DOGS PLENTIFUL HERE

London Has Eighteen Hundred or More of Them.

No Owner Will Be Allowed to Escape Payment of the Tax.

A complete list of the dog owners of the city is now in the hands of Inspector McCallum. It was obtained by a house-to-house visit made during the past two weeks by a quartette of men sworn in for the purpose, and the result will be a bigger sale of dog tags this year than has ever been known in the history of the city. No owner of a canine will escape the payment of a dollar, even if it is necessary to have him or her appear in the police court. When such a measure is resorted to an additional 85 cents may have to be paid by the owner.

The idea of making a house-to-house inspection was conceived at the city hall, for it was felt that in the past the city was not receiving as great a revenue from the dog owners as it should. Two members of the police force and two other citizens were sent out nearly three weeks ago, and in order to make the inspection the better they were sworn in as special constables and health inspectors, which clothed them with the authority to search a house if it was considered necessary. This was done where it was thought the occupants had got word of the approach of the inspectors and were attempting to hide the canine in the cellar or elsewhere. To show that the inspectors did the work thoroughly, it is told of one of them that at a South London residence the lady told the inspector that she had a dog for which she already purchased a tag, and to satisfy him she exhibited both the dog and the tag. That did not satisfy the visitor, who for some reason or other had his suspicions aroused and insisted on taking a look around for himself. He went into every room in the place, not overlooking the cellar, but was not rewarded for his trouble. It turned out afterwards that the house searched was occupied by a near relative of Inspector McCallum.

The inspectors met with considerable opposition, and heard not a few stories told in the hope that the owner might be relieved of the payment of the dollar. Whenever a dog was found, however, note of it was made, which means a visit to the inspector's office.

The sale of the tags had been going merrily on for some days, among the first to call with their greenback being the chief of police and Police Magistrate Love, both of whom have dogs which are said to be worth a dollar. Already over 1,200 tags have been disposed of, but it is expected that before the lists are gone through it will total about 1,800, for that is the number of names handed in by the inspectors.

Just as a warning Inspector McCallum has told every purchaser to defer putting the jewelry on his dog for a couple of weeks, as that will be a prevention of stealing, which has been so common in the past. "At the end of two weeks," the inspector would tell the buyer, "every person who owns a dog will likely have a tag, which will make it unnecessary to resort to stealing. By the way, if you have any near and dear friends who have dogs just tell them to come along and join in the procession and thus avoid a summons to the police court, which will mean an extra 85 cents."

To give every person a chance Inspector McCallum has decided not to take police court proceedings until May 16. After that time the names will be handed into the police court clerk at the rate of 100 to a batch. A word in time, etc.

WADE—WATSON.

A very pretty May wedding was celebrated on the 5th inst. at the residence of Mr. George Watson, West London, when his daughter, Nellie, was happily united to Mr. Henry Wade, of West London. Mr. Wade was formerly employed in The Advertiser job department. The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. Salton, of the Kensington Methodist Church. The bride was charmingly attired and carried a bouquet of white roses. Miss Emma Watson acted as bridesmaid, and Mr. Norman Wade as groomsman. After the wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Wade left for an eastern trip amid showers of rice. The choice wedding presents attested the popularity of the young couple.

THE HIGHLAND CADETS.

The St. Andrew's Highland Cadets, the kilted regiment of boys organized in this city a year ago, is to have a brass band in connection with it, bringing the total strength up to 76. The addition of the band will add very greatly to the attractiveness of the regiment. Mr. George Blinkhorn, clarionet soloist in the Grand Opera House orchestra, and a former member of the Seventh Regiment band, will be the leader. The cadets will participate in the reception to be tendered to Lord and Lady Minto on the occasion of their visit to London next week. NEW TRUANT OFFICER IS SWELLING SCHOOL ROLLS

Busy Looking After the Youngsters Who Play "Hookey."

Janitors and Secretary McElheran Get an Advance in Salary.

Some of the aldermen might do well to attend a meeting of the board of education some evening and see the business-like way in which that body gets through the work relating to the schools, where several thousand boys and girls are receiving an education. If there are any trustees who like to hear themselves talk, they seldom show their desire at the board meetings. To reach the adjournment as speedily as possible, without neglecting in any way the needs of the schools, is generally their object. Last night this was the case, and the members were home, or could have been, in elders' hours. Trustees Hamilton (Chairman), MacRobert, Dromgole, Evans, English, Gammage, Fitzgerald, McCormick, Birtwistle, Ziegler, McLean, Teasdall, Blackwell and Macpherson; Principal Merchant, of the Normal School; Principal Radcliffe, Inspector Carson and Truant Officer Weir were present.

TRUANT OFFICER ACTIVE.

Truant Officer Weir reported having visited each school every two weeks and procured a list of absent pupils, each case being investigated and the parents urged to send their children to school. Where opposition was encountered, notices were promptly served. The number of cases requiring the attention of the truant officer was becoming less, but there were yet quite a number of parents who did not appreciate the benefits of a good education. Difficulty was still experienced in getting at the correct age of supposed truants. A few weeks ago a woman in the police court swore that her son was 13 years of age. When she refused to send him to school, the husband was summoned to the police court, where he produced a German Bible and proved the boy was 16 years of age. Mr. Weir was also working at a disadvantage because the assessors neglected to take a census of the school children in the city last year, which left him without any means of knowing those of school age who were not attending. Great difficulty was found in dealing with five or six incorrigibles, who could not be sent to the reformatory or industrial school. Since Mr. Weir commenced his duties 58 pupils have been added to the school rolls.

GOT NO SATISFACTION.

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Bird, of 254 Dundas street, waited on the board in regard to the action being taken against them by Truant Officer Weir for neglecting to send their children to school. They did not have their children vaccinated, but they sent them to school only to be sent home, in accordance with the act passed by the Government.

Mrs. Bird addressed the trustees, who refused to take any action, as there is now a case pending against the husband in the police court. Mrs. Bird told the trustees that a number of children who had not been vaccinated were allowed to attend the schools, and she wanted the same privilege accorded to hers. She promised to bring the names if they were required.

"But that does not help your case any," was the answer she got from Trustee Birtwistle, who added that because other children were being allowed to attend the schools contrary to the regulations, it was no reason why hers should be.

Dr. English assured Mrs. Bird that if the names of the children were known to the school authorities, they would not be allowed to attend further unless they were vaccinated.

Mrs. Bird protested against the truant officer making visits to her place in regard to the children, who, she said, were not truants, but were a credit to the city. "Don't let him come any more," she said; "and what is more, I demand that my children be admitted to the school."

With that she and her husband withdrew.

JANITORS' SALARIES RAISED.

The question of janitors' salaries was dealt with by No. 2 committee in its report. The committee recommended increases to nearly all of the men and women who look after the schools, the advance being $8 a room per year, except in the case of two-room schools, where the increase is to be $10 a room per year. The janitor at the Simcoe street school was recommended for an additional $100, owing to extra work connected with the Normal Training School, which is held there, the board decided to charge the amount against the rent received from the source mentioned. The total amount of the increases will be about $1,000 a year, but as the advances are only to date from May 1, it will be met by the appropriation of $700 placed in the estimates for the increases.

On motion of Trustees McCormick and McLean, the salary of Secretary McElheran was increased from $800 to $900 a year. Trustees Blackwell and Gammage voted against the motion.

No. 2 committee was instructed to call for tenders for coal, and also for the changes required at the West London school.

TEACHERS SHOULD ATTEND.

Trustee Ziegler introduced a resolution which provoked considerable discussion. It was aimed at the teachers who fail to attend the meetings of the Teachers' Association, and requested the principals of the schools to furnish a list of all the teachers under them who did not attend the last semi-annual gathering.

The resolution carried. Trustee Ziegler gave it as his opinion that when the teachers were allowed the day to attend the meetings, which were supposed to be to their advantage, and were paid for the same, they should make it a point to attend.

A letter was received from Secretary Jolly, of the reception committee, requesting the co-operation of the board in making the reception to Lord and Lady Minto a success. The board unanimously decided to act with the committee, and ordered the children of the schools to be massed at the Collegiate Institute in the afternoon, the same as on the occasion of the visit of the Prince of Wales.

The Teachers' Association inclosed copies of resolutions adopted at the last regular meeting, requesting the board to provide each school with a flagstaff and flag, to be hoisted on the anniversary days of great national events, and also to furnish better ink and paper for use in the schools. No action was taken.

A report by Inspector Carson notified the board that it would soon be necessary to fix the time for the promotion examinations in the public schools, and also to consider the class of copy books to be used after the summer holidays. The matter was referred to No. 1 committee.

Pricipal Merchant extended a cordial invitation to the trustees to visit the manual training class at the Normal School.

Principal Radcliffe's report for the Collegiate Institute for May showed 490 pupils on the roll in the general course, with an average attendance of 442. In the commercial course 86 were on the roll, and the average attendance was 67, making the total on the roll 576, and the average attendance 509.

REPORT NOT UNFAVORABLE TO TALBOT STREET SCHOOL

Comparisons Made by Dr. Campbell and Hutchinson, Who Examined the Building.

The report upon the sanitary condition of the Talbot Street School, ordered some time ago because it was thought that it was responsible for a large amount of illness among the children, was submitted to the board of education last night by Dr. Hutchinson, the medical health officer, and Ald. Campbell, who was selected to act in conjunction with the former because of his wide knowledge of sanitary matters.

The report was favorable to the school. Drs. Campbell and Hutchinson secured returns of another school where the Smead-Dowd system of heating and ventilating is in use, and a comparison with them shows that the percentage of sickness from infectious diseases was the lowest in the Talbot Street School. They also give the percentage of absentees from sickness from several schools in a given period, and show by these that the percentage at Talbot Street was the lowest, being only 7.3, while one school—Rectory Street—had a percentage of 12.7.

To Trustee Gammage largely belongs the credit of the investigation. When he heard the report read, Mr. Gammage was satisfied, saying it would clear up the doubts as to the condition of the school, and would have a good effect upon the public, particularly the residents of No. 2 Ward, who would feel safe in letting their children attend the school.

THE REPORT.

Several suggestions contained in the report are to be acted upon. The report read: "In carrying out your commission in the matter of Talbot Street School, we have given it the most liberal construction, and have extended our investigation, not only into the present condition of the school, but into the state of affairs for the past seven months, from the close of last summer's vacation to April. By a careful convass of teachers, scholars and attending physicians, we find that since Sept. 1, 1902, there have been among the children attending Talbot Street School twelve cases of infectious diseases (diphtheria and scarlet fever), and among the teachers one, a total of thirteen cases. Six of these were in two families. To compare this record with that of all the other schools would have involved considerable labor, as there are no official returns, and personal inquiry would have been necessary. We have, however, taken two other schools, which seemed suitable for purposes of comparison—and we find that in Aberdeen School, with a similar system of heating and ventilation, there were eighteen cases, and in Victoria School (ordinary hot-air system) there were fifteen cases. Based upon the average attendance in these three schools, for the seven months, the percentage of sickness from infectious diseases was: Aberdeen, 4.44; Victoria, 4; Talbot Street School, 3.7, the latter being the lowest of the three.

LOWEST IN THIS LIST.

Another return, which the inspector kindly prepared for us, points in the same direction, and that is the percentage of absentees from the different schools. While all absences are not due to sickness, and while the number absent from other causes than sickness varies in different localities, a comparison on this basis is perhaps fair enough for some of the schools. From this return we find the percentage of absentees for the seven months to be as follows: Rectory Street, 12.7; St. George's, 12.6; Simcoe Street, 12.4; Grand Avenue, 12.3; West London, 11.9; Lorne Avenue, 11; Princess Avenue, 11; Aberdeen, 11.4; Chesley Avenue, 11; Colborne Street, 10; Victoria, 9.3, and Talbot Street, 7.3.

"It is quite evident if the returns available are correct that the amount of sickness in Talbot Street School has not been in excess of that in other schools. At the same time it must be remembered that if there had been very much more sickness in one school than in the others it would not necessarily follow that there were defects in that particular building—at least so far as infectious diseases are concerned. Scarlet fever and diphtheria are epidemic—that is, either one or both may be prevalent in one section of the municipality, and not in another. Whenever one of these diseases appears in a locality it spreads by association of individuals in a family and in a neighborhood, and if it is prevalent among children of that locality it is not because there are defects in the school house, but because children are associated with each other not only in school, but at home and among their neighbors. We have inspected the entire building both during school hours and during vacation. We find it at present in good condition, the rooms clean and well ventilated and the furnaces and closets working satisfactorily."

NOT CAUSE OF DIPHTHERIA AND FEVER.

From inquiries, the doctors stated further, they learned that last September, when the school reassembled after the summer holidays, there were foul odors in the building for several days. It was explained by the failure to keep the furnaces going owing to the scarcity of anthracite coal. In regard to this the doctors made this comment: "It is most probable that the condition referred to has been the cause of bringing the school into disrepute. It should be remembered that while these foul odors indicate an unsanitary condition and have an injurious effect, yet they are not the cause of diphtheria and scarlet fever, which are caused by direct infection. With proper care on the part of both janitor and teachers there should be no trouble with this school."

It was further pointed out that it was necessary for the janitor to keep furnaces continuously burning either for heating or ventilation with the Smead-Down system, and the doctors had no doubt he was doing his duty in this respect. The condition of the school last summer was exceptional, and was not likely to occur again. No complaints of foul odors in the school had been made since that date.

Auxiliary measures were suggested, such as the disinfection of a room after a pupil has been sent home suffering from a contagious disease, the measure to apply to all schools. The Smead-Dowd system of heating and ventilating was, in the opinion of the doctors, theoretically correct, and should give satisfaction where properly managed, but in view of the fact that it requires most constant attention and that any neglect of instructions might cause trouble from a sanitary point of view, it would be well for the board to consider the advisability of discontinuing it so far as the closets were concerned, wherever the latter could be connected with the sewers.

Wyoming, May 5.—A big oil well was struck on the premises of George Donald, first line, Plympton. It produces about 24 barrels a day. It makes things quite lively around there. The oil men think there will be many more such wells on the farm. There is plenty of gas to run a gas engine.

A Wilkinsburg, Pa., paper says: An interesting affair of last evening was the reception of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Callander, of No. 808 Franklin street, Wilkinsburg, given in honor of their son, J. Herbert Callander, and his bride, formerly Miss Annie Hawken, of Petrolea, Ont. Mr. and Mrs. Callander, who returned within the week from their bridal trip, received with the host and hostess last evening, and the assistants were Miss Daisy Callander and his visiting friend, Miss Irene Kemp, of Toronto, Ont. The affair was prettily arranged, and about 40 guests were in attendance. Mr. and Mrs. Callander will be at home to friends after May 15 in Kelly street, Wilkinsburg.

A very pleasant event took place on Thursday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Garrison, Princess street, when the 25th anniversary of their wedding day was celebrated in royal fashion. Upwards of 60 guests were present to do honor to the occasion, including many from a distance, among them their two sons from Fort Erie. At 7:30 the company repaired to the dining-room, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion with blue and white bunting, they being the colors used on the eventful day 25 years ago. After having done ample justice to the sumptuous repast they returned to the parlors, where the evening was spent in a most pleasant manner. Mr. and Mrs. Garrison received many pleasing remembrances of the occasion, and all present joined in wishing them continued happiness for the years that are to come.

Mr. Robert Duncan met with an accident at the wagon works last Friday, which has laid him off from work for a short time. He was standing upon a ladder, in the act of putting the eight-inch belt of the hub lathe upon the line shaft, when he slipped, striking a belt, which carried him over between the belt and joist, he falling heavily among the hub blocks he was about to turn. It was a very fortunate escape from being a sad accident. As it was, he received a severe strain of the ankle and a number of cuts and bruises about the hands and limbs. Duncan will probably be unable to resume his work for a week or two. This is the first accident of any description that has occurred at the works since the company commenced operations some six months ago.
