since the opening of the House. On December 1st there were 98 inmates, 58 males and 40 females. Those admitted during the year came from the following municipalities:—One from McKillop, one from Colborne, two from West Wawanosh, one from Hay, one from Howick, one from Stephen, two from Ashfield, two from Stanley, one from Seaforth, three from Clinton, one from Goderich, and one from Exeter; causes of admission, old age 3, sickness 5, imbecility 4. The average number of inmates during the year was 92. The average expense per inmate per day was 14 3-4 cents or $.13 1-4 per week. The total expenditure for the House and farm for the year was $10,250; the net expenditure, $5,248. The produce sold during the year amounted to $2,434. There was received from paying inmates $507 and during the year $2,773 was collected from inmates and is held in trust by the county.

On motion of Mr. Cantelon, seconded by Mr. Petty, the report of the finance committee was amended so that John Walker of Brucefield be paid in full his account for board and attendance of the late Mr. Taylor, and that Drs. Gunn and Rogers be paid a portion of their fees for medical attendance, the whole amounting to $48.50. Taylor was on his way home from Seaforth to Bayfield on one of the days of the Seaforth races. He was on the stage, and at Brucefield he fell from the stage, fracturing his collar bone and receiving such other injuries as ultimately resulted in his death. He was attended to by Dr. Rogers of Brucefield and was taken to Walker's hotel, where he was kept for some time, and was cared for by Mr. Walker and his family. He was finally removed to Clinton hospital, where he died. Having no effects, the parties who rendered the services named applied to the council for payment.

The report was also amended in respect to the claim of Mr. William Wallace of Tuckersmith. In this case a young mane named McBride was working for Mr. William Wallace of Tuckersmith. While in his employ he became dangerously ill, necessitating an operation. The medical attendance and other expenditure amounted to about $357. The young man had no friends in this country and the bills for the expenses were sent to the county council in this case also as in the Brucefield case the council took the lenient view, and while not acknowledging legal responsibility considered that in equity some reparation should be made and accordingly decided to grant $150.00 and the report was amended accordingly.

The county council presented two gold headed canes last week, one to Warden Strothers and the other to Reeve Leckie, who has been at the county council for twenty odd years.

USBORNE COUNCIL

The Usborne municipal Council met at the Township Hall, Dec. 7th. All the members were present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The nomination meeting to nominate a reeve and councillors for the year 1913 will be held at the Township Hall Elimville, on Monday, Dec. 30, 1912, at the hour of one o'clock. If more than the required number of candidates are nominated polls will be held on Monday, January 6th, 1913, as follows:—Division 1—Town Hall, Elimville; Jas Heywood, D. R. O.; Geo. Kellett, Poll clerk. Div. 2—Geo Cornish's house, Lot 6, North T. R.; Dan Dew, D. R. O.; Hallie Brown, Poll clerk. Div. 3—W. H. Panwarden's house, Con. 10, Lot 3½ 3, Thos. Washburn, D. R. O.; Hugh Berry, Poll clerk. Div. 4—Public Hall, Farquhar; Wm. A. Turnbull D. R. O.; Amos Francis, Poll clerk.

The Chairman of the local Board of Health reported to the Council. The Board met only once. There were no complaints made to the Board—in fact there was practically nothing for the Board to do. The account for services and expenses, $6.50, was paid to the secretary for distribution.

By-law No. 7, 1912, appointing deputy returning officers and poll clerks, fixing time and places for nominations and election, was passed, signed and sealed.

A grant of $10 was given to the Kirkton Agricultural Society.

A large number of accounts were passed and orders issued in payment.

F. Morley, Clerk.

BRIGHTEN YOUR HOME FOR 1913.

What will brighten your home better than a beautiful, pleasing picture on the wall. "Mother's Treasures" is just the picture you want. It is fit for any home in Canada and can be had free by subscribing to The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal the greatest and best family paper printed. It costs only one dollar a year, and no home can afford to be without it. Every present subscriber to that paper should send his renewal now and get a copy of the beautiful picture. Any one not a subscriber should order the paper and picture at once. They will help to make the New Year brighter for you.

Dashwood

Mr. Ed. Stire has returned home for the Xmas holidays.—Mrs. Thomas Klumpp who was indisposed for a few days last week is able to be around again.—Rev. S. R. Knechtel of Berlin occupied the pulpit in the Evangelical church last Sunday morning and administered the Lord's Supper to the members of the congregation.—Messrs Tiemann & Edighoffer are handing out a pretty calender to their customers. —Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Moreau have got settled down to the Sternal realities of life in Mr. Bugner's dwelling. —Misses Verda and Lizzie Hartleb are spending a couple of weeks at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Hartleb. Mr. Theodore Rader who has been in the west during the past summer has returned home.—Dr. Campbell of Zurich was in the village on Saturday last.—Mrs. Fred Macrae left last week with their household effects to join her husband in Detroit.—Mr. John Ische who spent a week with his sister at Grand Bend returned home on Sunday last.—Dr. McLaughlin has not yet returned home from the Hospital. — George W. Shore sold his little driver on Tuesday to Mr. Potter from near Lieury for which he received a good figure.—Mr. Powell of Exeter was in the village on Monday.—Mrs. Fred Baker and Mrs. Conrad Walper left on Monday to attend the funeral of a relative near Npaustadt.

Crediton

Monday was a busy day in town. It was the last day for the payment of taxes and the last meeting of the council. There are now all kinds of rumors afloat as to who will be the aspirants for municipal honors. Nomination meeting will be held on the 30th so there will be some time for our people to make up their minds, who will represent them in the Council for 1913.

A meeting in the interests of Local Option was held in the Town Hall on Tuesday. Rev. Alkens of Toronto presented his arguments in a very forcible manner. There were a goodly number in attendance.

Remember the school concert on Friday, 20th inst. There is a treat in store for those who attend.

The executors of August Halst's estate are offering some real estate and chattels for sale next Monday. The property is very desirable.

The 3-acres of land of the Lightfoot estate was sold last Friday to Harry Lewis for $385.—

Miss Ella Link who has been in charge of the millinery rooms of G. Preeter of Zurich the past season, returned home on Saturday.

Rev. S. R. Knechtel, P. Elder of Berlin, will preach over the quarterly services in the Evangelical church next Saturday and Sunday.

The Bible Class Crusaders has been organized in the Methodist church and programs are now out. Judging from the topics to be discussed the meetings will be very profitable and instructive. Rev. Jefferson is actively engaged among his people and is making a success of his efforts.

H. Eilber, M.P.P., is in Toronto this week attending a special session of the assessment committee of the Legislature.

John F. Smith has bought a clover threshing machine from Indiana. It is doing splendid work and our farmers are delighted with it. John believes in getting the best and in giving satisfaction.

Our real estate agents are doing a flourishing business in town and vicinity. We sincerely hope the investments will be found profitable and not a "black eye" as some of the stocks taken here in the past have become. Why not take stock in town for some industry here and give employment to our people? This would keep our boys in town.

STEPHEN COUNCIL.

The Council of the Township of Stephen convened in the Town Hall, Crediton, on Monday, the 16th, of December 1912 at 1 p.m. All members were present. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted.

Yearley—Kellestman—"That Alonzo Hodgins, the collector of taxes, is hereby authorized to continue the levy and collection of taxes in the manner and with the power provided for by law for the general levy and collection of taxes"—Carried.

Elliott—Finkbeiner—"That By-law No. 196 appointing Deputy-returning officers, poll clerk and the selection of polling booths in the Municipality for the coming Municipal Elections and the taking of the vote on Local Option, having been the third time be passed and signed by the reeve and clerk and the seal of the Corporation attached thereto"—Carried.

Orders to the amount of $2306.03 were passed. A full statement of the same will appear in the Treasurer's report about to be printed.

The council adjourned sent die.

Township Nomination will be held in the Town Hall, Crediton, on Monday, the 30th December 1912 at 1 p.m.

H. Eilber, Clerk.

WHALEN

Mr. Clarence Willson gave a birthday party to a number of his associates and friends on Tuesday of last week. All enjoyed a good time at games and other amusements.—A large congregation was at church here on Sunday to bid farwell to Mr. and Mrs J. V. John Vance, who had a partial stroke last spring, is still very ill with no improvement.—Miss Etta Allen has returned to her home in Toronto, after a visit here.—Mr. and Mrs. Hepburn, who have been visiting in St. Paul, have returned home.—There are a number of weddings on the tapis for the Christmas time.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

TUCKERSMITH

Sterling—Wilson.—A quiet but very pretty home wedding took place in this Township on Dec. 18, when Miss Stella Grace, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Wilson, of the 3rd concession, to Mr. Russell Sterling of Manitota. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Hicks of Hensall in the presence of only a few of the near relatives of the contracting parties. The bride received many useful and valuable presents, showing the esteem in which she is held by her many friends. The young couple will have the best wishes of a host of friends for a long and happy wedded life.

LUMLEY

Messrs Billie Simmons and W. L. Kerslake are on a visit to relatives at Henfryn and Attwood.—Miss Maude Dickson of Seaforth and Mr. Picken of Scotland spent the week end at Jas. Hortons.—Mr. and Mrs. John Glenn visited the latter's brother near Zurich on Sunday last.—Mrs. J. A. Bolton and Miss Nah Horton attended the shower given in honor of Miss Stella Wilson at the home of Mrs. R. Dj Bell on Tuesday afternoon last.—The Misses Mitchell were also present. — Mr. and Mrs. John Caldwell near Hensall and Mrs. Green of Woodstock, N. B., spent Thursday evening at Wm. Glenns.—Mrs. John McQueen has returned from Mitchell where she has been visiting her daughter Mrs. G. F. Hemery.

CHISELHURST

The children of the Sunday school are quite disappointed that there is not a Christmas tree this year.—Mr. W. Mooney had the old slaughter house moved up to his barn the past week. And while it was being moved Mr. Howard had the misfortune to have his leg broken.—Miss Slavin spent part of this week in Exeter.—Mrs. Green of New Brunswick was a recent visitor of Mrs. Hicks, she was accompanied by Mrs. Hummiston of Hensall.—Mr. Geo. L. Wren is preparing to build a new house next summer. Mrs. Hicks has returned from a visit in Hensall —Rev. Mr. Hicks gave his hearers a very impressive sermon on Sunday afternoon.

WINCHELSEA

Municipal matters are beginning to take on a little stir and we may expect to hear more as the time of election approaches. We understand Reeve Hunkin will withdraw from the field and that the new aspirants for the office will be Fred Ellerington and Samuel Rowcliffe. We have heard of no new candidates for the office of councillor.—Mrs. Penwarden still continues very low and but slight hopes are entertained for her recovery.—Wedding bells will ring in this locality in the near future.—Mr. Wm. Clement's old "Buckskin" mare passed in her checks on Tuesday morning, leaving a sucking colt at her side. She was aged 30 years, and has been a faithful beast all per days. She owes Mr. Clement nothing.—We understand our popular storekeeper will shortly take on a partner, when greater things may be expected of John and the business.—Miss Jessie Hamilton, who has resigned her position as teacher in Winchelsea school, is giving a farewell concert on Friday afternoon, Dec. 20, when an excellent program will be rendered. Both pupil and parent will regret that Miss Hamilton is leaving, as she has been painstaking and faithful to duty, competent in her work and under her tuition the scholars made splendid progress. Socially she will also be much missed.

Hanc Badly Mangled.—We are very sorry to learn of the painful accident that befel Mr. Fred. Stevens of Woodham, who had his left hand caught in the planer, the third finger being completely amputated, while two of the other fingers were badly mangled and lacerated. Under the treatment of Dr. Campbell the injured members are doing nicely.

LOCAL OPTION

the heart throb of a heroic manhood and says,—No head of a statuary law for me. If my liberty endangers another, then I surrender for his good what I deem my personal rights. Chivalrous manhood calls upon you to dislet in vaunting your personal liberty in behalf of your brother. Am I not my brother's keeper? "Thou shalt love thy neighbor even as thyself."

(2) Physiological—The Human Body—The Psalmist in Psalms 8; 5, speaks in reference to man,—"For Thou hast made him a little lower than God." Man thinks God's thoughts after Him. What exaltation. Again in Psalm 139 14, he declares,—"For I am fearfully and wonderfully made." And to think this was spoken centuries before the marvellous deductions of a Darwin or a Hurley. Paul in I. Cor. 6, 19, speaks of the body being the Temple (Greek—naos)—the inner shrine or sanctuary of the Holy Spirit. Surely, then, these bodies are of vital importance and should be conserved. But what does strong drink do? Science says alcholic intoxicants poison the brain, yea, are the most malignant of all poisons. Alcohol is not found in the simplicity and purity of nature. You cannot discover one trace of alcohol in the virgin spring with its perennial life giving flow. No. Alcohol is born of vegetable decay. Alcohol is not food but a poison, which injures digestion, destroying the vital forces of the body. Even beer, with only two per cent. of alcohol, leads to the eventual destruction of the strongest physical natures. How true it is that "Total Abstinence" is writ in large letters upon the human body fresh from the hand of God.

(3) Economical—The Cost in Crime.

In Ireland 80 per cent.

Judge Rearfoul, of one of the chief criminal courts of the British Empire, speaking in Belfast, said,—"After an experience of seven years, 80 per cent were prisoners as a result of strong drink."

In United States 84 per cent.

Hon. Carrol D. Wright, Chief of the "Bureau of Statistics at Washington" having investigated 16877 cases, declares that a total of 84 per cent. of all criminal cases are due directly to the influence of liquor.

In Canada.

The Report of the Ontario Prison Commissions (07-08) says.—Alcohol does more than any other cause to fill the jails, and it unquestionably does much to recruit the ranks of the criminal classes. Of 11893 committed during 89 throughout the Province no less than 4777 were charged with being drunk.

Of the cases disposed of in the City of Toronto one-third were cases of drunkenness.

In the World 69 per cent.

The Sixth International Prison Congress held at Brussels, Belgium, in August, 1900, in reporting on "Alcohol and Crime" stated that about 69 per cent. of the world's crime was committed through drink.

(4) Scientific—Alcohol renders man Susceptible to Disease.

Bollinger found the beer drinkers of Munich so subject to dilated heart (hypertrophied) as to justify Liebe in saying that one man out of every sixteen drinks himself to death. Prof. Laitenman says, "Alcohol increases susceptibility to splenic fever, tuberculosis and diphtheria." Prof. Cuttstadt of Berlin found the death rate to be 76 out of 1000 for abstainers and 556 out of 1000 for drinkers.

Science says "Alcohol takes life".

Alcohol reduces a man's Capacity for work.

Prof. Aschaffenberg found by experiment that a regular glass of beer reduces a man's working capacity from 10 to 14 per cent. Professors Kurz and Kraeplin found it to reduce from 25 to 40 per cent. Prof Smith found that the power to memorize was reduced by 70 per cent.

Science says,—"It renders man less valuable to himself, his family and his employer.

Alcohol Shortens Life.—

One of the largest Insurance Companies of Great Britain, through R. M. Moore, their actuary says that in 40 years amongst abstainers the death rate was 71 1-2 per cent. out of the probable death rate, whilst among drinkers it amounted to 94 per cent. Woods of Pittsburg, a practical Insurance manager, says nearly 40 per cent. of rejected cases for Life Insurance is because connected with alcohol He says "To add 1-5 to your life makes it worth while to abstain."

The C.M.B.A. Convention in Ottawa in August 1910 resolved to allow no hotel keeper or bartender to join their Association.

ZURICH.

Mrs. J. Zurbrigg of New Hamburg is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Brill.—Mr. Marshall Zeller of Merlin is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E Zeller.—John Hamacher, of Usborne, Kansas, is in town visiting old acquaintances. He has been a resident of Kansas for over 35 years. —Mr. Conrad Keller, and family moving to town into the house he recently purchased from Charles Brill.— Mrs. Leon. Jeffrey, in Chatham for a few weeks, to visit her children.— Word was received by Mr. John Hamacher, who is visiting here, that his father Mr Daniel Hamacher had died in Oklahoma on the 5th inst. being in the 86 year of his age. The deceased left the farm now occupied by Mr. Hy. Volland, in the year 1878, settling in the State of Kansas, where he took up land, and where most of his family have settled.

Reeve Louis Kaibfleisch of Hay while mending a portion of road, had left his team of horses standing on a bridge when they took fright and jumped over the railing. The harness being strong the horses were suspended from the bridge until the tugs were cut, when they dropped into the water some distance below. One of the horses was badly hurt.—A cushioned chair in J. J. Merner's residence caught fire Sunday evening and but for prompt action in running it out of the house, a serious fire might have been the consequence. A number of the I.O.O.F. members drove to Exeter Tuesday night and spent a pleasant fraternal visit.

CROMARTY

Too late for last week.

Sacramental services were observed on Sunday. The Christian Endeavor was dispensed with in the evening on account of service at Roy's Church.—Mr. Gordon Chapple of Bohemia Moose Jaw arrived at his uncle's, Mr. Will Chapple on Monday evening.—Mr. Hugh McLachlan, who spent part of the summer in the west, returned last week.—Quite a number were living in anticipation of the opening of Roy's Church which was to have been held on December 15th and 22nd, but owing to the painter not being able to complete his work in time, the opening services have been postponed until January.—Among those who left this neighborhood for the Guelph fat stock show were Messrs James Scott, Neil Gillespie, Wm. Butler and Bert Butler.—Wm. Gaines, who has been in the employ of Mr. D. Bruce the past four years, left on Monday to take a course in telegraphy at the Central Business College, Stratford. We wish you well Will, as the opening of the winter term Jan. 6th, quite a number more will follow.—John Barr of Exeter was in this vicinity last week canvassing for the sale of books. Mr. James Laing is directing his spare moments in taking orders for nursery stock.—The Misses Bella McKellar and Annie McKellar left last Monday for Seaforth to learn dress making.— Mr. Malcolm McKellar express agent in Seaforth was holidaying under the parental roof last week.—Watch the Cromarty items for further news regarding the opening of Roy's Church.

SEAFORTH—While operating a rip saw at the Canada Furniture factory on Monday morning last Mr. Henry Grosbrook met with a very serious accident, which will in a measure cripple him for life. In some manner his hand came in contact with the saw, which severed all the fingers and badly cut the palm of the hand as well.

LUCAN—The funeral of Mrs. Erne Abbott was held Thursday afternoon to St James Cemetery. Deceased died in Victoria Hospital on Saturday afternoon after undergoing an operation. She had been ill over a year. Besides her husband, one son, Verne, aged 6 survives.

BETTER THAN SPANKING

Spanking does not cure children of bed wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble, Mrs. M. Summers, Box W. 840, Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

A WOMAN'S WISDOM.

The worried mother wakes up to hear her baby's heavy breathing—a little cough—perhaps the croup or whooping cough. She does not want to send for the doctor when perhaps the trouble does not amount to much. Finally she thinks of that medical book her father gave her, The Common Sense Medical Adviser, by R. V. Pierce, M. D. She says "just the thing to find out what is the matter with the little dear." Two million households in this country own one—and it's to be had for only 31c. in stamps—1,000 pages in splendid cloth binding. A good family adviser in any emergency. It is for either sex. This is what many women write Dr. Pierce—in respect to his "Favorite Prescription," a remedy which has made thousands of melancholy and miserable women cheerful and happy, by curing the painful womanly diseases which undermine a woman's health and strength.

MRS. ZUBERT AND BABE.

"My desire is to write a few lines to let you know what your valuable medicine has done for me," writes MRS. MARGARET ZUEBERT, of 323 S. Bentalon Street, Baltimore, Md. "Before the storck came to our house I was a very sick woman. I wrote you for advice which was kindly given and which made me a different woman in a short time. After taking the first bottle of 'Favorite Prescription' I began improving so that I hardly knew I was in such a condition. I did my own housework—washing and ironing, cooking, sewing, and the worst of all nursed three children who had whooping cough. I hardly knew of the advent ten minutes before—so easy was it. The baby is as fat as a butter-ball. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best medicine for any woman to take when in this condition. I recommend it to all my friends."

CONSTITUTIONAL BLOOD DISEASE.

Patient No. 16474. "The spots are all gone from my legs and arms and I feel good now. I am very grateful to you and shall never forget the favor your medicines have done for me. You can use my name in recommending it to any sufferer. I am going to get married soon. Thanking you once more, etc."

SAYS TWO MONTHS CURED HIM.

Patient No. 16765. Age 22. Single. Indulged in immoral habits 4 years. Deposit in urine and drains at night. Varicose Veins on both sides, pains in back, weak sexually. He writes:—"I received your letter of recent date and in reply I am pleased to say that after taking two months' treatment I would consider myself completely cured, as I have seen no signs of them coming back (one year).

THE WORLD SEEMS DIFFERENT.

Patient No. 15923. "I have not had a regular Emission I don't know when and am feeling fine. The world seems altogether different to me and I thank God for directing me to you. You have been an honest doctor with me."

VARICOSE VEINS CURED.

Case No. 16888. Symptoms when he started treatment:—Age 21, single, indulged in immoral habits several years. Varicose Veins on both sides—pimples on the face, etc. After two months' treatment he writes as follows:—"Your welcome letter to hand and am very glad to say that I think myself cured. My Varicose Veins have completely disappeared for quite a while and it seems a cure. I work harder and feel less tired. I have no desire for that habit whatever and if I stay like this, which I have every reason to believe I will. Thanking you for your kind attention," etc.

GAINED 14 POUNDS IN ONE MONTH.

Patient No. 13582. This patient (aged 58) had a chronic case of Nervous Debility and Sexual Weakness and was run down in vigor and vitality. After one month's treatment he reports as follows:—"I am feeling very well. I have gained 14 pounds in one month, so that I will have to congratulate you." Later report:—"I am beginning to feel more like a man. I feel my condition is getting better every week." His last report:—"Dear Doctors—As I feel this is the last month's treatment that I will have to get, I thought at one time I would never be cured but I put confidence in you from the start and you have cured me."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

If Roy had seemed unsympathetic as they drove home it was not because he did not feel keenly. His mind was far too much engrossed to notice Cecil much, and that, perhaps, was a good thing, for just then in her great dejection any ordinary acute observer could not have failed to read her story.

Roy slept little that night, and went up to business the next morning in anything but a pleasant frame of mind, for he could hardly resist his longing to go straight to Sigrid, and see how things were with her. When he entered the shop Darnell was in his usual place at the left-hand counter, but Frithiof was arranging some songs on a stand in the center, and Roy was at once struck by a change that had come over him. Then it chanced that Frithiof came into his room with a message.

"There is a Mr. Carruthers waiting to speak to you," he said, handing him a card; "he has two manuscript songs which he wishes to submit to you."

"Tell him I am engaged," said Roy. "And that as for songs, we have enough to last us for the next two years."

"They are rather good; he has shown them to me. You might just glance through them," suggested Frithiof.

"I shall write a book some day on the sorrows of a music-publisher!" said Roy. "How many thousands of composers do you think there can be in this overcrowded country? No. I'll not see the man; I'm in too bad a temper; but you can just bring in the songs, and I will look at them and talk to you at the same time."

Frithiof returned in a minute, carrying the neat manuscripts which meant so much to the composer and so little, alas! to the publisher. Roy glanced through the first.

"The usual style of thing," he said. "Moon, man, and maid, rill and hill, quarrel, kisses—all based on 'So the Story Goes.' I don't think this is worth sending to the reader. What's the other? Words by Swinburne: 'If Love were what the Rose is.' Yes, you are right; this one is original; I rather like that refrain. We will send it to Martino and see what he thinks of it. Tell Mr. Carruthers that he shall hear about it in a month or two. And take him back this moonlight affair. Don't go yet; he can wait on tenter-hooks a little longer. Of ocurse they have told me at home about all this fuss on Monday, and I want you to promise me one thing."

"What is that?" said Frithiof.

"That you won't worry about this miserable five-pound note. That, if yo uever think of it again, you will remember that my father and I both regard the accident as if it had never happened."

"Then you too take his view of the affair?" said Frithiof.

"Yes, it seems to me the only reasonable one; but don't let us talk of a thing that is blotted out and done away. It makes no difference whatever to me, and you must promise that you won't let it come between us."

"You are very good," said Frithiof, sadly; and, remembering the hopelessness of arguing with one who took this view of his trouble, he said no more, but went back to the poor composer, whose face lengthened when he saw that his hands were not empty, but brightened into radiant hope as Frithiof explained that one song would really have the rare privilege of being actually looked at. His intervention had, at any rate, saved Mr. Carruthers from that hard fate.

His reflections were interrupted by the entrance of two customers, evidently a very recently married couple, who had come to choose a piano. Once again he had to summon Roy, who stood patiently discoursing on the various merits of different makers until at last the purchase had been made. Then, unable any longer to resist the feverish impatience which had been consuming him for so long, he snatched up his hat, left word with Frithiof that he should be absent for an hour, and getting into a hansom drove straight to the model lodgings.

He felt a curious sense of incongruity as he walked across the court-yard; this great business-like place was, as Sigrid had once said, very much like a hive. An air of industry and orderliness pervaded it, and Roy, in his eager impatience, felt as if he had no right there at all. This feeling cast a sort of chill over his happiness as he knocked at the familiar door. A voice within bade him enter, and, emerging from behind the Japanese screen, he found Sigrid hard at work ironing. She wore a large brown holland apron and bib over her black dress, her sleeves were turned back, revealing her round, white arms up to the elbow, and the table was strewn with collars and cuffs.

"I thought it was Mrs. Hallifield come to scrub the kitchen," she exclaimed, "or I should not have cried 'Come in!' so unceremoniously. Cecil told us you were expected last night."

"Will you forgive me for coming at this hour?" he began, eagerly. "I knew it was the only time I was sure to find you at home, and I couldn't rest till I had seen you."

"It was very good of you to come," she said, coloring a little; "you won't mind if I just finish my work while we talk?"

"I have seen Frithiof," he said, rather nervously. "He is looking better than I had expected after such an annoyance."

"You have spoken to him about it?"

"Only for a minute or two. After all, what is there to say but that the whole affair must be forgotten, and never again mentioned by a soul. I want so to make you understand that it is to us nothing at all, that it is ridiculous to suppose that it can affect our thoughts of him. It was the sort of thing that might happen to any one after such an illness."

Sigrid looked up at him.

"You take that view of it," she said, slowly. "Somehow I had hoped you would have been able to find the true explanation."

"If there were any other you surely know that I would seek for it with all my might," said Roy. "But I do not see how any other explanation can possibly exist."

She sighed.

"You are disappointed," he said. "You thought I should have taken the view that Carlo Donati takes. I only wish I could. But, you see, my nature is more prosaic. I can't make myself believe a thing when all the evidences are against it."

"I am not blaming you," said Sigrid. "It is quite natural, and of course most employers would have taken a far harder view of the matter, and turned Frithiof off at a moment's notice. You and Mr. Boniface have been very kind."

"Don't speak like that," he exclaimed. "How can you speak of kindness as between us? You know that Frithiof is like a brother to me."

"No," she said; "you are mistaken. I know that you are fond of him; but, if he were like a brother to you, then you would understand him; you would trust him through everything as I do."

"Sigrid," he said, passionately, "you are not going to let this come between us! You know that I love you with all my heart, you know that I would do anything in the world for you, but even for love of you I can not make myself believe that black is white."

"I am not reproaching you because you do not think as we think," she said, quickly. "But in one way this must come between us."

"Hush!" he said, imploringly; "wait a little longer. I will not today ask you for your answer; I will wait as long as you please; but don't speak now while your mind is full of this trouble."

"If I do not speak now, when do you think I shall be more at leisure?" she asked, coldly. "Oh! it seems a light thing to you, and you are kind, and pass it over, and hush it up, but you don't realize how bitter it is to a Norwegian to have such a shadow cast on his honesty. Do you think that even if you forget it we can forget? Do you think that the other men in the shop hold your view? Do you think that Mr. Horner agrees with you?"

"Perhaps not. What do I care for them?" said Roy.

"No; that is just it. To you it is a matter of indifference, but to Frithiof it is just a daily torture. And you would have me think of happiness while he is miserable! You would have me go and leave him when at any moment he may break down again!"

"I would never ask you to leave him," said Roy. "Our marriage would not all involve that. It would be a proof to him of how little this wretched business affects my opinion of him; it would prove to all the world that we don't regard it as anything but the merest accident."

"Do you think the world would be convinced?" said Sigrid, very bitterly. "I will tell you what it would say. It would say that I had so entangled you that you could not free yourself, and that, in spite of Frithiof's disgrace, you were obliged to marry me. And that shall never be said."

"For Heaven's sake don't let the miserable gossip, the worthless opinion of outsiders, make our lives miserable. What do we care for the world? It is nothing to us. Let them say what they will; so long as they only say lies what difference does it make to us?"

"You don't know what you are talking about," she said, and for the first time the tears rushed to her eyes. "Your life has been all sheltered and happy. But out there in Bergen I have had to bear coldness and contempt, and the knowledge that even death did not shield my father from the poisonous tongues of the slanderers. Lies can't make the things they say true, but do you think that lies have no power to harm you? no power to torture you? Oh! before you say that you should just try."

"But don't you see," he urged, "that it is only a form of pride which you are giving way to? It is only that which is keeping us apart."

"And what if it is," she replied, her eyes flashing. "A woman has a right to be proud in such matters. Besides, it is not only pride. It is that I can't think of happiness while Frithiof is miserable. My first duty is to him; and how could I flaunt my happiness in his face? how could I now bring back to him the remembrance of all his past troubles?"

"At least wait," pleaded Roy once more; "at least let me once more ask your final answer a few months hence."

"I will wait until Frithiof's name is cleared," she said, passionately. "You may ask me again then, not before."

"Sigrid," he said, "I will not urge you any more. It shall be as you wish. Other men have had to wait. I suppose I, too, can bear it. I only ask one thing, tell me this once that you love me."

He saw the lovely color flood her cheek, she turned toward him silently but with all her soul in her eyes. She loved him—he loved her with the whole strength of his being. Was it likely that a miserable five-pound note could forever divide them? Poor Roy! as Sigrid had said, he had lived such a sheltered life. He knew so little of the world.

KING OTTO OF BAVARIA.

King Otto of Bavaria, now sixty-four years old, and known the world over as the "crazy King," seems far from death, as he spends most of his time sitting on the ground gazing into space. He appears healthy and strong, and it is believed he has still many years to live. His lunacy dates back to nearly a decade prior to the tragic death of his elder brother, Louis II.

THE BANK OF MONTREAL.

Closed Best Year in Its History.

That the Bank of Montreal is one of our oldest as well as one of our most important financial institutions, was emphasized by the fact that the Annual Report held this week was the 95th in the Bank's history. The Bank is yearly occupying a more important place in the financial, commercial and industrial expansion of the Dominion. The Annual Report presented, which covered the year ending the 31st October, 1912, showed net profits for the year of $2,518,000, which with a balance brought forward of $1,855,000 and the premiums on new stock amounting to $834,000, make a total of over $5,207,000 available for distribution. Quarterly dividends and two bonuses absorbed $1,894,000. The sum of $1,000,000 was transferred to rest account, $1,000,000 to contingent account, and $511,000 expended on bank premises, which left a balance to be carried forward of $802,000. The Bank has now total assets of nearly $237,000,000, making it one of the strongest financial institutions on the continent. During the year it increased its paidup capital to $16,000,000, increased its rest account to a similar sum, made large gains in deposits and in current loans, opened a number of new branches, and otherwise kept pace with the growing prosperity of the Dominion. The fact that the Bank made current loans of nearly $120,000,000 shows that there is a big demand in the country for banking accommodation, and that the Bank of Montreal is doing its full share in catering to the business needs of the communities where its branches are located.

The year was the first under the general management of Mr. H. V. Meredith, and the fact that the profits for the year were some $242,000 greater than those of the previous year, must be regarded as not only satisfactory to the shareholders, but as complimentary to the foresight and business sagacity of the General Manager. It is doubtful if the Bank of Montreal was ever in as good condition to take care of the growing needs of the Dominion than it is at the present time. Its increase in paidup capital and rest accounts, its gain in deposits, total assets and other matters, makes it peculiarly fitted to take a leading place in the financial and industrial expansion of the country.

The addresses of the President and General Manager were both comprehensive reviews of the financial, commercial and industrial conditions prevailing throughout the Dominion. That of the President, which referred to the Dominion as a whole, was a masterly summary of the conditions prevailing at the present time. The address was optimistic in its tone, Mr. Angus declaring that conditions throughout the Dominion were unusually sound and that satisfactory progress might be expected as long as present conditions prevailed. Mr. Angus touched upon the agricultural expansion, the increase in immigration, the growth of manufacturing, railroad development, the shipping industry, and, practically speaking, every phase of our commercial and industrial expansion.

Mr. Meredith in his address, referred more particularly to the growth of the Bank and the banking business. He touched on the forthcoming revision of the Bank Act, and intimated that there might be a few minor changes, although in the main the present Act was giving satisfactory service. He also dealt in an able and comprehensive way with the increased cost of living and the charge that the banks throughout the Dominion were not paying sufficient attention to the farming communities. He denied the charge that the banks encouraged farmers to become depositors and not borrowers, and stated that in so far as his Bank was concerned many millions were on loan to farmers and small traders.

Altogether, the addresses of the two heads of the Bank, like the Annual Report itself, were eminently satisfactory to the shareholders present, and should prove equally so to business men throughout the country as well.

SAVED BY A HORSE.

The Animal Showed Almost Human Understanding.

Hamdanie, an Arab horse owned by Pierre Ponafidine during his travels in the Moslem East, was a universal favorite on account of his docility and intelligence. Mr. Ponafidine says, in "Life in the Moslem East," that it was a pretty sight to see him tease his groom when the man was cleaning the stables. With his teeth he would slyly undo the man's belt, extract his handkerchief from the capacious Arab pocket, or take off his groom's hat and hold it in his teeth high up almost out of reach.

Another time he showed an almost human understanding. Mrs. Ponafidine was riding him. We were returning from a ride one evening, and as we entered the town, we had to pass through an archway and then turn sharply into a narrow lane. Just as we entered the arch, with my wife leading the party, a band of children came racing down the lane, and one after the other, as they turned the corner, they ran into Hamdanie, who was cantering and, as usual, prancing.

I turned cold with horror as I foresaw the awful accident that seemed unavoidable. The wise creature understood the danger as well as I did, and in a second stopped short and threw himself back, sitting literally like a dog on his haunches with fore legs well spread, receiving one after another the children, who ran full into his arms, as it were. Hard as the position was for horse and rider, he kept it up until the last child had run round the corner into him. The little ones picked themselves up, quite unconscious of the fate from which the horse's kindness had saved them.

"INTERNATIONAL STOCK FOOD."

Feed "INTERNATIONAL STOCK FOOD" with a combination of ground corn, oats and rye—and they will not only keep healthy, but also fatten up in a way to astonish your neighbors. The average pig does not digest more than half of the grain fed. The other half is wasted. "INTERNATIONAL STOCK FOOD" tones up the digestive apparatus, insures perfect digestion, and thus saves this waste in grain. "INTERNATIONAL STOCK FOOD" is a purely vegetable preparation—a wonderful tonic—that keeps hogs well and vigorous, and protects them against the ravages of Pneumonia and Cholera. 78

1912 FARMERS' PRIZE CONTEST

THUS you will have three times as many chances of winning a cash prize. You do not have to use any certain amount of Canada Cement to win a prize. There are absolutely no "strings" to this offer.

There are twelve prizes for each Province (three of $50; three of $25; three of $15; and three of $10) and you compete only with other farmers in your own Province and not with those all over Canada.

It makes no difference whether you have ever used cement. Many of last year's winners had not used it until they entered the contest. When you write for full particulars, we will send you, free, a book, "What the Farmer Can Do With Concrete," which tells everything you need to know about concrete. It is absolutely free, and you are under no obligation to buy "Canada" Cement or to do anything else for us.

"I Sleep Soundly, Feel Like New"

All Who Lack Vigor, Those Who are Dispirited and Worn Out, Should Read This Carefully.

Proof That Health and Renewed Vitality Quickly Return When Right Remedy is Used.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night, and in the morning felt so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicines and mixtures, Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged-up system. My spirits rose. I felt much better. The sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color and ambition to work returned, and have remained. I am like a new man, and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys and liver, and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 boxes for $1.00, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

MONTENEGRO IN WAR TIME.

Graphic Pen-Picture By a Newspaper Correspondent.

Even in time of peace, Montenegro is one of the most picturesque and interesting corners of Europe; during the recent war against the Turks the country of the Black Mountain had a fresh fascination for the observer from the West. A correspondent of the London Times writes thus of the piquant civilizations that he saw in the streets of Podgoritza:

Side by side with the Montenegrin soldiers in greenish khaki uniforms, with light shoes for climbing over the rocks, walk wild-looking Albanians, each man clad in fantastic clothes of grayish-white home-made cloth, trimmed with black braid, a sheepskin over his shoulders, and a rifle, with thin, murderous-looking bayonet, slung across his back. Montenegrin women, wearing the long, sleeveless coat and carrying heavy loads,—for the women form the real commissary department of the army,—pass along the street, their ranks broken now and then at the creaking of an old-time ox-cart, with wheels four feet high, or at the hooting of a very modern motor-car. Well-to-do Montenegrins, in their modern dress of red and blue and gold lace, mingle under the trees with peasants who wear the old whitish-gray national dress and carry old-fashioned rifles and as many cartridge-belts as they can get round their waists.

In the soldiers clad in khaki and armed with excellent modern weapons lives the spirit of a bygone age. There have been many examples of dash and audacity that might well be the envy of any army. But misdirected and in some cases carried out in spite of the commands of the officers, they have merely led to unnecessary loss of life. All classes of the population are animated by enthusiasm for their country's cause, by the pride of clan, and by the inborn hatred of the Turk. From all parts of Europe and from America have come Montenegrins anxious to take up arms.

Yesterday at the little village of Reika I found in the temporary hospital two wounded soldiers who, although just returned from America after many years of absence, were as full of ardor as if they had lived all their lives in continual fear of the Turk. At the same place, waiting for the little steamer that plies to Virpazar, were old men armed with rifles, on their way to join the army, and a boy of fourteen, whom his mother in vain implored to stay at home. Somehow he had obtained a rifle and bayonet, and go he would.

The women are not behind the men. Accustomed as they are to the carrying of heavy loads, they transport the food to their husbands and brothers at the front.

Arms and ammunition are plentiful, but there is almost no provision for the treatment of the wounded. Fortunately, the open-air life of the mountains makes the Montenegrin a hardy product.

PRINCE ARTHUR IS GENIAL.

Made Quaint American Dances Popular In England.

The Connaught family are nothing if not original. In some ways Prince Arthur is the most daring of them all in this respect. He more than anybody else has helped to make the quaint American dances the fashion in England. It is now recognized in society with a large "S" that he will not go to a ball unless the hostess intends to have some of these on her programme.

When staying at Welbeck Abbey some time ago, as the guest of the Duke and Duchess of Portland, he discovered a few hours before the great ball given on that occasion, that there was not a single "two-step"' or other innovation on the programme Whereupon he went to the Duchess, who is extremely conventional, and said this would not do at all.

The Prince is very genial and pleasant, but has a knack of getting his own way. "I'll be dancing-master for the next few hours," he informed his hostess, "and I shall teach some of the members of the house-party how to dance these delightful steps."

Very soon he had initiated Lady Victoria Cavendish-Bentick into the intricacies of the "Turkey Trot," and it appears that even the Duchess of Portland herself, the most stately Duchess in England, also fell a victim to its attractions.

MATCHES FROM STRAW.

Scarcity of Lumber Calls for Odd Substitutes.

The annual consumption of wood in the manufacture of matches is next to incredible. In view of the scarcity of lumber and its consequent high prices Carre, an Englishman, offers what he claims to be an efficient and economical substitute which he calls artificial wood. It is a composite made of straw and dried grass.

The straw is passed through crushing rolls, thence through cylindrical cutters, which divide it into strips, afterward supplied with an adhesive, the strips inclosed at both ends with layers of paper, are forced through other rolls and through linked molds in the form of a chain, where they are subjected to heat and pressure, whence they emerge in the form of round splits and are then cut to the proper length for matches. It is thought possible that this product may be also used for building purposes.

A fear of becoming ridiculous is a good guide in life, and will save a man from all sorts of scrapes.

One trouble with the family skeleton is that it refuses to stay in the closet.

SCALES, DANDRUFF AND ITCHING

Head so Itchy Could Hardly Stand It. Dandruff Showed on Coat Collar. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in One Month.

223 Elizabeth St., Montreal, Que.—"Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me permanently from dandruff and scalp itch that I was suffering with since over a year. I had an inflammation of the lungs and a very strong fever. When I recovered, my head was covered with scales and dandruff, and it was so itchy I could hardly stand it. The dandruff showed on my coat collar. I had used various medicines without relief. I heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and decided to try them, and I am very glad of it, because I am perfectly cured. I used two boxes of Cuticura Ointment with the Cuticura Soap. It took one month to cure me. I take pleasure in recommending Cuticura Soap and Ointment to anyone who is suffering with scalp or skin disease." (Signed) Hector Perras, Dec. 30, 1911.

TO REMOVE DANDRUFF

Prevent falling hair, remove crusts and scales, and allay itching and irritation of the scalp, frequent shampoos with Cuticura Soap, assisted by occasional dressings with Cuticura Ointment, afford the speediest and most economical treatment. They assist in promoting the growth and beauty of the hair by removing those conditions which tend to make it dry, thin, and lifeless, often leading to premature grayness and loss of hair. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post card Potter Drug & Chem. "BLEEDERS" IN ROYALTY.

Strange Malady of Czar's Heir Affects Other Families.

In Russia very serious alarm has been aroused by the recent pronouncement of the Court medical advisers to the effect that the Czar's heir is a haemophilic, in other words a "bleeder." This extraordinary malady has cropped up at intervals since the early Middle Ages among scions of European royal families.

In popular language the victims of this constitutional tendency to bleed excessively after comparatively slight injuries have been said to have "only one skin instead of three."

The truth is of course that haemophilics have the same number of skins as any one else, namely, one, but that their blood lacks to a greater or less degree that power of coagulation or clotting which in normal persons leads to natural arrest of hemorrhage after any except very serious injuries to large blood vessels. At the present time it would seem that haemophilia is more prevalent than ever among princes.

The late Duke of Albany suffered from it and eventually died of it. The second son of the King and Queen of Spain is said to be afflicted by it and to be incurably deaf in consequence of hemorrhage into the internal ear.

Rumors are also current that the Hohenzollerns are not exempt from it and that some of Queen Mary's relations are haemophilic to a slight degree. The disease hardly ever occurs in females, but is handed down almost exclusively through the female line. That is to say, the children of a male haemophilic are not likely to suffer from the disease, whereas the male offspring of a female whose brothers are "bleeders" are eligible for the display of haemophilia.

In view of the youth of the Czar's son and the serious illness through which he has passed the constitutional delicacy from which he appears to suffer is bound to occasion the utmost concern for his future among the whole Russian people and the greatest sympathy throughout Europe.

Expected Death From Day to Day

Another Case Where Life Was Saved and Health Restored by Nerviline.

We have all read and heard of the agonies of sciatica, but only those who have been tortured by this dread malady can fully appreciate what it must mean to be cured after years of suffering.

It is because he feels it his solemn duty to tell to the world his faith in Nerviline that Victor P. Hires makes the following declaration. "For three years I was in the Royal Mail service, and in all kinds of weather had to meet the night trains. Dampness, cold, and exposure brought on sciatica that affected my left side. Sometimes an attack would come on that made me powerless to work. I was so nearly a complete cripple that I had to give up my job. I was in despair, completely cast down, because the money I had spent on trying to get well was wasted. I was speaking to my chemist one day, and he recommended 'Nerviline.' I had this good liniment rubbed on several times a day and got relief. I continued this treatment four months and was cured. I have used all kinds of liniments, and can truthfully say that Nerviline is far stronger, more penetrating and infinitely better than anything else for relieving pain. I urge everyone with lumbago, neuralgia, rheumatism, or sciatica, to use Nerviline. I know it will cure them."

One negro whose child he christened was called Whiskey Emmanuel. Another black man brought his child, and when the minister asked the name replied, "Seriatim ad Valorem." Another gave a puzzling answer which sounded like "Ax, parson," and when requested to explain, said: "Well, parson, my mind gie' me to go troo' de New Testiment. SAW DIFFERS FROM SWORD.

Odd Fish Commonly Found in Tropical Seas.

Related to the sharks are the odd saw fishes of the tropics, which are common in the lagoons, bayous and sounds of the West Indies and the southern coast. These fish grow to a length of twenty to twenty-five feet, and as they are of no real value are never fished or hunted to any extent.

In fact, the fishermen dread these creatures, for they often become entangled in their nets and rip and tear them to pieces by lateral jerks and sweeps of the huge "saw" on the nose. This "saw" is a bony elongation of the nose and is armed on either side with large, sharp, strong teeth, and in the largest fish these "saws" grow to be five or six feet long and nearly a foot wide.

Very different from the saw fish is the sword fish, which is related to the mackerels and is of great value for food and is widely and assiduously hunted or fished on the southern New England coast as well as in the Gulf of Mexico and in the West Indies. The sword fish is a splendid creature, often weighs as much as six hundred pounds, and [illegible] for which the plot is admirably adapted. The shading of the light on the stage by means of a magnifying [illegible] mirror impale another fish or even pierce the strongest oaken timber of a boat.

The Stranger.

A stranger knocked at a man's door and told him of a fortune to be made.

"Um," said the man, "it appears that considerable effort will be involved."

"Oh, yes," said the stranger, "you will pass many sleepless nights and toilsome days."

"Um," said the man, "and who are you?"

"I am called Opportunity."

"Um," said the man, "you call yourself Opportunity, but you look like Hard Work to me."

The concluding sermons in connection with the Golden Anniversary of James Street Methodist church were preached on Sunday by a former pastor, Rev. A. L. Russell, whose discourses were listened to with close attention both morning and evening. The proceeds in all amounted to nearly $1600.

Miss Yellow, of Odstead, Yorkshire, England, arrived safely on the Steamer "Grampian" on Monday last and after a short visit with her friend Miss Bawden of Toronto, reached Exeter on Thursday evening, and will spend the winter with her uncle, Mr. Thomas Yellow at Mount Pleasant Cottage, Thames Road.

The Exeter Lodge of Oddfellows was visited on Tuesday night by a number of brethren from Lucan and Zurich, the occasion being the conferring of the Second and Third Degrees by local teams on three Lucan brethren. The visitors spoke very highly of the manner in which the work was performed. At the conclusion of the work all repaired to the restaurant of Mr. E. Follick, where a dainty lunch was served. On returning to the Lodge Room an impromptu program of speeches, reading and song was given. The evening was a most enjoyable one.

PRINCESS ZARA.—This beautiful play will be given in the Opera House, Exeter on Friday evening, Dec. 20, under the auspices of the B. Sy of the Trivitt Memorial Church, and without exception will be the best Christmas entertainment of the kind ever given in Exeter. Special and beautiful costumes are being prepared and many distinctly new features in lighting stage, and realistic reproduction of forces of nature will be introduced. This entertainment will be deeply interesting and at the very reasonable admission fee the patronage should be very large.

T. HAMLIN DEAD.—Word was received here on Tuesday of the death the previous Friday at Colorado Springs, Colo., of Mr. Thomas Hamlin, a former well-known resident of Exeter. Deceased had resided in Colorado for many years, with the exception of a year or two at Indian Head, Sask. The late Mr. Hamlin had reached a good old age. He had been ill for several months, and as he had retained his membership in Exeter Lodge, I.O.O.F., the brethren here, through the Colorado Springs Lodge, had been in close touch with him during his illness. He is survived by a widow. The remains are being taken to Owen Sound for interment.

HYDRO-ELECTRIC—The St. Marys Commission Board held a special meeting Saturday evening to see if the board could induce the hydro-electric power commission of Ontario to feed places west of St. Marys. On resolution it was voted that the secretary write the hydro commission advising it that there are prospective customers in the villages and towns in the vicinity of St. Marys, viz, Kirkton, Woodham, Granton Lucan, Ailsa Craig, Centralia and Exeter, in which places it is estimated approximately 400-horsepower could be sold. St. Marys would be the sub-station. On resolution it was voted that the board appoint the chairman to go up to Exeter and intermediate points with a view of ascertaining the amount of power which could be disposed of.

Mrs. Jos. Peart, who has been in very poor health for sometime, still continues very ill.

If you have a home and are out of debt, don't fret and worry yourself and your good wife into the grave for the sake of making money. You have but one life to live, and brief at best. Take a little pleasure and comfort as you go day by day, and try to do a little good to others.

Rev. Canon Green of Toronto addressed a large gathering in the Town Hall on Friday evening on behalf of local option, speaking especially of Orillia, where he had been rector for twenty-three years. The Canon visited the chief centres in England last year that he might study the problem at first hand. His father travelled through here with his horse and saddle bags as missionary of the Anglican church in the early history of this part of the country, which the Canon calls the garden of the world.

DEMONSTRATION CAR.—The Ontario Government Railway Demonstration Car exhibiting the products of Northern Ontario, was at the Grand Trunk station here on Tuesday. A large number took advantage of the exhibit which proved a revelation to many. The exhibit contained roots, vegetables, grains, grasses, etc, and all were of an exceptionally high class and a most worthy tribute to that northern country.

ELECTED COUNCILLOR.—Mr. J. A. Yager, son of Mrs. Yager of town, was among the successful candidates to be elected to the Council Board of Swift Current, Sask., one of the towns that gives promise of being one of the coming cities of the west. Mr. Yager is a young man of excellent ability and without doubt will reflect credit on the office to which he has been elected.

DIED IN STRATFORD—Word was received here yesterday (Wednesday) of the death of Mr. John Prang in Stratford, after a prolonged illness. The deceased was a native of Hay Township, where he lived for many years and was well and favorably known. Moving from Hay he has since lived at Goderich, Seaforth and Stratford. Deceased married Mary Jane Preszcator daughter of the late John Preszcator of Stephen, by whom he is survived. The remains will be brought to Exeter for burial, the funeral taking place on Friday under the auspices of the Oddfellows, to Exeter cemetery.

HEAVEN TOUCHING EARTH.

"And a little child shall lead them."—Isaiah 11,6.

"And he called—a little child—and set him in the midst."—Matthew 18,2.

PART I—THE LENGTHENED SHADOWS.

A child, shabbily dressed, with tousled hair, childhood feet pressing through onetime shoes, but withal a sunny smile greeted us. "Mamma sick," quoth little Ruth, as we entered the mother's room. Yes—too true. How beautiful this mother must have been ere the Demon of Drink had robbed her of rosy cheeks, flaxen hair and heaven-lit smiles. There she lay, with fevered brow, athirst. A Canadian mother cased the throbbing pain somewhat, resting her head, with angel touch. Ashes strewed the floor, no chairs awaited our reception, grim want was everywhere. Both parents, recently from the Mother country, were slaves to drink. The Bar had done its work, for she had drunken at at the open Bar. Tears were in the voice of the man of God as he read, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow," "Neither do I condemn thee," 'Let not your heart be troubled," then sang "Other refuge have I none." There was the bating breath, the shadows were lengthening. "My darling Ruthy—my Babe," she cried, then the tired soul, sinned against more than sinned, was at rest.

Pt. II—THE GLOW OF THE CROSS

Little Ruth wondered, but what could a child of four summers understand Poor little angel. Her ragged garments were burned. How lovely she looked dressed anew. "Will Ruth pray?"—it was night, but how amazed was the child, was the child, "Me don't know what you mean, Mamma", answered the fondling to the new found mother. The intoxicating Cup had robbed this child of both her God and prayer. But admidst a new environment the heart re-

CHARGES AGAINST AILSA CRAIG POSTMASTER.

Ailsa Craig, Dec. 20th.—The investigation into the charges against John Morgan, postmaster here, for malfeasance of office, preferred against him by Miss Ella Stonehouse, formerly in his employ, were taken up here today, before Mr. W. R. Meredith, London, commissioner in charge of the investigation. Miss Stonehouse, who for nearly fifteen years had been Mr. Morgan's assistant, was discharged last summer, and after going to Moose-Jaw, wrote the Post Office Department that Mr. Morgan had been guilty of irregularities in the discharge of his duties. The matter was at once taken up, the first session being held at London, on Monday, Dec. 16th, when a preliminary hearing was given. It was afterwards decided that the evidence be heard in open court at Ailsa Craig, at which place it would be much more convenient for all concerned. Miss Stonehouse was represented by Mr. L. H. Dickson of Exeter, while Mr. McDiarmid of Lucan and Mr. Jared Vining of London took Mr. Morgan's case.

The first charge was that Mr. Morgan opened a letter from the department by which Mr. Walker was appointed to succeed Mr. Morgan. The next was that the postmaster had endeavored to persuade her to influence young men to vote Liberal. Later she charged that Mr. Morgan had refused to place copies of the Toronto News in the letter boxes for voters, and that he had destoyed some circulars sent out by Mr. Elliott, the Conservative candidate, Mr. Morgan denied every one of the charges but one, that being the last, the destruction of circulars sent out by the Conservative candidate. To this Mr. Morgan admitted, saying the circulars had been addressed to everybody in the vicinity, and he destroyed only those addressed to people who had died and others who had moved away. Mr. Meredith thought this a most serious offence. As Mr. Morgan had several witnesses to call Mr. Meredith decided to adjourn the proceedings until Friday next, when the case will be resumed in London.

PRINCESS ZARA.

The S. S. of the Trivitt Memorial Church, assisted by members of the other S. Schools in the village, presented the difficult, but beautiful, operetta, Princess Zara, in the Opera House on Friday evening.

The performance has been highly spoken of by all who were present. In fact it was one of the best amateur perpertormances seen in Exeter for some time. Great attention was given to the minutest detail in scenic and dress effects, for which the plot is admirably adapted. The shading of the light on the stage by means of a magnifying lantern, skilfully manipulated by Mr. Wm. Clayton, added effectively to the work and the goods. Evil spirits, personified by a group of little girls, dressed to represent butterflies, who were the fairies, and a group of girls, dressed in the orthodox garb of witches, who were able to cast a spell or curse upon Princess Zara, upon which the plot is constructed.

Lillian Boyle, as Princess Zara, played a difficult and trying part. Lillian gave evidence of real artistic merit and is capable of undertaking more serious work

Birdie Boyle, as Queen of the Butterfly fairies, presented a charming picture in her quaint and attractive costume, her singing of the song, Butterfly Fairies, was much appreciated.

Mary Acheson, as Grewsom, the leader of the witches, also took a leading and a most difficult part. Mary made up in real acting for what was lacking in an attractive costume, as her part was performed always in a shadow.

The five Maids of Honor, including Miss Jessie Manson, Grace Sanders and Blanch Atkinson, performed the parts of Violette, Firenza and Carina, very well. Gerald Hurdon took the part of King Bunocore, and although it was Gerald's first appearance on the stage so creditably did he take his part that we may look for other appearances in similar work. Jack Southcott, in Prince Florizel, ably sustained his reputation which he made in his work in the performance of last year. The kitchen scene, between Prince Florizel and King Bunocore, was very funny. Harry Fake took a difficult part in Baron Locomo. This was Harry's first effort and much credit is due him. Willie Davis, Clifford Mallott, Gordon Wells and Archy Davis as Camilla, took the parts of pages. Wm. Heideman, Lloyd Rivers, Lloyd Stacey and Wm. Birney took the part of guards. The prettiest picture of all was the Fairies, with Maggie Case as Tortiseshell, their leader. Great credit is due the ladies of the S. S., who prepared the costumes. Wm. Clayton's act, as a chauffeur, in a performance between the acts was funny in the extreme. Mr. John Markham, upon whom devolved the responsibility of the whole performance acted as accompanist, assisted by Dan Sanders and Clark Fisher, as violinists. The proceeds amounted to $98.

OUT FOR COUNCIL.—Messrs. R. G. Seldon and M. M. Doyle, we are given to understand, have, owing to the solicition of a large number of friends, decided to allow their names to go before the electors of Exeter for councillors. Both men should make excellent town fathers, as they have been successful business men and good citizens. Other names have also been mentioned, but these are the only two of whom we have heard that they have definitely stated that they will be in the running, outside of the old council who will probably all stand.

Serving the Apple.

Apple Custard.—Take apples of medium size and rather mellow. Pare, core and bake until tender in a slow oven. Press through a sieve. To each cupful of apple pulp add a half cupful of cream, two level tablespoonfuls of sugar, lump of butter size of an egg and two stiffly beaten eggs. Put the butter in the apple pulp while it is still hot. Heat the sugar until it is a syrup and add first the yolks of the eggs, then the cream and beat all strongly. Pour into buttered cups and bake in a moderate oven for 15 minutes. Remove from the oven and quickly pour over it the stiffly-beaten whites of the eggs, return to the oven to brown. When cold set in the ice box. Serve with cream.

Apple Custard Pie.—Strain apple sauce and beat smooth. To each cupful add a half cupful of cream and two stiffly beaten eggs. Beat in half a cupful of sugar, and flavor with vanilla and nutmeg. Bake with under crust and put a thick meringue on top.

Ginger Apples.—Pear and core some good apples, greenings or pippins. Fill the cavity in the centre of each apple with a spoonful of chopped preserved ginger. Stand them on a baking-dish that is not tin, and pour over them a syrup made either of sugar and water flavored with lemon and with a piece of dried ginger cooked in it, or if there is enough ginger syrup this may be used with the addition of a little water. Bake until soft and transparent but not broken, basting occasionally with the syrup. Serve hot or cold with a little whipped cream garnished with some pieces of ginger.

Porcupine Apples. — Pare and core the apples, and make a syrup by boiling sugar and water in equal parts. As soon as the fruit is pared, before it is discolored by standing, immerse it in the syrup and cook until it is easily pierced with a straw. Then take out the apples and ornament the sides of each by sticking blanched half almonds in all around. Fill the centres with jelly, preserved fruit or marmalade and serve hot or cold with cream. With the remaining syrup and the skins and cores, apple jelly may be made.

Apple Snow—Stew or steam three large apples, cored and quartered, but not pared, drain them and rub through a fine sieve. Beat the whites of three eggs stiff and add half a cupful of powdered sugar and beat again; now add the apples and beat until like snow. Pile lightly in a glass dish, garnish with jelly around the edge and serve with cold boiled custard made with the yolks of the three eggs that were left.

Apple Pudding.—For this pudding you will need one quart of flour, one pint of milk, one pint of chopped apples, one saltspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of butter and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Make a dough of the flour, milk, butter, baking powder and salt. Roll out in the board and spread with the apples, roll over and over, pinching the sides and ends. Place in a baking pan with one-half cupful of butter, two cupfuls of sugar and three pints of water. Bake an hour and a half. It makes its own sauce.

Apple Charlotte.—Line a mold with lady fingers or sponge cake. Soak a third of a box of gelatin in a third of a cupful of water (cold) until soft. Pour over it a third of a cupful of boiling water and stir till dissolved. Add one cupful of sugar and the juice of a lemon together with a cupful of sour apple sauce drained dry and put through a sieve. Cool in a pan of cracked ice and when the jelly begins to harden, beat until light. At the last add three whites of eggs well beaten, and then beat all together until stiff. Pour into a mold and when cold and stiffened turn out on a platter and serve with a sauce made from the yolks of the eggs, a pint of milk and sugar to sweeten. Boil like a custard.

Apple Dumplings.—Make a rich biscuit and separate it into as many parts as there are dumplings to be made. Roll each piece into a round big enough to cover an apple and put into it a peeled and cored apple. Then bring the sides of the paste around the apples, pinch them into shape and steam or bake. The above may be added to by a mixture of raisins and nuts or with jelly. Two cupfuls of flour will make two dumplings.

Deep Dish Apple Pie.—Use a pudding dish of crockery or enamelware and place a teacup without a handle upside down, in the centre of the dish. Cut up some apples rather fine and heap up the dish until a little above the cup. Sprinkle a few raisins over the top, sweeten and add some spice, either nutmeg or cinnamon, and put little pieces of butter all about the top and a little water. Cover the entire top of the dish with crust and cut slits or prick holes at intervals in the crust. Do not remove the cup until the pie is served at the table, when you can insert the blade of a knife under the edge of the cup, which will allow the air to go in and release the juice of which you will find you have a cupful, and the fruit will be deliciously steamed. This kind of a pie will not hurt the digestion of anyone; and it should be eaten cold.

Home Hints.

A veil rolled each time it is taken off will keep neat much longer than when folded; gloves pulled out and smoothed will wear twice as long as if they were crushed and tossed into a drawer.

A piece of rubber may be cut more easily if the scissors or knife used be wet first.

Drop a few small nails in the bottle of ink. The acid in the ink will then exhaust itself upon the nails, and the pens will not corrode.

Mayonnaise dressing will separate when too much salt has been added to the egg yolks, or when the oil has been dropped too fast, or if the ingredients are not thoroughly chilled when used.

If a spoonful of borax is put into the last water in which white clothes are rinsed it will whiten them very much. The borax should be dissolved in a little hot water before it is added to the rinsing water.

When it is necessary to measure any liquid by the drop one may dispense with the pipette. Cut a small notch at the edge of the cork, just large enough for a drop to come through at a time; push the cork in tight and pour.

The cleaning of feather pillows is not a task to be dreaded. Place a couple of pieces of board across four tin coffee cans and set in the bottom of the boiler. Put three inches of water in the boiler, place the pillows on the board, cover the boiler, and let the pillows steam for an hour and dry in the sun.

For removing old paint make a lye with one can of potash and half a gallon of water, apply with an old paint brush and do not touch with the hands, as it will burn. Wash off and dry well.

For bruised furniture wet the part with warm water, double a piece of brown paper five or six times, soak it in warm water, lay it on the place, apply on that a warm flat-iron till the moisture is evaporated. If the bruise is not gone repeat.

To remove perspiration stains from silk waists sponge the place over your hand with a clean white rag wet in clear water; then cover completely with powdered prepared chalk. Let it dry thoroughly and brush off carefully with a soft brush.

For sore throat get one teaspoonful of common baking soda, dissolve it in a glass of hot water and gargle three times a day. It is also a good preventive. Do this once or twice a week and you will not contract any complaint that may be in your locality.

TORONTO CORRESPONDENCE

INTERESTING BITS OF GOSSIP FROM THE QUEEN CITY.

Two Noted Temperance Reformers—The Champion "Marrying Minister"—Professor A. B. Macallum.

Two of the most unusual men in Toronto are the Spence brothers, Francis S. and Ben H. Their business is lighting the liquor traffic. It furnishes ample for speculation as to what would have happened the Temperance movement in Ontario had it not been for the presence of the Spence family and also what will happen to it when they have been removed from the sphere of action.

The first week of January is, under the present arrangements, their annual harvest, for on the Municipal election days a goodly number of Local Option contests are, each year, to the front. This year there are to be 80 of them, involving 274 licenses. The contests are in municipalities ranging from a big city like Peterboro' to the sparsely settled township with its one lone hotel. In 8 years, under the leadership of the Spence brothers, 293 municipalities have carried local option and 741 bars have been cut off. Of the 823 municipalities in the province, 463 are now under local option and 365 retain the licensee system.

Began as School Teacher.

F. S. Spence has devoted practically all his life to temperance reform and municipal politics. It is true he started out as a school teacher, teaching at Lundy's Lane and Prescott, afterwards coming to Toronto, where he became principal of a large school. But when the Dominion Alliance was organized by some 16 members of Parliament in 1875 F. S. Spence had already made such a reputation as a temperance advocate that he became almost its first secretary and has remained such until this day. He has been editor of various temperance publications of which the present day representative is the "Pioneer," and the list of offices he has held in connection with various temperance organizations and campaigns would fill half a column.

In recent years he has devoted a great of time to municipal affairs. Six times he has been elected as Alderman, and six times as a member of the Board of Control. Twice he has been an unsuccessful candidate for the Mayoralty, and although he is recognized as perhaps the most intelligent critic of municipal affairs in the city to-day, it is doubtful if he will ever attain the Chief Magistrate's position. His work for the Hydro Electric project, the Harbor Commission, and for various other phases of municipal progress stamp him as one of the most useful servants the city has ever had. At the same time his chances of success in any contest are nearly always doubtful. He does not make friends easily and is somewhat austere in his manner to strangers. He retains, too, the air of the school master, didactic, but not always sympathetic. To many his most human trait will be the fact that he smokes.

Another Crusader.

His brother, Rev. Ben. H. Spence, is not so well known, but since 1906, when he succeeded F. S. as Secretary of the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance, he has, by his energy and enthusiasm, shown that the spirit of the crusaders is by no means monopolized in the Spence family by Frank S. He has been described as "a temperance enthusiast with a long paper knife spearing fat saloon keepers!" In early life he went into the ministry, where he served until appointed to his present position.

A Record in Marrying.

The record as the "marrying minister" in Toronto is this year held by Rev. John D. Morrow, the somewhat eccentric minister of Dale Presbyterian Church, who has come into prominence in other respects by his records as a sprinter and supporter of athletics, by his work among habitues of the Police Courts, and for his campaign for a new $80,000 church edifice.

Mr. Morrow has married over 300 lovelorn couples, an average of one for every week day in the year. In some quarters there is a disposition to criticize him on the ground that many of his marriages ought not to be performed. But as he does not issue the licenses the responsibility is not altogether his. At all events his record far outdistances those of all competitors. Canon H. C. Dixon, at Trinity Church, in the heart of a great population of newly-arrived English immigrants of the poorer class, came second with about 140 for the year. Others who have been favorites with the matrimonially inclined are Rev. A. L. Geerie, of the Presbyterians and Rev. C. O. Johnston, the Methodist divine, who attained prominence by his attacks on Roman Catholics.

The distinction of being favorite in the marrying line is subject to fluctuation. Rev. Alex. Williams, whose Anglican church is close to down town Yonge Street, used to lead all others, but his district has changed, and he is now down to fourth or fifth place.

University and Atheism.

The stormy petrel of University affairs is Professor A. B. Macallum. There was great excitement when his name was proposed for membership in the Academy of Medicine and much satisfaction in certain quarters when he was blackballed. Although scholastically and intellectually Professor Macallum has few equals in Canada. He is a member of the leading medical and scientific associations of the world and has literally scores of degrees and honors.

As often happens, however, in the case of a man with a strong personality, Professor Macallum has made many bitter enemies. One class of these include a number of medical men who are disappointed with his policy and actions in the administration of the General Hospital. Another class are personal friends of a prominent personage whom it is alleged Professor Macallum attempted to injure many years ago.

Now the Catholic Register attacks Professor Macallum whose department is the not unfitting with particular reference to Theosophism as being a "half-baked atheist" and for destroying the religious beliefs of the minds of the students. The attack is being backed by the students' publication which points out that since the coming of President Falconer, who is a prominent Presbyterian Divine, the tone and character of University men has steadily risen. It is declared that far from the University being a "hotbed of atheism" there are no atheists there at all, except possibly a few isolated individuals, in whose cases it will pass off like the measels.

LIME THAT BURNS ITSELF.

Said to Have Become Impregnated with Petroleum.

A traveller in the Holy Land is said to have recently discovered a species of combustible limestone, which makes an excellent plaster after it has been burned and air-slaked and is produced cheaply.

The stone is of a grayish-black color and is found between ordinary limestone in a regular stratum. It is easily quarried, being rather soft, and has a peculiarly strong odor of kerosene.

The people break the stone into small pieces and fire it into a kiln of rough construction built of stones against a wall. Holes are left in the sides of the kiln, through which tufts of straw are stuck. These tufts are lighted with flint and steel and the lime ignites and burns itself.

It requires twelve hours to burn a kiln, and then it is found that all of the rock, except that at the top and some around the sides, has been thoroughly burned.

The lime produced is of a good white color. It burns with a black smoke and an odor similar to that of petroleum. When cool it is air-slaked and screened. The self-burning quality is accounted for by the supposition that the limestone has become impregnated with petroleum in the earth.

Old Furniture.

Most of us have some old furniture with which we would not willingly part. It is not the intrinsic value of the tables and chairs which makes them dear to us, but the old associations which cluster about them. Forms and faces rise before us when we see the time-worn articles, faces which beamed upon us in byegone days, and forms which have long since passed to the world of shadows. The pleasure of the possession of such relics is not unmixed. Often it is nearer pain than pleasure, and ever it has an undertone of sorrow, for they tell us how short is the span of even the longest life, how things temporal outlive their owners, and whisper, often to an inattentive ear, that the day must come when we, too, shall part from our earthly belongings and the place which knew us once shall know us no more forever.

"How old are you, Ethel?" "I'm five, an' mamma says if I'm good an' eats lots o' oatmeal I'll be six next birthday."

Mr. Newlywed — Doesn't this omelet seem—er—rather tough, my dear? Mrs. Newlywed—I don't see why it should, darling. I'm sure I ordered the very best egg coal the dealer had to cook it with.

TUBERCULOSIS SERUM TEST

Dr. Friedman Shows His Alleged Cure to Many Eminent Physicians and Scientists

A despatch from Berlin says: Dr. Hermann Friedmann, who says he has discovered a preventive and cure for tuberculosis, on Tuesday opened his first institute for demonstration. Personally he inoculated with his serum several patients, women, children and men, in the presence of eminent physicians and scientists from Berlin, London, Paris and other cities of Europe and America. Dr. Friedmann still refuses to give out any of his serum, saying that from a tiny drop of it a bacteriologist could propagate enough of the bacilli to supply the world. Dr. Friedmann's small quarters were swamped by patients, physicians and scientists. The physicians numbered more than fifty. Dr. Friedmann told all the patients and their physicians that results from his serum begin to show in most cases within five weeks.

TRAINMAN KILLED.

And Engineer Received Broken Leg and Internal Injuries.

A despatch from Sudbury says: Xavier Pacaud, brakeman, of North Bay, killed, and Engineer Thomas, of North Bay, leg broken and internal injuries, is the casualty list following a derailment one mile this side of Byng Inlet at 8 o'clock on Wednesday morning on the Sudbury-Toronto line of the C.P.R. An engine, tender and van were proceeding backwards to Sudbury, the derailment taking place on a bridge and all except the van going over. Brakeman Pacaud was riding on the tender and was instantly killed.

Describing the sketch from which this drawing was made, Mr. Seppings-Wright says, under the heading "A Mother's Sacrifice": "During the retreat many distressing incidents occurred. For instance a country wagon stuck, and one of the children in it fell into the mud just in front of the cavalry fugitives. The mother sprang to the rescue, but the cloud of cavalry closed over her and the child. Whether she escaped or not I never found out, but more than likely she was trampled into the mire."

TO AVOID TUBERCULOSIS.

Rules Which, If Observed, Would Drive Out Consumption.

A healthy body is the best protection against the tubercle bacillus or any other disease-breeding germ. Therefore, keep well by observing the following rules:—

Live, work and sleep in rooms flooded with fresh air and purified by sunlight every day. See that your sleeping room is thoroughly ventilated.

Use good, pure, nourishing food, and thoroughly masticate what you eat.

Cultivate cleanly, temperate and regular habits of living.

Avoid breathing dust-laden air. In sweeping and dusting use a moist broom and duster.

Universal observance of these simple rules would render unnecessary the maintenance of costly sanitoria. A portion of the King Edward Fund of one million dollars for Consumptives will be devoted to the spread of knowledge designed to prevent the further increase of the disease.

CENTURY OF PEACE.

Great Britain Plans for the Great Celebration.

A despatch from London says: Earl Grey was the principal speaker at the Mansion House on Wednesday at a meeting to arrange celebrations of the century of peace between the English-speaking peoples. Earl Grey was heartily applauded in his remark that, although the boundaries of Canada and the United States were side by side for four thousand miles, not a sentinel, fort or gun was placed along them. He recalled the visit to Ottawa of Elihu Root and the impression created by his emphatic declaration that peace between the two countries would remain unbroken. The sum mentioned as indispensable for an adequate celebration is $250,000.

ROBBED THE KING.

Library of Danish Monarch Rifled By One of His Secretaries.

A despatch from Copenhagen says: The private library of King Christian has been the field of operations for a thief. The fact was discovered on Wednesday, and an assistant secretary is charged with being involved. The loot included rare and unique books, miniatures and pictures. The stolen articles were sold to dealers in second-hand goods, who are said to have disposed of a large part of them in the United States.

ELECTRICIAN HAMILTON DIES

Result of Illness Dating From Search for Titanic Victims.

A despatch from Halifax, N.S., says: Frederick Hamilton, electrician of the cable steamer Mackay-Bennett, died on Thursday morning after about six months' illness, dating from the time he accompanied the ship on the search for the dead in the Titanic disaster.

TELEPHONE A GREAT BOON

HAS SAVED MANY LIVES SINCE ITS INVENTION.

Doctors Have Benefited Greatly by Professor Bell's Famous Discovery.

The telephone has been a great factor in improving the health and welfare of the community, according to the view of the editor of The Medical Review of Reviews. He says:

With the development of modern transportation, it was said that the oceans no longer separated America from Europe and Asia, but served to connect them. In a similar way it may be said that telephones have helped to bring physicians and patients together.

A Marked Decrease.

"The telephone has been a mighty factor in improving the health and welfare of the community. Health bureaus have been able to accomplish their work more rapidly and effectively by the use of the telephone. Ambulance service has been developed to a high state of efficiency through the accessibility of telephones in all parts of the community. Rapidity of service, with promptness in 'phoning, have served to save many lives that otherwise might have been lost.

The private practioner, it is true, has suffered a marked decrease in his emergency calls through the recognition of the value of ambulance service and the ease with which one may be summoned by telephones. In fact, the doctor's 'phone is frequently used to call the ambulance. Only a few years ago the nearest physician was called for minor conditions at all hours of the night. To-day the telephone saves many a long and needless journey. Frequently, because of the knowledge and appreciation that a physician may be quickly summoned by 'phone in case of real necessity, the doctor is not called at all, as some transitory condition has disappeared before morning.

Gain Discounts Loss.

"In contrast to this small loss is the gain through telephone visits in lieu of office calls. Such 'phone visits may be regarded as office visits, on the ground that if telephones did not exist it would be necessary for the patient to seek advice at the office. Undoubtedly the telephone has enabled patients to cling to their family physician after moving from his original sphere of influence, whereas if there were no telephones such loyalty would have been impossible. Prof. Bell and others who followed him in developing the telephone system added greatly to the comfort, happiness, progress and welfare of society, in all of which the physician has enjoyed his share."

New cartage tariffs of 50c. per ton and 15c. for "smalls" were fixed by the Railway Commission.

RUBBER OIL IN JAP GOODS.

Extract From Seeds Is Applied Without Machinery.

The vegetable oil used in making paper umbrellas in Japan is pressed out of the seeds of the rubber plant. This oil is made in the various islands famous for oil and seeds from these plants. Sandy ground is favored for the cultivation of the plant, and the oil is extracted from the seeds by presses. The yield of seeds is estimated at twenty bushels per acre. The annual production throughout Japan amounts to 350,000 bushels, from which over a gallon of oil per bushel is extracted. The oil before it is used is boiled and then cooled until it can be applied by hand to umbrellas with a piece of cloth or waste. No machinery or tools are used in applying the oil. When the oiling is complete the umbrellas are exposed in the sun for about five hours. This oil is also used in making the Japanese lanterns, artificial leather, printing ink, lacquer, varnishes, oil paper, and paints.

122 IN THE SHADE.

Terrible Heat Wave Strikes South Australia.

A despatch from Sydney, N. S. W., says: One hundred and twenty-two in the shade is the record put up by the first heat wave experienced in Australia this summer. This was recorded at Eucla, a station on the South Australian border. At Poma, in Queensland, the mercury stood at 110, while Newcastle, the coal city of New South Wales, has had the hottest spell for 16 years, accompanied by dust and wind storms. Other parts of New South Wales were affected, but in Sydney the heat was less severe, the thermometer going only to 93. No deaths are reported.

BRAKEMAN LOSES LEG.

Jerked Off Top of Train and Run Over at Wyoming.

A despatch from Sarnia says: William McIntyre, a young Grand Trunk brakeman, was badly injured while working on Tuesday on his train. He was passing over the tops of cars as the train was entering the yards at Wyoming, and, when the cars gave a sharp jerk, he was pitched between two openings and fell on the rails below. One leg was run over by the wheels and he was otherwise injured. He was rushed to Sarnia, where Dr. Hayes amputated the injured limb. He will recover if complications do not set in.

BOY ALLEGES CRUELTY.

Says Farmer Turned Him Out Without Money or Overcoat.

A despatch from Sarnia says: The Children's Aid Society, in whose charge he is at present, is investigating the case of Solomon Hadlington, a Barnardo boy, who in court stated that a Dawn township farmer, for whom he had been working for the last four years, had the other day told him his contract had expired and turned him adrift without money or even an overcoat, and clothed only in a light summer suit.

MONTREAL HARBOR BOARD.

Farquhar Robertson and Lieut.-Col. Labelle Are Two Members.

A despatch from Montreal says: The announcement is made that Mr. Farquhar Robertson and Lieut.-Colonel Labelle will be Montreal's new Harbor Commissioners. Mr. Robertson having declined the Chairmanship, the third member of the board, who has not yet been appointed, will take that position. It is persistently rumored here that Major George Washington Stephens, the former Chairman, will get the office again.

MR. ASQUITH'S DAUGHTER.

In Company With Lady Aberdeen Will Visit America.

A despatch from London says: Violet Asquith, daughter of Premier Asquith, sailed by the Celtic on Thursday on a short visit to America as the guest for part of the time of Mr. and Mrs. Bryce at Washington. Miss Asquith was joined at Queenstown by the Countess of Aberdeen, wife of the Lord-Lieutenant for Ireland.

KING GEORGE ELECTED.

Honorary Member of New York Yacht Club.

A despatch from New York says: His Majesty King George V. of England was elected an honorary member of the New York Yacht Club at the meeting of the club on Thursday night.

Militant suffragettes cut telephone communication with Nottingham.

John McDougall was arrested at Hanover on a charge of burning the house of his brother-in-law, Edmund Boyce, on a Bentinck farm, November 26, and confessed his guilt.

LONDON'S BAD AIR EATS IRON

IRON GIRDERS THAT HAVE BECOME LIKE PUTTY.

Ruinous Effect of Soot Fall on the Buildings of the Metropolis.

"It's no wonder that so many Canadians come to London to live break down in health," said an English engineer to a correspondent, "for they come, mostly, from cities where the air is comparatively wholesome, to the most destructive atmosphere in the whole world—an atmosphere under whose influence stone disintegrates, and that even eats up iron."

"It is because of the atmosphere of London," he went on, "that the new front of Buckingham Palace is to be of Portland stone instead of the Caen variety, as it is at present. The latter, we have found, crumbles away so quickly under the London air that it is almost always in the hands of restorers and painters, whereas Portland stone is less susceptible to the atmosphere and accordingly is almost always chosen nowadays for any new public building.

"The properties of the London air are really amazing," continued the expert. "It is a blend of smoke and soot—there are hanging over London every day—which contain lots of sulphur, and this sulphur, when it meets certain substances, forms sulphuric acid—or vitriol.

"It was the vitriol in the atmosphere that brought the big roof of Charing Cross Station down with a crash a few years ago. The smoke from the locomotives had eaten away the iron, which was not sufficiently painted. Some years ago, too, before the London underground railway was electrified, it was a favorite pastime at Gower Street Station for passengers to go and poke umbrellas into a certain iron girder, which at one point was almost as soft as putty.

"In such cases, paint is the engineer's great standby. In some ways it is more powerful than iron. Many London buildings, in fact, may be said to be practically held together by paint, especially railway stations. Since the Charing Cross disaster, all the big London termini are in the painters' hands practically all the time. Since the Forth bridge was finished the painters' have never stopped working on it. But for a skin of paint the vitriol in the engine smoke might rot the bridge.

"It is this substance, too, that has made Cleopatra's Needle, on the Embankment, show greater signs of age since it came to London, forty years ago, than it did after in the clear air of Egypt. Probably the difference in the twin obelisk that stands in Central Park, New York, in a corresponding time, is so slight as to be hardly noticeable."

Offhand, one would say that every building of any age in London was of the greyest granite obtainable, yet when one of them is cleaned, as a few have been lately, it proves that they originally were almost white, and the transformation is a bit startling. In a dissecting room, they always can tell whether a patient is a Londoner or a countryman, for, whereas, the lungs of the latter are the natural color, pink, those of the former are jet black.

The London soot covers one's face with smudges, and, if you leave any white material in front of an open window for an hour or so, when you come back you will find it littered with "blacks" as they are locally termed. The soot kills vegetation, too, unless it is tended most carefully. In the garden inside the Bank of England, the leaves are washed every week with soap and water.

AIDS TO NAVIGATION.

Notice of Motion for Parliamentary Committee to Investigate.

A despatch from Ottawa says: Mr. E. N. Lewis (W. Huron) has given notice of a resolution in the Commons calling for the appointment of a special committee to investigate and report on the whole system of aids to navigation on the St. Lawrence and great lakes. The intention is to thoroughly re-organize the present pilotage system in the St. Lawrence, with a view to insuring as far as possible against a recurrence of the accidents of the past season.

Victoria, B.C., Council may erect a public salt-water bath-house to cost $125,000.

We submit that all men are not alike. Yesterday we heard of a man who always hangs up the towel he uses.

"What is the charge against him?" "I'm not certain as to the specific charge, but the trouble is that he exceeded the speed limit in getting rich."

THE EUROPEAN CRISIS AND THE CANADIAN NAVAL CONTRIBUTION

"The realization is strong upon the people who have given the subject sympathetic thought that the hour has struck whom the unity of the Empire should be made manifest in the eyes of the world; that Britain has been making herculean efforts to strengthen her naval forces; that in consequence of her expenditures upon the fleet have risen to almost incredible proportions that even if the burden is not too great for her strength it is one that should be shared by the Dominions; that a crisis now exists in European affairs which makes it of extreme importance that whatever be done by Canada be done not grudgingly nor of necessity but willingly and unitedly."

Such are the words, in part, not of a member of the Borden Cabinet, but of the Montreal Herald, a leading Liberal organ in Montreal is uttered editorially and formally to Sir Wilfred as leader of the opposition. Could Mr. Borden ask a stronger endorsement of his position and policy and of the necessity for both? Remember, it has well been said that in any war which Britain may have to wage against the great powers of Europe, Britain will have to stake her life against "the enemys" limb. Yes, the supremacy of the seas is vital to Britain; the continued existence of Britain is vital to Canada and to all her daughter nations. Therefore and let us never forget it Britain's supremacy at sea is vital to Canada.

We have then no choice but to act, now and to act so strikingly that the world will sit up and take notice that the cubs are now full grown and the lioness and rely upon them to assist to protect the lair.

After a three days sitting last week the special committee of the Legislature on Assessment decided that there had been no case made out for any radical change in the Assessment Act in regard to the general exemption of improvements. Inequalities were shown to exist, but these are due to the inefficiency of a large number of assessors. Assessors should note that the value of an improvement is the value by which the value of the land is increased by the impovement, not the cost of the improvements. An increase will be made in the income exemption, and the "farm land" classification will probably be changed. Mr. Elber of South Huron, a member of the committee, presented a statement showing clearly how by means of local option the police villages in a township could outvote the farmers and shift the burden of taxation from their own shoulders to that of the agriculturist. Mr. Elber added that in his constituency the residents of police villages were in some cases able to outvote the farmers from the townships in which they were placed. Sir James Whitney, after expressing approval of an increase in the income exemption and the elimination of "farm land" in towns and villages, wasted no time in making his position clear. "I don't propose," he declared, "that all over the province wherever there is a little excitement and bullabajoo caused by the particular manner in which this question was advertised and the means brought to induce the Council to act that the assessment system shall be changed. I am satisfied that there is no demand whatever, except from a few individuals for this local option in taxation."

The Legislative grant to rural Public and Separate schools is earned on the salaries and certificates of the teachers. In 1906 it amounted to 187 265 dollars, and in 1907 the first year in which the present system for computing grants was used—$356,726.42 As salaries increased, the amount earned approached almost half a million, which was almost $100,000 in excess of the appropriation. In 1912 it was arranged that the 40 per cent. paid by the Department in respect to salaries should begin at $350 for Principal and $250 for assistant teachers, instead of $300 and $200, as had formerly been allowed. In spite of this an over draft for $66,000 had to be obtained in order that the grants earned might be paid in full. The Government has decided that all grants for educational purposes must not exceed the amount voted, which is $400,000 so that a pro rata reduction may be necessary in order that the amount paid to the schools may be within the appropriation above referred to. The grant on Interim First and Second Class certificates is now withdrawn in accordance with the policy of the Department. The grant on First and Second Class Permanent Certificates remains the same.

The following from the Stratford Herald is to the point:—The office of Mayor in an Ontario town is an honorable position and ought so to be regarded. Its duties the presiding at the Council meetings is the representative character. He frequently is called upon to meet distinguished visitors and to preside at at unofficial gatherings in his town. He ought therefore to be a person of good address, fair education and social experience. In England, not infrequently, people of the highest standing are willing to serve their fellows in this office and devote much time in the interest of their fellow citizens. This sort of municipal government with us, however, seems to be avoided by many of the able business men. To their honor, be it said, that some have been willing to make the sacrifice of time, and, what they dread worse, endure the critic and vote, unfair and financially injurious. On the other hand municipal preferment is often sought by men fitted by their ability, character or experience, and some of the least competent often desire most the Mayor's chair.

If your boy friend wants you to conceal things from your mother, little girl, be on your guard, believe me. You surely cannot take it as a compliment that he is ashamed of you. You surely cannot expect him to think highly of a girl who deceives her mother, who acts a lie to her best earthly friend. If he knows anything at all, he knows that the girl who will deceive her mother will deceive her lover, and, later on, her husband. Deceiving mother is romantic but it leads to destruction.

If a man shows a disposition to provide for his old age, don't discourage him by saying he is stingy.

One of Jacob Haberer's heavy mares fell dead in Conrad Simon's lane, while drawing out a load of gravel.—Owing to the Christmas entertainment at the 14th concession Sunday evening, there will be no services in the Evangelical at Zurich.—Geo. Broderick of London has received word of the death of his mother in North Dakota. The remains were brought here last week, the funeral taking place at the old home on the Babylon line, south of the Zurich road.—While operating a rip saw at the Canada Furniture Factory, Seaforth, Mr. Henry Grisbrook met with a very serious accident, which will in a measure cripple him for life. In some manner his right hand came in contact with the saw, which severed all the fingers and badly cut the palm of the hand as well.

CLANDEBOYE—We are sorry to announce the death of Mrs. James Atkinson, which took place last week. The sympathy of the whole community goes out to the family it being only ten months since their father was killed by a G. T. R. train.

SEAFORTH—One of Seaforth's oldest and most respected citizens in the person of Richard Hammett passed away peacefully on Wednesday morning Deceased was a native of Devonshire, England, and came direct to Seaforth over 40 years ago. For 18 years he was engaged as engineer at the furniture factory, and for ten years was engineer at the water works, from which position he retired a few months ago on account of ill health.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

HELP THE MUSKOKA HOSPITAL

Dear Friend—

It is an old story—wounded on a journey—robbed—shunned by friends—dying—when fortunately a Stranger whom Christ has immorlized, and whom all the world loves, comes to the rescue with his sympathy and money.

Not one maimed but hundreds of poor unfortunates—robbed by a wasting disease, so that health and money are all gone—too often shunned by friends who fear the dread disease, Consumption,—even Hospital refusing admission—dying unless timely aid is given.

This is the story the Muskoka Free Hospital tells for the Christmas Season of 1912.

The Trustees believe that Canada—most favored land in all the world—is filled with thousands of Good Samaritan, who like their namesake of old, will claim a share in giving the help urgently needed to care for these poor sick and suffering ones, and to extend the work of providing for those seeking admission.

Perhaps you know of one who might have been saved and in whose memory you will help to save some poor sufferer of to-day or to-morrow.

$250.00 will maintain a bed for a year.

$5,000.00 will endow a bed for all time.

Will you help? Every dollar counts.

Yours faithfully

W. J. GAGE,

Chairman of Executive

P.S.—Since writing the above, it occurs to me that a number of our good friends have, within the past few weeks, remembered the needy Consumptives with their gifts. To such I confirm with sincere thanks the acknowledgement already sent.

SAINTSBURY

Mr. Wm. Wilkinson and family have moved from the Quinton farm to Mr. Fred Ellerington's, Thames Road. Mr Geo. Ford has moved onto the Quinton farm.—The Sunday School held a Christmas concert in Memorial Hall on Friday night. A program was given and a Christmas tree relieved of its burden of joy for the children.—Mrs. Thos. Mains of Watford is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Dickins.—Mr. John Mains of Regina, after a visit here, left last week for Watford.—Mrs. W. J. Smith and Miss Annie Washburn spent Christmas at Guelph.—The people of St. Patrick's church presented Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Dickins with a secretary and couch last week previous to their departure for Lucan to reside. A pleasant evening was spent by all.

FARQUHAR.

Messrs. Amos Francis and Samuel Madge attended the Fat Stock Show at Guelph and report the show a huge success.—Mr. J. J. Mitchell of Wingham spent a few days in the vicinity as agent for Saskatoon property.—A very pleasant time was spent at Thames Road School. After a prolonged and entertaining program rendered by the pupils and others, a beautiful Christmas Tree was relieved of its burden and all went merrily home rejoicing. The chair was ably occupied by Mr. Thos Cameron.—The people of Bethany Church gathered at the home of Mr. Frank Clark one evening last week and presented him with a well-filled purse as a token of their appreciation of his services as leader in the singing.—We understand our blacksmith is about to move to Granton. We are sorry to lose Mr. and Mrs. Hepburn, as they had proved themselves to be good citizens, and our town is in much need of a blacksmith.

ROYAL PURPLE
Stock & Poultry Specifics

FREE We will send absolutely free, for the asking, postpaid, one of our large 64-page books (with insert), on the common diseases of stock and poultry. Tells how to feed all kinds of heavy and light horses, colts and mares, milch cows, calves and fattening steers, also how to keep and feed poultry so that they will lay as well in winter as in summer. It contains 300 recommends from all over Canada, from people who have used our goods. No farmer should be without it.

You can fatten cattle and hogs in a month's less time by using our Royal Purple Stock Specific than you could possibly do without it, thereby saving a month's feed and labor and the cost to you will not be more than $1.50 for six pigs or $1.00 for one steer. It will keep your horses in show condition with ordinary feed. If you have a poor, miserable-looking animal on your place try it on this one first and see the marvellous result which will be obtained. Our Stock Specific will increase the milk flow three to five lbs. per cow per day, while being fed in the stable. A 50c package will last a cow or horse 70 days.

ROYAL PURPLE POULTRY SPECIFIC will make your hens lay just as well in the winter as in the summer, and will keep them free from disease. These goods are pure and unadulterated. We do not use any cheap filler to make a large package, entirely different from any on the market at the present time.

Royal Purple Stock Specific, 50c pckgs.; four 50c pckgs., in an air-tight tin, for $1.50.

LOCAL OPTION

sponded to the touch of the Master Then we understood what He meant, "Except ye be converted and become as little children".

Could we adopt this child? The anxious quest was written upon this mother's face. This cultured woman had recently parted with an only son of ten. They were wealthy. What an open door for the homeless child. The County Policeman, rugged, with a grip of iron, one to be feared under other circumstances, rested his hand upon the Minister's shoulder. "You did not know a bunch of us were watching you taking the child to her new home, did you? You remembered, when turning the street corner, you lifted her, she put her arms about your neck. I'll tell you I have bairns plenty, but I wanted the child myself."

Can you come at once? Such was the hurried request. There little Ruth lay, pillowed in snowy white, an anxious father and mother bending over her. The few months in the Christian home had wrought such changes. The skilled physician shook his head. The early hardships, which Drink had wrought were manifest. Mamma" "Yes dear," "Hear Ruthy her evening prayer." We bowed our heads. This glow-light shone from the Cross. "Dear Jesus, bless papa and Mamma," (a pause) "Bless Ruthy and help her to be good", (pause again, as she caught her breath) "Watch over poor little children to-night"—"Now I lay me down to sleep"—"Amen". 'Mamma, kiss me, I'm so tire". The hours moved slowly, the change had come, the lips whispered, ' 'Jesus'"—' Mamma". Beautiful were the floral wreaths, inspiring were the songs sung by the children's choir,—"When He cometh to make up his jewels." Bowed with deepest grief were the hearts of this foster father and mother, because of one so beautiful. Still they whispered—Her life lent to us has not been in vain.

Will you, my dear reader, arm yourself to destroy this Demon, which robs such little children of homes of mother, and the joys of Christmas time, yea, and of heaven? This is the reason for our labor in this Local Option movement. Will you not join us?

Your Committee wish you all a Merry Christmas.

This is the time for the Calendar fiend who is on the go as soon as they hear that a merchant is giving away Calendars, as a result very often there will be three or four in a family from the same firm while others will take them to their homes and cover the name of the firm with a piece of ribbon, in consequence most of the business men here have dropped this system of advertising and instead are confining themselves to the most profitable medium, that is by placing an "Ad." in the local paper. If you want anything in any line you will be sure to find it amongst the Christmas Advertisements. Read them closely, then patronize those who advertise your needs.

Have You A Farm For Sale?

The Publicity Association for Huron County intend to publish a list of farms properties for sale in this county, and ask any persons having a farm for sale to send at once to any member of the Executive, named below, particulars of such farm, describing it and stating price at which they will sell. When advts. of sufficient farms have been received, the Executive will publish the list in circular form for general distribution in the Old Land and in the United States, without charge to the advertisers.

The Poet and the Sunsets.

The gorgeous grandeur of the sunsets thrills me,
The brilliant colors and the golden glow.
I think sometimes it must be I'm a poet,
For poets all say it affects them so.
I love to watch the sinking sun's departure
And muse and wonder why it goes away.
It leaves with regularity, I've noticed,
It fills my soul with deep poetic feeling
To watch the daily setting of the sun.
I've started several poems on the subject,
But somehow I have never finished one.
But none the less the daily sunsets fill me
With vague poetic feeling and unrest.
Another thing I've noticed about sunsets—
You regularly see them in the west.
—Somerville Journal.

He Did His Best.

"Here, waiter," said the man who expected to be at the hotel for several days, "is a dollar. Now, I want you to look after me promptly and see that I get the best of everything. When I get ready to leave, if your service has been satisfactory, I'll give you something more."

The waiter obsequiously bowed and assured the gentleman that he should have the best the kitchen afforded, that it would always be served in a hurry and that there would be neatness as well as dispatch.

On the second morning after the gentleman's arrival he had nearly finished his breakfast when he suddenly summoned the waiter and, angrily pointing to his coffee, asked:

"Do you call that taking good care of me? Look at the size of the flies in there! Two of them! Look at the size of 'em!"

"I'm very sorry, sir," the waiter replied, with every evidence of the deepest regret. "Them's the smallest flies we have."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Reason.

The women ask, "Why don't the men
Wear comfortable dress,
As women do, in summer time
And thus avoid distress?"

To this men everywhere reply,
"We did when we were kids,
But since we've come to man's estate
Our modesty forbids."
—W. J. Lampton in New York Sun.

Handicaps of an Only Son.

A family on the north side have several children, but only one—the oldest—is a boy. The little lad grew used to sisters, but longed for a brother. The boy was twelve recently, and the house was rather upset in anticipation of something or other. The father was busy, and the son had to sift the ashes and care for the furnace. At this juncture a nurse appeared on the scene, and two days later she came to the little boy.

"What do you think you've got?" she asked him.

"A baby brother!" fairly gasped the youngster.

"No, dearie; it's a baby sister," replied the nurse.

"Gosh!" groaned the youngster. "Must I always sift these ashes?"—National Monthly.

Denatured.

We're all a lot of carping fans;
We scold and sneer and bellow.
Just listen how the partisans
Condemn the other fellow!
And yet if candidates were free
From all this reckless gunning
It wouldn't take us long to see
There'd be no fun in running.
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Strong Willed.

"Aren't you afraid you may become a slave to the smoking habit?"

"No. I can quit whenever I want to."

"How do you know that? Have you ever tried it?"

"No, but I've cured myself of the habit of voting for every candidate who is nominated by the political party to which I belong, and a man must have a strong will to do that."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Mercenary Bard.

The ardent ode I wrote to Kit
Did not appeal to her a bit,
She took the pains to say.
But what care I? It made a hit;
An editor accepted it
And sent a check today.

Views to Suit All Applicants.

"This is annoying," said Senator Sorghum as he tossed a letter on his desk.

"What is the matter?" inquired his secretary.

"A constituent has written to ask my views on the tariff and has neglected to state whether he is a manufacturer or a consumer."—Washington Star.

Wonderful Cures Reported in Germany.

The use of simple herbs as remedies instead of the more concentrated and usually more dangerous inorganic substances, has been revived very widely of late. In Germany a new school of physicians has arisen which throws out almost a whole of the pharmacopeia and relies on an adaptation of the method of wild animals in curing themselves. . . . . N. Y. World.

It was Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y., who first advocated the extended use of some of our native roots, such as: Golden seal and Oregon grape root, mandrake and queen's root, black cherrybark. These are the chief ingredients in Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which has been so well and favorably known for nearly half a century. A harmless cleanser and stomach tonic that nature has provided.

J. D. MATHESON, ESQ.

J. DONALD MATHESON of Ossining, N. Y. says: "I suffered for over five years with what the doctors told me was dilated condition of the stomach, associated with a catarrhal condition of same, and nervous heart. I had tried enough nux, bismuth, gentian, rhubarb, etc., to float a ship and naturally thought there was no cure for me. But after reading what eminent doctors said of the curative qualities of the ingredients of 'Golden Medical Discovery' I gave it a fair trial. Took the 'Discovery' and also the 'Pleasant Pellets,' and can truthfully say I am feeling better now than I have in years. I cheerfully give permission to print this testimonial, and if any 'doubting Thomas' writes me I will 'put him wise' to the best all-around medicine in the country to-day."

FREE TO YOU—MY SISTER

FREE TO YOU AND EVERY SISTER SUFFERING FROM WOMEN'S AILMENTS.

I am a woman.
I know woman's sufferings.
I have found the cure.

I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from women's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure — you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhoea or Whites, Discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths, also pains in the head; back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles when caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete 10 days' treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial; and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer, if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhoea, Green Sickness and Painful or Irregular Menstruation in Young Ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all woman's diseases and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten days' treatment is yours, also the book. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address:

CHAPTER XXIX.

It is of course a truism that we never fully appreciate what we have, until some trouble or some other loss shows us all that has grown familiar in a fresh light. Fond as he had been of his home before, Frithiof had never until now quite realized what it meant to him. But as each evening he returned from work, and from the severe trial of an atmosphere of suspicion and dislike, he felt much as the sailor feels when, after tossing about all day in stormy seas he anchors at night in some harbor of refuge. Sigrid knew that he felt this, and she was determined that he should not even guess her trouble. It was with her certainly as she went about her household work, with her as she and Swanhild walked through the hot and crowded streets, and with her as she played at Mme. Lechertier's Academy. But there was something in the work that prevented the trouble from really preying on her mind; she was sad indeed, yet not in despair.

Nevertheless, Mme. Lechertier's quick eyes noted at once the change in her favorite.

"You are not well, cherie," she said, "your face looks worn. Why, my dear, I can actually see lines in your forehead. At your age that is inexcusable."

Sigrid laughed.

"I have a bad habit of wrinkling it up when I am worried about anything," she said. "To-day, perhaps, I am a little tired. It is so hot and sultry, and besides I am anxious about Frithiof, it is a trying time for him."

"Yes, this heat is trying to the strongest," said Mme. Lechertier. "Swanhild, my angel, there are some new bonbons in that box; help yourself."

The child was never happier than when hard at work at the academy; even on this hot summer day she never complained; and in truth the afternoons just brought the right amount of variety into what would otherwise have been a very monotonous life.

"Sigrid," said the little girl, as they walked home together, "is it true what you said to Madame Lechertier about Frithiof feeling the heat? Is it really that which has made him so grave the last few days?"

"It is partly that," replied Sigrid. "But he has a good deal to trouble him that you are too young to understand, things that will not bear talking about. You must try to make it bright and cheerful at home."

Next morning (Sunday) was so bright that Sigrid persuaded him to take a walk, and fully intending to return in an hour's time to his translating, he paced along the Embankment. He crossed Blackfriars Bridge and walked further and further, and on to the further bank of the Tower—solid and grim, as befitted the guardian of so many secrets of the past. Even here there was a quiet Sunday feeling, while something familiar in the sight of the water and the shipping carried him back in imagination to Norway, and there came over him an intense longing for his own country. It was a feeling that often took possession of him, nor could he any more account for its sudden seizures than the Swiss can account for that sick longing for his native mountains to which he is often liable.

"It's no use," he thought to himself. "I [illegible] take me the best part of my life [illegible] pay the debts, and till they are paid I can't go."

CHAPTER XXX.

Perhaps it was almost a relief both to Frithiof and to Sigrid that, just at this time, all intercourse with Rowan Tree House should become impossible. Lance and Gwen had sickened with scarlatina, and of course, all communication was at end for some time to come. So that, perhaps, the only person who sighed over the separation was Cecil, and she was fortunately kept so busy by her little patients that she had not time to think much of the future.

By the middle of August, Lance and Gwen had recovered, and were taken down to the sea-side. But in spite of lovely weather that summer's holiday proved a very dreary one. Roy was in the depths of depression, and it seemed to Cecil that a great shadow had fallen upon everything.

"Robin," said Mrs. Boniface, "I want you to take that child to Switzerland for a month; this place is doing her no good at all. She wants change and mountain air."

So the father and mother plotted and planned, and in September Cecil, much against her will, was packed off to Switzerland to see snow-mountains and water-falls.

Still, being a sensible girl, she did her best with what was put before her, and though her mind was a good deal with Sigrid and Frithiof in their trouble and anxiety, yet physically she gained great good from the tour, and came back with a color in her cheeks which satisfied her mother.

"By the bye, dearie," remarked Mrs. Boniface, the day after her return, "your father thought you would like to hear the 'Elijah' to-night at the Albert Hall, and he has left you two tickets."

"Why Albani is singing, is she not?" cried Cecil. "Oh, yes; I should like to go, of all things!"

"Then I will tell you what we will do; we will send a card and ask Mrs. Horner to go with you, for it's the church meeting to-night, and father and I do not want to miss it."

Cecil could make no objection to this, though her pleasure was rather damped by the prospect of having Mrs. Horner as her companion. There was little love lost between them, for the innate refinement of the one jarred upon the innate vulgarity of the other, and vice versa.

It was a little after seven o'clock when Cecil drove to the Horners' house and was ushered into the gorgeous drawing-room.

"My dear," exclaimed Mrs. Horner, entering with a perturbed face, "did not my letter reach you in time? I made sure it would. The fact is, I am not feeling quite up to going to-night. Could you find any one else, do you think, who would go with you?"

Cecil thought for a moment.

"Sigrid would have liked it, but I know she is too busy just now," she remarked.

"And oh, dear, far better go alone than take Miss Falck!" said Mrs. Horner; "I shall never forget what I endured when I took her with me to hear Corney Grain; she laughed aloud, my dear; laughed till she positively cried, and even went so far as to clap her hands. It makes me hot to think of it even."

"I always enjoy going anywhere with Sigrid," said Cecil. "It seems to me that her wonderful faculty for enjoying everything is very much to be envied. However, as there is no chance of her going to-night, I will call and see whether one of the Greenwoods is disengaged."

So with hasty farewells she went off, laughing to herself as the cab rattled along, to think of Mrs. Horner's discomfort and Sigrid's intense appreciation of Corney Grain. Fate, however, seemed to be against her; her friends the Greenwoods were out for the evening, and there was nothing left for it but to drive home again; or else to go in alone and trust to finding Roy afterward. She decided to go alone, and writing a few words on a card asking Roy to come to her at the end of the oratorio, she sent it to the artiste's room by one of the attendants, and settled herself down to enjoy the music, secretly rather glad to have an empty chair instead of Mrs. Horner beside her.

All at once the color rushed to her cheeks, for, looking up, she saw Frithiof crossing the platform; she watched him place the score on the conductor's desk, and turn to answer the question of some one in the orchestra, then disappear again within the swing-doors leading to the back regions. She wondered a little that Roy did not come to her; or, at any rate, send her some message, and at the end of the last chorus began to feel a little anxious and uncomfortable. At last, to her great relief, she saw Frithiof coming toward her.

"Your brother has never come," he said, in reply to her greeting. "I suppose this fog must have hindered him, for he told me he should be here; and I have been expecting him every moment."

"Is the fog so bad as all that?" said Cecil, rather anxiously.

"It was very bad when I came," said Frithiof. "However, by good luck, I managed to grope my way to Portland Road, and came down by the Metropolitan. Will you let me see you home?"

"Thank you, but it is so dreadfully out of your way. I should be very glad if you would, only it is troubling you so much."

"You will be giving me a real pleasure," he said. "I expect there will be a rush on the trains. Shall we try for a cab?"

So they walked out together into the dense fog, Cecil with a blissful sense of confidence in the man who piloted her so adroitly through the crowd.

At last, after much difficulty, Frithiof secured a hansom, and put her into it. She was secretly relieved that he got in too.

"I will come back with you if you will allow me," he said; "for I am not quite sure whether this is not a more dangerous part of the adventure than when we were on foot. I never saw such a fog! Why, we can't even see the horse, much less where he is going."

"How thankful I am that you were here! It would have been dreadful all alone," said Cecil; and she explained to him how Mrs. Horner had failed her at the last moment. "You have not met my mother since she came back from the sea. Are you still afraid of infection? The house has been thoroughly painted and fumigated."

"Oh, it is not that," said Frithiof; "but while this cloud is still over me, I can't come. You do not realize how it affects everything."

"It does not affect your own home."

"No, that's true," said Frithiof. "It has made me value that more, and it has made me value your friendship more. But, you see, you are the only one at Rowan Tree House who still believes in me; and how you manage to do it passes my comprehension—when there is nothing to prove me innocent."

"None of the things which we believe in most can be absolutely proved," said Cecil. "I can't logically justify my belief in you any more than in our old talks I could justify my belief in the unseen world."

"Do you remember that first Sunday when I was staying with you, and you asked me whether I had found a Norwegian church?"

"Yes, very well. It vexed me so much to have said anything about it, but you see, I had always lived with people who went to church or chapel as regularly as they took their meals.

"Well, do you know I was wrong; there is a Norwegian church down near the Commercial Docks at Rotherhithe. It is too far for Sigrid and Swanhild to go very often, but to me it is like a bit of Norway planted down in this great wilderness of houses," he said. "It was strange that I should have happened to come across it so unexpectedly, just at the time when I most needed it."

"But that surely is what always happens," said Cecil. "When we really need a thing we get it."

"You learned, before I did, to distinguish between needing and wanting," said Frithiof. "But I, you see, had to lose everything before understanding—to lose even my reputation for common honesty. Even now it seems to me hardly possible that life should go on under such a cloud as that. Yet the days pass somehow, and I believe that it was this trouble which drove me to what I really needed."

"It is good of you to tell me this," said Cecil. "It seems to put meaning into this mystery which is always puzzling me and seeming so useless and unjust. By the bye, Roy tells me that Darnell has left."

"Yes," said Frithiof, "he left at Michaelmas. Things have been rather smoother since then."

"I can't help thinking that his leaving just now is indirect evidence against him," said Cecil. "Sigrid and I suspected him from the first. Do not you suspect him?"

"Yes," he replied, "I do. But without any reason."

"Why did he go?"

"His wife was ill, and was ordered to a warmer climate. He has taken a situation at Plymouth. After all, there is no real evidence against him, and a great deal of evidence against me. How is it that you suspect him?"

"It is because I know you had nothing to do with it," said Cecil.

He had guessed what her answer would be, yet loved to hear her say the words.

(To be continued.)

On the Farm

Succulent Food for Stock.

Just as one enjoys eating an apple occasionally—especially during the winter, when less fruit and vegetables are used than during the summer—just so the live stock in the winter, when their rations consist largely of dry feed, need and appreciate some form of succulent food. There is very little added expense in supplying animals with a reasonable amount of succulent food, either in the form of roots or silage. For a herd of twelve or more cows, this succulent food is most cheaply supplied by the use of silage; but for the smaller herd, or for a man without a silo, roots afford an excellent substitute for silage.

By care in preparing the soil and growing the crop, from fifteen to twenty-five tons of roots, like mangels, rutabagas or stock carrots can be grown per acre. They can be stored under the feeding-alley or in a pit outside of the barn, at very little expense. Twenty tons of roots will supply ten cows twenty pounds per day each for 200 days, and can be grown and harvested at a cost of less than $40. The nutrients contained in twenty tons of roots are worth $30 when bran is worth $20 per ton; so the feeding value of the roots is sufficient to pay for the cost of production, beside the additional advantage of their supplying the succulence needed by the animal.

Planting Seeds of Fruits.

Large seeds like peaches and plums may be planted in the fall, and they will freeze sufficiently during the winter to cause them to sprout readily in the spring. Small seeds like the apple, grape, etc., should be mixed with sand in the fall or early winter, and placed in a shallow, open box. The box should be set flat, on the ground on the north side of a building where it will keep moist and remain there all winter to freeze and thaw as often as it will. The contents of the box should never be allowed to dry out. Very early in the spring just as soon as the soil in the garden will do to work, the seeds should be planted in rows and covered very lightly. The seeds may be separated from the sand with a sieve, but this is unnecessary as sand and all may be sown in the row. Take care that the seeds do not become dry before they are planted. Apple seeds begin growing very early, so that care must be taken to get them in the ground before sprouting begins.

In the Poultry Yard.

It is a mistake to keep late hatched pullets of the large varieties for winter layers. These are always the late moulters. A hen changes her coat at the same time each year.

If convenient separate the fowls into several bunches. They will lay more eggs than if crowded together in one house. For instance if a hundred hens are kept, divide into four or five flocks and have a separate house or apartment for each flock.

Don't forget to store plenty of cabbage for the hens. They take the place of grass better than anything else with the exception of green rye. In case the cabbage crop is a failure then by all means sow a patch of rye in the fall.

Save all the turnips, rutabagas, pumpkins, etc., that can be conveniently stored for winter poultry food. They may be fed either cooked or raw. Cooked vegetables, of course should be mashed and thickened with ground grain. Always remove the seed from pumpkins.

Raise More Sheep.

Fifteen or twenty ewes, and a ram, will constitute about the right-sized flock with which to begin. They must have abundant shelter from rain and snow; but it need not be in a warm barn. Wet, whether from above or underfoot, is to be scrupulously guarded against by the sheep-owner. Exposure in a cold rain is bad for a horse or steer; it is doubly bad for sheep. The sheep sheds should be on a high, well drained site—indeed, sheep should be allowed to run over no low, wet land, no matter how attractive the herbage thereon may be.

Except that the ram should have a little grain now and then, to maintain his virtility, and the ewes a little at lambing time, the flock will require only pasturage for the greater part of the year, with clover hay or like roughage for winter feeding. The farmer with only himself and a child or two to carry the burden of caring for animals, will often find the keeping of sheep more advantageous than the keeping of cattle.

THREE AMUSING STORIES.

"King Edward In His True Colors," by Mr. Edward Legge.

"King Edward In His True Colors" is the title of a book that has just been published from the pen of Mr. Edward Legge, which is aimed to controvert the life written by Sir Sidney Lee, in the Dictionary of National Biography. Here are two or three amusing stories from it:

"At Marlborough House one night in the eighties the King, who was then Prince of Wales, was playing billiards with some of his guests. 'H.R.H.' was not in particularly good form, and, after a rather bad shot, one of the younger men shouted, to the amazement and disgust of the others: 'I say, Wales, pull yourself together!' The Prince made no reply, but beckoning to a servant, said: 'Call Mr. ——'s carriage!'"

"Etiquette prescribes that those who are invited to meet sovereigns, or their heirs-apparent, should wear, when they possess them, the orders of the visiting monarch, or his representative for the time being. The Marquis de Soveral, when he was once commanded to Sandringham, where some of the members of the Royal Family of Greece were staying, was seen by King Edward at the dinner to be wearing the wrong decoration. His Majesty quietly removed his own Greek Order, and under cover of the table cloth affixed it to the nether end of the Marquis's waistcoat. None of the party perceived this timely, good-natured action, the amusement being divided between the King and the then Portuguese Minister."

"An American soldier was once asked what he thought of the Prince of Wales. 'What do I think of him?' replied the sergeant in a burst of enthusiasm. 'Why, Albert Edward gave me my first start in life! When the Prince was over here on a visit to the President, a grand review and luncheon was given in his honor right here in Boston. A friend of mine, a Mrs. Brown, was there, and was fairly 'gone' on the young Prince, like everybody else. They all raved about him. After the luncheon she said to me, 'Oh, corporal, can't you give me something that the Prince of Wales has touched. I don't care what, as long as it's something, if it's only a fish-bone.' 'Well,' I said, 'I'll get you those duck bones that I see there on the Prince's plate!' I went over to the table where the Prince had sat, picked up every one of the duck bones that he had left on his plate, and passed them on to Mrs. Brown, who gave me three dollars for the prize, and went her way as proud as a Thanksgiving turkey. I then strolled around the table, collected all the bones which the other people had left, made them up into little parcels, and traded them off to my friends as the real, original duck bones that the Prince of Wales had left on his plate! It was a regular cinch, and I cleared forty-eight dollars by the deal! That's how I got my first start in life from your Prince, the loveliest young gentleman I ever struck."

HERO OF LIGHT BRIGADE.

Sir George Wombwell Celebrates His Eightieth Birthday.

Sir George Wombwell, who has just celebrated his eightieth birthday, has been described as the Major Pendennis of our day. He withstood all the horrors of the Crimea, rode with the Light Brigade without turning a hair and even still is envied by men half his age for the skill of his tailor and the way he wears his clothes.

His home is Newburgh Priory, in Yorkshire, a historic mansion which holds more secrets of history than many places of greater fame. Sir George, who married a daughter of the sixth Earl of Jersey, celebrated his golden wedding a couple of years ago.

Sir George took part in the great charge immortalized by Tennyson, and after having two horses shot under him and falling into Russian hands he escaped and returned to camp with "all that was left" of the heroic brigade.

CONVALESCENT.

The Victim—"Well, it's had a relapse!"

Still Anxious.

"Are you going to keep your new cook?"

"I can't tell. We don't know yet whether we suit her.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE

Every farmer who allows an outside closet to remain on his farm is Looking for Trouble—disease and illness—for himself and his entire family.

It Has Been Proved

That nine out of every ten cases of illness on the farms are directly traceable to the outside closet—that horrible sink of disease and filth.

Just think! You allow this horror to remain within a few steps of your home—and force your family—your wife and daughter to use it—in all weathers—winter and summer.

Why, man, it's outrageous! Especially when you consider how little it would cost you to install a Good Health Sanitary Closet—right in your own home. Imagine how your family will appreciate its privacy and convenience. Make up your mind now to get rid of that outside privy. We will show you how.

That Terrible Fatigue Can Be Overcome

A Simple Home Remedy Now Cures Lack of Energy, Loss of Ambition, and a Feeling of "Don't-Care."

Successful in Nearly Every Case.

That miserable nervousness and half-sick tired-all-the-time condition is due nine cases in ten to a clogged-up system. You grow irritable and despondent, you lack ambition, energy seems all gone. Surest road to health is by the frequent use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they will make you feel like new all over in a short time.

Writing from his home in Barcelona, Mr. Frederick G. Mayer states: "I think no one ever suffered as severely as I did for nearly six months. So many serious symptoms were developing as a consequence of this evil condition of my system that I realized I must find a remedy. The strong pills of various kinds I tried seemed after their first effects were over to make me far worse and I did not know which way to turn for relief. I saw Dr. Hamilton's Pills advertised, and the first box used satisfied me. I found a true remedy. Instead of griping with undue activity, Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted as naturally as if physic had not been taken. I never had to increase the dose, indeed, within a month I reduced it, and when the system finally acted of its own accord as a result of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I took a dose twice a week only, just to make sure the old condition would not come back."

No other remedy cures constipation and biliousness so easily or safely as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are an ideal family remedy for all diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels. Sold in 25c. boxes, five for $1.00, all druggists and storekeepers or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

LORD ROBERTS AT 80.

"No man could inculcate with better right the lesson of patriotism and physical fitness which is of the essence of the system of national service which he has striven to recommend," says the London

Lord Roberts.

Times of Lord Roberts, who has just completed his eightieth year. "Experts may differ as to the military value of some features in that scheme, but its moral value, and its influence on physique, are sufficient alone to make its adoption urgent in one or other form.

"The greatest moral which young Englishmen may drew from the example of Lord Roberts' career is precisely that which a system of national military training is most designed to fulfil—the duty of 'keeping fit' for national ends. With all his genius and capacity for work, the secret of Lord Roberts' sixty years of public service has been, we think, the constancy with which he has kept his faculties trained to meet the most sudden call of duty."

Just What He Said.

Housekeeper—"How's this? You promised to saw some wood if I gave you a lunch." Tramp—"I recall no such promise, madam." "The idea! I told you I'd give you a lunch if you'd saw some wood, and you agreed." "Pardon me, madam. Your exact words were—'I'll give you a lunch if you saw that wood over there by the gate.'" "Exactly. That's just what I said." "Well, madam, I saw that wood over by the gate as I came in."

THE HOME OF 7,000 MONKS

WOMEN CAN'T SET FOOT ON SACRED MT. ATHOS.

Once a Famous Retreat for Banished Notables of Byzantine Empire.

Among the possessions of disrupted Turkey in Europe there is none to which the Greeks have greater claim than the holy Mount of Athos, the most easterly prong of nature's trident—the three similarly shaped peninsulas that extend into the Aegean sea a few miles east of Salonica. Among the inhabitants of the sacred mount, some 7,000 in all, the greater part are Greeks, men who have withdrawn, most of them voluntarily, from life to eke out a lonely existence among the rocky defiles of the peninsula, dividing their time between the cultivation of heaven and earth.

Mount Athos, situated at the extreme southern point of the peninsula, rears its snowcapped summit 6,350 feet above sea level. It looks for all the world like one of the pyramids of Egypt transplanted to a colder clime, and its history is replete with as much mystery and charm. Stand on the plain of old Troy—to-day swallowed up in the name Anatolia—and you may see the hoary peak of Athos against the setting sun. Or climb to the heights of Olympus, in old Thessaly, and there, among the once sacred groves which to-day are infested with bands of thieves who fear neither god or man,

You Again See Athos.

These two peaks, one famous to-day the abode of gods who are become but myths, and the other the abode of holy men, are soon to become Greek again, if Greek diplomacy can so turn the wheel of fortune.

Nothing perhaps is more interesting of the many peculiarities of Mount Athos than the fact that men and even female animals are forever barred from set foot upon it by a decree issued without the middle of the eleventh century. Lonely man lives there miserable existence—for miserable it must be where no woman has a part—and dying disappears. Young monks come from the world to take the places of those who in their own behalf are "translated," but the name or that monk remains but a memory. Life there is the downhill stumble to old age and the grave. Never a gay laugh and seldom a smile, so that the sun shines on this God chosen spot in vain.

There are twenty monasteries on Mount Athos all belonging to the order of St. Basil and twelve affiliated monastic communities where live the lay brothers. Others of these religious fanatics occupy hermitages far distant from each other, their goings and their comings guided by the ascetic principles of Saint Athanasius.

Of the monasteries the largest is Russian, there are two Serbo-Bulgarian and the rest are Greek, so that the latter race is largely in the majority, and thus dominates the community and the assembly which governs it. To this assembly each monastery sends one representative. But the Government is very primitive, as are the lives of the monks.

The Monastery Libraries

are vast storehouses of information, containing until comparatively recent times many priceless relics which the monks, their intellectual development having been left to its own devices, cared little or nothing for. Many of these documents tell in the language or Xenophon of the glories of a Greece that was. Indeed, much of the history of the East is locked up in these dust-filled coffrefortes in which from time to time this or that wanderer has come across a priceless relic to carry off to the museums of Europe. One of the most notable finds was a papyrus containing the fables of Aesop in Coliambic verse. But so many curio collectors, attracted by the fabulous tales of voyagers, have taken passage for Mount Athos that the monks have become suspicious and now refuse entrance to nearly all strangers. The larger part of the monastic valuables, however, are in safe and more worthy hands. The Turks destroyed much of the valuable papyri in the monasteries in making cartridges during the war of the Greek independence in 1820-29. Other valuable documents were torn up by the monks themselves for fishing bait. Such is the value of historical documents to these monks who spend their time apart from their religious devotions in fishing and tilling the land.

In 1749 an attempt was made to establish an academy on the mount. For a time it flourished, drawing the flower of the youth of the East, but the teaching was so primitive that the academy became deserted and to-day is over which tangled vines, lizards and other crawling things hold sway. When the star of the Byzantine empire was at its zenith Mount Athos was a chosen retreat for those in court disfavor. Many others, wealthy and noble, had their fling at life and then betaken themselves to Mount Athos, where, viewed from the ... the year Athos is ... exquisite beauty, with the tints of dying foliage. High up the mountain the monasteries ... be seen clustering in the niches scooped out by nature. They are all strongly fortified and, with the exception of Rossikson, the Russian monastery, their architecture is a quaint representation of the Byzantine period which had so much influence on the ... mount to its inhabitants. On the ... separates the mount from the ... lard traces can still be seen ... canal dug by Xerxes and ... before the invasion of Greece ... B.C. It is the story that ... dug the canal because he ... he lose his ships in doubling the cape.

Among the Turks who ... main land in proximity to Mount Athos there has always been a superstition that the Russian monks, some 3,000 in all, are in reality Russian soldiers in disguise, and if ever war should break out between the two countries the monks would seize their arms and march down onto the plain. With the passing of Turkey in Europe it can only be conjectured what new attitude will be assumed between the monks and their "unholy" neighbors.

TOLL OF WAR IN FIFTY YEARS.

Over Two Million Men Have Been Killed in Battles.

The Balkan war has given the generation some idea of what war means in detail. It is significant of the growing horror that a Bavarian newspaper should present its readers with a striking record of the wars of the last fifty years.

Under a series of little pictures of fallen soldiers on the battlefield it gives the number of killed in each great war of the past half century, with the strange exception of the Boer war. Here is the record:

Crimean war, 750,000; Italian war of 1859-60: 45,000; American civil war of 1861-65, 800,000; Danish war of 1864, 45,000; Franco-German war, 215,000; Russo-Turkish war, 250,000; Russo-Japanese war, 200,000.

The addition of these figures shows that no less than 2,313,000 men were killed in these wars.

Mexicans Peddle Water.

In some parts of Mexico water is very scarce. Perhaps that accounts for the lack of cleanliness among the natives. Here and there you will see water carriers who have small tanks strapped on their shoulders in much the same manner as the Italian carries his hand organ. In these they carry drinking water from house to house, selling it by the gallon.

A Boon to Stock-Raisers

To Know How to Cure Colic, Distemper, Colds, Swellings, etc., Saves Thousands Each Year.

Of Practical Interest to Horsemen.

It is a matter of vital importance to every farmer, horse-owner, and stock-raiser to know exactly what to do when one of his animals is taken suddenly sick.

The letter of Mr. Frank G. Fullerton, which we print below, gives information of inestimable value, and tells of his experience in curing ailing stock during the past thirty-eight years.

SAVED 1,000 BY NERVILINE

"Several years ago when my horse took colic I used to give them Cayenne Pepper in hot milk, but in a few cases only did I help, and because I had no proper means at hand I lost several valuable animals. Some one told me of the success Mr. Wending, of Brockville, Ont., had in his racing stables with 'Nerviline,' so I laid in a supply. It wasn't very long before Nerviline saved the life of a valuable stallion of mine, which was worth at least $1,000 00. This horse was taken with colic, and would have died had it not been for Nerviline. I have used Nerviline for reducing swellings, for taking out distemper lumps, and easing a bad cough, and always found it worked well. I recommend every man who owns horses or cattle to keep Nerviline on hand."

Keeping Better Time.

They were at the skating rink. "George," she asked, as they rounded the bend, "is your watch correct?" "Yes," replied George, with a merry laugh; "it is keeping better time since I put your picture inside the case." "Oh, you flatterer! How could that be?" "Well, you see, when I placed your picture inside the case I added another jewel."

Pat's Reply.

He had just concluded what he considered the best political speech of the century. "Well, Pat," he asked one of his hearers, with kindly condescension, "what did you think of my speech?" "Sure, it was a grand speech," averred Pat. "Was there any part of it more than another that seemed to hold you?" the speaker asked. "Well, now that you ask me, I'll tell ye," responded the Irishman. "What took hould of me most, sir, was your perseverance—the way ye went over the same thing agin and agin."

Interesting Pe... "Bounty" ...ers.

Bound for the South Seas on a cruise, which will last 185 days, H. M. S. Algerine, Commander Brooker, has just sailed from Esquimalt, B.C. Among other calls to be made will be one at Pitcairn Island, and Commander Brooker took with him clothing, books, etc., for the islanders, the descendants of the Bounty mutineers, who have so few visitors.

The residents of Pitcairn Island are a most interesting people. They are of a light copper color, being descendants of Englishmen who intermarried with natives. Their houses, mostly small cottages of three rooms, are built of lumber sawn by hand from native trees, some of the boards for finishing being secured from passing ships and the tools from kindly ship's carpenters. The men tend their gardens, build boats, fish, etc.

Some grain is grown, but not enough to supply the demands of the islanders and is threshed rudely with flails. The people are of a very religious turn of mind. They built a church many years ago in which is an organ sent to the island by the late Queen Victoria.

The population is about one hundred and fifty in number and the families are so intermarried that the majority of weddings are between cousins. The oldest man on the island is Governor; he is the executive, legislative and judicial branches all in one.

The first settlers were from the ship Bounty. The vessel left Spithead in 1787 and in the spring of 1789 Fletcher Christian and three companions broke into the captain's cabin and bound and gagged him, and the master and mates were set adrift in an open boat. They eventually reached land, and the mutineers after various vicissitudes reached Pitcairn Island and founded the colony which now occupies the little isle.

HICKS' FORECASTS FOR JANUARY. —A reactionary storm period is central on the 3rd 4th, and 5th. The chief astronomic causes of disturbances at this time are the equinoxes of Mercury, Mars and Jupiter. The month will open with cloudy unsettled weather. Falling barometer, bringing rain sleet and snow will pass over the country from west to east, on and next to the 3rd, 4th and 5th. Sleet will be a marked feature of these storms, especially in central and northern regions, and with a low dip of the barometer heavy snow will fall, and a cold wave from the northwest will wind up the period. The moon is in the extreme south on the 5th, pulling cold atmospheric tides southward from the north. Don't be unprepared for vicious winter storm and weather. A secondary period covers the 4th to the 10th, central on the 7th.
