In one of the Canary Islands there is a tree of the laurel family that rains down occasionally, in the early morning, quite a copious shower of tear or water-drops from its tufted foliage. This water often collects at the foot of the tree, and forms a kind of pond from which the inhabitants of the neighborhood can supply themselves with a drinking beverage that is absolutely fresh and pure.

FOR ALL CHILDREN

Baby's Own Tablets is a medicine good for all children, from the feeblest infant whose life seems to hang by a thread to the sturdy boy whose digestive apparatus occasionally gets out of order. The Tablets instantly relieve and promptly cure all stomach and bowel troubles and all the minor ailments of the little ones. Thousands of mothers have proved the truth of these statements, among them Mrs. Robt. Morton, Deerwood, Man., who says: "Baby's Own Tablets have helped my baby more than anything I ever gave him. I can conscientiously recommend the Tablets to all mothers." We give you a solemn assurance that the Tablets do not contain one particle of opiate or harmful drug. They do good—they never can do harm, and all children take them as readily as candy. Sold by medicine dealers or sent post paid at 25 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Gentlemen—My neighbor's boy, 4 years old, fell into a tub of boiling water and got scalded fearfully. A few days later his legs swelled to three times their natural size and broke out in running sores. His parents could get nothing to help him till I recommended MINARD'S LINIMENT, which, after using two bottles, completely cured him, and I know of several other cases around here almost as remarkable, cured by the same Liniment, and I can truly say I never handled a medicine which has had as good a sale or given such universal satisfaction. TESTED BY TIME.—In his justly-celebrated Pills Dr. Parmelee has given to the world one of the most unique medicines offered to the public in late years. Prepared to meet the want for a pill which could be taken without nausea, and that would purge without pain. It has met all requirements in that direction, and it is in general use not only because of these two qualities, but because it is known to possess alterative and curative powers which place it in the front rank of medicines.

Arizona's Lake of Ink.

In Arizona there is an area in which thirty-five hundred volcanoes may be counted. The majority are extinct, but hundreds are active, emitting smoke, hot water, mud and mineral substances.

From the sides of the hills, grouped in an immense amphitheatre, come forth beautiful springs of clear, warm water—some so sour, others so sweet, so bitter and so strongly alkaline, that no living being or animal can drink it. These waters course down the hillsides, laying a coat of white, pink, purple, blue or green, made by the mineral salts they contain, upon everything with which they come in contact.

In the midst of these hills is the Lake of Ink. There run into it scores of streams of clear, mineral, hot water; other streams that are warm, and two that are cold.

The lake, one-fourth of a mile in length, and one-eighth of a mile in width, lies like a gem, set in these hills of these ancient volcanoes. The ink-like water which fills the lake, comes up to within three or four inches of the level of its shores.

The temperature near the edge is about a hundred and ten degrees, Fahrenheit, gradually growing warmer as you get down in it, and, as you approach the centre of the lake, on the surface it is a hundred and fifty-six degrees, and at a depth of two hundred and fifty feet it is two hundred and sixteen degrees.

Near the shore, on the east, south and west sides, the water is only four to six feet in depth for twenty feet or more into the lake, where the shelf breaks off perpendicularly, and there no bottom has ever been found.

To the touch the water feels smooth and oily. The ashes and oil which cover the lake when its waters are quiet are from one-half an inch to an inch thick. The water of the lake is jet black, though it does not color the skin of those who bathe in it.

Under a magnifying glass the coloring matter seems to be a minute black substance, held in suspension by the water, which adhers to white cloth immersed in the lake. To the taste, the water is warm, salt, and bitter. To the bather, the sensation, on entering the water, is exhilarating to a wonderful degree.

Millions of bubbles, formed by escaping gases, keep the surface of the lake agitated at all times, till it rolls, boils and foams, as if ready to break over its banks and escape; and again, only in myriads of sparkling globules, glittering in the sunlight. Whenever the volcanoes rage with anger, the lake follows, and the sight of its maddened waters is well worth seeing.

Present Price of Radium.

Word has been received from the makers of Curie's radium that it can be furnished at the present time in several different degrees of purity and therefore in varying intensities. The list given below is for radium and barium chloride, except the lowest activity, which is a compound of radium and carbonate. The minimum quantities sold as well as the current prices for radium are stated. the letter "x" after the figure in the first column indicates "activity":

Activity.	Smallest Quantity Sold.		Price
40x (carbonate).....	1	gram ..	$1.50
240x (varium chloride)	1	"	8.50
1,000x "	2-10	"	10.00
1,000x "	1	"	40.00
3,000x "	1-10	"	15.00
3,000x "	1	"	130.00
7,000x "	1-10	"	35.00
7,000x "	1	"	325.00
10,000x "	1-10	"	60.00
10,000x "	1	"	550.00
20,000x "	1-10	"	150.00
20,000x "	1	"	1,250.00

The radium compounds have the appearance of fine white powder and look very like the quinine we so liberally dose ourselves with when occasion requires. The radium salts are hermetically sealed in glass tubes, although patented aluminum phials, with silver caps, may be purchased for $15 each. Aluminum tubes are preferable to glass phials, since the former permit a larger percentage of the radium rays to pass through their walls, though this seems paradoxical in view of our knowledge of the action of light in passing through glass. Phosphorescent zinc sulphide is a preparation for making screens for viewing the radium emanations, since zinc sulphide transforms the radiations of radium into luminous light waves; zinc sulphide for this purpose may be obtained in bottles of twenty-five grams each for $5.

The German chemists are making a radium bromide compound which is claimed to have 1,000,000 radio activity. It is put up in phials containing ten milligrams which are now being sold at $300.

The prices are advancing from week to week owing to the enormous demand and the limited supply, and while the above scale is accurate for the time being it is extremely doubtful if these prices will hold good for an extended period.

Insects and Crop Rotation.

In view of the foregoing, Professor Forbes thinks it behooves farmers to know a few of the facts and some of the language of general entomology. It will pay the farmer well to recognize the common injurious insects and to become acquainted with the main facts of their transformations, habits and life history.

The farmer should also know the effect of the common crop rotations on insects injurious to the crops involved in the rotation. The critical period in the ordinary fixed routine of the farm is that of the change from grass to corn, and more of the farmer's money is dropped into the dirt right there than anywhere else in the whole scheme of his ordinary operations.

Snakes' Ever-Open Eyes.

One of the most curious facts in regard to snakes is that their eyes are never closed. Sleeping or waking, alive or dead, they are always wide open. This is because they have no eyelids. The eye is protected only by a strong scale, which is cast off every time the reptile changes its skin.

A Complete Cure for Bladder Troubles in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Campbellford, Ont., May 23.—(Special).—"I had Lumbago and Bladder Trouble for years. I could get no relief till I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills and they cured me."

This is the statement of James Atwell of this place, and all his neighbors know it to be true. Speaking further of his cure Mr. Atwell says:—

"For five months of the time the pains in my bladder were very severe, and in passing my urine would hurt me so as to almost cause tears to come to my eyes.

"I used other pills and got no relief. I used a bandgge and got no relief. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me completely and permanently."

GREELEY IN THE ROCKIES.

The Way He Sobered Up a Boisterous Hotel Crowd.

In the "Memoirs of Henry Villard" there is a chapter in which the author describes a meeting with Greeley in the Rockies. The "Tribune philosopher," having met with an accident which crippled him for several weeks, was an unwilling guest at the Denver House, the only "hotel" in the city, a rude shack of a building, with canvas partitions, the greater part given up to the bar and gaming tables, and therefore not a place conducive to the quiet and repose of invalids. Mr. Villard noticed a change gradually taking place in the usually benign features of the philosopher, his Christian virtues gradually losing control over him, until finally one day he lost his temper completely and swore at his disturbers "so violently that I dared not believe my ears." His wrath, however, did not culminate until the third night of his tortures. About 10 o'clock he got up and limped into the barroom, where he thus addressed the astonished tipplers:

"Friends, I have been in pain and without sleep for almost a week, and I am well nigh worn out. Now I am a guest at this hotel, I pay a high price for my board and lodging and am entitled to rest during the night. But how can I get it with all this noise going on in this place?"

"Then," adds Mr. Villard, "he addressed one of the most pathetic appeals I ever heard to those around him to abandon their vicious ways and become sober and industrious. He spoke for nearly an hour and was listened to with rapt interest and the most perfect respect. He succeeded, too, in his object. The gambling stopped, and the bar was closed every night at 11 o'clock as long as he remained."

Fire has destroyed the spinning mill of Irvin Firth at Keighley Yorks. The damage is estimated at over £50,000.

TO THOSE OF SEDENTARY OCCUPATION.—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

A striking feature of the new cathedral at Liverpool, Eng., will be the height of the vaulting of the nave and choir. Measured in the barrel vaulting it will be 116 feet, and in the high transepts 140 feet. No cathedral in the country approaches its height.

The "slot" gas meter has its disadvantages. An elderly Halifax (England) laborer who has been out of work for some time tried to commit suicide by inhaling gas through a pipe attached to a gas jet in his house. The meter was of the penny-in-the-slot kind, and the supply of gas failed before suffocation was brought about.

"Kith" and "Kin."

"Kith and kin" has become a phrase vaguely applied to express relationship, but "kith" has nothing to do with kinship. "Kith" means "kent folk." It comes from "ken," which is the same as our word "can"—to know. When one can do a thing, one knows how to do it. Evidently our ancestors believed that knowledge is power. The old word for known was "kyth," as the old word for unknown was "unkyth," or "uncouth. "Uncouth"—strange, unfamiliar, unusual, unknown—has preserved much of its early meaning in Scotland. Burns uses "uncos" in the sense of news. The "unco guid" are the strangely, marvelously good. "Kith," then, meant "kent folk," people with whom one was familiar. The "kent folk" are the folk we love, and love and familiarity developed out of the word "kith" the curious vocable "kyththle," which in course of time underwent considerable phonetic and orthographic changes, but which is still recognizable in the word "cuddle."—Good Words.

AND A REASONABLE ANSWER IS CURE THE COLD BY USING

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

The enormous death rate for January has opened the eyes of the people to the terrible mortality which accompanies neglected colds.

Out of the 412 deaths reported in Toronto for the month, 65 were from pneumonia, and this is no doubt only a small proportion of the deaths that may be justly attributed to a neglect to cure colds.

In the north country colds are so common that the danger involved is lost sight of, but the results are none the less fatal.

The prudent way is to use Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine at the first appearance of trouble, and so guard against any change of serious consequences.

The soothing, healing influence of this great medicine is a balm to irritated and inflamed bronchial tubes and lungs.

It relieves the coughing, which would otherwise tear and lacerate the tender linings of the air passages, loosens the phlegm, makes breathing easy, and thoroughly cures the cough, as well as the cold.

The demand for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has been enormous this winter, and the family-sized bottle is becoming more popular than ever. This is only reasonable, as the 60-cent bottle contains three times as much as the 25-cent size.

Do not be deceived by imitations, for the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every bottle of the genuine. At all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Novelists and Poisons.

We read very frequently how the hero or heroine had a chloroform soaked handkerchief pressed over the nose and became at once insensible. Chloroform does not act in that way. It causes excitement before anything approaching to loss of sensibility, and when insensibility has been reached the patient begins to kick and throw his arms about.

We are also told how he or she swallowed the drugged wine, gave a gasp and fell back senseless. The only senseless person in the business is the novelist. An absolutely poisonous dose of laudanum would not cause loss of consciousness until several minutes had elapsed after its being taken.

But the prize must be awarded to the writer who says that "the victim raised the glass containing strychnine, drank its contents and fell down dead." The victim would probably lie down sooner or later. Then he would writhe and twist, groan and cry aloud, for the strychnine would seem to be tying his inside and his muscles into knots. Death by strychnine poisoning is agonizing.

Doctors Do Taste Drugs.

"Do doctors know how how their own medicine tastes?" was a question put to a group of physicians.

"To be sure," said one, "but we have hard work to convince our patients that we do. 'If you only knew how this beastly stuff tastes, doctor, you wouldn't ask me to take it'—that is what they say. And they are hard headed people, too, who say that, people who are by no means raving in delirium. It's hard ever to convince them that a doctor has a tasting acquaintance with his medicine.

"'How did you find out about it?' is one of their trump questions. 'You have never been laid up with all the diseases in the dictionary. How did you learn what the different remedies taste like?' It never occurs to the average patient that tasting drugs is a part of the medical student's education and that no man is qualified to practice until he has learned the flavor of the medicines he expects to prescribe."

THE coke markets are steadily improving. The big smelting plant at Northport is again in operation and the demand from Canadian smelters is growing stronger. The Montana smelters have sent in orders for 200 tons daily and there are strong indications that this will be increased. The mines at Michel and Coal Creek have been working broken time, the former averageing four days and the latter five days per week, but starting with next week the management hope to work full time at these collieries.

CONSIDERABLE surprise was felt in Fernie at the result of some of the criminal cases at the Nelson Assizes. In two murder cases the defense admitted the deed but got off on the plea of accident. The case of Aho on the other hand, is even yet surrounded in a cloud of mystery and no one really knows, perhaps not even the sentenced man himself, who did the deed. This man however must serve five years for a deed which, even if admitted, might easily have been made to bear a resemblance to "accident." In one case an eye witness, a friend of the murdered man, but one who could have no wish to persecute an innocent fellow-being swore that the victim was killed deliberately by two shots from a double-barreled shot gun. Against this is only the evidence of the accused man himself and of the woman with whom he lived, who told a clumsy story of tripping over a valise which caused the death of the man whom he had before threatened to kill. Such decisions render human life cheap and pervert the ends of justice.

The first eight of an order for twenty-five of a new type of tourist cars have been placed by the Canadian Pacific Railway Co., on the runs between Boston, Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver. They are the handsomest tourist sleepers ever built, and are highly creditable to the C. P. R. Company's shops, Montreal, at which they were constructed. These magnificent cars are 72 feet long and contain fourteen compartments, seating fifty-six passengers. They have complete kitchen and toilet arrangements, and spacious smoking rooms. In fact with the exception of being upholstered in leather instead of plush or velvet, and with interior fittings of birch instead of mahogany, they might easily be taken for first-class sleepers. A noticeable improvement over similar cars which have been previously turned out, is the arrangement of the seats, which are so constrncted as to leave ample room beneath them for hand baggage. Tourist cars have always been a great feature of the C. P. R. equipment, and these new ones will make them more popular than ever amongst those who wish to combine economy with all the comfort that is possible to get while on the road. x

WATER JOURNEY CHEER

REV. DR. TALMAGE ELOQUENTLY RECALLS PAUL'S VOYAGE.

CONFIDENCE VS. COWARDICE

Influence of Personal Feelings Upon Those About Us—How Mental States Beget Similar Mental States in Others—Faith As Well As Cowardice Infectious—What Makes Men Heroes.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 15.—A timely gospel for the great multitude who cross the ocean at this season or who journey on any waters, whether for pleasure or business, is to-day the theme of the preacher. The text is Acts xxvii, 36, "Then they were all of good cheer."

Have you ever followed the sea? In these days of multiplied facilities for ocean travel, when mammoth liners, equipped like floating palaces, carry tens and hundreds of thousands of passengers to and fro across the seas, with a sense of security added to the maximum of comfort, we little think of the discomforts attendant upon the ocean voyages of half a century ago. But though the conditions of sea travel have so vastly improved in recent years that a journey across the Atlantic or up the Mediterranean is no longer an undertaking to be dreaded there are still many traditions of the sea which time has not materially changed. If you have traveled much upon the ocean, you must know that there are superstitious sailors who dislike to carry ministers, or, as they call them, "sky pilots," in their ships. Ever since the recreant Jonah was the cause of a Mediterranean cyclone, because he would persist in going to Tarshish when God told him to go to Nineveh, there have been sailors who believe the presence of a minister upon their ship means head winds and storms and disasters and misfortunes. This prejudice against carrying a minister, like the prejudice against carrying a corpse or the starting of a voyage on a Friday, has been gradually getting less and less as sailors have become better educated.

Rev. Dr. James McGregor Alexander, the honored missionary of India, told me that when he and his wife and five other missionaries in 1865 set sail for India the sailors were in almost open mutiny at the idea of carrying such a dangerous cargo of human freight, but when they arrived in Calcutta, after a long four months' voyage of unprecedental clear weather, those sailors were so surprised that instead of considering their ministerial passengers "Jonahs" they looked upon them as "fair weather" angels. So completely had their opinion changed that they told their captain, who knew of their former foreboding, that they wished the missionaries were going back with them on their return voyage.

Superstition, however, is not easily eradicated. This prejudice against ministerial passengers has survived for centuries. Yet in the scene of my text we have an instance of its being overcome. Here is Paul, a landsman, a prisoner and a missionary, so winning the confidence of the crew that they heed his warnings and follow his suggestions. It was, too, in a crisis when nautical skill was needed that they listened to him. There was a storm raging of unusual violence. The dreaded hurricane they called euroclydon was lashing the Mediterranean into fury. There was darkness even at midday; all reckoning lost, all hope given up. Then the 275 persons on board turned to this little Jewish missionary for guidance and encouragement. They had begun the voyage against his advice. They might be prejudiced against him as a preacher and a prisoner, but they listened to him when he addressed them, bidding them be of good cheer. "And when he had thus spoken he took bread and gave thanks to God in presence of them all, and when he had broken it he began to eat. Then were they all of good cheer, and they also took some meat."

Why were the crew and the passengers of this Alexandrian corn ship happy of heart? First, because faith always begets faith, and confidence confidence, and good cheer good cheer. The belief which Paul felt that "there should be no loss of any man's life, but of the ship," was, by his personal example, instilled into the hearts and minds of those by whom he was surrounded. We know that cowardice is infectious. We know that when a ship is sinking at sea there is liable to be such a rush for the boats that a panic may ensue. Then the captain, knowing well that only by order and equanimity is there hope for the safety of any, will draw his pistol, and, with determined mien, declare that he will shoot the first man who disobeys orders in forcing his way into the life-boats. We know that when a regiment is resisting the charge of an enemy the colonel will take his position in the rear of the line and shoot down any cowardly soldier who would turn and flee. If one soldier were allowed to run to the rear, the whole regiment, like a herd of terror stricken cattle, might be stampeded with fear. If cowardice be infectious, why may not hope also be infectious?

In the storms and trials of life how often have courage and fortitude been inspired by the example of some man strong in faith and undaunted in his confidence in God! Men will believe in Christ's power to save when they see a man whose reliance on him keeps them calm in the presence of death. When Hugh Latimer, the dying martyr, turned to the trembling Ridley, who was being tied to the stake at the same time that he was being tied, and said, "Be of good comfort, Master Ridley, and play the man; we shall this day light such a candle by God's grace in England as I trust shall never be put out," at once Nicholas Ridley became a man. His nerves ceased their quivering, and he was able to die as a Christian hero.

Yes, yes. We all know what the power of a personal example means in life. We know that when men are brave about us they make us brave. We know that when men are true they make us true. We know that when men are noble examples of Christian faith they inspire us with like Christian faith. So when Paul, amid the shriekings and groanings and heavings and bombardments of the Mediterranean whirlwind, calmly and deliberately stepped forth and said, "Men, I exhort you to be of good cheer, for there shall be no loss of any man's life, but of the ship," then the sailors and passengers stopped and said to themselves: "Why, that is strange talk. We cannot understand it, but Paul must have had a supernatural vision, or else he could not have spoken thus. You speak so positively, O preacher, that we believe you. What a God yours must be to inspire such confidence! Would that we had your faith and your religion." Men and women of the Christian life, are your actions and words living witnesses of your faith in the saving grace of Jesus Christ?

Why are the crew and the passengers of this Alexandrian corn ship happy of heart? Because Paul kept holding up before them the mistakes of their past life in order that they might the more easily be led to follow in his way. Paul was not a mere taunter, a sneerer, a ridiculer, a tantalizer. He was not one of those mean, contemptible fellows who always stand around when anything goes wrong and say, "I told you so."

But Paul was like a good physician who comes to an overworked man and says: "My friend, I told you if you did not hold up you would have a nervous breakdown. Now this breakdown has come. Therefore I want you now to trust me and do what I tell you to do, and then we will make you well." Paul in the same gentle way as the good physician stand before those helpless voyagers and says: "Friends, I told you not to loose from Crete. I told you that if we tried to make Rome during this winter equinoctial you would regret it. But now that this harm has come to you I want you to obey my commands, and I promise, by the God whom I represent, that there shall be no loss of any man's life, but of the ship."

It is a contemptible characteristic to tell a man his faults and keep telling them, merely to glory in his misery, even as a fiendish cat might tease and tantalize a little mouse and yet not kill it. It is a contemptible thing for a man to come around when your little child lies cold in death and say: "Well, So-and-So, I am sorry your baby is dead, but I knew she would die. I knew it when you called in Dr. Bigdose as your physician. He always kills more patients than he ever cures. I told you so. I told you so. If you had only followed my advice, your baby would be alive to-day." Can he being the child back to life again?

In order to erect a mansion it is often necessary to tear down and clear away the walls of an old family homestead. But no man has a right to tear down or destroy anything unless he can erect a better in its place. The most mischievous of all social reformers is the destructive iconoclast who has nothing to offer us in the place of the institutions he would tear down. It is easy enough to be a censorious critic. It is not so easy a matter to furnish a better for that which you deride. I remember many years ago, as an imaginative boy, I read that strange, weird, horrible story called "Caesar's Column." In fascination I followed its author step by step as he deftly tore the beautiful patterns of modern society into shreds. In horror I read on as he denounced the social status, not as the generation of a Noah was destroyed by this old earth as a water-logged craft, shipping tidal wave after tidal wave, but as a huge column of piled up corpses. But as the years have passed by and boyish imagination has given place to sober thought, the flames and the smoke arising from the funeral pyre of Caesar's column, embellished with dead bodies, have grown less and less. The great airships which circled about in the heavens as great flocks of destroying birds have collapsed. Why? Because I see as a man that, though Ignatius Dornelly might advocate the destruction of society by finding fault with it, yet with his brain he could not construct for us a better Utopia. Like Paul, never ridicule a man, never probe for his faults, unless at the same time you can show him how to correct those faults. Never refer to a man's malady or deformity unless you can tell him of a doctor who can apply a remedy for it.

Why were the crew and the passengers of the Alexandrian corn ship of good cheer? Because Paul was a man of Christian commonsense as well as of supernatural visions. He knew that the only religion that could really help a man must be a religion that could help him in the present life as well as fit him for a life beyond the grave. It was not only the promise of safety in the future that he gave those people, but the sound commonsense counsel of preparation, by keeping up their strength for insuring that safety.

"What are you driving at anyway?" says some one. "Is Paul a mere hygienic lecturer?" He is more than that, but he does not think it beneath his dignity, after seeing the vision of God, to tell the crew and the passengers of the Alexandrian corn ship to look after their physical necessities. He does not think it irreligious to gather the men and the women of the doomed ship together and say: "Men, you are going to be saved, but God will never do his part unless we are ready to do ours. Now, to-morrow we are going to all get safely to land, but there is to be a big drain upon our physical resources. Some of us are now completely fagged out. We have not had a good meal for nearly two weeks. Let the cooks go and prepare the most nourishing dinner they can; then let us by turns gather in the cabins, old and young alike, and eat a good, hearty repast. We need faith for the soul; we also need meat for the body." Some people think the most dramatic episode of Paul's life was when he stood upon Mars hill and argued with the Greek philosophers; others when he pleaded for his life before Agrippa. I think the most impressively dramatic incident was when he was standing upon the rocking, heaving deck of a vessel whose hull was gradually filling with water and telling the passengers and the crew to eat and look after their bodies, as God would surely save them on the morrow.

Why were the crew and passengers of the Alexandrian corn ship of good cheer? Paul had not deceived them as to the manner of their coming rescue. He had bluntly yet clearly told them what would happen, and, as events were turning out just as he had described, they were not in the least astonished when the ship came within sight of land and they knew that she was doomed. Though the vessel might be lost, they felt that their own lives were to be saved.

Just read very carefully, if you will, the account of this prophecy. Paul did not stand forth in the midst of them and say: "Oh, men, the tornado will cease and the billows of the sea shall lie down, and the sun will again break forth from behind the clouds, and, in gala day attire, we shall sail into the harbor of our destination." He did not prophesy a pleasant voyage with all friends gathered on the shore to greet them as they disembarked. He did not say, "We shall only be detained a few days and then hurrah for the pleasures of life in the city!" Oh, no; that was not Paul's way. He told the truth. He said: "Men, we shall be saved; but, like Job, we shall only escape as by the skin of our teeth. We must become water-logged. We must beach our craft and it will be beaten and gnashed into kindlings. We must lose all our cargo and personal baggage. We shall be rescued alive, but that is all." Then, when the sailors saw the literal fulfillment of the prophecy of Paul, their faith in their leader and and in their leader's God not only continued, but increased day by day.

I believe that in urging men to come to Christ we make a mistake when we do not frankly state the hardships and difficulties of the Christian life. There are, as every experienced Christian knows, sacrifices that must be made, privations that must be endured, struggles that must be fought. It is better that we acknowledge the fact, as Christ did when men came to him offering themselves as his disciples. If we fail to tell them that they must expect trial and perhaps adversity in following Christ they will consider that they have been deceived and will be disappointed and discouraged when they encounter trouble. As Paul told these men that they would have to battle with the waves and be in danger of death on that rocky coast before they reached safety, so we should tell men that the way to heavenly joys is often hard and toilsome. Paul demanded of those passengers and sailors of the Alexandrian corn ship the same sacrifices for their physical salvation which Hernando Cortes demanded of his followers for the conquest of Mexico. During one of his marches the Spanish soldiers became disaffected. Cortes assembled his men in line. "Men, some of you are grumbling," he said substantially. "Some of you want to know what rewards I have to offer you at this time. This is my answer." Then, drawing a line upon the ground with the edge of his sword, he pointed with his steel toward the great east and said, "On that side of the line are ease and comfort and friends and a life of ease in fair Spain." Then, pointing to the great west, he said: "Yonder are sickness and privation and hunger and cold and death. But yonder is the beautiful capital of the Montezumas. Which shall be yours? Choose ye this day as ye will. Choose ye as brave Castilians."

Christ to-day, like Paul, like Hernando Cortes, promises his followers not peace, but struggle and privation; not ease and comfort, but storm and suffering and trials and misery. But in the end, like Paul, Christ assures you of salvation. Aye, more than Paul offered to the shipwrecked sailors and passengers of the Alexandrian corn ship, Christ offers to you spiritual redemption for time and for eternity. Men and women, are you ready to face suffering and sacrifice in the name of Jesus Christ? Are you willing to believe him and trust in him.

But why should not the passengers and crew of the Alexandrian corn ship be of good cheer? Did not the prophetic words of Paul literally come true? When the mighty ship struck the beach what happened? Paul turned to the brawny-armed men about him and said, "Leap into the surf and swim for your lives." And these stout-limbed men flung themselves into the seething waters and swam on until at last their feet touched the shore and they made ready to rescue their struggling friends. Some of the women, being in all probability strapped to spars, were lifted by the heaving billows and swept upon the rocks, where they were rescued. Some of the men may have come ashore clinging to boards and broken gunwales. At times it seemed as though they must be washed off, but somehow they are at last all landed. So in the end of time and in the beginning of eternity all Christians shall be safely brought to the heavenly shores, through stress and storm and peril, it may be, but still safe. Yes, we will be there. We shall all be there. Courage, Christian brother. Fear not the perils of the passage. "Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof," the promise of Christ, like the words of Paul, shall come gloriously true.

THE POPE'S DOCTOR

An Interesting Sketch of a Famous Character.

How He Differs From His Canadian Colleagues—An Example Worthy of Being Followed.

Dr. Lapponi, the famous physician to the Vatican, whose name has recently come so greatly to the front on account of his unremitting attention to His Holiness the late Pope Leo XIII., and the high esteem with which he is regarded by the present Pope, His Holiness Pius X., is a man of commanding genius. But he is something more than that. He is more than a mere man of science. He is a man of original and independent mind. He stands out among medical men of all nations, themselves the flower of the world's intellect, by reason of his fine independent personality. He has had differences with his fellow scientists. But no one has ever disputed for an instant the remarkable nature of his professional attainments or the unflinching integrity of his personal character. He is afraid of no man. But he has a higher courage still. He is not afraid of the bugbear of professional etiquette which frightens even some of the greatest doctors.

As an example of this may be mentioned one very interesting respect in which he has differed from the medical men of this country. The latter are trammelled by medical etiquette. No one disputes their scientific skill or their unselfish devotion to their work. But they are limited in their labors by one remarkable scruple. They will prescribe and experiment with drugs of all kinds sanctioned by the Pharmacopoeia or newly introduced; but where a medical discovery, even when it is the life work of a regular practicing physician, is recommended to the general public by a manufacturer professional etiquette steps in and frightens them. No matter how overwhelming the evidence of what such a discovery, when sold as a proprietary medicine, has accomplished they look coldly upon it and will rarely admit that they have used it with success. It would be "unprofessional" to do so. Dr. Lapponi is troubled by no such scruples. For instance the numerous remarkable cures which have been proved by newspaper reports, independently investigated, to have been accomplished by the medicine sold in Canada under the name of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, must be well known to all Canadian doctors. They have been published far and wide. There can be no doubt of their accuracy. The names and addresses of the men and women cured are freely published. Their statements have been investigated by some of the most important newspapers in this country and abroad. No one has ever attempted to dispute the facts. But Canadian doctors have never cared to admit publicly that they have availed themselves of this discovery. Dr. Lapponi, however, has availed himself of Dr. Williams' discovery, and has, in his own fearless way, had no hesitation in making the fact publicly known. The following letter, with his signature, freely avows the fact and endorses the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with an authority no one will venture to question.

TRANSLATION.

"I certify that I have tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in four cases of the simple anaemia of development. After a few weeks of treatment, the result came fully up to my expectations. For that reason I shall not fail in the future to extend the use of this laudable preparation, not only in the treatment of other morbid forms of the category of anaemia or chlorosis, but also in cases of neurasthenia and the like.

Via dei Gracchi 332, Rome.

The "simple anaemia of development" referred to by Dr. Lapponi is of course that tired, languid condition of young girls whose development to womanhood is tardy, and whose health, at the period of that development, is so often imperilled. His opinion of the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at that time is of the highest scientific authority, and it confirms the many published cases in which anaemia and other diseases of the blood as well as the nervous diseases referred to by Dr. Lapponi, have been cured by these pills, which, it need hardly be mentioned, owe their efficacy to their power of making new blood, and thus acting directly on the digestive and nervous system. In all cases of anaemia, threatened consumption, decline, indigestion, kidney disease and all affections of the nerves, as St. Vitus' dance, paralysis and locomotor ataxia, they are commended to the confidence of the public, and now that they have received the emphatic endorsement of so high a professional authority as Dr. Lapponi, the trusted physician of the Vatican, they will be accepted by the medical and scientific world at their true value.

Your Shadow.

"May your shadow never grow less" or "be less." That is a familiar salutation. The origin is dim, but may be as follows: When persons have made certain progress in the black arts they are compelled to run through a subterranean hall, with the evil one after them. If they run so fast that his Satanic majesty can catch only their shadow or part of it they become first rate magicians, but lose either all or part of their shadow. The expression means: May you escape wholly and entirely from the clutches of the foul fiend.

It is well known that after a man reaches the age of about fifty-five his stature grows shorter; therefore his shadow must be less. To say, "May your shadow never grow less," means, "May you never grow older."

The Name of London.

The old name for the city of London was Lynden or Llynden, meaning "the city by the lake." An old tradition gives us to understand that London was founded by Brute, a descendant of Æneas, and that it was first called New Troy or Troynovant. In the time of Lud it was surrounded by a wall and was then known as Lud's Town, or Cær-Lud. This latter is probably the correct version of the origin of the name of London if for no other reason because it is such an easy matter to detect a similarity between the expressions London and Lud's Town. It is claimed by some writers that there was a city on the present site of London in the year 1107 B. C., and it is known that the Romans founded a city there and called it Londinium in the year 61 A. D.

Queen Bess' Wardrobe.

Royal annals have never recorded a more varied and extensive wardrobe than that which belonged to the "virgin queen." Even at the age of sixty-eight, when she might be supposed to have outlived her youthful vanity, she possessed 99 complete official costumes, 102 French gowns, 100 robes with trains and 67 without, 126 antique dresses, 136 bodices, 125 tunics, not to mention such trifles as 96 mantles, 85 dressing gowns and 27 fans.

It is possible that she had an ugly foot, for she possessed only nine pairs of shoes, which, considering her extravagances in other articles of apparel, must have some meaning. At her death 3,000 articles were found duly catalogued in her wardrobe which had adorned her proud person.

Where She Had Felt.

"See here!" exclaimed Mr. Clubb upon discovering next morning that all his "change" was gone. "During your talk to me when I came in late last night I believe you remarked among other things that 'woman feels where man thinks.'"

"I did," replied his wife. "You have no feeling, and"—

"Well, I merely want to say you're mistaken if you suppose I do my thinking in my pockets."

The Next Day.

"I understand that you were in a little trouble that started in the parlor social."

"Dat's what I were," answered Mr. Erastus Pinkley. "Dar was a feller wif a razzer dat chose me for de opposite gemman in a trouble quadrille."

"But you came out best in the long run?"

"Yassir, I did; but I must say it were one o' de longes' runs I ebber had."—Washington Star.

In Doubt.

"Would you rather be handsome or rich?" she asked.

"Well, that's hard to say," he replied. "The handsome man has a popularity that the rich man can't really attain, but the rich man has a better chance of getting the girl. I think, on the whole, I'd rather have a title, and then I could beat both of the others and get the riches with the girl."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

"HONEST INJUN."

Among the earliest comers to the Hatchee country, in western Tennessee, was a Mr. Barnes, a blacksmith, who became a friend of the Chickasaw Indians and often mended their guns without charge. Barnes was a poor man, but obtaining on credit a donkey named Moses, which was valued at a considerable sum, he imported the animal and stabled it at the smithy, says the Youth's Companion. It was the first in that region. One morning he found the door open and Moses gone. He followed a trail to the bank of the river and lost it. The stream was in flood, and he believed his valuable animal was drowned. Unless he found some way to raise the money to pay for it he was a ruined man.

Two months later a trading scow came down the Hatchee from Bolivar, and on the roof, spread out in the sun, was the hide of Moses, unmistakable in its soft and handsome grays. Barnes related his story to the trader and received the skin, which had been bought at Bolivar from a trader there. As no white man would have shot a donkey Barnes concluded that the Indians, who had never seen one, but who were then hunting on the Hatchee, were the offenders.

To trap them he tried a little stratagem. He organized a shooting contest and offered as a prize "the handsomest skin ever taken on the Hatchee, the pelt of a beautiful animal."

A Chickasaw brave was the winner of the contest and claimed the prize. Barnes brought forward the skin of Moses and spread it on the ground.

"There is your prize," he said.

"Me shoot um! Me shoot um!" cried the winner, running to the skin and pointing to a bullet hole. Then he told how he had been wandering down the river bank and had seen this strange wild animal, like nothing he had ever seen before, breaking through the cane. He had shot it and sold the hide at Bolivar. He was delighted to get it back.

This was what Barnes had hoped for. Standing, he addressed the Chickasaws.

"My brothers," he said, "you know me. I am a poor man, but I am a friend to the Chickasaw. I mend his gun for him and deal fairly by him. This animal was my white man's pony. I bought it far away and brought it here. It cost me much wampum, the price of many Indian ponies. To lose it will lose me all. It escaped me and went to the woods, and there a Chickasaw killed it.

"When I am in Chickasaw country, I obey Chickasaw law. When Chickasaw is in white man's country, he should obey white man's law. White man's law is that whoever kills my pony must pay me for it. What will Chickasaw do?"

The Indians had listened attentively. When he had finished, they went to their ponies, tethered near by. The whites watched them meanwhile with intense interest. The Indians untethered their ponies and brought them up.

"Take um," they said. "Indian have only ponies. Give um all."

"How many?" asked Barnes.

"You say how many."

Barnes appointed an appraiser, who selected a number of ponies equal in value to the donkey. These the blacksmith sold to his neighbors.

The Indians gave up their hunt and went back to their villages, poorer, but satisfied. They had maintained, for their tribe at least, some claim to the title, "Honest Injun."

Follow Your Dreams.

"To compel our thoughts to follow the memory of dreams and on no account to revert to any subject of waking thought, pleasant or otherwise"—that is a woman's formula for sleep.

"If we have already slept in the night," she says, "we should, in trying to sleep again, recall the dreams of the previous sleep and carry them on. If we have not slept, then it is necessary to go back to old dreams, which is rather more exertion and less certainly successful. But even this is far better for sleep than allowing the memory to revert to any waking thoughts or to the familiar old devices of counting a hundred or picturing sheep, etc."

A Back Action Joke.

The traveling men of Maine are noted for the jokes that they are always springing on the public, but recently one of them got into trouble in an unexpected way. His parents celebrated their golden wedding, and the drummer had long planned to spend the day with them. But when the day arrived he found that he was too far from his old home to get back to it, so he sent a telegram to his father. He thought that it was a good time to get off a joke on the old man, so he merely sent the message, "Is marriage a failure?" He was somewhat taken aback when he got the reply, "Marriage is not, but the results sometimes are."

BOZZIE THE WIZARD

A DOG THAT THINKS LIKE A MAN

Also Seems to Be Capable of Divining the Thoughts of Others—Not a Trick Dog, Wonderful Accomplishments and Human Intelligence.

If the London Society for Psychic Research desires some material for investigation and experiment more promising than ghosts, let it see Bozzie, says a writer in the Chicago Times-Herald. Bozzie is a dog that thinks like a man. Not only that; Bozzie is a dog that will give you half an hour's seance and send you home with an ache in your head and that miserable feeling of vacuity that always accompanies the occult and mysterious and uncanny. Yet Bozzie is a lovable dog withal, and your first wish after seeing her is to have yourself a dog like her who loves you as she does her master, George B. Clason, of No. 60 Bryant avenue.

Perhaps the reader will not believe what is here written down, and small blame to him. It is hard enough to believe that even a human being could do what Bozzie does, but the matters set down here are matters of fact, and some day may be explained when science has learned more than it now knows about those subtle forces that are only in the present time engaging the attention of scientific men.

Bozzie is a beautiful black Scotch collie, with white breast, white feet, white nose and white tail tip. She is the daughter of Boz, the famous collie that amazed the Kings and Queens and Princes of Europe a few years ago. Wonderful as was Boz, his child outstrips him in intelligence and intuition. But let us see what Bozzie can do.

Mr. Clason paid a visit to a certain newspaper office with his wonderful dog and gave an exhibition for the benefit of the editors. Four men were sitting in the room.

"Bozzie," said Mr. Clason, "how many men are in the room.

In response came four sharp barks. Now, be it observed that Mr. Clason does not practise the signal system, such as was used by the famous Steens. A little thought will show this to be necessarily true. For, if a dog could work with the signal system the fact would be still more marvellous than what she does, as meaning that a dog's intellect is as capable as is man's, which is of course nonsense. Bozzie simply counted the number, and, not having the vocal appartus to enable her to say "four" communicated the number after her own simple fashion.

Examples of what Bozzie can do in mental arithmetic were also given. Bozzie has no stage setting, no apparatus, nothing but her own sharp intellect. Nor is it necessary that her master shall do the questioning. One of the persons present at the matinee the other day was so persistent in his skepticism that Bozzie's master turned over that very modest little animal to the doubter, who questioned her himself, and was floored. Still he doubted. There are times when one doubts the evidence of his own senses, and this was one of them. Mr. Clason, seeing he had an unusually stubborn subject to deal with, suggested that all possibility of signalling be eliminated. The skeptic and another of the party retired from the room and closed the door. One of them wrote down on a bit of paper the figure "4" as his own number and the figure "6" as the number selected by the other. Then the skeptic called out, after opening the door:—

"Bozzie, what numbers are on this paper?"

The dog barked four times, then paused and then barked five times. The first answer was right, the second wrong. But the man who selected "6" insisted that the dog was right. The written figure was shown and the "6" man explained: "But you made a mistake. I said '5,' or at least I was thinking of '5.'"

This disclosed a power in the dog, the claim for which seemed preposterous. A mind-reading dog? Absurd.

But Bozzie is really and truly a mind reader. The skeptic was requested to think of a number and ask the dog to tell it. He thought of "4" and Bozzie gave four barks. Then he thought of "2" and Bozzie barked twice. This was at least embarassing. The doubter was placed in the position of admitting that Bozzie could know what he was thinking of or denying that he had thought of the numbers Bozzie told. The truth was a secret that was locked up in the minds of the man and the dog. But the honest, plain truth is that the dog was right.

Yet the cap of this marvellous climax was still to come. The office boy, one of the brightest to be seen in a week's travel, had observed Bozzie's performance with open eyes and admiration. The collie's master invited the little fellow to place his hand on Bozzie's head and think of his own age. Now, no one knew John's age. That is, no one but John and Bozzie, and the latter, strange to say, immediately began to bark uotil she had counted fifteen. John admitted the collie was correct. That was his age. Then the skeptic placed his hand on Bozzie's head and thought of the number "4," and instantly changed it to "3." His hand had scarcely touched the dog before she began to bark. The first counted three, hesitated a moment and added one bark more. A longer pause, and three were counted in sharp, loud barks, with every expression of certainty.

"You thought of seven," said her master.

"No," said the skeptic; "I thought of four first and then three. The dog knows."

It must be remembered that Bozzie is not a "trick" dog. Of course she could be taught tricks, but tricks are beneath her. Her least interesting though very humorous performance was accomplished when asked whether if she had her choice would she vote for Bryan or die. Bozzie executed a sudden stage fall and "died" as artistically as Sara Bernhardt. In arithmetic Bozzie is as expert as any school child of nine or ten years old. She can multiply, divide, subtract and add with a quickness that is not to be found even among very bright children of the years named. But while her mathematical accomplishments are really very fine, they are commonplace beside her capacity for thought transference. Her work in that line leaves the beholder in a frame of mind of which "nonplus" is the weakest possible description. In that respect Bozzie is the dog of dogs.

Mr. Clason himself trained Bozzie, but he was in total ignorance of the dog's occult propensities until a well known professional telepathist saw her, and a few experiments proved instantly that Bozzie could "read minds" as well as any man or woman.

Stanley Buried at Pirbright.

The remains of Henry M. Stanley (who died May 10) were buried on Tuesday in the churchyard of the old Surrey village of Pirbright. Prior to the burial the British nation and the United States, in the persons of Ambassador Choate and Consul General Evans, paid last honors to the departed African explorer with an impressive funeral service held in Westminster Abbey. "Bula Matari," meaning "the rock breaker," on the coffin plate, testified that Stanley was known by the African natives. The remains were taken in an open hearse to the Abbey. The route was lined by crowds of people. The pall bearers included a grandson of Livingstone, Arthur Mountenay Jephson; Stanley's former lieutenants and the Duke of Abercorn. Lady Stanley headed the procession of mourners that passed through the cloisters. With her was young Danzil Stanley, the deceased's adopted son, and Livingstone's daughter. As the coffin was borne past the tomb of Livingstone within the Abbey the little band stopped, and for a few minutes there was a pathetic pause. The service was fully choral. Both King Edward and the King of the Belgians were represented.

An old tradition says the Aztecs were one of seven powerful tribes that emerged from seven caverns in a region called Aztlan, or place of the heron. They wandered away from their fellows after a great confusion of tongues and settled in the region they are known to have inhabited. This tradition may be partly fabulous, but it is sure that the Aztecs settled the country before the eleventh or twelfth century.

All the tribes lived in peace for a considerable time until the strong began to encroach upon the territory of the weaker. Then a fierce war for supremacy over the whole territory ensued and lasted many years. Under the leadership of their military chiefs the Aztecs obtained control of the whole territory and established a very enlightened form of government. This was consummated in 1324 or 1325.

TOGO'S SHIP STRUCK

DESTRUCTION OF DALNY DOCKS

The Russians Torpedoed Admiral Togo's Cruiser, and She Was Towed Away by a Sister Vessel—Omnious Rising of Chinese Bandits.

The Russian fleet scored its first distinct naval success of the war on May 10, by torpedoing and crippling though not sinking an armored Japanese cruiser at Talienwan bay.

The Russian attack was carefully planned on May 10, while the Japanese squadron was concentrated outside Dalny, devoting its whole attention to Talienwan bay.

The attacking force was not a regular torpedo boat, but was only a small naphtha launch in command of a young naval officer who had with him three jackies. The launch mounted a small gun and carried three torpedoes. When darkness fell the launch crept out of Port Arthur with no lights aboard, and no glow from her engines to betray her presence. It was late when the launch gained the outer line of the Japanese squadron. She slid through the torpedo boat pickets, and selecting the nearest warship, a big armoured cruiser, stole towards her and succeeded in exploding against her side a single torpedo. A deafening roar followed the explosion, which echoed far in shore. Immediately flames enveloped the cruiser, which evidently was badly crippled. The crew of the cruiser was seen to be fighting the flames, which they at last succeeded in extinguishing. A sister ship took the damaged vessel in tow, and disappeared to the southeast.

The launch escaped the hot fire directed towards her by the Japanese ships, but being unable to return to Port Arthur, she was beached not far from Dalny.

Only a few of the higher officers were aware of the plan, the success of which depended upon secrecy. The achievement raised the spirits of the Russians ashore and the young naval officer, who was the hero of the exploit, was feted and recommended for the cross of St. George.

BANDITS BECOMING BOLDER

(Delayed in transmission.) — The Chinese bandits are becoming bolder and are causing considerable trouble to the Russian outposts. A swarm of the bandits at noon, May 13, attacked the coal mines on the branch line east of Yan Tai station, ten miles north of Liao Yang. The mines which supply the whole railroad, were guarded by two hundred riflemen and one hundred Cossacks. In a fierce fight the Russians repelled the bandits, and then charged on them, the bandits fleeing to the hills and three neighboring villages. The troops surrounded the villages, and demanded the surrender of the bandits. The surrender was at first refused, but that fearing that their homes would be destroyed, the villagers finally revealed the hiding place of the fugitives. The bandits fought with the desperation of entrapped rats, and 50 of them were speared and killed. The Russians suffered no loss.

Among 17 prisoners taken by the troops, were two Japanese officers who had escaped from the Russians. One of the bandits taken prisoner confessed that the bandits had been hired by the Japanese, whom they were supplying with information.

A LATER DESPATCH.

A despatch from Liao Yang says: Chinese soldiers on May 14 attacked the railway coal mines occupied by the Russian administrative force near Port Arthur, and drove out the officials, who were working therein, many of them escaping only partly clad. The Chinese looted the works and retired.

When searched at the station he did not have the precious diamond, and said he had swallowed it in the excitement attending his arrest. RUSSIA IN DESPAIR

BLOWS UP HER PORT ARTHUR FLEET

For Several Days Explosions Have Taken Place in Port Arthur Harbor and the Impression is that Russia is Destroying Her Ships.

An official Japanese despatch has been received to the effect that the Russians have destroyed their fleet in Port Arthur.

MANY EXPLOSIONS HEARD.

Admiral Togo reports that since the 6th of May many explosions have been heard coming from the vicinity of Port Arthur, but their cause has not been ascertained. The impression is that the Russians, despairing of their ability to defend Port Arthur are destroying their ships before evacuating the place.

REPULSED BY BATTERIES.

A St. Petersburg despatch says: A great battle occurred on May 10 between the Port Arthur fortress and a great force of Japanese. The Japanese threw 16,000 men against the batteries, but were repulsed by General Stoessel's troops. The Japanese loss was heavy. No confirmation of the battle has been received by the general staff.

FIERCE ATTACK ON ANJU.

A Seoul despatch says that on May 10 a Russian force, estimated to number 200 men attacked Anju, about 60 miles southeast of Wiju, Corea. The small Japanese garrison of that fort fought fiercely with a small loss.

THE GARRISON AT ANJU WAS HARD PRESSED.

The sudden attack on the Japanese garrison at Anju, says another Seoul despatch, by 200 Russians, confirms previous reports of the presence of Russian scouting parties behind the Japanese lines. The small Japanese garrison indicates that the blow was not expected. The fighting at Anju commenced early in the morning and the Japanese garrison sent a telegram on the Wiju road for reinforcements.

ENEMY DRIVEN UP.

A cable from Tokio says: Details of the attack by Russian Cossacks at Anju, Corea, on May 10, say that the Russian capalry numbered 200 men, and their attack was spirited. The Japanese garrison resisted stoutly, and succeeded in driving off the enemy after a hard battle.

BRANDON BOY DROWNED

Family Drove Into Washout—Nine-year-old Boy Loses Life.

A sad accident occurred at Brandon on Monday, in which Gilbert Postheiwaite, nine years of age, was drowned. William Posthelwaite with his wife and son were driving into town. When nearing First street bridge the horse got into a washout, and before any held came the three were in deep water, over their heads, and being carried away by the swift current of the river. Mr. Posthelwaite told the boy to hold to the buggy while he tried to save his wife. When she had succeeded in getting hold of the top of a maple tree Mr. Posthelwaite went to rescue the boy, but he had disappeared beneath the water. The father clung to another maple tree. Mr. James Brown and Malcolm McInnes, who were passing, rescued the couple at great risk to themselves. They were brought to shore, where everything was done for their comfort. The body has not been found. Mr. Posthelwaite is a well known farmer of north Brandon.

A Big Hold-up.

Through the intercession of Colonel Dudley, American Consul at Vancouver, an attempt is being made by the United States federal authorities to punish George D. London possesses a curiosity in the Southwark eel market, which is said to have been held regularly for over 300 years. It is little known except in the neighborhood where it is held, viz., near Blackfriar's bridge. Originally the eels sold were caught off Blackfriar's bridge, but now they come mostly from Holland and Scotland. They are not sold by weight, as is usual, but by the handful, the price being "fourpence the grab."

CONTRACTORS ARRIVE.

CONTRACT FOR G. N. R. WILL BE LET NEXT MONDAY.

Various Contractors go Over the Route With Mr. Shields.—Bridge and Track Laying Already Let.

L. E. Shields, railroad contractor, accompanied by several other railroad contractors arrived on Monday evening's express and drove down to Engineer Watkin's survey camp. These men who were with Mr. Shields are, A. R. Porter and J. D. Porter, of the firm of Porter Brothers; Wm. Winters and W. E. Parsons, of the firm of Winter, Boomer and Parsons; John Twohy, of the firm of Twohy Brothers; W. E. Hauser, of the firm of Grant, Smith & Co., and J. W. Chapman representing himself. All these gentlemen registered at the Northern from Spokane, and that town is the the headquarters for several firms, but all have done construction work in various parts of the west.

The object of their visit to Fernie was to gather some idea of the nature of the proposed construction work to enable them to submit tenders for the work. Messrs. Sims and Shield have charge of the construction but instead of doing it themselves they are about to let it all by tender to one firm. The tenders will be submitted at once and it is supposed that the contract will be let by Monday of next week. The party left at midnight the same evening on a freight in order to catch the morning train for Kalispel where the contract will be let.

The contract to be let by Messrs. Sims and Shields will not include the branch to Coal Creek. This piece of road will be built independently by the C.N. P. Coal Co. The contract will be let by piece work, certain rates being paid per yard for each kind of work, which will include solid rock, loose rock, cemented gravel and loose dirt. When here the contractors, as is natural with those figuring on such work, stated that the conditions governing this piece of work were somewhat unfavorable, on account of the heavy timber and the dampness. It is stated with some degree of authority that there is not such a keen competition for the job as might be imagined from the number of contractors here and that in all probability not more than two tenders would be offered. It is also hinted that Porter Brothers are likely to get the contract. These contractors already have the contract to build the bridges and lay the tracks for the road. At the present time they are engaged at this work at the cut-off at Columbia Falls.

The work of construction will commence immediately after the contract is let. At least 500 men will be put on at one time and if available even more will be employed. It is certain that men from other sections of the country will be employed. No regular outfitting store will be operated by the G. N. Company but the contractors will be allowed to get their supplies where they wish. The merchants of Fernie will doubtless profit from this decision. Sub-contracts will be limited to "station work" which will be started at various points along the route, beginning at the two ends.

Considerable speculation is indulged in as to where the depot and yards will be located. If on the east side of the river the only suitable and available place will be on the river flat. If, on the other hand, it is determined to continue the line to Michel on the west side the depot and yards will in all probably be located on that side.

The surveying engineers are getting along very satisfactorily with their work. Yesterday they finished the survey through the West Fernie townsite to the Elk river crossing. To-day they are are running the line along this side and by evening the will reach the C.P.R. tracks. The adjustment of land values in West Fernie will likely be made at a considerable advance on the cost. The crossing of the river is made at a point just north of the big log piles. The line runs about 100 feet west of the new recreation grounds. The crossing of the C. P. R. tracks will be overhead. This will give an easy grade to the bench above.

FOOT BALL AT MICHEL

The first league game of foot ball between Fernie and Michel at the latter place last Saturday was a fiasco owing to the dissatisfaction of the Fernie team at the dicisions of the referee. The teams agreed to play an hour and ten minutes, at the end of forty five minutes the Fernie players walked off the grounds and entered a protest to the officers of the Association.

The Fernie team was represented as follows:—Goal, W. Roper; backs, D. Archibald and McFegan; half backs, J. Henderson, E. Jarvis and Nelson; forward T. Roberts, Johnson, Newbigging, D. Munroe, and T. Shears. The referee was A. Cartledge, of Fernie.

Owing to the fact that there were no goal umpires appointed the referee had some difficulty in deciding which were goal shots and which went wide. He appeared to err in counting too many goals, for at the time when the game was abruptly closed his tally was 5 to 2 to favor of the Michel team while the Fernie players claimed that the proper score was 3 to 2 in favor of Michel.

The teams were evenly matched and the home aggregation felt that they had the best of the game. The Fernie players on the other hand, believe that under fair conditions they will hold their own. Michel is recognized as their strongest opponents in the league and the struggle for the medals will likely be between these towns.

Pihcher Creek and Blairmore played a league game on the same day at the latter place, which resulted in a draw, each securing one goal.

A NEW $8,000 CHURCH.

PRESENT R. C. CHURCH BUILDING INADEQUATE.

Old Property Will Be Sold and new Site has Been Acquired.—The Church Will Also Build Large Hospital and Convent

Rev. Father Coccola and his church workers held a meeting on Tuesday evening to consider the subject of greater church accommodation. It had been the plan of the Roman Catholic church management to build an addition to the present building and Father Coccola presented a plan for the same. It was the unanimous opinion that in view of the prosperous future ahead of the town that nothing but a new modern building would meet their requirements. Consequently it was decided to sell their present building and lot and build on their new lots, opposite Mr J. H. Bricker's residence on MacPherson Ave. The church owns two lots on this corner making a very desirable property 120 feet square. They purpose building a church similar to the one at St. Eugene Mission which is regarded as one of the finest structures of its kind in the district. Its dimensions will be about 34x70 and its cost will be about $8000. On the adjoining lot they will erect a neat cottage to be used as a dwelling house for the resident priest.

The work of clearing the stumps and brush from these lots will be commenced at once and the church building will be started as soon as the old one can be disposed of.

The price of the latter has been fixed at $4500. The lot is valued at near $2000 and the church cost much more than the balance. It could be used for various purposes such as a hall, a lodge room, or even for a dwelling with certain alterations.

Father Coccola since coming to Fernie to take over the work of the church has done much by his persistent and self-sacrificing efforts to enlarge the work of of his church, and at the present time the building is entirely inadequate to accommodate the people who attend. Father Coccola expects that the construction of the Great Northern railway te Fernie will also make demands on his church for increased accommodation and he is anxious to see his new church built at once.

Father Coccola has other church plans which if carried out will be of great advantage to the town. He will acquire a whole block when more townsite is laid off on which will be built a hospital and convent, and by present indications Fernie will be the headquarters for the church in East Kootenay.

THOSE DAMAGE SUITS.

THE LONG DELAYED CASES COME UP AT LAST

Preliminary Bout between Counsel and Judge Martin.

The heavy damage suits against the C. N. P. Coal Company, arising out of the disastrous explosion in No. 2 mine, Coal Creek, in which 130 miners lost their lives, came up for hearing before Mr. Justice Martin at Nelson on Tuesday at 2:30 p.m.

Twenty-nine writs against the Company were issued on August 8th, 1902, and subsequently 44 further writs were issued, all claiming damages as the result of the explosion. The actual amount claimed in these 73 cases exclusive of cost is $698,000. Within the past month or so 18 more writs were issued also claiming damages bringing the number of actions in progress, up to 91, and the damages involved to over $800,000.

Ever since the issue of the first writ the cases and the questions involved have been before the courts of this province one way or another and in some cases have reached the supreme court of Canada and even the British privy council.

The many interlocutory applications made have resulted some times in favor of the plaintiffs and some times in favor of the company. The later succeeded in inducing the court to strike out the jury notice and in obtaining trial by a judge only, but failed in their attempt to force some of the non resident plaintiffs to put up security for costs, or to make Messrs. Taylor and Ross, the solicitors in the matter, joint parties to all actions.

By what appears to have been a consent proceeding the full court made an order directing that out of the 73 cases then involved five should be selected as representing all others, and be tried at one and the same time. The five actions agreed upon were Leadbeater et al. Tuka et la. Lamb et al. Frederico et al. and Silla et al.

The court room was well filled with witnesses and spectators and a perfect cloud of counsel occupied a couple of separated tables before the court.

After the cases had been formally called S. S. Taylor, K. C., announced that he appeared for the plaintiffs and that with him in the matter were W. R. Ross, the local member for Fernie, and James O'Shea.

Hon. Jos. Martin, K. C., stated that he appeared for the defendant Company in the Frederico case. E. V. Bodwell, K. C. appeared for the Company in the Lamb case, E. P. Davis, K. C. in the Silla case, W. A. Macdonald in the Tuka case and W. H. Herchmer appeared for the Company in the Leadbeater action. The court objected to so many counsel appearing for the defendants his lordship claiming that by order of the full court the five cases had been consolidated and only one trial was to be had. Mr. Davis took exception to this ruling. He said it was not a case of consolidation but that the order in question had been made to save the expense of having 73 trials in which much of the evidence would have to be gone over in each trial. Mr. Taylor urged that the five actions were all taken together in one trial, and the court again agreed with him. The latter intimated that he would allow three counsel on each side and he instructed the registrar to enter the names of two senior and one junior counsel on each side.

The defense then pressed for an adjournment in view of the unexpected construction of the consolidating order made by his lordshfp, in order that they might decide on their new line of action. The case was adjourned until 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

The next morning the difficulty was adjusted by allowing four counsel to appear for the Company and after a brief story of the disaster by Mr. Taylor the examination began. Mrs. Leadbeater and Mrs. Lamb Mr. Brown and James Burrows were the first witnesses. The last was not through with his evidence when the court rose for the day.

BORN.

BEAVER—At Fernie, on May 30th, the wife of Mr. H. Beaver of a daughter.

FIRE-PROOF BUILDINGS.

One Block at least will make a Good Fire-Break.

Fred Stork and J. D. Quail have decided to erect first class concrete buildings on their business lots. The [illegible] will be 30 x 60, with two stores [illegible] Victoria Ave. One will be occupied by Fred Vance and the other will be occupied by Mr. Stork himself in connection with his plumbing and tinsmithing business. The second floor will be a lodge-room 30 x50 with two ante rooms. The Oddfellows have practically made arrangements to lease this hall.

J. D. Quail's building will be 60 x 60 occupied by his hardware and furniture business. The upper story will be used for offices and store-rooms. Both buildings will have fine concrete basements, the excavations for which are now being dug. The side walls will be solid concrete and one wall will separate the two buildings. It is probable that the Beck building will also be of concrete and the same arrangement will be made for a partnership wall. Air space will be provided under the plaster in the end walls to avoid dampness. The roofs will be of heavy metal material and fire proof shutters will be secured for the windows, making the buildings throoughly fire-proof.

The Liphardt-Watson-Thomson, corner will be built of brick. Plans are now being prepared for a building 60 x 47. The first floor will be occupied by stores and the second storey will be laid off for first class office use. The building will be heated by hot water system and all other modern conveniences will be introduced.

ELKO WATER POWER

ENGINEERS NOW SURVEYING FOR A POWER PLANT.

Elk River Power and Light Co. will Develop their Property.—Will Probably put in a Tram Line to Michel

The Elk River Power and Light Company which possesses the water rights on the Falls at Elko will commence active measures to develop its property at once. A. J. Mott, of Fernie and Thos. Crahan, of Michel, who originally owned this property and since formed the above named Company went west on yesterday's local. Before leaving Mr. Mott stated that they had been called hastily to Elko meet their engineers who had been summoned to make a survey for a power plant near Elko. The company had capital behind it and would put in at o plant which would utilize the entire power of the falls.

It is said that the Company have in view the construction of a tram railway line from Elko to Michel. The power will also be sold for lighting and other purposes. It is estimated that the entire fall of the river included in their right is about 109 feet which will give about 3,000 horse power. The harnessing of this immence power has long be recognized as one of the coming steps in the industrial progress of the valley. Up to the present the time has not appeared ripe for such an expensive undertaking, but in view of the rapid industrial and commercial development that appears to be spreading over the valley the time has arrived when this water power can be utilized to advantage.

SCHOOL IMPROVEMENTS.

Inspector Wilson Speaks of More Accommodation in the Coal Towns.—He Favors Incorporation.

Public school Inspector Wilson was in town this week holding a high school entrance examination. Before leaving for Cranbrook yesterday on his return trip a reporter had a few minutes chat with him, in which he stated some of the plans of the government relating to educational matters in the district.

The Government were undecided whether to build a separate school building or add another wing to the present school building and he had been asked to advise the department. He had done so by recommending a wing. The appropriation had been made and the work would no doubt be rushed along during the summer vacation. He had also recommended new out buildings and a connection with the town's water system at the school house.

At Michel an appropriation for a new school had been made, but the contract to his knowledge had not been let. Considerable delay had occurred at that point owing to the first site having been used for other purposes.

The school accommodation at Morrissey was also very unsatisfactory, Tenders had been called for the erection of a four room building but the prices demanded were so absurdly high, $10,000 in fact, that the department had not let the contract. He was somewhat disappointed in the progress of the town and was now in favor of putting up a building to meet the present [illegible]. He believed this course would be adopted. The site selected was on the upper end of the townsite near enough to the mine village to accommodate the people of both towns.

Touhcing on the incorporation question, Mr. Wilson said that he believed the schools derived advantages by being controlled by a municipal government. In one respect especially was this the case. Most incorporated towns had a truant officer appointed to enforce regular attendance. In this way a decided improvement might be made in the attendance at the Fernie schools. The town will also derive advantages from having greater control of the school affairs. The incidental expenses as well as permanent improvements will depend entirely upon the wishes of the townspeople, which will no doubt result more satisfactorily than under the present system. Mr. Wilson did not think there was any danger of the present $20 per capita grant being reduced.

FIRE AT MORRISSEY.

Wm. Shaw's tobacco and fruit store at Morrissey Mines was burned to the ground last evening at 7 o'clock. A bucket brigade hastily formed and worked like Torjans to save the Western Hotel building which was only 8 feet distant. This they succeeded in doing though the wall was badly scorched. Mr. Shaw was in Fernie attending the license meeting. He stated that his stock was valued at over $1200 and the building was worth about $600. The property was insured in Cree & Hutchison's office for $1250. The cause of the fire is unknown, Mr. Stubbs who was in charge of the business was away to dinner at the time.

A CHAPTER OF ACCIDENTS.

Three accidents of a more or less serious nature occurred in Fernie on Monday.

Ed. Hall, of the Fernie Lumber Co., was operating the edger. A piece of of the board was caught by the saw and hurled against his arm breaking the bone.

A. M. Grimes, who runs the planer at the Elk Lumber and Manufacturing Co's mill got two fingers caught in the planer and both were badly lacerated and crushed.

G. W. Cuthbertson a carpenter working on the Burns Block fell from the staging owing to a weak support giving way. He fell a considerable distance severely spraining his ankle against a piece of timber and cutting a nasty gash in his foot by coming in contact with a sharp adze.

LICENSE BOARD MEET.

The Board of License Commissioners met last evening to consider J. F. Jarvis' application for a transfer to the corner of Cox St. and Pellatt Ave, The application was opposed by S. Herchmer for the petitioners and L. P. Eckstein for Jos. Mitchell who represents the owner of the old Victoria Hotel corner. License Inspector McMullin pointed out to the Board an amendment to the License Act which annulled section 53 dealing with renewals and made it appear that thirty days notice of meetings to consider such transfers must be published. The commissioners therefore in obedience to the act adjourned the meeting until such time as the license inspector and the applicant agreed upon.

BEAN—MacCALLUM.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday evening at the home of the groom when Mr. Frank Bean and Miss Isabelle MacCallum, sister of Mrs. A. Cameron, were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. McK. Reid in the presence of a few intimate friends. Miss Peters was bridesmaid and Mr. C. Bean, brother of the groom, attended the latter. Mr. and Mrs. Bean have taken up housekeeping at their home on Victoria Avenue.

Messrs. J. A. Rennie and J. H. Bricker left this week for Winnipeg on a short business trip.

Messrs. O. N. Ross and Thos. Beck have been appointed by the local Oddfellow lodge to attend the grand meeting of the Order in Rossland on June 8 and 9.

Messrs. E. H. Bird, J. H. McMullin, and Thos. Beck have been appointed to attend the Synod meeting of the Episcopal church at Revelstoke which takes place nezt week.

ACHAN'S FATAL COURSE

HIS HEART COVETED RICHES AND HE STOLE WHAT WAS GOD'S.

AND ALL ISRAEL STONED HIM

Powerful Sermon on the Sin of Covetousness, Which the Preacher Says Is Not Confined to Achan's Time—Its Genesis, Logical Progression and Culmination—A Type of the Sins of Every Age.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 22.—The present sin of covetousness, its genesis, logical progression and culmination, is to-day the theme of the preacher. The text is Joshua vii, 25, "And all Israel stoned him with stones."

Few people have any adequate conception of the wealth and the luxury of the ancient peoples of the east. Ever and anon in our own day the newspapers contain accounts of the foolish extravagances of the scions of wealthy famailies, who show even greater genius in their ability to dissipate and scatter their enormous fortunes than their ancestors did in the accumulation of their wealth. By frequent repetition so prosaic and commonplace have these accounts become that special trains, private yachts and banquets costing ten and even twenty thousand dollars for a few selected friends attract the readers of the many newspapers hardly more than a passing notice.

Extravagant were the ancients in the matter of personal apparel. Pliny the elder makes mention of an instance he knew of a bridal dress which was made entirely of the most precious kind of pearls, which were strung together, costing over 40,000,000 sestertii, or about $1,720,000 in American coin. Among the famous collections of personal apparel exhumed from the buried cities of the east by Dr. Heinrich Schliemann, the noted German archaeologist, we find that the ancient peoples of Troy and Mycenae once wore waistbands of gold, necklaces of gold and tiaras of precious stones, which glittered like the stars of midnight.

Extravagant were the ancient people of the east in their menu, as well as in the adornments of their banquet halls. Caius Suetonius Tranquillus, the Roman historian and biographer, makes mention of one supper given in honor of Vitellius, where there were served up to the guests at one sitting 2,000 most delicate fishes and 7,000 birds, while one immense dish, called the "shield," was composed entirely of the brains of peacocks and parrots.

The traveler in the Far East as he roams through the ruins of ancient cities realizes how costly those ancient palaces must have been, even as from a broken column of the Alhambra you can infer how beautiful must have once been the palaces of the Spanish Moors. So in imagination you may picture the costly vases of myrrhine, the priceless robes of silk, the heaps of Damascus rugs centuries old, the sword hilts jeweled with diamonds and other precious stones, the garments woven out of thread of gold and the emptied treasure vaults, with their countless prizes scattered about the palace halls in untold profusion on the day that Jericho fell. Jericho was always noted among the ancients as a city of fabulous wealth.

But, though the wealth of this captured eastern capital was prodigious, yet not one atom of gold, not one yard of silk, not one rug, not one diamond, was to be taken by the Hebrew soldiers for their own use. God told Joshua he would give this city into his soldiers' hands, but all the spoils of war of this city were to be God's and God's alone. But the night after the battle one Hebrew soldier, instead of staying in his own company and doing what he ought to have done, allowed his sinful curiosity to get the better of him. He went out among the ruins on his own account and began to explore. Then, as he saw the piled up heap of wealth, his heart began to covet what was not his, but God's. When he thought no one was looking, he stole a beautiful Babylonish garment, 200 shekels of silver and a wedge of gold and went and hid them in his tent. After many days this theft was exposed. Swift condemnation followed, and "all Israel stoned him with stones."

What interest can that ancient crime be to us of the twentieth century? It concerns us as a type of the sins of every age. Trace the progression of evil in Achan's time, and you will find the four stages by which sin still comes to culmination in the lives of the criminals of our day. From its inception to its tragic close it is ever the same, and, though in this world it sometimes escapes detection and punishment, in the end it incurs the righteous judgment of God.

The first stage in Achan's fatal course was what the apostle describes as "the lust of the eye." Achan's curiosity was excited. He wanted to see the wonderful treasures which were to be consecrated to the Lord. His first step in the downward path which ended in his destruction was taken when he rose from among his sleeping comrades, and, slipping past the guards, he wended his way among the shattered walls of the captured city. It was one act for Achan with sword and spear and shield to fight his way into that doomed capital, swarming with enemies, but it was another act, after the battle was won, for this brave soldier to arise at night and crawl past the sentinels and begin to examine the spoils which were not his and by right never could be his. It is one act, and a commendable act, for a young physician at the call of duty to go down to the place of evil resort in a large city to help some sufferer prostrated by physical infirmity. It is another act, and a very dangerous act, for a young man or a young woman, actuated merely by an idle curiosity, to join a slumming party to look upon vice and gloat over it as a spectacle. Sometimes temptations come to man in the ordinary walks of life, but in nearly every case, as with Achan, temptations to sin most successfully assail a man when that man is idling in a place where he has no business to be.

Let me illustrate my thought from an old scene in the Bible. How often has the downfall of David been the subject of the pessimist's diatribe! How he exults over the spectacle of the shepherd boy who conquered Goliath and climbed to the throne of Israel, yielding to his infatuation for a woman! "Yes, yes," he says, "men are all alike; the best of men are vile at heart. Here is the sweet psalmist of Israel, the perfect specimen of noble manhood, the man after God's own heart, so enslaved by his guilty passion, for another man's wife that he slays the husband to get possession of her. No man is to be trusted."

Is that your idea of men? Then, my brother and sister, you have not read human nature aright. All men are not bad. But all men will be bad if they do not stick scrupulously to the work God has given them to do. The reason David sinned was not because he looked upon "Bathsheba, the wife of Uriah, the Hittite." The reason David sinned was because, like Achan among the Jericho spoils, he was idling at home instead of being with his army. In the first verse of the eleventh chapter of II. Samuel we read the secret of the whole sinful story: "And it came to pass after the year was expired, at the time when kings go forth to battle, that David sent Joab," That sentence means simply this: When the time of military campaign came—the time when David ought to have taken the field and led on his own troops to battle—he sent a substitute and stayed at home. The beginning of his danger was not in looking at Bathsheba, who was the wife of Uriah, the Hittite, but in being, like Achan, among the Jericho spoils, in a place where he had no right to be.

My brother, when God calls you to do a work, he will always give you strength to resist the sinful temptations incident to that work. But when you go to a place where you have no right to go, you are liable to experience that lust of the eye which may be the beginning of a long succession of other sins.

Young man, beware of the temptation to absent yourself from the post of duty. Beware, when Sabbath day comes around, if your minister does not see you in the house of God. You may say you are tired. You may say you will stay at home and read the Bible and have your devotions in your room, but beware. In coming to a large city, do not let your new made friends entice you into a saloon, just to look at the beautiful pictures upon the walls, and the expensive mosaics on the floors, and the gorgeous rugs and the fine set banquets in the gambling halls. Sin so often begins in the looking on temptation that the safest course for every one is to avoid the spectacle of it as far as possible.

Achan's "eye step," in the next place, was followed by his "covetous step!" We say that the sin of covetousness is only one step beyond the first sin. But the second step of Achan's sin is even more dangerous than the first stage. The lust of the eye is nearly always accompanied by hesitation and timidity. You can see that fear in the flushed cheek of the young man who stands upon the street corner debating within himself whether or no he will enter the place of evil resort to which his dissipated friends are persuading him. When the mind has taken the second step and desire is aroused, the hideous deformity of sin disappears, and longing sees in it only what is attractive and enjoyable. The second sin, the sin of covetousness, is blind to the scorpion's sting or the adder's hiss or the tiger's claw or the shark's threatening fin lifted like the black flag of the pirate over a threatening sea of green. The "sin of covetousness" is a summer stroll through woods filled with the aroma of wild flowers. It is the soft couch under the shadows of the overhanging tree branches, over which the satanic spiders are spinning a few beautiful silken threads which in time may become as strong as links of steel.

Ah, Achan on that fatal night may not have gone forth with the premeditated idea of stealing that goodly Babylonish garment and the 200 shekels of silver and the wedge of gold, but after his eyes had rested on the gold and the silver and the goodly garment desire was awakened, and his longing to possess them became irresistible. "Oh," he said to himself, "I wish I had that garment! How beautiful it would look hanging from my shoulders! I wish I could have that lump of gold. It would protect me against poverty all the days of my life. And why should I not have them? There are so many spoils of war here these few treasures will not be missed."

Is not Achan, going to the place of execution, the history of almost every sinner? "Eye sin," first step; "covetous sin," second step. What we would like to do nearly always precedes what we will ultimately do if we get the chance. My brother, like Achan of my text you and I can trace the degeneracy of our lives, if they are degenerate, by our evil thoughts, which always precede evil actions. What we think, we will ultimately speak; what we desire, we will ultimately do.

Oh, the evil sin of covetousness! Beware! Beware! Evil thoughts are only a step from evil actions. Are we not all in danger of the covetous sin? Would you tell a lie for 10 cents? "No," you emphatically answer. "No, of course not—of course not." Would you tell a lie, just one little lie for $100? "No," you answer again, but not so emphatically. Would you tell a lie for $10,000—a lie which in one sense would not hurt anybody? You look at me in a quizzical way and say, "Please don't ask me." Well, I do ask you. I ask you, not for the purpose of giving you the offer, but of finding out what is the condition of your thoughts. Achan coveted 200 shekels of silver and a wedge of gold which must have been worth at least $10,000 in our money. He coveted them, without the idea of hurting any one else, yet for that sin of covetousness, which was the forerunner of other sins. Achan had to die. Beware, O man, how you allow your evil thoughts to live. Achan's "eye sin" was followed by Achan's "covetous sin." Evil thoughts will ultimately be the parents of evil actions.

But now, in following the four fatal stages of Achan's sin, we find that his third step— the "finger step"—changes him before the world from an honest into a dishonest man. No sooner does Achan hide that Babylonish garment under his soldier's cloak and hug that wedge of gold and bag of silver under his arm than before man, as well as God, he becomes amenable to human law. Once he was a criminal at heart, but not a criminal in act—in his own consciousness and in God's sight a thief, but before his fellow man an honest, upright man. No one knew that under that fair and respectable exterior there lurked the plunderer.

It is an awful catastrophe when a man by direct sin of commission ruins the long record of what the world has regarded as an exemplary life. In the old Strassburg Cathedral there is a famous clock. There not only the time of day is told, but the eclipses of the sun and moon are calculated for all time. There you can see the twelve apostles bowing before the Saviour and hear Peter's cock crowing, after the fisherman apostle had denied Christ thrice. There are the symbols of childhood and youth and manhood and old age. It is a wonderful clock—wonderful in all its various mechanisms. But history tells us that this clock was in ruins for many, many years. It was in ruins up to 1842. Why? After the first mechanic had constructed it, in a fit of rage he completely destroyed it because the magistrates of Strassburg were going to put out his two eyes so that he could not build another clock like it for any other city. Thus, like the old clock builder of Strassburg, many and many a man by one sinful act, can destroy all the usefulness and the work of a lifetime. Achan's first sin was his "eye step." Achan's second sin was his "heart step" or "thought step." Achan's third sin was that which drove him at once out of brotherly fellowship with man. It was his "finger step" or his sin of commission. Cannot you read the stages of progression in the words of the human tragedy, "I saw;" "I coveted;" "I took?" Perhaps we can translate it in even a better way: "I looked;" "I desired;" "I did."

But now, after the "finger step" has been committed, comes the fear and the horror. Aye, the "covetous step" may lead through an embowered garden. The buzzards may there be feathered in the gorgeous colors of a yellow breasted, black tipped oriole. The "finger step" may be a leap, a jump, an impulsive bound, but no sooner is that fourth step taken than comes the "foot step," or the stealthy fugitive step. As soon as Achan, the thief, got possession of this gold and silver and this Babylonish garment he did not know what to do with them. He could not wear the cloak; he could not spend the money; so, like a coward, he skulked away and went and hid them in his tent.

Sin nearly always makes a coward out of a man. Achan did exactly what our first ancestor did in the garden of Eden after he had sinned. No sooner was that forbidden fruit eaten than for Adam the heavens seemed to be overcast. He not only slunk away and hid in the thickets as a cowardly hyena would run away from the hounds, but when God called him forth he did even a meaner act than that. He turned and tried to throw the blame upon the woman by his side as he said, "Yes, I did eat, but the woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me, and I did eat." Oh, my friends, the criminal unconsciously reveals himself. The accusing voice of his conscience saps his manliness and robs him of his open demeanor. If there is not an honest heart in a man, his face and his bearing will not be honest. The lowered eyelid, the trembling hand, the shuffling foot—all reveal the error of his past. A despicable sin always makes a coward out of a man—without an exception, always, always. Sin by its very nature is only another name for cowardice. No sooner did Achan take the gold than he ran away and hid it; no sooner do you sin against God, then, like all other sinners, you try to get as far as possible away from God.

Shall we follow on and see the end of this human tragedy? Shall we stop and watch the twitching limbs of the Hebrew apostate, who is being stoned to death by his late comrades in arms? No, I would not for one minute have you look at the death agony and the eternal despair. Death by execution is too terrible for any human eyes to witness, unless it is our duty to witness it. To-day, I would not lead you forth to where Achan is uttering his moans; but rather would I close this sermon with this thought: Terrible as sin is in its nature and its effects, there is a divine remedy for it. God, in his infinite pity, has had compassion on the sinner and has stretched out his hand to rescue him from his ruin and his despair. Not only does he offer pardon to the sinner, but deliverance from the power of sin. "Sin," he says to all who put their trust in Christ, "shall not have dominion over you." Though, like Achan, you may have fallen under its power, if you come to Christ and put your faith in him, you shall be saved. There is salvation for you, and peace for you, and eternal life for you, through the blood of Jesus Christ who loves you and who has given his life for you in order that you might live.

PAINFUL RHEUMATISM.

Rheumatism is caused by an acid in the blood. That is a medical truth every sufferer from this trouble should bear in mind. Liniments and outward applications cannot cure what is rooted in the blood—the disease must be cured through the blood. That is the reason rheumatism yields almost like magic to Dr. Williams Pink Pills. This new blood conquers the painful poison, sweeps out the aching acid, soothes the nerves, loosens the muscles and banishes rheumatism. Mr. Robert Morrison, one of the best known and most esteemed residents of Guelph, Ont., gives striking testimony to the truth of the statements made above. He says: "My trouble came gradually and was pronounced muscular rheumatism, and was located chiefly in my neck and shoulders. I can hardly tell you how much I suffered. I was confined to my bed for fifteen months. A great many friends came to see me during that time and I think I am safe in saying that most of them had very few hopes that I would get better. I tried a great many remedies without any lasting benefit. Then I tried Dr. Williams Pink Pills, and I am thankful to say that through the use of these pills and the indefatigable nursing of my wife I am again on my feet. My neck is still somewhat stiff, but the pain is gone. I am now in my 79th year and I feel that I owe much to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

These pills have cured thousands of the very worst cases of neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago and backaches, and they can do the same for you. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

There never was and never will be a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir— the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated disease rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in sound, unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease, and by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, course through the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—result improved appetite. Northrop & Lyman of Toronto, have given to the public their Superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, caught by the opinions of scientists, the wine approaches nearest perfection of any in the market. All druggists sell it.

THE ANATOMY OF MAN

SOME HIDDEN FEATURES AND OTHERS THAT ARE USELESS.

An Eye That Is Now Blind and Gills That Are Closed Up—The Outer Ears and the Toe Nails Are More Ornamental Than Serviceable.

Has any one ever complimented you on the beauty of your upper eye or inquired after your gills? For, though you may not know it, you number these among the disused features of your body.

In the center of your brain, looking vaguely skyward, lie the atrophied remains of a third eye, which, it is supposed, was actually one of man's useful features at some previous state of development. It is known as the pineal gland, though covered by skin, and is formed in an almost perfect condition in certain lizards.

You have four gills, or bronchial clefts, which, however, are now closed up and useless. You originally had six, but two of them, by forming into your ear and mouth, respectively, turned themselves to some account. However, before your lungs developed and became fitted to carry on your breathing system, the work was done by the four gills which have since childhood ceased to develop and become closed up.

Your ears—that is, the outer ones—are quite useless save as ornaments. You could hear just as well without them. All the work of hearing is done by the middle ear, or tympanum, and the internal ear. The outer feature is purely a pleasant sort of finishing touch to your hearing system. The muscles of the outer ear are powerless and not under our control.

Are you aware that you have a miniature grand piano in your auditory nerve, which is tuned up to every note in music? This is known as Corti's organ and consists of a series of tiny hairs which vibrate on the drum of your ear and enable you to distinguish the differences of sounds.

As sometimes when you strike a note on the piano some ornament in the room will be found to sing with it, so each of these hairs inside your ear vibrates in sympathy with the musical sound corresponding with it.

An appendix is generally a useful thing when applied to books, but man's appendix is not only useless, but very troublesome. This is the remains of an intestine supposed to have formed part of our ancestors. Though many other parts of the body are practically useless, they are supposed to have been useful at some time, but scientists cannot trace that the vermiform appendix was ever of any service to man.

Toe nails are entirely useless, and toes are quite superfluous. A man could get along as well without toes. In fact, a doctor removed eight of a man's toes without any inconvenience being suffered, and the loser got along quite as well without them.

The teeth are rapidly becoming quite useless. Now that nearly all our food is chopped up for us and we do not have to bite through hard substances teeth are gradually decaying.

The fact that the teeth of our ancestors 400 or 500 years ago were infinitely bigger than our own shows that nature is gradually taking away these organs.

Tonsils, too, are almost useless and fulfill no serviceable object to the body. People can get along quite well without them, and a very large proportion of the population have had them removed.

Both the hair and the skin have ended their days of usefulness to the human race. The hair was intended to cover our heads from the heat of the sun. We cover up the hair, and by shutting it off from the exposure which nature intended it to have we are gradually but surely losing this adornment, and it is estimated that in time we shall cease to grow it.

As to the skin, it was given us to protect our bodies from the elements. By covering it up with clothing and preventing it getting proper respiration we deprive ourselves of its use. It is not inconceivable that the man of a very remote future period may be not only hairless and toothless, but skinless as well.

The most extraordinary thing to be noted about all this is that those parts of the body which are useless give us the most trouble, while those in constant activity remain quiescent. The teeth, through lack of work, get lazy, as it were, and decay.

The tonsils, having nothing to do, make your life a misery to you through continually swelling until they are removed. The skin, which is useless to civilized man, has a large variety of diseases to vent on us, largely due to its compressed condition.

The vermiform appendix, which is absolutely useless, has a nice little disease of its own, which it develops with often fatal results, known as appendicitis.

A man can live without his frontal bone. At a recent accident a workman was struck by a crowbar. The only possibility of saving his life was by excising the frontal bone. The result was that the man survived, without serious injury, though he was conscious of some mental defect.

It is quite possible that an artist, writer or musician would find the effect of the removal to deprive him of the particular faculty for producing his work, but otherwise his brain would be unaffected for its ordinary functions.

The Italy of America.

Perhaps the one element of the climate of the Rocky mountain region that impresses the newcomer most deeply and also most pleasantly is that of the abundance of sunshine. In this particular, both in winter and in summer alike, this is not only the Italy of America; it outshines Italy and equals northern Egypt.

Colorado Springs and Manitou average 340 sunshiny days in a year—that is, nearly 93 per cent of their daylight is bright sunshine. While they have twenty-five cloudy days, Chicago has 114, New York 103 and Asheville 106. And equally important is the fact that the shortest days of winter will afford eight hours of sunshine. Contrast this with the four and a half hours, the most you can hope to gain, in the celebrated valley of Davos, Switzerland. Salt Lake City averages 315 days bright and clear.

Lying at Poker.

A man who would scorn to tell a lie anywhere else does not hesitate to do it at the poker table, which accounts for the big stories we hear now and then about losses or winnings. It is a common practice for habitual players in clubs to multiply the value of their chips by 100 so that their gains or losses are multiplied accordingly. The usual size of the club game is $5 limit, all jack pots, with $1 to come in. When a player throws in a white he says, "I'll bet a hundred." When it is red he says, "I'll bet you 200," and when a blue, "I'll bet you 500." The casual listener, hearing this talk, goes away convinced that the baby game is a million dollar limit.

A DELIBERATE MAN.

He Ate His Full Dinner and Caught the Stage as Well.

Charles Stuart, one time senator from Michigan, was traveling by stage through his own state. The weather was bitterly cold, the snow deep, the roads practically unbroken. The stage was nearly one hour late at the dinner station, everybody was more or less cross and in a hurry and the situation uncomfortable to the last degree.

Senator Stuart sat down to his dinner with his usual deliberation, notwithstanding the word that was passed around, "Fifteen minutes for refreshments."

When he had finished his first cup of coffee the passengers were leaving the table. By the time the second cup arrived the stage was at the door. "All aboard!" shouted the driver. The senator lingered and called for a third cup of coffee. The crowd laughed and flung back chaff at the deliberate man at the table.

While the household, as was the custom, assembled at the door to see the stage drive away, the senator continued calmly drinking his coffee. Suddenly, just as the stage started, there was a violent pounding on the dining room table, and the landlord hurried in, to find that the senator wanted a dish of rice pudding. When it came he called for a spoon, but there wasn't a spoon to be found.

"That shock headed fellow took 'em; I thought he was a crook!" exclaimed the landlady.

The landlord jumped at the same conclusion.

"Hustle after that stage; bring 'em all back!" he shouted to the sheriff, who was untying his horse from the rail in front of the tavern.

A few monutes later the stage, in charge of the sheriff, swung around in front of the house. The driver was in a fury.

"Search them passengers!" yelled the landlord.

But before the officer could move the senator opened the stage door, stepped inside, then leaned out, touched the sheriff's arm and whispered:

INSTANTLY KILLED

RUN OVER BY STREET CAR IN WINNIPEG

Frederick Attwood, While Attempting to Board a Park Line Car, Fell Beneath the Wheels—Horribly Mutilated—Pathetic Circumstances.

Death, instant and terrible, came to Frederick Attwood under the wheels of a Winnipeg electric car on Tuesday. There was a large crowd of pleasure-seekers on the car, and though they felt the shock they little dreamed that a human life had been crushed out beneath them. The cars did not stop, but continued on their way, and took on more passengers at James street. Only the nephew of the deceased, Joseph Perkins, got off and went back to where the lifeless body lay in a pool of blood on the roadway.

Mr. Attwood and young Perkins were going to the park, and the cars were all crowded as they passed south, and they tried to board a train going north. Perkins got safely on to the moving train as it passed, although he narrowly escaped falling by missing his foothold. His legs dragged for some distance and he then succeeded in pulling himself on. He looked for his uncle, and not seeing him on board he glanced along the road and saw the crowd; and thinking that his uncle had not tried to board the car, he went back.

Mr. Attwood lost his left arm several years ago by having it caught in a threshing machine. In boarding the car he grabbed one of the handles at the rear of the second car from the last with his right and only hand, but the movement of the car swung his body backwards. He lost his hold, and was precipitated beneath the wheels of the last car. They passed across the face at the eyes and over his arm. Every bone in his head was crushed, his arm was terribly lacerated and death was instantaneous.

Many stood about waiting for the cars, but at the sight of the mutilated face and the limp form covered with blood all turned away except Sergt. Leach and Mr. Thomson. As they bent over the body they knew that the last spark of life had fled and the sergeant covered the ghastly sight while Mr. Thomson had the body removed to his morgue.

Frederick P. H. Attwood was a son of the late Col. Attwood of Neepawa. He was born at London, Ont., and came to Winnipeg with his father over 20 years ago. He was educated in Winnipeg, and John Thomson, Jr., who was the first to reach his side after the accident, was an old schoolmate of his. He went to the United States and started farming near St. Paul, where he lost his left arm by having it caught in some belting on a threshing outfit. He returned to Winnipeg about eighteen months ago after a long stay at Neepawa, operating a candy store on Ellen street, where he was very successful, and did a good business importing confectionery from the east and selling to local retailers on commission.

He married Miss Reeve, daughter of W. H. Reeve, about two years ago. He leaves one son, Richard, aged sixteen months. A few weeks ago there was a birth in the family, but the little baby lived but a short while. Mrs. Attwood had been ill since, and yesterday was her first day out. He drove her to her mother's to spend the afternoon, and intended to call for her in the evening, when she was fully rested. She was prostrated on learning the sad news of her husband's death.

Dr. Benson was notified and viewed body. Spectators say that the men in charge of the cars were in no way to blame for the accident, unless it were in not stopping for him. He attempted to board the car while it was in motion, and had he had two hands he would never have been swung backwards under the following car.

ANOTHER SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Peter Morrison fell off a crowded street car at the corner of Graham avenue and Main street, Tuesday afternoon and was nearly killed. He was going to the park on one of the trains, and was either crowded off the car or lost his slight foothold on the long side step. He landed on his back, striking the asphalt with terrific force, as the moving car threw him head first into the street.

He sustained a nasty scalp wound, and was rendered unconscious from the shock. Dr. Peatman was called and had the injured man removed to Braithwaite's drug store, where he found that Morrison had sustained severe brain lesions and was therefore very seriously injured. Clark Bros.' ambulance was called and he was removed to St. Boniface hospital. While the injuries were serious it is thought that Morrison has good chances of recovering. He is a bartender at the Arlington hotel, and was bound for the ball game to spend the afternoon off.

A BOY INJURED.

A young lad a passenger on a Park line car Tuesday, carries a badly cut face as a result of having obeyed the injunction, "look out for the cars" too literally. He looked out and got hit alongside the head. Two cars were passing on one of the switches tween, one of the passengers shouted and there was but little room be- a warning for the benefit of any who had not seen the danger. The boy was anxious to get his moneys worth and looked out. If the speed of the car had not been very slow at the time he would have undoubtly been knocked down between the cars and his name added to the list of casualtaies. As it was he escaped with but a few minor bruises.

ANOTHER FIGHT

Japanese Forces Assault Protected Russian Force North of Port Arthur.

A Tokio despatch says: A trustworthy report has been received at the imperial headquarters that the Russian cruiser Bogatyr ran ashore outside Vladivostock in a heavy fog and was destroyed. This is the first ship of the Vladivostock squadron to be destroyed. The report of the grounding of the cruiser Bogatyr came from the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Echo de Paris and was announced by the Russian admiralty. A cable from Vladivostock made no allusion to the Bogatyr, and reported all quiet.

The Bogatyr is one of the most recent and swiftest of Russia's cruisers. She was built in Germany, and is of the same class as the Pallada, but with a different armament and a smaller coal supply. Her displacement was 6,500 tons. She was armed with 12 6-inch quickfirers, 12 3-inch quickfirers, and 6 smaller guns. She had four torpedo tubes. She was the fastest of Russia's cruisers, having a greater horsepower (20,000) than any other vessel in the Russian navy. Her speed was 12 knots.

CLOSING ON PORT ARTHUR.

On May 19, after two days of continuous fighting, says a despatch received from Shangai, the Japanese army division on the Liao Tung peninsula had advanced within sixteen miles of the environments of Port Arthur, losing probably 200 men in skirmishing, while on the same night the right wing of the besieging army was in the town of Chojang, the centre of Jinchou, and the left at Ko Jadien. Most accurate reports put the Russian losses in two days at 400, including between forty and fifty prisoners taken in a sharp engagement south of Chilin, west of the railroad.

LOST NONE IN RETREAT.

A despatch from Chefoo says that the Japanese, in retreating to Feng Wang Cheng did not lose any men. The movement was conducted in good order when it was seen that an enemy's force of 32,000 blocked the way. Gen. Kuroki was simply feeling the strength of Kuropatkin's first line, and had no intention of forcing battle.

A Tokio cable says: The destruction of the Hatsuse was caused by two mines which were chained together.

Naval authorities in Tokio say that the new torpedo boat destroyers of Port Arthur squadron will possibly emerge from the inner harbor, but they think the cruisers will not go out.

A cable from Tokio says: Operations north of Port Arthur have been continuously successful, and that Gen. Kamio has advanced the infantry to the south of Jinchau. In fighting last Friday the Japanese losses were 65 killed and 90 wounded, the heavy death roll having been caused by a series of assaults on protected positions which it was necessary to take for the Japanese artillery. Several guns of the enemy were put out of action in the afternoon of May 21 after a two hours' engagement east of Port Arthur railroad. The enemy forces were estimated at 40,000 and their losses in dead and wounded were 300.

A Mukden cable says the Japanese army is engaged in concentrating south of Ogaliachyang. A little skirmish hour's march from Haichen, but it is not likely the Japanese can attempt serious operations against Liao Yang for several weeks. The idea that the Japanese column is advancing from the east against Mukden is exploded now. It is possible that no operations on a large scale will be carried out before wet weather begins. The Chinese magistrate of Haichen, who is suspected of having given valuable information to the Japanese, is under arrest at Liao Yang.

A Seoul cable states: The Chinese Governor Chensefang and his suite formally visited Gen. Kuroki at Feng Wang Cheng, and congratulated him upon the result of the battle at Yalu river. The governor expresses his high appreciation of the orderly conduct and consideration of the Japanese troops, and welcomed them in his district. He complained bitterly of the Russian outrages committed by the outrages committed by the Russians, who went so far as to burn the homes of the natives on the roads along which they marched.

It is estimated that equal numbers of Russians have been killed and wounded in battle, hitherto in the war. This is a remarkable proportion. It is proof of the fact that Japanese shells are very deadly, and the Japanese firing very accurate.

ALARMING CONDITION OF RUSSIA.

The Standard publishes a despatch from a Russian correspondent in whom the paper says it places great confidence, containing most sensational statements regarding the alarming condition of Russia as the outcome of the war. The correspondent asserts that the disturbance in various cities have been followed by wholesale executions without any civil trial. It is stated thst 600 persons have been hanged at Warsaw alone, and that many others have been hanged in Cronstant and Moscow, and at the latter place the troops buried eighty coffins containing the bodies of those who had been hanged. The bodies were buried in secret in the dead of night, presumably in the woods.

The Standard in an editorial says it publishes this correspondent's statements under all reserve, but it thinks there are many indications, such for instance, as the sinking of the battleship Orel, that the normal disaffection of the population of Russia has been greatly stimulated by the war.

A despatch from Albany says: A large quantity of magnificent jewelry, undoubtedly taken from the coffin of "Lady Mary" Livingston in the recent mysterious raid upon the Livingston estate below Hudson, and valued at thousands of dollars, has been found by the police in a raid upon a "growler gang" in a low dive on South Lansing street. Thos. King and others arrested, classed by the police as "hoboes," who refuse to give any place of residence, had the jewelry upon their persons, and concealed about the house. Some of the jewelry is modern, but most of it is very old, and marked with the Livingston and DePeyster monogram, or actually with the names of women of the Livingston family. The arrests were made on complaints of neighbors of the Lansing street house, the gang having been noisy and drunken.

Why Stammerers Are Able to Sing.

Stammering depends on a want of harmony between the action of the muscles (chiefly abdominal) which expel air through the larynx and that of the muscles which guard the orifice by which it escapes with that of those which modulate the sound to the form of speech. Over either of the groups of muscles by itself a stammerer may have as much power as other people, but he cannot harmoniously arrange their conjoint action. Nervousness is a frequent cause of stammering. It is possible that the defect in some instances may result from malformation of the parts about the back of the mouth. The fact that stammering people are able to sing their words better than to speak them has been usually explained on the supposition that in singing the glottis is kept open so that there is less liability to spasmodic action.

A MILITANT PARSON.

First He Preached, and Then He Offered to Fight.

When the settlements on the Forked Deer river were new and western Tennessee was still Chickasaw country all attempts to start religious services were for a long time broken up by a gang of young outlaws who drove the ministers away. At last the Rev. Arthur Davis, a muscular Christian, came. They had given him notice that no Methodist parson should ever preach on Lower Forked Deer. Mr. Davis went to the forbidden ground and preached to a large audience. When the service was over he stepped out into the grove which surrounded the log church and, taking off his coat and collar, placed them on a stump. The outlaws had gathered on one side, the church people on the other. Turning to one of the church people, Mr. Davis gave him a message for his wife and then, facing the outlaws, demanded that they select their champion.

"You said I should not preach," he said, "but I have preached. You say I shall not preach again. Well, I say I shall unless you kill me now. Come on, one at a time, fair play, and we'll see who is right."

The outlaws looked at him in amazement. Then the leader stepped forward, holding out his hand.

"I'm with you, Mr. Davis," he declared. "Any man who has got your courage can be parson here as long as he likes. Boys, step up and shake hands with the minister."

Thenceforward the "fighting parson" held forth regularly in the Forked Deer country.

CANARY BIRDS.

They Are, Barring Men and Peacocks, the Vainest of Creatures.

"Do you know," said an observant gentleman, "that, barring a man and a peacock, I believe a canary bird is the vainest of all creatures? Both my wife and myself are very fond of pets, and we keep several of these little songsters always in the house. One of the cages was an old affair, which had been in the family for years and was used as much for tradition's as for economy's sake. I had frequently remarked to my wife that I believed the occupant of this cage was somewhat ashamed of his shabby dwelling place and observed with envious eyes the fact that the other songsters were more artistically lodged. Well, the old cage finally collapsed, and it became necessary to purchase a new one. In order to test my belief in the intelligence of my feathered friend, I made it a point to get him the prettiest little brass house I could find. The effect was magical. No sooner was he turned into his new home than he began to sing as he had never sung before, completely drowning out the music of the other birds and behaving otherwise in a manner altogether becoming his sudden rise in life. No proud pauper coming unexpectedly into an inheritance of great riches could more gracefully have assumed a greater degree of vanity."

The Grizzly In the Old Days.

In the old days, before the deadly magazine rifle was invented, hunting the grizzly was a very different affair, and no animal on the American continent was more dreaded, his fierceness and vital force when wounded filling the most reckless hunters with a wholesome dread. It was not at all unusual for a grizzly with a bullet through his heart to pursue and tear to pieces the hunter, whose long, single barreled, muzzle loading rifle, with its one round lead bullet, was altogether inadequate for such a contest. It is a strange thing, too, that, while the grizzly bear is an omnivorous feeder, living on anything, from roots and nuts to steer and buffalo meat, he has never been known to devour human flesh.

Quaint Custom In Land Tenure.

At Chingford, in Essex, England, an estate is held by a very curious condition. Whenever it passes into new hands the owner, with his wife, manservant and maidservant, comes on horseback to the parsonage and pays his homage by blowing three blasts upon a horn. He carries a hawk upon his wrist. His servant has a greyhound in a slip, both for the use of the rector for that day. He receives a chicken for the hawk, a peck of oats for his horse and a loaf of bread for his greyhound. After dinner the owner blows three more blasts and then, with his party, withdraws from the rectory.

JAPANESE FLEET

Open a Hot Bombardment on the Defences at Kai Chau, and Silenced Them.

The London Daily Telegraph's correspondent, cabling under date of May 17, says:—"The Japanese with a large fleet of transports and warships, appeared at Kai Chau yesterday morning, and opened a terrible bombardment against the shore defences, which was by four o'clock in the afternoon, the Russians retreating to Tasnichao.

"The Japanese troops landed and are to-day advancing rapidly, outflanking Tashichao and New Chwang.

There was a provision to each testimonial permitting the company, whose drugs were supposed to have been taken, to use the photograph and statement for all time without restriction. He got several testimonials in Toronto.

THE HAT QUESTION.

A striking feature of the British House of Commons to the unaccustomed eye is the Hat. Nothing, indeed, seems more astonishing and impolite than the inveterate habit of members to wear their hats in the House. It is a very old custom, the origin of which is unknown. Some have ascribed it to the days of Charles I., and made of it a protest against that monarch's attempted invasion of the Privilege of the House. Unfortunately, however, there are older prints extant showing members in the House with covered heads. Others go back to the days when the representative Commoners held their deliberations under an oak under the open canopy of heaven. But whatever the origin the hat plays a large part in the internal economy of the House of Commons. A member reserves his seat by attending prayers and depositing the article on the spot he occupied during his devotions. During the reign of Mr. Speaker, now Lord, Peel some revolutionary genius began to bring down two toppers, the more dilapidated of which he placed on the bench while adorned with the more shiny one, he felt at liberty to take his ease elsewhere. The momentous matter was referred to Mr. Speaker, who, after due consideration, delivered a solemn opinion that the only headgear permissible for seat reserving purpose was the genuine covering actually in use by the owner. The ingenious scheme was thus ignominiously snuffed out and the House recovered its wonted equanimity.

Sitting on His Head.

With the hat, too, members must salute Mr. Speaker on entering or leaving the House. The lifting of the hat also suffices for the moving or seconding of a motion or a bill where the member desires to reserve his remarks to a subsequent stage of the discussion. Once on his legs the disposal of his Lincoln & Bennett becomes a matter of some concern as there are obvious dangers in the placing of it on the vacant space behind. Indeed, there are dangers in front of him as well as behind him. There have been cases where the hon. member was so carried away by the exuberance of his peroration as to deliver a resounding smack on the topper in front. This is quite enough to rouse the mirth of a House as ready as any pack of schoolboys to explode in uproaring guffaws. But if the forgetful orator only remembers his own headpiece when he feels it collapsing under him, then, indeed, the House is neither to hold nor to bind. In one such extremity a member from the Green Isle rose and thusly delivered himself: "Mr. Speaker, sir, I congratulate the hon. member on his good fortune that when he sat down on his hat his head was not inside." This improvement on the legendary effort of the distressed country's patron saint sent the House into one of its gargantuan roars of laughter in which the Speaker's cry of "Order, order," was totally lost.

A Dexterous Feat.

Although as a general rule, members must address the Speaker with uncovered head, there is one notable exception, which once placed the Grand Old Man in a highly ludicrous light. After the question is put, a member speaking to a point of order must remain seated and have his hat in its proper place. Mr. Gladstone was always in the habit of leaving his hat in his private room. On this occasion the House was about to go to division, when he found it necessary to raise a point of order, but he had no hat. Now, Mr. Gladstone, as all know, possessed a head of unusual dimensions, physically as well as metaphorically, and the hat he borrowed was that of the Attorney-General, whose visible cranium was rather of the Lilliputian order. So the House was immensely tickled at the effort of the G. O. M. to balance the 5¾ hat on a head three inches larger—dividing his swift mind between the maintenance of the point of gravity and the presentation of the point of order. It was a feat of dexterity rivalling that of any professional equilibrist including himself, in other lines.

Retains Youth's Enthusiasm.

Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, says The London Chronicle, still retains the enthusiasm of youth. He beats youngsters at tennis; and in the season is among the best mounted riders in the Row. Sir Evelyn has always loved horses, and one of his griefs in leaving England for the Egyptian campaign of 1883 was the death of his brown pony Puskie on the very day of his departure. Puskie, whose years then numbered 34, was a survivor (perhaps the last of his race) of the Crimean war. Wood, when a midshipman, had bought him for £8, and never had a better bargain; for once when he was carrying Lord Raglan's despatches to the naval camp he lost his way, and but for the right lead of Puskie would have found himself within the Russian lines. Another accomplishment associated less frequently than good horsemanship with a soldier is Sir Evelyn's. He is the most facile of letter-writers. During one arduous campaign, which lasted 450 days, his total post-bag to family and friends at home numbered 450—a letter a day.

Church Creches.

In London and several other cities and towns in England the idea of creches in connection with churches has been adopted with splendid results. It is found that parents go to church together more frequently than would otherwise be the case, and that there is increased interest in the general work of the church. One of the class-rooms of the churches is used as a creche, and those in charge are the younger women of the congregations, who undertake the work in order to relieve the mothers.

The Fernie Free Press

ESTABLISHED 1898.

H.G. WATSON, Editor — J. R. WALLACE, Manager

THE FERNIE FREE PRESS, FERNIE BRITISH COLUMBIA

FRIDAY, JUNE 3, 1904.

A BRIGHT OUTLOOK.

The future of this town and district never looked so bright as at present. The building of the G. N. R. to Fernie dispels any doubts that may have existed as to the friendly feeling between that transportation company and the Coal Company. That the latter must look to the United States for more markets as its output increased has long been recognized and the construction of the Great Northern to Fernie, together with the big cut-off at Columbia Falls, goes to prove that all necessary steps are being taken to provide needed transportation facilities to handle this trade, and under such favorable conditions that competition from the Pennsylvania collieries need not be feared.

The cut-off reduces the distance to points east by 93 miles and it avoids a climb of 2000 feet over the Hoskell Pass The Kalispel branch at Morrissey is one of the finest pieces of railway construction in Canada and the same standard of perfection will be maintained on the extension to Fernie. There is little doubt but that the ultimate object of the Great Northern is to connect with its standard line at Lethbridge and thus complete a second line through the Rockies. The construction of this line in such a permanent manner is a safe indication that a large share of traffic is expected by its management, and this in turn leads to the logical conclusion that the output of our coal mines will be rapidly increased.

The construction work this summer will circulate a large sum of money which will find its way into many channels and relieve the financial tightness following the big fire. From present indications it would appear that no regular construction supply store will be operated and that the merchants of Fernie will be called upon to supply many lines of supplies. The fire has necessarily handicapped the latter to a serious degree but they are rapidly getting into shape to meet the heavy trade. Already Fernie is feeling the pulse of trade growing stronger in consequence of anticipated work. Laboring men are flocking to Fernie, knowing that work on building, or railway construction, in the mill, or in the mine awaits all who are willing to work.

Another impetus to good times is the zinc smelter proposition the site for which has been practically decided upon in Fernie's favor. Word is daily being expected from the directors, corroborating Mr. Fernau's decision in this matter. This will add to the construction work of the town and will provide a new pay roll.

The mines at Morrissey are again running full swing which dispels foolish fears on the part of many people who did not consider the very serious loss the Coal Company was bearing by keeping these mines closed. The G. N. people have expressed their satisfaction with the quality of coal obtained from those mines which, it is claimed, is superior to that supplied from Washington and Montana collieries.

Above Michel the Imperial Coal Company is demonstrating in a practical manner its sincerity in the properties recently acquired by it by commencing active operations. There are other equally good properties in that country now on the market and there is reason to believe that in a short time either the C. P. R. or the G. N. R. will find it to their interest to extend their systems into this newly-prospected valley.

Truly the signs of progress in the Elk River Valley are unmistakable, portending a period of unprecedented prosperity to the people who have waited patiently for its advent.

AND now it is the excessive heat that is worrying the people of the east. Nothing like an even climate such as that in the Crow's Nest for summer and winter.

THAT the provincial government is lacking in promptness is perhaps a charitable interpretation of its long delay in forwarding its assurance that the agreement between the Coal Company and the town re incorporation will be ratified by the legislature, This assurance is the only point which is holding up the movement, as all other technicalities have been complied with and as soon as the desired promise is received the petition will at once be circulated. In view of the natural relief that the government must feel in getting rid of the burden of supporting this town it is hard to understand why the proper assurance is withheld.

THE GREAT TORONTO AND FERNIE FIRES

AND THE NON-COMBINE INSURANCE CO'S.

MONTREAL CITY COUNCIL shows its Confidence in the Non-Combine Companies by placing $475,000 of Insurance with them.

The favorite argument of our opponents has been, "Wait until we have a big fire, then you will see where the non-combine companies get off at."

Well, the big fires have come and, strange to say they have had the opposite effect to that predicted. Our position to-day inspires more confidence than it did previously as the following extract will prove.

"The Montreal City Council met on April 29, and "decided to Place all Civic Fire Insurance,
"to the amount of $475,000, with the Canadian
"Non-Tariff, or non-combine, Fire Insurance
"Companies

Please note the Date, one week after the Toronto Fire. These great fires, Toronto and Fernie, have enabled us to prove true what we have hitherto claimed, that the main features of our companies are Reliability, Prompt Settlements, Select Risks, and Equitable and Adequate but not Exorbitant Rates.

JAPS SERIOUS LOSS

VESSELS DESTROYED BY RUSSIAN MINE

Reported Loss of the Shikishima and Asama Untrue—Disaster to Japan Occurred on Czar's Birthday—Ascribed to Divine Interposition.

A despatch from Tokio says:—Vice-Admiral Togo has reported that at fourteen minutes past one in the afternoon of May 15, in a deep fog off Port Arthur, the Ketsuga rammed Yoshino, sinking the latter in a few minutes. Ninety of her crew were saved.

The same morning the Hatsuse, while cruising off Port Arthur covering the landing of the soldiers, struck a mine ten knots southward of the harbor entrance. she signalled for help and instantly struck another mine. She sunk in half an hour. Three hundred of her crew were saved by torpedo boats.

It is reported at New Chwang from reliable sources that the Japanese army from the Yalu river has received a heavy blow, and has been driven back to Fen Wang Cheng.

CONFIMED AT ST. PETERSBURGH.

The loss of at least two Japanese warships is officially confermed. A message dated at Port Arthur received at Mukden bycarrier pig(on, was transmitted to the Emperor only yesterday morning, saying that two Japanese warships had been lost at Port Arthur. The message followed the emperor to Kursk and no one here knew its contents till late last night, when the contents of the telegram was announced here.

YOSHIMAS LOSS NOT SERIOUS.

The Telegraphs naval expert says: "The loss of the Hatsuse is of a most grivous character, and had it occurred in the opening of hostilities the whole course of events might have been changed. Serious as it is even to-day when the Russian squaddron at Port Arthur has been practically annihilated, it is not likely to have any effect on the future course of the war, unless it should lead the Japanese to take Port Arthur immediately by land at whatever sacrifice of life, so as to secure the remnant of the fleet within the harbor, or hasten its (omplete destruction by the Russians and thus free the seas from the menace which the mere existance of these vessels must exercise, even though for a time the channel is almost completely blocked.

"GOD IS WITH US"

Without reference to its effect on the war, many persons attribute the enemy's disaster to divine interposition in the Russian cause. They say regretfully, "It is an offering to Russia upon the Day of Assension, and the emperor's birthday, and it is a sign that God is with us."

In naval circles deep regret is expressed for brave men who lost their lives. But it is pointed out that the Hatsuse was one of Japan's finest battleships, and the loss of two, and perhaps four, warships within a few days must deeply affect Japan and influence the course of war.

THE PETROPAVLOVSK AVENGED

The loss of the Hatsuse by a mine more than wipes off the loss of the Petropavlovsk, for she was much the better ship of the two. The Yoshino was merely a fast protected cruiser little inferior to the Variag, and her loss will not affect Japan's power. The Kasuga may have also been damaged. There is still no question, however that Japan can hold the sea, despite her heavy losses. Russia's position as a maritime power has gone.

EARLS AND DIDN'T KNOW IT.

The death is announced at Powderham Castle, near Exeter, of the thirteenth Earl of Devon, in his ninety-third year. The late Earl, who was prebendary of Exeter Cathedral and rector of Powderham, succeeded his nephew in the Earldom in 1891.

The house of Courtenay, to which the Earl belonged, dates back to a very early period, and members of the family have for centuries been associated with the history of the country. The existing branch was founded by Sir Philip Courtenay of Powderham Castle, who received the honor of knighthood from Edward the Black Prince the day before the battle of Navaret in Spain.

One branch of the Courtenays were Counts of Odessa, and another became allied to the royal family of France. In England the Courtenays have been allied to the Bonvilles, Bohuns, Spencers, St. Johns, Talbots, Veres and royal house of Plantagenet.

With the city of Exeter the family has always been closely associated, and in olden times there were stout struggles for privileges between the Earls of Devon and the Mayors of the city.

Few, if any, titles in the peerage have been, for long periods of their history, involved in more mystery and doubt than that of the Earls of Devon.

For several hundreds of years the heads of the house of Courtenay were Earls without being aware of it. Indeed, so far were they from being acquainted with the dignity that should have been theirs that they accepted baronetcies and viscounties, and were proud to hold them.

After three centuries had passed, however, an astute lawyer discovered the patent among some old records, and found that there were two missing words, 'de corpore,' usually inserted in patents.

The discovery meant that the Earldom could be inherited by collateral heirs, and a Courtenay in 1831, after a hard fight, established his right to sit among his peers. The peerage he recovered was the one created by Queen Mary.

Five times the Earldom has been supposed to be extinct. Four of its holders have been attainted and four beheaded.

Queen Mary revived the Earldom in favor of Edward Courtenay, who, in the previous reign, when only twelve years of age, was committed prisoner to the Tower. He was released when only twenty-eight years old, and he died at Padua of poison. —London Express.

After Thirty Years Service.

General Sir John Dartnell, who has just retired from the command of the Natal Mounted Police after thirty years' service, distinguished himself in the early stages of the war in South Africa, when his knowledge of the country was of invaluable service. He was with General Penn Symons when he fell at Talana Hill, and to his guidance General Yule's column owed its safe arrival at Ladysmith. Among his other exploits he made a march of 120 miles in three and a half days without transport. Lord Roberts, in his report to the War Office, said that General Dartnell's "name stands very high in the estimation of the colonists, and he possesses the greatest influence over the natives. His advice was of much assistance in the earliest actions of the war, afterwards during the siege of Ladysmith, and finally in the general advance through the Biggarsberg to Laing's Nek, when Natal was cleared of the enemies of the Queen." General Dartnell was born at London, Ontario, in 1838, and entered the army in 1855. He was severely wounded while serving with the Central Indian Field Force in 1857, and received the brevet of Major. He had plenty of South African experience, in the Zulu war of 1879, the Basuto war of 1880, and the Boer war of 1881, before the recent struggle.—London Star.

Khedive's Financial Adviser.

Mr. Vincent Corbett, who has been appointed to succeed Sir Eldon Gorst as Financial Adviser to the Khedive, has for some time past been the British Commissioner on the Caisse of the Egyptain Public Debt. Mr. Corbett has spent twenty years in official positions. He was nominated an attache in 1884, and was appointed to the Embassy at Berlin in 1885. He was transferred to The Hague in 1887, and a year later was appointed to Rome. In 1891 Mr. Corbett was sent to Constantinople, where he was granted an allowance for his knowledge of Turkish. He later filled positions at the Embassies at Copenhagen and Athens, at both of which places he acted for a period as Charge d'Affaires. Before proceeding to Egypt Mr. Corbett held the appointment of British representative on the International Financial Commission for the control of Greek finance.

Malaria-Proof Wallace.

Mr. William Wallace of Nigeria has just arrived in England on one of his rare holidays, says The West African Mail. He is accompanied by Col. Morland, whose brilliant audacity won Kano for the Empire. Mr. Wallace (who used to be thought a negro by our French friends in days when their knowledge of British colonial methods was not so accurate as it now is) has served eighteen years on the Niger, and is malaria-proof.

A Scotsman and a diplomatist, Mr. Wallace went on embassies to Sokoto and Kano, on behalf of the Royal Niger Company, when such journeys involved great personal risk. On the assumption of direct Imperial control Mr. Wallace, who is a C.M.G., was appointed Deputy High Commissioner. He has visited every corner of the protectorate from Sokoto to Lake Chad. From him Sir Frederick Lugard has had most valuable help in bringing about the acceptance of British rule.

STORM HINDER KUROKI

Gen. Kuroki's advance, either on this point or on Haichen, has made no progress since Monday, which may be due in part to the storm of rain and wind, which has lasted three days. It is surmised here that the first rapid advance of the enemy from Fung Wang towards the city, was done to prevent Kuropatkin from attempting to relieve Port Arthur or strengthen the garrison there.

Every train brings to Pekin diplomats of every nationaity. The city has been transformed into the most active in the world. So Long.

With respect to the origin of the familiar parting salute, "So long," there is a suggestion that it is derived from the Norwegian "Saa laenge," a common form of farewell, equivalent in meaning to "au revoir," and pronounced like "so long," with the "g" softened. There was a fair number of Norwegians among the settlers in America, to judge by names, and it is quite likely the phrase was picked up from them. It is in general use among the Dutch in South Africa.—London Globe.

Making It Clear.

On board an ocean steamship a gentleman wished to help a lady who was of an inquiring mind to comprehend the principle of the steam engine. This is how he cleared away all difficulties:

"Why, you see, ma'am," quoth he, "it's just one thing goes up and then another thing comes down, and then they let the smoke on, which makes the wheels go round. That's what they call the hydraulic principle. It's quite simple when you know it."

"Law me! I never understood it before. But, then, I never had it properly explained," replied the fair listener. —Tit-Bits.

BRITAIN'S THIN CRUST.

Hidden Beneath the Earth Surface of the Mother Country Many Dangers Lie —Burrowing Under London.

How many of the millions of inhabitants of this 'tight little island' realize that danger lurks hidden and unsuspected beneath many an apparently firm and rigid city pavement, beneath many a smiling green field, and even beneath the back gardens which they cultivate with so much assiduity and pride?

That may, perhaps, appear to be a somewhat alarmist way of putting it, but it is, nevertheless, justified by hard fact.

Britain is honeycombed in many districts to an extent which places the lives of large sections of the population in jeopardy.

Centuries of delving for coal and salt in the bowels of the earth have, in parts of South Yorkshire, Lancashire, Midlands, Cheshire and South Wales, left nothing but a thinnish crust between the vault of heaven and the cavernous depths below.

This has led to subsidences of the earth, which have so recently as the past month or two been attended with loss of life and damage to property in the shape of collapsing houses and sinking, undulating streets.

Another source of danger is to be found in the numberless disused wells that have become covered up with a slight caking of soil and a treacherous growth of weeds, and which from time to time claim unsuspecting victims.

But it is in congested towns and cities that a new danger is confronting us. The rapid growth of population and the necessity for obtaining means of rapid transit have driven man to employ his ingenuity in devising methods of locomotion in the air above and in the earth beneath.

London, to take the supreme example, is being burrowed from end to end with "tubes" and underground railways. It may be contended that these "tubes" are constructed at a depth so great as to preclude all possibility of danger; but already we have seen in the case of the Central London Railway bitter complaints of vibration and damage to property on the part of people living in houses immediately above the "tube."

This cause of complaint and other troubles still to be revealed will be multiplied as "tubes" increase in number.

A coal mining expert informed an Express representative yesterday that some 150,000,000,000 tons of coal remain to be extracted from the earth in Great Britain, and that as the enormous yearly extractions continue earth cavities will have to be made of such huge dimensions that an extensive system of underpinning must be resorted to in order to make the surface even tolerably safe for the people.

A correspondent who occupies a cottage in Kent writes to The Express a letter which relates a remarkable story.

He says that he and his wife and children were returning from a ramble in the country when they noticed a circular depression in the vegetable patch close to the cottage. The earth suddenly began to move, and the mother, in deep anxiety, snatched her children away just in time to see the earth sink and reveal a disused well, which, when measured, showed a depth of 80 feet.—London Express.

A Queen Victoria Story.

What is believed to be an unpublished story about the late Queen Victoria has been told to a Kingston audience by the Rev. R. Harris Lloyd, who for six years was a Wesleyan army chaplain.

One of the color-sergeants of the Scots Guards under his pastoral care was selected, he said, to drill Prince Arthur of Connaught, and for that purpose frequently attended at Buckingham Palace. On one occasion Queen Victoria invited him with others to attend a theatrical entertainment at the Palace, and was astonished when the young soldier asked to be excused, stating that that form of entertainment had been a snare to him in his younger days, and that he had made a vow never to have anything to do with it again. The Queen excused the young soldier.

In a few days he was summoned into the Royal presence, when he found a beautiful breakfast service on the table. Addressing him, Queen Victoria said: "I have sent for you, sergeant, in order to tell you how much I honor you for the noble stand you made the other day for your Christian principles, and I ask you to accept this breakfast service as a token of how your Queen appreciates men who are true to their deepest convictions."

A Smokeless London.

An article on "A Smokeless London" has appeared in Cassier's Magazine. The writer believes the attainment of such an object to be in the increased use of gasoline fuel, suitable for heating alone, and having no illuminating qualities, which can be made very cheaply and could be used in the place of coal for domestic and many industrial purposes. In the same way illuminating gas will be entirely replaced by electricity, and with gas employed for heating purposes and electricity for lighting, the problem would be in a fair way of solution.

Englishwomen's Feet.

The evidence of ladies' outfitters affords direct proof of the improvement in physique of modern woman. "Most decidedly," said the manager of a Regent street firm, "our lady customers require larger sizes than they did ten years ago. Formerly we stocked nothing larger than 5, and 3 was the average size. Now we keep 7s, and during last year even 8s, and 5s is the average size of boots. Gloves, hosiery, and underwear are all being sold in the West End in larger sizes than ten years ago."—St. James' Gazette.

MAN OF SILK AND STEEL

FASCINATING STUDY OF THE LEADING MAN OF JAPAN.

One of Sir Edwin Arnold's Latest Articles Just Before His Death, Dealing With Marquis Ito, the Bismarck of Japan—At Home at Odawara—His Devoted Wife—Story of No Man's Land.

It was lately permitted me to sketch, for this newspaper, in light and respectful outline, His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Japan as I saw him amid his troops upon the hills clad with purple and gold blossoms which fringe the southern shore of the island Empire.

Next to that august figure the personage who will necessarily rise to the mind when thinking upon that interesting country and its present profoundly important position is her great statesman, the Marquis Ito.

I have ventured to call him in the title of this brief paper the "Bismarck of Japan," but the similitude between the two characters is only partial, and hardly covers more than the single fact that history will probably speak of both as the renovators and, in a sense, actual creators of their respective nationalities.

If the German Chancellor-Prince was of "blood and iron" his Japanese anti-type would rather be described as one of "silk and steel."

Justly to make up the human blend which would best present the chief statesman of Tokio to western imaginations one would have to add qualities taken from the subtlety of Cavour, the patriotism of William Pitt, the tenacity of George Washington, and the diplomatic resources of such keen ecclesiastical Ministers as France possessed in Richelieu and Mazarin.

I am not pretending that Marquis Ito unites in his genius and temperament all that belonged to these epoch-makers, but merely that in intercourse with him a student of character might be reminded of each and all the above-mentioned in their turn.

After that would remain that aspect of perfect simplicity and naturalness which every true-bred Japanese keeps for his inner and domestic life.

I have seen the famous politician who stands to-day across the path of Russia almost as grandly as Horatius upon the bridge, with not very many more than the two companions of the Roman hero to share his uttermost dangers and innermost hopes—as plain a country gentleman, as contented a rustic squire, as could be found in the shires.

At Home at Odawara.

He did me the honor of inviting me to pass some time with him at Odawara, one of those lovely hamlets which dot the Pacific coast of the southern kingdom.

The native house which he occupied there had no affectation of wealth or luxury. It was only a typical rural abode, two stories, with no large number of apartments, but some of these furnished in semi-European style, and the others frankly native, and such as any Tokio merchant or fairly prosperous seaside farmer of the Tokkaido might have tenanted.

No show of state was visible, although, then, too, my illustrious host was the most powerful man in Japan. The neat and demure little maids who opened to us the outer shoji were "nesans," such as would be waiting to take a visitor's foot-coverings and to announce his arrival in any well-ordered Japanese house, but no guards or police or waiting men.

The glory of the dwelling was its surroundings, its happy setting in the midst of the loveliness of that landscape, where the perfect hills came down to the perfect seashore, and one seemed to exist in the centre of a perfect picture.

At the point where the bright sea sparkled and foamed against the embankment of the garden there stood a little enclosure shut in with bamboo poles, lightly lashed to posts with grass string.

In the centre of this there paced about three or four grave storks, in their smooth but sombre plumage of black and white, with dark purple and bottle-green reflections—birds of restrained demeanor, dear to all Japanese artists and indispensable as symbols alike to the poets, historians and fan-makers of Dal Nippon.

These were high favorites, although I think they would have been glad to get out along the yellow sands, where the sea-shells and little crabs lay so invitingly, or among the square patches of the rice fields, whence innumerable frogs were beginning their evening chorus.

He spoke about the storks as "totems" of Japan, but I pointed away from the Tsuru to a great, glittering, long-bodied dragon-fly, balancing upon the leaf of a lily his jointed body of black and blue, big round eyes, formidable jaws, and filmy, powerful wings.

That also is an accepted symbol of the land, the "Tombo," resembling in shape the long winding line of the Japanese archipelago, which numbers more than 2,000 islands.

I remarked that it reminded me better of Japan than did the solemn storks, for, I said, "After the fashion of that splendid creature your Empire has cracked the skin of 'O, Jishin' and emerged into 'Meiji.'"

To this day all Japanese speak of the great uprising which put an end to the Shogunate as the "Earthquake," while they term the new era, which has now lasted 36 years, as "Meiji" (Beginning of Order).

Yet none but the ignorant regard Japan as commencing civilized life six and thirty years ago. She was a cultured nation of a date when Britain was barbarous, and fought the armada of the Mongul conqueror Kubla Khan victoriously before Howard and Queen Elizabeth saved England from the Spaniard and the Inquisition.

His Devoted Wife.

At dinner time we left talking about rural matters, and I listened with deep interest to what fell from the lips of him who, among the foremost, had built so strong and well upon the foundations which the "Earthquake" had fiercely laid.

Everbody knows about the early years of Ito's venturous life; how he foresaw the mighty future and prepared himself for it, studying the west down to its deepest principles, working his way to Europe as a common sailor, landing on England's shores with half a dollar in his pocket, but with a heart in his breast, ardent, patriotic, full of an Empire to be.

And by his side was the amiable lady who in the time of her childhood had seen this hero husband hiding for his life under the "tatami," while his enemies, searching everywhere and thirsting for his blood, dragged her by her long black hair from her cushions and threatened to kill her also.

Now she did the honors of her house, placid, demure, debonair, the kind eyes which had witnessed such deeds and days guarded by blue spectacles from the over-brilliant gold of the setting sun, while her illustrious lord, with only a gray hair or two in his black locks went back to finish behind the nearest screen the rules of the new Parliament, or busied himself in making lists of peers, as we catalogue pictures or books or sacks of rice.

I saw the great Marquis on the first day of that new Parliament, when, while peers and commons, with foreheads upon the floor, knelt in two hemicycles before the Mikado, he stood proud, but reverent, beside His Imperial Majesty, handing to him the first speech from the throne.

I shall never forget the bow of acknowledgment which the Mikado vouchsafed to the two Houses of his Legislature, thus simultaneously prostrate before him.

How would he discharge this recognition, descendant from the Sun, heir of a dynasty which has 2,000 years of record? He simply dropped his chin two inches and a half, so as just to touch the broad scarlet and white ribbon which crossed his breast, and in that Imperial parsimony of salutation I saw the inborn traditions of his line.

I saw and heard it all like a mouse at a chink in the wainscoat, for the master of ceremonies had solemnly whispered to me:

"You must not be seen. You are here by chance placed above the Emperor, which would be treason. You will see everyone sits below him except Ito. You must be honorably invisible." And so I was.

A Story of No Man's Land.

That night again in Tokio I had the honor of listening to him upon whom so much still depended, and was glad to find his first and last thought was to render Japan powerful enough to save herself, whatever might befall.

I should not, of course, dream of repeating here any of the weighty things he uttered, since they were all heard in private conversation; yet I may be allowed to mention an instance of his alert habit of mind and swiftness of action.

I had spoken of a group of islands eligible to possess, and, as I had gathered, not by any means out of reach of Japan's ownership if she wanted them.

Without directly replying he took a swift note in Japanese, despatched a messenger to the telephone, and returned quietly to the little pipe. I saw the message afterwards, the sense of it was:

Not long afterwards I had occasion to find that he knew more about the spot in question than anybody, and the white and red flag of Japan floats over it now.

The last time I met the great Marquis was in Moscow, at the coronation of the reigning Czar.

Japanese Racial Distinction.

The first snow which follows maturity had sprinkled his temples and neck like the summer drift which lies upon the head of Fuji, but the firm face seemed more resolute than ever; the dark brows were even more sternly knit, the strong mouth had grown almost harder than before with use of words masterly and commanding.

He was not Ambassador for Japan at that time, but only, if I rightly remember, a representative Minister, who, so far as I could see, did not by any means waste his time while in the city of the green and golden domes.

It appeared to me that I was viewing history through an inverted telescope, seeing him and Count Lobanoff standing together, far off, in the miniature of events, but coming and certain to come into the large foreground.

The Russian statesman, who has not survived to carry out the anti-British plans he cherished, was tall, spare and punctilious; Marquis Ito is of average Japanese stature, which is lower than that of the west; and you could read difference of race in the Muscovite countenance, where the Slav blood mingled with the Teutonic, and that other countenance, which only the ignorant called Mongolian, and foolishly confuse with the yellow peoples.

It will be well when continental statesmen learn that a score of natural facts discriminate the Japanese people from the Chinese and the Tartars. There is more of Malay blood, there is even more of Kanaka and of Polynesian blood, in that fearless, self-reliant visage of the famous Marquis than of Gengis or Kulia Kean.—Edwin Arnold.

A WEIRD LEGEND.

Do you know why the sea ebbs and flows? This is the legend: The army of drowned twice daily gather their forces at the bottom of the deep and march toward the four points of the compass to lay their weary bones on earth and escape from their watery tomb. You can hear their tramping—they call it sea moaning—and see the waves being pushed on before them in great water hills, which dash against each other in their furious flight from the escaping host, and when they break and hurl clouds of snow white spray high in the air it is caused by the lashings from the swinging, bony arms of the army drowned. And did you ever listen to the weird noise as these mountains of water leap up on each other? That is the cry of the victims of the sea.

On and on the waves are driven, farther and farther they encroach on land, and the feet of the mighty body can be heard scraping for foothold on the smooth, shifting pebbles. Only another incoming wave and escape is theirs, but it is just too late. The reacted undertow sets in, and you hear their bony feet slip from under them, and back they are carried, the sea holding them tightly in its arms, exhausted captives.

Then look when the tide has run far out and see the prints of their feet, and you will know why the sea ebbs and flows.

SERVANTS IN CHINA.

The Way They Show Their Contempt For Foreigners.

The native servants employed by white foreigners in China rarely learn to call their employers by their proper names when among themselves. If the white man understands Chinese they are, of course, careful to refer to him by such deeply respectful names as "Heaven Born" or "Prince of Flowers," but if he only understands English the case is different.

There was once a British warship on the China station which had native servants in the wardroom mess. None of the officers spoke Chinese. One day they invited an American to dine with them. The head butler tried the stranger in Chinese, but he looked blank, although he really knew Chinese thoroughly.

Several times during the meal he laughed, but it was not until it was over that he explained the cause of his mirth.

"You should hear the beautiful names these waiters call us," he said. "The butler has been referring to me all evening as 'He of the Dragon Face.' When you [speaking to the president of the mess] asked for the soda he called out, 'Give the poison water to old Duck Face.' 'Fill the glass of Hog Eyes.' 'When Big Mouth has finished with the fire wine pass it to Red Eyed Salamander.'"

Just Looking.

"Did you say your husband was out looking for work?"

"No, I believe he's out looking at work. There are some men digging a cellar down at the corner, and he doesn't seem able to get any farther."

Failed In an Emergency.

The man who said he did not see what good his life insurance would do him until he was dead must have been a hopeless object for the suave attack of the agent. Like him is the farmer of a Fifeshire village of whom a London paper tells.

He had been advised from time to time to insure his house against fire. The agent, Sandy McLery, could never get the old man to sign and was forced to listen to the familiar argument that "his house would never gang on fire."

The unexpected happened, however, and the neighbors were astonished when the old man, instead of trying to save his goods, ran wildly up and down the village, crying:

"Whaur's that mon Sandy noo? Whaur's that insurance chiel? Ye can never get a body when ye're needin' him!"

Two Clever Answers.

It is reported that a man appointed sixth auditor of the treasury subject to examination was asked to state the distance of the moon from the earth. His written answer was simply, "Not near enough to affect the functions of a sixth auditor." He passed. So did another who, being examined for employment in the treasury, was asked how many soldiers England sent to this country during the Revolution. His answer was, "A blamed sight more than ever got back."

The Cocoanut Tree.

There is no tree so widely distributed throughout the tropics as the cocoanut. Even on remote atolls of the south seas, which geologists say were only recently formed by the subsidence of a volcano and the growth of coral up from its base, one finds the cocoanut. The parent tree leaning over the beach of one tropical island drops its fruit into the sea, to have the nut carried away perchance halfway round the world. Then in some faraway place the waves cast the cocoanut ashore to sprout and propagate another forest after its own kind.

The Apple.

The apple is not considered to be a complete food in itself, but on the food list it has a value far above the nutriment it possesses. Apples aid the stomach in the digestion of other foods, and therefore the best results are obtained from eating them after rather than before meals. After partaking of an unusually heavy dinner the eating of an apple will be found to facilitate an early digestion and afford great relief from the sufferings attendant upon indigestion.

A TEST OF FLOUR.

It Is Quite an Important Event In the Big Mills.

The letters XXXX which decorate our flour bags are a source of mystery to the average housewife, but get there very naturally. In the largest flour mills several tests are given all flour sent out, but the final test is the baking trial. In a kitchen attached to the flour mills, which is resplendent with shining pans, electric ovens and white cooling boards, there are loaves of bread made daily from the different samples of flour which have just been ground. Cooks are kept the year round for this purpose, for as many as sixty loaves are made daily by one mill alone.

Exactly at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, after the bread is done, the head millers file into the kitchen and cut and inspect the different loaves. No man knows which flour has come from his mill, so the test is an impartial one. A vote is taken on the best loaf, and the flour from which that was made is marked with the mysterious X's. So great has this business of testing flour become that one great mill has testing rooms to which samples of grain are sent from all over the United States and Canada. These samples are made into bread after going through a miniature flour mill. After the bread has been made the package of grain is sent back to the miller who shipped it with full directions how to mark his flour, whether best or second best.

THE LAND CRAB.

A Mean Trick by Which Pacific Island Natives Catch Them.

In Fiji and other Pacific islands the natives have an ingenious plan of capturing the male crab. The native goes out in the late night, and when he hears a crab at work up a tree he climbs up some fifteen or twenty feet—the tree is generally a hundred feet high or more—and ties a large wisp of grass round the trunk. The crab, having finished his work, hurries down to his partner for a feed, traveling backward, as usual. When he comes to the treacherous clump of grass, thinking he is once more on mother earth, he lets go his hold of the tree and of course goes down smash, breaking his legs and getting stunned, to fall an easy victim to the native boys who come round with their baskets in the morning. The whole of crabdom apparently regarded this as a mean trick when it came in first, and they are now very circumspect on their expeditions, so that few are caught in this way.

In his hole the land crab makes himself a comfortable bed of cocoanut fiber, and he makes the material up so well that the native women burrow for it, as it is found useful for many purposes—pillow stuffing, the making of chignons, pads and other modern toilet "fakings" which they have now picked up from the mission stations and towns.

CRACKED VOICES.

The pitch of the human voice depends primarily upon the number of vibrations per second of the vocal cords, and these, in their turn, depend on the length, size and degree of tension of the cords, which increase in length with the growth of the larynx. One of the deepest bass notes, from the greater length of the cords, has only eighty double vibrations a second, while a soprano voice can give 992 such vibrations in the same time.

The size of a lad's larynx is, roughly, that of a woman's, but when the piping schoolboy is shooting up into manhood his larynx grows rapidly and the vocal cords become elongated nearly in the proportion of three and a half to two. The cartilages by which their tension is regulated also share in this growth, as is seen by the swelling of the so called "Adam's apple."

Now, all these parts do not increase with equal rapidity; hence the muscular control, which must be very exact, is rendered uncertain and the voice is said to "break." A similar change takes place in the case of women, but very much less in amount, and a further compensation in the formation of the upper part of the larynx serves to disguise the effect.

COLUMBUS' CREWS.

One Englishman and One Irishman Were Among Their Number.

An Englishman and an Irishman were among the sturdy 120 adventurers who sailed with Columbus in the three small hundred tonners. This may have been due to the well known fact that nothing brings men of different races together more than maritime and commercial enterprise, or, still more probably, because they were swept in at Palos, when Columbus put the press gang to work, as he was authorized to do by Ferdinand and Isabella.

The names of these men, as given by Navarrete, were Jallarte de Lajes, Ingles (probably Arthur Lake, English), and Guillermo Ires, naturel de Galney, en Irlanda (probably William Herries or Rice, native of Galway, in Ireland).

These two men were among the forty whom Columbus left behind in the fort constructed in Hispaniola before he sailed for Europe, who all met their death at the hands of the natives before the great discoverer returned, owing to their disregard of his express directions.

The Marquis of Anglesey, having retired from the amateur corps de ballet, has arrived at Monte Carlo for a little rest. His lordship who has adopted a baby, is devoting himself seriously to domestic duties. His suite includes two valets, a hairdresser, two wet nurses, and six pet dogs.

Albert Palmer, a well-known English cross-country runner and captain of the Newport Harriers, was crushed to death while shunting a truckload of bricks where he was employed. He was pinned by a truck to the wall, and both wall and truck had to be removed before he could be extricated.

THESE ARE THE CAUSES OF KIDNEY DISEASE

An Ailment Which is Most Dreaded on Account of Its Frightfully Painful and Fatal Developments.

Exposure to cold and dampness. Cold settling on the Kidneys, straining of the kidneys, loins or back, over eating or excessive use of alcohol, blows or injuries to the back, result of malaria or other fevers.

Liver disorders are also a frequent cause of kidney disease, and this helps to account for the extraordinary success of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills as a cure for complicated and chronic disease of the kidneys.

Since the kidneys are the chief means of removing the poisonous impurities from the system they must be kept healthy and active.

When from any of the above causes the kidneys become deranged the first symptom is usually backache. Then is the time to begin the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The very thought of the usual development of kidney disease is enough warning to any one to take prompt action, and there is the testimony of thousands to point you to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills as the most effective treatment.

Mr. William E. Holditch, Port Robinson, Ont., states: "I was for several years a great sufferer from kidney trouble, from which dread disease I am now, happily, free. I had all the usual symptoms in an aggravated degree, and at times was completely incapacitated with pains in the back, biliousness and headache. I had little or no appetite; insomnia resulted, and my condition was really wretched. I became emaciated and grew despondent and hopeless of relief, as I had taken treatment from doctors to no avail.

"Finally, on the advice of a friend, I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and, after using a few boxes, I was again enjoying health and vigor, as the worst symptoms had entirely passed away. When I think of my present good health, in comparison with my miserable condition of three years ago, I would not go back to my former state for any amount of money. I may be considered enthusiastic over Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but, considering the benefit derived from them, I have every reason to be."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c. a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the protrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

Colorado Springs Water.

Colorado Springs, Colo., has the purest water of any city in the United States. The supply is derived from reservoirs and lakes on the side of Pike's peak, which are fed by springs and melting snow. Chemical analyses of the water have repeatedly shown it to be purer than that of any other city in the country, due to the fact that the supply is derived from such an altitude as to make contamination impossible.

What She Lacked.

A superintendent of a Sunday school relates the following true incident:

The title of the lesson was "The rich young man" and the golden text "One thing thou lackest." A lady teacher in the primary class asked a little tot to repeat the two, and, looking earnestly in the teacher's face, the child unblushingly told her, "One thing thou lackest—a rich young man."

TESTIMONIAL from the Late SIR SAMUEL BAKER, the famous Nile Explorer:
"Newton Abbot, Devon. Dear Sirs—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effect of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.
"For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout and life had lost its attraction owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitations of the enemy which prostrated me for months, or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.
"Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.
"For the last twenty months I have been comparatively free, as one or two attempted visitations have been immediately stamped out by the assistance of Blair's Pills.

CHARGED WITH HORSE-STEALING.

The Case Thrown Out.—Proved to be the The Result of a Family Quarrel.

Wm. Lacey, charged with horse stealing, was tried before L. R. Forbes, S. M., on Monday. The complainant was Mrs Katie Lacey who was represented by Mr. Harvey, of Cranbrook, while Mr. Eckstein looked after the interests of the accused. The husband and the wife were the chief witnesses and their evidence was of a very contradictory nature. It appeared that in the palmy days when the current of domestic bliss flowed on peacefully and without a ripple to denote another approaching storm the accused had gained possession of the horse in question with money taken "from the common funds." For this animal he had received a bill of sale drawn up in his name. Then came the storm and in the separation that followed the man took away with him the horse, which action was resented by the woman. The counsel for the defense contended that the whole dispute was the result of a family quarrel the merits of which the court was not asked to consider. The magistrate ruled that the charge of theft had not been sustained and that a civil action would best determine the real ownership of the animal in dispute.

POLICE COURT

The second charge, that of the theft of numerous articles of goods from Bannett's store was heard against L. Uhlman on Tuesday, S. Herchmer appearing for the crown and L. P. Eckstein for the defense. Mr. Bannett was the only witness and he interested the court with a lengthy explanation of every article as they were selected from the pile on the court room floor. The accused reserved his statement and the magistrate ordered the accused to stand his trial before a higher court. He will be taken to Nelson where he will be tried before Judge Forin by speedy court trial.

James Kenny was fined $25 or 6 weeks and Malcolm Noble $10 or 2 weeks, both charged with being drunk.

TO CELEBRATE JULY 1

FERNIE A. A. ASSOCIATION PREPARING FOR THE DAY.

Three League Games the Chief Attraction. Michel, Cranbrook and Macleod will send Competing Teams.

The meeting of the Fernie Amateur Athletic Association was attended on Friday night by a small but enthusiastic number of members who put through much important business with considerable despatch. The election of officers for the present year was the first order of business and the following list were all elected by acclamation :—

Hon. President, James McEvoy; President; W. F. Cuthbert; Vice President, T. Whelan; Sec.-Treas., A. M. Grimes. These officers together with the two representatives from each club form the executive of the association.

Mr. A. H. Cree, the retiring secretary treasurer, stated that the association had expended in the neighborhood of $500 last year and that it was almost out of debt, there being a deficit of only $2.10. A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Cree for the very efficient and painstaking manner in which he had discharged his duties as secretary during the past years.

The subject of the First of July celebration was then taken up.

Three games were promised for the day; the league foot ball match between Fernie and Michel; the league lacrosse match between Fernie and Cranbrook and the base ball club promised a game either with Macleod or Calgary. It was agreed that the three clubs should share alike in the proceeds of the gate-receipts. The foot ball match will be played in the morning, the base ball will commence at 1:30 and the lacrosse at 3:30 p. m.

The meeting after considerable discussion favored the covering of the grand stand at the recreation grounds. This would guarantee a much greater attendance and would be conducive to greater comfort in protection from sun and rain. The secretary was therefore instructed to call for tenders and report to an executive meeting as soon as he could secure the tenders. The work will be completed for the celebration.

The membership fee, hitherto more or less of a dead letter regulation was cancelled and the advisability of taxing each club an annual fee of $10 was discussed. This will come up at the next executive meeting.

The secretary was granted the fee of $25 as a small recognition of the arduous work of his office.

CHILD TOOK POISON.

The little 18 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Allen died suddenly on Monday from the effects of poison taken accidentally. On Monday morning the little fellow who was just learning to walk nicely came across antisiptic tablets and swallowed some of them. These tablets are a deadly poison, each containing 7½ grains of bicloride of mercury, which quantity being sufficient to kill several men. Symptons of poisoning soon began to manifest themselves and at 12 o'clock that night the sufferer expired, despite the efforts of the attending physician.

The funeral took place on Wednesday. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved parents this being the second child they have lost lately.

BUILDING NOTES.

The lumber for Fred Stork's opera house is on the ground and the work of construction is commenced. R. Kerr has the contract.

The Imperial Hotel is rapidly assuming proportions. The walls are up and the work of enclosing the building is being proceeded with. The cellar under the structure is an excellent one and is made fireproof by means of a covering of 14 inches of earth.

Messrs. Quail and Stork received word this week that half their order of six car loads of cement had been shipped.

A. Cameron's block is about completed. The lower floor contains two roomy stores and the second storey is being fitted up for dwelling purposes.

J. Turner's block on the old site is nearing completion. It is built on the old foundation which came through the fire in perfect condition. The outside will be rough-cast to render it fireproof to a certain extent.

H. A. Senkbeil has let the contract for his store building. It will be a frame structure 30x50 with a basement and a second storey. The whole of the lower floor will be used as a store except a small room at the back for a repair shop. The upstairs will be used as a dwelling house. R. Kerr has the oontract and the bvilding is to be finished by the middle of July.

A. Beck arrived from Webbwood, Ont., this week to oversee the construction of his new block. He will in all probability put up a concrete building.

MR. ROSS IN TOWN

W. R. Ross M. P. P. was called from Nelson on Tuesday by the serious illness of Mrs Ross, who was seized with an attack of pleurisy which afterwards developed into pneumonia. We are pleased to be able to say that Mrs. Ross is now slowly improving.

Mr. Ross expressed the opinion that the damage case would last ten days longer. The case was creating considerable interest throughout the country.

The member was asked of the goverment's action in regard to the request made by the incorporation committee that legislation be promised ratifying the agreement between the Company and the town. Mr. Ross stated that he had received a reply from the Governent last week promising to bring the matter before the Executive Council at its first meeting. Further word has not yet been received.

Mr. Ross was of the opinion that the appointment of Mr. Carter-Cotton to a seat in the cabinet was a distinct gain to the government. Mr. Cotton was a man of brains and influence, and his financial standing was such that he could attach little significance to the fact that no salary went with his portfolio.

CARD OF THANKS

The Gladstone Lodge of the United Mine Workers of America No. 2314, held at Fernie B. C. tender a vote of thanks to the Band, Ministers, and the Slavonian Society who ably assisted in the memorial procession on the 22nd. of May last, held in conmemoration of the Deceased Brothers who lost their lives in the explosion which happened two years ago

Signed, Thomas Addison Pres.
D. McCliment Sec'y

Three months ago a man was killed and a dozen injured in a wreck on the G.N.R. a couple of miles from the Junction. A few weeks later Supt. A. E. Long who was on one of the trains in the collision got fired. One month ago Conductor Hibbard was discharged over the affair, and this week the services of the Swinton agent W. J. Thompson, are dispensed with. The Great Northern have evidently determined to hit the right man. This seems a very peculiar and unfair manner of treating employees, and does a great injustice to doubtless two at least, whose reputation and opportunities are thus sadly injured. A system that will allow this method of remedy, if such it is, is far from perfect, though the public appreciate the zeal of railway officials in thus seeking to avoid the repetition of such careless conduct on the part of someone that caused this mishap.—Morrisey Despatch.

The B. C. Furniture Co. has just received a large stock of crockery, toilet sets and glassware. Inspect them.

BIG TRIAL CONTINUES.

MANY WITNESSES FOR THE PLAINTIFFS

The Case will be a long one.—Supt. Drinnan an Important Witness.—Brief Summary of the Trial.

The trial of the big damage suits against the C. N. P. Coal Co, has been continued steadily and the end of the case is not yet in sight,

A brief resume of the trial since last Thursday is as follows :—The evidence of James Burrows testified of the early discoveries in the mine after the explosion. Diauphiney's evidence was to the effect that the mine was dry and dusty. He could not account for difference between his former evidence rnd this. Thos. L. Davis bratticeman in no 2 said that some parts were dry and others wet. Dust sometimes ignited in gauze of lamps.

The court refused to allow the defence counsel to question Mrs. Lamb re the assignment of a portion of damages to her solicitors. Jas' Wallace created no little amusement in court. He had fired all over No. 2 without sprinkling because there was no water provided. In cross examination as to why he told a different story at the inquest he said "I made a mistake at the inquest. I should have testified differently I was under compulsion then, but it was where I got my bread. When I was called on at the inquest, I was the first witness, and I had not all my mind with me. I was taken a good deal by surprise." J. W. Thorp gave evidence as to the dust and want of sprinkling. The entry to the right of the air hoist on the high line was damp but the rooms and the main haulage way was dry and dusty. D. H. Conner tracklayer gave evidence along the same line. Thos. Letcher overman in No. 1 who was appointed by the miners to inspect the scene of the explosion next gave evidence, but nothing particularly new was brought out.

On Saturday W. R. Ross solicitor for the plantiffs entered the witness box to prove the service of notice of injuries upon the Company in one of the cases. Mr. Bodwell then secured the evidence that the defence had been wanting as to the 20 per. cent interest that the plantiffs' counsel had in the case. Jos. Tlanitzke, Mike Dimels and Z. Altabelle gave some formal evidence.

R. G Drinnan, general superintendent, at the time of the explosion was called by Mr. Taylor and was kept in the box all day Monday and most of Tuesday. His evidence went fully into the details of the explosion, explaining with the aid of a map the lay of the mines. As Mr. Drinnan did not prove an adverse witness the court ruled that Mr. Taylor should not cross-examine his witness to prove that the evidence was contradictory to that given at the inquest. The defence gained some valuable evidence in cross-examination as to the safety of the mines.

Hugh Dickson related how the accident looked to him on the outside. Charles Burrows was on the stand most of Wednesday and he proved a strong witness for the plaintiffs. He told of his escape from No. 3 mine and of his subsequent observations in recovering the bodies and in examining and repairing the wrecked mine. Mr. Blakemore gave expert testimony yesterday for the plaintiffs.

IMMENSE FIRE-PROOF CELLARS.

The Trites-Wood Co. are completing their three large fire-proof cellars on Pellatt St. These cellars are each 25 ft. wide and 60 ft. long with a depth of 9 feet, giving a storage space of over forty thousand cubic feet. Two cellars are end to end and extend the entire distance from the street front to the lane. The third is alongside of the first. The cellars are made absolutely fire-proof by a 14 inch covering of earth over the whole. The approaches and openings are all encased in stone work. Over the three cellars store buildings have been erected, all under one immense roof. The remaining quarter of the ground is also under the same roof. It is to be used as a driveway, where goods can be unloaded or loaded in any weather without damage. The cellars will store immense stocks of provisions, canned goods etc., and will need no insurance whatever. The buildings above will be used to store other goods and on account of fewer exposures the rates will not be high. These cellars and store rooms cost considerable money, but in the end they will prove an economic investment and will reflect credit upon the enterprise and the foresight of the firm.

CONTRACT NOT YET LET.

Chief Engineer Hoglan and Other Officials Daily Expected to Arrive in Fernie.

The contract for the construction of the G. N. extension was not let on Monday as expected it would owing to the fact that addional information was required from the chief engineer before the contractors were in a position to submit their bids. Chief Engineer Hoglan passed through on his way to the Boundary Country where his presence was required on the construction work there. He is daily expected to arrive in Fernie when further detailed information will be given to the contractors and the contract will be let without delay.

Engineer Lupfer was on his way up on Monday but was recalled by a wire at Gateway recalling him to Kalispel to meet General Manager Ward who was passing through. It is now believed that Mr. Lupfer will wait for Mr. Hoglan.

Right-of-way-man DesBrisay was in town again this week, but until the survey is approved of by the chief engineer he will be unable to proceed with his work. The lots in some cases in West Fernie are held at high prices, but the railway will probably purchase at from two to three hundred dollars an acre.

The surveyors are busy this week running preliminary lines to determine how the line can best be continued to Michel. The line will either continue up the west side or recross a mile or two up from Fernie.

BOARD OF TRADE EXECUTIVE.

A meeting of the executive of the Board of Trade occurred last evening. Messrs. F. Stork, D. V. Mott and S. Herchmer were appointed delegates to the associated meeting at Calgary on June 15th.

The incorporation matter was taken up and the secretary reported that it was up to the government to act first. A wire had been sent urging the latter's immediate attention.

The deplorable condition existing along MacPherson Ave. again came before the Board. The row of shacks overlooking the recreation grounds were a disgrace to the town and the street should be opened. Mr. Cree who introduced the subject pointed out that these shacks were dangerous from a fire standpoint as they had tin chimneys and were surrounded by dry brush piles. The secretary was instructed to write to the Coal Company asking its assistance in the matter.

FIRE INQUEST.

Stipendiary Magistrate Forbes will hold the fire inquest at the court house on Tuesday, June 14th, at 10 a.m., when an attempt will be made to determine the cause of the late fire. All citizens desirous of giving evidence should remember the date and be present.

Hon. D. W. Higgins, father of Dr. C P. Higgins of this town, has prepared his series of delightful stories of early life in B. C. for publication in book form and it is expected that the book will be out by July 1st. T. N. Hibben & Co. of Victoria are the publishers. The books will be sold by subscription only, the price being $1.50. A. W. Bleasdell has been appointed agent for Fernie and all desirous of securing the book should have their names entered on his subscription list. The title of the book is "The Mystic Spring and Other Tales of Western Life." These tales have appeared regularly in the Victoria Colonist, which paper was edited for many years by Mr. Higgins. They abound in historical references and many of them are intensely interesting.

AN UNFAIR CRITICISM.

...don has been making some ... nts at the Presbyterian Asse... Johns. The following is a clipping from an eastern daily:—

"Rev. D. L. Gordon, of Kootenay, told of the crowds of men there seeking wealth. Organized capital controls southeast Kootenay entirely, and organized labor, opposing this, friction arises. The man who resists the Crow's Nest Coal Company puts his head in a contracting noose. The world, the flesh, the devil and determined capital are not friends of the churches there, but the church in spite of them continues."

Such extravagant language from the lips of a minister and in the hearing of such an assembly is calculated to have far reaching effects in bringing discredit upon this town and district both in the realms of labor and capital. Mr. Gordon should air these views at home where they can be refuted by any who may considered themselves slandered, and not spread them broad-cast through the country in such a manner as to render their denial impossible.

THE B. C. lumbermen are still sending delegations to Ottawa to secure a duty on American rough lumber coming into Canada. The lumber men ask only for protection and not for privileges which will enable them to raise their prices as is thought by Eastern people.

* * *

THE incorporation of the town is being kept back by the inaction of the government in not promising the desired legislation. It is not a matter that should require any mature deliberation on the part of the executive council, in fact premier McBride's personal promise would be sufficient to satisfy both parties concerned. The legislation desired affects no one outside of the town of Fernie and if the people of Fernie want it, as will be shown by the signatures to the petition when it is circulated, then no member of the legislature on either side of the house can find any grounds for opposing it. The town wants incorporation. It wants it now, and the government should be careful not to stand in the way of the town.

* * *

THE persistent rumors emanating from Victoria to the effect that the goverment's policy in dealing with the Flathead would be made known in a few days have doubtless had no foundation for the month of May has slipped by and the first week of June, with nothing definite being announced. The prospecting season in this section is not a long one and unless the disposition of these lands is soon determined there will be little done this summer. The building of a road into the Flathead was promised by the government as soon as its need was apparent and as nothing has yet been done in this direction the natural inference is the the government expects little development in the Flathead at least for some months to come. The granting of licenses to all applicants, as suggested in the various rumors, will lead to numerous appeals to the courts, which will probably tie up much of the lands pending these investigations.

It is reported that the Coal Company has secured a very large coke contract.

The present wet weather has made the need for sidewalks on our main street very apparent.

Jos. Mitchell is preparing plans for a large three storey frame building on the old Victoria stand.

F. G. Barrows and O. H. Robertson, of Minneapolis, directors of the Elk Lumber and Manufacturing Company, are in town.

A wire was received from Victoria this morning by the incorporation committee intimating that Premier McBride is not at the capital.

The regular license meeting occurs next Wednesday. F. J. Jarvis is applying for a license for Cameron's building next the Muskoka.

DECLARES FIRST SHALL BE LAST AND THE LAST SHALL BE FIRST.

HONOR FOR SILENT WARRIORS

Those Who Are As Nothing in the Eyes of Men May Be First in the Sight of God—A Memorial Day Sermon to the Unknown Heroes of the Civil War of the United States.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 29.—In this sermon for Memorial Day the preacher pleads for justice and recognition for those who, though wearing no uniforms and bearing no weapons, yet served their country in its crisis as faithfully and patriotically as ever did soldier at the front of the battle line. The text is Matthew xix, 30, "Many that are first shall be last; and the last shall be first."

From time immemorial nations have honored their military chieftains. All Carthage knelt in reverence before the tombs of Hamilcar and Hannibal. All Italy praises Garibaldi and Victor Emmanuel. In England the Duke of Wellington and Lord Napier sleep within St. Paul's cathedral under the most magnificent dome of all London. Westminster Abbey is the last resting place of scores of generals and admirals who have made England's name famous upon the land and upon the sea.

Not only do the modern nations honor their dead military chieftains, but also the living soldiers who have shed their blood upon hard fought battle-fields. They honor not their generals only, but the humble privates who once carried the muskets in the ranks, or the petty non-commissioned officers, or the lieutenants, or captains of small company commands. When these soldiers die they are laid in the grave with military honors. When, as wornout veterans they are unable to look after themselves, then the best of "soldier homes" are provided for their housement. England has placed the royal palace in the Isle of Wight, where Queen Victoria passed most of her life, at the service of her convalescaet sailors. France has her beautiful retreat of the Invalides for her aged soldiers, in the midst of which is the huge sarcophagus of her greatest warrior, whose dying request was this: "It is my wish that my ashes may repose on the banks of the Seine, in the midst of the French people whom I loved so well." The finest sites near our own national capital and Milwaukee and Danville and Santa Monica are filled with the veterans of our own army, who were just as brave as any that wore the Confederate gray or the Federal blue, who laid down their lives upon the blood soaked soil of Vicksburg, Chancellorsville, Lookout Mountain or Atlanta.

On this Memorial Day I praise the unpraised southerner as well as the unpraised northerner. I believe the Civil War, bloody as it was, awful and terrific as it was, mortal as it was, with 1,000,000 dead, was worth all the sacrifice it cost. Why? Because once and for all it settled the vital and far reaching question that the United States Government forever was to be bounded on the east by the Atlantic, on the west by the Pacific, on the north by the Great Lakes and on the south by the Gulf. Though the United States proper comprises an area of 3,025,600 square miles, yet in that vast area, great as it is, there will never be room for more than one Government any more than two queens can live within the same beehive. This question of one Government had to be settled once for all by the sword. If it had not been settled by a bloody conflict between the north and the south it certainly would have had to be settled later by a bloody conflict between the east and west. Thus I honor to-day the unpraised hero who in 1861 lived below the Mason and Dixon line as well as the unpraised hero of Michigan and Pennsylvania and New York and Maine.

First, on this Memorial Day, let us honor the statesmen in the Cabinet and the Legislators in the Capitol who conducted the National Government during those four years of trial. In the northern Capitol at Washington and in the Confederate Capitol at Richmond there were men as brave as those in the armies. Their duties were onerous, their responsibilities serious, their patriotism intense.

It is so easy to speak sneeringly of our Washington Legislators. It is so easy to call the United States Senate the "millionaires' assembly" or the "club of the old fogies." It is so easy to say the House of Representatives is a collection of nonentities, who are ruled for the most part by one or two men who crack the party whip over the backs of their fellows. But, my friends, I believe that by such speeches injustice is often done to able men. We have a right to assume that men who have been chosen by their fellow citizens to represent them in Congress are worthy men, and when we disparage them we disparage the citizens who elected them. The first great battles are not fought out with sword and cannon but with tongue and pen in Legislative Assembly. The outcome of the terrific conflict of 1861 to 1865 would never have been the maintenance of the Union if Congress had not loyally supported President Lincoln during that eventful period. Aye, there were giants in those days. But the giants upon Capitol Hill, whose moral courage and unswerving loyalty were tried and proved, deserve our honor as much as do the giants fighting at the front.

On this Memorial Day the brother who stayed at home and worked the farm should be praised as well as the young man who went to the front and was mentioned for a heroic deed in the commander's despatch. The young man who sank his personality in the more common but equally needful duties of home life might have been even braver and more unselfish than the soldier boy who marched down the main street of his native town or city.

Let me illustrate what I mean by praising the boy who stayed at home to work the farm. Some time ago I was attending a soldiers' reunion. It was a most impressive spectacle, that assembly of aged men. Yes, the ranks of the old soldiers are thinning very rapidly. We shall not have them with us long. But, though these veterans were very old when they began to tell their campfire stories, as their narrative proceeded they seemed to become boys again. Among the stories told was one I shall never forget. "Did you have any brothers in the army?" I asked an aged soldier. "Yes, one," was the answer. "There were three boys of us. We all wanted to go, but father and mother were getting old, and some one had to stay at home and look after the old folks and our younger sisters. So one night we had a family convocation. After the family talk we three sons and mother and father decided that two of us boys could go to the war, but that one should stay at home and work the farm. Who were to go? Who was to stay at home? We all wanted to go and fight and so we decided to draw lots. Mother held the book and put in the three slips of paper with one marked 'Stay at home.' We drew. John and myself went to the front. Harry stayed at home." "Did your brother regret that he had to stay?" "Oh, yes. But some one had to stay, and so he simply swallowed his disappointment. Yes, we two boys could never have gone to the front but for Harry's faithfulness to the old folks." Was he not just as patriotic as the two who went forth to battle?

In this Memorial address we would accord praise to all who did the country service—the contractors who furnished the blankets and the shoes and the tents and the food and the guns, the patriotic bankers, the railroad men, like Thomas Alexander Scott, who did such valuable service in rushing the troops to their ultimate destinations. We would praise the newspaper editors, who moulded public opinion so that the right men were elected to Congress, and the newspaper reporters, who risked life and limb to carry back the news from the front, of what husbands and fathers and brothers had suffered under the tornadoes of shot and shell in the last battle. We would praise such men as James K. McClure of The Philadelphia Press, with whom Lincoln was in closest contact, and Joseph Medill of The Chicago Tribune and James Gordon Bennett of The New York Herald. These men never were able to wear a Grand Army button. They could tell no campfire stories at the Grand Army reunions, but they had their part in the great struggle.

It is a very grave question whether Abraham Lincoln could not better have parted with almost any one of his major-generals than he could have lost that genius of railroad organizing, Thomas Alexander Scott. It is a very grave question whether U. S. Grant would not have been deposed from his command and sent back home in disgrace had it not been for Charles A. Dana, who, as the personal representative of Lincoln, went to the front and exposed and denounced the false scandals which were being circulated about the "silent warrior" of the west. It is a very grave question whether Salmon P. Chase could have ever successfully financiered the United States bonds which paid the running expenses of the war Government, costing at that time millions upon millions of dollars each month, unless he had been backed up by Jay Cooke, the Philadelphia capitalist, who was to Lincoln what Robert Morris was to George Washington in the Revolution. So to-day I impartially praise the patriotic soldier, the patriotic railroad man, the patriotic editor, the patriotic financier, the patriotic contractor.

We have read all about the noble services of Dwight L. Moody to the soldier boys at the front. We know that many a dying soldier boy was able to answer "Here!" to the roll call of heaven because some faithful chaplain on earth had prepared him for that "Fall in!" on the other side of the grave. We know that many and many a dying message sent to the mother or the wife at home was penned by the faithful chaplains who looked after the boys of their regiments as a father might care for the children about his own fireside. But what about that gray-haired old minister of the village church? Did he not serve any patriotic purpose? Did he not lift high the standard of the patriotic soldier when he delivered the eulogy over the casket enwrapped in its country's flag?

We cannot to-day too much praise the work of the gospel minister during the agonies of America's four years of carnage. One day a man applied to General Jackson for a position in his army. "What is your business?" asked Jackson. "I am a minister of the gospel," was the reply. Then Jackson, the Christian soldier, said: "My friend, I can give you no position as high as that which God has given to you. Go back to your own church. In the name of Jesus Christ, give comfort to the widows whose husbands have been shot; to the children whose fathers, on account of this bloody war, will never come back; to the young maidens who can never again see their sweethearts. Go back and preach the gospel of sacrifice to the young men who must be enlisted from your town. Go back! In God's name, go back!"

But I have still another long list of unpraised heroisms. I would not praise the boy in blue or the boy in gray for what he did in 1861 and 1865 more than I would praise him for what he did after peace had been proclaimed. It was a spectacle that astonished the world, a spectacle unprecedented in history, that of the soldiers of those two huge armies laying down their muskets and taking up the plowshare. To their honor be it said that they were ready to turn their backs upon strife and, side by side, work together in the vocations of peace. The vast armies of America going forth to battle is not nearly as impressive, from a historic standpoint, to the student of sociology, as those armies almost instantly melting away and then and there their ex-members fraternizing with one another and striving to the uttermost to build up the country with as much earnestness as they had shown in fighting each other to the death.

Without any doubt, Robert E. Lee was one of the finest characters America ever produced. Would you like to know what was to me the greatest act of that grand life? I find it not in his actions before the war. I find it not in his wonderful equipoise and gentleness and marvelous powers during the war. But after Appomattox the chief nobility of that life glowed before his fellow countrymen as a single star might outshine all the other stars in the heavenly firmament. After the war was over a rich financial company of New York City, in order to catch the southern trade through Robert E. Lee's popularity, offered Lee $25,000 per year at a salary to become its manager. What said General Lee? "No, I cannot come. I must stay among my own people to help teach them to become true Christian citizens, to help teach them how to have faith in their God and patriotic love for their whole land." Robert E. Lee turned his back at that time upon the most princely salary then offered in the city of New York. In order to teach his people to love a reunited country and to have faith in God he accepted a humble position as the president of one of Virginia's bankrupt schools. Rather than live for mercenary gain he quietly and yet nobly and unselfishly went to live among the shattered walls of Washington College in Lexington. He lived there until the close of his life. Some people may tell you that the greatest service the American soldier did for his country was when he suffered upon the field of battle. I tell you that the greatest service the Confederate army and the Federal army ever did for their native land was when they dissolved and when their Christian soldiers became the earnest, consecrated advocates of Christian peace. So to-day I praise no less highly than the soldier who went out in 1861 to fight his country's battles the soldier in 1866 returning to civil life and striving in home and factory and store to heal the wound of the nation and reunite its people in the bonds of Christian love.

Some time ago I stood on the top of the Washington monument and looked off upon the battlefields of America and dreamed my dreams. I saw hundreds of thousands of human bones bleaching in the sunlight, gnawed of the vulture and the wolf. I heard the muffled drums beating the tattoo at sunset. As the artillery wagons rumbled away to the rear, and star twinkled to star, I heard sentinel by the glare of the campfire call to sentinel: "All's well. All's well along the Potomac!"

There go the booming of the cannon and the sharp commands of the officers, "Steady, boys; steady, steady!" There is the ping of the bullet, and the dying soldier clutches at his heart as he moans, "My babies, O God, my poor babies!" and then drops dead. There comes the blood curdling Confederate cry, "Hi! Hi! Hi! Hi! Hi!" There is the long line of set faces behind the glittering bayonets. The heavens redden and glow. The flames leap and hiss and dance and make merry over the burning homes. The falling beams go crash, crash, crash! The rivers are deep with flowing blood; the grave trenches are filled with a million dead.

As I turn and look upon the great white dome of the Capitol the old national flag flaps and waves. Its stars glitter like the eyes of the maidens who, after awhile as old women, read and reread the torn and the yellow letters which their heroes just before the fatal battle wrote about the bridal homes which were destined never to be built. And as I look upon the old flag again the white stripes look like the white bandages which were put about the shattered arms. The long, deep streaks of red prove that its folds had once been dipped into pools of human blood. Then the great white dome of the Legislative Hall, glistening in the sunlight, looks as though it were built out of the broken tombstones of Arlington Heights and Gettysburg and the Wilderness.

Then, as I look up and down the great Pennsylvania avenue, I seem to see the united armies of the boys in blue and of the boys in gray marching, marching, marching. I see the lines melt away. Following with my eye one soldier, I see him take his discharge, and he starts for home. I cannot tell whether this discharged soldier is now heading for the Michigan hills or for the Georgia plantations. In his civilian dress he has no distinctive insignia telling me whether he fought under Grant or under Lee. Then I see this soldier coming up to the farm gate and being welcomed home by his dear ones. Now his wife nearly faints away for joy. Then in the evening hour I see him gather the little children about him. He opens the old book; he reads a chapter; the family kneel in prayer; then the lights are put out, and I know the war is forever ended.

Come, ye Christian heroes of the past, both praised and unpraised; come with your sacred memories and your buried dead. Come, ye Christ your buried dead. Come, ye Christian heroes of the future, w th your cradles and unborn generations; come, ye nations about to be born for Christ; come all times and all millenniums! Down in prayer and kneel to him who will yet be crowned King of kings and Lord of all! Halleluiah, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth!

HEALTH FOR GIRLS

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Make Strong Healthy Rosy-Cheeked Lasses.

"I was attacked with appendicitis," says Miss Fabiola Grammont, daughter of Mr. Charles Grammont, a prosperous farmer of Champlain, Que., "and while the doctor who attended me cured me of the trouble, it left behind after effects from which it seemed almost impossible to recover. I grew weak and very pale; my appetite was poor; I suffered at times from severe headaches; and the least exertion left me completely worn out. I tried several remedies, but instead of getting better I was gradually growing worse. Any work about the house left me weak and dispirited, and I felt almost like giving up. At this time a friend who had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with much benefit strongly urged me to give them a trial. I got a box, and as I did not feel any better when I had used them, I would have given them up but for the fact that my friend urged that one box was not a fair trial. I then decided to continue the use of the pills, and by the time I had taken three boxes I found my condition was improving. I used eight boxes in all, and by the time I had taken them all my old time health had returned. My appetite had improved, I had gained in weight and the glow of health had returned to my face. I cannot too strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all pale and weak girls."

Good blood is an absolute necessity, and the only way to have a constant supply of rich, red health-giving blood is to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose helps to make new blood, and to drive from the system such troubles as anaemia, languidness, neuralgia, dyspepsia, rheumatism, etc. You can get these pills from any medicine dealer, or by mail gt 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Influencing a Decision.

An old treasury department official tells how the late Judge Gray decided one of the earliest customs classification cases to come before the supreme court of the United States. The article under consideration was a preparation of fish which had been assessed for duty as a sauce. The inferior courts had given conflicting opinions as to whether it really was a sauce, and by the time the issue reached the dignified supreme court the decisions either way were voluminous enough to confuse the most clear headed jurist.

Judge Gray examined the article, according to the Philadelphia Ledger, but could not make up his mind. His colleagues were equally undecided. When things came to a standstill it occurred to Judge Gray that a housewife would probably be better qualified to decide a matter of this kind. He took a sample of the article home to Mrs. Gray.

"Nonsense; that's no sauce; it's fish!" she said, and the next day the supreme court of the United States solemnly decided the article was not a sauce.

PIANO TUNERS.

They Are Masters of Harmony, but Few Know Written Music.

The piano tuner was jangling the keys with one hand as he twisted and swung his little hammer at the pins with the other. Now and then he would strike a chord nonchalantly, but he never pretended to produce any succession of sounds that resembled a theme or phrase of music. He wound up with a final jangle of chords that were harmonic, but not in any manner related to one another. Then he screwed on the front of the case and announced that the tuning was finished.

"Won't you play something for me?" asked the mistress of the household expectantly.

"I am afraid I can't gratify you, madam," was the response. "I can't play."

"Not play? I should think any person with such knowledge of harmony would be a master of music," said the woman.

"The tuner is a master of harmony, or his ear is," said the man, "but few of us know written music. We don't need it in our business. All a tuner has to have is an acute ear for notes and their harmony. With the pitch of a fork set at a certain point he has a basis to start from, and all he does is to give each string on the instrument its proper grade in the scale. It takes a mighty fine ear and much training of the sense of hearing, but that is all there is to it."

A JAPANESE LEGEND.

Origin of a Strange Insect Found Only In Himeji.

Lafcadio Hearn gives a curious tradition about a strange insect which is found only in Himeji, a pretty little town near the center of Japan. It seems there once lived a rich noble in a castle on the outskirts of the town who was famous for the magnificence of his dishes, among which were ten priceless bowls of solid gold. In his employ was a maidservant of good family, whose name was O-Kiku, to whom was intrusted the care of the precious plate, but to her great despair one day one of the gold dishes was missing. She searched diligently in vain, and, not knowing how to prove her innocence, in her despair drowned herself in a well, but her ghost returned nightly to the spot and could be heard counting the dishes slowly, with sobs, "Ichi-mai, ni-mai, san-mai, yo-mai, go-mai, roku-mai, shichi-mai, hachi-mai, ku-mai," up to nine, when there would follow a loud, wailing cry, and the uncanny count began over again. At last the uneasy spirit passed into the body of an insect whose head somewhat resembles a ghost with long, tousled hair, and in that part of Japan it is considered unlucky to cultivate the chrysanthemum, as the girl's name, O-Kiku, means chrysanthemum.

The Dieting of Pet Dogs.

Pet dogs require to be put on a starvation diet occasionally, as well as men and women," said a fancier who makes a specialty of doctoring pets.

"Nine times out of ten, when a woman rushes in here and tells me that her dog is poisoned, I can see at a glance that it's nothing but a case of overfeeding. I put the dog on a milk and water diet for two weeks, make up a simple prescription for the owner to take home with her pet when I am through with it and collect $25. Do I tell her so? Certainly not. She wouldn't believe me if I did. Women rich enough to stuff their pets with candy and such things like to think that they know more about the ailments of their Fidos and their Princes than I do."

The Perfect Waiter.

The complete waiter, like the angler and the poet, is born, not made. Fortunately, however, for the comfort of the world, a great waiter is born a good deal more frequently than a great poet. Both must have a remarkable combination of faculties. The perfect waiter must handle the knife like a skilled surgeon; plates, dishes, forks and spoons like a conjurer; know as much of the dishes he serves as any epicure; be as quick on his feet as a ballet girl and as sweet in his temper as an angel. It is a tribute to the possibilities of human nature to say that such Admirable Crichtons can be found.—London Telegraph.

A Radical.

"He poses as a reformer, doesn't he?"

"Oh, he's worse than a reformer. His ideas would upset the whole social and business world. He says if he had his way he'd put in jail everybody who ought to be there."

Even That Didn't Work.

"Did you do nothing to resuscitate the body?" was asked of a witness at a coroner's inquest.

"Yes, sir; we searched the pockets," was the reply.

Lunch Room Cheats.

"There is not much use trying to have restaurant petty cheats arrested," said the manager of a lunch room in the busy downtown district of New York. "It is too much bother to go to court to appear against them, and we never get the money anyway. As a rule, cheats eat only a small amount, less than 50 cents' worth. The head waiter and the waiter have signals by which they can generally size a man up. They know in a minute whether a customer has really come away from the office without his money or is only bluffing.

"But there is one kind of beat we are all down on, and we'll put him in the cooler overnight every time we catch him. I mean the man who sits at a table, eats 40 or 50 cents' worth of roast or entree and then stops at the bar counter on his way out for a piece of pie and a cup of coffee. When he comes to the cashier's desk he presents nothing but the fifteen cent check for the pie and coffee. The only thing we can do is to make an example of a chap of that kind when we catch him."

A Dog Story.

They were talking about the intelligence of dogs, and after each man in the group had cracked up his own the Mount Airy man said: "I have a fox terrier named Troubles who not only seems to understand everything that is said to him, but who even takes in conversation of a general character that isn't addressed to him. Our servant girl has been suffering from a bad cold, and the other day, when she went out into the yard to hang up clothes, my wife noticed that the ground was very damp. 'Mary, you ought to have rubbers on out there,' she called from a window. Now, Troubles happened to overhear this remark, and what do you suppose that dog did? He ran to the hall, picked up a rubber shoe, hustled out into the yard and dropped it at the girl's feet. Then he hurried back and repeated the performance with the other shoe. Don't tell me dogs don't understand the English language."

First Done at Fontenoy.

The Black Watch distinguished itself at Fontenoy by a mode of warfare which at the time surprised both friend and foe, but has since become a recognized maneuver. Unable to get at the French infantry, who were strongly intrenched, and being therefore incapable of using their formidable broadswords with effect, the Forty-second highlanders, after marching to the ground to the music of their own bagpipes to take up a position, fired a volley and then "clapped down at full length on the ground to let the enemy's shots pass over them." The only exception to this prone attitude was the colonel, Sir Robert Monro, who was so fat and unwieldy that, had he lain down, it would have required a lever to lift him again.

Old English Tracts.

English tracts and sermons of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries are interesting on account of the strange phraseology—a kind of religious slang—which they reveal. Their titles exemplify this slang well, and the following are a few of them:

"The Spiritual Mustard Pot, to Make the Soul Sneeze With Devotion."

"The Snuffers of Divine Love."

"Crumbs of Comfort For Hungry Hoseas."

"Biscuits Baked In the Oven of Charity, Carefully Conserved For Chickens of the Church, Sparrows of the Spirit and Sweet Swallows of Salvation."

We Are All "Just Folks."

"My boy," said a man of the state of Texas to his son, who was starting out for a career in an eastern city—"my boy, let me tell you something which may be of help to you. You get up there, and you may see a heap of people who have got more money than you have, a heap of people who have got more brains than you have and more success. Some of them may even be better looking than you are. Don't you worry about that, and don't you be scared by anybody. Whenever you meet a man who allows he's your superior you just look at him and say to yourself, 'After all, you're just folks.' You want to remember for yourself, too, that you're just folks. My boy, after you have lived as long as I have and have knocked around the world you will come to see that that's all any one of us is—just folks."—Field and Stream.

Prayer and Practice.

"Did the deacon pray at the meeting?"

"Yep. Wound up his prayer with a plea to help us overlook the faults o' others."

"Well, he allus does that."

"I know, but as soon as he got up from his knees he turned around an' scowled at Beasley's baby because it squawked once or twice while he was prayin'."

RUSSIANS SWEPT FROM THEIR DEFENCES

Vice-Admiral Togo Completely Envelopes Port Arthur From the Seaward—Five Hours Desperate Fighting Ends in Japanese Triumph.

CLOSING IN

Many Outpost Skirmishes are Taking Place.

A despatch from Chefoo says: In obedience to the direct and imperative order of the Czar, the Russian forces about Liao Yang, commanded by Gen. Kuropatkin, are marching south. Correspondents with the Japanese army will leave here June 10. The Japanese confidently predict that the storming of Port Arthur will begin on June 15th, and the fortress will be captured by June 20th. Gen. Kuropatkin, obeying the Czar, is striking out to a position to the southeast of Liao Yang. His activity was further impelled by the steady circling movements of the Japanese, who threaten to surround him unless he breaks out and offers battle. Japanese infantry and guns are being moved up from Feng Wang Cheng. The simultaneous advance of the armies makes a battle imminent.

REPORTED RUSSIAN REVERSE.

A despatch from Paris says: The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Petit Parisian telegraphs: Two thousand Cossacks of Gen. Rennenkamp's corps have been surrounded and compelled to surrender between Saintnatze and Kwantien, near Feng Wang Cheng. Gen. Kondratienko's column, 2,000 strong, is now marching towards Port Arthur. Its object is to create a diversion on the flank of the Japanese besieging force, and to co-operate with the Port Arthur garrison.

KUROKI ADVANCING.

A Liao Yang despatch says: A considerable division of General Kuroki's army occupied Kauntien on Friday, and advance guards were moving north toward Al Yang. The Russians are in force southeast of Tatung pass. The Japanese advance is being made on all the main roads towards the northwest.

The Russians have torn up the railway south of Taschichiao, and are sending the rails to Liao Yang. Japan has asked China if she will occupy Port Arthur when it has fallen into the hands of the Japanese army.

HAD CLOSE CALL

Narrow Escape From Foundering on Cape Flattery.

The schooner Umbria, just arrived at Vancouver, B. C., from the sealing grounds, had a narrow escape from foundering off Cape Flattery during the big storm of March 19. She was thrown on her beam end and for seven minutes lay with her masts in the sea. Everything movable in her hold shifted, and the rigging was carried away. The upper works were demolished and the hull sprank a leak. The Indian crew, in order to right the vessel, had to enter the hold and work in water up to the waist.

After a terrific battle with the elements the schooner was righted and succeeded in weathering the gale, although practically in a helpless condition. Next day, the wreckage of some lumber vessel, one of the victims of the gale, was sighted, but could not be examined owing to the rough sea. It included the ship's booms and other portions of the wreck. It is feared that in this storm the sealing schooner Triumph went down with more than 20 men.

The bodies have not yet been found.

JAPS GREAT VICTORY

NOTHING SUPERIOR IN BRITISH HISTORY

Full Details of the Storming of Min Shan Hill—Determined Valor of Japanese Troops—Nine Unsuccessful Attempts.

KUROKI MOVES QUICKLY.

A Liao Yang despatch says: The forces under command of Gen. Kuroki, and the army co-operating with him which landed at Taku Shan, have made a joint sudden advance of about twenty miles since last Thursday. This has been established by a Cossack patrol now returning from the southeast, but it is impossible for the general staff here to determine the nature of the Japanese plans. The general belief which is shared by Gen. Kuropatkin is that the Japanese army intends to make a quick change of base, occupying New Chwang at the earliest opportunity, and thus permitting the army to receive its supplies direct by sea,

REPULSED NINE TIMES.

A Tokio cable says: The details of the fighting at Kin Chou emphasize the heroic tenacity of the Japanese in their conduct at Nanshan Hill. Nine successive times the Japanese charged the fortified heights in the face of a storm of death-dealing missiles, and in their last effort they carried the fort and trenches only after a bayonet conflict with the Russians, who made a desperate despairing struggle to beat the oncoming Japanese. The final assault of the Japanese, in which they at last succeeded in taking possession, was marked by the most desperate hand-to-hand encounter that has thus far characterized the war. The Japanese left throughout the entire action until night was exposed to an enfilading fire from the Russian artillery, and a gunboat in Talienwan Bay, and four nine centimetere guns posted at Tafen Gchen. At a critical moment the ammunition of the artillery ran low, and it was decided to cast the remaining ammunition into

ONE FINAL DESPERATE ASSAULT.

Fortunately, however, at the last moment this decision was reached the Japanese squadron in Kin Chou bay, which had ceased bombardment when the infantry had first moved forward, suddenly resumed the shelling of Nanshan hill. Then it was that the issue of the day was determined, at a moment when the outcome was fluttering between success and defeat for the Japanese at that moment of almost certain repulse, converted it into a victory so succecsful that the forces of the czar were swept into confusion and disorderly retreated.

With every Japanese gun threatening its fire upon the Nanshan forts and trenches, the Japanese infantry sprang over the bodies of those who had sacrificed their lives in the previous fruitless charges. the entire line rushed forward toward ?he Russian left, where the fire of the Japanese squadron had proved most deadly, and which was the first to weaken. It was there that in the human wall that had been an invincible barrier to impetuous assaults. It was the fourth division, the Osaka men, that stormed the enemy. The first division (of Tokio) which had the centre, and the third division (of Nagoya) occupying the left, and which had been exposed all day to the Russian fire, then followed the example of the Osaka men, and rushed lorward. The battle at once became transformed from an artillery duel into a bayonet conflict. On to every parapet the Japanese surged in increasing numbers, and, hustling the Russians from their entrenchments, swept over the hill. At 7.30 o'clock as the sun was sinking beneath the horizen, the flag of Japan floated above the while the scouts of "Benzai" swelled from hill to hill and re-echoed from squadron to fort.

BLOOD-TRODDEN NANSHAN HILL

The Japanese paid for their victory with 3,500 killed and wounded. To the Russians the humiliation of defeat was intensified by the loss of 68 cannon and 10 machine guns, while lying in the fort and trenches were 500 dead bodies, the victums of the accuracy of the Japanese long distance marksmanship and of close range fighting.

General Oku, in command of the Japanese, began his aggressive movement on the Russian position at midnight on Wednesday. He assigned the fourth division to the right with instructions to swing around Kin Chou and move south. He gave the first division the centre, and the third was allotted to the third division. During the night a terrible thunderstorm, accompanied by a heavy rain, broke over the advancing army and impeded its movements. It had been planned to begin the fight at 4.30 o'clock in the morning, but the storm, and it was an hour later before all the artillery under General Uchlyama opened on Nan Shan hill. A detachmeot seized Kin Chou castle and the infantry forces gradually moved forward. The gunners on the fortified heights were not slow in giving smart response to the Japanese attack, and soon a vigorous fire and counter fire was in progress, to which the big guns of the Japanese squadron lent noisy clang. At about 6 o'clock the atmosphere had cleared up sufficinntly for naval marksmanship to work effective.

For three hours the shelling from bay and shore, and the replying from the forts continued without interruption, and then the Russian fire abated. The cessation of the firing on the hill was a signal for a forward movement of the troops below, and the attacking batteries changed their position to secure better ranges. At 11 o'clock a zone varying from 300 to 5,500 yards in width crossed the Japanese and Russian lines and the rest of the day was spent by assailing forces crossing the fire swept zone A Russian gunboat at Talienwan bay opened fire on the Japanese left flank at 10 o'clock, in the afternoon and continued firing for five hours. Five Russian steamers attempted to land their crews near Hung Tuai, but the third division stopped them. In the meantime four heavy guns at Tafanchen.

FOUND THE RANGE

of the third division and kept it up until 7 o'clock in the evening. The artillery, with the third division, vainly endeavored to reach these guns, but failed on account of the darkness. In the main attack the Japanese artillery continued shelling Nan Shan hill, seeking to destroy entanglements and otherwise clear the way of the infantry, but every time the infantry advanced the awful Russian fire drove them back. In the meantime the Russians had reinforced their right under cover of the two field batteries (previously withdrawn from Nan Shan) with fresh infantry, whose fire enfiladed a considerable portion of the Japanese line. Very critical at this time was the situation for General Oku, for at the wavering of the line under the reinforcement of the Russian infantry came the reports from the Japanese batteries that the ammunition was almost exhausted. General Oku reports that he knew he could not hope to continue the battle much longer, so

HE DECIDED TO MAKE AN ASSAULT

in force, regardless of casualties. Then the artillery opened fire with the remaining ammunition, and the first division courageously assaulted the Russian centre only to be beaten back. During this time four regiments of artillery had been pounding the Russian left. Suddenly the Japanese squadron began pouring shells into the Russian left, and its noisy awakening was succeeded by the onslaught of the fourth division on the demoralized left wing of the defenders, and

THE VICTORY WAS WON.

The beaten forces, badly shattered, retreated toward Port Arthur, exploding the Tafangchen magazines as they receded. A detachment of Japanese infantry pursued the retreating Russians far into the night.

Gen. Oku estimates that the force of the enemy consisted of one line division, two batteries of field artillery, some fortress artillery and marlines.

Gen. Togo telegraphs his opinion that the Russians intended to check the Japanese advance at Nan Shan in order to protect Port Arthur. Beside the big guns a miscellaneous assortment of Russian property was captured. Gen. Oku concludes his report by heartily thanking the navy for its co-operation. The Japanese captured a number of Russian officers and men.

DROWNED IN OIL

Two Men Meet Death in Refinery at Port Arthur, Texas.

A despatch from Port Arthur, Tex., says: William Richard of New York city and Fred Trapham of Guridan, La., were accidentally drowned in a tank of oil at the Gulf Refining Company's plant. Richard, who was working on one of the agitators, became dizzy and toppled over. He succeeded in clutching a small pipe and clinging to it. Trapham witnessed the accident, and went to Richard's assistance, but the gas overcame him and he fell into the tank. Richard was soon rendered unconscious and dropped in. The tanks were of several thousand barrels capacity, and it was necessary to draw off all of the oil to recover the bodies.

DOG AND DYNAMITE

Combination Which Put an Editor to Flight.

A despatch from Raleigh, N. C., says: Mr. Robertson, editor of the Wilkesboro Hustler, owned a half-grown setter dog, which he was training to retrieve. The dog was very fond of bringing objects from the water. His owner was on the bank at a deep pool when some men came up, and one of them threw a dynamite cartridge into the pool in order to kill the fish. As the cartridge was thrown the dog dashed after it, and to the horror of the editor, came out with the cartridge in his mouth, the fuse being tolerably long. The men fled, and so did the owner of the dog, the dog following the latter. Frightened almost to death, the editor rushed towards a deep ditch, fortunately quite wide, and leaped across this, continuing to run for full half a mile. At the moment the dog reached the ditch the cartridge exploded, literally tearing him to pieces. There is much talk in that section about this occurrence, which is declared to have been the strangest that ever happened in that part of the State. Only the ditch saved the life of the editor, he says.

How to Blow Out a Lamp.

Capt. Arthur Shean, consulting engineer of the London fire brigade, says the right way to put out a lamp is to turn the wick down low, wait till the flame begins to jump, and then blow sharply beneath. The wrong way, and one which frequently leads to explosions, is to blow down the chimney. He states that accidents with lamps are the occasion of more fires than all other causes combined, at least in the United Kingdom.

VICTIMIZED IMMIGRANTS

Head of Fake Employment Bureau Now a Fugitive.

Still another fake employment agency has been located, this time in Toronto. Fortunately, however, the department was after the agent before he had an opportunity to organize his business, and at present the manager of the affair, who gave his name as J. Brown, is a fugitive from the Toronto police, who have a warrant out for his arrest. A few days ago a couple of men from Ontario applied to the Winnipeg Immigration Department, on the strength of certain representations from an agency in Toronto, which called itself the Immigration Employment Bureau. It appears that the victims in question had been misled by the advertisements of this firm, and had applied to the offices for information. The sum of $10 had been charged for information regarding homesteads and homestead entries, and the dupes had been sent west on a wild-goose chase. On arriving in Winnipeg they found that the whole affair was a trap, and applied to the immigration department for assistance. There have been so many employment fake schemes sprung of late that there was no hesitation in taking the matter up. Ottawa was communicated with at once, and the Toronto police were put to work on the case. Sufficient evidence was collected and a warrant was issued for Mr. Brown's arrest. He had received a hint, however, and had made himself scarce. The department has been working on several similar fake schemes and are determined to prosecute any and all who are conpicted of this offence.

RETURN THE CUP

Britannia is Too Antiquated to Defend Trophy.

The Royal Yacht Club of London, Eng., has been obliged to decline the challenge of Commodore Morton F. Plant of the Larchmont Yacht Club for the Cape May Cup with his schooner yacht Ingomar, because the Britannia, which won the Cape May Cup, is too antiquated to defend it. The trophy, therefore, will be returned to the New York Yacht Club at the earliest possible moment.

The officials of the Royal Yacht Squadron explained to a correspondent that under the conditions the Cape May Cup must be defended by the latest winner. The Britannia has been laid up for some time, and was built so long ago that she is quite incapable of protecting the trophy against a modern yacht. There is no other course, therefore, but to decline the challenge.

Application has been made to the controller of the King's household for the return of the cup, which now is in the possession of King Edward, the owner of the Britannia.

GERMANY ANGRY

Object to Being Treated as a, Third Rate Power.

A resolution was adopted by the Pan-German Congress, says a Berlin despatch, declaring that it is "imperatively necessary for the political and business interests of the empire to acquire a foothold on the Atlantic coast region of Morocco, and the Congress feels it to be a humiliating disregard of Germany that France and Great Britain fixed the future of Morocco without consulting Germany, thus treating her like a power of third rank."

The resolution further declares that the Congress would regard it as irreparable sinning against the permanent interests of the German people if the Imperial Government should miss the opportunity presented at this moment for asserting Germany's claims upon Morocco and establishing a permanent foothold there.

CATERPILLAR ARMY

An army of tent caterpillars, hundreds of millions strong, is devastating trees in the State of Washington, and it is reported that they are making towards the boundary line of British Columbia. The caterpillars first made their appearance ten days ago, and seem to be steadily increasing in numbers. They attack wild alders and strip them of foliage until the branches are left bare, as in the aumn. Fruit trees, too, suffer from the pest. There seems to be no means of stopping their inroads. The only remedy discovered so far is either to cut down and burn the trees or apply torches to the nests. The country over which the caterpillars have travelled is bare of all kinds of tree foliage and the path of the swarm is everywhere plainly marked.

Fatal Walk.

Fatal results followed the army walking match, says a Paris despatch, which took place from the Place De La Concorde to St. Germain and back, a distance of about 28 miles, in which 2,000 soldiers from many regiments took part. Reports received by the Minister of War show that 42 men are missing, and a number of them are believed to have succumbed to hardships. Besides those missing 84 men were taken to the hospitals along the course, in various stages of prostration. Six were in a serious condition, one man is dead and another is in a dangerous condition. Some reports place this number at four.

MEN DIE YOUNG

More Irregular, Intemperate and Irritable Than Animals.

It has been said that some men die of old age, and that almost all persons die of disappointment, personal, mental, or bodily toil, or accident.

The passions kill men sometimes, even suddenly. The common expression, "choked with rage," has little exaggeration in it for even though not suddenly fatal, strong passions shorten life. Strong bodied men often die young, weak men live longer than the strong, for the strong use their strength, and the weak have none to use—the latter take care of themselves, the former do not. As it is with the body, so it is with the mind and the temper; the strong are apt ta break, or, like the candle run; the weak burn out. The inferior animals, which live temperate lives, have generally their prescribed term of years. Thus the horse lives 25 years, the ox 15 or 20, the lion about 20, the hog 10 or 12, the rabbit 8, the guinea pig 6 or 7.

The numbers all bear proportion to the time the animal takes to grow to its full size. But man, of all animals is one that seldom comes up to the average. He ought to live 100 years, according to the physiological law, for five times twenty are 100, but instead of that he scarcely reaches an average of four times the growth period. The reason is obivious. Man is not only the most irregular and most intemperate, but the most laborious and hard working of all the animals.

He is always the most irritable, and there is reason to believe, though we cannot tell what an animal secretly feels, that more than any other animal man cherishes wrath to keep it warm, and consumes himself with the fire of his own reflections.

FRENCH-CANADIANS

Senator Bernier Advises Compatriots to Look to the West.

Senator Bernier delivered an interesting address in Montreal on Friday night on "The Future of the French-Canadian Race." He urged that the French-Canadians should pay more attention to the North-West or they would lose their influence in the Canadian Parliament. In the course of his remarks, Senator Bernier made the interesting historical announcement that it was Sir George Cartier's idea, as was shown in a letter written by him to Mr. Gendron, a former member for Bagot, to make Manitoba a French-Canadian province, but his compatriots had not followed his advice.

The question of proposed basis af the union will now go to the presbyteries of the General Assembly. If it is approved by a vote of two-thirds of them the necessary steps will be taken at the next General Assembly to effect the union.

THE YELLOW PERIL

Japanese Prime Minister Talks With Canadian Missionary.

The Tokio correspondent of the London Standard sends a summary of an interview between a Canadian missionary and Prime Minister Katsura. The latter sid he deeply regretted Russia's attempt to prejudice the people of the Western nations with the cry of the yellow peril. He declared there wodld be no peace in the Far East until Russia was placed in bonds that could not be broken. He compared Japan's position with that of ancient Greece against Persia. Japan's adoption of Western civilization inseparably bound up her interests with those of the West. The Prime Minister added: "Whether it is the destiny of Japan to be the leader in the East remains to be unfolded, but if ever that responsibility is hers the world may be sure that she will not retrace her steps willingly, but will endeavor to persuade the East to do what she has done herself, and is trying to do more perfectly." Count Katsura declared that he did not speak as an individual but as Prime Minister, and that he expressed the ideas of he Emperor.

How Anthracite Coal Was Formed.

Geologists are of the opinion that bituminous and anthracite coals were formed during the same period and under like conditions. Originally they were all bituminous, but during the violent contortions and upheavals of the earth's crust at the close of the carboniferous age the bituminous coals involved in that disturbance were changed by heat and pressure and the consequent expulsion of volatile matter from bituminous to anthracite.

THE FLATHEAD RESOURCES.

The Provincial Mineralogist in the annual report of the Minister of Mines for 1903, makes a lengthy report on the Flathead country, detailing its boundaries, its streams, trails, passes, climatic condition, timber, soil, and dealing more particularly with its possibilities as a coal and oil producing district. On the last named subject he speaks as follows:

'To the eastward of the main Flathead River the rock formations forming the mountain ranges appear to be, and have been so classed by the Geological Survey, of an older age than the Cretaceous which is the coal bearing formation in this part of British Columbia; consequently no coal may be expected in this district nor could any trace of such be found. In the southern portion of the district, to the west of the Flathead, the geological formation is more recent than on the east side of the river. From the few rock exposures visible in this heavily wooded section it is impossible to learn much in a hurried trip.

The hills along the valley of Calder Creek are rounded off, the flanks being covered by wash which is chiefly dark shale and clay, through which a few out-croppings of light colored limestone and sandstone are visible. From the appearance of such formation as was seen, it is probable that it belongs to what has been classed by the Geological Survey as the "Fernie shales," and this section may posiibly contain a small outlying basin of the Cretaceous or coal-bearing rocks, although no coal outcroppings are reported as found. This section has not been prospected, there are no trails in it and travelling it is difficult.

On a small creek flowing from the north into Calder Creek, about 10 to 20 miles from its junction with the Fathead there were exposed beds of a black carbonaceous shale which contains concretions of clay-stone. These concretions, when freshly broken, give off a strong odor of petroleum, but examination of the creek for some distance up revealed nothing further. This creek is about on the boundary between Lots 4,589 and 4,593; it is impossible, in the absence of a survey, to say in which it is situated.

The northern portion of the Flathead Valley has been examined in detail by parties of the Geological Survey and the outcroppings of the coal formations are shown in a "Map of the Crow's Nest Coal Fields" published by the survey within this past year. This map is based on actual triangulation and traverse surveys made by the survey and show the coal measures of the Crow's Nest basin to be almost entirely to the west of the eastern boundary of Lot 4,589 and so, consequently, not within Lot 4,593. The coal basin is also shown as lying north of the east fork of Lodgepole Creek.

On the headwaters of the Lodgepole there are numerous exposures of the eastern edge of the coal measures of the Crow's Nest basin, and these have been prospected by various parties, exposing very promising coal seams.

These coal measures certainly lie very close to the boundary between the two blocks mentioned, and as such boundary has not been run out on the ground, the map of the Geological survey is undoubtedly the best authority we have, and this places the coal exposures in Lot 4,589."

Mr. Robertson was not more sanguine when dealing with the outlook for oil discoveries. After reviewing the reports made in this direction since 1889 and calling attention to the fact that "the close prospecting of later years has not added materially to the early discoveries" he proceeds to explain the geology of the oil-bearing district. Sage and Kish-e-neh-na creeks were the only two streams upon which oil had been reported as actually found. The creeks were parallel and their mountain structure similar. Dawson, Selwyn and other geologists had classed them as belonging to the Cambrian age, a formation much older than the Carboniferous age and much older than the Cretaceous in which latter the coal of B. C. is found. Oil has never been found in rocks of the Cambrian age and the reported discovery of it in such was at first received with much doubt. Mr. Robertson quoted Dr. Dawson to show that the seeming irregularity might be caused by an "overthrust fault" similar to that in the Bow Pass where the Palaeozoic rocks had been thrust forward over the Cretaceous beds.

Speaking of the economic values of these oil discoveries the mineralogist says;

"Oil has never been produced in a geological formation as old as the Cambrain, nor do the rocks here exposed admit of the probability of their being the source of oil. Under anything but very extraordinary conditions, these surface geological conditions would seem to render it impossible for oil to occur in this section, but the stubborn fact remains that it is found there. It is, as Dr. Dawson very appropriately calls it, a "somewhat anomalous occurrence of petroleum."

In accounting for this fact, the explanation given by Dr. Dawson and already quoted seems the only one, viz., that these older rocks have been by a gigantic "overthrust fault" slipped eastward over the Cretaceous (coal-bearing) beds of the plains for a number of miles and that the subterranean heat, acting on these coal-bearing rocks, generated oil which finds its way up through the rocks. If this explanation is the correct one, the "overthrust" must have been very great indeed to bring the Cretaceous beds underneath the present oil seepage as the Cambrain beds extend eastward from 12 to 15 miles from this point, in fact over the summit into Alberta.

The oil might have travelled westward underground for some distance, but this is not probable, as a few miles to the eastward of the point of occurrence of the oil there are several faults which have the appearance of being profound and would, therefore, have allowed the gas and oil to rise to the surface through them, but of this there is no indication. This latter fact does not prove that oil has not been generated in this faulted region, as it may have travelled eastward along the main fault seam, and it may be that which is found seeping in Alberta.

As to whether there is oil in quantity to be obtained by boring, there is little evidence; the seepage at present is trifling, but the geological structure seems suitable for the retention of oil if produced in quantity. If it does not so exist it must in all probability be at a very considerable depth, possibly over 3,000 feet.

In conclusion, I would report: the actual seeping of oil in three or more places; that the existence of a body of oil underground is quite possible, though exceedingly problematic; that if such body of oil does occur it can only be demonstrated by boring in all probability to a considerable depth and at a considerable cost.

KUROPATKINS LOSS

WHOLE SQUADRONS OF COSSACKS PRISONERS

Terrific Battle and Great Triumph for the Japanese at Haicheng, South of Liao Yang—Unable to Resist Onslaughter of Mikado's Men.

A despatch from Rome says:—Gen. Kuroki's forces have completly defeated the Russians under Gen. Kuropatkin in a terrific battle at Hai Cheng, south of Liao Yang.

Loss of life was heavy on both sides. Whole squadrons of Cossacks were made prisoners by the Japanese and many guns captured.

After holding the Japanese in check against heavy odds for several hours, the Russians, under a fierce onslaughter of the Mikado's men, gave way and abandoned their position, retiring towards Liao Yang.

Great quantities of stores and ammunition fell into the hands of Gen. Kuroki, who is now within striking distance of the Russian base at Liao Yang.

CONGO SLAVE TRADE

Vile Traffic Openly Carried on in Leopold's Possessions.

H. Maxwell, one of the best known English travellers in the dark continent, has just returned to London, Eng., from an extensive journey through Western Africa and the Congo Country. Mr. Maxwell states that while there are undoubtedly many exaggerated reports afloat with regard to the cruelty practiced in the Congo Country, that the reality is quite good enough for him. Slavery in its worst form is the custom of the country, and this is carried on with the full knowledge and in many cases the connivance of the authorities. At the sea coast there is some attempt to keep this state of affairs from becoming too palpable, but up country all disguise is thrown to the winds and slavery appears in all its ugliness. The loss of life among the poor captive creatures, particularly among the women and children, is simply appaling.

RAISING THE MAINE

Historic Battleship to be Floated and Exhibited.

Joseph R. Wyckoff, a lawyer of Havana, has just returned to the United States from Havana, having organized a company, he says, to raise wreck of the United States battleship Maine, under an agreement to pay the Cuban Government $5,000. The intention is to sink a coffer dam, raise the hull, and repair it sufficiently to tow it to New York for exhibition.

RETREAT TO HARBIN

That Town to be Strongly Fortified Immediately.

A Moscow despatch says:—Harbin will be fortified against contingency of siege without loss of time irrespective of expense. Heavy siege guns already despatched by rail east from St. Petersburgh are really destined for Harbin, and that a considerable number of heavy siege guns are to be removed for the same purpose from Cronstadt and other first class fortresses. The insistance of Gen. Kuropatkin a month ago on the probable necessity of refraining from attempting directly to save Port Arthur and the Liao Tung peninsula, produced an intensely painful effect in privileged court circles. The czar himself said he refused to believe in the expediency of such a confessian of Russia's military impotence, and only after receipt of detailed explanations from Kuropatkin and a report from him amounted to a categorical non possums, did the emperor agree to accept the situation.

The new immigration building, Winnipeg, will be one of the finest of its kind on the continent, and will cost about $200,000.

Mr. Aoyagi, representing the Japanese government, in an interview at Victoria, stated that his government would not permit his people to emigrate to countries where their presence was not desired.

ITALIAN IMMIGRANTS

Ten Thousand Have Arrived This Year--Many Destitute.

Ten thousand Italian laborers have arrived in Montreal since the beginning of the year. They keep coming, and 1,500 are out of work, and one-third of them are actually destitute. A meeting was held Tuesday at City Hall to devise means of relief. Mayor Laporte, after listening to the remarks of the secretary of the United Charities, and Mr. C. Catelli, a prominent Italian merchant, decided to address a letter to Premier Laurier, stating he had reason to believe the great influx of Italians was due to some kind of speculationf He, therefore, suggested that the Government should hold an investigation into the matter, to find out if immigration agents were being paid so much a head on those who come over. Mayor Laporte explained afterwards that nobody could tell when other nationalities would begin to arrive in the same way, and it was time to know the cause of it, especially when Italians were coming here from the United States.

CHINESE STARVING

Port Arthur in Distress—Famine Prices Existing.

The London Daily Mail's correspondent at New Chang says: "Some Chinese fugitives from Port Arthur arrived here describe the situation of the inhabitants there as desperate. Famine prices exist. The cost of provisions increases weekly. Many persons are reduced to eating Chinese food, and even that is dear. Whole streets and several public buildings have been wrecked by the Japanese shells. The hospitals are packed with sick and wounded.

"The work of repairing the damaged warships is stopped. All civilinas have been given military duties. The general health of the inhabitants is good, except that of the Chinese, who are dying of starvation. Theft has been made punishable by death. The railway is completely destroyed as far as Kin Chou, and there are frequent gaps in it between Kin Chou and Wa Fanb Lien.

"At Wa Fang Tien there are 15,000 Japanese troops, but no sign of troops farther north. During the fighting at Kin Chou 200 Chinese were killed by the Japanese fire directed against positions that the Russians had evacuated."

IN WHOSE INTEREST

Did British Soldiers Fight so that Chinese Might Work.

Among the arrivals at Vancouver, on the last trip of the steamer Empress of Japan, was Col. Hamilton, a conspicuous figure in the labor questions of South Africa. The utilization of coolies having been decided upon, and authorized by Great Britain, he was selected to proceed to China and execute the most favorable contracts possible with the imperial government, for the desired labor. Just before sailing from Shangai he had advice from Pekin of the completion of satisfactory arrangements for 100,000 Chinese, the first instalment, at a stated very low wage. The Qhinese are engaged on a similar arrangement to the South Sea islanders employed in New Zealand plantations. They must serve their South African employers for three years, they are eligible for re-engagement for a further three years' period, but six years is the maximum contract period, and guarantee is exacted for their return to China when six years have passed. A large number of Japanese were also booked under a similar contract, but the war has made negotiations with Japan at the present juncture hopeless.

KIN CHOU TAKEN

JAPS SCORE ANOTHER BIG SUCCESS

Russians Driven Back at All Points—Japs Artillery Splendidly Placed and Handled—12,000 Japs and 8,000 Russians Engaged.

The Tokio correspondent of the Daily express says: It is reported unofficially that the Japanese have captured Kin Chou and are now attacking Dalny.

ANOTHER REPORT

The Tokio correspondent of the Daily Mail, under date of May 26th says: According to a reliable source that the Japanese took Kin Chou on Thursday, and are now pursuing the enemy.

KIN CHOU CAPTURED

Kin Cnou was captured Thursday by the Japanese. Their success is largely due to the placing and hauling of their artillery. They have now commenced attacking the heights south of Kin Chou, in the direction of Port Arthur.

Further details of the fighting at Kin Chou show that at dawn on Wednesday the Japanese opened their attack with a demonstration against the enemys principal force at Nan Quan Ling, in the narrowest point of the isthmus, which they bombarded with no loss to themselves. They commenced their attack at Kin Chou to-day and had occupied the walled city by noon. The enemy have since been resisting the Japanese from the southern heights, and the Japanese continuing the attack.

20,000 MEN ENGAGED.

A Shangai despatch says: There has been continuos fighting since Tuesday to the east and west sides of Kin Chou. The Japanese ran in several light cruisers and four gunboats to Toepentz Bay, ten miles south of Kin Chod on Wednesday and bombarded the western hill on which Russian batteries were resisting an assault of the Japanese. No boats were permitted within five miles of the land by Japanese scout ships, and even fishermen at Tafangshen were not allowed to cross the gulf. No accurate report can be sent of the losses of the Japanese or Russians in the two days of fighting, but careful estimates put the number of troops engaged at 12,000 by invaders and 8,000 by the defending force. There is no doubt that the Japanese won a victory Wednesday, and also Thursday, as their outposts were well east and west of Kin Chou, and their artillery was engaging the Russian batteries at Thungkai.

RUSSIANS DRIVEN BACK.

A cable from a Shan Hai Kwan correspondent says that on May 24, thinking thgt the Japanese had retired from Feng Wang Cheng, 15,000 Russians from Hai Cheng and Ligo Yang marched towards Feng Wgng Cheng. They were surprised by 30,000 Japanese in Tatung Pass. The Russian casualties were 4,000, and over a thousand surrendered. The report does not state the Japanese losses.

RUSSIANS DRIVEN BACK WITH LOSS.

The correspondent of the Central News agency at Tokio cables that the Japanese attacked Nan Owen Ling, on the narrowest part of the Kwang Tung peninsula Thursday, and drove back the Russians by main force. The attack on Kin Chu, the despatch adds, was begun at dawn on Thursday, and by noon Kin Chou was in the hands of the Japanese, who occuuied the castle. The fighting continued during the afternoon, and was of the most desperate character. It is believed the casualties were heavy.

FULLER DETAILS FROM TOKIO

It is reported from several sources that the Japanese attack on Kin Chou qegan Thursday. The main body of forces recently landed on Liao Tung peninsula was engaged. The Japanese occupied Minchuw and are advancing to attack the Russians who occupy the heights south of the town. A recent reconnaissance in the direction of Kaiuzing showed a great of the enemy in that neighborhood. The Japanese consequently began to concentrate men in the direction of Kin Chou. The Russians there have eighty guns.

ALARMING CONDITION OF RUSSIA.

The Standard publishes a despatch from a Russian correspondent in whom the paper says it places great confidence, containing most sensational statements regarding the alarming condition of Russia as the outcome of the war. The correspondent asserts that the disturbance in various cities have been followed by wholesale executions without any civil trial. It is stated thst 600 persons have been hanged at Warsaw alone, and that many others have been hanged in Cronstant and Moscow, and at the latter place the troops buried eighty coffins containing the bodies of those who had been hanged. The bodies were buried in secret in the dead of night, presumably in the woods.

The Standard in an editorial says it publishes this correspondent's statements under all reserve, but it thinks there are many indications, such for instance, as the sinking of the battleship Orel, that the normal disaffection of the population of Russia has been greatly stimulated by the war.

Thos. King and others arrested, classed by the police as "hoboes," who refuse to give any place of residence, had the jewelry upon their persons, and concealed about the house. Some of the jewelry is modern, but most of it is very old, and marked with the Livingston and DePeyster monogram, or actually with the names of women of the Livingston family. The arrests were made on complaints of neighbors of the Lansing street house, the gang having been noisy and drunken.

Why Stammerers Are Able to Sing.

Stammering depends on a want of harmony between the action of the muscles (chiefly abdominal) which expel air through the larynx and that of the muscles which guard the orifice by which it escapes with that of those which modulate the sound to the form of speech. Over either of the groups of muscles by itself a stammerer may have as much power as other people, but he cannot harmoniously arrange their conjoint action. Nervousness is a frequent cause of stammering. It is possible that the defect in some instances may result from malformation of the parts about the back of the mouth. The fact that stammering people are able to sing their words better than to speak them has been usually explained on the supposition that in singing the glottis is kept open so that there is less liability to spasmodic action.

SERIOUS STRIKE

Men Determined to Hold Out to the Bitter End.

Eighteen hundred men of the Dominion Iron and Steele Company, at Sydney, C.B., are on strike with the works practically closed down, and dense gloom prevails. Offers of assistance were received from P. W. A. lodges throughout the province anc from the American Federation of Labor, in the United States, whose 62,000 members together with members of the Pf W. A. agree to contribute one dollar a month to assist the strikers. The county lodge has a large fund on hand and, with the proffered assistance, are in a position to carry on a long struggle. The strikers are enthusiatic and determined to fight the question out. Public sympathy is apparently with the men. Any attempt to bring scab labor from outside will be certain to precipate a sypathetic strike among P. W. A. members of the coal mines, which will cut off the coal supply and create a most dangerous situation. The troubles began last December when the Dominion Iron and Steele Company decided on a general reduction of wages of from 10 33 1-3 per cent. A strike was then talked of, but upon the promise of concession in the way of reductions in rent and provisions from the business people of the town, the men agreed to submit to the reduction for a time. These promises, however, never materialized and on May 24 negotations were opened, looking to the restoration of the old wage. The working men claimed they were not getting a living wage and the company's directors claimed that they could not pay more. On June 1 negotiations were broken off. During a meeting telegrams were received from the directors of the company, but they were not read, the strike having been declared.

Senator Forget, of Montreal, director of the Dominion Steele Company, stated that the strike at Sydney was the best thing that ever happened to the company. The works would now be closed indefinitely. They had not been making money, and only kept running to give the wocking men employment. By closing down entirely all fear of sympathetic strike would disappear. Construction work, however, would continue.

A HARD TALE

Heroic Endurance of Fishermen Adrift on an Ice Floe.

The American herring catcher, A. M. Nicholson, of Bucksport, Me., adrift in an ice floe all winter, sailed safely into Bonne Bay, Nfld., June 1. The Nicholson's crew abandoned her January 29, and made their way over the ice to the mainland, near the Bay of St. George. Five Newfoundland fishermen boarded the vessel April 5, forty miles from Bonne Bay, and after a trying experience of 57 days, four of the fishermen brought her into port. The fifth had grown weary of the close confinement, left the vessel May 29, and walked across the ice towards Portland Creek. He has not been heard of since. The fishermen had very little to eat. They lived most of the time on bread and water and flour boiled in a ventilator cover, the only thing left on board that could be utilized for cooking. They arrived in Bonne Bay weak and exhausted.

FRENCH NAVAL BUDGET

Totals $1,050,000 in Excess of Curreny Year—Some New Features.

The naval budget distributed to the members of the Chamber of Deputies at Paris the other day provides appropriations of $62,000,000, which is $1,050,000 in excess of the budget for the current year. The increase is largely in a provision for reserve division of armored cruisers for the northern squadron, and a division of torpedo boat destroyers for the Asiatic squadron. A general reorganization of the coast defence is also provided for.

A New Trans-Atlantic Cable.

The second German cable from Borkum to New York, via the Azores, was completed June 1st. It was laid by the cable steamer Stephan, which left New York on May 19 with 2,100 nautical miles of cable on board. She commenced to pay out on May 11th from a point off Fire Island. The shore end between Fire Island and Coney Island, which was the American end of the landing, had already been laid. The final splice was made off Fayal. There are now two complete submarine cables between Germany and the United States. The cable just completed was manufactured at Nordenham, Germany. Its total length is 4,200 nautical miles.

Tents for Consumptives.

With the object of demonstrating that pulmonary consumption, if not too far advanced, can be cured in the climate of Illinois, a tent colony is about to be established at Ottawa, Ill., under the care of the Illinois Medical Society. Men and women patients will be received. The colony will be open summer and winter alike. Each tent will contain one or two sufferers. The tents will be water-proof, but the freest circulation of air will be allowed, so that the patients will live an outdoor life day and night.

Phthisis Microbe Discovered.

Isrief Schron, the discoverer of life in crystals, gave a public demonstration the other day at Naples of the fact that he had found a new microbe which causes phthisis, a microbe quite different from that causing tuberculosis. Prof. Schron affirms this discovery why Dr. Koch's serum not only did not cure phthisis, but aggravated it.

CANADIAN CLAIMS

Recent Treaty with Russia May End Many Differences.

The signature of the Russo-British treaty in settlement of the Canadian stealing claims, as announced in previous despatches, is generally anticipated in diplomatic circles as being the first step in the adjustment of all outstanding differences between the two countries. The announcement came as a surprise, no news of the negotiations having leaked out in St. Petersburg. The claims, which date back twelve years, have frequently been the subject of representation by the British Government, but Russia deferred action until March, when she notified Foreign Secretary Lansdowne that she would negotiate a settlement. The Canadian claims were similar to those of the American sealers, which were submitted to The Hague arbitration tribunal over a year ago. When the award was given in favor of the American claimants, the Russian authorities, after examination, were convinced that the arbitration tribunal would give an award in favor of the Canadians, and therefore preferred a direct settlement rather than undergo the excuse of arbitration.

PARDON ASKED

For Officer Imprisoned During the Boer War.

Surprise is expressed at Capetown at the indifference shown in England towards the fate of Lieutenant Witton, the young Australian now undergoing sentence of imprisonment for life for being concerned with Lieutenants Handcock and Morani in the shooting of Boer prisoners. It is known that he protest?d again and again against his superior officers' actions, and could not therefore be a party to the crime for which he is now suffering. Both Boers and British desire to see the slate wiped clean of old war scores, and it would be a fitting act of mercy were the young officer released, more especially in view of the fact that only this week three Boers imprisoned for outrages on wounded British combatants have been set free at Pretoria.

PALMA RIFLE DISPUTE

American Weapons Were Submitted and Permitted.

Referring to London reports in relation to the Palma trophy match, shot last year at Bisley, Eng., General Spencer, president of the National Rifle Association, in a statement at New York, calls attention to the publication last year of reports that the American team had used non-regulation arms. The charges were then wholly cleared, he says. General Spencer quoted from London periodicals describing the American rifles, and stating that the matter had been carefully gone into by select committee of the national Rifle Association of Great Britain, and that the rifles were unanimously permitted to be used.

Cracked or Crazy?

Prince Doigorouky is well known in St. Petersburg society for his eccentricities. The Prince had frequently declared he was destined to great things in politics, had been a claimant for the throne of Bulgaria, and had visited that country several times, and was expelled. Not long ago the Prince tried to commit suicide by shooting, and still carries a bullet in his head. Count Lamsdorff is none the worse of the attack on him. The Associated Press is authorized to contradict all the reports of Count Lamsdorff's impending resignation. The Emperor is highly indignant over the episode and has directed an immediate medical examination of the Prince in order that it may be legally determined whether he is sane. If he is pronounced insane he will be placed in an asylum. If he is responsible for his actions he will be punished.

First Turbine Boat.

A cable from London says: British shipping circles are watching with the keenest interest the voyage of the Turbinia across the Atlantic, for on the success of this vessel depends the future of the turbine for general purposes. Experts agree that the turbine is very fast for short distance passenger traffic, and a distinct success, but it has yet to be proved that turbine machinery is suitable for the propulsion of cargo vessels where speed is not a great requisite. The Turbinia, which has the distinction of being the first turbine merchant vessel to cross the Atlantic, is fitted with Parson patent turbine engines, and three propellers, two forward and one reverse.

A despatch from Vienna says: Dr. Baern Reither, former Minister of Commerce, and Coune Mervelft, former Governor of the province of the Tyrol and Silesia, will sail from Cherbourg June 10 for New York. They will tour the United States and Canada to study the educational institutions, and to visit the chief industrial centres.

THE ILLS OF CHILDHOOD.

Every child in the country needs, at some time or other, a medicine to correct the ills incident to childhood. If Baby's Own Tablets are kept in the house and occasionally given to the little ones they will prevent illness and make the little ones rugged, strong and cheerful. Mothers should insist on having this medicine because it contains no opiate or harmful drug, and children take the Tablets as readily as they take candy. If you have a neighbor who has used the Tablets ask her and she will tell you what splendid satisfaction they give. Here is what one mother, Mrs. Wm. Sinclair, Hebron, N. B., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets with so much satisfaction that I do not feel safe when I have not got a box in the house. I am sure that other mothers will be quite as well pleased with them." You can get the Tablets through your druggist or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

YANKEES OF THE SOUTH.

The Argentine Republic Is Energetic and Progressive.

Cold winds come from the south, and winter is in July; otherwise the Argentine Republic is like Yankeeland.

The Parana, the chief river, is far larger than our Mississippi; its annual flow of water is double that of the Ganges, three times that of the St. Lawrence, five times that of the Nile.

Argentina has the longest railway tangent (straight line) in the world, 186 miles. Its wheat plains are like those of our west. The climate is similar.

Argentina's population grows 40 per cent in ten years, the United States 20 per cent, Germany 16 per cent. Of the 2,000,000 of immigrants received in Argentina in forty years more than half have been Italian.

In 1867 there were but 355 miles of railway in Argentina; in 1900 there were 10,601 miles, some 12 per cent belonging to the government. Argentina is ninth among the nations in railway mileage.

Argentina has 120,000,000 sheep as against the 62,000,000 in the United States.

All Argentina suffered from the Baring crash in 1890, but recovery is now complete. Imports during 1899 were $117,000,000 and exports $185,000,000. From the United States came but $15,000,000 of the imports, and only $8,000,000 of exports were to this counutry.

Montevideo is in area the largest city in the world—three times the size of New York. Buenos Ayres, growing faster than New York, London or Berlin, is the biggest city in the world south of Philadelphia, except possibly the Chinese cities. It will reach the million mark in 1906.

Argentina is building one of the finest dry docks in the world, a model of which will probably be seen at St. Louis.

No Snow, but Sledding All the Year.

"The island of Madeira is one of the most interesting portions of the globe," said a traveler. "Little has been said and less written about the primeval customs of the people and the quaint manners that still exist. I was in Funchal, the capital city, recently, and the English are beginning to frequent the island in large numbers. There are no horses on the island, and the natives employ no wheeled vehicles. All the moving about is done on sleds drawn by bulls. The runners are greased to make them glide easily over the pebble highways. Back of this city is a mountain, and a cog railroad runs to its top. The descent is made in sleds a distance of two miles to the city, and guides run the entire distance, guiding the sleds with ropes."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Food Adulteration.

State Chemist Walker of Nebraska after spending several weeks in analyzing tomato catchup and strawberry jam states that only one brand of catchup was found which was made from tomatoes and was not artificially colored. Pumpkin was found to form the basis of all the others, and the coloring is attained by means of coal tar dyes. Alleged strawberry jam in a number of cases he found was made chiefly from pumpkin, colored with coal tar dyes and containing a preservative in the form of benzoic. Timothy seed was also found to be an ingredient in some cases.

A Great Traveler.

Miss Gordon-Cumming, the well known traveler, was born with an adventurous strain in her blood. She has rambled from Cornwall to the Himalayas, from California to Tibet. She has spent months on board a French man-of-war and more months cruising in Sir Arthur Gordon's yacht in Fijian seas. She is the twelfth child of Sir William Gordon-Cumming of Altyre (he married a second wife and had three more children, making fifteen in all). Her brother, Ronaleyne, was known the world over as "the lion hunter."

Sand and Frost.

In opening a Keene (N. H.) street to get at a frozen water pipe something like two feet of frozen earth was first removed and under this over a foot of dry sand was shoveled out as easily as it would be in summer time. Beneath this sand a different soil was found, and this lower stratum was frozen to a depth of over five feet from the surface. A layer of dry sand a foot or more in thickness underneath a heavy upper crust is usually a sufficient protection from frost.

Generals Pa and Ma.

Chinese names when spelled in English letters sometimes give funny results, as Hung Soon, a merchant in San Francisco. But more striking are two Chinese soldiers, General Ma, a division commander of the Chinese army, and General Paua (pronounced pa), a renegade who fought for Aguinaldo in the Filipino insurrection. Lately General Paua visited China and became acquainted with General Ma, and it is said the two are great friends.

Vladivostok.

Vladivostok is described as being from a military standpoint very nearly impregnable, for it possesses so large a garrison that to invest it properly would require 150,000 men. The town stands at the head of a long, curving inlet known as the Golden Horn, in the corner of which lies the dockyard.

Gravel and Bladder Disease Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Toronto, Ont., June 6.—(Special).—Medical science has at length awakened to the fact that Gravel and other bladder troubles are caused by disordered kidneys and that the modern method of curing them is to cure the kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills. This does away with those terrible operations that in past years have been all too common.

The case of William Thomas, bricklayer, 158 Mill street, this city, is one of the recent proofs of the efficiency of the treatment. Mr. Thomas says:—

"I had been troubled with Gravel and Bladder Disease for seven years. I had to go to the hospital and have water taken from me. I tried medicines of different kinds, but they failed to remove the trouble.

"Hearing of cures by them prompted me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and after taking them for a time I passed a stone the size of a large bean. Four boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills made a complete cure in my case."

The liver and kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Cucumbers and melons are "forbidden fruit" to many persons so constituted that the least indulgence is followed by attacks of cholera, dysentery, griping, etc. These persons are not aware that they can indulge to their hearts' content if they have on hand a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentry Cordial, a medicine that will give immediate relief, and is a sure cure for all summer complaints.

REINDEER WOOL CLOTHES.

Their Buoyancy Makes Them an Aid to Persons Learning to Swim.

From their herds of reindeer the Laplanders in northern Europe take the woolly hair and make from it blankets which are remarkable for their excellent qualities of resisting moisture and cold. Of these blankets the United States consul at Frankfurt, Germany, has this to say:

"A close examination of the hair of the reindeer furnishes an explanation of its peculiar value. The hair does not have a hollow space inside for its whole length, but is divided or partitioned off into exceedingly numerous cells, like water tight compartments. These are filled with condensed air, and their walls are so elastic and at the same time of such strong resistance that they are not broken up either during the process of manufacture or by swelling when wet. The cells expand in water, and thus it happens that a man clad completely in garments made of reindeer wool does not sink when in water because he is buoyed up by means of the air contained in the hundreds of thousands of hair cells. In the markets and stores of Norway, Sweden and Russia garments and blankets of reindeer wool are to be had at lower prices than other fabrics. In Vienna there is a factory which manufactures garments of reindeer wool, especially bathing costumes. For persons unable to swim the possession of such garments is of great value. It is possible that they may be utilized in learning how to swim. Recently successful trials have been made in Paris in this line. In England attention has been directed to this peculiar property of reindeer wool, and it is proposed to take up its manufacture and possibly to improve it."—Fiber and Fabric.

The Safety of London Theaters.

There is no gangway through the stalls in an English theater and only two exits, so that in the event of a fire, or, what is worse, of a panic, the rush to these exits and up the steps in the passages that skirt the back of the pit and lead finally to the central lobby would be terrible. One always feels entombed in the stalls of an English theater.

However, feelings are one thing, facts another. And there is no getting away from the fact that London theaters are the safest in the world. Year after year over 300 places of public entertainment are licensed by the London county council, twenty-three of them being theaters and the rest music halls, concert halls, assembly rooms, dancing saloons, and so on, and in not a single one of them has a death been caused by fire for nearly fifty years.—Sydney Brooks in Harper's Weekly.

A New French Rifle.

A new French military invention is on record. This time it is not the machine gun, but the army rifle, and again the inventor steps out from the ranks. Corporal Grissolange of the First colonial infantry has devised a method of greatly increasing the capacity of small arms for rapid firing. Instead of one magazine, holding eight cartridges, as at present, Grissolange provides three magazines, holding altogether eighteen cartridges, which by an easy mechanism worked with great rapidity are brought up in succession to the feeding tube. The army commission on military inventions has just notified Grissolange that the minister of war has placed his invention before the commission, with instructions to examine and report upon it.

A Remarkable Memory.

A remarkable memory for faces is one of the attributes of George Denny, head watchman at the state, war and navy building. It is as head doorkeeper after office hours that Denny's peculiar gift stands him in good stead. Like the other government buildings, no visitors are allowed at the state, war and navy after 2 o'clock. Many of the offices remain open until 5 o'clock, however, and there is a constant stream of officials, messengers and newspaper men pouring in and out beyond the time that the doors are closed. Denny never makes the mistake of holding up the wrong man.—Kansas City Journal.

The Metal Nodium.

A new metal similar to aluminium, but of still lesser weight, has been discovered by the French engineer, Albert Nodon, and called "nodium" after him. It is manufactured by an electric process. In color, luster and structure it is almost exactly like steel. Its specific weight when molten is only 2.4. Its resistance against breaking is given as about twenty pounds a square of .04 inch. Its constancy in the air is higher than that of aluminium. Its ductility is between six and eight inches. The malleability can be compared to that of bronze. It melts at about 600 degrees.

Profits of Literary Piracy.

The octogenarian Mr. Charles Henry Clarke, just dead, netted a clear £18,000 out of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." That was in the evil old days when literary piracy was rampant on both sides of the Atlantic and "moral rights" were of less value than waste paper. But Mr. Clarke, having ideas of his own, took the liberty of anticipating copyright conventions by sending Mrs. Beecher Stowe a thousand guineas. Had he acted within the four corners of the law the author's check would have been drawn for precisely £0 Us. 0d.—London Outlook.

Uncle Husk—Whoa thar, Mother-in-Law. Mornin', Nibs! Nephew Nibs—Mornin', uncle! But, say, why do you call your mare Mother-in-Law? Uncle Husk—Why, jest because she interferes so.

"Mr. Deeply," said the hostess, "won't you oblige us with one more song?" "Oh really!" replied the eminent basso, "the hour is so late, I'm afraid my singing will disturb the neighbors." "Never mind that. They own a dog whose howling disturbs us at night too."

CROUP, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH

Are Ailments Which Cause Great Anxiety to Mothers Who are Not Familiar with the Curative Powers of

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

It is a serious question to every mother as to how she can best combat croup, whooping cough, bronchitis and similar ailments which are sure to attack the little ones at times least expected.

The hollow, croupy cough comes with terrible foreboding as it arouses the hopelessness of battling against a disease which frequently defies the most skilful physicians.

In croup, above all other diseases, prompt action is of the greatest importance imaginable. With Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine at hand any mother can effect almost instant relief when the children are struggling frantically for breath. By sheer force of merit it has won its way to popularity, and is known all over the continent as the most effective treatment for throat and lung troubles that science has ever devised.

Mr. W. McGee, 49 Wright avenue, Toronto, Ont., states:—"There is no remedy in my opinion that can act more promptly than Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. It cured my son of croup, absolutely, in one night. We gave him a dose when he was black in the face with choking. It gave him instant relief. During the night he took several doses, and in the morning woke up bright, perfectly well and cheerful. I must say it is a wonderful medicine."

Mrs. J. W. Lloyd, Albion street, Belleville, Ont., states:—

"In the beginning of last winter I took a very severe cold, accompanied with a bad cough, and was almost laid up for a time. I tried several remedies, but with indifferent results. On the advice of a friend I got a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found that it relieved the cough at once. By the time I had taken the one bottle my cold was gone, and I can truthfully recommend it as a splendid remedy for coughs and colds.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle, family size (three times as much) 60 cents, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every bottle.

Are You in the Rush and Bustle?

While we join in the rush and bustle of this busy world, overtaxing our energies and racking our systems, many of us are morally culpable of reckless disregard of bodily strength and fitness. END OF THE "BRIDGE" CRAZE.

The following has been handed in to us with the request for its publication :—

Once in awhile the social "Four Hundred" does a good thing, as when, at the latter part of the winter, it decreed that "bridge" had become so common it was no longer in "correct form" and the ban of social ostracism was placed upon it in what is termed "the best society." That these social "bans "have an influence is shown in the admission of manufacturers of playing cards that the demands of their product had fallen off to a remarkable extent during the past three months. "This summer," said one manufacturer, "only those who are not 'up' will play 'bridge,' and they will soon see that it is no longer 'the thing,' all of which means that our output of playing-cards will be very small."

While some of us might wish that "the turn in the tide" has been brought about in some other way, the speedy decline into which "bridge" is now destined to fall is welcome, whatever may be the cause of its downfall. There is no doubt but that thousands of women have wasted precious hours at the game. Men have for some time past become disgusted with the strenuous way in which women have overdone the craze. It has belittled many an otherwise charming woman in the eyes of men and women alike and it was high time to call a halt. The extreme to which women carried the game, playing in the morning afternoon and at all hours of the day, was silly, to say nothing of its pernicious effect.

The craze had perhaps to be carried to excess to have it reach its end. Now that it has, the women themselves who wasted their time over it will realize what geese they made of themselves. There is something worthier of a women's time and skill than a pack of playing cards.

FIRE INQUEST NOW ON

A RIGID INVESTIGATION INTO CAUSE OF LATE FIRE.

Three Lawyers on the Case.—No new Facts Yet Adduced and no Indications Of Foul Play so far Have Been Brought To Light.

The fire inquest was commenced on Tuesday but owing to the absence of important witnesses it was adjourned until Wednesday. A long session was held that day and as it appeared that the case would be a lengthy one it was decided to hold daily sessions from 10 to 12 a.m. which has been done since.

The following jury were summoned by L. R. Forbes, S. M., Messrs. W. H. Whimster, foreman: W. O. Robbins, C. Bean, J. Murchison, J. F. Elliott, and A. P. Chenette. Care was taken in selecting men who had not lost in the fire. Three lawyers, Messrs. S. Herchmer L. P. Eckstein, and J. S. T. Alexander are taking part in the investigation which is very thorough in every detail.

A. H. Cree was the first witness called. Hi evidence was of a formal nature, in explanation of the buildings in block six where the fire originated.

M. Young, a member of the Richard & Co. business firm, went into the details of the purchase of the business by A. MacDonald, of Winnipeg, and of the transfer of the insurance to him prior to the time of the fire.

H. A. Wilkes who was early on the scene with the chemical engine told of locating the fire in the north west corner of Richards and Co's store. He had crawled in on his hands and knees and got within a few feet of the fire when he was overcome by the smoke. He believed the fire originated from an electric wire. Mrs. Todd was also called but her evidence threw no light on the matter.

J. S. Volume, book-keeper for C. Richards & Co., was examined yesterday and a lot of evidence connected with the transfer of the business and the insurance was given along the same lines as given by Mr. Young. Nothing has so far been gained as to the location of the fire except the information contained in Mr. Wilkes evidence. None of the evidence so far obtained points to foul play on the part of anyone.

LATER.

The plan outlined above was changed yesterday and the enquiry was continued till evening when all the evidence was taken and the jury brought in the verdict that the fire originated in C. Richards & Company store and that the cause of the fire is unknown, that no blame is attached to anyone. The mystery deepened as the enquiry proceeded. There was no stove in the store at the time of the fire and witnesses testified that everything appeared to be safe. W. Brown, electrical engineer clearly demonstrated that the fire could not have started from an electric light as since the new system was put in the transformers ensure against fusing. He was positive that the fire did not originate in this manner. The evidence pretty clearly proved that no one connected with the Richards store could hope to be benefitted by the fire.

W. J. Langley, Flathead Hotel, Flathead, the only new application, was refused on the ground that it was not needed at present.

AT CRANBROOK.

The license meeting at Cranbrook was called for 10 a. m. Wednesday. The Board did not get together until half an hour later and the work was completed in a few moments. All the renewal applications were granted. Two new applications were considered.

Wm. H. Small, the Imperial Hotel, Cranbrook, was granted. The building which is in course of construction will be one of the finest in town.

James M. Carroll, Ontario Hotel, Kimberley, was refused as he had no petition.

After the meeting was over a committee of the clergymen of the town appeared on the scene to oppose the granting of the Imperial Hotel license.

REPORT OF THE TRIAL

THE DEFENCE WITNESSES NOW BEING CALLED.

Wm. Blakemore expert Witness for Plaintiff Messrs. Drinnan, Graham and Dick give Strong Evidence for the Defence.

Mr. Wm. Blakemore, M. E., was called by the plaintiffs last Thursday to give expert evidence and his examination in chief was strong in sustaining the dust explosion theory.

He was quite familiar with the coal seams in Nos. 2 and 3 mines having opened them from 300 to 400 feet in different places. Both seams were bituminous about six feet thick, of tender friable coal with a strong shale floor and a similar roof. The coal was very porous and easily drained of water or gas. One marked feature was the irregular wavy form of the floor, the result of which was the formation of numerous basins in the ways and entries. From the first the seam yielded water and gas, but dried quickly, especially going down the main entry.

The proper removal of the dry dust, and the proper system of watering both of which, the witness said were necessary to make the mine safe to work in, were described in detail and the methods adopted at Coal Creek mines were condemned as out of date and inadequate, and could not be said to be effective in any sense. Watering by cart and powder cans was in vogue 25 of 30 years ago, but had long since been abandoned.

Mr. Blakemore said that from all the evidence at his disposal he was convinced that the accident at Nos. 2 and 3 mines on May 22nd, 1903, was a coal dust explosion and nothing else. His reasons for so thinking were; Proved existence of large areas of dry coal dust; absence of sufficient areas of dampness or wetness as would change the general character of the workings. Evidences of coking in its various stages, could only have resulted from distillation of gasses containing coal dust, which lay in the path of the explosion. Antecedent conditions on the day of the explosion, absence of evidence as to the existence in any part of the mine of a sufficient quantity of gas to have produced such an explosion. The entire improbability, amounting to impossibility, of such a body of gas in existence without some one discovering it. The absence of evidence of an interruption of the ventillating appliances of the mine, which alone could account for such an accumulation of gas.

Mr. Taylor took witness through Mr. Drinnan's evidence, some of which he differed with and some he declared upheld the dust theory.

At 11:30 on Friday Mr. Bodwell undertook the cross-examination, which was a particularly severe one. The management of the mines by Mr. Blakemore was gone into and many questions of a more or less personal nature was put by the counsel Many questions were answered in lengthy explanation. He was not a partizan nor was he pecuniarily interested. He attended the inquest solely on humane grounds. On Saturday morning Mr. Bodwell continued the examination for an hour and a half after which Mr. Taylor kept Mr. Blakemore engaged until 1 o'clock when the court arose for the day. The cross examination went into the subject of standard authorities and dealt with many technicalities of the case. Mr. Taylor asked further questions to clear up matters brought up the day previous as to witness' interest in the Royal Hotel at Fernie, his alleged dismissal by the directors and certain alleged irregularities with small insurance premiums. This ended the case for the plaintiffs.

On Monday Mr. Taylor tendered parts of the evidence of Messrs. Drinnan and Stockett, but as this had not been taken in the presence of counsel for the defence it was ruled out.

The case for the defendants began at 2:45 when Mr. Davis, K.C., briefly outlined the plan of defence, which was to the effect that the explosion was a gas and not a dust explosion. This they would prove from evidence submitted by the plaintiffs' witnesses. They joined issue with Mr. Taylor's statement that dust would follow main intakes and avoid the return airways, whereas gas avoided the main intakes and followed the return airways, and the defense would show that the explosion in almost every instance had followed along the return air way.

Dust will not cross damp areas, as admitted by expert Blairmore, over 100 feet but here the explosion followed damp areas one, two three and over four hundred feet. The defence claimed that Blakemore had proved conclusively that the explosion was a gas and not a dust one. He said that if a dust explosion, it must have gone up the mine entry. To be consistent he had to do this, and he did it repeatedly and deliberately. Again Blakemore admitted that if Drinnan's evidence was correct it could not have gone down the main entry, and this let the defendants out, since all they had to prove was that Drinnan's statement was correct. The defence thought that they had amply proved their case out of Blakemore's story.

The defense intended to show that mines were not dry and dusty that the law had been carefully complied with and that the miner's committee made a thorough examination and were satisfied.

Thos. Graham overman at Coal Creek at the time of the explosion was the first witness for the defense. He stated that the metal rails supporting the floor of the airway were bent or curved down in such a manner as to show that the force of the explosion must necessarily have come up and along the return airway. He agreed with witness Drinnan that the force on the high line was from east to west. Witness described conditions as found by him in No. 1 machine entry. There was no evidence of a blown out shot in No. 1 room. On the main entry the stoppings were blown from east to west.

The examination and cross-examination of witness continued all next day and part of Thursday. He denied Mr. Blakemore's statement that Nos. 2 and 3 were porous and gave off water but he claimed they gave off plenty of gas. He also denied much of C. Burrows' evidence as to the direction of the force. Mr. Taylor subjected the witness to a very severe examination but the latter stuck to his story and would not yield.

Graham's cross-examination extended well into the next day but Mr. Taylor was unable to shake his former evidence.

Then the plaintiffs' motion to be allowed to prove relationship and the question of financial loss at some future time in the Frederico and Silla actions was argued by Mr. Taylor and Mr. Martin upon affidavits filed, and subsequently the court ruled that the evidence could be put in upon terms to be agreed upon later.

Wm. Whitmore who washed and helped to prepare for burial 106 of the bodies taken from the mines testified to the finding of ten matches on the body of D. Milroy.

A. Dick, mine inspector, was then called. He testified to the correctness of his various reports of the mines No. 2 and 3 up to the time of the explosion. These reports showed that the dry condition of the mines were gradually improving up to that time.

For six months prior to the explosion the Nos. 2 and 3 mines were safe mines to work in the opinion of the witness, this referred to the locked lamp in use, watering, dampness, absence of gas and all such details. He never heard of watering old mine workings. The provisions of the law had been complied with to his satisfaction by the mine management during the six months preceding the explosion. He considered the use of the bonetted Clanny lamp as a compliance with the law.

To Mr. Taylor witness denied emphatically that he had ever received any money from Mr. Stockett.

H. B. Wright, chief engineer, and A. Colville, superintendent, gave some formal evidence.

ACCIDENTS AT COAL CREEK.

Two slight accidents occurred at Coal Creek mines to-day about noon. Four men were injured by a trip car which is said to have jumped the track. A special train was sent up but only one was brought down, Alex. Farquharson who had his ankle sprained. A fifth man was hurt in a rock fall in No 1 mine where he was working with a contractor named Williams.

G.N.R. CONTRACT LET

J. W. STEWART GETS IT. P. WELSH IS IN CHARGE OF WORK.

Sub-contract also Let. Wagon road and Right-of-Way being Cleared. Work Will be Rushed all along the line. Good Times for Fernie.

The contract for the construction of the Great Northern extension from Morrissey to Fernie was let on Tuesday of this week and the actual work commenced on the following morning. The contract is nominally awarded to J. W. Stewart, of Winnipeg, but Patrick Welsh is the man who will carry the contract through to completion. Messrs. Welsh and Stewart work together, at one time the work being being carried on in one name and at another time in the other name. The contract for the Great Northern work in the Boundary Country was recently awarded to Mr. Stewart, and Mr. Welsh has just completed a 17 mile sub-contract on the cut-off at Columbia Falls. The Columbia and Western and the Nelson and Fort Sheppard railways are also other contracts completed by these contractors in western Canada.

A party of Great Northern contractors and officials arrived in Fernie on Tuesday and all left again the next morning but Mr. Welsh who remained behind to commence immediate operations. The party consisted of Messrs. Sims and Shields who had the letting of the contract; H. H. Hoagland, chief engineer of the G. N. R.: H. M. Lupfer, engineer; and Messrs Emmerson and Foley contractors.

A FREE PRESS representative had a chat with Mr. Welsh on Tuesday. Mr. Welsh is a pleasant and intelligent gentleman, a typical railway man who is universally popular with his men. "Yes," said Mr. Welsh, "the contract for the road to Fernie is let and the work will commence to-morrow. The first work will be the construction of a wagon road and the clearing of the right of way. I will need every available man in the district and probably many more. All axemen and pick and shovel men will find ready employment by applying to me. The wages run from $2.25 upwards. The clearing of the right of way and the grading of the road-bed will be carried on simultaneously at each end and at many points between. Yes, the work will be sub-let and a good deal of 'station' work will be let, but at the present time I am unable to say any more on that point." Mr. Welsh estimated that at least five or six hundred men would be employed on the construction. These would be scattered over the thirteen miles in probably ten camps.

"Morrissey will be our headquarters so far as supplies are concerned," continued Mr. Welsh, "as all our supplies will come over the Great Northern. The banking, however, will be done at Bank of Commerce, Fernie, and all our wages will be paid in checks on that bank, on the 20th of each month." Mr. Welsh intimated that his supply store would deal only in general lines and that all their orders for odds and ends would be filled in Fernie. The Fernie merchants would be further benefitted in that they carried much greater varieties and at prices as low or lower than supplied by the Company. Their supplies would come in bond via G. N. R. from Winnipeg and Vancouver.

Mr. Welsh was unable to state where the yards or the depot would be built. He was instructed to build to Fernie but as the work was paid in yardage it did not effect the contract. His contract also called for the building of the yards and terminals though he did not yet know where they would be located. He had no instructions to build the Coal Creek branch and he did not know who would get that contract.

When will the road be completed? "We hope to have it finished by October or November. At any rate Great Northern trains will be steaming into Fernie before the end of the year."

Mr. Welsh was then asked what he thought of the rumors to the effect that that line would be continued to Michel without delay, replied that he knew nothing officially of it but that he would not be surprised if these rumors contained some truth.

Since the above interview was given Mr. Welsh has let two sub-contracts. Messrs. Foss and Macdonell have received the contract of the first three miles at the Morrissey end and the next mile and a half has been awarded to Pat Gorman. Mr. Foss is in town to day gathering up a force of men to proceed at once to clear the right of way and he has already started to build a camp. Mr. Foss expects they will need 150 men on their work.

The survey line continued up the west side past Fernie shows a heavy grade and it is almost a foregone conclusion that the line will be continued on the East side for some distance before recrossing. In this event the yards will be built on the East side of the Elk.

DEATH OF MRS. LAWES.

Mrs. Lawes died at Michel last week from a lingering illness She was the mother of Mrs. (Dr.) McSorley whose sad death was chronicled some months ago. Her son William also is a resident of Michel, filling the position of postmaster there. The home of the deceased lady was at Enderby and her husband came over and conveyed the remains to that place for interment.

RE INCORPORATION.

PREMIER MCBRIDE AT LAST TAKES ACTION.

Reply is Vague but is Believed to be Satisfactory.—Committee Will Wait Receipt Of Letter.

Victoria, June 15th, '04.

W. R. Ross, M. P. P., Nelson.

Government pleased to issue letters patent for the incorporation of Fernie. Agreement re Crows Nest Pass Coal Co., could not be included. The Attorney-General is writing.

Signed, RICHARD MCBRIDE, Premier.

The above message is somewhat vague, and its full meaning will not be understood until the receipt of the attorney-general's letter.

The committee in approaching the government in this matter realized the difficulty of having the agreement incorporated in the charter but they asked that it might be done if possible to save extra expense of having a special bill put through. In the event of the government finding it impossible to incorporate the agreement in the charter they asked that a guarantee be given that the necessary legislation would be passed by the government. Although the above wire does not directly make this promise the inference is that the required legislation is guaranteed, as otherwise the Premier is quite aware that no application for a charter will be made.

No action will be taken by the committee until the receipt of the attorney-general's letter, when a satisfactory explanation is expected and the circulation of the petition will follow immediately.

TO-DAYS WAR NEWS

Another Brilliant Victory for the Japanese

St. Petersburg—Lieut. Gen. Stalkenburg officially reports that as he was preparing to attack the enemy they attacked him and he was compelled to retreat with heavy loss. During the engagement the third and fourth sections of the first artillery were entirely cut to pieces by the Japanese shells of the sixteen guns; the Russian guns were rendered useless and abandoned.

Tokio—The Russians in the battle at Tetissu were out manouvered, enveloped, and sweepingly defeated. They left more than 500 dead on the field and the Japanese captured 300 prisioners and 40 quick firing guns.

New York—So far 517 bodies have been recovered, the victims of the Slocum disaster. It is not expected that the total will exceed 700. Most of the victims are women and children.

Winnipeg—At the close of the mail robbery case at Regina today, Wilcox was sentenced to seven years in Stoney Mountain Penitentiary. Lawyer Bangs got eighteen months in Regina jaol for receiving stolen money.

The concert given by the Baptist Church people last night was in many respects a decided treat to those who attended. Four members of the Glee Club participated, two of whom, Messrs. W. H. Haysum and W. Jones appeared in several duets and solos. Their singing is far above the average and the the numbers in which they appeared were much appreciated. Miss Evans delighted the audience with two numbers, "The Children's Home," and "The Cradle Song" the latter being particularly worthy of notice for its rare sweetness. Miss Hall, elocutionist, recited twice and received much applause. Mr. H. L. Staebler, accompanist, rendered two pianoforte solos in his usual masterly manner.

THE EVILS OF DIVORCE

INTEGRITY OF THE HOME ASSAILED FROM WITHOUT AND WITHIN.

PAUL TAUGHT FOR THE HOME

Although a Bachelor He Advised Parents to Love Their Children and Children to Care For Their Parents, That Wives Should Honor Their Husbands and Husbands Should Love Their Wives—Love the Home's Sheet Anchor.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 5.—In these days of widespread separation and divorce, and when the integrity of the home is assailed from without and within, the advice of the preacher who takes love for his theme may help to dispel the clouds that now overhang many a household. The text is Eph. v., 25, "Husbands, love your wives."

Two startling facts about Paul's personality have always vividly impressed me. The one the estimate of his physical personality formed by his enemies in the Corinthian Church who had sat under his ministry and therefore knew him well. Paul himself tells us that they said, "his bodily presence is weak and his speech contemptible." Chrysostom, according to Albert Barnes, declared that "Paul's stature was low, his back crooked and his head bald." According to Nicephorus, Paul was a little man with curvature of the spine and a pale countenance, long and wrinkled, and with a head like Julius Caesar, noted for its scarcity of hair. Whether these descriptions are true, we know not; but it is little likely that the Corinthians would have spoken of him as they did, and that writers so near his own time as Chrysostom and Nicephorus would have so described him, if this intellectual and spiritual giant had possessed an imposing personality. And yet, all through the Pauline writings, figures of speech bristle with the symbols of the athlete's arena. The runner, the fighter, the gladiator, the struggle with the beasts of Ephesus, all have their inspirations and gospel teachings.

The second fact, which stands side by side with the first, about the personality of Paul is this: Paul was a bachelor. It has been contended that he was a member of the sanhedrin and, if so, must have been married, but the expression in Acts xxvi., 10, on which the theory of his membership is based, is vague and may have amounted to no more than the testimony of a witness. On the other hand, his arguments in I. Corinthians ix., 5, clearly implies that both he and Barnabas were unmarried. This condition, however, by no means indicates that he was deficient in the affectionate side of his nature. His letters show that he lavished on his children in the faith the love that other men give to their offspring and that he was an exceedingly affectionate, warm-hearted man. He taught parents that they should love their children and children that they should care for their parents, wives that they should honor their husbands and husbands that they should love their wives. It is in reference to this last commandment that I would speak to-day.

There is special reason at this time for showing the need of a husband being truly devoted and loving to his wife, because there seems to be a popular theory abroad that the old-fashioned idea of a family home is gone and gone forever. But instead of believing that the old-fashioned idea of love should be done away with, I believe that, like the garden beds which used to be planted in our ancestors' front yards, they should be cultivated more and more. Marital affection may be old-fashioned, but I believe it is one of the noblest, finest, most beautiful things in life. The Holy Book declares, "whoso findeth a wife findeth a good thing." It is no part of my purpose to tell young men how they should proceed in trying to win the affections of the girl they desire to marry. My design rather is to urge married men to show their wives the same deference, the same love and devotion, that characterized them before the twain stood at the marriage altar, hearing and saying the solemn words which made them one flesh.

Why is the true wife's value above the price of rubies, as King Solomon declared? She is her husband's business partner; her husband's equal in brain as well as in heart power. She fights with him, in a financial way, the great battle of life; therefore, like her husband, she has a right to expect the same rewards for her labors that he has for his. It has been the habit of some cynics to represent a wife as a mere parasite, a hanger-on, a clinging vine, a barnacle or a human leech sucking out the life's blood of her masculine partner. The true wife is a consumer as man is a consumer, but she is also a financial producer as man is a producer. Like man, she produces far more than she consumes. As the book of Proverbs pictures: "She is like the merchant ships; she bringeth her food from afar. She considereth a field and buyeth it; with the fruit of her hands she planteth a vineyard. She maketh herself coverings of tapestry; her clothing is silk and purple." Mark well these words: A true wife "perceiveth that her merchandise is good;" not a slattern, not a female doll, not a painted millinery establishment. I am speaking of such a wife as the book of Proverbs describes. It is a faithful portrait, the fidelity of which many a man in this church could attest by his own experience.

"Oh, no," says the masculine egotists, "woman is not the breadwinner of the family. It is the husband, who, as a lawyer, wins fees in the court-room; as a physician, gains money from patients; as a soldier fights his country's battles; as a legislator, enacts laws, which the male executive enforces; he is the merchantman, who sells the goods; he is the foundryman, who manufactures the steel rails. Man, man, everywhere is man the breadwinner. We find that man tills the fields, and man rules the money markets, and man sits upon the judicial bench and the professional chairs." Is that a fact, my brother? 'Tis true, man is the visible breadwinner. But when you are looking for the driving force which produces results in society do not make the mistake of supposing that there is no power but what you see.

The power behind the throne is sometimes greater than the throne itself. If this be not true, how can you account for the wonderful results which come into many men's lives at the marriage altar and end with the deaths of or the separations from their female silent partners. Who was Napoleon Bonaparte? The greatest military strategist of the ages? Yes. But after all you can find his wonderful success flanked by two incidents in his life. They started with his marriage to Josephine. They ended with his divorce. Had Josephine's partnership nothing to do with Napoleon's success? Who was William E. Gladstone? That statesman whose energy and commanding genius were the wonder of his countrymen, acknowledged that the reverence and trust of his devoted wife had been a source of inspiration and stimulus to him all through his long career, and that to have her sitting by him on the political rostrum or looking down at him from the gallery of the House of Commons quickened all his powers. Who was John Bright, the great commoner? He also was the husband of a woman his equal in personality. On the day of their marriage she turned and said to him, "John, attend to thy business and thy public affairs, and I will provide for the home and relieve thee from all cares at home." And so great is the value of a true wife in relation to her husband's success that nearly all great men are ready to testify to this fact and declare that they can never repay the obligations which their wives have placed upon them.

I was taught the obligation which a true husband owes to a true wife some years ago by an eastern minister whom I consider one of the greatest pulpit geniuses of his age. I was about to be married, and was talking with him, when he gave to me this characteristic advice: "Always love your wife. But more than, that, always learn to respect and follow her judgment, because she can be your best adviser. When I was a young man I started out with some success. I knew I could speak, and I could also write. And often when I would write something I thought very fine I would take it down to my wife and read it. Sometimes she would look up from her sewing and say, 'John, don't say that.' With that I would throw down my manuscript and stalk up and down the room in disgust. "Why do you say that?' I would ask. 'Do you know how to preach? Are you a better judge of preaching than myself? Haven't I spent four years in college and three years in the seminary? What business have you to tell me what to do? You are nothing but a woman anyway.' But after a long experience I found that my wife's judgment could always be depended upon. When I followed her judgment I always came out right, and when I followed my own against hers I always came out wrong. And, though I am now an old man and one of much experience, yet whenever I am in doubt about anything I have ever written I always go to her. And when she says, 'John, don't say that,' I take my pen and scratch out the whole page. My success is due in a great measure to my wife's judgment and not to my own."

Men, husbands, friends, how are we going to repay our wives for all the sacrifices they have made for us? "Oh," some husband says, "I do my full duty to my wife. I provide for her a good home. I give her all the money she needs." You do? Oh, that is very kind. As far as I can make out you give your wife nothing but her own property. She earns her support, just as you do, and she has a right to at least one-half of your income. If from a mere cold-blooded standpoint you had to hire a housekeeper to do the work she does, you would have to pay far more for her wages than your wife ever spends for clothes and entertainment. "Then if that be the case, and it is the case," some man says, "how am I to pay my wife unless I pay her in money?" Why, give her the same rewards the apostle has commanded in the words of my text. Did Paul ever speak of money in reference to the husband's duty to his wife? No, he takes that for granted. He says, "Husbands, love your wives." But that is not all. He gives his commandment in the superlative sense. "Husbands, love your wives even as Christ also loved the church and gave himself for it." Ah, could there be any sweeter or more devoted or more intense measure for a husband's affections that that? It is love the true wife longs for, as it is love the true husband in the home should long for. Not money so much as love, intense, devoted, loyal, self-sacrificing love. Husbands pay your wives for their sacrifices of life in the golden coin of minted love.

But there is a promissory note connected with every marriage certificate which should compel a husband to give his love to his wife as well as his gratitude for what she does. It was on account of this loving promise which he made to her that she, a young girl, was persuaded to leave her father's home and turn her back upon her school friends and, like Ruth, who followed Naomi, go with her husband where he went and lodge with him where he lived and make his people her people and his God her God. Therefore if a man who has won his bride upon the promissory note of love does not fulfill his contract he is a swindler as well as an ingrate; a deceiver, a falsifier, a perjurer, as well as one whose ideas of gratitude are as monstrous and distorted as that of the wayward son, who would trample upon a mother's bleeding heart and turn upon his father's love. You believe a merchant is dishonest who through the bankruptcy court would repudiate a debt he could pay. Why will you not say a husband is dishonest and contemptible who would repudiate the obligation of a lifetime love, which he accepted when he pledged himself to the young girl by his side on his wedding day, when they stood amid embowered orange blossoms?

This swindle in reference to promised affections which a husband sometimes practices upon a wife is the more contemptible because in one sense the wife is absolutely helpless after the perpetration of the fraud. Say what you will, argue as you may, talk glowingly and poetically and grandiloquently about woman's opportunities, a wife's opportunities have always been and nearly always will be circumscribed by the four walls of her home. The husband has his outside business relationships. He has his mercantile friends as well as his store friends. He meets men on the street, in the cars, in the office, behind the counter. He can get away and does get away from the home. But for the most part the wife is anchored to the kitchen, the bedroom and the nursery of home by the children. Therefore if he fails her and defrauds her of his promised love she is absolutely helpless and must suffer more than he can realize. She has practically no redress, for she has given up her all for him. If, however, on account of her husband's neglect a wife turns her back upon him and goes forth to meet the world as an independent woman, then the world itself will turn its back upon her.

In the death knell of a husband's love I also hear the sobs of the broken heart of a mother as well as of a wife. The great dramatist wrote, "Oh, sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child!" Many a mother has learned this by bitter experience, through her husband's conduct. The love that the child naturally feels for the mother withers and dies under the poison that comes from witnessing the father's contempt for the mother. Little likely is a child to reverence the mother after hearing the blame and vituperation hurled at her by her husband. If a brutal father systematically continues to find fault with his wife, if he neglects her and ridicules her and sneers at her, he sets an example which his children are only too prone to follow. His estimate of their mother, often coarsely and bluntly expressed, is likely to become theirs, and their natural affection for her turns to indifference and ingratitude. Oh, my friends, who are husbands and fathers, you know how sanctifying and purifying is the influence that has come to you from your mother's graves. Your love and reverence for your mother has kept you in many an hour of temptation. Let your children have the same beneficent influence. Never by look or thought or word weaken the influence your wife may have over your children. When you are untrue to your wives, you are untrue to your children.

But there is still another and a more far reaching reason why men should love their wives, "even as Christ also loved the church and gave himself for it." Not only is the home, but the community and the nation, builded upon the cornerstone of the love which a husband should bear to his wife. I am not stating this fact too emphatically. I will go further and say the salvation of the world itself is dependent upon that purified love. What does the Bible say, "God setteth the solitary in families." The unit of society is not the man who casts as a vote the white slip of paper into the ballot box. It is the man and the woman joined together at the marriage altar as one.

Why was the first settlement at Jamestown, Va., a failure and the first settlement at Plymouth Rock a success? Were the old pilgrim fathers any braver men than the Virginia planters? Was not John Smith of as heroic mold as Miles Standish? The reason for the failure of the Jamestown colony was due to the fact that those southern colonizers did not bring their wives along with them, while the Plymouth fathers stuck to Plymouth Rock because they were anchored there by the Plymouth mothers. Why do men herding together as a class degenerate morally, mentally and physically? Because they lack the moral and spiritual leaven which comes from a noble wife's love. Therefore, brethren, if as men you would be true to your country, true to your city, true to your children, true to yourself and true to your Christ you will be true to your wives. Husbands, hear ye not the far-reaching commandment, "Love your wives?"

How shall we love our wives? By giving them a few silly compliments? Oh, no! Not that. A wife is quick to detect insincerity in such inanities. But you can show her your respect and deference. You can prove to her by your pleasure in her society, by the little attentions that when you were a lover came naturally to you and by your preference for her over younger women that your heart is still in her keeping. The little presents, the consideration of her tastes and the desire to give her pleasure which used to characterize your treatment of her would delight her better now than ever before and would bring to her weary face the glad smile of tender affection. Husbands, love your wives. We should love them in making them one with us in all our thoughts and hopes and joys. We should love them so that the brightest hope of our love would be to lighten their burdens and to always have them by our sides. We should love and continue to love them even as Christ loves the church, when, in the canticles, we read his beautiful blessing upon it: "As the lily among the thorns, so is my love among the daughters. As the apple tree among the trees of the woods, so is my beloved." O husband, do you love your wife as Christ loves his church bride.

DYSPEPSIA CURED.

A Severe Sufferer Tells How He Overcame the Trouble.

"Not only do I not hesitate to declare the benefit I have received from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but I feel it my duty to do so." These are the words which Mr. Edward Lavoie, of St. Jerome, Que., lately addressed to the editor of L'Avenir du Nord, when relating the story of his cure. Mr. Lavoie is well known in St. Jerome, and what he says carries weight among those who know him. For a considerable time he was a great sufferer from dyspepsia, which caused severe headaches, pains in the stomach and sometimes nausea. Sometimes he felt as though he would suffocate, he would become dizzy, and experienced ringing noises in the ears. His appetite became poor, and his general health so bad that he found it almost impossible to work, and when the headaches attacked him he had to quit work. For six months, he says, he suffered both physically and mentally more than can be imagined. During this time he took medicine from several doctors, but found no help. Then one day he read of the cure of a similar case through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and decided to try them. He used the pills for a couple of months, and they have made him feel like a new person. He is no longer troubled with any of the old symptoms, and says he can now go about his work as though he never had dyspepsia.

The digestive organs—like all the other organs of the body—get their strength and nourishment from the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood. This new blood strengthens the stomach, stimulates the liver, regulates the bowels and sets the whole digestive system in a healthy, vigorous state. Good blood is the true secret of good health. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills always bring good health to those who use them. You can get these pills from your medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Whole Hog.

Whence comes the expression "to go the whole hog," which occupies so prominent a position in fiscal politics? asks the Liverpool Post. In one authoritative work on such matters it is stated that the phrase probably arose from the Arabian story versified in Cowper's "Love of the World Reproved." Mohammed allowed his followers to eat pork, except one portion of the animal, which he did not specify, and consequently strict Mohammedans were debarred from eating any. Others, however, "thought it hard from the 'whole hog' to be debarred," and so "with sophistry their sauce they sweeten, till quite from tail to snout 'tis eaten." In an American book on political squibs, published in 1844, the author says, "To go the whole hog is an American-English phrase for radical reform and is much used here by the Democratic party to distinguish them from the Federalists, who don't profess such sweeping notions and consequently go only a part of the interesting quadruped in question."

"Had Had Had."

"While you're discussing the peculiarities of the English language," remarked the publisher as at the Franklin Inn club the other afternoon he sat down to his after luncheon cigar, "has it ever struck you that the word 'had' can, with perfect correctness, occur three times successively in an ordinary English sentence? No? Well, it can. Only the other evening I came across an instance. It was at the meeting of a certain association I am interested in, and there the secretary in reading the minutes said, 'The chairman of the committee then reported that the troubles which they had had had now been overcome.'"

"That's interesting," chimed in the literary man, "but it's nothing to the possibilities of recurrence we can correctly get out of the word 'that.' You may say that that 'that' that that speaker indicated was not that 'that' that that gentleman intended.

City Residents Nearsighted.

"The race is growing nearsighted, owing to city life and the conditions of our civilization," said an eye specialist.

"Our visual range is confined to near objects for the greater part of the day," said he, "and this keeps the eyes turned in. An object twenty feet away will make the eyeballs parallel.

"Anything less will turn them in, and people who spend their hours in offices and crowded flats necessarily have a short range of vision, which overworks and weakens the interior muscles close to the nasal cavity.

"The exterior muscles not being so strained are strong and hence cause the eyes to turn out. Let a person who is thus affected spend a week or two in the country and his eyes become normal again, because he gets greater range of vision. Savages are generally farsighted."

Wooed With Music.

Among the Yao Midos, one of the many Burmese-Tartar people, the young men woo their wives absolutely without words, but to the sound of music. On the first day of winter they have a great feast, at which all the marriageable girls gather and listen to the music made by the bachelors, who sit under the "desire tree," each playing his favorite instrument. As the maiden he loves passes him the youth plays louder and more feelingly. If the girl ignores him and passes on he knows that she will have none of him; if she steps up to him and lays a flower upon the instrument, he jumps up, grasps her by the hand, taking care not to drop the flower, and they go away together.

His Memory.

"Has he much of a memory?"

"Oh, yes, indeed. Why, he can always remember that he has forgotten something that he ought to remember and can't, which is certainly much better than forgetting that you've forgotten something."

Dress of South African Tribes.

Fashions among the native tribes of South Africa are thus described by a recent writer: "During one season the people are all wearing safety pins as earrings; the next season no one will look at them, for pins are 'out' and buttons are 'in.' In one tribe blue spotted cotton handkerchiefs are all the rage, but fifty miles away no one will look at such things—they want cotton shirts. The only universal ornament, perhaps, consists in beadwork. Some tribes, such as the Fingoes and Zulus, take to beadwork more than others; the one thing they are all consistent in is a strangely good taste for color combination. They never indulge in a combination of gaudy colors, never affect an inharmonious color scheme, thus bearing out Ruskin's statement that bad taste in color does not arise in people who are left to themselves and nature." Hairdressing is a prodigious business among them. The process is assisted by a liberal use of red clay, and as the perfected work of art is expected to last a month the head is permitted to rest on the nape of the neck only when the owner sleeps.

Berlin Through English Spectacles.

An Englishman writes of Berlin: "It is the only modern city I know of that has managed to escape looking artificial. The labor of building greater Berlin has been most dexterously hidden. There is very little of the deadly uniformity, the Euclidian lines, the prosaic precision, one notices in New York. Berlin is something considerably better than a mere chessboard of brick and stone and mortar. The streets have a curved and enticing spaciousless; they are shaded with avenues of trees, faultlessly asphalted and clean with a cleanliness surpassing that of Paris. The architecture is rather too florid for English tastes, but for all that decidedly effective, and a drive from Unter den Linden to Charlottenburg will take one past a finer succession of houses than either London or New York can show."

The phrase "mad as a hatter" has no reference to that respectable artist who designs the crowning article of civilized male attire, but relates back to the Anglo-Saxon word "atter" (an adder, or viper). "Mad" was formerly used as a synonym for violent or venomous and is still used in that sense in some parts of England as well as in this country. The phrase, therefore, strictly means as "venomous as a viper," the old form, "mad as an atter," having been corrupted to "mad as a hatter." "In that direction," the cat said, waving its right paw round, "lives a hatter, and in that direction," waving the other paw, "lives a March hare. Visit either you like. They're both mad."

BLAIR'S GOUT AND RHEUMATIC PILLS

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY.

"Newton Abbot, Devon. Dear Sirs—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effect of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.
"For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout and life had lost its attraction owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitations of the enemy which prostrated me for months, or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.
"Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.
"For the last twenty months I have been comparatively free, as one or two attempted visitations have been immediately stamped out by the assistance of Blair's Pills.
"Truly yours (Signed) Saml. W. Baker."

KING'S INTIATIVE

DID THE KING DRAFT THE LAND PURCHASE BILL

His Majesty's Polite Resentment—Quite a Change in Procedure—King Edward Taking a Business and Tactful Interest in the Nation.

A cable from London, Eng., says: Stories of King Edward's personal iniative, and of the lengths to which it is stretched, have been common of late. The most recent is to the effect that the relations between the King and the royal academy have become somewhat strained, owing to the latter declining to accede to the royal wish that Emil Fuchs, a portrait painter, should be elected an associate to the academy.

It is stated that his Majesty gave unmistakable signs of his displeasure ure when he visited the present exhibition at Burling house. A little while before the King was expected a gentleman, whose breast was glittering with orders, arrived at Burling house and announced that he had been commanded to wait upon his Majesty. This wgs Emil Fouchs, and when the King arrived he immediately took his arm, and completely ignored the assembled academy people. His Majesty strolled round the galleries leaning on the arm of the rejected of the academy. Another story that has been going the rounds of London dinner tables is that the King sent for Mr. Balfour to ask him if he had a solution of the Irish question, and on his replying in the negative, produced the draft of the bill in his own handwriting, which actually became the text of the famous purchase bill subsequently introduced to the House by Mr. Wyndham.

HEARTY AND WELL

Well Known H. B. Officer Visits the High Commissioner.

Mr. J. K. Macdonald, the well known Hudson's Bay officer, has returned to Winnipeg from a prolonged holiday to Scotland and England. The many friends of Lord Strathcona will be pleased to learn that he was looking exceedingly well when Mr. Macdonald saw him, and had a chat over old times. His descriution of the high commissioner is that "his skin is as clear as ever, and his eyes as bright as can be." The youthful appearance of one—so well known in the Northwest as was Sir Donald A. Smith—delighted and surprised the traveller. While in England every one wanted to know about Canada, its facilities and prospects. The question of cold was one that gave them most concern. The reply of Mr. Macdonald was characteristic of himself: "Where the English sparrow can live, surely the had not seen the old country since Englishman can." Mr. Macdonald 1869 untill this visit.

CANADIAN AIRSHIPS

Has Wings Like a Bird and Will Shortly Fly.

A despatch from St. Catherines, Ont., says: A St. Catherines man named J. R. Dalmeida, one of the teachers at Ridley College, claims to have invented a practical airship. Mr. Dalmeida has now completed his machine, and hopes in the course of a few days to make his first flight by its aid. It is constructed of light but tough and strong bamboo, and is built to resemble as closely as possible the shape of a bird. Wings constructed of bamboo and silk canvas of beautifully fine and durable texture, are fashioned on the exact model of a bird's wing. Each wing has an area of 84 feet. They are Worked by a most ingenious but strikingly system of levers, which are moved by the pressure of the operator's feet. The inventor expects to have a trial trip in a few days, and if everything goes satisfactory he will then cross to Toronto, after which he will start on a trip to St. Louis to the World's Fair, where a prize of $100,000 is offered for a machine that will enable man to fly.

"Fifty years of active work as a player is enough," he said, "and when I have completed that period I shall make my bow to the public that has shown me so much love, patience and sympathy. I shall take with me as I go back from the glare of the footlights, a memory which will give pride and pleasure to whatever period of rest may be my lot."

While at Hanau he described this part of Canada in such glowing language that two of his friends, Messrs. Aug. Schmidt and Fr. Zeigler, both of Hanau, with their families accompanied Mr. Gender on his return voyage to Canada, and all three families intend to take up land and settle in the country. Mr. Gender states that many others in Hanau, his former neighbors and friends, were so fully conpinced of the great resources of Manitoba and the Northwest Territoriee, that a very large percentage of them will abandon their German homes to settle in this part of the world.

DON'T BLAME ROADS

The Railways Issue a Circular Giving the Cause of Car Shortage.

In view of the fact that the season for hauling new grain is not so very distant the Canadian Freight Association, combining the two roads, the C. P. R. and the C. N. R. is publicly distributing a circular explaining the necessity for car service rules and evincing a preparation for the better distribution of cars this coming fall. That the delay in receiving cars complained of by the farmers is not wholly the fault of the railway may be seen from the following extracts from the circular: "The efficiency of car service depends upon the availability of cars. If a car capable of making six trips a month is delayed in loading, unloading or otherwise, so that it only makes three trips per month, its service to the public and to the transportation companies is reduced fifty per cent.

"No reason is perceived in law or justice why unreasonable and unnecessary detention of cars by shippers or consignees should not be paid for.

"The shipper, by his failure or neglect to unload or receive a cargo, compels the railroad to retain, house and care for his goods, and for this service the railroad is entitled to compensation.

"The shipping public must assume its share of responsibility for car service evils, since reforms are impossible without the co-operation of all interests.

"Railroads are not in the detention but the moving business. Cars, like blood, must circulate to maintain life in a railroad organization."

This Kind Makes Anarchists.

A Berlin despatch says: A few days ago when the Kaiser was riding through the outskirts of the park at Potsdam, he stopped to look at a regiment of infantry drilling in the open. To do honor to the Emperor, the chief of the regiment ordered his men to line up on a road and present arms when the Kaiser left. One of the soldiers, who, as the monarch cantered by, found himself covered with dust, gave vent to his temper in terms not very flattering to His Majesty. Unfortunately a sergeant overheard him and reported him to the commander and the poor soldier was placed before a court-martial, who expelled him from the army and sentenced him to seven years imprisonment at hard labor. Even here in Germany where we recognize the gravity of his offence the sentence is considered unjustifiable, but it nevertheless cannot be appealed and if the Kaiser does not pardon him, which is not very likely, the young man who is now twenty-three, will not be a free man again until after seven years.

The Sultan of Morocco.

Muley Abdul Aziz, sultan of Morocco, has the reputation of being a most progressive monarch despite the fact that his connection with the brigands who abducted Ion Perdicaris and his stepson appears to be established. Abdul looks like a man of thirty-five though in reality he is not yet twenty-five. He is devoted to bicycle riding and amateur photography. His admirers declare that he is a man of great force of character, but Europeans who have visited his country say that whatever of good may have been done in Abdul's name really eminated in the brain of Kaid MacLean, a Scotchman, who was Abdul's father's chief adviser, and since the latter's death has held the same position in the son's court.

His Wife is His Boss

A high official at the court of the Grand Duke of Hesse, the father of the Czarina who has just returned here from St. Petersburg says that the continuous rumors of the Czar's intention to abdicate are absolutely untrue.

He is at times anxious and sometimes depressed but the family believe in the ultimate success of the Russians arms.

Even if the Czar could be imagined to forget his duties and think of abdictation, the Empress would soon restore his mind to its proper balance. She is a woman of character and determination and has more influence over her husband than is generally known.

Deserving of Your Aid.

The missionaries of the northern district of the Mackenzie river diocese are appealing for aid as the result of an unfortunate accident. Their supplies for the coming year, which were being forwarded to the different stations, through the Hudson's Bay Company, were totally ruined in the floods which swamped the company's storehouses at Athabasca Landing. The missionaries must themselves bear the loss as the company is not responsible, being merely forwarding agents. Rev. Dr. Reeve, Bishop of Mackenzie river, has ordered the absolute necessities of life to be forwarded, so that the missionaries may not perish through the next winter, but the money will have to be supplied by friends. Rev. T. R. O'Meara is asking for contributions to be sent to Mr. Geo. Grisdale, Synod Office, Winnipeg. The chief sufferers through the loss are the Ven. Archdeacon McDonald, Mr. Hardisty, native catechist; Rev. J. R. Lucas, Rev. J. Warwick and Rev. T. Marsh.

YUKON GOLD OUTPUT

This Season's More Than Four Times that of Same Period Last Year.

In twenty-three days, from May 8 to June 1, since sluicing begun, writes a correspondent from Dawson, Y. T., royalty has been paid on 55,773 ounces of gold—nearly two tons. This is the largest amount reported in the same period in previous years. Last year's figures were 11,585 oz. Work is being rushed on many of the creeks, and the prospects for the summer work are excellent. So far the water holds out well—a fact of which the miners are taking full advantage. Some hydraulic works are finding the supply scanty, but large sums will be expended for the next few years putting in extensive flume systems. Acklin is now working considerable operations until the completion of the main flume from Twelve Mile river, which will be about thirty miles long, carrying a large amount of water delivered with 210 feet head. This is only one of several.

The lien law protecting working miners was declared to be ultra vires by Justice Craig the other day. The decision created a sensation. According to the judge's decision the Yukon country can pass no legislation giving miners lien on anything more than the dump taken out. A claim cannot be attacked.

It is considered here that the Edmonton route to the Yukon is by far preferable to any other. It is believed that if the railway is built that the whole trade of the lower Yukon can be secured by Canada. Dawson will then be a distributing centre for all Alaska traversed by the Yukon. This trade is becoming more important every year. Already thousands af dollars' worth of goods have been sent to Tanana. It is quite possible that it will be a good camp. Many prominent men have gone down to look over the camp with a view to establishing permanent business. A large area, according to reports, contains very good ground. This is only one instance of how trade is being captured by Dawson.

Old Landmark Disappearing.

An old landmark in Winnipeg is being torn down; it is the livery stable cornering on the lane in the rear of Princess street and facing on Elgin avenue. The building was erected in 1877 by Jack and Joe Benson, and has housed some famous fast horses in its time. The original building was extended from time to time, but the earliest erected portion is still sound and in good condition. The building is being removed to make way for the new transfer track. When the stable was built in 1877 it was away west of the city on the prairie, and was looked upon as rather an extravagant venture.

A Heavy Sentence.

Two years confinement and thirty lashes to be administered, fifteen within two months, and fifteen one year after the first thrashing, at the Stony Mountain penitentiary, was the sentence passed upon Paul Multiwell by Magistrate Daly at Winnipeg the other day. Multiwell was charged with indecent assault on a six-year-old girl. The case was tried in camera. Two women who witnessed the assault, and two children identified the prisoner, who put up a strong defence, which, however, was overwhelmed by the evidence produced. The constable who made the arrest also gave evidence that was convincing. When sentence was passed the prisoner broke into tears, being unable to bear up under its terrible meaning. The charge was indecent assault, as the evidence would not permit of a more serious charge.

The Charge Withdrawn.

The charges of obstructing the streets preferred against the Salvation Army at Winnipeg, which were held over for a couple of weeks, were withdrawn by the city at the police court last week. Two men who were summoned for driving on the left side of the street because of the alleged obstruction were accordingly discharged of committing an offence.

No Faith in Radium Cures.

A correspondent writing from London, Eng., says: London physicians are beginning to lose all interest in radium, and no one any longer believes in the many miraculous cures said to have been effected by the new substance. Sir William Ramsay says that experiments which he has personally conducted have shown that radium is played out in 1,150 years, and that, therefore, if anyone wants to invest in the new metal, he must realize that it would go to nothing in that time. He believes that the light emitted by radium is of good effect in light skin diseases, and that it may be used with some benefit in the treatment of rodent ulcers, but that it is of no value whatever in cancerous diseases.

Bull Dog at St. Petersburg.

A British bulldog is now the hero of St. Petersburg society. "Kitsi" or "Docketed-Tail," as he is called, has been presented with three silver collars by a lady belonging to the highest aristocracy, and with about forty of cheaper material by humbler admirers, as well as with shoes and rubber overshoes without number. "Kitsi" was on the "Variag's" deck during the battle of Chamulpo.

A returned military officer, who had special opportunities for observing the development of Japan's preparations for war, is responsible for the published suggestion that Admiral Togo has on board his ship a British naval expert in the person of Ernest Charles Thomas Troubridge, who strangely disappeared from Tokio about the time the fleet sailed and has not been seen there since.

GUNBOAT TORPEDOED

ANOTHER MARINE CASUALTY BEFALLS RUSSIA

Stakelberg's Retiring Force Repulsed—200 Killed and 400 Wounded—The Japanese Capture Three Russian Vessels.

A cable from Tokio says: The Russian gunboat was torpedoed and destroyed at Port Arthur on Saturday.

STAKELBERG REPULSED.

The London Telegraph's Tien Tsin correspondent wires: "Four thousand Russians belonging to General Stakelberg's brigade, on May 31, attacked 1,500 Japanese, occupying a position five miles south of Wa Fang Tien. The Russians were repulsed, losing 200 killed and 400 wounded. The Japanese lost more than 100 killed."

RUSSIANS REPULSED.

A cable from Tokio says: The Japanese and Russian forces, located north of Pulandien, which were in a series of brushes during the early part of last week, had another encounter on June 3, near Chu Chia Tun. On that day the Japanese cavalry men met the Russians at noon. The Russians numbered 2,000 men, and were composed of infantry detachments of cavalry and artillery. They were pressing the Japanese cavalry when the Japanese assembled its entire force and engaged the enemy. The Russians drew off gradually and at half past five in the afternoon they retired to Telishu. The Japanese suffered four men killed and four men wounded in this fighting. A report has been received here from Gen. Kuroki saying that on Friday last a detachment was despatched from Ai Yang Cheng (Ai Yang Pienmen) to the east of FengWang Cheng to make a reconnaissance towards Chaimatsi (Simatsi, 35 miles north of Feng Wang Cheng). This detachment encountered 600 Cossacks, and after a brisk engagement the Russians retreated. General Kuroki reports the Russian loss was heavy. The Japanese suffered only one man killed and three wounded.

MARCONIGRAMS AND MINES

It is suspected at Tokio that the Russians at Port Arthur are communicating with points on the Chinese coast by means of wireless telegraphy. It was reported that a wireless station was erected secretly at the village of Peh Wang, on Takin Island, one of the Miao Tao group, situated in Pi Chi Li Strait, and the Japanese cruiser Chitcse visited the island yesterday to investigate. She did not, however, find anything. It is reported that another such station has been erected near Shan Hai Kwn and the Japanese are investigating this matter. Yesterday the Chitcse steamed in close to Liate Chan promontory, and discovered four masts and a watch house near the coast. One of these masts was evidently fitted for wireless telegraphy operations The Chitcse reported having heard a series of explosions at Port Arthur, and believes them to have resulted from blasting preparatory to the emplacing of new batteries. The Japanese torpedo boat destroyer Ikazuchi yesterday discovered and exploded a large mine on San Shan island at the entrance to Talienwan bay.

The Japanese naval authorities engaged in clearing out the mines in the vicinity of Talienwan are employing Japanese shell divers from Kushiu province for the purpose. These divers volunteered for this work, and are wonderfully expert. It is said that with their diving paraphernalia they can stay under water for half a day at a time. Hundreds of Japanese fishermen are volunteering to assist in clearing away Russian mines, and it is probable that some of them will be used for this work. These voluntary offers are taken to illustrate the unity of the Japanese people in the war.

CONDITION OF PORT ARTHUR'S FLEET.

A Chinese passenber on a junk which arrived at Che Foo from Dalny states that he was at Port Arthur recently, and that the Russian force, inclusive of sailors, numbering 40,000 men only. The four larger vessels of the Russian fleet are undamaged, but all the others are in the hands of the repairers. The Japanese have restored order at Dalny and Tallen Wan, and have driven out the bandits. Dalny, according to the passenger's story, was not badly damaged by fire. Only the old town was destroyed.

The Tibetans Choose War.

A cable from Gyantse says: Col. Younghusband's letter, demanding that Ameban shall go to Gyangtse with qualified Tibetan representatives, to settle the outstanding differences before June 25, was returned from Jong unopened and without comment. The Tibetans have therefore deliberately chosen war, and must accept responsibility for the policy now forced upon Great Britain.

Early Settler Perished—The River Gives Up Its Dead.

Edward Vachon, one of the early arrivals in the Klondike, was drowned on Klondike river Saturday evening, writes a Dawson correspondent. He and his partner, Whelan, were coming down the river with a loaded boat, when they ran over a cable just under the surface of the water and the boat capsized. Both men made a heroic struggle for life in the fierce current of the icy water, the river being in full flood. Whelan reached the shore utterly exhausted, but did not recover consciousness for several hours. Vachon reached the shore, but was too exhausted to land Help came too late to save him and he was swept away down the river The body has not been recovered. Vachon was born at St. Romauld, Quebec, and was about 78 years old.

Sydney Steel Works Closed.

The manufacture of iron and steel at Sydney is a thing of the past, at least until the market for the products is much improved over its present state, says a despatch from Sydney. At noon Wednesday all employees of the Dominion Iron and Steel Company, who had been at work for the past week, were called together, and told that the company had decided to abandon manufacturing for the present, but if they cared to work at construction work they would be employed for some time on a number of improvements and extensions which the company intended making to the plant. The men who received this offer were comprised of mostly clerks, civil engineers, apprentices, draftsmen, etc., and it is not likely that many of them will accept it, preferring to seek employment at their respective callings elsewhere. The Q. W. A. council meeting was taken up mostly with the devising of means for the fortification of the strike and the raising of funds to carry it on. The men are still confident of winning the strike, notwithstanding the general feeling in Sydney that the works are permanently closed down. The meeting Wednesday decided to raise $100,000 for the carrying on the strike.

THE PUBLIC WELFARE

We have long been of the opinion that the best course the government of B, C. can follow in dealing with the Flathead mix-up is to put up at public auction all that property except that staked before the reserve was made and dispose of it in small blocks to the highest bidder. That this view has at least been entertained by the government is apparent from the following despatch from Victoria published in Monday's Winnipeg Free Press.

"Since the appointment of Mr. Carter-Cotton as a member of the British Columbia government (Mr. Carter-Cotton being recognized as in the especial confidence of the Canadian Pacific Railway) the ministry is reconsidering its decision with respect to the historic coal and oil lands of East Kootenay, and it is contemplated that the rights of locators an licensees will be set aside, although the order-in-council affirming a contral decision had been passed and signed by the Lieutenant-Governor on the 4th. instant, and the lands thrown open to public auction, in which event the C. P. R. is prepared to outbid all rival claimants for possession.

Licensees and locators whose titles would be lost are discussing the situation with mnch alarm, and have summored to their aid their parliamentary representatives, Mr. Fraser M. P. P. of Grand Forks, and Mr. J. A. Macdonald M. P. P. ofRossland, leader of Liberal opposition having already arrived. It is threatened that if the government at this late day goes to the length of breaking faith and repudiating location rights, the prospectors and promoters of the new coal field are strong enough and determined to overthrow the government, and also to put an end to Premier McBride's political career. The East Kootenay coal and oil lands have already played a great part in western Canadian political history. They are roughly estimated to be worth from fifty to one hundred millions and are included in famous blocks 4593 and 4594 granted to the C. P. R. by the Prior government and Western Subsidy Act. It afterwards developed, before the delivery of the patents had been made, that a grand deception had been practised upon the Legislature, and the grant virtually obtained by a colossal fraud; whereupon the government cancelled the grant by order-in-council, and this action was ratified by the Legislature and subquently upheld by Dominion as intra vires. The Columbia and Western scandals, which thus cost the C. P. R. possession of these lands, also exiled from public life the then premier Hon. E. G. Proir, and his attorney-general D. M. Eberts with numerous other prominent politicians."

The McBride government has evidently been considering with grave apprehension the serious consequences that may arise by the issuing of licenses for all applications without any regard to priority of claim or other legal rights. This course, if adopted, will certainly involve endless litigation and will in most cases result in the wealthy individuals or syndicates coming out on top. A long delay will also follow pending the investigation in the courts, during which time the properties will be tied up. It is said that the claims on some parts of the Flathead are many deep, even six and eight in some instances and that the total number is over eleven hundred. The indiscriminate granting of all those licenses may result in a rich harvest for the lawyers, but it will also most certainly result in endless confusion to the claimants and financial disaster to the province.

The original discoverers who first staked in the Flathead have indisputed rights and their claims should be honored, but those who flocked in after the reserve had been placed on the block cannot be placed in the same class They took 'long chances" in the technical wording of the reserve notice and rushed in, not as prospectors but as speculators. Others, better prospectors but less venturesome and with a more honest regard for British law held back and respected the reserve notice. From these facts it would not appear that any particular hardship would be worked upon the present claimants by putting the properties up for sale and giving each an even show for his money. The cash that could be realized by the government by adopting this plan would be enormous, quite sufficient to put the government of British Columbia on its feet and raise its credit to the highest notch in the money market. Such a course would settle forever all danger of litigation and would ensure the speedy opening up of the properties and the establishment of healthy industries.

EDITORIAL NOTES

An important factor to be remembered in building large blocks in this town is the special consideration of the roofing to meet the climatic conditions. The heavy snowfalls in this place have always proved troublesome and in many cases good roofs have been ruined from this cause. Some parts near the eaves in gable roofs, are less exposed to heat than others and ice forms. By continual expansion and contraction the materials warp and crack, and leaks follow. A plan adopted in the province of Quebec where the snowfall is almost as great as here is said to work well. It consists in making a double roof, allowing an air space between. This prevents the snow from melting from interior heat and by removing the snow with shovels after severe storms no injury is done to the roofs.

The mouse traps kept in stock by Sheppard & Elliott must be alright. Bruce Brown tells of a search for a dead dog, cat or other cause of an unpleasant odor about the store which resulted in the discovery of many dead mice entrapped in the back shelves. And then Bruce put the following problem. "How many mice would have been caught had those traps been baited and stored in a grocery store."

HOW THEY DUPE FELLOW-COUNTRYMEN COMING TO CANADA.

Greed of the Booking Sharks of the United States—Ten Dollars for the Canadian Government's Free Pamphlet "Where and How and All About It"—Sale of Sheet Iron Houses—Government Warns Settlers.

The rapacity and ingenuity of "booking agents" in the States is causing immigration authorities and many prospective settlers throughout Northwestern Canada serious annoyance, writes G. C. Porter in Toronto World. Taking advantage of the movement from the Western States northward, unscrupulous persons advertise to select desirable homesteads in the Canadian Northwest, without which they assure people nothing worth having for agricultural purposes can be secured. The usual fee is ten dollars, but many cases reported at Winnipeg show that the limit frequently reaches many times that sum, according to the wealth of the "sucker." The farm papers of the central states especially carry these advertisements. They are cunningly worded and calculated to catch those of more than average shrewdness. Here is a sample, culled from a Chicago journal that caters to the stockraiser and farmer:

"Do You Want Canadian Homesteads?"

"If you are seeking free farms in Canada communicate with us. There are eight hundred million acres, covering half a dozen territories, to choose from. We have list of best sections. For ten dollar fee you become member of our association. That means we will select 160 acres for you in best agricultural part of Canada and arrange all preliminary details for your location. Don't go into a foreign country without this information. Remember Canada is a monarchy, and it is very different from a republic.

J. Rice & Co.,
Colonization Association,
172½ La Salle street, Chicago."

What the Sucker Gets.

On receipt of the fee, a copy of the Canadian Interior Department's pamphlet, entitled "Where and how and all about it," is mailed to the applicant, together with one of the Government maps, showing the scope of the Homestead Act. A brief letter, signed "J. Rice," with a rubber stamp stating that 160 acres of land is free over the section covered by the map, and inclosing a railroad folder showing the different lines to the north, close the incident. These pamphlets can, of course, be secured free on application to the Government agents or representatives of the various railroads entering this territory, but the fact is not generally known.

The authorities have had their attention called to these fakes innumerable times. They have taken the matter up with the postal authorities of the States. Investigations have followed, but without suppressing the sharks. They claim to supply all they advertise, and expose their books to show that all applicants who pay the required fee are enrolled in the "Colonization Association Co." ledger. They maintain further that they are conferring something of value upon these people by supplying them with the Government folders and railroad pamphlets.

Sheet Iron Houses Sold.

That tremendous business is done by these rascals is indicated by the number of settlers who arrive in Winnipeg and other points in the Northwest, with receipts from the bogus land locators. They tell the same story to the immigration authorities. Having seen the advertisements and knowing nothing of the subject, though desiring to come to Canada, they had been inveigled into the scheme. In some cases the intrigue extends further, and the proposed settlers are told that they may purchase portable houses to take with them, since lumber is scarce in Canada, and the demand for immediate shelter imperative. In that case small ten by twelve sheet-iron rooms are offered at outrageous sums. This feature of the offer is given the evidence of genuine Government sanction by inclosing a small circular which contains the exemption of sheetiron houses brought in by settlers. Altogether the ingenuity of the men engaged in this swindling operation and the energy they exhibit catches a very considerable number of people. Time and again the Government has issued warnings against this game, but the instances in which prospective settlers have been victimized continue to increase.

Government Warns Settlers.

The latest edition of "How and where and all about it" contains special reference to the subject in full face type and urges settlers not to consider such propositions, as they are worthless in aiding the farmers to locate a homestead. These sharpers are merely copying the methods of rascals who operated all over the Western States during the settlement of Kansas and the Indian Territory. There is nothing original in the schemes, but the number of people who come to Canada under the delusion that they have acquired some especially valuable inside information from this source is surprising. At first they are very secretive about it, but when they learn that it is a common swindle they report to the authorities. Occasionally farmers from Ontario and other parts of Eastern Canada have been taken in by this sort of thing. It is incredible that a person of ordinary intelligence and residing in Canada could consider such a proposition for a minute, but they do.

"How did he break himself of the habit of drinking?"

"He didn't. It broke him."

WHAT GOVERNMENTS EXPEND.

Statement Compiled by the U.S. Department of Commerce and Labor.

The Department of Commerce and Labor of the United States, has compiled a statement, from which the following table is constructed, showing the per capita of Government expenditures in leading countries of the world:

Countries.	Population.	Expenditures.	Per capita
New Zealand....	788,000	$30,241,000	$38.38
Australia	3,772,000	142,148,000	37.69
United Kingdom	41,961,000	897,790,000	21.39
France	38,962,000	695,250,000	17.84
Belgium	6,694,000	116,500,000	17.40
Paraguay	636,000	11,007,000	17.30
Austria-Hungary	45,405,000	647,969,000	12.68
Argentina	4,754,000	60,757,000	12.68
Cuba	1,572,000	19,515,000	12.40
Netherlands ...	5,347,000	61,468,000	11.49
Portugal	5,429,000	62,170,000	11.45
Spain	18,618,000	186,846,000	10.09
Sweden	5,190,000	49,593,000	9.54
German Empire.	58,549,000	553,222,000	9.45
Canada	5,457,000	50,759,000	9.30
United States ..	80,372,000	640,323,000	7.97

The showing of the department's statistics, condensed into a nutshell, is that in practically every country in the world, excepting China and India, with their teeming populations, the per capita of Government expenditures is greater than in the United States.

It is not to be overlooked, however, that the fact is by no means a demonstration that the people of that land carry a smaller tax-burden than their brethren of other nations. Governmental systems differ. Most foreign Governments have jurisdiction over many things that fall outside of the jurisdiction of the national Government of the United States. This is the result of the constitutional apportionment of power and responsibility between the Federal Government and the State Governments. In Great Britain no end of matters are within the purview of the National Government which in the United States belong to the Government of States, to the Government of cities, or to the Government of counties.

To Repair Ravages of Mice.

The Fruit Division, Ottawa, says that if the tree girdled by mice is only one or two years old, it will be better to replant. If older "bridging" the wound by means of scions of last year's growth may be resorted to. These should be about three inches longer than the width of the girdled section and the ends should be cut to a wedge shape. Then with a sharp, narrow chisel or other similar tool, slanting incisions should be made into the new wood above and below the wound, beginning near the edge of the bark, extending about an inch in length and penetrating but little into the wood. The scions should fit nicely into these incisions and be held in place by their own elasticity. Each end should then be covered with a small piece of grafting wax. Three or four scions will be sufficient for a tree less than six inches in diameter.

If the rough outer bark has been removed all around the tree, but some of the new wood or growing layer still remains fresh, the tree may often be saved by keeping the the new wood moist till growth begins. This can be done by covering the wound with grafting wax or a mixture of clay and cow manure, equal parts. If the wound is low, a heap of earth will often be sufficient.

To Preserve Your Shoes.

Never try to wear a shoe too small or that does not fit when you first put it on.

There is no misery more distracting than a shoe that hurts the foot.

Never let your shoes get hard and dry. Don't let them run over.

Don't let the heels run down.

Don't dry a wet shoe till you have rubbed it well with a flannel cloth and then with vaseline.

Never put shoes near the stove.

Half a peck of oats, kept in a small box, will be the very cheapest and best filing for a wet shoe. Fill the shoe and shake the oats down, after having rubbed and oiled it, and set in a dry place to dry gradually. When dry pour the oats back for further use.

Take a wet rag and wash the shoe at least once a week, and oil overnight to keep in good condition.

Never handle patent leather until you have warmed it.

Never wear goloshes with good shoes.

There is no part of a lady's dress which should be more scrupulously neat or that is so often neglected.

"Le Quais Des Grand Augustins."

Mr. J. W. Morrice, whose picture "Le Quais des Grand Augustins," in the Paris Salon, has been purchased by the French Government, is a son of Mr. David Morrice, the well known cotton merchant of Montreal, and a brother of Mr. Arthur Morrice of Toronto. He was educated at the University of Toronto, where he graduated B.A. in 1886. During his four years of student life he lived in the second house at the Residence, and, though of a somewhat reserved disposition, was highly appreciated by those who had the privilege of his acquaintance. Even in those days he devoted a great deal of time to drawing, and he was also a clever performer on the flute. Shortly after graduating he left for Europe to study art and has lived in Paris most of the time since.

Why He Became a Cook.

Sir Horace Plunkett tells a story of his ranching days in the West. Riding into camp one evening, he turned his horse loose and got some supper, which was a vilely cooked meal, even for a cow camp. Recognizing in the cook a cowboy he had formerly employed, Sir Horace said to him: "You were a way-up cow hand, but as cook you are no account. Why did you give up riding and take to cooking? What are you qualifications, anyway?" Qualifications!" he replied, "why, don't you know I've got varicose veins?"

CANADA CLUB

Met in London—Interesting Speeches by Brilliant Men.

The Canada Club held a rousing banquet Wednesday night at the Savoy Hotel, London, Sir Gilbert Parker, presiding. C. Duff Miller, proposing the Imperial Forces, regretted the departure from Canada of British regiments which preserved English characteristics in the country. One hundred and forty-five well known Canadians were in the Imperial army. Captain Blake, R.N., said that Canada was a very great maritime nation. He hoped the great statesmen directing her destinies would formulate a plan whereby more of her intrepid seamen would come forward to fight. He declared that Canadians were able to forge to the front of the Empire without the interest of wealth. From his position behind the scenes of reform at the War Office he was able to say that the country was on the eve of an announcement of startling changes. Sir Gilbert Parker, speaking on the Dominion's leadership in the unity of the Empire said that Canada would accomplish more if she grasped the importance of compromise. As long as the Empire possesed men like Lord Minto, wise, prudent, never disturbing the existing machinery, it would benefit Downing Street, and there would be no fear for the Empire. The Bishop of Calgary, speaking for the guests, said he was astonished to find Canadians occupying such important positions in the political, social and religious life of Great Britain. He hoped that Canada would provide more men like Lord Strathcona, Homar, Greenwood and Irvine. Australia, he said, was passing through federation sickness, through which Canada had successfully passed.

Badly Mixed Marriage.

A Toronto despatch says:—A romantic story is connected with the suit of Mary Doyle against the Diamond Flint Glass Co. About the year 1900 Mary Doyle was married to Mr. John Doyle, who was killed while in the employ of the Diamond Flint Glass Co., and his wife sued the company for damages. The jury placed the company's liability at $1,500, but Mrs. Doyle's suit was blocked by the production of a woman by the company calling herself Ellan Doyle, and claiming that she had been married to the deceased prior to the claimant widow's marriage. This marriage was established to the satisfaction of Judge Idington, who dismissed the action of Mary Doyle on the ground that Doyle's marriage with her was bigamous, and she was therefore not his wife, and had no right to compensation for his death. The climax of the story was reached the other day, however, when Mrs. Mary Doyle's lawyer, R. C. Clute, K. C., brought forward Isaac Atkin, of Toledo, who swears that he is the real husband of the alleged Ellan Doyle, and that her marriage with Doyle was bigamous and therefore void. Under these circumstances, the claimant, Mary Doyle, is the legal wife of John Doyle, and will be entitled to any damages awarded against the Diamond Flint Glass Co. On these facts Mr. Clute applied for a new trial of the action against the company.

Famous Inventor Dead.

The death occurred at Berlin last Thursday of Herr Friedrich Siemens, the famous German inventor and manufacturer, who, during his successful career, amassed considerable wealth. He was one of a family of ten brothers, many of whom have become famous in the world of science and industry. With Dr. E. Werner von Siemens at their head, the brothers established one of the largest electrical firms in the world. The deceased invented, among other things, the regenerative gas-burner and stove that are so largely used in this part of the world. In 1867 the deceased manufacturer took over the glass works founded by his brother Hans in Dresden, and developed them into the most important works of the kind in Germany. He also founded large glass factories in Saxony, Vienna, Berlin and England.

Millers in Convention.

The convention of the Millers' National Federation at Nigara Falls received a letter from the National Association of British and Irish Millers, suggesting an international convention in Switzerland during 1905. The American millers were asked to send a delegate to the meeting suggested for London. The president introduced Mr. Horne, of the firm of Ross T. Smyth & Co., London. Mr. Horne expressed much anxiety for a larger importation of American flour, and hoped there would be more promptness in sending bills of lading, as frequently a steamer brought bills of wheat five weeks old and some that were five months old. H. B. Tasker followed. He is also from London, a member of Tasker & Co. Mr. Tasker spoke for less interruptions and delays in trade, and said his market felt severely the decreasing quantities of American flour coming into London. Hedley Shaw, president of the Hedley Shaw Milling Company, of Toronto, told the convention that when the millers of the United States couldn't supply the London and Glasgow demand they were going to try and be in a position to help them. It was his wish, that if the American millers removed the import duty on wheat they would also remove the duty on flour, which caused a smile, as Canada is becoming an earnest and vigorous competitor.

Good Class of Settlers.

"Spin, spin, daughter of mine;" and in the most secluded corner of the C. N. R. station at Winnipeg the other day, a fair daughter of Norway was ready to heed to the command. In her quaint, dainty costume she stood beside a little blue spinning wheel, knitting.

"These are the best settlers we get, and they make the finest lot of workmen that it was ever my pleasure to have on a payroll. Bring me all you can. I cannot get too many of such men." This is what J. R. Robinson, who has the contract for the building of the Canadian Northern's new line to Edmonton said to an immigration agent, when the latter applied to him for employment for a number of stalwart Scandinavians, who had just landed in the country. On Wednesday the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company sent thirty-seven families of these people from Winnipeg over the C. N. R. into the Quill Lake country. The fine physiques and browned health of the men, and the blonde beauty of the women attracted the attention of the people on the platform, and for a while the agent was besieged with requests to hear what kind of people these were, and where they came from. Nearly all of them had considerable money, for they are at once thrifty without being penurious, and they carried with them many of their own peculiar implements of housekeeping. The spinning wheels, however, attracted the most attention. Every family had one of these, and it is stated that they will use them in this country to make their own cloth. They were smaller and looked exactly like the wheels seen in the rustic pictures of the great painters. All the while the party waited for the train the women knitted steadily, standing or moving about at the same time.

Tibetans Attacked British.

A cable from Gyangtse, Tibet, on June 10 says: Eleven hundred Tibetans attacked the British post at Kangua, on the road to Lhassa, with great ferocity yesterday. They were repulsed, the British loss being one sepoy killed and several wounded.

LATER DETAILS.

The Tibetans bombard Gyangtse daily. Yesterday while Col. Younghusband was at Khangma on his way to Chumba an attack was made on the post by a force of Tibetans. Immediately after reveillie the Tibetans attacked the Gurkha guard, which had just started on their day's journey. The Gurkhas behaved with great gallantry in what was necessarily a hand to hand fight, and were well supported by the few mounted infantry. The British losses were one Gurkha killed and six men wounded. The enemy suffered very heavily. The main attack was almost instantly delivered on the British position, but the Tibetans were totally unable to stand the fire from the British in the post, and their retreat was turned into a rout by pursuit of the mounted infantry. The Tibetans retreated in all directions, and were too demoralized to offer further opposition. Prisoners stated that they had marched from Lhassa thirteen days before, and that it was by the merest accident they happened to find the commissioner at Khangma.

The waterworks and school by-laws were submitted to Brandon ratepayers Thursday, and passed by substantial majorities. A mass meeting to consider these matters is reported.

Better Class to Come.

The unprecedented movement of the better class of the people from the different parts of Great Britain to Canada will be best appreciated when it is realized that nearly all the second-class accomodation on the Allan line steamers has been taken up to next September." was the statement made to a newspaper correspondent last week by Hugh A. Allan on his arrival from England. "In the past years," he added, "there was always a decided falling off in the passenger traffic after the middle of June, but so far the bookings show there will not be any falling off at all. The new steamer Victorian, the largest to run on the St. Lawrence route, will be ready to sail for Canada in September."

Methodists on Church Union.

Rev. D. Carman, general superintendent, addressed the Bay of Quinte conference on church union in Toronto the other day. He said conviction must bring about union, as nobody could be flattered or brought into action. Intelligence and conscience must be honored. Methodism, through its courts, had taken an explicit step in advance, by appointing a committee to negotiate on the question, but it was almost certain that the other two bodies would at once take similar action. Celerity must not be sought at the sacrifice of self-respect, but it appears as though union, marked by vigor, piety and intelligence, was not far off.

On the agricultural estimates in the House at Ottawa last week, Hon. Sydney Fisher stated that the Canadian breeders had decided not to exhibit at the St. Louis exhibition on account of the stringency of the United States regulations against Canadian cattle. The department, however, was anxious to have Canadian cattle exhibited and would duplicate whatever prizes they obtained there—that is the government would give the Canadian exhibitor who got a prize dollar for dollar to that awarded by the exhibition authorities.

MURDERER CAUGHT

Salvator Peccero, Who Killed His Friend, Captured--Quarrel Over Money.

The local police of Fort William had a busy day of it Wednesday morning on the murder case. Officers O'Brien and Wilson spent the morn- at West Fort, and got a clue of the man who answered the description given by Whitfield Bros., who were eye-witnesses of the murder on Monday afternoon. It was found out that the Italian was seen taking a drink at the river side, after which he disappeared. C. P. R. Inspector Thomas gave assistance, and the C. P. R. officials kindly rendered valuable service by the use of the telegraph to the police officers, and all train-men were ordered to keep on watch for a man of the description given as were also the station agents and section-men along the line.

Word was received from the conductor on the local train that an Italian had tried to catch on the passing train at the diamond at West Fort in the morning. Later on at Dexter in the afternoon, Conductor Rodgers had put off two men who were stealing a ride, one of them being an Italian. Word was also received from Conductor McPherson that he saw a man on the track near Murillo. Tuesday Officer O'Brien and Officer Connors, of Port Arthur, boarded Number 1 and were cut off from going any further than Kaministiquia by the accident to the train.

When the Italian and his companion arrived at Finmark the whole population was on guard and armed to the teeth, and the murderer was captured. Conductor Rodgers who was on his return trip, took charge of the prisoner, and took him to Kaministiquia, where he was remanded over to the police.

An interpreter questioned the Italian for the police, and he gave his name as Salvador Peccelo, aged 38 years, and a native of Italy. He had been six years at River Platte, Brazil, and for the past two years had been working in Pittsburg, Pa. He and Mezzao, the murdered man, travelled together, and had stopped off at the American Soo for eleven days. Then they came to Fort William on the C. P. R. steamer Manitoba on Monday. Afterwards they went over to Port Arthur, near where the quarrel took place. He claims that Mezzao tried to shoot him first, and he then shot Mezzao. The prisoner asked the officer if Mezzao was sick, and seemed to be little concerned about the affair, but when he was told that his companion was dead, then only he appeared to realize that he was guilty of the terrible crime. When searched by Officer O'Brien the revolver was found on the prisoner's person, and two chambers had been discharged. He had nearly $200 in American bills on his person, and he claimed that he had paid $54 to bring Mezzao up with him. On arrival at Fort William the prisoner was at once taken to Port Arthur gaol. Peccelo is of small stature, and only weighs about 125 pounds, and to the general observer has not the appearance of a desperate character, although he is charged with the murder of his own friend.

The Fort William Town Council has instructed Coroner Bindsall to hold an enquiry into the recent fires that have occurred in that town.

Official Call.

Winnipeg, Man., May 2nd, 1904.

To the Pastors and Sunday School Workers of Manitoba and South-Eastern Assiniboia.

Dear Fellow-Workers,—

The twenty-fifth Annual Convention of this Association will be held in Grace Church, Winnipeg, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, June 28, 29 and 30, opening at 2 o'clock on the first day.

Appoint Your Delegates—Every Sunday School in the Province and South-Eastern Assiniboia should send delegates for every one hundred scholars, or fraction of a hundred. The names of the delegates should be forwarded to the Secretary or handed to him at the Convention.

Members of the Provincial Board.—We should have a full attendance of the Board at this Convention. The rapid growth of the work, the changing conditions, and the absolute necessity for correct information from all parts of the field render it necessary in order to achieve the largest success in the work, that every member be present. Three meetings of the Board will be held between sessions of the Convention.

Railway Fares.—The usual liberal arrangements granted by the railway companies of a single fare for the round trip have been secured, provided 100 delegates who have paid railway fare, attend the Convention. In order to secure this, however, each delegate must obtain from the agent who sells the ticket a certificate showing that full fare has been paid to Winnipeg.

Entertainment.—At a convention held several years ago it was unanimously agreed that free entertainment to delegates to the Annual Provincial gatherings would be discontinued. The Winnipeg Sunday School workers, however, have appointed a large and influential Committee on reception, whose business will be to see that ample and suitable accommodation is secured for all delegates, and if possible, at reduced rates. No one need remain away for fear of not finding a comfortable place to stay.

For full particulars write to the General Superintendent and Secretary.

Yours in the work,
W. H. IRWIN,
General Supt. and Secy.,
511 McIntyre Block, Winnipeg.

B. G. CREALOCK,
President.
Burnside.

NOTE.—Pastors and Superintendents will confer a favor by announcing it in their Churches and Schools, at both week-night and Sunday services, until the dates of the Convention.

NATURE'S CURE FOR CHILDREN.

Soothing medicines, opiates and strong drugs should never be given to little children, any doctor will tell you this. Baby's Own Tablets should be used because they cannot harm the smallest, weakest infant. These tablets instantly relieve and promptly cure all stomach and bowel troubles, break up colds, prevent croup, destroy worms, and allay the irritation accompanying the cutting of teeth. Thousands of mothers say they are the best medicine in the world; one of these, Mrs. R. Sculland, Calabogie, Ont., writes: "I have tried many remedies for children, but Baby's Own Tablets is the best I have ever used. I have been giving them occasionally to my child since he was six months old. They have always kept him well, and he is a big healthy baby." All medicine dealers sell these tablets, or you can get them, postpaid, at 25 cents a box by writing to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

FOR INFLAMMATION OF THE EYES.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

YELLOWSTONE PARK.

One Meets With Nature's Surprises There at Every Turn.

Probably no area of equal extent contains so great a number of natural objects capable of arousing wonder, enthusiasm and awe as are found crowded together in the park. Its many scenic features of restful charm, found alongside areas of never ending activity, with weird, grotesque surroundings, surprise one at every turn. Yellowstone lake, the largest sheet of water in America at so high an elevation, with its indented shore line and 140 square miles of surface dotted with forested islands, presents to lovers of nature a series of picturesque landscapes unequaled upon any other inland waters. The far famed falls of the Yellowstone, with their unique and marvelous rock setting, and the Grand canyon, with its majestic outlines and brilliant coloring, are worthy of all the praise bestowed upon them and merit a separate descriptive article. More than a score of waterfalls and cascades, some of them of exquisite grace and beauty, pour the waters of mountain torrents and plateau lakes from the uplands to the lowlands. Many of them well deserve a visit, but their fame is obscured by the real marvels of the Yellowstone. Again, the fossil forests, so seldom visited, tell a most interesting story of a buried plant world, of explosive eruptions of mud volcanoes and the gradual piling up of erupted lavas and ashes. All these, enticing as they seem, appear insignificant when compared with the hydrothermal phenomena displayed in geysers, boiling springs, hot lakes, solfataras and numberless fumaroles, which have gained for the park the appellation of the wonderland of America. Unquestionably it is this hot water treatment which the region has undergone that has developed most of the objects of interest and made the park famous the world over. Even the lake owes much of its attractiveness to its hot springs and paint pots, and the Grand canyon would lack its brilliancy of coloring and its sculptured buttressed walls but for the long continued action of hot as well as cold water.—Arnold Hague in Scribner's.

Any man who has money can have lithographs printed claiming a big show.

The trouble with having a good word for everybody is that when you pay a compliment it doesn't count.

Queer Tastes.

Speaking of mysterious tastes, that of a man who was recently before the magistrate at Greenwich is not very easy of explanation. Three weeks ago a legacy of £130 was left to him. The first thing he bought, it seems, was a set of billiard balls, and he now has nothing else left to show for the £130, which has disappeared at the rate of £43 6s. 8d. weekly. Why billiard balls? It is a singular and rather interesting form of craving. It is perhaps true that a billiard ball is one of the very few perfect objects produced by man. It is all of a piece, it is thoroughly homogeneous as regards material, and it is, or should be, faultless in form. Yet only a strong strain of mysticism in the character would account for a man hungering and thirsting for billiard balls above all other earthly things.—London News.

Eyelets Sold by the Million.

"Eyelets," said a manufacturer, "are, like needles, pins and matches, sold by the million instead of by the pound. I don't suppose anybody could tell how many million eyelets are sold every year in New York, but the number is prodigious. Eyelets are made for a variety of uses, from the huge white metal loops sewed into the corners of ships' sails to the tiny eyelets for the dainty slipper of a baby. The greatest number of eyelets made are, of course, for shoes. They are put up in boxes of 100,000, 250,000 and 500,000. Only those proportions are packed. They cost anywhere from $50 to $130 a million."

"Is this all?" demanded the custom house inspector as he finished up Binks' trunks.

"Well, no," said Binks. "I got a new wife over in Paris. That little woman over there with the pink cheeks is she."

"All right," said the inspector. "We'll have her appraised. She looks like a work of art."

But Dodd's Kidney Pills made him a New Man.

Fortune Harbor, Nfld., June 13, (Special).—Scores of people in this neighborhood are living proofs that Dodd's Kidney Pills cure all Kidney ailments from Backache to Bright's Disease. Among the most remarkable cures is that of Mr. Richard Quirk, and he gives the story of it to the public as follows:

"I suffered for over twenty years from lumbago and Kidney Disease and at intervals was totally unable to work. After ten or twelve years of doctors treatment, I had made up my mind that my complaint was incurable. Reading of cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills tempted me to try them. I did so with little faith, but to my great surprise I had not taken more than half a box before I felt relief and, after the use of seven or eight boxes, I was fully cured and a new man.

"Yes, Dodd's Kidney Pills cured my Lumbago and Kidney Disease, and the best of it is I have stayed cured.

A CLEAR, HEALTHY SKIN.—Eruptions of the skin and the blotches which blemish beauty are the result of impure blood caused by unhealthy action of the Liver and Kidneys. In correcting this unhealthy action and restoring the organs to their normal condition, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will at the same time cleanse the blood, and the blotches and eruptions will disappear without leaving any trace.

There never was and never will be a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated disease rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in sound, unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on nature's own restoratives. It relives the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease, and by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses through the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—result, improved appetite. Northrop & Lyman of Toronto have given to the public their Superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, guaged by the opinion of scientists, the wine approaches nearest perfection of and in the market. CONDENSED MILK.

Its Discovery Was Brought About by a Woman's Experiments.

"How and when was condensed milk discovered?" said a milk dealer. "Well, that is an easy question, known to all venders of the article.

"It chanced that in 1854 the journey from New Orleans to New York was a considerable trip. A certain lady—Mrs. Albert Cashingor—had a sick baby, and on account of that condensed milk was discovered.

"Mrs. Cashingor's baby was so ill that she realized that it would be necessary to make a trip to New York to receive expert medical attention if she hoped to save the child's life. But to travel that long distance the child had to have milk. Milk wouldn't keep fresh more than a few hours. So there she was, kept back from making the trip merely because she could not supply the child with fresh milk.

"In her despair she began to experiment to see if she could not preserve milk the same as she did jelly or anything else. She tried several different methods and finally hit upon a plan which seemed to give satisfaction. So she preserved several big jars of the stuff, put it upon a sailing vessel and made the trip. The child fed upon the milk and was nourished.

"In New York several men learned of her discovery. They tried to make some of the condensed milk in the manner that she had told them, but failed. They followed her to New Orleans, and there she unwittingly unfolded her valuable secret. On the island of Galveston these men started a small factory, and there the first salable condensed milk was made.

"The woman died poor. The manufacturers made a fortune. Now condensed milk is sold in every part of the world."

CHAMPAGNE MAKING.

The Methods That Are Used In Producing the Wine.

It is to the invention of the champagne cork that the world owes champagne, according to Court Purveyor J. Fromm of Frankfort, Germany.

This wine is said to have been made successfully by the butler of a monastery near Epinay, in France, in 1643. Until the early part of the nineteenth century sparkling wines were made only in the French province of Champagne.

Next to the wine, carbonic acid forms the most important part of champagne. The picking of the grapes used requires great care to prevent discoloration. The grapes should not contain too much acid and coloring matter, but considerable sugar.

In order that the grapes should not become warm, thereby fermenting prematurely, picking is done in the early morning hours. The grapes are then placed in the press at once and the juice squeezed out very gently. After twelve to twenty-four hours it is run into vats, where its impurities are removed. After the first violent fermentation is over the young wine is put in cool cellars, into barrels of from 125 to 150 gallons. Toward the end of December the young wine is drawn off in order to separate it completely from the yeast.

The wine is then mixed with wines of other years and kinds. It is then bottled and the progress of fermentation carefully watched, the bottles being opened to "disgorge" the albumen, yeast and other products of fermentation which it is necessary to get rid of. It is then sweetened and stored in cellars to mature for the market.

One Kind of Soft Answer.

It lacked but five minutes of the time for the train to start from the downtown station, and the suburbanites were hurrying into it when a man in the garb of a mechanic sat down by the side of a finely dressed passenger in one of the seats in the rear car, took a paper from his pocket and began to read.

"Plenty of empty seats in here yet, aren't there?" growled the man in fine raiment, moving along grudgingly.

"Yes, sir," pleasantly replied the newcomer, "but it will be crowded pretty soon, and I thought I'd pick out a gentleman for a seat mate while I had a chance."

"Humph!" grunted the other man, uncertain whether to feel complimented or insulted, but realizing the hopelessness of trying to make any fitting rejoinder.—Youth's Companion.

A Matter of Business.

The ladies of the club were closely grouped about the speaker of the afternoon, a remarkably successful woman, in whom commercial and literary ability were admirably balanced.

"Tell us in a few words how to be successful," said one of the ladies insistently.

"To be successful," said the successful one, "all we women have to do is to make as much of a business of our own business as we do of the things that are none of our business."

Comforting.

"George, dear," she said, with a blush, "do you know that Mr. Simpson asked me last night to be his wife?"

"Well, I like his impudence! The idea of proposing to an engaged young lady! What did you say to him?"

"I told him that I was very sorry indeed, but he was too late."

A Leading Question.

Parent—Has that man asked you to marry him, Julia? Daughter—Not in so many words, but it has amounted to that. Last night he asked me if my dad was as well off as they say he is.

CRITICAL TIME AT CHANGE OF LIFE

Suffered From Nervous and Extreme Physical Exhaustion, Now Recommends Other Women to Use

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Many women date their illness and sufferings from the period of change of life.

It is a trying time to all women, and a time when Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will prove of incalculable value.

By supplying an abundance of rich red, life-sustaining blood, this great food cure helps women to pass in safety the period of trial in their lives. It strengthens and invigorates the delicate female organism, and builds up the whole system.

Mrs. Chas. Keeling, sen., Owen Sound, Ont., writes: "It is a pleasure to tell what great benefits I have derived from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I am fifty-five years of age, and for about five years my life was one of great suffering from nervousness, weakness and extreme physical exhaustion. I could not sleep, and hot flushes would pass through my body from head to feet. I consulted my family physician and two other doctors, but they told me, about my time of life, I was likely to be troubled that way. I continually grew worse, and despaired of ever being cured.

"Dr. Chase's Nerve Food came to my notice and as we have Dr. Chase's Receipt Book, I had confidence in the doctor. I was so surprised at the help I received from the first box that I bought three more. They built me right up and made me feel healthy and young again. They have proven a great blessing to me and I hope this testimonial will be of help to some weak, nervous woman suffering as I did.

Gentlemen,

As I am giving up the baking business on June 1st., I wish before retiring to compliment you on the quality of both your Hungarian and Glenora Patent brands of flour. I have never found any other to equal them in strength, uniformity or color, and could get more bread from your flour per sack than any other I ever used. In my twenty-two years' baking experience I tried several brands but always came back to your brand as being the most satisfactory.

Wishing you continued success and thanking you for your most liberal business treatment, I am,

Yours truly,

REV. JOHN ROBSON - - PASTOR

RUN OVER BY A WAGON.

On Wednesday as John Poole, the six year old son of Rev. C R. G. Poole, was returning home from school he was run over by a wagon and severly injured. The accident occured near the Methodist church corner. The little lad ran up to the passing wagon which was heavily loaded with gravel and attempted to hang on the side between the front and the hind wheels. His hold slipped and he fell to the ground. The rear wheel passed over one of his legs at the ankle. The boy was carried into Dr. Higgins' office where a thorough examination revealed a severely bruised leg but no broken bones. The little fellow will be laid up for some time with his injuries. The wagon was one of Wm. Handley's driven by Mr. Blake. The driver was unconscious of the boy's presence at the time he was run over.

The accident should be a timely warning to other boys who are guilty of the same practice. Boys should not be allowed to run after rigs as they so often do in Fernie. Parents, teachers and teamsters should join in a crusade against a habit which may some day result in a fatality.

LUMBER DUTY WANTED

CHEAP AMERICAN LUMBER DUMPED ON CANADIAN MARKET.

G. H. Ennis of the Canada Lumberman, Believes That the North West Settler Needs Educating on the Market Conditions.

Mr. Geo. H, Ennis, representative of the Canada Lumberman of Toronto. was in Fernie this week on a two months tour through the west getting information for an extensive write-up of the lumber industry. Mr. Ennis is well posted on the market conditions confronting the B. C. lumbermen and he is entirely in sympathy with the movement to secure a protection tariff. He was a member of one of the commissions who interviewed the Ottawa government on the matter. Mr. Ennis is securing much valuable data on the condition of the lumber industry in the province with the object of giving it publicity among the settlers of Manitoba and the Northwest Territories. He is getting interviews with prominent millmen throughout the province for the purpose of putting the question in its true light before the people who are opposing the raise in the tariff.

Mr. Ennis found the condition of the industry fully as bad as reported in the press. Some of the mills are closed down, others will close, and none are working full force. The cause he attributed solely to the influx of cheap American lumber. It was estimated that about six hundred million feet of rough lumber was piled in western American yards awaiting shipment. This rough lumber they found hard to dispose of in their own country but the finer grades they easily sold there at prices sufficient to clear all their expenses, leaving them free to sell their rough lumber at any price they could get for it. The retailers in the Canadian Northwest purchased this lumber at very low rates but the consumer did not get any advantage from these rates as the retailer sold at the same prices as the Canadian lumber was sold at The retailer made all the profits, sometimes as high as $13 per thousand being cleared. If the Northwest settlers knew these facts they would readily support the measure for a tariff on American lumber, as they would continue to get lumber at the same prices, and from Canadian mills, where it was manufactured by Canadian workmen, and by this arrangement their money would go to support the people who purchase the products of their ranches instead of to the retailers and the American millmen. The B.C. millmen showed honesty of their intentions by agreeing to bine themselves by contract not to take advantage of any tariff adjustment to raise their own prices. Mr. Ennis was of the opinion that when the Northwest settler learned all the facts as they really exist he will be found hand in hand with Canadian lumbermen in insisting that equal protection be extended to the latter.

Mr. Ennis was confident that the present obstacle to the industry would be removed eventually and that it would take its proper place in the development of this province, the chief resource of which was its vast areas of virgin forests.

LEASES GRANTED.

Mr. D. V. Mott last week received the long delayed leases for the extensive timber limits purchased by the Elk Lumber and Manufacturing Company many months ago. These leases had been withheld by the government for no apparent reason after the purchase-money had been accepted. The total limits secured, including several licensed limits amounts to 16000 acres with a total cut of probably four hundred million feet. About half of this is tributary to the mill plant at Fernie while the other half will be converted into lumber at Hosmer where the company will put in a plant.

STOLEN FROM THE FIRE.

Seven Pairs of Shoes Cleverly Hidden Beneath False Bottom of Trunk.

Constables Walker and Beaudwin searched Mike Kubis' shack on Wednesday for goods stolen from the fire, and succeeded in finding seven pairs of new boots cleverly "cached" beneath a false bottom ol his trunk. Mike had even taken the trouble to neatly paper the bottom of make it look real. Failing in this Mike had his story all ready. He claimed that the boots were given to him by countrymen to take to friends in the old country and that he stored them that way to avoid customs officers. He was arrested. The trial occurred yesterday. Mike proved by Mr. Senkbeil that he had bought two pair of the boots produced in court. Mrs. Jeniga swore that she had found the other five pair in her back yard, while scratching among the ashes. Her friends had advised her not to report the find but to give them away and she gave them to Kubis to take to friends in Austria. In the absence of proof of guilt the magistrate dismissed the case,

TWO HOTELS REFUSED

LICENSE BOARD HAD A LONG SITTING ON JULY 18th.

Loop Hotel Cancelled. Balko's Application Turned Down. Morrissey Hotels Treated Leniently.

The license commissioners' meeting at the Court House on Saturday evening, June 18th, was a particularly long session, the board sitting from 7.30 to 11.30.

The first case was the Loop Hotel held over from the 15th Mr. Eckstein appeared for Mr Marsh and S. Herchmer for those who opposed the granting of the license. The latter counsel quoted the license act to show that the license was really dead as Mr. Marsh had been running the house in his own name for several months without securing a transfer from the former owner, Mr. Nesbitt. R. L. Henderson, constable at Michel, sworn, stated that the Loop Hotel had been sold by Nesbitt to Marsh last fall. He had not seen the papers to that effect but both parties had told him of the sale. The Board accepted Mr. Herchmer's contention and canceled the license without going into the rebuttal of the charges that Mr Eckstein had prepared.

The three Morrissey hotels laid over last meeting were then dealt with. R. E. Lemon, Australian Hotel Morrissey Junction and C. McNab, Alexandra Hotel Morrissey Mines, owned by Stephens Brothers and Co. and R. Schram, Miner's Hotel Morrissey Mines owned by Wilson Bros. are the three hotels which were laid over because the holders of the licenses were not financially interested in the hotels. Mr. S. Herchmer appeared for the hotels and although the circumstances so far as the legal technicalities went very much resembled the preceding case he succeeded in impressing the commissioners with the fact that these hotels had been "up against it" and that a reasonable time should be allowed them to comply with the regulations. The request was granted. Since that time applications for transfers have been filed, and notices appear in this issue.

The application for a new license for The Waldorf Hotel by John Balko was turned down on a legal technicality. S. Herchmer represented the petitioner and L. P. Eckstein the opposition. Each were armed with formidable petitions, but Mr. Eckstein took exception at the beginning to that presented by Mr. Herchmer, on the ground that the dates when the signatures were inscribed were not added. He fought it out on this technicality with the above mentioned result.

July 2nd has been Gazetted a Provincial holiday.

R. Henderson, constable at Michel, moved his family to that place on Tuesday.

Archie McLeod, formerly of Fernie, is erecting an hotel at Bellevue, Alta.

R. H. Richardson has been appointed postmaster at Morrissey Mines to succeed H. Patmore who resigned.

The Coal Company are repairing the water system at Morrissey Mines. Several leaks occurred in the mains which considerably lessened the force.

The depot at Coleman was broken into last Sunday and robbed of a sum of money. No clues were found as to the perpetrator of the deed.

Proctor Joiner, an experienced hardware man who was with Hunter Bros. in Rossland, for several years and more recently in Fernie, has been appointed manager of the Russell-Law-Caulfield company. He took charge last week.—Greenwood Times.

The new time table which came into effect last week is a slight improvement on the old and is now very convenient indeed. The morning express from the East is [illegible] at 7.45 and the evening express [illegible] 4 Both trains are billed to st[illegible]ates at Fernie. The local arrives [illegible] A. M. instead of 7.50 as formerly.

FLATHEAD LICENSES

GRANTED TO ALL APPLICANTS ON EVEN FOOTING

Priority left to Courts to Determine.—Each Application Must Relinquish for ever His Claim on the $100 License Fee

Respecting Coal and Petroleum Lands in South-East Kootenay.

Notice is hereby given that licenses to prospect for coal and petroleum upon and under lands situated within Block 4,593, South-East Kootenay, will be issued forthwith to all persons who have made proper application, in pursuance of the provisions of the "Coal Mines Act" and amendments.

The fee for each license is $100, and all applicants who have not deposited accepted bank cheques to cover that amount are hereby required to do so without further notice.

Licenses will be issued in the following form, viz:—

In consideration of one hundred dollars now paid under the said Acts, and subject to the provisions thereof, I, W. S. Owing to the number of applicants for licenses to prospect for coal and petroleum, and the peculiar circumstances surrounding the application for and issuance of these licenses, and the well-known fact that the issuance has been unavoidably suspended for so many months, the Government of British Columbia finds it impossible to determine the equitable rights of the numerous applicants, Therefore, for the purpose of enabling all persons to go before the proper tribunal for the determination of their respective rights and priorities, this license is issued and accepted subject to such prior rights of other persons as may exist by law, and the date of this license is not to be taken or held as in any sense determining such priority, and further it shall not be taken or held to waive enquiry by the Courts into the proper performance of all conditions precedent as between adverse claimants; and further, on the understanding that the Government shall not be held responsible for, or in connection with, any conflict which may arise with other claimants of the same ground, and that under no circumstances will license fees be refunded.

And the holder hereby waives any claim or demand against the government, and expressly agrees not to take any steps or proceeding, or present any petition, to enforce any alleged claim or demand against the Government of the province of British Columbia arising out of the issuance of this license or any other matter or thing appertaining thereto.

The land being under reserve from pre-emption and sale this license does not include any right other than the right to prospect for coal and petroleum.

The duration of this licence is for one year.

W. F. CUTHBERT DEAD.

RESULT OF TERRIBLE ACCIDENT AT LETHBRIDGE.

Prominent Fernie Merchant Suddenly Called on Monday Night.—Body Shipped East.—Large Sum of Money Found On Him.

The people of Fernie received a severe shock on Tuesday morning as the news spread through the town that Fred. Cuthbert, one of Fernie's most successful and respected merchants, had been suddenly killed at Lethbridge late on Monday night. Wm. Eschwig and Wm. Wilmot, Mr Cuthbert's clerk, hastened down on a freight train which passed through at 3 a.m. Further particulars were received in other wires as the day advanced.

It appears that Mr. Cuthbert had hired a livery buggy and was driving through the centre of the town some time shortly after eleven o'clock, when the horse suddenly shied at a red light hanging from a steam shovel that was being used for the excavation of a ditch on the main St. Mr. Cuthbert was thrown violently out of the buggy, his head striking a telephone pole and breaking his neck. The injured man was immediately attended by a physician, but his pulse gradually decreased and a few minutes after the accident his life flickered out.

Deceased was a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Order of Eagles, of Fernie. The Knights at Lethbridge at the request of the Fernie lodge took charge of the body. Chas. Cuthbert, of Lindsay, Ont., brother of the deceased, was communicated with and a request was received to send the body east. The body was shipped on Thursday morning's express. Mr. Cowey a local Knight accompanying it.

William Frederick Cuthbert was born at Lindsay, Ont., forty-five years ago. He came west to Lethbridge twenty years ago and remained there until the construction of the Crow's Nest line when he pushed his way with the earliest settlers into Fernie where he opened up a business which has developed into a first class fruit and tobacco business. By his careful business methods Mr. Cuthbert had saved a considerable sum of money and although his block was burned in the fire a much better building is already nearing completion on the old site. Temporary quarters for the business were found in the Hotel Northern.

Mr Cuthbert left for Lethbridge on Thursday on a business trip and he intended to return to Fernie on the train which arrived about two hours after the accident The sum of $19,000 was found on his body. It is surmised that at least part of this money had been secured from a friend at Lethbridge and that he was bringing it to Fernie for investment. The disposition of the property of the deceased is not yet known.

The terrible suddenness of the sad accident has cast a gloom over the town. The deceased was a public spirited man who always stood for progress. He was a prominent member of the Board of Trade and was recently elected President of the Athletic Association.

THEFT OF HARNESS

Joe Shingara who lives on a ranch several miles out on the west side of the Elk river had a set of double harness stolen from a tent last Sunday. He missed the harness on Monday and reported it to the police who speedily found it at the C. P. R. freight office in a box marked "bedding" and addressed to Cowley, Alta. Two men named Green and Barthwick who had taken the harness to the depot were arrested on the charge of theft. They told a very lame story about a man named Johnson who asked them on Sunday evening to ship the stuff for him, as he was leaving that evening for Spokane. Their story went to pieces on cross examination and the magistrate sent them up for trial.

EXCURSIONISTS LOST

COAL VESSEL SINKS A ST. LAWRENCE BOAT.

Another Calamity on the St. Lawrence —An Early Morning Crash which Ends in Death for many Prominent People—Stories Do Not Tally.

On Sunday, June 12, while the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Company's passenger steamer Canada, Captain St. Louis, was on her way up from Quebec to Montreal she was run into early in the morning, two miles below Sorel, by the Dominion Coal Company's steamer Cape Breton, of Sydney, C. B., which was on her way down the river light. A large hole was staved in the statboard of the Canada, which rapidly filled with water, and shortly after the collision sank in forty feet of water. There were 40 cabin passengers on the Canada besides a number of second class passengers. Fortunately there were a number of barges and river craft in the vicinity at the time of the accident, and the Canada's crew and passengers, with the exception of one of the crew and four or five of the passengers, were picked up by the coaler Cape Breton and other craft. As far as can be ascertained five lives were lost.

The identified dead were: Herbert Bonneterre, purser; Alfred Thibault, chief clerk in the freight department of the R. & O. Line at Quebec; Jean Baptiste and Eugene Thibault, aged seventeen and eleven, sons of the former; Ovide Brunet, tailor, Quebec.

The Canada was valued at $150,000, and was uninsured. She will be a total loss. The Canada, which was on regular service between Quebec and Montreal, left Quebec at her usual time on Saturday evening and proceeded up the river to Montreal. The night was fine and clear, and the trip was without incident until the tragic collision that was to send the steamer to the bottom of the St. Lawrence, and result in the death of a number of those on board occurred. The Cape Breton, which had anchorage shortly before three o'clock and made for the channel to proceed down the river. It was shortly afteewards that the collision occurred. Owing to the suddenness of the shock and the attendant excitement there is considerable discrepancy in the stories. It is definitely known that the Cape Breton bore down in the semi-darkness on the Canada. Passengers who were in their bunks were awakened by the prolonged sound of whistles, and there was a sudden crash as the coaler struck the steamer amidships, cutting her almost in half.

Terrible scenes of confusion ensued. The first-class passengers were asleep in their staterooms and the second-class passengers were lounging or lying around the steamer and everybody was unconscious of what had actually happened. A hole some 35 feet wide was stove in the Canada's side, and the water began to pour in at a terrific rate, threatening to drown the people in their staterooms. Every moment the vessel threatened to sink. Fortunately there was a short respite before the steamer went down, and most of the passengers had time to get on deck and climb on the roof of the steamer, where they remained until they were rescued by a passing craft. A number of passengers donned life preservers and jumped overboard, being afterwards picked up.

Fagged Out.

A writer in the St. Mary's Journal says: A few Sundays ago I attended the funeral of the late John Muir, manager of the Los Angeles Electric Railway Company. This is, I think, the largest electric railway corporation on the globe, owning not only their city plant, but hundreds of miles of railway all over the surrounding country. John Muir was an able man and an indefatigable worker, and died in the harness from overwork, stricken at his post. He was faithful in his service, tireless in his efforts, and beloved by all. It took five express wagons to convey the floral offerings to the grave. His office desk was opened by millionaire Huntington, the president of the company, after his death, and in it were the following lines:

I want to let go,
To drop the whole thing,
The worries, the frets,
The sorrows, the sins:
Just to let myself down
On the bed or the ground—
Anywhere, so its down—
And let myself go.
And the folks? I don't care.
And my business? The same.
Hell and Heaven? Too tired.

I want to forget,
And I don't want to think
What I want to forget.
Just to let down my nerves,
Just to smooth out my brain,
Just to sleep. And that's all.
Please leave me alone
With your pillows and things;
'Tisn't that I want!
Nor a doctor, nor folks,
I just want to let go.
Oh, I want to let go.

John Muir had not learned how to let go, and like many another he hung on until he died in the harness. There are hundreds of thousands like him, living the same strenuous life, knowing too, the penalty they must one day pay, but with foolish heroism continuing to take the chances. Too late comes the pathetic cry, "I want to let go." They have made their running; they are hopelessly "fagged out," and were they to stop it would be only to add one more to the number of the long array of hopeless wrecks who stream across the continent, and crowd those seaboard cities with haggard look and broken spirit,—fleeting shadows of what they might have been.

JAPS REFUSE MEN.

No Room a Seat of War- Curious Contributions to War Fund.

S. H. Nathans, member of the Royal College of Surgeons, London, is a visitor in Winnipeg, and is making a cursory, but shrewd, inspection of the advantages of the Canadian West while on his way home from England from the Far East. Mr. Nathan has been latterly in Japan, and he tells of an extraordinary state of affairs in the Land of the Chrysanthemum. He says Tokio is full of correspondents, medical men and others wishing to go to the front. But all roads to the seat of war are hermetically sealed with the eternal Japanese smile of polite refusal. The officials are wonderfully polite, but are remarkably firm in this regard, for there are positively crowds of Japanese surgeons who are clamoring to go the wars and are also refused. The secrecy maintained by the Japanese War Office is wonderful. One may hear a rumor of 5,000 soldiers passing through Kobe in the night, but even the inhabitants of that city are unaware of the fact. The most remarkable phase of the situation in the islands is the extraordinary patriotism of the people. The poorest man gives up half or more of his daily income to the war fund; not as a tax, but as purely voluntary subscription. The doctor also confirms the tales of suicide that have reached here from time to time for the common cause. Japanese trade is at a standstill on account of the self-sacrifice of the people, rich and poor alike simply living on the bare necessities of life, so as to swell the war contributions. There is another to the war fund. It appears that curious phase to this giving of money large sums of money are coming in from Rangdon, Burmah and Singapore, in the Straits Settlements. Now the Japanese in those cities are women, and to put it delicately are members of the oldest profession in the world, and have a monopoly thereof in those places.

Died Before Drop Fell.

There took place at St. Scholastique, Que., on June 10, the execution of Theophile Belanger, for the murder of his brother-in-law Antoine Seguin. Belanger died of broken heart. The physicians in attendance said that as soon as the victim felt the trap fell the fright caused a rupture of his heart.

This is the first occasion on record in Canada when a man hanged has not shown a sign of life after the drop has fallen. There was not even a pulse beat in Belanger's body. He went to the scaffold perfectly composed. Everything was conducted quietly, only fifty people being present. The village priest conducted mass at a quarter to eight o'clock, which was largely attended. The mass was in progress when the hanging took place. Belanger made no statement from the scaffold, though before ascending he informed his friends that he was prepared and would rather die He walked to the scaffold calmly and without a sign of agitation. There was an air of sadness about the proceedings not observed at recent executions.

Belanger murdered Saguin at St. Eustache, on February 13, 1903. The tragedy was the culmination of long standing family fights. The murder was a mystery for some time, but the detectives soon fastened the crime on Balanger, who finally confessed. Balanger was one of the most prominent farmers in the district, and was for many years, up to the time of his arrest, mayor of St.Eustache.

Atrocities in Congo Free State.

During the discussion of the Foreign Office estimates in the House of Commons in London on Friday, Sir Charles Dilke (Radical) raised the question of the administration of the Congo Free State. He advocated an appeal to the United States to act with Great Britain in the matter. Sir Charles asked if, in the face of the facts admitted by the Belgian Government, the time had now come to "sweep away all the difficulties and force the government to act by stronger measures than mere words and despatches with reference to this horrible scandal."

The Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Earl Percy, said the British government had thought the Congo government would readily recognize, the necessity for a searching inquiry, but had been disappointed. Was it possible, he asked, in the face of the Congo government's own testimony to avoid the conclusion that the refusal to make an inquiry showed that the Belgian government was afraid of revelations or would not reform the system which permitted such atrocities?

A cable from Brussels says:—It is understood that the Congo State Government considers the British proposals of a special commission to inquire into the administration as unacceptable and contrary to its dignity of independence.

John Norris, a laborer employed at Fort William, on Friday took a dose of strychnine tablets in mistake for a throat remedy. Immediately the mistake was discovered, a doctor was called in, and there is just a chance that the man may live.

Twenty tons of Indian corn, which arrived by the steamship Mananka at Vancouver, was found to be affected with weevil by the fruit and grain inspector last week, and condemned to destruction. There is, so far as is known, no weevil in Canada.

The coroner's jury at Port Arthur on Friday morning rendered a verdict to the effect that Servo Mezza had come to his death from the effect of two gunshot wounds, which were inflicted by the revolver found on Salvador Peccelo when the latter was arrested.

RUSSIA'S LOSSES.

SUCCESSFUL BOMBARDMENT BY JAPANESE.

Official Statement of Killed, Wounded and Prisoners in Officers and Men, in Fleet and Army. The Russians Lost Their Cannon.

Taken prisoners—20 officers and 696 men.

RUSSIANS CHASED FROM EARTHWORKS.

A despatch from Tokio says—A successful bombardment by the Japanese vessels of extensive earthworks thrown up by the Russians in the neighborhood of Yinkow, was reported to night. Three thousand Russians were entrenched from points along the line of temporary defences toward the city of Yimkow. The Japaneses fire became so furious that the Russians abandonen the port. The fire was directed first toward the Kaiping end of the line, but as the Russians retreated the Japanese line of attack was extended so that the Russian troops were pursued for a number of miles along the route by shell from the Japanese ships.

A heavy return was made to the Japanese fire by the Russians, who had twenty guns, but their battalions were silenced one after another, and in many cases the Russians retired so rapidly that they were unable to take their cannon with them. The Japanese squadron engaged in the bombardment was manoeuvered rapidly, and the last of the stragglers was not in Yinkow when the Japanese shelled the city.

An effort was made by the Russians to rally, and a brief reply to the bombardment was made from the fort itself, but the Japanese fire increased in severity, and in a few hours the Russians were in full retreat.

HEAVY RUSSIAN LOSS

Complete Victory for Japan in Three Day's Struggle.

A Kaiping despatch says:—Heavy fighting had been in progress for two days in the valley of Tassa, between Wafangkau and Winjaling, and the end is not in sight. The left flank of the advance guard of the Russian relief expedition, under Lieutenant-Gen. Baron Stakelberg, has been driven back with great loss, many officers from the rank of general down have been killed or wounded. Gen. Gerngross, commanding that wing of the Russiaa army, was wounded in the head. Col. Khavastounoff, and his adjutant, Lieut. Dragaslaff, were killed as were other officers of the line and staff. The extent of the Russian loss is unknown. A large part of the force still being in confusion. A Russian column sent south by Kuropatkin, ostensibly for the relief of Port Arthur is in collison with a large force sent north by Gen. Oku.

MAY BE HEIR TO MILLIONS

Good News for Tom Taylor, M.P.P. for Winnipeg.

Tom Taylor, member for Centre Winnipeg in the Local Legislature, received joyful tidings by Friday's mail. He is believed to be the part heir to a fortune of $15,000,000, and if the information is correct in all particulars his share will amount to about $325,000. The story, which appeared in the Free Press of London, Ont., was copied from or received by cable from the Old Country, and its importance was realized by Mr. Taylor's mother, an old lady eighty years of age, who sent the clipping on to her son with a long letter as to the family history.

The fortune was left by Major Sinclair of the 12th Foot (now the 1st Battalion Seaforth Highlanders) who died some ninety-three years ago. The major, who belonged to a well known family at Wick, entered the army at an early age, and was afterwards drafted to India in the days when money was easily made there. He married and had one child, a daughter, who was sent home to Wick for her health, as is still customary with children born in India. She married a young farmer in the northeastern seaport of Calthness (Wick, who, like herself, was named Sinclair. The old adage of "change the name and not the letter, change for worse and not for better" must in her case have been true.

The Sinclairs had never been more than a comfortable, well-to-do family, certainly not a very rich one, and the young couple seem to have lost sight of the major. He meanwhile had amassed a fortune, which was never claimed. Since then it has been accumulating, and now amounts to three millions sterling, or $15,000,000. An Edinburgh firm of solicitors has now got the matter in hand and are inquiring into the details of the estate with a view to tracing the missing heirs. The shares are expected to amount to some $325,000 each.

Mr. Taylor's grandmother was a Sinclair of Wick, and married from the famous old Scottish town. Curfously enough too, Mr. Taylor's father, who was a son of this Miss Sinclair of Wick, also served with distinction in a Scottish regiment, the 93rd Sutherland Highlanders instead of the Seaforths. Mr. Taylor's mother, who is still a hale old lady with a full possession of her memory, has the whole history of the family at her fingers' ends. Mr. Taylor stated the other day, after showing a reporter the newspaper clipping, and explaining his relationship with the Sinclair family, that he did not know what he would do to establish his claim.

Steamship Lines Rate War.

The Canadian Pacific Railway will join with the Allan and Dominion steamship lines in a cut in steerage rates. Commencing this week, in common with the other railway companies, the Canadian Pacific will sell steerage passages at $15 from Liverpool, $18 from Scandinavian ports and $21 from Finland. In making the announcement at Montreal the other day, Robert Kerr, passenger traffic manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, said that no one could tell just how this rate-cutting would end. "All I can say," he remarked, "that the greater the cut the sooner the lines are likely to come to terms." By way of illustration Mr. Kerr recalled the war of rates between the railroad lines between St. Paul and Chicago. The usual single fare between these cities is $11.50. One company announced a return ticket for $10, the second company offered a return trip for $3. That put a stop to the rate war," said Mr. Kerr "the three dollar rate lasted long enough for them both to pull out." When asked whether in that event it would be well for the Canadian Pacific to drop to $5, Mr. Kerr said: "We are not in the battle. We will leave that for the American lines. All that we can do is to follow them wherever they may lead. As for us, we are quite content if a good class of immigrants are brought to this country to fill up the West, altogether irrespective of whether Atlantic steamships belonging to our company pay or not."

"A battle began at noon around the Russian position four and a half miles south of the station of WaFanhoon (VaFangow), the enemy making repeated attempts to dislodge our left flank. The attack was repelled, and we retained our position.

"The first regiment occupying the left flank of our position sustained severe losses. Its com mander, Col. Khavastounoff and Adjant Sub-Lieut. Dragoslaff Nadochinsky were killed. General Gerngoss was wounded, a sharpnel bullet shattering the right side of his lower jaw, but he remained on the field."

JAPS NOW ATTACKING

Desperate Fighting in Attack on the Fortifications.

A cable says: The Japanese are reported to have successfully assaulted the Keekwane forts, just outside of Port Arthur on June 9, and are now attacking the chain of fortifications of which they are the key, and which alone separate the invaders from the fortress. The fighting is said to have been desperate on both sides with heavy losses. The Japanese guns mounted on neighboring heights silenced the Russian guns, and then the assault was made in the face of an awful rifle fire, which mowed the attacking force down by scores, but could not stop them. A number of Russian guns are said to have been captured. Reports reaching Chefoo put the Japanese loss at between 1,500 and 2,000 men. The Russian loss is not estimated.

SHELLING OF PORT ARTHUR.

The shelling of Port Arthur both by land and sea continues, with what effect is not known. Chinese refugees arriving at Chefoo declare the Japanese shell fire has been extremely destructive both to the defending batteries and the troops. They report the Russians appear to be pretty badly demoralized and have no hope of preventing the capture of Port Arthur when the Japanese get ready to make the attack. The wrecks of several Russian warships are said to have been found by the Japanese, sunk in Talien Wan Bay. They are probably the torpedo-boat flotilla and perhaps the cruiser Bayan, said to have been caught there when the recent attack was made on Dalny.

DEFEAT OF RUSSIANS.

A cable from Shanhai Kwan says: The Japanese have inflicted a defeat on a Russian column below Haicheng according to reports reaching here. The Russians engaged are supposed to have been a force sent to reinforce Generals Samsonoff and Stackelberg, men who have been harassing General Oku's rear in the attempt to create a diversion in favor of Port Arthur. According to the reports a Japanese force from the southwest, believed to be part of the army landed at Taku Sham, struck the Russian force unexpectedly. The Russian scouts were driven in with the Japanese close at their heels. The Russians fought hard, but were outnumbered, and finding their retreat threatened retired hastily to Haicheng.

LOSSES ON BOTH SIDES.

No attempt was made by the Japanese to follow them up. The Russians are said to have lost nearly 500 men, while the Japanese loss is estimated at 300. It is believed this move presages an early attack in force on Haicheng, and it may mean the cutting off of the Russian column about Kaiping.

RUMORED ATTEMPT TO RAISE SIEGE.

A St. Petersburg cable says: A report reaches here that Admiral Skrydloff made an attemp to leave Vladivostok with his squadron but found the Japanese in too strong force and put back after an exchange of shots, in which no damage was done. It is also reported that General Kuropatkin is moving south at the head of a large army for the purpose of making an attempt to relieve the siege of Port Arthur. He has, it is said, enough men to hold General Kuroki in check outside the relief column.

The following cable from Fusan, Corea: The first Japanese army has recently been engaged in most important operations. For two days past four columns have been recconoitering the road towards Liao Yang, Chang Siamitza and Siu Yen, and have occupied towns on these roads, dislodging the Russians numbering several hundred from each after sharp fighting. The Japanese casualties were 65 men killed or wounded.

SHOT THE RUSSIAN MINISTER.

LAST APPEAL TO THE GARRISON

The following has been sent from Rome:—A despatch from Chefoo says: Gen. Stoessel, in command at Port Arthur has issued a last appeal to the garrison exhorting them to show the world how Russians can defend the honor of their czar and country.

Russian Partisans.

"For two days I was in the entourage of the emperor. Between patrisans of Viceroy Alexieff and partisans of Kuropatkin there was a fierce battle, and incredible efforts were made to induce his majesty to send orders to induce Kuropatkin to advance and relieve Port Arthur at all costs.

"This would have been a check to the commander-in-chief that would have upset the decision he had taken and would have obliged him to throughly modify his strategic disposition, which he is perhaps no longer able to change. The good sense of the emperor triumphed over the intrigues, nad he confined himself to inquiring of Kuropatkin if the situation admitted of his advancing toward Port Arthur, adding he was merely expressing a wish, and that he left to the commander-in-chief the task of examining the possibility of complying with it. Kuropatkin replied that an advance was impossible. Knowing him as I do, I may add that the commander-in-chief would sooner have resigned than have executed the order if it had appeared disastrous for further operations."

Each Species Has a Distinct Odor Discernible by Other Ants.

Each ant species appears to have its distinctive odor, discernible by other ants. Within each species there are also differences of odor dependent on the age of the colony and the age of the queen from whose egg its inmates are produced. The ant's organs of smell are its antennae, and the antennae consist, as it were, of a series of noses, each of which has a special task. One nose tells the ant whether it is in its own nest or that of an enemy. Another nose discriminates between odors of ants of the same species, but of different colonies. The third serves the purpose of discerning the scent laid down by the ant's own feet, so that it may retrace its steps along its own path. Another rose smells the ant larvae and pupae, and the fifth nose detects the presence of an enemy. Thus if an ant be left with only the four noses it will live peaceably with alien ants, but while it has its fifth nose it will fight the alien to the death. If ants make one another's acquaintance before they are twelve hours old they will thereafter live amicably together, though of different species or subfamilies. But in three days after hatching their criterion of correct ant odor is established, and they refuse to affiliate with ants whose odor is not in accord with their standard.

LINCOLN'S POETRY.

Verses That Were Brought to Light Only to Be Destroyed.

It is a sentimental habit of speech to regret the "songs never sung." Yet the dispassionate critic knows there is quite enough poetry unless it is of the very best. He has no tears for "mute, inglorious Miltons." But there is no true American who would not pay a price for a certain batch of poems probably long ago destroyed.

Gibson William Harris, who was a law student in Lincoln & Herndon's office from 1845 to 1847, has written for the Woman's Home Companion some of his recollections of Abraham Lincoln. In putting the office in order one morning he came upon two or three quires of letter paper stitched together inside a desk. He turned the leaves and found that they were covered with stanzas in Mr. Lincoln's neat running hand.

When Mr. Lincoln came in, the young man took the manuscript out of the desk again and held it up with the unnecessary and impertinent inquiry whether the poems were his.

"Where did you find it?" asked Mr. Lincoln.

He took the manuscript, rolled it up and stuffed it into his pocket. It was never seen again. The theory of the writer who tells the story is that it was taken home and put into the fire.

THE BLACK PANTHER.

So Fierce That Even Lion Trainers Dare Not Handle Him.

Of all the big, dangerous cats, none is more unapproachable and more treacherous than the black panther. Hailing from the heart of the deepest African jungle, lithe and supple of body, alert and nervous, this stealthy marauder exceeds in ferocity even a Bengal tiger. He is the only big feline that the lion trainer does not venture to train, and he is the only cat so absolutely distrustful that he shuns even the light of day. Often he will lie all day long in a dusky corner of his cage, his yellow slit eyes shifting and gleaming restlessly.

Even the feeding hour, when pandemonium breaks loose among the big cages, when hungry bears and squeals mingle with impatient snarls and impacts of heavy bodies against steel bars, is apt to have no effect on him. He may lie eying his chunk of raw beef suspiciously and not venture forth until day has waned and the last visitor left to tear meat from bones with his long, white fangs.

In fact, so ugly and vicious is this beast that frequently he turns on his own kind, and in many instances it is impossible to cage him, even with a mate.

As to "The."

A voluntary contributor to magazines and newspapers had a desirable article returned to him the other day because he began the opening paragraph with the definite article, "the." The editor wrote: "If we should allow all of our authors to begin with 'the' every article would so begin." There is at least one newspaper in New York which will not accept a story of any kind if it begins with "the." The editor in charge, seeing the "the" at the opening, immediately throws the story into the wastebasket.

RAINY RIVER MAN HAD TROUBLES.

Then his Rheumatism and other Pains Vanished once and for all—His Case only one of many.

Berwick, Ont., June 20. (Special)—That Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure Rheumatism, or any other disease resulting from disordered Kidneys is the experience of many of the settlers in this Rainy River country. The case of Wm. John Dixon of this place is a fair sample of the work the great Canadian Kidney Remedy is doing.

"I had Rheumatism so bad that I had to use a stick to walk. I had pains in my back and right hip and I had no comfort in sleeping.

"I could no more than dress or undress myself for nearly two months and I was for nearly three weeks I could not lace my right shoe.

"My brother advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and I did so. After taking three boxes I could walk around and lace up my shoes and do my work. Six boxes cured me completely."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are the one sure cure for sick Kidneys. Sick Kidneys are the cause of nine-tenths of the ills the human family suffers from.

Explanation of a Sword Trick.

A trick in which a sword is apparently passed through a person's abdomen is explained as follows: The sword employed is a thin, flexible, dull blade. The prestidigitator, whose body the sword will simply pass around, but not pierce, carries concealed beneath his vest a sheath that consists of a hollow tube, semicircular in shape, the two extremities of which are bent in contrary directions in such a way that they are situated in the same straight line, the two orifices opening in front and behind at right angles with the abdomen. This tube runs around the farther side of the man, who, appearing instinctively to grasp the point of the sword as if to protect himself, directs it into the metallic tube. The flexible sword makes its exit between the tails of the coat. It is necessary to operate rapidly, so that the spectators shall not have time to see that the length of the sword has diminished, the curved line that follows not being the shortest passage from one point to another.

ABRIDGING THE LAW.

It Took Time, but It Was Finally Reduced to One Section.

"Before we were married," cogitated the round shouldered but otherwise upright man as he proceeded with his task of washing the dishes which his wife had left in an untidy state when she departed for the convocation of the sewing circle, "I concocted—in my mind—quite a long series of bylaws and regulations which should govern and shape our married life. There were rules and formulas calculated, so I believed, to fit almost any emergency that might arise, and from time to time I added codicils as they occurred to me till in the end it was a veritable constitution duly authorizing two to live cheaper than one and happier than anybody else.

"But shortly after the ceremony which made us two souls with but a single thought, as they say in stories, I began little at a time to amend the document—it was a mental one, as I said before—and, strange as it may appear, the more amendments I added the shorter it became, till now, after the lapse of fourteen years of wedded bliss, my constitution is so reduced that it is composed of only one section, which is as follows:

"'Section 1. What my wife says is law.'"

OUR BLIND SPOT.

A Portion of Every Eye Is Absolutely Insensible to Light.

On the back of the eyeball is a peculiar expansion of the fibers of the optic nerve which is called the retina. Every part of this is not equally sensitive to the action of light. A small portion, where the organization is most perfect, is called from its color the yellow spot. This is only one six-thousandth of an inch in diameter, yet it produces the most perfect sensation of vision. A little nearer to the nose is another spot, which, though full of fibers of the optic nerve, is absolutely insensible to light and is therefore called the "blind" spot. This can be easily proved by putting two big dots three inches apart on a piece of paper, closing the right eye and looking at the left hand dot and moving the paper toward you till the left hand dot disappears.

Helmholtz in his lecture tells us that "this blind spot is so large that it might prevent our seeing eleven moons if placed side by side, or a man's face at a distance of only six or seven feet," and that "Mariotte, who discovered the phenomenon, amused Charles II. and his court by showing them how they might see each other with their heads cut off."

SHOD WITH IRON.

A Highland Robber Who Got a Dose of His Own Medicine.

We are told in Sir Walter Scott's "Tales of a Grandfather" that in the reign of James I. of Scotland a highland robber chief named MacDonald plundered a poor widow of two of her cows and that she in her anger vowed that she would never wear shoes again till she had carried her complaint to the king for redress.

"It is a false boast," replied the bandit. "I will have you shod myself before you can reach the court." To carry out his threat he caused a smith to nail shoes to the woman's naked feet and then thrust her forth, wounded and bleeding, on the highway. The widow, however, faithful to her word, as soon as her wounds had healed went to the king and told him of this atrocious cruelty.

James heard her with mingled pity and indignation, and in righteous retribution caused MacDonald and twelve of his followers to be seized and shod with iron shoes as they had done to the poor widow. In this condition they were exhibited to the public for three days and then executed.

Its Other Name.

"How some people do pose," said a matter of fact man. "They use great, big words just to make people think that they are smart. I think that the weakest of all affectations is that of using what is called 'big language' instead of those simple terms which at first present themselves to every person of common sense.

"At my home the other day a young lady astonished my household by asking the loan of a 'diminutive argenteous, truncated cone, convex on its summit and semiperforated with symmetrical indentations.'

"She wanted a thimble."

A Novelist's Characters.

Stevenson said that George Meredith once read him some chapters of "The Egoist" while it was still in manuscript. As the character of the Egoist developed he (Stevenson) grew more and more uncomfortable till at last he interrupted the reading and said, "Now, own up, Meredith, you drew Sir Willoughby from me." Meredith burst into his Homeric laugh and said: "No, no, my dear fellow—he is all of us. But I found him," tapping his own breast, "mainly here."—William Archer's "Real Conversations."

Going.

Mrs. Nexdore—That piano we bought for our daughter was a great bargain. We bought it at an auction, you know. Mrs. Peppprey—Oh, that may account for it! Mrs. Nexdore—Account for what? Mrs. Peppprey—The fact that it's going, going, going.

Woman's Rights.

Hettie—I believe in woman's rights. Gertie—Then you think every woman should have a vote? Hettie—No, but I think every woman should have a voter.

The civilized savage is the worst of all savages.—Weber.

I Am Strong Now And Do My Own Work.

Nervous System Was Exhausted and Pains Were Almost Unbearable—Health Restored by

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

As a convalescent food there is nothing to be compared to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Gradually and certainly this treatment enriches the weak watery blood, restores vitality to the wasted nervous system and builds up the body generally.

If you are pale, weak, nervous, irritable and unable to sleep or rest there is health and strength awaiting you in the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. J. Hatcher, 224 Sherbrooke street, Peterboro', Ont., and whose husband is a moulder at the Hamilton Foundry, states: "I had an attack of inflammatory rheumatism, which left me in a very run-down state of health, and in fact my whole nervous system seemed exhausted and worn out. I could not sleep, and at times the pains in my head were almost unbearable. As a result of these symptoms I was unable to attend to my housework, and felt miserable most of the time.

On the advice of a friend, I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and can say that it has proved of very great benefit to me. I am able to do my own work now, and feel stronger and healther than I have for years. I can truthfully state that this is due to the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which I consider a great health builder."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food 50 cents a box, six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the poetrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author are on every box.

Garden paths can be kept free from weeds and grass by pouring over them boiling hot suds on wash day, putting a handful of salt in each bucket of suds.

MINARD'S LINIMENT Lumberman's Friend.

The last of the gladiolus bulbs and the tuberoses that have been reserved for late planting should now be started into growth, before the dry hot weather.

NO ALCOHOL IN IT—Alcohol or other volatile matter which would impair strength by evaporation, does not in any shape enter into the manufacture of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Nor do climatic changes affect it. It is as servicable in the Arctic Circle as in the Torrid Zone, perhaps more useful in the higher latitudes, where man is more subject to colds from exposure to the elements.

The adjustment of the canvass on plain goods should receive careful attention. It must be firmly basted to the right side of the material upon which the embroidery is to be executed, or the work will be hopelessly crooked.

MINARD'S LINIMENT is used by Physicians.

Quite a fashionable novelty this season are the hand decorated buttons for shirt-waists with a cross-stitch design. From the pattern given a small figure may be designed which can be used for these.

A Singular Coincidence.

One Sunday afternoon in the summer of 1889 Mrs. K., a northern woman, said to her husband: "I don't know why it is, but all the afternoon I have been thinking of our old friend, Emma, in Natchez, Miss. We have not heard from her for several years. I believe that I will write to her." She did so. The letter was mailed that evening. It would reach Natchez on the next Tuesday. On Tuesday morning Mrs. K. received a letter from Emma, dated Sunday afternoon, commencing: "My dear Mrs. K., I don't know why it is, but I have been thinking of you all the afternoon and concluded that I would write to you. It has been several years since I have heard from you." Hence these two ladies, one in the far south, the other in central Illinois, were thinking of each other, writing in almost the same language and evidently at the same moment.

Where It Is Always Leap Year.

In one part of "all the Russias," the province of Ukraine, it is always leap year as far as the female privilege of proposing is concerned. It is said to be customary there when a young woman falls in love with a man for her to go to his father's house and in the most tender and pathetic manner plead with the young man to take her as his wife. She promises the most submissive obedience to his will if he will but accept her. If the young man says, "I beg that you will excuse me from this," she tells him that she is resolved not to depart until he shall promise to take her for better or worse. She accordingly takes up her abode there and remains until he is wooed and won or until he ends the siege by fleeing to parts unknown.

The Snake and the Eagle.

The American consul at Guayaquil, Ecuador, tells a good story about the difficulties he has had to keep a monkey on the consulate premises because of the depredations of the boa constrictors, and these agile little pets must keep a constant lookout for them. If Jocko drops into a doze he is likely to "wake up dead."

On the occcasion with which the story deals a monkey's life was saved by the picture of the American eagle. The consulate sign all over the world is a fine reproduction of the king of birds in fall color and with outspread wings. A new sign had just been received and was waiting on a chair inside the room. A big boa constrictor chased the house monkey across the yard and through the open window. Jocko was making a good race, but a losing one. He was in the corner, quaking with fear and very near death's door, when his pursuer confronted the picture of the eagle in its menacing attitude. A snake fears eagles even more than it craves monkeys, and that particular reptile turned tail and went out of the window as quickly as if the devil was after it. That monkey was a smart monkey, and now whenever it wants to take a nap it goes to roost over the picture of the eagle.

Why the House Fell Down.

"We had built a hut of wattle branches to shelter us from the wind. In the middle of the night I dreamed that I was shooting rabbits in the bracken of Essex and suddenly awoke to find myself covered with vegetable matter. Every one has experienced the curious feeling of hopeless bewilderment which comes over a man when he wakes in the dark among strange surroundings. I found that one of our camels had literally eaten us out of house and home, for he had broken his tether in the night, walked over and devoured the wattled branches of our hut to such an extent that the sides and roof collapsed upon our sleeping forms."

The Eye of a Giraffe.

Giraffes are the most difficult of all animals to take by surprise. No matter from what direction you may approach the giraffe is sure to discover you. It has been called the original "rubberneck." It is not generally known that nature, because of the height of its eyes from the ground, has supplied it with a talent peculiarly its own for making observations. As a matter of fact, a giraffe can see in all directions at the same time without moving its head. The eyes are large and prominent and so placed at the side of the head that, bulging out as they do, they are capable of seeing backward as well as forward.

The Sea of Space.

The human mind cannot comprehend what is meant by the four little words in the expression "the sea of space." If the volume of "space" included within our solar system—which is perhaps but a single train of planets among hundreds of millions of a similar kind—were occupied by one single globe 5,000,000,000 miles in diameter it would be but as a feather in the marvelous spread of "vacancy" surrounding it. In fact, it has been calculated that in the space occupied by our solar system 2,700,000,000,000,000 globes the size of our earth could revolve, each at a distance of 500,000 miles from the other

WM. HANDLEY at his own expense has made an excellent cinder road from the Main Street up to his stables. This piece of road clearly solves the street building question for this town. The cinders can be had in large quantities at the coke ovens, the cost of hauling is small and the road when completed is about as perfect as a road can be.

THE annual school meeting will take place at the school house to-morrow at 11 a.m. when a trustee will be elected to take the place of the retiring trustee, Dr. Bonnell. Every householder and others interested in school matters should be present The annual school meetings in this province are not usually well attended, and sometimes considerable "kicking" is done by parties who studiously avoid the annual meeting which is the proper place to ventilate all complaints. Show your interest in the chief educational institution of the town and your appreciation of the trustees and teachers efforts, by being present to-morrow.

THE memorial to the government re incorporation was drawn up on May 13th, but still the necessary promise from McBride is not forthcoming and the incorporation of the town must be delayed for absolutely no reason other than the indifference and negligence of the government to answer a simple question. Will McBride promise to introduce special legislation ratifying the agreement between the town and Coal Company, or will he not? The determination of this question should not require longer than a few minutes' deliberation. He wired on the 15th and managed to entirely evade the question at stake but stated that the attorney-general was writing. Nine days have passed and still the letter is not to hand.

THE course now definitely adopted by the government in regard to the Flathead coal and oil lands will undoubtedly result in much litigation, which will keep the lands tied up for a long time and will end in the real prospector being euchred out of his rights by speculators who have the means of putting up an expensive legal fight. While the government has proved itself too weak to assume the responsibility of determining the priority right it still demands the full license fee of $100 without guaranteeing a title. In addition to this such an authority as Sir H. Tupper, president of the Provincial Conservative Association has expressed his doubts as to the power of the executive council in over riding the statutes by adding such conditions to the license form.

FOR OUR LIFE'S BATTLE

GOD'S DISTURBING HAND AWAKENS OUR LATENT POWERS.

THE LESSON TO BE LEARNED

We Must Learn to Depend Upon Ourselves, So Far As Human Beings May Depend Upon Themselves—Whom the Lord Loveth He Chasteneth—How the Elements of a Strong Character Are Acquired.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 12.—In this sermon the loving care of God in dealing with his children and the way in which he fits them for the battle of life are graphically described under the similitude of the eagle and its young. The text is Deuteronomy xxxii., 11, "As the eagle stirreth up her nest."

The war goddess has crowned the eagle "monarch of the air." His throne is the inaccessible cliff, his diadem the noontide sun, his footstool the morning clouds, his playground the vast expanse of infinite space. His keenness of eye, boldness of flight, sharpness of claw, merciless destructiveness of beak, cause him to be dreaded in mountainous lands, as the huge jaws and powerful claws of the lion cause him to be dreaded in the African forests.

But, though the eagle has been called the monarch of the air, as the lion has been called the monarch of the fields, yet the eagle, like the lion, never had royal pedigree. By that word "royal" I mean a noble, brave and fearless ancestry. The eagle is not of heroic mould. He is a cringing, fawning, contemptible coward. Though he is a raptorial bird and loves to banquet off the quivering flesh of a newly slain carcass, the blood which flows through his own arteries is pumped from a craven heart. In terror this mighty winged flier will flee before the little king bird, hardly larger than a bedwarfed English sparrow. Confined in a cage with a small barnyard fowl, the domestic bird has been known to make the eagle beg for mercy as a school-yard bully will whine before an outraged youth half his size.

"Many reputations are undeserved altogether," once wrote an observant naturalist. "Let us not in this connection trouble now about statesmen, poets or authors, but take from natural history a familiar illustration, that of the eagle. The great strength of the eagle enables it to prey upon creatures that have no power of defending themselves from his terrible swoop, but we must not allow ourselves on this account, as our fathers did, to magnify him into a type of magnanimity and courage. In true courage he is not superior to most of the smaller hawks, and certainly inferior to the falcons, which will drive away this so-called 'monarch of the air' when he approaches too near their nests. So that, really, when we remember what a fame the eagle has always had for magnanimity and for courage, it is obvious, in view of the facts, that he, like many other birds and men, has obtained a reputation which is undeserved."

But, though the eagle is a cowardly bird in reference to his own life, no sooner does he become a parent than he is transformed into a daring, valiant protector of his young. No sooner are the dull white colored eggs deposited in the nest which the twain have builded upon the tops of the dizzy heights, or upon the ledge of a precipice, than the parent birds are ready to protect these nests at any cost.

Yes, yes; parental affection transforms the craven bird into a fierce, intrepid champion, capable of sublime self-sacrifice in defence of its offspring. Yet in our text we find him, in spite of that tender affection, disturbing the young birds and turning them out of their home. What does the Bible mean by comparing this strange conduct with God's providential dealing? Why does God, as a loving Father, treat his children in this seemingly rough way as the eagle bird pushes her offspring? For you must remember that we do not have to go entirely to this figure of the eagle bird to be taught the lessons that God's hand sometimes smites a loving blow, as well as gives a loving caress. In the epistle to the Hebrews we are taught that chastisement is one of the proofs God gives us of his affection. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth."

First, God, like the parental eagle, stirs up our nests in order that we may learn how to depend upon ourselves, as well as upon Him. He plunges us into the abyss of trouble in order that we, as fledglings, may learn to fly on and up. He tumbles us down so that we may soar higher than the cliffs upon which we are born, higher than the mountains whose bald heads are frozen amid perpetual snows, and higher than even the morning clouds that have hovered over us in many benedictions. He treats us just as a true parent should always treat his child. Some few weeks ago I was visiting upon the ranch of a wealthy man in California. He turned and said to me: "No young man ever amounts to anything unless he is compelled to work for his own mental and physical and spiritual development. So firmly do I believe it is the mountain upon the man and not the man upon the mountain that brings man to the highest development for which God intended him that I have compelled my boys to work for every cent they have received, even when they were little children. I never give them anything without a return. If they want spending money they must earn it by painting the fences or cutting the wood or gathering the walnuts. If they want a gun or a riding horse they must buy it with their own money which they have earned. I have not told them that each year they have an $8,000 income, which was left them by a dead relative, and that at twenty-one years of age they will be independently rich. I know that knowledge would ruin them. I make them work for every cent they spend. In their working I am developing two of the finest boys in all this part of the country."

That earthly parent is developing his children by work. Cannot we realize God is developing us spiritually, mentally and physically by work, and hard work? Why were the old Highlanders, born amid the Scottish heather, of heroic mold? We have read that in the chivalric times the Scottish crusaders were being driven back, when an old Highland chief took from his girdle the leathern bag which encased the heart of the dead Bruce. He flung it far into the ranks of the enemy, as he cried: "Thou brave heart of a mighty Bruce, lead us on to victory: Lead us on! Lead us on!" Then the fleeing Highlanders turned and charged where the dead Bruce would have led them. Oh, how we thrill at the story of that mighty deed!

In the southern parts of Europe all that the inhabitants had to do for centuries was to tickle the soil and it would laugh with plenty. While among those northern snow-clad hills not only did the inhabitants have to fight human enemies, but climatic ones. Any man who wrested a harvest from the New Hampshire valleys or from the Scottish highlands had by necessity to be strong of brain and powerfully muscled of arm. It was the climatic obstacles which made the New Englanders and the Scottish clans the mighty men they were and are, and it is trouble, great trouble, which always develops men. The old parental eagle pushes her fledglings off the nest to teach her young how to fly. God pushes us one and all out into the abyss of fathomless trial to teach us how to take care of ourselves. God does not want to run a perpetual nursery. He wants to make us of men and women of fully developed powers. He disturbs us from our places of ease and comfort and thrusts us forth into scenes of conflict and difficulty in order that we may learn to use the spiritual powers with which we are endowed, and to teach us in dire extremity what infinite resources there are in him for every one of his children who looks confidently up to him and cries, "Our Father."

God again stirs up our nests and pushes us off our eyries, as the eagle does its young, to show us our limitations as well as our possibilities. The eaglet has to learn what it cannot do as well as what it can do. It must be taught in one sense how to depend upon itself; it must be taught in another sense how it must depend upon the parent bird. The Bible in the beautiful figure of my text pictures the old eagle, when the right time comes, stirring up the nest and pushing her young off the cliff. Oh, yes, that is beautiful, but the next statement of the verse is just as beautiful. When the young bird drops down and down and the fluttering wings grow weaker and weaker, then the fledgling gives a faint, frightened call for help. Then what happens? Why, the old bird at once starts to the rescue. Swifter than any sea gull ever dropped into the waters to clutch a fish, swifter than ever a hawk pounced upon a chicken in the barnyard, the old mother bird starts to save her young. How? She swoops down below the fluttering eaglet and, rising with outstretched wings, receives it on her shoulders and bears it aloft into safety. Is not this a beautiful symbol of God's care for his children? The psalmist says, "He walketh upon the wings of the wind." Yes; that is like the eagle. He pushes us off the nest, but he does not leave us to perish. He is near, and underneath us are the everlasting arms. When we are losing our strength and cry to him, he bears us up. Do you not see the beautiful teachings of my text? "As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings."

The words of the text teach us that we must learn our limitations and how to trust God, and to depend upon God, as well as to learn how to depend upon ourselves. We must learn to trust ourselves to the heavenly Father's strength and care, as the eaglet trusts the mother bird. It is a lesson of dependence as well as of effort. As we must learn from the text the duty of depending upon ourselves, so we must also learn the duty of absolute dependence upon God.

Have you and I ever stopped to fully consider how Christ's earthly life was meant to be an object lesson for sinful men, as the flapping wings of the old eagles are meant to be visible object lessons to teach the young eagles how to fly?

But there is still another great lesson from the figure of an old parent eagle stirring up her nest. After the young birds have once been pushed off the eyrie and learned their own limitations, and also learned to trust the parent, then they are ready to be taught by the parent birds by object lessons. When the eaglet once learns that if it does not obey the parent bird it will be punished, then it will not only willingly, but after awhile gladly, obey what the mother and father bird teach it to do. First comes fear, then trust, then the attempt to imitate and to do as the parent bird does.

It has never been my privilege to see an old eagle teaching her young how to fly, but Sir Humphry Davy, the great English chemist, once saw this interesting spectacle. He gives a full description of the scene. First, the eagles followed out exactly the picture of my text. The young birds, with fear and trembling, clung to the rocks where they were hatched, but the old birds said to themselves, "This won't do; this won't do. These young birds must be taught to fly." So the parent birds first tried to coax the young to leave the nest. Then, when coaxing accomplished nothing they struck right and left with their beaks. With their powerful talons they scattered the nest. Then they gave the young a big push, and off the fledglings went. Then the young were carried back to the nest by the broad wings of the parent bird. The mother and father bird seemed to stop awhile to have a little talk. They seemed to say: "Now, children, you must obey me, whether you will or no. And, as you must obey me I want you to do it willingly. I want you to follow my every movement. See how I raise my wings so? I beat them in the air just so. And now I begin to circle round and round. Come, boys; come, girls. That is right. Now, try again. Are you ready) Here we go up and up and up. See how easy it is."

Let me describe this object lesson in almost the same language with which Sir Humphry Davy described it when he saw the two old eagles by their actions, teaching their young how to fly above the crags of Ben Nevis: "After the old birds had coaxed the eaglets off the eyrie they made small circles, which the young eaglets tried to imitate. Then the parent birds made larger and larger circles in a gradually ascending spiral until the birds, old and young, were finally lost to view in the great heaven of blue." Ah, yes, the old eagles teach the young eagles to fly, first, by the sharp blow of the beak and the pushing off the nest; second, by the rescue and the bringing back to the nest; third, by the object lessons, which say: "Come, children, do as I am doing now. Come, lift your wings as my wings flap, and go up and up." God teaches us how to fly by pushing us off into the great abyss of trouble. He rescues us by the infinite power of the atoning cross. He then teaches us how to go up and up and up by the object lessons of Christ's earthly life.

But there is still another lesson to be learned from the old eagle stirring up her nest. She pushes out her young in order to make room for the next batch of fledgelings. If she did not do this there would be only one brood hatched in the nests. Thus the eagle's offspring would only consist of two or three or four young. But no sooner does the old eagle finish raising one family than she prepares to raise another batch of fledgelings.

Have you ever considered how soon this old earth would be overcrowded and an unfit place in which to live if God did not push the generations on and up? This is an age of the slaughter of the innocents. Life is in mortal combat for life. The earth is soaked with blood. The guillotine never stops its endless chop. Every lullaby has a correspondent death rattle. Every cradle implies a grave. So rapidly can shell life propagate that one tiny cell can reproduce itself one thousand million times in a month. A common codfish lays between eight and nine million eggs every year. But, though the human race does not reproduce itself as rapidly as the insectile world, or even as the cattle, yet, if allowed to live on this earth uninterruptedly, it would soon be impossible for the growing members of the human family to exist.

New generations come, and room must be made for them. The infant leaves the cradle to a successor and becomes the youth, the youth passes on to manhood and on to old age, and the younger generations tread upon his heels at every step. And last he passes on into eternity. What then? The apostle says, "It doth not yet appear what we shall be," but we know enough of that life to be full of hope. To those who through Christ have made peace with God there is the promise of continued development. "They that wait on the Lord," says the prophet, "shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary, and they shall walk and not faint." In that heavenly state there shall be neither hunger, nor pain, nor weariness, nor sickness, nor death. Even the eagle, long lived as it is, grows old and dies, but there we shall live forever. And the love of our Father in heaven is eternal. The eagle's affections are transferred from one brood to the next, but nothing can separate us from the love of God, whose heart is large enough for all his children.

Would you have such a future to anticipate? Then let that power which God promises to impart come even now into your life. The only thing that can blot out that prospect is sin. Dread sin as you would dread the bite of a serpent. Theodore L. Cuyler, the grand old man of the Brooklyn pulpit, graphically described a scene which I have carried in my memory for many years. A peasant living upon the mountain side was on his way home in the evening hour. Tired after a hard day's work, he turned to look down the valley which as a panorama stretched away at his feet. Suddenly he saw a mighty winged eagle begin to lift itself from a distant cliff. Higher and higher it rose, gorgeous amid the fires of the setting sun. Suddenly its movements became labored. It struggled and fought in midair and seemed to be gasping for breath. First one wing became helpless, then the second wing. Then the huge bird, like a stone, shot through the air and fell dead almost at the peasant's feet. The peasant could not understand the cause until he went to the side of the bird and picked up the still warm corpse. Then to his horror there wriggled from between his fingers a tiny serpent that had fastened itself under the bird's wing and sucked the life out of the "monarch of the air." So sin as a venomous, clinging serpent, tries to fasten itself upon us. The mightier winged we are the more anxious that satanic serpent is for our life's blood. But God will to-day not only save us, as the mother eagle does her young, but he does more. Christ has given us his life in order to overcome the power of the serpent. He has died in order that we might live. In this text of an eagle stirring up the nest of her young cannot you feel the touch of a saving Christ?

BANISH THE WRINKLES.

In Many Cases They Are Merely Signs of the Ailments of Women.

A woman's face plainly indicates the state of her health. Wrinkles, which every woman dreads, are not necessarily a sign of age. Pallor of face, wrinkles and a permaturely aged appearance are the outward indication of those ailments that afflict womankind alone, and from which she too often suffers in uncomplaining silence, rather than consult a doctor. In this condition Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are woman's best friend. They actually make new, rich, red blood, and this blood acting upon the nerves and all the organs of the body brings new health and happiness to weak, weary and despondent women. Mrs. John McKerr, Chickney, N.W.T., tells for the benefit of other suffering women how she found new health through the ase of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. "For some years," says Mrs. McKerr, "I was greatly afflicted with the ailments that make the lives of so many of my sex miserable. The suffering I endured can only be understood by those who are similarly afflicted. I tried many medicines but found none that helped me until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These have actually made me feel like a new person, and the suffering I had endured almost continuously has passed away and life is no longer the burden it once seemed. I think these pills worth their weight in gold to all who suffer from female complaints and general prostration."

We ask every suffering woman to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. They will not disappoint you, and the benefit they will give is not for an hour or a day—it is permanent. You can get these pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., at 50 cents a box or six bbxes for $2.50. See that the full name: "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is on the wrapper around every box.

Russia's National Anthem.

The Russian national anthem is the only national hymn which was adopted as such in open competition. Until the time of the Emperor Nicholas I. the English "God Save the King" had served Russia, but Nicholas determined to institute a genuine and native Russian anthem. He announced a competition, open to all musicians, for an original national hymn. A musical committee reduced the thousands of entries to two, and between these, the works of Glinka and Lvoff, the czar himself decided. The highly martial character, with the drums and trumpets, of Lvoff's composition won the imperial verdict, and it was decreed as henceforth the Russian national anthem.

Queer Looking Worms.

New Zealand, Australia, the Samoan and the Solomon islands, as well as portions of the Hawaiian group, are the homes of various species of worms with thick, heavy bodies and with a well defined neck connecting the body with a head that is a startling reminder of that of the monkey. In the Sandwich Islands they are called me-ta-luki, which means "creeper with a child's head." An old New Zealand legend says that at one time they were of immense proportions and threatened the extinction of all human life on the islands.

"TEACHER'S PET."

Eight years old and goin' on nine,
Teacher says I'm doin' fine.
Git my lessons every day,
Hardly ever have to stay
After school fer bein' slow—
Ain't so very happy, though,
'Cause the fellers laugh at me,
All but Johnny Baker; he Takes my side. He knows, all right,
I ain't strong enough to fight,
'Cause I hurt myself one day
Fallin' off a farmer's sleigh,
And the doctor cut my side
Awful deep, and ma she cried,
And since then I'm awful thin,
And, gee whiz, it hurts like sin
When I try to jump and run.
So you see it ain't no fun
When the fellers laugh and say,
"Fraidy cat, you dassant play!"
And my eyes git kinder wet
When they call me "teacher's pet!"

Gee! They never talked that way
Till I tumbled off the sleigh.
Wunst I licked three kids so quick
That it made 'em good and sick,
And I uster dodge and run
Jes' as fast as any one.
Now when recess comes along
I jes' wait to hear the gong
Call us back to work a lot,
'Cause that's all the fun I've got.
When the kids play "one old cat"
I jes' set and hold the bat,
Wishin' I could cork the ball
Like I uster do las' fall.
Yesterday when Reddy Lee
Seen me settin' there, says he:
"Fellers, look at 'teacher's pet!'
He's afraid to play, you bet.
'Cause he knows I'd smash his face
All around this whole darn place!"
Johnny Baker seen me cry,
And he blacked old Reddy's eye,
And he made his nose bleed too.
Gosh, I wisht that I could do
Somethin' good for Johnny! He
Allers does so much fer me.
Maybe 'twon't be very long
Till my side gits good and strong.
If it ever does I bet
They won't call me "teacher's pet!"

Psychic Moment.

Said the man with the cane:

"I took a trip out into the country with a friend of mine the other day, and we had a great time and a hearty laugh. I've been living in the city all my life, and, of course, I didn't know how to harness a horse.

"What has that to do with the trip in the country? Just this: My friend and I went up to Doylestown, and as the day was bright and balmy we thought we'd like a carriage ride. So we hired a horse and buggy and drove into the country among the Bucks county hills. At the noon hour we were kind to the horse and, taking every bit of harness from him, allowed him to eat his lunch in comfort, while we munched our sandwiches.

"Well, it was all right until we started to put the harness on again. Then the discovery was made that neither of us was able to do the trick. We were stuck, but by doing a great deal of thinking we managed to get all the harness in place except the bit. We tried to put that in the horse's mouth, but the animal wouldn't open his mouth for a cent.

"'Well,' said my companion, 'we'll simply have to wait; that's all.'

"'Wait for what?' I asked in surprise.

"'Why,' was the reply, 'we'll have to wait until the horse yawns.'"

In the Palm Room.

"Why do they call it the palm room?" asked the bride as they entered the hotel dining room. "The palms are very few and only varnished ones."

"The waiters, the waiters, my dear! They all have palms, and they must be silvered by the guests."

A Strike.

"Bobby, here's your penny, and you must go right to bed."

"Pa, I want more pay and longer hours."

An inquisitive man is a creature naturally very vacant of thought itself and therefore forced to apply to foreign assistance.—Steele.

Story of Queen's Park, Toronto.

It is not strange, perhaps, that Toronto's most valuable park should have given the city more trouble than all the others put together. Queen's Park was the cause of much bad feeling between the Toronto University authorities and the citizens, but the park was worth it all. The property was, in the first place, acquired by King's College (the forerunner of 'Varsity) from D'Arcy Boulton, William Dummer Powell, and John Beverley Robinson. The first transaction was between the college and Boulton, in 1828, the latter receiving £1,300. The land acquired from Messrs. Powell and Robinson was more in the nature of a presentation on the part of the latter gentlemen. All sorts of conditions and agreements hedged the gift, and these became a source of difficulty later on. The university found the park something of a white elephant on its hands, for in 1859 it was quite willing to lease it to the city. The park had been neglected, and in promising to put the property in proper condition, and keep it so, the city was giving value. There was always trouble, however, about the conditions imposed by Messrs. Powell and Robinson, both of whom had insisted that only certain streets should lead into the park, that houses should not front on it, etc. In 1883 the trouble became acute, the bursar of the university protesting against boys playing ball in the park, and against citizens treating it as though it were an ordinary thoroughfare. The city had plainly failed to keep its agreement, so, on January 31, 1883, after years of bickering and litigation, Mr. Justice Street declared the lease void, and the park was once more in the possession of the university. This cleared the air, and soon negotiations were under way for a fresh understanding. The result was that the city finally secured a perpetual lease of the park and avenue by paying $6,000 a year to endow two chairs at the university. At the time of the conferences it was estimated by the university people that the whole property was worth half a million dollars.

Brain Work Doesn't Kill.

In the lecture on longevity delivered last week before the Royal College of Physicians, Sir Herman Weber, himself an octogenarian, gave official support to the doctrine which we recently set forth in this column—that brainwork does not kill, but rather the reverse. A few of his instances are Sophocles, Plato, Galen, Cicero, Moltke, Bismarck, Mommsen and Gladstone, to whom we might add Hobbes, Carlyle, with Spencer and Kelvin among living men. The facts are that brainwork increases the supply of blood to the nerve cells, and promotes their nutrition and health. Mosso, an Italian, laid a man on a delicately balanced table, and showed that the head end sank whenever the subject did a mental sum or any mental brainwork. The increased weight of his head was due to the life-giving blood. The truth is that brainwork, as such, never killed anybody. —London Chronicle.

Steamer General Slocum Takes Fire While Crowded Down With Excursionists—Victims Mostly Children—More Than 2,000 on Board--Hundreds Leaped to Death Into the Water.

A New York despatch says that five hundred persons, mostly children, perished Wed. by the burning of the excursion steamer General Slocum, near Hell Gate, in the East river. The Slocum, having on board the annual Sunday Sshool excursion of St. Mark's German Lutheran Church, was on her way up the river to a resort on long Island Sound.

When just off about 125th Street persons on shore saw smoke and flame spring from the upper part of the crowded steamer. A panic ensued on the boat almost immediately. The crowds on the forward decks, panic-stricken, began to spring over board or to crowd to the after part of the boat.

The screams of the terrified passengers could be heard on shore and hundreds of small boats put off to the rescue. Owing to the rocks on either side of the channel at this point, it was impossible to beach the vessel. The captain stuck to his post at the wheel and headed the vessel straight through Hell Gate for North Brother Island, where she went aehore in the shallow water.

Several hundred feet of open water lay between the burning steamer and the shore, and many persons perished either in the water or on the burning vessel, after she was beached. It is estimated that the steamer was carrying over 2,000 persons. The general Slocum is the largest excursion steamer in these waters. She has plied for years to Rockaway Beach, and could carry about 4,000 passengers.

The latest reports of the disaster on the steamer General Slocum is that at least 500 have been burned. Many were rescued by the tugs and other vessels, which promptly came to the rescue when the flames broke out.

The pastor of St. Mark's church, Rev. George C. F. Haas, was on board with all his family and it was reported was lost. An eye-witness who saw much of what happened to the boat, said: "The steamers whistle was blowing for assistance as she came up the river. I saw several persons jump into the water before she was headed for the northwest shore of North Brother Island. Her position made it impossible for those aboard of her to reach shore except by swimming. I saw perhaps fifty or a hundred persons, mostly women and children jump overboard. Most of the throng was on the hurricane deck when we plainly saw a portion of it collapse. Many must have been instantly killed."

JUMPED FROM THE BLAZE.

As far as eye-witnesses can determine, the flames originated on the forward part of the boat. Persons who saw the accident from the shore say that almost instantly persons who occupied places on the forward deck began to jump overboard. Policemen in the Bronx and Harlem saw the blazing boat steaming up the river and immediately began to turn in alarms for ambalances and fire boats. All the boats at North Brother Island were sent to the assistance of the people on the water and as fast as they were brought ashore were cared for in the pavilions there. The patients in the hospitals on the island became almost insane from the fright and at the terrible scenes they witnessed.

SUCKED IN BY WHIRLPOOL.

Part of the crowd on the doomed steamer were children, and there was little hope for them after they had gone overboard. The current in the east river at this point is very strong and scores of the little ones were sucked in by the whirlpools at Hell Gate. One man who went out in a rowboat said that he saw at least fifty children perish in these whirlpools before he could reach them. Persons on tug boats say that several hundred bodies have been washed or were towed or carried in boats to the shore of North Brother Island. Almost evecy woman who was taken away was calling for her children.

200 BODIES RECOVERED.

They have recovered over two hundred bodies from the burned steamer.

Body of Unknown Man Found.

The decomposed body of an unknown man was taken out of the Red river Wednesday evening at 9.05 by the police. The corpse was discovered by Messrs. Wilcox, Lavoie, White, and Young, who were out for a sail in a gasoline launch. The body was first seen in the Assiniboine river at Winnipeg, near the C.N.R. bridge, and the men in the launch towed it to the foot of Lombard street, and there notified Constable Thomas Dukelow. Sergeant Blair was also called to the spot, and after he had notified the coroner, he acted on his instructions and had the body moved to Thompson's morgue.

There were no marks of violence on the body, and from its badly decomposed state it would be difficult to say how long it had been in the water. The police have no record of any man missing from the city, and think that the body has floated down some distance.

He bore the appearance of a laborer, and measured 5 feet 6 or 7 inches was stout of build and dark complexioned. His hair and mustache, the latter rather heavy, was dark brown, with grey streaks. The top of his head was bald. His age would be about fifty. He wore a brown frieze coat, black waistcoat, black shirt, and heavy gray tweed trousers. His boots were of heavy leather, and were worn over a pair of white cotton socks. He also wore a leather belt.

There was absolutely nothing on his person to give a clue to his identity. In his pockets there were two purses, a tobacco pouch, and a jackknife. There was also a carefully-folded piece of paper without any writing on it.

Little Girl's Sad Death.

The fourteen-year-old daughter of William Lockston, of Galt, Ont., while playing in a grove the other day, near her home, found a biscuit, which she ate. Shortly afterwards she became very ill, and upon a doctor being called in it was found she was suffering from the effects of arsenic poisoning. Everything possible was done to save the child's life, but it was unavailable. The biscuit had evidently been placed in the grove for the purpose of poisoning dogs.

JAIL POPULATION.

Inspector of Prisons' 36th Annual Report Shows a Large Increase—The Cost of Maintenance.

The thirty-sixth annual report of Dr. Chamberlain, inspector of prisons, presented before the prorogation of the Legislature, says the sanitary condition of many of the jails has been improved, but there are still many in a very dilapidated condition and unsafe for the custody of prisoners. In Northern Ontario eight new lock-ups have been fitted up. He suggests that on account of the great extent of territory in New Ontario, the moving of prisoners and lunatics from the outlying districts to the central institutions has become so expensive that it would be well to consider the advisability of establishing a small prison and also an asylum at some point north of Lake Superior.

Committals to Jails.

The number of committals in 1903 was 9,261, nearly 1,000 in excess of the previous year. Crimes against the person have increased during the year by some 116 over the previous year, but are still less than any other year since 1877. Crimes against property have been lower than they have been for twenty-five years, the total for last year being 2,190. Crimes against public morals and decency remain about the same as the previous year. Offences against public order and peace are slightly greater than the previous year. The other crimes with which prisoners were charged were about the same as in the previous year. Committals for drunkenness were some 300 in excess of the previous year. The number of prisoners sent from our province to the Penitentiary for the past year in excess of those of the previous year were 21; and to the Reformatory for Boys, 22; and the Central Prison, 157. The total number of prisoners in the jails on Sept. 30, 1903, was 617.

Thirteen prisoners escaped, eight of whom were recaptured. There were 38 deaths. Of the prisoners 1,221 were females; 3,397 were married and 5,864 unmarried. Those who could not read or write numbered 1,362 and 6,363 were intemperate.

Cost of Maintenance.

The cost of maintaining the jails in the province for food, clothing and fuel was $57,252.84; for salaries, $86,081.95, and for ordinary repairs $7,122.23. The average cost for food, clothing and fuel was $6.18 for each prisoner committed. The greatest number of prisoners at one time during the year was 1,090; the lowest number 299. The average cost per day per prisoner was 24c.

It is worthy of note that all the jails of the province in their returns of the earnings of prisoners only report $32.89 as the total earnings of prisoners for the year. This sum was derived from the Cornwall jail.

Central Prison.

The report for the Central Prison shows 713 committals. There were 303 in custody at the commencement of the year, making the total 1,016, compared with 1,019 the previous year. The average daily population was 353. Of the number committed 455 were for the first time, 130 second, 59 the fourth and the remaining 44 from five to 15 times.

There were committed for vagrancy 201, as compared with 140 the previous year. The number discharged on ticket-of-leave was 34, and 18 were discharged on remission of sentence, together being a fraction under 7½ per cent. of the whole number of commitments. Of the total number committed one was a total abstainer, 209 were temperate and 503 intemperate. The illiterate were 67, read only 14 and 632 could both read and write. The total stay of prisoners was 128,850 days, an increase of 10,350 as compared with 1902. The gross per capita cost per diem for maintenance was 49.04c. against 55.61c. in the previous year a reduction on the previous year of 6.57c. per diem.

The total cost of maintenance outlay for the year was $63,192.77, against $58,748.32 the preceding year.

Reformatory for Boys.

In the Reformatory for Boys the number of inmates at the beginning of the year was 112, committed 44. Thirty-two were pardoned, 15 transferred to the Central Prison, three escaped and 86 were in residence at the close of the year.

The Mercer Reformatory for Females receives 111 guests, as compared with 117 the year before. Sixty-nine were there at the beginning of the year, and 64 at the close. Twenty-one were illiterate, and 86 intemperate. In the Refuge for Girls there were 72 at the beginning of the year, and 10 were committed during the year. The average population of reformatory and refuge was 133, as against 141 the preceding year.

New Provincial Crest.

A point of interest to crest collectors and others has just been decided by Premier Ross as a result of the late fire in Toronto. Nearly all the dies of the crests used with the stationery in the various departments were destroyed in the Rolph, Smith warehouse. These crests presented a great variety of design, various decorations having been introduced.

The question of adopting the correct arms of the province had been under consideration for some time at the instance of the Provincial Assistant Secretary. The fire having provided the opportunity, Mr. Ross has determined that in future all the crests will be uniform and according to the King's warrant.

A copy of this was exhibited the other day, of the date Sept. 21, 1868, Albert William Woods, Lancaster Herald, having prepared it. The warrant grants armorial bearings to the several provinces of the Dominion.

A CHARMING MAN.

PERDICARIS OPINION OF MOROCCAN BANDIT.

He Enjoys an Admirable Climate and Excellent Treatment—A Graphic Description of His Capture—Kidnapping as a Fine Art.

The London Daily Mail published a letter the other day written to A. J. Dawson, the novelist and traveller, by Ion Perdicaris, the American citizen who was captured by Rasuli, the Moroccan bandit. It was dated at Tsaradon, June 4, and says: "Nothing more startling and unexpected than the circumstances of our capture could be imagined. A quiet domestic dinner without guests, the windows open, the table a mass of flowers, then suddenly like an avalanche the yelling onset of Rasuli's men. It was a classic scene of rapine and confusion; nor would it be easy to conceive a picture more wild and gloomy than our forced journey—in fact the libretto was perfect.

"It is easy now to write in this strain when we are assured that negotiations for our release are concluding, but during that terrible twenty-four hours' ride over tracks and boulders and in dense thickets where our captors had at times literally to cut their way in order to avoid villages on the beaten track—well, we had no such consolation then, none of any sort indeed."

After describing the dread of which he long had had of being kidnapped on account of his family, Mr. Perdicaris says:

DRAGGED BY RUFFIANS.

"You may conceive my feelings while thus being dragged along by ruffians who began their amiable attentions by clubbing us with rifles and threatening us with their murderous looking curved daggers. I was astonished to learn that our fears were really not well founded. We have learned that Rasuli's chief object is to secure the release of the members of his own kabyle, unjustly, or at least treacherously entrapped by the Bashaw of Tangier, a former friend and foster brother of Rasuli, who had trusted this man and had been betrayed. Whatever ill he may have done, the fact remains that he was betrayed.

The ransom demanded is not so much the price of our release, as the demand for the recouping of the losses inflicted by order of the said Bashaw, from whom Rasuli claims paymeat. Another startling surprise is to find in Rasuli himself the most interesting and kindly hearted native gentleman it has been my good fortune to have known. It is impossible not to like the man, conscious as I am of the injury all at Tangier suffered at his hands."

GOOD MAY RESULT.

After dealing with some private matters and referring to the courage of his wife and the mental anguish she has endured, Mr. Perdicaris expresses the hope that some good will come of the trouble to Tangier and its people. He then proceeds: "Meantime you must not worry about us. I am writing this in a handsome tent placed at our disposition by Moulai Ali, the Massani Sherea. The brightest episode of our detention here was our first sight of him and his brother's, Moulai Ashmet's, caravan, accompanied by an armed escort. Signal guns fired by three Kabyles leagued in defense of their rights under Rasuli's leadership announced the arrival of this welcome relief expedition, which we saw later on winding along the hillside.

"Moulai Ali himself has remained with us ever since. Indeed; he and Rasuli dined with us every evening in the tent. The climate is admirable and a better site for a camp is hard to find. Our release will be very welcome, but it is at hand, so you must not pity us too much."

ANOTHER ALLEGED KIDNAPPING.

The Daily Mail's Tangier correspondent says that Rasuli has received the Sultan's letter concerning his demands, and that unless the bandits formulate fresh conditions the release of Ion Perdicaris may be expected very soon. "I learn," says the correspondent, "that Rasuli is suffering from nervousness and insomnia, and is greatly depressed by the desertion of two of his most important adherents. An unconfirmed report from Megador states that a German has been kidnapped in that district."

Dowie in London.

John Alexander Dowie arrived in London on June 11 from Holland, and made a tour of the hotels, accompanied by his wife and son, and escorted by deacons in search of accommodation. Everywhere he met with refusal, as the hotel managers were afraid of a repetition of the rowdyism which marked Dowie's former stay there. Ultimately, being unable to find lodgings, Dowie proceeded to the Zionist headquarters. These have been connected with the police telephones, in anticipation of a possible onslaught by the mob. The followers of Dowie assembled in Hyde Park the next evening, but their leader did not appear. A considerable number of police were present and there was a few sightseers. Little interest was manifested in the proceedings, which were orderly.

Story of Salmon Fisheries.

The salmon industry in British Columbia, in which so much Ontario capital is invested, is at present the object of much solicitude from the Government. The possibility of the final destruction of this article of commerce has dawned upon Government officials in late years. In addition to spending money for propagation and protection of the species some thought is being given to preserving the fish after it has deposited its spawn. It is one of the mysteries that nature has failed to disclose just why salmon should die, after the spawning period. The same process of nature is not observed in other fish species. It is one of the curious phases of the industry that appeals strongly to those interested in the trade aspects, as well as the scientific problem involved. The spawn is deposited in the Fraser and its tributaries, and in turn is sent down to sea, where the little fish disappear. Where they go and why they do not return for four years the most expert fishermen cannot explain. But in four year they do return, and to the exact tributary in which they were hatched. This has been established, it is claimed, by "tagging." The fish are nearly a uniform size of ten pounds when they swarm back to their native grounds. After spawning the fish continue up stream until exhausted. They never return alive. This peculiar trait is the cause of the destruction of all those which escape the nets and traps of the fishermen. They come in against the tide and refuse to turn their heads except to face the current. The fresh water rapidly changes the salmon. With the wild effort the fish make to get further up stream, fighting the rapids and coming in contact with stones and floating obstacles, the scales are torn off and the bodies gashed until the once sleek, fat, glossy fish is reduced to a most uninviting mass of dark, putrid flesh. Denuded of fins, eyes and with a beak sharpened to the bone, the salmon perish in vast numbers. To save this annual loss of the salmon trade of the Dominion is now the purpose of the Government.—G. C. Porter, in Toronto World.

From the Sublime to the Ridiculous.

"My barnstorming days," says Sir Henry Irving, "seem very distant, yet very dear to me now. I recall with particular pleasure a melodrama of crime in high life in which I toured the English provinces for two very successful seasons. My part called in the first act for a dark stage. In this darkness I fought with an old Earl, threw him heavily, and when he did not rise after the loud thud of his fall, I cried out: 'Great Heavens! What have I done?' Usually the scene impressed and moved my audiences tremendously, but I remember one night in Birmingham, when a coster, with one little witticism, turned my outcry and the darkness and the old Earl's tragic fall into ridicule and laughter. I have never seen that coster, but I remember his voice well. It was a slow, dry voice, like Mark Twain's and it manifested itself just after the fall of my aged and noble antagonist. The old Earl had dropped heavily as usual, and I had cried, 'Great heavens! What have I done?' when the coster spoke up: 'Strike a light, young feller, and we'll have a look.'"

Favorite Japanese Game.

A favorite card game of the Japanese is played as follows: One hundred well known proverbs are selected, each divided into two parts and each part printed on a separate card. The host of the evening has the hundred first halves, which he reads aloud, one by one. The hundred second halves are dealt out to the other players, who place their hands face upward on the "tatami," or thick mat of rice straw, on which they sit. As the first half of any proverb is read the holder of the second half throws it out or, if he sees it unnoticed among his neighbor's cards, seizes it and gives him one of his own. The player who is first "out" wins. It is a very simple game, but it affords great entertainment to the players, for the quick-sighted and keen-witted are constantly seizing the cards of their duller and slower neighbors, and this leads to much laughter and many good-natured sarcasms.

Hideous, Rare Fish.

Mr. S. T. Bastedo, Deputy Commissioner of Fisheries, at Toronto, has received a mounted specimen of an exceedingly interesting and curious fish, which is, so far as is known, the only one of its kind ever taken in Canadian waters. It is a paddle fish or spoon-bill cat, which hitherto has been found only in some of the fresh waters of China and in the Mississippi and its branches. This one was caught in the Spanish River, off the north channel of Lake Huron, by L. Beatty of Barrie.

It is a particularly fine specimen, measuring over 5 feet in length. A spoon-bill that projects about a foot and large fins give the creature a hideous appearance. Where the fish is common, its roe is highly prized on account of the market for caviare.

John Bright's Method.

John Bright had a curious method of guarding against any failure of memory or language in his public speeches. When he had to deliver a speech of importance he wrote a sort of essay on the subject and tore it up. He then wrote another and treated it in the same way, and finally a third. In this way he considered that he had not only exhausted his own thoughts upon the matter in hand but had gained such a command over the language in which it could be expressed that he could never be at a loss for the right word.

Get a Haircut.

Little Margie's father had a very fine head of hair, but her uncle's head was entirely bald. One day when they were all at the dinner table Margie said: "Papa, why don't you get a hair-cut like Uncle Joe's?"

The Kangaroo.

What interests me most is the kangaroo. I had an idea that all kangaroos were alike before I came to Australia. I now know that there are forty-nine varieties, ranging in size from the great gray kangaroo, the male of which measures over seven feet from nose to tail tip, down to the kangaroo rabbit and kangaroo rat. In Sydney and Melbourne they have nearly every variety. I saw some there that were taller than a man, jumping around in fields inclosed by wire fences. They have enormous hind legs, which send them flying along as though they were moved by steel springs. They can leap thirty feet at a jump and can gallop over the country faster on two legs than a horse can on four.

The largest of the kangaroos are the red and gray varieties, which are found all over Australia, being hunted and killed by the thousands. Horses and dogs are bred for the sport. The dogs are a cross between the greyhound and the deerhound, very fleet of foot and very fierce. The big kangaroo is dangerous when brought to bay. It will attack a dog or a man. It backs itself up again a tree and waits for its enemy. As the dog comes up it grasps it with its forepaws and hugs it tightly, while it disembowels it with the single long-nailed claw which it has on each of its hind feet. These claws are as hard as ivory; they are three or four inches in length, and moved by the force of the steel-like legs they cut like a knife.

Sometimes the kangaroos jump into the water when they are hunted, and if the dogs follow them they seize them with their hands, pull their heads under and hold them there until they are drowned. The kangaroos can swim as well as run, and they take to the water when possible.

The kangaroos go about in pairs. You usually see a male and female together, and often spy a little head of a baby kangaroo sticking out of the mother's pouch. The animals are very small when born and they live for eight or nine months in the pouch. It leaves the pouch only when it weighs eight or nine pounds, at which time it becomes too heavy for the mother to carry.—Frank G. Carpenter.

Who Made Stanley?

The United States is a large country and produces many able men. Still the nation is not satisfied with its own. Sir Henry Stanley was not born in the United States. He lived there only about twelve years. Nearly all his newspaper work was done for English journals. His first journey to Africa was at the instance of a London journal and one in New York, but it was stated in the biographies of Sir Edwin Arnold that this famous editor of the London Telegraph conceived the idea of sending Stanley to search for Livingstone. A London paper had previously sent him to Abyssinia. The second journey to Africa was at the expense of the London Telegraph and New York Herald, and Sir Edwin Arnold was again said to be the moving spirit. The third was purely European, and so was the fourth. When his work in Africa was over Stanley accepted knighthood from the King, entered the British Parliament, married an English wife, bought a house in London and an estate in the country. He died in England and may be buried in Westminster Abbey.—St. John Sun.

Winnipeg's Growth.

The phenomenal growth of Winnipeg has given rise to a good deal of speculation as to how many people the metropolis of the west will contain in ten years from now. A number of prominent Winnipeggers interviewed by The Tribune give an estimate of 200,000, and this does not seem to be out of the way, in view of the present expansion. Since 1893 the population has grown as follows:

1894	34,954
1895	37,124
1896	37,983
1897	38,733
1898	40,112
1899	42,548
1900	44,678
1901	48,411
1902	56,741

Opposed to Vivisection.

Mr. Goldwin Smith attended a meeting of the Toronto Humane Society the other day in the London and Canadian Chambers. In the course of a brief address he said that unless science can show that vivisection is absolutely necessary the whole thing should be given up. He said that in his travels in Italy he had seen much cruelty to the dumb animals, and found a general disregard of it on the part of officers of the law in that country; but the world moves, and better conditions can be looked for. Speaking for himself, he had never permitted the docking of tails nor the use of overhead checks on his own horses. He had known instances of habitual stumbling to be caused by a tight check-rein.

Wideawake Jack.

"How much are two and two?" asked the teacher.

"Four," answered Jack.

"How much are five and three?" was the next question.

"Don't know," said Jack.

"Well," said the teacher, "if you had five apples and your mother gave you three more, how many would you have?"

"Then I would have enough," answered Jack.

Canada's Apples in Scotland.

Canadian exporters are year by year gaining a stronger position in the Scotch market. About half of the apples imported into Scotland now are from the Dominion. The system of inspection at Canadian ports and at British ports, whereby the quality of the fruit is in a measure guaranteed, has proved useful to the shipper as well as to the buyer.

THE TRIAL IS OVER.

BIG DAMAGE SUITS BROUGHT TO A SUDDEN END.

Defendants Did Not Call Galloway and Some Other Witnesses.—Judgement Will be Given To-morrow Morning.

The big damage suits in progress at Nelson for over three weeks came to a sudden end on Wednesday. The defense at the termination of Mr. Beard's examination claimed they were satisfied with their case without calling Prof. Galloway, General Manager Stockett and Geologist McEvoy to give evidence. At the conclusion of Mr. Taylor's address Mr. Justice Martin said he would reserve judgement for a few days. A wire was received this morning from Nelson intimating that his lorship would give judgement on Saturday.

Andrew Colville, superintendent, resumed his place in the witness box on Thursday last. He described the explosion as seen by him from the outside and related his experience in going into the mines after the explosion. He agreed with Graham and Drinnan as to the direction of the force. The evidence of witness went to show that the direction of the force was into room 1, machine entry, and out of it as claimed by plaintiffs. The witness was with the miner's committee to examine the mine after the explosion and he described where evidences of coking were found. Cross-examined, the witness stated that the committee concluded that the force came from the east. There were conflicting evidences of force at different points.

The counsel for the defense attempted to submit as evidence the report made on May 7th by Addison and Thos. Stephens, the miners' committee, but the court refused to allow it.

James Ashworth, the English mining expert, was examined by Mr. Bodwell on Friday and his examination lasted until Monday. He was consulting engineer for several English coal properties and kept up a correspondence with the leading authorities of the day. Had spent five days examining the mines in May. The plaintiffs counsel objected to the evidence but it was shown that the natural conditions of the mine had not changed and the examination continued. Witness had heard previous evidence which strengthened his belief that there were sufficient damp and wet areas in district No. 1 of No. 2 mine to saturate the air. He differed with much of Mr. Blakemore's evidence. Watering coal mines was now regarded by the best authorities effective against explosions. Witness cited E. M. Atkinson, Braman, and Martin, three British experts who opposed the watering of mines, and he cited instances where flames had gone over wet areas and avoided dry areas. Coking was caused by gas as well as dust explosions. Witness denied Blakemore's theory of successive coal dust explosions. Witness was the inventor of of the Ashworth-Hepplewhite-Gray lamp. His statement made in print as to a bonnetted Clanny lamp causing an explosion had subsequently been disproved by later experiments. Witness then went fully into percentages of gas found in different parts of the mines. Ethane was found in particles of coal dust; it had ten times the volume of gas and was much more explosive than fire-damp.

Asked as to the explosion, ag[illegible] coal was quan- and explosion. It is the dust in suspension that counts.

The cross examination of witness ended at 11;45 Monday and Davis K. C., called Wm. Fernie, the discoverer of the Crows Nest Coal fields. Mr. Fernie contradicted Mr. Blakemore's evidence to the effect that he (Blakemore) had ordered pipes and part of a water system for use in the mines just prior to his leaving the Company's service. A local executive committee had been appointed to look after the financial affairs of the Company at that time. Witness was a member of that committee and he was sure that no such order had ever been made. Mr. Fernie also contradicted Mr. Blakemore's evidence as to his voluntary severance from the Company.

Jos. Martin, K. C., then called J. T. Beard, of Scranton, Pa., principal of the school of coal mines. Witness had been a mining and civil engineer for 27 years and he proved a very interesting witness. He possessed the happy art of expressing his views clearly and his explanations of technicalities were easily grasped. No. 2 was a gasseous mine, but should not be called a dry and dusty mine from the evidence given by the defendants. The length of time since the explosion, and the stoppages of working faces would decrease the amount of gas given off. The water coming in from the roof and floor would probably be less when he visited the mine than at the time of the explosion. From the evidence given he believed the explosion started in McDonald's level near the face. Once started, it extended. If a gas explosion was assumed the expansion spread in two directions, the one through the room No. 1 and the openings of that district and the other through Beaver and Alder, and across Hunter's level, and so on to the fan shaft. Witness went on to explain reasons for apparent conflictions of evidence in the direction of force. The [illegible] explosion was ignition of the gasseous condition of

The caving in of the roof along McDonald's level and in the neighborhood might have caused the explosion, a large amount of gas being thus suddenly liberated. There is no evidence to show that the explosion caused the cavein, or that the cave-in of the roof followed and was caused by the explosion. If the roof fell first as it may possibly have done, it would account for the explosion and many of the details.

The cross-examination occupied all of Saturday. Mr. Taylor took witness over the finding of the Royal Commission, with which he agreed. The commission recommended watering against his advice. The different systems of watering were gone into. The system in vogue at Coal Creek was good enough for witness. Room 7 was scattered over with fine coke, and this points to a sudden outburst of gas. It would be aa outrage to insist that what was never done elsewhere should be done here. It was clear that scientists had much to learn yet about coal mine explosions. When they settled what was to be done it would be time enough to instruct mine owners what to do. According to the Coal Mines Regulation Act, when a mine is dry and dusty either watering must be done at the working faces before firing and so prevent an explosion, or the haulage ways must be watered to prevent an explosion extending. Here the directions of the government inspector had always been carefully followed and he, the inspector, had reported the mine in a safe condition.

Mr. Taylor made a three hour address on Wednesday in which he made a strong arraignment of his case. The strong points of the plaintiffs' evidence were clearly set forth and some of the arguments advanced by the defendants were subjected to ridicule. He contended that it had been shown that the mines were dry and dusty and that the Company had been negligent in watering the same.

T. R. STOCKETT HAS RESIGNED.

ACCEPTS A MORE LUCRATIVE POSITION AT NANAIMO.

Departure Will Cause General Regret.—R. G. Drinnan Now Acting General Manager.

Rumors that have been in the air for some time to the effect that Thos. R. Stockett, acting General Manager of the C. N. P. Coal Co., had resigned, were confirmed on Tuesday when a FREE PRESS representative called at the Company's office and in an interview with Mr. Lindsey that gentleman made the following statement;—

"Mr. Stockett has resigned his position as Acting General Manager to accept the position of General Manager of the Western Fuel Association at Nanaimo. I, as well as all the Directors, extremely regret this, but the new position is a more lucrative one than the present, and we do not feel justified in standing in the way of Mr. Stockett's advancement. I speak for my co-directors as well as for myself when I say that in the whole history of the Company no one has given to the management such long, loyal and efficient service as Mr. Stockett. The present high degree of efficiency in the operating department is for the most part due to his unfailing energy and large ability and we all very much regret parting with him. Mr. Stockett, too, has been unfailingly courteous to the public, who, I feel sure, will join in the general regret at his leaving Fernie, and wish him good luck in his new management."

Mr. Lindsey was then asked as to his successor. "Mr. Drinnan, General Superintendent, will act as general manager after June 30th when Mr. Stockett's resignation takes effect. I am unable to state anything at present as to who will be appointed to that position. I am going to Toronto in a couple of weeks, after a trip to the coast, when the matter will be taken up with the Directors." Mr. G. L. Pearson, of the Republic Iron and Steel Co., Pennsylvania, assumes the duties of Sales Agent and Superintendent of all Coke Plants on July 1st."

Mr. Stockett was afterwards seen. He expressed deep regret at severing his connections with the Company and the town. He was proud to say that he was on the best of good terms with the Board of Directors and all of his employees from the highest to the lowest. He was making the change solely because the position offered was a more advantageous one than the one he now occupied. He had always performed his duty to the Company, to his employees and to the town as faithfully as he knew how and he entertained nothing but the best of good wishes towards all whom he had come in contact with during his long residence in Fernie.

Thos. R. Stockett Jr., was appointed superintendent of the Morrissey Mines in May 1901. After opening up those mines he was appointed general superintendent of the three mines with headquarters at Fernie. After Mr. Wilson's resignation in Sept. 1901, Mr. Stockett also assumed the general management until Mr. Tonkin's arrival, and since the latter's dismissal Mr. Stockett has enjoyed the Company's full confidence as acting general manager.

Mr. Stockett is an energetic, hard-working man. He expects his employees to do a faithful day's work but he does not ask more or as much from them as himself gives. From early morning until late at night Mr. Stockett has been untiring in his energetic efforts to promote the Company's interests with the result that the latter are loathe to part with him. Mr. Stockett is also popular with the working men. He frankly admits their rights and meets them in a spirit of fairness and compromise. The town loses a friend in Mr. Stockett. He has proved himself a citizen who is keenly interested in the progress of Fernie and he has assisted towards that end whenever possible.

The resignation takes effect to-day. Mr. Stockett will spend a few days in town before leaving for Nanaimo. Miss Edmunds, cousin of Mr. Stockett, will accompany him and will continue to keep house for him. Miss Edmunds has also many friends in town who will regret her departure.

The beginning of the negotiations which have resulted in Mr. Stockett taking charge of the Western Fuel Association dates back nearly two years ago when Mr. Stockett made an exhaustive report of a coal property at the coast which the Nanaimo Company have since purchased. Since January of this year this company has made persistent and flattering offers to Mr. Stockett with the above mentioned results.

On Saturday evening the office employees will tender Mr. Stockett a farewell banquet at the Royal Cafe.

SMELTER IS ASSURED.

MR. FERNAU WILL LOCATE ZINC SMELTER AT FERNIE.

Terms Offered By the Coal Company Accepted by Mr. Fernau's Directors. $100,000 Plant to be Erected This Year.

Definite information has at last been received announcing the final decision of Mr. Fernau to locate his zinc smelter at Fernie. The many advantages that this town possesses for smelting purposes were readily recognized by Mr. Fernau when he first came here and he has been engaged arranging the details since that time.

The terms submitted to Mr. Fernau by the C. N. P. Coal Co., re the sale of the land and the cost of the slack coal to be supplied continuously to the smelter were taken up by Mr. Fernau's Directors in London last month, and on representations made by Mr. Fernau were accepted. The latter instructed the Coal Company to prepare formal contracts, etc., ready for signatures. The last communication from Mr. Fernau is dated at London, June 13th, in which he made arrangements for certain payments and stated that though the actual date for his departure for Canada was not then fixed he hoped to start very shortly, when he would affix the necessary signatures, etc.

The contract between Mr. Fernau and the Coal Company calls for the erection of a zinc smelter plant costing at least $100,000 which will be in operation this year. Mr. Fernau has already given orders for the building of the zinc enriching plant at Rosebury where the ore is mined. The Fernie smelter will be known as the zinc reduction works where the concentrates will be reduced to zinc matte. The site will comprise several acres on the north side of the Coal Creek branch railway above the old power house.

SUMMER RATES TO ELKO.

Jos. Carter, district passenger agent of the C. P. R., who was in Fernie last week was approached by parties in town who asked that a special tourist rate be established between Fernie and Elko for the summer. Mr. Carter considered the matter with favor and later wired the following rate to Agent Reading. Tickets will be sold on Saturdays and Sundays, good to return not later than Monday for $1.00. Elko is becoming a popular summer resort for Fernie residents and the reduction will tend to make it still more popular. Many young people make Elko the objective point for a Sunday's outing, and the convenient schedule of the local makes it possible for a business man to go to Elko on Saturday afternoon and return on Monday morning with little infringement on business hours.

WILL MAKE CONCRETE

MESSRS OLDLAND & MARTIN START NEW INDUSTRY

Plant Now on the Way. Will Make Hollow Concrete Building Blocks, 9x10x32. Cheaper and Better Than Bricks.

Messrs. Oldland & Martin have formed a partnership for the manufacture of concrete building blocks. The former sent for a machine for this purpose some time ago and advices from Winnipeg state that it was shipped from that place per through freight, so that it may be expected to arrive shortly.

Several car loads of cement have been ordered and the work of manufacturing this excellent fire-proof material will proceed rapidly. The plant will be located on the sand-bar island in the Elk River below the bridge, where any quantity of the best sand is available. This property has been leased from the Coal Company on satisfactory terms. Coarse gravel, another ingredient of concrete, is also close at hand and this location should be a very convenient one for the manufacture of the concrete blocks.

The machine ordered will make blocks 10 inches wide, 9 inches high, and 32 inches long, each block making a surface area in the wall two feet square. It is estimated that a 10 inch wall is amply thick enough for any building that will be erected in Fernie. Each block is hollow which provides against dampness without decreasing from the strength of the wall The machine will turn out about 100 blocks a day. On the start if the demand is great the plant will be run double shift to keep up the supply.

These gentlemen estimate that a wall built of concrete blocks will cost less than the same wall built of bricks at $13 per thousand, and the durability of former far surpasses that of the brick wall. Their experience in the manufacture of this material backed up by thousands of testimonials from those who have tested it in numerous ways goes to prove beyond question that concrete is the best fire-proof building material on the market. The concrete blocks will be sold at $10.50 per cubic yard. Bricks cost $15.30 per cubic yard and stone $11.80 per cubic yard.

Few of those who contemplate the erection of fire-proof buildings have had any experience with this material, and while many look upon it with favor they have refrained from entering into any definite contract. Messrs Oldland and Martin are so confident that their concrete blocks will satisfy the requirements of all who want to put up buildings that are fire-proof, with an eye also to appearance and economy, that they have undertaken to prove their claims by proceeding with their venture and exhibiting the manufactured article fo the inspection of intending purchasers. There is little doubt but that many of the finest building in town will be made of concrete

Mr. Oldland claims that he has seen coke oven cinders used in the manufacture of concrete with much success. This material mixed with a little sand makes a very pretty wall and equally as durable as the regular concrete. The large quantities of coke oven cinders to be had in Fernie may yet be found in the cement facings of some of the finest buildings to be erected in the town.

COUNTY COURT.

Two Theft Cases Dismissed by Judge Leamy.

Judge Leamy, of Grand Forks, held a speedy trial court in Fernie on Wednesday and disposed of two theft cases.

L. Uhlman charged with the theft of numerous articles of clothing from Bannett's store and Green and Barthwick accused of stealing harness from J. Shingara were all dismissed. The accused in each case was represented by L. P. Eckstein while S. Herchmer conducted the prosecution.

B. Bannett identified the goods which had been found in Uhlman's trunks as his property, but under a rigid cross examination his methods of book keeping proved defective. Prisoner testified in his own behalf and swore that the goods had been purchased by himself and that he had charged them up against himself. The defence claimed that the book in which these entries had been made had been lost.

The prosecution had no trouble in proving that Green and Barthwick were in possession of stolen goods, but it was not proved that the prisoners had actually stolen the goods. His lordship in dismissing the case stated that he had no doubt as to the guilt of the parties and that if the charge had read differently he could have sent them to Nelson for six months.

FIRE AT SPARWOOD

Saw Mill, Several Shacks and Much Lumber Destroyed.

Fire broke out in the saw mill plant at Sparwood yesterday morning at 3 o'clock. Before warning was given several cabins were enveloped in flames and the inmates had narrow escapes. The saw mill plant and all the other buildings except the cookhouse were burned, besides 350,000 feet of lumber. Thirteen railways cars, three of them loaded with ties, were destroyed. The cause of the fire is credited to a spark from a C.P.R. engine while shunting cars on the spur. The saw mill plant which was the property of the C. N. P. Coal Co. was protected with little insurance.

D. McRae received a severe burn while escaping from his cabin. The blacksmith got a scorching and a woman, Mrs. McIntosh, escaped through a window with only her night clothes. Considerable personal property was destroyed.

BRANCH TO THE MINES

COAL COMPANY WILL BUILD TO COAL CREEK AT ONCE.

G. N. Depot and Yards have been Located on the East side of Elk River.—Construction Work Steadily Progressing.

"The branch railway connecting Coal Creek mines with the Great Northern railway will be built at once. The surveyors are now engaged on the branch and as soon as their work is completed tenders will be called for." Such is the statement made this week by C. G. S. Lindsay, 3rd vice President and managing director of the Coal Company. The line will be constructed by the Coal Co. under their Morrissey, Fernie and Michel Railway Company charter. Mr. Lindsay stated that it was the purpose of the Company to rush the work and to have it completed as soon as the road connecting Morrissey and Fernie was in operation.

The Great Northern engineers have agreed as to the location of the depot. It will be situated near the recreation grounds, at the foot of Cox, Hanson or Jaffray Sts., according as they find the grade. The survey line from the river will be altered somewhat to make it parallel with town streets and a greater curve will be substituted at the river. The road to Michel will be continued on the East side of the river for a mile or two before recrossing to the West side. The general yards of the G. N. will be located near the depot.

The branch line will connect near the depot and will wind around towards the hill farther north than was anticipated. It crosses the C. P. R. tracks on an overhead trestle half way between the Fernie Manufacturing Co's plant and the bridge. The coal yards, owned also by the Coal Company, will be east of the C. P. R. tracks and other yards will be placed at the junction.

The work of construction is progressing satisfactorily. The building of the wagon road from the Morrissey end was abandoned when the big rock-cut was reached two miles this side of Morrissey and this week the work of building the wagon road from this end has been started. A camp has been built a mile below the Cedar Valley mill and another farther on is being located. The work of clearing the right-of-way on the far end is going rapidly on. A number of horses were unloaded at Fernie on Wednesday to be used on the road.

Foss & Machonell have built their camp at the rock-cut where their hardest work will be. P. Welch has built a large ware house at Morrissey Junction where he is storing large quantities of staple lines of goods. The goods will be sold to subcontractors who board their own men. R. T. Olson, who occupied a similar position at the Columbia cut-off construction, has charge of the store.

FOOT-BALL NOTES

The Fernie foot-ball team which went to Blairmore last Saturday added another scalp to their belt by defeating that team by a score of two goals to nil. The game was keenly contested and the best of felling prevailed throughout the game.

The league game between Fernie and Michel will be played this morning at 10 o'clock. This game will practically decide the league championship.

M'BRIDE & GREEN VISIT FERNIE.

BANQUETTED BY LOCAL CONSERVATIVE ASSOCIATION.

Warm Welcome Extended to Ministers. The Hon. Premier's Excellent Address.

The town was visited on Tuesday evening by Richard McBride, Premier and Minister of Mines, and Robt. Green, Minister of Lands and Works. Though little notice was given of their intended visit a hearty welcome was tendered the Hon. Ministers. A large number of citizens were at the train and the band played enlivening tunes.

In the evening after the Hon. Ministers had attended the Board of Trade, a report of which is given elsewhere, they were entertained at a banquet given by the local Conservative Association at the Royal Cafe. About forty guests sat down to the first class spread. Mr. A. Joyce, in the unavoidable absence of Dr. Bonnell, president of the Association, occupied the position of toastmaster, the duties of which he performed in a masterly manner.

Interspersed in the program were various selections of excellent music given by the Italian string band.

Many excellent speeches were made. The most interest naturally centred about that of the Hon. Priemier who occupied about forty-five minutes. Mr. McBride is a pleasing speaker and his excellent address was warmly received.

The Priemier told of the deplorable condition of the finances of the province when his government assumed office. His government had faced the situation manfully and though the increased taxation and practical economy which necessarily followed were naturally unpopular he was glad to state the credit of province had been saved and confidence to a very large extent had been restored. This was evidenced by the increased activity which obtains in the whole of the province and especially in the mining regions of the Kootenays. Care had been taken to so arrange the taxation that the greatest increase fell upon those most able to bear it. He believed that the time would soon come when the finances of the province would admit of the Government re-adjusting those measures and reducing to some extent the taxation on the various industries affected.

Touching on railway legislation he said that at the present moment his government had under consideration a scheme for the construction of the Coast-Kootenay railway and he had no hesitation in saying that when parliament next met that they would have in addition three or four genuine railway propositions to deal with, one of which would be the Kootenay-Central Railway which Mr. Ross had so persistently advocated at the last session. When the House was in session last winter there were no less than forty-three railway projects seeking assistance from the provincial treasury, but the policy of his government in the future as it had been in the past would be to have nothing whatever to do with any railway scheme unless it has stamped on the face of it evidences of unquestionable bona-fideness. He believed the Kootenay-Central was a genuine railway proposition and one which is necessary and it would therefore have the careful consideration to which it is entitled.

Mr. McBride referred to federal bye-elections and he declared that the signs of the times all foretold a victory for Conservatism at the coming general elections. In closing he congratulated the Fernie district on having so able and strenuous a representative as Mr. Ross.

Hon. Mr. Green spoke briefly. He referred to the many difficulties his department had to face and to the uncharitable attitude of the press of the province toward the government.

VICTORY AND LOSSES

WIN ON LAND, LOSE AT SEA

Kuroki Crushed Right Wing of Stakelburg's Army—500 Dead Left on Field—14 Guns Captured—Two Japanese Transports Torpedoed.

The following comes from Tokio:—Following closely the news that the Vladivostock squadron was attacking Japanese merchant vessels and possibly army transports in the straits of Corea, and that the dash from Port Arthur was made Wednesday by the Russian protected cruiser Novik and a flotilla of ten torpedo boat destroyers, in which part of Admiral Togo's fleet vainly tried to lure the enemy to sea, there was received Thursday a report of an overwhelming Japanese victory in land fighting along the Port Arthur railway north of Wa Fang Shan, which for two days centered about Wa Fang Kau. The report says the Japanese had driven the Russians from Tassa valley and other passes through the mountains about Wa Fang Kau to a point near Fachow, which is on the Peninsula railroad more than sixty-five miles north of Port Arthur. The Russian loss was 1,500 men and 21 field guns.

A Chefoo despatch says that the Japanese have succeeded in placing 52 seige guns on the heights north of Port Arthur.

N. Y. DISASTER

Victims May Number 1,200—500 Bodies Recovered.

After an all-night search, with the aid of professional divers, at North Brother Island, for victims of the ill-fated General Slocum, which was burned Wednesday at New York, 504 bodies had been recovered up to noon Thursday. Of this number 116 had been identified. The number of missing is estimated at 400.

During Wednesday, 203 people were taken to the hospital. After treatment, it was found in many cases that the injuries were not serious enough to prevent their going home, and they were allowed to depart. Some of those who remained in the hospital, however, are still in a critical condition.

APPALLING ESTIMATES.

The centre of interest of the General Slocum disaster last night was at the morgue. All night long crowds of people visited the building with entreaties for a chance to try and make identifications. The estimates of the number of dead given by officials vary exceedingly. Dr. Darlington, the president of the board of health who remained at North Brother Island for a great portion of the night, gave as his estimate a total of 1,200, with possibilities of 1,250. Inspector Brooks, who had been at the scene since a few minutes after the accident, placed the number at nearly 1,000.

A particularly sad incident during the night was the attempt at suicide of a grief-stricken mother at the morgue. This woman, Mrs. Lena Rekanski, of 337 Fifth street, went to the morgue to find her little daughter Wanda, who was missing, and found a body which she identified as that of her child. Wandering from the morgue she walked down the string piece of the pier and attempted to throw herself into the river. She had been watched, however, and policeman seized her in time to save her life. She was taken to Bellevue hospital.

When the dread tale of the General Slocum disaster is fully told, when the last blackened body has been taken from the burned hulk and the swift waters of Hell Gate give up their dead, the catastrophe will take its place as the most appalling that has ever occurred on the inland waters of America. Definite figures on the loss of live cannot yet be given. That more than 500 persons perished is a horrible certainty, but how much in excess of that number the total will run will only be known the "missing" column is finished.

All during the night and early dawn of Thursday the sad work of exploring the Slocum's hull went on and from dock to morgue the sad procession of ambulances each with its pitiful load, wound its way from the river front to the morgue at the foot of 26th street until 10 o'clock 463 bodies lay on the slabs.

Most of these came from the wreck, but the night long patrol of the waters of East river added its ghastly quota. There are many bodies still in the hold of the burned vessel, according to the divers and wreckers, but the river is looked to to complete the list. How many preferring death by drowning to the agony of death by fire, went over the rail never to rise again during the mad race of the vessel for the beach will probably never be known, for the treacherous waters of Hell Gate do not willingly give up the victims.

PILLARS OF THE EMPIRE.

Bishop of Niagara Delivers an Eloquent Speech on This Subject Before the Empire Club at Toronto.

Eloquence of the very highest from one who stands in the front rank of living orators distinguished the season's final meeting of the Empire Club at Toronto. The Bishop of Niagara was briefly introduced by Col. Mason, and was welcomed with loud applause. They would agree with him, he thought, that the verdict of history had been recorded in favor of constructive statesmanship. The Empire builders were the heroes of the world, Alexander, Caesar, Charlemagne, Napoleon, Clive, Hastings, and last, but not least, Cecil Rhodes.

It was a remarkable thing that it would be impossible to evoke the enthusiasm around the memory of Gladstone that burns up spontaneously around the memory of Beaconsfield, who had been devoted to the building up of the Empire.

Pillars of Empire.

The pillars upon which the Empire rested were two, and first came the strong pillar of commerce. In all great movements towards Empire commerce seemed to have led, and the sword was unsheathed to protect it.

Bishop Dumoulin entered upon a brilliant account of the three great companies which had given England three-fourths of her territory and nine-tenths of her population.

The East India Company came first and its career was a magnificent romance, which no man out of his imagination could rival. It did not begin with dreams of conquest and subjugation. It originated in the commercial idea of the nation of shop-keepers, merchant princes, who looked across the seas, and listened to the stories of the noble possessions which characterized the nations of old. They employed the army of their money, their golden pounds, and as their returns increased, there arose the difficulties which led to subsequent events. The influence of the native princes of India could not go down without a struggle, and it was in this condition of things that there arose the bright star, the military genius, second perhaps only to Napoleon, Lord Clive. Had he been in command of the forces during the American Revolution, it was probable, said the Bishop, that George Washington could not have achieved his success. Warren Hastings followed, and it was notable that these men who should have been supported by the people for whom they labored, were, one of them, brought before a commission, and the other impeached. The Empire of India was not only a great commercial conquest, but the very best thing which could have befallen that great part of the world under the providence of God. The Empire was the greatest thing that the world had to show, and it should fill them with throbbing pride, and energize them to noble deeds and lofty purposes.

Hudson Bay Exploited.

The Hudson Bay Co. was prosaic after the glitter of the Indian story. But there was manifested and put forth the same indomitable energy which led Britons to wrestle with the jungle and tropic fire, in contest with the snow and ice and storms of the frigid zone. They knew not the wealth which lay in mountains and rivers and far-off and immeasurable lands.

Names like McTavish and Mackenzie turned to golden numbers on the Bishop's lips, and the poor Indian was considered faithful where faith was kept. The renowned and resounding name of Donald Smith illustrated the type of the Empire builders of the West.

The last chartered company was the South African, and, said the Bishop, "All the romance of your souls may gather round the name of Cecil Rhodes." He had joined commerce and imagination together, to make Africa "all red."

Mean Rascal Kruger.

The Bishop referred to the events of 1882 and minced no words in speaking of "the traitorous plans of the meanest rascal—Paul Kruger." The development of Africa was to be undertaken, "not for covetousness but for the highest good and greatest happiness of all the people who make that country their home."

They had been taunted with being shopkeepers like the Dutch, but they were soldiers also, like the French, and combined military and commercial genius. They must never permit the Empire to be impaired by incompetence, ignorance, or negligence.

Language the Other Pillar.

The other pillar of the Empire was language. If the great Empire is to leaven the world she must have a language and speech to express all the noble thoughts laid up in her bosom. It had gradually built itself up into the greatest tongue in the world to-day. It had all the advantages of its predecessors and all the milk and cream of its contemporaries. Telegraphers saved 25 per cent. in using English. The Anglo-Saxon globe-trotter had carried it into the corners of the earth. The Bishop had traveled himself and in fifty hotels had stayed at only one where English was not spoken.

Fifth in rank at the beginning of the last century, the language was first at the beginning of this.

It was the tongue of Shakespeare and Milton, and of the glorious literature of the age of Queen Anne. It was the speech of Tennyson, and though it might provoke a smile, the language of Kipling, who not only warbled the ballads of Tommy Atkins, but gave us the incomparable Recessional, bringing us into glorious communion and worshipful acknowledgment of the great God of all.

He exhorted them to use that language with due sense of its greatness, and to speak no blasphemous, infidel, impure, unbrotherly or disloyal word.

He concluded with the hope that "Peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety, be the benediction of us all."

A FEW HILLOCKS.

A Recent Government Dictionary of Altitudes That Cannot Fail to Open the Eyes of Many People.

A somewhat unusual kind of Government publication (a dictionary of altitudes in the Dominion of Canada), has recently been issued by the Ottawa Department of the Interior. Even a casual perusal of this volume on hilltops cannot fail to open the eyes of many, including those of "the oldest inhabitants." The heights, it need scarcely be said, are given in feet above the sea level, and the place names are arranged alphabetically in Province and territory groups.

For our purpose we shall begin with Ontario, where we are a little nonplussed to discover that the greatest altitude is reached by Tiptop hill, which is said to be in Thunder Bay district, and the height of this appropriately-named, but, to us, wholly strange, hill is given at 2,120 feet. Next to it comes Thunder Cape, 1,950, thus soaring beyond Fort William's knoll, Mt. McKay, by 350 feet. This must prove gratifying to the good people of Port Arthur, and correspondingly provocative to those of the other burg.

It may surprise some of us to learn that next to these come Dundalk (South Grey), 1,700; Corbetton (Dufferin), 1,661, and Melancthon (in the same county), 1,660, so that the elevation connecting these points forms the roof-ridge of our western peninsula. It is now in order for the Dundalkians to take advantage of the situation by the erection of a pillar or some other conspicuous monument at the railway station to inform the traveling public that "This is the highest point in southern Ontario, 1,700 feet above the level of the sea."

There are some scores of places above the thousand feet mark, but by far the larger number are in the lower hundreds, the lowest possible level being that of Bainsville, in Lancaster township, Glengary—174 feet, the difference between which and 245 feet (nearly) will show the extent of fall in the St. Lawrence after it leaves Lake Ontario.

Toronto Union Station is placed at nine feet above the lake, or 254 above the sea, and a few other points in the city are as follows: Queen street, 260; Bloor street, 371; North Toronto station, 400; Carlton street is placed at 405 feet, but this must be a mistake. Upper Canada College is given as 510; the Parliament Buildings as 356, the top of the roof as 648, and Woodlawn avenue is mentioned at 469 feet, "the highest point in the city."

But British Columbia overtops everything, even Tip-top hill, with Mount Fairweather, which, according to some authority, is 15,292 feet above the sea, while Mounts Carruthers, Cathedral, Columbia, Daly, Dawson, Deltaform, Deville, Dome, Freshfield, Goodsir, Habel, Hermit, Hooker, Howse, Hungabee, La Perouse, Lefroy, Lyell, Nelson, Owen, Robson, Rogers, Sir Donald, Stephen, Thompson, Vaux and Victoria look down on scorn on everything under 10,000 feet high.

The highest point in Alberta is Mount Murchison, 13,500, followed closely by Mount Bryce, 13,000, with many others ranging from 12,000 to 10,000.

Assiniboia cannot boast of anything even as far up as 5,000 feet, her best effort culminating in a nameless point which may hereafter be known as Globe Mountain, 4,625 feet in height. I suggest this name because the elevation is said to be one of the most beautiful in America, and fertile almost to its summit.

In Athabaska nothing exceeds 3,000 feet in height, except Brule Lake, strange to say, and it is 3,201 feet above the sea, but surely the surrounding land is just a little bit above this.

Although Manitoba is proud, she is modest, and no attempt has been made in this Province to rival the heights of British Columbia.

Duck Mountain (it must be a mountain) caps the climax at 2,600 feet. Porcupine Mountain, at 2,500, Turtle Mountain, at 2,300, and Krang Mount, at 2,200 feet, complete the record of hills over 2,000 feet above sea level.

New Brunswick's greatest altitude is Mount Carleton, 2,716; Nova Scotia's Wilkie Sugarloaf, 1,200; Prince Edward Island's Wiltshire, 305; while Quebec's Mount Logan, 3,708, and Shickshoks, 3,500 feet, must come nearly closing this review.

It may, however, be of some scientific interest to note that the so-called mountain near Montreal is not two million five hundred thousand feet in height, as is claimed by the inhabitants who reside near its base, but only 763 feet, to the very summit, in accordance with authentic records. It may also be remarked that "the mountain" at Hamilton, Ontario, and, which has always been claimed to be at least ten thousand feet higher than that of Montreal, is, in reality only 628 feet above sea level, or 135 feet lower than the Montreal vertical prominence.

Tree Nursery at Guelph.

Considerable progress has been made with the tree nursery at the Ontario Agricultural College. Hon. John Dryden stated recently that in the spring of 1906 he expected they would be in a position to distribute to the farmers of the Province at least 200,000 trees of various classes.

"We have during the past ten days transplanted about 50,000 two-year-old evergreens—pine, Norway spruce, larch, etc.—and we have sown enough seed to give us 30,000 more," said Mr. Dryden. "We have also gathered enough acorns for at least 100,000 red and white oak trees, a variety of commercial timber which cannot be very well transplanted, but which grows somewhat rapidly from seed. Besides these we have several other varieties, such as maple, beech, birch, ash, and so on."

The trees are planted apart from two to four inches one way, and from twelve to fourteen inches the other way.

RUSSIAN DISASTERS

MORE SERIOUS REVERSES ARE SUFFERED

Japanese Have Turned Main Position of the Enemy—St. Petersburg Reports Not Truthful—News Doctored to Suit the People.

A cable from Shanhai Kwan says: Reports have reached here of another serious Russian reverse, this time at Tong Chi, on the Siu Yen road, a short distance southeast of Ta Schi Tao. This means that the Japanese have turned the main Russian position at Kai Chou, and the army, which has been driven into that place in the advance of General Oku from the south, after the hard fighting at Va Fangow and Te Li Sze has been practically cut off from the main body of General Kuropatkin's army, which is about Hai Cheng.

The Japanese troops engaged in the fighting at Tong Chi are part of the force which was landed at Taku Shan, and is believed to be under the command of General Nodzu, one of the ablest officers in the Japanese army.

A THOUSAND MEN LOST.

Details of the latest fighting are lacking as yet, but the Russians are reported to have been driven back on Taschi Tao in confusion, losing more than 1,000 during the fighting.

The roads in that part of Manchuria are now said to be in fine condition and the movements of the Japanese infantry and artillery have been so rapid as to puzzle the Russian commanders. General Kuropatkin is said to be hurrying up with the greater part of his army, and the main bodies of all of the three Japanese forces are concentrating on a line from Hai Cheng to Kai Chou. Fighting along this line is almost continuous and the Russians do not seem to be able to withstand the steady advance of the Japanese.

ATTACK BY RUSSIAN SCOUTS.

Russians from Samimak attacked the Japanese outposts in force on June 23, apparently for the purpose of testing their strength. The Russian force consisted of two regiments of cavalry, one of infantry and one battery of artillery. The enemy was defeated and retreated toward Shintaling. They are supposed to have sustained considerable loss. On the Japanese side Major Kubota was killed and nine men were wounded.

A party of foreign military attaches which was on a visit to the outposts probably witnessed the fighting.

ADVANCE OF JAPANESE VANGUARD.

A cable from St. Petersburg says: The general staff has received the following despatch from Lieut.-General Sakharoff, under date of June 22: "At 8 o'clock on the morning of June 21 the Japanese vanguard resumed its advance against our outposts, four miles south of Senuchen. The outposts retired rather slowly toward Senuchen and further on in the direction of Kai Chau.

"At noon a Japanese column, consisting of nine squadrons of cavalry, a battery of artillery, and a considerable number of infantry was observed advancing in the direction of Senuchen. Other strong columns of the enemy appeared and the Japanese occupied Senuchen towards evening with over a division of infantry, a brigade of cavalry and thirty-two guns.

"According to information received from our scouts and the inhabitants, the enemy, over a division strong, is concentrated southward of Chapan Pass, near Chwang Taitien and Long Taitien. The Japanese did not advance beyond Chapan Pass in the direction of Tanchi and the enemy on the morning of the 22nd, had not occupied the pass between Paltsiapei and Pauchingine on the Siu Yea Liao Yang Tang Road. No movement has been noticed there.

"Our scouts report that a large detachment of all arms advanced from Siu Yen to Khranza on the morning of June 22. A battalion of the enemy taking advantage of the thick foliage tried to surprise our vanguard near Van Dia Pudze on the Siu Yen Hai Cheng road.

"The movement was discovered in time and the Japanese received volleys from five companies of Russians. The enemy retired with some losses towards Siu Yen. One Russian sharpshooter was wounded.

"The Japanese occupied Va Fang Tien on the main road to Liao Yang on the evening of June 18, with a battalion of infantry and a squadron of cavalry. A detachment of the same strength occupied Chan Linju in the valley of the Tauo River, seven miles north of Feng Wang Cheng.

VIOLATED THE FLAG.

Russians Marched Under Protection fo Japanese Flag.

A Tokio despatch says:—The Russian hope of relieving the pressure on Port Arthur by threatening the rear of General Oku, the commander of the Japanese forces investing the Russian stronghold, came to an end Wednesday at Telissu, a point on the railroad fifty miles north of Kin Chou and 25 miles north of Va Fangow, when the Russians were out manoeuvered, enveloped and sweepingly defeated. They left more than 500 dead on the field and the Japanese captured 300 prisoners and 14 quick firing field guns. The Russians retreated hastily to the northwest.

LEFT 500 ON THE FIELD

The following despatch was published at Tokio:—On June 15 the enemy near Telissu consited of two and a half divisions, occupying the position between Teafangshen and Changtsushan. At dawn we opened attack and our main body advanced along the railroad, one column marching from Tsouchiaton. At 9 a.m. the left wing of the column was joined by the forces from Tung-Tungkow, and at noon by the cavalry from Tsouchiaton. Thus the enemy was surrounded by our forces near Telissu, and after severe fighting they were routed and fled northwest ward at 3 a. m. Our losses are estimated under one thousand. So far as known we captured colors, fourteen quickfirers, about 300 enemy inluding the commander of the fourth infantry regiment of sharpshooters. Over 500 of the enemys killed and wounded were left on the battlefield. Our scouts saw the enemy marching with the Japanese flag in this engagement, by which our artillery was misled and suspended fire.

VIOLATED THE FLAG.

The Japanese charge that the Russians violated the Japanese flag. Certain officers aver that during the fighting a body of Russian soldiers appeared carrying a Japanese flag nd that the Japanese artillery, deceived by this flag, ceased firing on that particular body of Russians. Official despatches from the Japanese commanders made specific charges of this flag violation.

Early estimates of the Japanese losses at Telissu say that 1,000 men were killed or wounded.

The Japanese attacking force was divided in right and left columns, and began the advance on Tuesday along both sides of the railroad. They encountered the Russians east of Va Fanglien, and drove them back At a late hour in the afternoon the Russians held a line between Tung Wang Tiao and Ta Fang Shen. The Japanese artillery opened on this line and the Russians responded. The shelling continued for two hours and it was followed by the advance of the Japanese to a position extending from Tung Chia Tung to Yo Hotun. Darkness put an end to the fighting. The Japanese despatched a column to the west ward toward Fu Chau, for the purpose of covering the Russians right wing, and to protect their left and rear.

During the night it became apparent that the Russians were being reinforced, and it was decided to make a general attack in the morning and force the Russians into a defile back of Telissu.

When morning came it was discovered that the Russians held a line extending from Ta Fang Shen to Cheng Tsu Shan, with a force estimated at more than two divisions.

The Japanese planed to envelope the Russians near Telissu, and they succeeded admirably. While the main Japanese force was moving north along the railroad, columns were swung to the left and to the right, and finally converged at noon on the main Russian position. The Russians in this position were at a disadvantage, but they held with determination until three in the afternoon. At this hour they were routed. The Japanese cavalry continued to pursue the enemy and inflicted considerable punishment.

The Japanese commander makes no estimate of the Russian losses, but says they were probably great. Among the Russian officers captured by the Japanese is the colonel of the fourth regiment of rifles.

The Manitoba Dragoons are in camp at Brandon.

S.S. CONVENTION

A Big Affair—Good Programme—Reception by the Lieut.-Governor.

At the present moment everything points to the provincial annual gathering to be held in Grace church, Winnipeg, on the 28th to 30th inst., being the largest, best and most popular meeting of its kind ever held in Manitoba.

For the first time in the history of the association two prominent specialists have been engaged for the convention, Mrs. J. W. Barnes, of the International association who is now the recognized leader in junior and primary work, and Mr. C. D. Meigs, of the "International Evangel" staff, a man who can discuss up-to-date Sunday school work in a most interesting and helpful manner. Many of Manitoba's leaders in Sunday school work are also on the programme, which includes several new and intensely interesting features. An oratorio chorus of 100 voices, or more, under the leadership of Mr. James Tees, will render Handel's Messiah Hallelujah charus. A solo by a prominent city vocalist will be given every afternoon session of the convention.

Mr. G. S. Dingle and Mr. J. M. Johnson will lead the convention singing. His Hon. Lieut-Governor and Lady McMillan will honor the Sunday school workers by giving a reception to the delegates and their friends from 4.30 to 6.30 o'clock on the 29th.

The presentation of S.S. normal certificates and diplomas to the successful candidates by Mr. Meigs will be a prominent feature of the programme.

The attendance at this convention will not be limited to the official delegation from each school. All schools may, therefore, send as many additional delegates as can possibly attend. The object in making this offer is to extend the influence of this convention as far as possible.

Mr. H. H. Sanderson, with a committee, has charge of the work of securing rooms and meals at reasonable prices for all delegates who attend the convention so that all who come will be sure to have a comfortable place to lodge while in the city.

All delegates will pay one full railway fare to Winnipeg, making sure to get a certificate from the ticket agent for the same, and when signed by the general superintendent and secretary of the association will entitle the holder to free passage home, if 100 or more delegates have paid railway fares, which is practically beyond doubt.

ASSASSIN WRITES CZAR

Reasons Why it was Necessary the Finnish Governor Should Die.

The Aftonblaet, of Stockholm, publishes a letter to the emperor of Russia purporting to have been written by Eugene Schaumann, the assassin of General Bobrikoff, governor-general of Finland, the original of which Schaumann said, would be found upon his body after the dead had been committed. The letter follows:

"Sire,—Through the senate, which is obedient to Bobrikoff, the latter has succeeded in creating lawlessness in Finland. Through lies and false representations Bobrikoff and Pleheve (minister of the interior) have induced your majesty to issue ordinances which you promised at your succession to guard firm and unshaken. The best officials of the state have been removed without trial in favor of fortune hunters and other ineligible to state offices under Finnish laws and your most intelligent and trusty subjects have been banished. Pleheve, whose duty it is to report to your majesty all matters concerning the grand duchess of Finland, is not a Finlander, has no knowledge of Finland's laws or customs, and has common interests with Bobrikoff. Therefore your majesty does not get a true knowledge of the real situation.

"As it is not probable that the real situation will be known to you in the near future unless Bobrikoff be removed, there is only one way to take in self-defence, and that is to render him innocuous. The remedy is violent, but it is the only way. Your majesty I have done my deed alone, after mature deliberation, and in the moment of death I swear there was no conspiracy. Knowing your good heart and good intentions, I implore solely that you seek information regarding the whole empire, including Finland, Poland and the Baltic provinces. Signed, with the deepest veneration, your majesty's humblest and truest subject, Eugene Schaumann."

The copy was mailed to a person who was not in Finland, Schaumann writing him that he was sure that the original would not reach the emperor.

FERNIE FREE PRESS

FERNIE, B. C.

Here is a story which Baron Dowse the celebrated judge, once told in that exaggerated brogue he loved to employ. "I was down in Cork last month, holding assizes. On the first day, when the jury came in, the officer of the court said: 'Gintlemen av the jury, ye'll take yer accustomed places, if ye plaze.' And may I never laugh," said the baron, "if they didn't all walk into the dock."

FRETTING CHILDREN.

When a child frets and cries almost continuously the root of the trouble in nine cases out of ten lies with the stomach or bowels. Fermentation and decomposition of the food means colic, bloating and diarrhoea—the latter is especially dangerous and often fatal during the hot weather months. Baby's Own Tablets are just what every mother needs to keep her little ones healthy. These Tablets gently regulate the bowels, cure constipation, prevent diarrhoea, cleanse and cool the stomach, and promote sound, natural sleep. Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

TIME HAS TESTED IT.—Time tests all things, that which is worthy lives that which is inimical to man's welfare perishes. Time has proved Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. From a few thousand bottles in the early days of its manufacture the demand has risen so that now the production is running into the hundreds of thousands of bottles. What is so eagerly sought for must be good.

THE YOUNG VULTURE

HE IS WILLING TO FIGHT BEFORE HE IS ABLE TO FLY

The Fledgeling Has Wonderful Strength of Bill, Is Courageous and Aggressive and Is as Quick Almost as a Flash of Lightning.

In the south there is one bird which everybody knows whether he is a nature student or not. I refer to the turkey vulture, or turkey buzzard, as most people call him. This bird seems to be an ever present feature of the southern landscape, for look upward when you will you may see him sweeping the sky with outspread wings, wheeling in broad circles or soaring in graceful spirals, with seeming never a stroke of the mighty pinions for hours at a time.

One day I saw a vulture sailing thus, says Ernest Harold Baynes in the Boston Herald, and I carefully marked his flight until he descended from the white clouds and disappeared near the edge of a distant wood. Supposing that he had come down to feed on some carrion—a dead horse perhaps, which had been dragged just outside of the woods and left—I made the best of my way to the spot where I lost sight of the bird, that I might be a witness to the feast.

I arrived at the wood, but neither bird nor carcass could I see. Then I bethought me that this was the month of May, and that perhaps the buzzard had a nest thereabout. I hunted under the bushes, along the side of fallen trees and in some old stumps which were standing near, but not a feather was to be seen.

Presently I spied a log which lay somewhat apart in the shadow of some shrubs, and as I approached it out from somewhere came a big turkey buzzard, which quickly disappeared behind the trees. On coming up to the log, which was a large one, I found that it was hollow, and in the cavity there were two eggs, which doubtless belonged to the vulture which had just departed. They were considerably larger than the eggs of a domestic hen, and in color they were dirty white, heavily spotted with chocolate brown. I left them that I might have an opportunity to study the young.

The next time I visited the hollow log the parent birds were not in sight, but in the nest I found two downy fledgelings, which could scarcely be called pretty. They were in every way less attractive than young hawks of the same age. They expressed their disapproval of my presence by a weak growling sound.

I could not visit the spot again for some weeks, and when I did one of them had disappeared. The other was no longer in the hollow log, but standing at a little distance, and I was interested to see the change in his appearance. In the first place, he had grown tremendously; the down which had formerly covered the whole body was now confined chiefly to the head, neck and under parts, and the rest of the bird was clothed with firm black feathers. He looked fat and well fed.

I reached out my hand and caught him by one wing. But here he had a surprise for me, for he seized my finger in his hooked bill and with a turn of his head twisted off a bit of the flesh before I had time even to object. After hurriedly cleansing the wound I again advanced on the enemy, who was game enough to satisfy any one and came to the attack with open bill. Of course he was not dangerous in the least, for he was very young and could not even fly, but for a fledgeling the grip he could give with his bill was astonishing.

However, I picked him up, took him home and tethered him in the garden with a strap to one leg. The first night he ate a good meal of liver, and after that he took almost any kind of meat that was given him. I let him have carrion whenever it was convenient, but at other times he ate freshly killed frogs, fresh beef, opossum and even fish.

One night soon after I had brought him home I went out to see how he looked when he was asleep. It was so dark that his black plumage was not visible against the grass. All I could see of him was a white spot, his head, as it hung near the ground.

I approached very quietly and was within five feet when something happened. Out of the darkness there came a flash of white straight toward me with a speed which caused me to step quickly backward, and at the same instant there was a startling, rustling sound, accompanied by a guttural growl, which for a moment I did not recognize as the voice of the young vulture.

Altogether it was a most startling phenomenon, and, although I realized in a moment that the bird was in some way the cause of it, I do not know even yet just what happened. This much I know, however, that the bird rushed at me, growling with all his might, and that the flash of white was the white down of the body uncovered by the opening of the black wings.

The rushing sound was, I think, caused in some way by the wing feathers or tail feathers, or both, but whether by dragging them along the ground or otherwise I cannot tell. I tried on several occasions to find this out by approaching the young vulture when there was just light enough for me to see what happened, but he would never act in just the same way unless it was quite dark.

No doubt this is some provision of nature to protect the bird when it is young and helpless, and I can testify that it is a good one, for I am sure that few night prowling animals would care to pursue their investigations after being given so startling a reception.

MORE EVIDENCE FROM MONTREAL

That Dodd's Kidney Pills Always Cure Dropsy.

Montreal, Que., June 27 (Special)—Every day brings forth fresh proof that Dropsy is caused by diseased Kidneys and that one sure way to cure it is to make the kidneys strong and healthy by using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Geo. Robertson, 392 St. James street, this city, is one of those who have proved this beyond the shadow of a doubt. Mr. Robertson says:

"My feet were so much swollen from Dropsy that when I got out of bed in the mornings I could hardly put them on the floor. My arms used to swell at times so that I could not put on my coat.

"I had to be tapped to relieve me of the terrible pains.

"On the advice of a friend I began to take Dodd's Kidney Pills, and before I had used the second box I began to feel better. Seven boxes cured me completely."

Rheumatism, Diabetes, Bright's Disease are some of the many forms of Kidney Disease that Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure promptly and permantly.

I'm glad I'm livin' nowadays,

Three things to delight in: Beauty, frankness and freedom.

There never was and never will be a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated disease rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine when obtainable in sound, unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on nature's own restoratives. It relives the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease, and by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses through the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—result, improved appitite. Northrop & Lyman of Toronto have given to the public their Superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, guaged by the opinion of scientists, the wine approaches nearest perfection of and in the market. All druggists sell it.

DO NOT DELAY.—When, through debilitated digestive organs, poison finds its way into the blood, the prime consideration is to get the poison out as rapidly and as thoroughly as possible. Delay may mean disaster. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a most valuable and effective medicine to assail the intruder with. They never fail. They go at once to the seat of the trouble and work a permanent cure.

Foliage and Colors.

The colorings of variegated foliage plants cannot be intensified by the use of colored glass. A curious Belgian horticulturist, after a long series of experiments, concludes that brilliant light favors high coloration of foliage. Trees and shrubs with golden leaves, when poorly illuminated—that is, through either blue or red glass—became green or in some cases blanched. In no case did the colored glass have a beneficial effect, most plants after a month's exposure putting forth smaller leaves, less vivid in coloring. In some cases a very apparent stunting of the plant's growth was observable.

THE CURE'S DINNER.

It Marked a New Era in the Life of an Appreciative Marquise.

How few there are like the charming lady in one of Brillat-Savarin's anecdotes! How few there are who know what a good dinner is! But she did, although she had been brought up in an artificial school. She had called on a simple cure to offer alms for his poor, and she did not know that cures dine in the middle of the day. Dinner had just been announced, and the cure asked her to dine with him. She consented. It was a new era in her life. After that culinary complications became vulgar in her eyes, pate de foie gras and cream laden sauces disgusted her, and even Nesselrode pudding, unless made by an artist, made her unhappy. As for liqueurs, she learned to regard a liking for them as a symptom of advancing age.

It was a fast day, and this made perfection all the more difficult to attain on the part of the cure's old servant, Juliette. The tablecloth glistened, the porcelain was exquisitely white, and the plates were kept hot over boiling water. The soup was bisque of crabs, followed by a salmon trout, with a sauce admirably proportioned, and then came an omelet of fish roe, so round, so odorous, so redolent of parsley and chives, that for a moment all conversation stopped. A salad, on the leaves of which light, dewlike drops quivered, preceded the dessert of three luscious pears, a cheese resembling Camembert and a pot of conserves. The cure did not say grace until he and his guest had sipped from fragile, but not costly, cups the limpid and hot Mocha. "No liqueurs," the cure said. "For my friends, yes. But no strong drinks for me. They are the resources of age."

It is recorded that the lady was affected almost to tears by this combination of simplicity and elegance. It was a revelation, and to this appreciative marquise the introduction of the famous omelet au thon, the secret of which was almost lost in the revolution, into Parisian society is due.—Maurice F. Egan in Smart Set.

USES FOR LEMONS.

Two or three slices of lemon in a cup of strong tea will cure a nervous headache.

Lemon juice (outward application) will allay the irritation caused by the bites of insects.

A dash of lemon in plain water is an excellent tooth wash. It not only removes tartar, but sweetens the breath.

Lemon juice is better than any drug or complexion powder for giving permanent clearness and beauty to the skin.

The juice of a lemon taken in hot water on awakening in the morning is an excellent liver corrective and for stout women is better than any anti-fat medicine ever invented.

Dangerous Admissions.

It is dangerous to make a confession unless one really means it, and we may add that it is sometimes dangerous to take a confession as honestly meant. A husband and wife between whom a little unpleasant passage had occurred had made the matter up, and the wife said, as if to clear her conscience:

"Oh, well, I suppose that I have my faults."

"Yes, my dear," said the husband.

"What?"

"I simply said 'Yes.'"

"That I have my faults!" exclaimed the wife indignantly. "What are they, I should like to know?"

"Well, to begin with"—

"No; I don't want to hear."—London Tit-Bits.

Indifference.

An old, old woman sat on the curb of Park row. Her clothing was rags. Her bleared eyes were deep in a setting of wrinkles. Upon her scant gray hair there was something that once had been a hat. She trembled with weakness. Beside her was a basket filled with trumpery, evidently a stock in trade. Passing her were scores of well clad men and women. Few noticed the wretched wreck. Her feet, shoeless, but wrapped in strips of carpeting, had been bruised on the stones of the street, and she was adjusting the covering.

"Terrible!" said a lady to her escort.

"Yes," he replied. "Where 'll we go for lunch?"

An Artist's Errors.

Occasionally Vereschagin in his efforts after realism made some strange mistakes. There is, for instance, a picture of his representing the execution of rebels during the Indian mutiny which is very powerful. Unfortunately, however, the artist had not apparently known of the change in British military costume, and in consequence the British soldiers in the picture are represented as wearing the helmets which did not come into use in our army for more than a quarter of a century after the mutiny.—London Globe.

Her Mamma's Error.

Mrs. Cutter—Charles, what are those large red, white and blue ivory lozenges I saw in your pocket last night? Mr. Cutter—Oh, those—those are trading stamps, dear. Mrs. Cutter—There, that's just what I thought they were, but mamma declared they had something to do with some kind of a game.

The Fruits.

Mrs. Hatterson—I wonder if it has paid to give our daughter such a good education. Hatterson—Paid! Why, of course. Don't you see from her manner how superior she is to us?—Life.

Three things to govern: Temper, tongue and conduct.

Three things to contend for: Honor, country and friends.

Three things to avoid: Idleness, loquacity and flippant jesting.

THE COMMON ILLS OF HUMAN LIFE

The Stomach, Liver and Kidney Disorders Can Usually be Cured by

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Most of the ills of every-day life come from derangements of the digestive system.

Eating too much, irregular meal hours, improperly prepared food, the excessive use of stimulants, are among the common causes of these disorders.

The liver becomes clogged and torpid, the kidneys inactive, and the bowels constipated. The poisonous waste matter is thrown back into the blood stream, and the result is some deadly form of disease.

This treatment acts directly and promptly on the liver, kidneys and bowels, and ensures their proper working.

Indigestion, dyspepsia, kidney disease, backache, liver complaint, biliousness and constipation are the ailments for which Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are most frequently used. The story of their success in curing such ailments is told by thousands of grateful cured ones.

Policeman Peter C. Morris, 10 Wascana avenue, Toronto, states:—"For years I was troubled with habitual constipation, which I believe is the most common ailment of all policemen, I had spent considerable money in trying all sorts of so-called remedies for constipation, and was always disappointed as the relief was only temporary.

"I now gladly state that I have been completely cured by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and shall be pleased to personally recommend them to any person who wishes to interview me. I have always advised my friends to use them."

Gentlemen,

As I am giving up the baking business on June 1st., I wish before retiring to compliment you on the quality of both your Hungarian and Glenora Patent brands of flour. I have never found any other to equal them in strength, uniformity or color, and could get more bread from your flour per sack than any other I ever used. In my twenty-two years' baking experience I tried several brands but always came back to your brand as being the most satisfactory.

Wishing you continued success and thanking you for your most liberal business treatment, I am,

Legs and Oratory.

In the "Souvenirs de Mme. Recamier" there is a pleasant description of a scene which took place during her exile at Lyons in 1813. Almost every cultivated or fashionable individual who passed through that city was sure to be attracted to her house. Talma, the tragedian, happened to be giving some representations in the Grand theater and was dining with Mme. Recamier when the bishop of Troyes, better known as the abbe of Boulogne, was announced. This celebrated preacher, though devoted to literature and familiar with the works of the great playwrights, had never seen a play performed.

After dinner Talma was persuaded to recite, to the intense gratification of the abbe, parts from his principal roles. In return Talma begged the ecclesiastic to repeat some passages of his sermons. When he had done so, "It is splendid, monseigneur, as far as this," exclaimed Talma, touching the chest of the preacher, "but the lower part of your body is deplorable! Clearly you have never bestowed a thought upon your legs!"

Easy Explanation.

"How do you account for the fact," asked the doctor, "as shown by actual investigation, that thirty-two out of every hundred criminals in the country are left handed?"

"That's easily accounted for," said the professor. "The other sixty-eight are right handed."

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY.

"Newton Abbot, Devon. Dear Sirs—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effect of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

"For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout and life had lost its attraction owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitations of the enemy which prostrated me for months, or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

"Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

"For the last twenty months I have been comparatively free, as one or two attempted visitations have been immediately stamped out by the assistance of Blair's Pills.

The Fernie Free Press

ESTABLISHED 1898.

B.C. WATSON, Editor — J. R. WALLACE, Manager

THE FERNIE FREE PRESS, FERNIE BRITISH COLUMBIA

FRIDAY, JULY 1, 1904.

After to-day the 10 per cent rebate on taxes will not hold good except to those who suffered by the fire. It is questionable however if this reduced percentage for rebate will have the same effect as the more substantial rebate offered formerly. Money is worth 10 per cent in Fernie for ordinary loaning purposes and to those who have not cultivated the habit of promptness in paying their debts the temptation may be strong to "borrow" at this rate from the Government.

This is the Natal Day of our fair Dominion, and everywhere, from its far away shores on the Atlantic, over lake and stream, forest and prairie, mountain and valley, to the broad bosom of the peaceful Pacific, the event is being made the occasion of glad celebration. During the thirty seven years of its life the Dominion of Canada has made steady progress. At times the march has been slow but it was always sure without e er a t p backward, until to day the eyes of the world are upon this, the land of promise, the fairest jewel in the British Crown. Canada can boast of natural resources of immeasurable wealth capable of sustaining many times its present population. It possesses an invigorating climate adapted to the strong national character of her people and above her floats the flag which is symbolic of progress, morality and freedom.

A notice appears in this issue announcing the fact that the annual school meeting advertised for last Saturday morning has been postponed until Thurday July 7th at 8 P. M. The notice does not state the cause for the adjournment and it is with some diffidence that we touch on the subject in this column. Mr. Rennie the secretary of the Board was at the place of meeting at the appointed hour but no one else was there. He managed to persuade a passer-by to drop in, and after a fruitless wait for others the meeting had to be adjourned for want of a quorum. That this condition of affairs should exist in a town the size of Fernie is a deplorable one indeed. This extreme indifference shown by the house-holders towards the public school of the town may be interpreted to signify a feeling of passive satisfaction in its progress, but it is not the healthy interest that any community should take in the great institution that outside of the home life plays a more important factor in shaping the destinies of our boys and girls than anything else. The average child from the age that he or she enters school until graduation spends more time in the school room in the companionship of teacher and fellow pupil than with the parents at home. Yet the parents living in this town, many of whom take a deep interest in the home training of their children, do not regard the public school training of sufficient importance to claim their attendance at the school meeting once a year. The non attendance at the school meeting is a pretty safe index to the fact that there are no legitimate complaints against the manner in which the school is being conducted, for any who have the courage of their convictions would make it a point to be present to lay his case before the proper tribunal. This, however, is only a negative test, and is far from re-assuring to the staff of teachers who have labored patiently and unceasingly and to the Board of Trustees who have sacrificed more or less of their time in looking after the management of the school. A well attended annual school meeting where women as well as men take an active interest in the school business is one of the positive proofs of a sympathetic bond between the school and the people of the community surrounding it.

COAL COMPANY WINS.

Heavy Damage Suits Settled at Last.

Word was received by wire yesterday that Mr. Justice Martin had given his verdict in the big damage suits, the hearing of which occupied nearly four weeks at Nelson recently. His lordship gave judgement in favor of the Coal Company with costs to be paid by plaintiffs. The claims of the plaintiffs aggregated $800,000 from 91 claimants. The case resolved itself into a question as to whether the explosion was caused by gas or dust. It is presumed that the former theory, advocated by the defence, was held by Mr. Justice Martin as the correct one.

THE LAST OBSTACLE GONE.

PREMIER WILL ASSIST INCORPORATION.

Now Ready for Petition.—Hon. Messrs. McBride and Green Meet Board of Trade.

A special meeting of the Board of Trade was called for Tuesday evening to meet the visiting Ministers from Victoria. A large number of members attended. The Hon. Premier asked the Board to explain the various matters to be brought before his notice that he might reply to them in order. The incorporation matter was the burning question of the day and Mr. Rennie went into the details of the agreement and explained clearly what was asked of the government. The public buildings, the Flathead trial, small debts court and drainage into the Elk were also submitted.

The substance of Mr. McBride's reply was as follows:—The early incorporation of the town appeared to be desirable from many standpoints and the government had no wish to stand in the way of the town. He would introduce necessary legislation ratifying the agreement between the Coal Company and the townspeople.

The road to the Flathead was a matter which might have to be delayed for a few months owing to the lack of funds in the treasury. The business might go by the doors of Fernie for a few months but it would not be long until the natural advantages of Fernie as an outfitting point would assert themselves.

The Premier spoke of the public buildings in the same manner. Fernie was destined to be a large and important centre. The government was fully alive to this fact and would erect large and commodious buildings as soon as the state of its finances would justify it.

The small debts court was a matter he would be pleased to institute upon regular application through the local member.

The drainage into the Elk was a matter to be considered by the Provincial Board of Health. He would if necessary send the secretary, Dr. Fagin, up from Victoria to make a report on the matter.

The tax rebate as desired by those who suffered in the fire was without a precedent and he was of the opinion that it was contrary to the statutes. The cabinet still had the matter under consideration.

Hon. Mr. Green spoke briefly along the same lines that his leader had taken. Both expressed pleasure at meeting the Board and they spoke most optimistically of the great future ahead of Fernie. A vote of thanks was extended to the visiting Ministers.

The following day the Premier signed a document promising the adoption of legislation re incorporation at the next meeting of the Assembly. The commitee are now in a position to circulate the petition, and the letters patent will be issued without delay. The election of a council should take place in a couple of weeks.

The local authorities gave Mr. Piper every assistance but failed to locate their man. Jordon was tried at Frank and was sent to Macleod to stand his trial.

The grand stand at the recreation grounds has been vastly improved this week by the addition of two rows of seats at the top and a shingled roof over the whole. IN A FIGURATIVE SENSE

MEANING OF DICTUM OF SEER OF PATMOS, "WITHOUT ARE DOGS."

DEGRADED CURS OF ORIENT

Rev. Dr. Talmage Draws a Broad Distinction Between the Life That Is Inspired By a Love of All That Is Noble and Pure and One That Has Become Degraded and Brutal Through the Indulgence of Selfish Passions.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by William Bally, of Toronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 19.—Not in the literal but in the figurative sense does the preacher deal with this unusual text by drawing the broad distinction between the life that is inspired by a love of all that is noble and pure and one that has become degraded and brutal through the indulgence of selfish passions. The text is Revelations xxii, 15, "Without are dogs."

"I never could sympathize with the slur which the Bible casts upon my canine friends," once said an old man to me. "St. John in that passage of Scripture, 'Without are dogs,' seems to despise the dog as I despise the buzzard or the hyena. He seems to picture the infernal regions as the only suitable place for their kennels. He insinuates their companionship for man to be a humiliation and a degradation. Now, in contrast to that assertion, I have far more respect for an honest dog than for a dishonest, deceitful man. I count among my dearest friends some of the representatives of the canine race. Indeed I go so far in my respect for dogs that if in that heavenly land I found one of the beautiful dogs I have owned on earth sleeping at my feet in that abode of bliss or looking up into my face with the expression of love and fidelity I have seen so often I should not feel it any blight, but rather an enhancement of my happiness."

I could understand my friend's feeling, and I love dogs well enough to sympathize with it. There are no grounds for believing in a future life for animals, but I confess that if in the boundless love of God we should find that even for the faithful dog there was a paradise I for one should rejoice. I have that affection that Sir Walter Scott had for the canine race, and I always feel a sense of companionship when a dog is dozing in my study. As a boy I delighted to have a canine companion in my rambles. When we are rambling over the hills or in our city walks and my dog friends stop and listen to what I say I am always sure of one fact, that they will not betray my confidence as I have known some men to do. "Yes, yes," I said to my aged friend, "like you, I have always loved the dog; but, unlike you, I do not believe the Bible really depreciates the faithfulness of a good dog." This passage of Scripture, "Without are dogs," is not casting a slur upon the dog. It is not sneering at the ancestors of some of those noble beasts belonging to the royal families of dogs which we have adopted into our homes as honored habitues of our firesides. The seer of Patmos had never seen such dogs as ours. The dogs with which he was familiar were such homeless, carrion eating dogs as those which to this day roam the narrow streets of Jerusalem and Damascus, degraded curs, whose presence would have been defiling to that beautiful city which he saw in vision. Therefore it is to the eastern dog, homeless and friendless, which I have so often seen in my travels and by whose howlings I have been awakened at night and have watched while standing upon the hotel porch of the Far East, when he says with evident gratification, "Without are dogs."

But I believe the apostle had a further and deeper meaning than this. I think he meant that the qualities which the dog represented to his mind were excluded from the heavenly city. Selfishness, degradation, quarrelsomeness, all that rendered dogs hateful to the Jews of the orient, whether in beast or man, were outside those heavenly walls. And, first, I believe he meant that in heaven there would be neither physical nor mental monstrosities. It is to be a place where there would be a perfect mind in harmony with a perfect body and the perfect soul in every way shall have perfect externalities. There are some men so degraded with their vices that their very forms and features have become repulsive. They bear the same relation to good living, intelligent men that the oriental dogs bear to our household pets.

How much this transformation means to many sufferers none but they can realize. It is very hard for the deformed and the crippled to maintain spiritual and mental sweetness and serenity. It is easy for a man with a fine constitution and a perfect physical form to be cheerful and happy, but how difficult for one who has to suffer continual pain and is shut out by deformity from the sports and exercises of companions to be sweet tempered and genial to all about him. "What is the matter with So-and-So?" I once asked a dear friend of mine about a mutual acquaintance. "He is so touchy and sensitive that the least wind from the east will twist him all out of shape." "Yes," answered my friend, "that is true, but perhaps you have forgotten that that man was born lame. If you ever stop to think, you will also find that nearly all men and women born with physical infirmities are cross and crabbed and touchy and sensitive." "I never thought of it," I answered. "I believe—yes, I know you are right." Physical infirmity is accompanied by and, in fact, involves mental pain and anguish. All this will be done away with in the celestial city.

Let me illustrate my thought in another way, the thought that a healthy body is very apt to be the incasement of a healthy mind and soul. Here is a little child born into my home. You look in wonderment upon that child. For weeks and months you go among your friends boasting about that baby. "Why," you say, "that is the most perfect dispositioned child I ever knew. She never cries. She is always smiling and cooing. She never awakens us at night. She is as happy as a sunbeam creeping into our bedroom in the early morning." But after that little child has been in your home eight or ten months suddenly her nature seems to undergo a radical change. The hot hand of fever touches her forehead. The red marks blotch her fair skin. Raked and twisted with pain, she cries all the day and most of the night, and even in her sleep she continually utters a low, moaning whine. What is the matter? Has the child's disposition changed? Oh, no. The physical body has become diseased, and now the mind is fretting in sympathy. Thus we find that a perfect body is apt to have a perfect mind and an imperfect body an imperfect mind. So, when St. John says, "Without are dogs," I believe he means that in heaven we shall have no physical infirmities, no club-foot like Lord Byron, no gnarled and twisted nervous organization like Alexander Pope, no blinded eyes like John Milton, no deaf ears like Beethoven, no skin leprous and covered with sores. It shall be physically a "dogless heaven."

Roaming again through the crowded streets of Palestine, I find that the same merciless tribal bitterness and mortal enmities which were once rife among the North American Indians are prevalent among the dogs of the east. As each Indian tribe owned its own territory and in time of war it meant death for a member of one tribe to be found wandering about in the "land of strangers," so the dogs of the east take possession of the different streets of the great cities. Each canine tribe has its sentinels standing guard at the end of the streets. Then if one dog of another tribe enters that street the howl of warning is given. At once all the other dogs of that tribe leap to their feet and, as a pack of hungry wolves, make a mad rush for that stranger to tear him limb from limb.

We must study my text in the canine language of the east. Old hunters tell us that no man has truly heard a lion roar unless he has heard the king of the forest sound his call of defiance in the dark jungles of the African continent. Then the awe striking power of that voice seems to come from everywhere and yet from nowhere. The hills are sounding boards which toss the echoes as the battledores throw the shuttlecocks backward and forward. Then the fawns squat down with fright, and the mother birds press lower upon their nests, and the very leaves of the trees seem too terror stricken to move. Like the roaring lions in the African forests, are the howlings of the dogs in the streets of Damascus and Jerusalem. When one canine tribe plunges upon a dog of another tribe which wanders into their street or territory it seems as though all the demoniacal voices of the infernal regions are let loose. First there comes the sharp, angry bark, as though the picket line of a great army had fired a gun to call the host to arms, then muttered growls, then the frightened bark of the pursued dog, then a very pandemonium of barkings and growlings and angry, snarling canine voices. They awake the sleeping tourist so suddenly that at first he will start up from his bed with fright. Then follows the suggestive silence as the battle evidently ends by the death of the victim or by the escape of the pursued.

What is the Johannian meaning of this mortal combat between the tribal dogs of the east? Why, it means that in heaven there are to be no family meannesses, no contemptible, merciless ways such as are often found at the earthly fireside. It means that instead of one father and one mother gathering their own children about them in one "Mansion of Light," and saying to one of themselves: "Shut the door and keep every one else out. We have enough, and more than enough now. Let all others take care of themselves as best they can," all men will be brothers, and all women sisters. There we shall all be sons and daughters of one God, who is the Father, and have kinship to one Christ, who is the Elder Brother. It means that in heaven there will be no envious plebeian blood, and no distinctive, supercilious, aristocratic blood, because there we shall all have been washed in the royal blood of Jesus. It means that in heaven no wealthy man's wife will be able to suck out the life of a poor sewing girl merely because she is poor, and no employer will be able to grind his employes down until it means physical and mental and often spiritual death. It means no vendetta or blood feud, it also means no financial vendetta or money feud.

Roaming again through the dark, narrow, crowded streets of eastern Palestine, I surmise, from the words of my text, that heaven is to be a place of honored and jubilant occupations. It is to be a place where the words "menial" and "servile," "scavenger" and "scullion," "hireling" and "dependent," "lackey" and "underling" will be unknown. All words signifying a degraded work will forever disappear when the lexicons of earth shall be forever consumed upon the funeral pyre of a burning world. It does not mean that heaven is to be a place of inanition and stagnation and stupidity. But it does mean that heaven is to be a place where all workmen shall be honored alike and where the duties of one immortal shall be respected as much as are the occupations of other immortals.

Why do I make these two astounding statements? First, because I find recorded in the eighth chapter of Revelation the startling fact that "there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour." If heaven was always a still place would St. John have written that sentence in reference to the day of judgment. If you would interpret that passage in a common sense way would you not practically say, "Why, heaven is such a busy place that all the angels and archangels and redeemed immortals are working, and working all the time? But when St. John saw the books of the judgment opened then there was an awful stillness. Every winged messenger kept still, every work ceased, every occupation was suspended." As Albert Barnes interpreted this passage, "Then there was an awful stillness, as if all heaven was reverently waiting for the development." Oh, yes, heaven is to be a busy place. It has been very busy during all the years and the millenniums that are past. It will be very busy during all the eternities that are to come, with the exception of one cessation of work for a short time, when there shall be "silence in heaven for about the space of half an hour."

Following my first premise that heaven is to be a busy place my second premise is likewise true. How do I know that the busy occupations of heaven will never offer despised work for the redeemed immortals? The words of my text prove that. The dogs of the east were the scavengers. The eastern people had no wonderful systems of sewerage as have we. They had no means of carrying away by subterranean pipes the offal and refuse of their large towns. But all the refuse of the kitchens and the homes and the barns were and are thrown into the streets where the dogs devour them. In heaven, however, we shall have none of the repulsive and abhorrent occupations with which earth has been cursed.

The eastern dog's death is a gloomy picture. He dies the death of all wild beasts, and that death is a tragedy. Some years ago the author of a history of the beasts of the African forests made this statement, which will long live in my memory: "No beast or bird or reptile in all the dark continent dies a natural death. No sooner does his physical strength weaken than there are some bestial or serpentine cannibals or some enemy of his species ready to feed upon his dying body and still the feeble or the quick beatings of his heart." That means every deer or fawn that dies, dies a tragic death. Every quick-eyed and sharp-clawed lynx must fall in time before a mortal foe. Every monster leader of the elephantine herd, every shaggy-maned Bengal king, must die a violent death. So dies the dog; but, thank God, so does not die the Christian.

John B. Gough in one of his wonderful lectures gives a description of the remarkable escape of his father, who was an old English soldier, from dying a horrible death. It was during the famous Franco-English war of 1809, when the British troops were retreating before lightning-horsed Marshal Soult. Hungry and faint and sick from exposure and lack of food and also from loss of blood from a wound in the chest, young Gough staggered along with his regiment as long as he could and then fell by the roadside to die. "He must die," said his son. "It seemed inevitable that he must die. Suddenly, as he lay upon the ground, a large bird of prey, with a red neck growing out of a ruffle of feathers, came swooping along, almost touching my father's body with its wings, and then, circling up, it alighted on a point of a rock and turned its blood red eye on its intended victim. As my father saw that horrible thing watching and waiting to tear him in pieces, even before life was extinct, it so filled him with horror that he cried: "I cannot endure this. When I am unable to drive that fearful thing away, it will be tearing my flesh.' He rose to his felt and crawled and struggled on, till at length he crept into a hut and found safety." The death which menaced that wounded man is the death which awaits the eastern dog. When he is incapable of defending himself he is torn to pieces. Men, too, have perished through the vindictive passions of their fellows. Some have been crucified, as was Christ; some have been stoned, as was Stephen; some have been beheaded, as was Paul; some have been burned at the stake, as were Ridley and Latimer. But how different was their future from that of the dog! From out those crushed and mutilated bodies the martyr spirits have gone up, redeemed and glorified, to dwell forever before the throne.

Oh, ye mortals, destined to live forever either in bliss or in misery, does not the offer that Christ makes you stir your desire for salvation? Accept his proffered gift, and then be your end what it may, your being rooted up from this world, with its bitter fruits of sorrow and pain and misery, will mean nothing more than your being transplanted into that supernal garden in which you will grow and flourish and bear fruit to the honor and glory of God.

The seed of eternal life planted by the Holy Spirit in your heart can change your whole nature. Instead of those qualities which degrade you to the level of the brutes, instead of the sinful propensities which distort and deform your being, there shall grow from that divine seed a plant of beauty, graceful and glorious with heavenly loveliness and eternal in ever developing life. "Ye shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth its fruit in its season; and whatsoever ye doeth shall prosper." What is your choice? Will you live a life of beauty and usefulness, a life patterned on that divine life which Christ lived on earth, rending in a triumphant resurrection, or will you choose the wickedness, the vice, the corruption, of the world, feeding like the eastern dog on the carrion of life and becoming in nature like him? Remember, if ye live after the flesh ye shall die, and from that abode of bliss, where there are joys forever more, you will be excluded with all whose natures have grown fierce and cruel and debased. "Without are dogs."

London cabmen pay from about $2.50 to $3 a day for a hansom, according to the season. A driver's profits average nearly $3 a day.

NERVOUS TROUBLES.

Promptly and Permanently Cured by Dr. Williams Pink Pills.

There is no torture more acute and intolerable than nervousness. A nervous person is in a state of constant irritation by day and sleeplessness by night. The sufferer starts at every noise, is shaky, depressed, and, although in a constantly exhausted state, is unable to sit or lie still. If you are nervous or worried or suffer from a combination of langour and irritation you need a nerve tonic, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are absolutely the best thing in the world for you. You can only get rid of nervousness through feeding your nerves with rich, red blood, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood. There is no doubt about this—thousands can testify to the blood-making, nerve-restoring qualities of these pills. St. Vitus dance is one of the most severe forms of nervousness, and Mrs. H. Hevenor, of Gravenhurst, Ont., tells how these pills cured her little boy. She says:

"At the age of eight my little boy was attacked with St. Vitus dance from which he suffered in a severe form. His nerves twitched to such an extent that he was almost helpless, and had to be constantly watched. He was under several doctors at different times, but they did not help him, so I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and these have completely cured him, and now not a sign of the trouble remains."

When you buy these pills always look at the box and see that the full name, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is printed on the wrapper, and refuse to take anything else. You can get these pills from all medicine dealers or they will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Curious Bread Law.

There is a curious provision in the British bread acts of 1822 and 1836, which are still in force, to the effect that "every person who shall make for sale or sell or expose for sale any bread made wholly or partially of peas or beans or potatoes or of any sort of corn or grain other than wheat shall cause all such bread to be marked with a large Roman 'M.'" It would thus appear that the baker who chooses to put potatoes in his bread could escape the charge of adulteration by marking the loaf with this letter in the manner described.

Passions and the Face.

All real and enduring beauty must come from within. Notice how angry passions, evil emotions, worry, fear, hatred, envy, jealousy, malice, even though they be but momentary feelings, will distort and destroy for the time being the most perfectly fashioned face. If evil thoughts or deeds be persisted in, the transient effects will become lasting.—Success.

EDDY'S IMPERVIOUS SHEATHING

The Best Building Paper Made.

It is very much stronger and thicker than any other (tarred or building) paper. It is impervious to wind, keeps out cold, keeps in heat, carries no smell or odor, absorbs no moisture, imparts no taste or flavor to anything with which it comes in contact. It is largely used not only for sheeting houses, but for lining cold storage buildings, refrigerators, dairies, creameries, and all places where the object is to keep an even and uniform temperature, and at the same time avoiding dampness.

IMMIGRATION CENTRES

FOUR LAND DISTRICTS TO WHICH TIDE OF EMIGRATION FLOWS.

There are four great central land districts toward which the tide of emigrants flows in Western Canada. They are Regina, Calgary, Red Deer and Edmonton. Lethbridge, on the south, and Battleford and Prince Albert on the north, are the other three points where general land offices are maintained. The first four are receiving the bulk of the new settlers this year. In the past Regina has led all other land offices in point of numbers of homestead entries made in the territories. Three thousand a year was the high water mark, and a month that did not witness 300 applications at Regina was considered dull. That has been the story for the past three or four years. The territory tributary to the Regina land office is equal to that of Lethbridge, Calgary, Red Deer and Edmonton. It extends from the fourth meridian on the west to the second on the east, and from the state line on the south to within fifty miles of the town of Battleford, on the north. This vast district consists almost wholly of surveyed lands, subject to homesteading.

The Calgary district is being flooded so rapidly by ranchers and farmers that the surveyed lands are down to a close margin. In other words, the homesteaders are keeping up with the Government surveyors. J. R. Sutherland, the Calgary land agent, said to me that the Government surveyors worked overtime last year, and will have to do even better this year if the land in demand is to be ready for the newcomers. Large numbers of squatters have overrun the big stretch of unsurveyed land north of the Calgary district, extending into Red River, Edmonton and Battleford. Squatter rights are not recognized, and only the man on the ground when the Government surveyors arrive can be recognized. This makes squatter sovereignty a very uncertain quantity.

Calgary Leads This Year.

This year the Calgary land office leads all others in the territories. The agents cast a balance as at June 1 for the previous year. At Calgary, for the year ending June 1, 1903, the record shows 1,916 entries. Regina was two thousand in advance, while the four other big districts, with Prince Albert added, were less than Calgary, but combined they exceeded the entries at Regina by two thousand.

Ten months of the fiscal year have passed. Calgary shows to-day, according to Mr. Sutherland's latest compilation, 2,416 homestead entries. He estimated that the next two months—very favorable months—would swell the total for the fiscal year to 3,000. At the same time Regina is falling behind these figures, though Red Deer and Edmonton are approaching closer.

While there is plenty of desirable farming and grazing land to be had on the homestead plan all over the territories, nothing worthy of the name may be secured closer than thirty miles from the railroad. Replying to an inquiry as to how much longer this rush of settlers could be handled, with a guarantee of free homes for all who come, Mr. Sutherland said that it was uncertain, but that Canada would have twenty to thirty millions of inhabitants before the supply would be exhausted.

From $10 to $50 Per Acre.

The casual observer is impressed, however, with the rapid settlement of the territories and the certainty that within a short time—as time goes in the life of a nation—the immense public domain that is so generously distributed among all who seek the west will be a thing of the past. Driving a mile from Calgary with President Talbot of the Pure Bred Cattle Breeders' Association of the Territories, I was entertained with interesting stories of rapid development. With a sweep of his hand over a considerable area, showing farm-houses on every quarter section and cattle grazing on every hill, Mr. Talbot alluded to the fact that but a few years ago the best could be pre-empted for a ten-dollar Government fee. Now it is held at from thirty to forty dollars an acre.

But from a former Ontario boy I received the clearest analysis of the conditions prevailing in the territories. John R. Sutherland, brother of Hugh Sutherland, is the land agent at Calgary. He came west from Ingersoll, Ont., in 1875. For many years he was located in Manitoba. With papers piled up to his ears around his desk, each representing the hopes and the wealth of some homesteader, Mr. Sutherland discussed the situation. The rush has carried the employes of the office to the point where they must work night and day to keep anywhere near the head of the line, with no hope of catching up until an increase of help is secured.

Alberta Grows Wheat.

"Alberta has become well known as a grazing country. The truth is that we raise as fine quality of number 1 hard north and south of Calgary as the farmers of Manitoba. This is the evolution of the farm. For years it was not supposed the territory was of value agriculturally. I recall in 1875 that when I first went to Manitoba the agent of the Hudson Bay Company was insisting that wheat could not be grown there. Apparently he was right. The first put in around Portage la Prairie was caught by the frost. It would not ripen. Before it could mature the frost ruined it for commercial purposes. But to-day the plains of Portage la Prairie produce the finest No. 1 hard that goes into the Liverpool elevators. Why? The farmers have learned to farm. The increased area of cultivated soil reduced the probabilities of frost. They learned that after all frost goes in streaks. While it might make its appearance in one field or section, it did no damage in adjacent farms. In other words, they learned that frost acts as erratically as hail.

"They talked for years of Alberta being a fine ranching country, but impossible for wheat raising, yet to-day they are raising in some sections of Alberta 52 bushels of No. 1 hard to the acre. I still advocate mixed farming as the most productive in this section, but the point is that farmers learn to overcome what appears to be insurmountable natural barriers to the cultivation of the soil of Alberta. To-day in Southern Alberta they are producing immense quantities of what we call fall wheat. In the States they call it winter wheat. It grades No. 1 hard, and is of superior quality. This variety is better adapted to Alberta than the spring article, because it matures several weeks earlier and the chances of its destruction by frost are materially less. Yet fall wheat was an unknown quantity with the pioneer farmers of Alberta. They could produce nothing but spring wheat.

Ontario and Alberta Compared.

"Farming in Ontario and here are entirely different propositions. Here wheat grows twice as high as in Ontario. I have seen wheat as high as a man's head and well developed grains, grading No. 1 hard. When I first came to Calgary I remember that farmers who had gone in around Regina abandoned their farms, asserting that the country was not adapted to wheat raising. They went into Manitoba and some came here, yet to-day that same section of Regina is included in the great wheat belt. This illustrates the idea. Men who cultivate the soil successfully in Ontario and the States will be successful in this region, but it is not reasonable to suppose they will farm as profitably the first year as the second. The practical chaps recognize this as a fact."—G. C. Porter in The Toronto World.

Doukhobors Are Doing Well.

Prof. James Mavor, of Toronto University, gave an account recently at Winnipeg of the phenomenal progress made by the Doukhobor colonists since his first visit, made to them five years ago. "The leader of the Doukhobors, Peter Verigin," said Prof. Mavor, "is indeed a remarkable man. He has been in the colony just eighteen months, having come in November, 1902. In this short time he has altered the character of the community, has changed their mode of agriculture, gradually introducing modern methods, and has built up an organization out of chaos."

Several thousand acres of land have been broken, and the area under cultivation this year will be greater than that sown last year. Verigin is determined to have first-class horses and cattle. Just now he is negotiating for the purchase of some high-class stock.

In the past year or two the colony has expended $60,000 in the purchase of land, and invested largely in farm machinery. The north and south colonies, comprising the villages to the north and to the south of Fort Pelly, are moving forward to great prosperity.

The Doukhobors near Rosthern, whose settlement was also visited, are more individualistic. They do not hold their land in common, and only to a small extent co-operate with their brethern of the north and south colony.

"If," said Prof. Mavor, "Verigin succeeds in organizing the labor of the large body of men he has to deal with, and in holding them together, there is no doubt that in a few years the Doukhobor lands will be among the most productive in the Northwest. By his wonderful management he has already saved the community at least $40,000.

A Nova Scotian in Newfoundland.

Alfred Bishop Morine, leader of the Opposition in the Newfoundland Legislature, who recently addressed the Canadian Club in Toronto, was born in Port Medway, N. S. He went to Newfoundland in 1882 to edit The St. John's Mercury, and four years later ran for the Legislature, defeating a Cabinet Minister. He has been a member of the House almost continuously ever since, and has, in successive Cabinets, been Colonial Secretary, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and Minister of Finance and Customs. On two occasions he was appointed on colonial delegations which appeared before the Imperial Parliament in connection with the French treaties. Mr. Morine was called to the Bar in 1894, after graduating LL.B. at Dalhousie University, and at once became prominent in legal circles. He is known in the island as the "fighting politician," a title earned as the principal figure in a score of historic Parliamentary "scenes." Mr. Morine has a dominating personality. He is a fluent and incisive speaker, a past master in the use of biting sarcasm, and never so happy as when leading a forlorn hope. Holding a permanent retainer from the Reid-Newfoundland Railway, Mr. Morine's political influence in the island at the present time is weak. He has been always an unblushing advocate of the entrance of Newfoundland into the Canadian confederacy.

A New Ontario Paper.

New Ontario is to have a new newspaper, The Temiskaming Herald, of New Liskeard. The proprietor is Mr. John Sharp, M.A., formerly a lecturer in Morrin College, Quebec, and Queen's University. Mr. Sharp has been associated with the Temiskaming district from the very early pioneer days, and is highly respected in the country, for his practical sagacity as well as for his scholarship and culture. The Herald he announces, will be an independent paper, refusing to "be governed or controlled in any way by any political party or faction," its special politics being "New Ontario, first, last and always." A journal which rigidly adheres to this program should prove interesting and useful.

THE GROUSE.

Clever Bird Which Has a Hundred Tricks of Defence With Which to Fool Its Foes.

The grouse has a hundred tricks of defense. It will sometimes lie still until the hunter is within a yard of it, then soar straight upward in his front, towering like a woodcock. Again it will rise forty yards away, and the sound of its wings is his only notice of its presence. It will cower upon a branch under which he passes, and his cap will not be more than a foot below it as he goes, and, though it has seen him approaching, it will remain quiescent in frightful fear until his back is turned. It will flush then, and when he has slewed himself hurriedly around he will catch only a glimpse of a broad brown wing far away. Wounded and falling in the open, it will be found—if it is found at all—with the telltale speckles of its breast against the trunk of some brown tree, against which its feathers are indistinguishable, and the black ruff about the neck of the male will be laid against the darkest part of the bark. Often it will double like a fox. Often as man draws near it will spring noiselessly into some spruce and hide until he passes, dropping then to the ground and continuing its feeding. Often, too, it will decline to take wing, though unhurt, and will run fast for a half mile—so fast that the most expert woodsman will be unable to keep pace with it. This it will do only on leafy ground and never when snow would betray its tracks.—Outing.

A Former British Columbian.

Wherever things "are doing" there you find a man from British Columbia. A Tokio correspondent of The Victoria Colonist points out that the man in charge of the repairs to Russia's "lame ducks" at Port Arthur is a former British Columbian. He is Mr. John Gilchrist, formerly engineer on one of the Empress liners running between Hong Kong and Vancouver and Victoria. Mr. Gilchrist left the service a few years ago and went to work for the Hong Kong & Whampoa Dock Company. Then he returned to Clydesdale, but he heard "the east a-calling" again and went out to work as engineer at the Whampoa docks. Thence he went to Dalny, where he was when the war commenced. By orders of Viceroy Alexieff he proceeded to the dock at Port Arthur, when the doings of the ships of Admiral Togo filled that port with vessels for the dock. He was given a large salary, and placed in charge of the repair work. He got together all the engineers he could find in the vicinity and with a large force of Chinese coolies has been working night and day.

When Building Was Cheap.

In the days when "The Grange" was built, houses were not dear in Toronto. That was in 1817. Anyone who has seen "The Grange" will have noted that this colonial facsimile of an English manorial establishment is not only large, but well and solidly built. A visit to the interior tells the same story, and reveals a sort of architecture which would have delighted the soul of an Anglo-Saxon king. In that rambling manor, with its panelled walls and dark, lofty ceilings, and heavy carved balustrades, are carloads of walnut and oak; timber enough, if sold for furniture, to build ten large, up-to-date houses in Toronto, even at the present extravagant cost of building. The walls are solid, and the masonry in good condition. The outside pillars are of stone. The building—now the oldest brick house in Toronto—looks as though it might easily stand another half century. Yet, according to Mr. Goldwin Smith, the present occupant of "The Grange," this remarkable building was put up for the fabulous sum of $4,000!

Seventy-Eight Miles an Hour.

The Michigan Central Railway recently made a world's record for fast runs on steam railways, knocking out all previous records. President Ledyard, of the Michigan Central, and President Newman, of the New York Central, passed over the Michigan Central, en route from New York to Chicago, on a special train of one baggage and three private cars. From Niagara Falls to St. Thomas, 115 miles, the time was 97 minutes. On the west end it took twelve minutes and thirty seconds to reach Shedden, owing to slowing up through the city and for the bridge. Windsor, 111 miles, was made in 94 minutes, 30 seconds. From Shedden to Essex, 86 28.100 miles, the run was made in 66 minutes, or 78 53.00 miles an hour. On the east division, where from Perry it is uphill, 91 59.100 miles, was run in 73 minutes, at the rate of 75 48.100 miles an hour.

Women on the Farm.

A circular containing a series of questions regarding farm life was recently distributed throughout the province at the suggestion of the National Council of Women, and answers are now being received. In the majority of cases the question, "Is farm life a desirable one for women," is answered in the affirmative, and from the replies it would seem as if very little milking was now done by women except at busy times. Teaching school and dressmaking is the answer generally given to the question as to the occupation of farmers' daughters who have left home. The average acreage of the farm is given at from 100 to 150. The difficulty of securing help is marked, and catarrh and rheumatism are given as the chief complaints from which women suffer.

Clean Nests for Setters.

When setting one or more hens in the same nest, at different times, always clean the nest out thoroughly. Whitewash and place in some new chaff or hay and burn all the old litter, as there may be lice in it.

RUSSIANS KILLED

SURPRISED IN A RAVINE. 1,600 VICTIMS.

Japanese Continue to Add to the Enemy's List of Heavy Losses—Reported that Russian Boats Ran on to Mines.

A despatch to the Daily Mail, London, from New Chwang says: While the Russian force of 8,000 under Gen. Kondratsvitch was traversing Wafunko ravine, nine miles southeast of Kai Chou on June 19, it was surprised by concealed Japanese artillery. The Russians lost heavily, their casualties being 1,100 in number.

Gen. Kondratsvitch extricated his men and led them in good order to an entrenched position.

RUSSIAN BOAT STRUCK MINES

A Tokio despatch says; The Japanese captured a junk leaving Port Arthur Tuesday, and the Chinese on board say that a few days ago two Russian torpedo boat destroyers and the steamer Shin Talping struck mines at the entrance of the harbor and sank. 140 lives were lost according to their account.

The Tokio correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says that thirty-one guns, three torpedoes and a large quantity of ammunition have been recovered from the Russian cruiserVariag, which was sunk by the Japanese at Chemulpo at the begining of hostilities.

COREAN PROVINCES DEPLETED.

A correspondent of the Associated Press in summing up his observations of a two months' tour of Corea, says that the country has been depleted of, its reserve stock of corn, which is its principal wealth, by the demand of the Japanese. The absence of fortifications, he says, discounts the idea that the Japanese intend to make Corea their base. The Corean soldiers, he points out are almost worthless, even when led by good officers. A tour of the country east of the Manchurian railway made by the correspondent shows that there is no large organization of Chinese bandits and that the bandits consist of only a few scattered bands.

MUST SEND TWO COPIES.

Major-Gen. Pflug, chief of the military staff of the Viceroy Alexieff, announces that on July 20 he will suspend the foreign correspondents whose papers have failed to send the viceroy two copies of each issue containing their contributions. The suspension will continue until the copies are received.

NO ATTACHES ON BOARD.

The report that foreign attaches were on board the Japanese transports which were sunk by the Vladivostock squadron in the Straits of Corea, is untrue. Three Englishmen, L. Anderson, J. D. Ring and M. Kerr officers of the transport Sado, were brought to Vladivostock. They say that other Japanese transports are in many cases officered by Englishmen. The Sado lost $1,000,000 in English gold.

FOUND ON PRAIRIE

Gallician Taken to Hospital With Fractured Leg.

A section foreman of the C.P.R., named Hollonquist, came into the waterworks, Winnipeg, Tuesday night at 8.30 and asked for the loan of rig to take a man to the hospital. Hollonquist represented that the injured man had been working on the C.N.R. extension near Bergen, and when on he train had been ejected therefrom while the train was in motion. He was found by two farmers, who brought him to the section house on the C.P.R. main line, west of the city yards and left him in charge of Hollonquist. The farmers wanted the section foreman to send the injured man into the city by train, but in view of his apparently serious condition it was decided to bring him to the city at once, on a hand car. When they neared the waterworks a horse and rig was observed and a request was made for the loan of it, which was acceded to. The rig belongs to the electrical department of the city. On the injured man a time cheque was found, which stated that $9 was coming to him less deduction of $3.50 for board and 75 cents for medical attendance. At the hospital, the house surgeon reported that the left leg was broken above the knee and was also fractured at the ankle.

ABSCONDED IN A TRUNK

Paymaster Hamel, of Ottawa, Levants With $10,000.

In a trunk perforated with holes, City Paymaster Hamel, of Ottawa, Canada, arrived at New York from Montreal, and is hiding in the city. Hamel made the long trip to escape the vigilance of the Canadian detectives. The trunk was carefully punched full of holes, Hamel locked in and shipped to the city as baggage. A friend claimed the trunk, when it reached New York, and Hamel almost dead from the heat and his cramped position was taken out. Hamel is alleged to have absconded $10,000.

The news of the manner of Hamel's departure from Canada to New York was conveyed to Mayor Laporte, of Montreal, in a letter from Rouse's Point, N.Y., where a man lives who knows Hamel.

BURYING THE DEAD

Funerals in 37 Churches on Saturday—Bodies Recovered 624.

More than three days and nights of unceasing search has resulted in the recovery of 624 bodies of victims of the awful disaster that befell the great excursion steamer General Slocum on Wednesday morning. While even this appalling number does not represent the full extent of the calamity, hopes are now entertained that comparatively few bodies remain to be recovered. There is a possibility that when the charred hulk is brought to the surface a considerable number of bodies may be found within the tangled mass of wreckage which has defied all the divers attempts at complete exploration. Doubtless, too, many bodies have been swept away by the whirling current of Hell Gate, and carried out into the waters of the sound or out past Sandy Hook to the open sea.

The number of those officially recorded as missing is 318, but of these many have been accounted for whose names have not been taken from the list, and many are among the dead whose identification is impossible.

114 FUNERALS

The region in the vicinity of St. Mark's German Lutherian church in East Sixth street was to-day the scene of 114 funerals, representing the burial of nearly 200 bodies, almost all of whom were women and children. Enormous crowds thronged the quarter and a large force of policemen was necessary to prevent disorder and keep clear a passage for the lines of hearses and carriages. Funeral services were held in no less than thirty-seven churches of various demonimations in the quarter.

Sixteen more bodies recovered during the day, were brought down from the scene of the wreck to the temporary morgue at the foot of East Twenty-seventh street this afternoon. So great was the clamor for admission to the pier that all control of the crowd was lost and on the entrance to the pier being thrown open a rush took place during which many people were knocked down and trampled on.

Mayor McClellan authorized Police Commissioner McAdoo to contract with a wrecking company to raise the hull of the Slocum. A powerful wrecking tug was despatched to North Brother island to-night with orders to raise the wreck as soon as possible and tow it to shallow water off Bikers island, where it will be searched for any bodies that may yet remain on it.

The investigation of the coroner began on Monday morning and about 200 witnesses were examined in the effort to fix the responsibility for the disaster.

BURIAL OF UNCLAIMED DEAD.

The unknown and unclaimed dead, umbering 29, were buried by the ity Saturday a special plot in the utherian cemetery having been provided. Of the 29 bodies, only one was that of a man, there being eleven children and 17 women. As the fourteen hearses carrying these unknown victims of the disaster passed, an unusually large crowd stood respectfully on the sidewalks making a line extending several blocks to the pier whence the ferry carried them over to the Long Island shore. The men stood with bowed and uncovered heads and by far the greater portion of the women and children gathered along the street knelt. Even those who are orignally phlegmatic and unemonstrative were affected by the sorrow that all seemed to feel, and sobs shook the frames of the women while tears streamed down the cheeks of the men.

The cortege continued through the streets lined with mourning thousands, until it became a part of the long procession of funerals that were wending their way to the cemetery.

Coroner Berry stated that more than two hundred witnesses had been summoned to appear at the inquest.

How He Evaded the Suicide Law.

Lord Chief Justice Hankford of England, who lived in a former century, notwithstanding his high position became so tired of life that he determined to shuffle off this mortal coil. But he feared to commit suicide, because at the time a verdict of felo de se followed as a matter of course and the body of the suicide was buried at four crossroads, with a stake thrust through it. Further, he had to avert the consequences to his relatives of forfeiture of his goods, which was also one of the penalties for self destruction. He adopted a novel expedient. Several of his deer having been stolen, he gave orders to his keepers to shoot any person they met in or near the park at night who did not immediately stand when challenged. Then on a dark night he threw himself in the path of the keepers and, not answering the challenge, was shot dead on the spot. The stump of an old oak under which he fell still marks the scene of the tragedy and goes to this day by the name of Hankford's oak.

Man of Excellent Taste.

Burrell—Did you ever notice when a woman comes into the car and there is no seat wholly vacant she invariably takes a seat beside some other woman?

Dixon—Well, why shouldn't she? It's the most natural thing in the world. That's what I always do myself—in fact, I do it when there are plenty of whole seats vacant.—Boston Transcript.

Good Humor.

According to ancient theory, there are four principal humors in the body—blood, phlegm, choler and melancholy. The predominance of any one determined the temper; hence the expression "choleric humor," etc. A nice balance made a good compound called a good humor, and a preponderance of any a bad compound called an ill or bad humor.

THE SLOCUM ENQUIRY

Steamboat Inspector Refused to Give Evidence Fire Hose at 16 Cents a Foot.

A New York despatch says: Evidence of a startling nature which doubtless will have am important bearing on the ultimate result of the coroner's inquiry into the General Slocum disaster, was forthcoming at the inquest Tuesday.

Perhaps the most unexpected incident was the continued refusal to answer questions of Harry Lundburg, a United States steamboat inspector, who was supposed to have inspected the life preservers and the hull of the ill-fated steamer. His refusal was based on the ground that an answer might tend to incriminate him and he acted on the advise of his counsel.

The coroner committed Lundberg to the house of detention, but later accepted $500 bail for his appearance at the hearing on Wednesday, which was satisfactory to the district attorney.

Second Pilot Weaver, of the Slocum, testified that he had purchased the fire hose for that boat, and Mr. Garvan introduced evidence to show that the price paid was 40 cents per foot less 60 per cent. or 16 cents per foot net.

"Don't you know that you can't buy good fire hose for less than a dollar or a dollar and a half a foot?

"I don't know anything about the price of hose," responded Weaver.

Weaver also declared that there had been no fire drill on the Slocum this year.

HE CAPSIZED BOAT IN PANIC.

Daniel O'Neill who, according to his own sworn statement, had never worked on a boat until he was hired on the Slocum, a short time ago, admitted that he became frightened after the fire had gained great headway and had jumped into a row boat filled with people from the Slocum, capsizing it. Asked if he saved anyone, he said there were others doing that, and he was not an expert swimmer. He swam ashore himself, however. O'Neill declared he never saw a fire drill on the boat. "If there had been one I would have been in it, he added.

Referring to the efforts made to throw water on the fire when it was discovered, O'Neill told of the bursting of the hose. When this happened he said, "I ran and got the rubber washing hose," but the coupling would not fit the stand pipe.

ACID ERASURES IN BILLS

Miss C. L. Hall, bookkeeper for the Knickerbocker Steamboat company, told of erasures she had made with acid in certain bills for life preservers, and the substitution of the name "General Slocum" for "Grand Republic." After various explanations had been made by Miss Hall as to the reason for this, Mr. Garvan asked her to say when the erasures were made. The witness was uncertain as to dates, but denied they were made within a month. She used acid, she aid, because that had been her custom, and she had substituted the name "General Slocum" for "convenience.

TOO ILL TO TESTIFY.

Coronor Berry announced that Captain Van Schaick, who commanded the Slocum, was in such a condition at the Lebanon hospital that he may not be able to testify for several days. He tried to get to court today, but collapsed completely, and the doctor ordered him back to bed. The coronor stated that the inquest would not be completed without the captain's testimony.

By the use of dynamite and heavy guns fired by the men of the second battery, scores of bodies were brought up from the bottom around the shores of North Brother island. From sunrise to sunset the searchers along the beach, and in the boats gathered in 112, bringing the number of bodies recovered up to date to the appalling total of 845.

Of these 700 have been identified and the missing are approximately at something more than 300. Many of the bodies last found will never be identified because of the changes that have taken place during the week they have been under water.

The First Riding Lesson.

The pupil of a good riding master is usually disappointed at not being allowed to do more in the first lesson. He expects to mount the horse at once, start off with a trot and wind up with a canter. He is a little annoyed upon finding that the first lesson consists almost wholly of oral instruction and a great part of it on foot at that. If the master is conscientious he will not permit the anxiety to be off and doing to interfere with a proper understanding of the A B C of the art. Should the beginner apply at one of the big riding academies in New York for instruction the first lesson will begin with the leading by a groom of a horse, bridled and saddled, into the center of the ring. The riding master and the pupil take their stand close by, and the former begins to explain painstakingly the various parts of the saddle and bridle and their purposes. Before anything further is attempted the pupil must be able to answer simple questions in regard to the pommel and the cantle, the curb and the snaffle, and to know the uses of the two bits.

Danger Avoided.

Daughter—Is it really bad form to go shopping without a chaperon?

Mrs. De Style—Excessively. Young ladies who shop without a chaperon are almost sure to forget themselves and buy things.—New York Weekly.

Assistance.

"Which of these books or periodicals would you recommend?" asked the woman, with a pleasant smile.

"Well, lady," answered the boy who was attending to the depot news stand, "it depends. If you want genuine first class information I'd sell you dis copy of de Sportin' News, but if you jis' wants somethin' to t'row at de Pullman porter I'd recommend dis substantial bound book by Herbert Spencer."

BOARD OF TRADE

A meeting of the Fernie Board of Trade was held last Friday in the fire-hall. The matter of incorporation was first taken up. The secretary reported that since the receipt of McBride's wire nothing further had developed. W. R. Ross M. P. P. could offer no explanation of the Government's delay. He said that he had expected the attorney general's letter would be sent direct to his Fernie address and he was surprised on his return from Nelson to hear that the letter had not arrived. The Board adopted a resolution asking the member to wire the Government urging expedition in settling this affair.

The road to the Flathead came in for much discussion. The subject was introduced by the reading of a letter from a surveyor named Daily of Trout Lake who had gained a very intimate knowledge of the country by being over it on several survey journeys. Mr. Daily was familiar with all the possible routes, and that from Fernie was the most feasible of all. The route, however, that the Fernie Board of Trade had formerly considered was not by any means as good a one as could be got as there were too many steep hills on it. He could build a trail from Fernie to the Boundary line on the Flathead for $800 or a regular government pack trail for $1500 and guarantee to have it completed in a month. The Board passed a strong resolution asking the government to spend the sum of $5000 on a road into the Flathead. Mr. A. B. Trites spoke of the liklihood of Messrs. Clemens and Henretta being able to throw much light on the matter and Mr. Trites was requested to write to these gentlemen anent the matter.

The secretary was instructed to have copies of the by laws of the Board of Trade printed and circulated among the members.

On Monday the papers were signed and the cheques handed over by which the firm formerly known as the Mott, Son and Co. sold out its interest in the Elk Lumber and Manufacturing Co. Mr. F. G. Barrows of Fergus Falls, Minn. who is secretary of the latter Company arrived in town on Monday and stayed here two days, during which he completed the deal.

It will be remembered that about a year ago the Mott, Son and Co., lumber plant and timber property was changed into the Elk Lumber and Manufacturing Co. by which several rich capitalists of Minneapolis and Winnipeg became interested. The Mott, Son & Co. still retained an interest and Mr Mott was made manager. Since the leases have been secured by the latter for the large areas of timber for a long time in doubt, the original company has been enabled to withdraw its interest advantageously and this is the deal just completed.

The Mott, Son & Co. comprise of D. V. Mott, Arthur J. Mott and H J. Johnson. Each has received a cheque for a very respectable figure for his interest so surrendered.

Mr. A. D. Kildahl, of Winnipeg, has been appointed book-keeper of the business. He arrived on Monday with Mr. Barrows.

RESPECTING COAL AND PETROLEUM LANDS IN SOUTH-EAST KOOTENAY.

Notice is hereby given that licenses to prospect for coal and petroleum upon and under lands situated within Block 4,593, South-East Kootenay, will be issued forthwith to all persons who have made proper application, in pursuance of the provisions of the "Coal Mines Act" and amendments.

The fee for each license is $100, and all applicants who have not deposited accepted bank cheques to cover that amount are hereby required to do so without further notice.

Licenses will be issued in the following form, viz:—

MINING LICENCE ISSUED UNDER THE COAL MINES ACT AND AMENDMENTS.

In consideration of one hundred dollars now paid under the said Acts, and subject to the provisions thereof, I, W. S. and not exceeding in the whole six hundred and forty statute acres.

Owing to the number of applicants for licenses to prospect for coal and petroleum, and the peculiar circumstances surrounding the application for and issuance of these licenses, and the well-known fact that the issuance has been unavoidably suspended for so many months, the Government of British Columbia finds it impossible to determine the equitable rights of the numerous applicants. Therefore, for the purpose of enabling all persons to go before the proper tribunal for the determination of their respective rights and priorities, this license is issued and accepted subject to such prior rights of other persons as may exist by law, and the date of this license is not to be taken or held as in any sense determining such priority, and further it shall not be taken or held to waive enquiry by the Courts into the proper performance of all conditions precedent as between adverse claimants; and further, on the understanding that the Government shall not be held responsible for, or in connection with, any conflict which may arise with other claimants of the same ground, and that under no circumstances will license fees be refunded.

And the holder hereby waives any claim or demand against the government, and expressly agrees not to take any steps or proceeding, or present any petition, to enforce any alleged claim or demand against the Government of the province of British Columbia arising out of the issuance of this license or any other matter or thing appertaining thereto.

The land being under reserve from pre-emption and sale this license does not include any right other than the right to prospect for coal and petroleum.

The duration of this licence is for one year from the , 190.

JOLLY GOOD FELLOWS

FAREWELL BANQUET IN HONOR OF THOS. R. STOCKETT.

Directors and Staff Join Hands. Handsome Presentation. Banquet a Huge Success.

On Saturday evening last the Board of Directors and the staff of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., tendered their retiring General Manager, Mr. Thomas R. Stockett, a most successful banquet, which will long be remembered by those present as one of the pleasantest events within their recollections. Seats were placed for fifty-five guests in the Royal Cafe dining room which was tastily decorated for the occasion. Nearly all these seats were filled by employees of the company, all loyal friends and admirers of Mr. Stockett, from the Fernie office and from the collieries at Coal Creek, Michel and Morrissey.

Mr. G. G. S. Lindsey K. C., third vice-president of the Coal Company occupied the toastmaster's chair at the head of the table and by his side sat the guest of the evening. Ranged on either side were the heads of Departments and Collieries. The menu cards were gems of art furnishing desirable souvenirs. One page contained an excellent half tone of Mr. Stockett and another a full list of the names of all the staff members of all the departments.

The catering was of the first order and the wants of the inner man were amply satisfied. Members of the orchestra dispensed sweet strains during this interesting part of the evening.

THE TOASTS

At about 10.30 the toastmaster proposed the first toast on the list, "The King" and the tune of "God Save The King" brought all to their feet. In proposing the second toast, "The President of The United States" Mr. Lindsey gracefully referred to the growing feeling of intimacy and good feeling between the two great Anglo Saxon nations, and to the fact that the guest of honor was a subject of the Republic. The American Anthem was heartily sung.

"OUR GUEST."

In proposing this toast the third Vice-President delivered a capital address in which he highly eulogized the departing general manager. The occasion was one of mingled joy and sadness; sadness because of the general regret felt for Mr. Stockett's departure, and pleasure because the event brought all together into a happy reunion to do honor to him. The speaker briefly reviewed the history of the Company, until the present when its total investment aggregated six millions of dollars in the Crows Nest Pass. The Directors though far distant felt a keen sympathy with their manager at headquarters. They also had explicit confidence in him and in his ability to conduct their business. When Mr. Stockett first enlisted with the Company it was in its infancy. Mr. Stockett had done more than any other man to develop the industry to its present condition. Mr. Stockett was a modest man, and a man of action. He did much but said little. His geniality and true friendship were also factors in Mr. Stockett's make-up which figured in his success as a mining man. No one valued that friendship more than he did himself. The speaker briefly referred to the lamentable explosion and the suits which followed. Accusations had been made against the integrity and ability of the retiring manager. The Company knew these accusations to be false. They had brought the best experts from the four quarters of the globe and before the courts of the land these charges had been shown to be without foundation and Mr. Stockett and his assistants had been thoroughly vindicated. He left the company honored and esteemed, a capable miner whose duties had ever been performed in a conscientious manner. He then presented Mr. Stockett with a gold headed umbrella and a beautiful sterling silver table set, gifts of the directors and the staff, as a slight token of their esteem and regard. The toast was drunk amidst the wildest enthusiasm, cheer after cheer being called for.

Mr. R. W. Coulthard followed with a song and the honored guest arose to reply. He feelingly expressed his thanks for the very pleasant surprise they had given him, and then he modestly referred to some reminiscences in his life since coming to Fernie over three years ago. He paid a glowing tribute to the courage and the foresight of the early pioneers who blazed the way and opened the mines. Three years ago the industry was an infant, he left it an adult. Then the output was 1,100 tons daily. Now the collieries had an output of 5,000 tons daily. The coke industry showed even a greater development. Then the 324 ovens at Fernie turned out 6,200 tons per month, now the three collieries possessed 1,100 ovens with a capacity of 37,000 tons. A power plant had been installed at Fernie second to none in Canada and the one at Michel was nearly as good. He spoke of the loyal support he had received from his staff. Many of the old employees had steadily risen as a result of faithful service. The Directors at Toronto were getting into closer touch with these men through their third vice-president in his visits to Fernie. The speaker said it had been his lot to be associated with development work all his life. It had been the case before he came to Fernie and he supposed that in his new field of labor where he understood considerable development awaited him, the same fate would pursue him. He asked that the same loyal support be given to his successor Mr. Drinnan, that had been given to him. He touched on the satisfactory ending ot the test cases, and on the great future awaiting the coal and coke industry in this valley, and again expressing his regrets at leaving so many friends behind him whom he hoped to see again, he sat down amid a storm of applause.

"THE FOUR DEPARTMENTS"

W. A. Letcher next proposed a toast to "The Four Departments", the operating, accounting, engineering and geological departments. R. G. Drinnan replied for the first, A. A. Klauer and J. B. Turney for the second, H. B. Wright and H. L. Manley on behalf of the engineers, and J. McEvoy for the geological department. The healthy rivalry existing among the different departments was brought out in many amusing ways. Many of these speeches were excellent but space does not permit even a summary of them. All spoke in highest terms of the regard in which M. Stockett was held in their respective departments and of the regret which his departure was causing. Mr. McEvoy dealt briefly with the prospects of the mines. The properties of the Company were estimated to contain twenty-two thousand billion tons of coal.

At this juncture the banquetters were given a rare musical treat by the new Italian band which made its first bow before a Fernie audience.

"THE COLLIERIES"

Mr. Letcher sang a song after which J. R. Roaf proposed the next toast. "The Collieries", Coal Creek, Michel and Morrissey. A. Colville, superintendent at Coal Creek, and A. R. Wilson and C. Simister who hold similar positions at Morrissey and Michel respectively responded. The band again appeared on the scene after which Mr. Stockett proposed the toast of the "Underground Officials" and coupled with it were the names of D. Martin, underground Superintendent at Coal Creek, W. Powell at Michel and D. Wilson at Morrissey. Mr. Powell's speech was particularly worthy of mention. It bristled with wit and humor and underneath it all was a clear vein of good common sense.

"The Coke Ovens" was proposed by R. W. Coulthard and was responded to by J. C. McLean, superintendent of the Fernie ovens.

H. F. Martin was asked to propose the toast to the medical and legal staff. Dr. Bonnell responded in an excellent address Dr. Corsan briefly responded and H. W. Herchmer answered for the legal profession.

The toastmaster in calling upon R. Reading C. P. R. agent, to propose the next toast "The Press" spoke in the highest terms of the pioneer work of the C. P. R. and its wonderful accomplishments. Mr. Reading reciprocated the kind sentiments of the Coal Company. His relations with the latter had always been of the pleasantest. H. G. Watson briefly replied to "The Press."

H. W. Herchmer at this juncture proposed a toast which had modestly been omitted from the printed list, "The Directors of the Coal Company." This was received with much enthusiasm and it brought from Mr. Lindsey a most felicitous speech.

T. H. Cox proposed "The Ladies" and the cause of the fair sex was further warmly advocated by John Williams and S. Herchmer.

A deputation of miners headed by Wm. Reid at this juncture entered the room with the desire to express their sorrow at Mr. Stockett's departure. Mr. Reid stated that the miners thought the retiring manager was "all right", that he had always treated them well and that they believed he also had done his best for the Company. The health of "The Miners" was drunk and after the singing of a song by A. Berridge Mr. Stockett thanked "the boys" for their friendly feelings in a few felicitous remarks. "The Trites-Wood Co." brought from R. W. Wood a short address in which he voiced the regret of the merchants in parting with Mr. Stockett.

"The Host and Hostess" and the reply from W. W. Tuttle followed by Auld Lang Syne brought to a close one of the most enjoyable events of its kind ever held in the town of Fernie. Good fellowship was much in evidence and the many expressions of regard tendered to Mr. Stockett bore the unmistakable stamp of absolute sincerity.

1ST OF JULY SPORTS.

FERNIE WON AT FOOT-BALL BUT LOST AT LACROSSE.

The Miners' Picnic at Cokato a Great Success.—List of the Prize Winners.

Dominion Day was celebrated in Fernie and at Cokato in first class style. The regular from the east brought in a large number of visitors and the special from Frank one hour later added to the throng. The special from Cranbrook brought over a hundred more visitors. Three specials were run to Cokato which carried over 500 passengers. The Miner's Union picnic at the latter place was a great success. The day was fine and the sports were carried through successfully.

The celebration at Fernie consisted of the playing of two games an account of which follows

FOOT-BALL.

The game of foot-ball between the Michel and Fernie teams on the latter's ground on the 1st was the best league game played this year. A great deal of rivalry exists between these teams as it is evident that the real struggle for the league's medals lies between these teams. Michel previously had been undefeated, and Fernie had met one defeat at their hands. The game was very evenly contested throughout and the result was in doubt up to the last minute. Fernie won the game by 2 goals to 1.

The line up of the Fernie team. Goal, McDonald; r. b. Leaton; l. b., McKegan; r. h. b., Gorton; c. h. b., Henderson; l. h. b., Nelson; r. f., Speirs and Roberts; c. f., Newbigging; l. f., Munroe and Parkenson. The referee was a Michel man and his decisions gave general satisfaction.

The game commenced at 10:30. The play was very even and each side made some pretty rushes, which included some fine passing. J. McLean, Michel's right wing man, scored the first goal. Five minutes before half time Spiers evened the score. In the second half Fernie showed up better than in the first. Parkenson after ten minutes play added another goal and from that time neither side was able to send the sphere between the flags. The game was clean and interesting from start to finish.

Fernie and Michel have each lost a game. The indications are that a final game will have to be played to settle their final supremacy.

LACROSSE.

At 6:30 p.m. the lacrosse teams of Cranbrook and Fernie lined up for the first league game of the season. The local team were mostly recruits from the junior team, six of them being under twenty years of age. The visitors were stalwart players, many being far above the average in weight and size.

The line up was.

CRANBROOK		FERNIE.
Manahan	goal	Gordon
McLean	point	Kastner
McAvoy	c. point	Rutherford
Marsh	1st defense	McGuire
Manahan	2nd defense	Kenney
Leitch	3rd defense	Dunlap
Finnessey	centre	Rhodes
Matthews	3rd home	Dunlop
McPeak	2nd home	Schram
McDonald	1st home	McLaughlin
Kearns	outside home	Lafortune
Bell	inside home	Ward

D. J. McSweyn field-captained the visitors and Fred. Vance the Fernie team. A. C. Liphardt was referee.

The first five minutes was like a hideous night-mare to the large percentage of the crowd whose sympathies were with the Fernie team. Almost before the latter had awakened to the fact that the game had actually started the stalwart Cranbrook home men had rushed five goals. These goals were secured in as many minutes and almost with the precision of clock work. In some of them the ball scarcely touched any thing but Cranbrook sticks as it passed down the field. The Fernie defence did not cover their checks and the latter got ample opportunity to shoot.

Then the boys awakened and the nightmare disappeared. The struggle for a time was very hard but gradually their confidence in their own agility, speed and endurance manifested itself and they made fine rushes on the Cranbrook flags. About a minute before the end of the first quarter the latter added another to their score. 6-0.

The second quarter was even play. Ten minutes of hard play landed the first goal for Fernie, McLaughlin doing the trick. A short minute of swift play and the ball was in the Fernie net. No more scoring was done in the second quarter. 7-1.

The third quarter was also very even play. Only one goal was scored, making the score 8-1. The pace was beginning to tell on the heavier team. The Fernie team remained fresh and their confidence increased. The last quarter was decidedly in Fernie's favor. After five minutes play Ward added another to the Fernie score. The Fernie home pressed hard and a few minutes later Lafortune scored the last goal. Final score 8-3 in favor of Cranbrook.

The game was devoid of roughness, the referee being careful to impress its importance by prompt and impartial rulings soon after the game started. Two Fernie men and one Cranbrook man were off at one time.

ANOTHER NEW HOTEL.

Commissioners Grant a License to King's Hotel.—Other Applications Considered.

The license commissioners' meeting for July 2nd was adjourned till Monday evening owing to the provincial holiday on the former date. Messrs. A. W. Bleasdell and Wm. Shaw were the only members present, W. H. Whimster being absent at the coast.

The consideration of J. F. Jarvis' application for a license for the "King's" Hotel took up most of the time. S. Herchmer appeared for Mr. Jarvis and L. P. Eckstein for H. L. Manley and other petitioners opposing the license. Mr. Hechmer presented a petition with about five hundred names but Mr. Eckstein vigorously attacked it and showed that many names thereon were not those of bona fide householders. The petition of Mr. Manley had about 450 names. Mr. Herchmer argued that the petition should be thrown out as the date for each signature did not appear. The commissioners accepted this construction of the act and refused to allow the petition. The license was granted and Mr. Eckstein frankly told the commissioners that their action was illegal.

A. Good's application for a renewal of "The Summit House" license was thrown out as the license was legally dead and the commissioners could not renew it. Mr. Good had neglected to get in his renewal application in time for the semi annual meeting.

Jean and Murchison's application for a license for the Imperial Hotel was granted.

J. L. Gate's application for the "King Edward Hotel" was laid over until the 16th, Commissioner Shaw remarking that he had heard certain insinuations in regard to this matter which he wished to have investigated.

TRUSTEE ELECTED

The adjourned school meeting held in the school house last evening was attended by ten rate-payers. F. Stork occupied the chair, and J. A. Rennie secretary of the school board took the minutes. The only business transacted was the election of a trustee to succeed the retiring member, Dr. S. Bonnell. Mr. Thomas White of the Trites-Wood Co., was the unanimous choice of the meeting and he was declared elected.

WHO WILL BE MAYOR?

THE TOWN ALMOST READY FOR THE QUESTION.

Petition Signed by Nearly Every Property-owner. Again up to Government to rush Incorporation.

The petition for incorporation is now about complete. G. G. S. Lindsey and D. Davies signed it for the Coal Company, and all the other registered land owners with the exception of about a dozen have also affixed their signatures. W. R. Ross M. P. P. leaves for Victoria in a day or two and the petition will be placed in his hands to rush the matter through as expeditiously as possible. The letters patent will be issued at the first meeting of the Executive Council which occurs on or about the 15th. and ample notice may then be given to have the first council elected by August 1st.

A. Joyce was employed this week taking a census of all the British male subjects over 21 years of age living within the proposed Boundaries. This information is required to accompany the petition. The full list numbers 492. The list would have been much larger but for the great number who still bear allegiance to United States and to European countries other than Great Britain.

The people of the town realize for the first time that there is now no reasonable cause for further delays and that they will be called upon to elect their first town council within a few days. The common question on the street is "who will our first mayor be?". The name of Fred Stork has been associated with this position ever since the incorporation movement has been on foot. There is no doubt that Mr. Stork will receive the nomination. Other candidates talked of are A. W. Bleasdell, D. V, Mott, and Dr. Bonnell.

Plenty of excellent material can be found in the town from which to select the six aldermen required. The selection of the first council is a very important matter and those who are voted to that body will find their position no sinecure. The future success of the town's municipal affairs very largely depends upon the start that is made. The town needs a council that will build a sound foundation to which future municipal bodies may refer with pride.

FERNIE TEAM DEFEATED

The Fernie base-ball team which left on Tuesday played the Calgary nine on Wednesday evening. Eye-witnesses of the game who arrived in Fernie today say that the Fernie team walked off the field in the 7th innings because of the unfair decision of the umpire in calling a man out on the second base. The Calgary Herald states that the umpire called the game because of darkness. The Herald also makes some unfair criticisms of the Fernie team, one being that the battery consisted of California men. "Con" Whalen has lived too many years in Fernie to be classed as an importation. "Con" broke his little finger in catching the ball and Hanson broke his leg in making third base.

AN ANALYSIS OF LIFE

"BEHOLD THEY SERVE WHO ONLY STAND AND WAIT."

SERMON TO THE DISCOURAGED

Easy to Go Forward, Easy to Charge, But Not So Easy to "Sit Tight" in the Days of Strenuous Trial—Men and Women Should Get Their Bearings and Determine to Act Just As Duty Calls.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 26.—To the discouraged, to those who have made what the world calls a failure of life as well as to the impatient and dissatisfied, this sermon conveys a practical lesson. The text is Exodus xiv, 13, "Stand still and see the salvation of the Lord."

To fall back, in order to go forward; to retreat, in order to advance; to evacuate, in order to conquer; aye, that is the course most great military chieftains have had to take, at least once in life, before they won their ultimate triumphs.

Had there been no retreat from Bohemia after the battle of Kolin, and no evacuation of Berlin after the slaughter of Kunersdorf, there would have been no humiliation of a Maria Theresa, and no Frederick the Great, whose name has been the marvel not only of Prussia, but of all Europe and the civilized world. Nathaniel Greene, the mighty military leader of the Revolutionary war, second only in power to George Washington, was aptly called "The Great Retreater." He never won a decisive battle in his life. So it has been with other military chieftains. There is strategy including a foe whose strength is superior. Many a general has kept the field and worn out the patience of an enemy by avoiding a decisive battle and in the end has proved victorious.

There may come times in the battle of life when a man is to fight, and times when a man is to run. There also come other times when a man is to be like a Moses "encamped before Pi-hahiroth, between Migdol and the sea over against Baal-zephon." On the one side of him was the Red Sea, on the other side of him were the pursuing hosts of the Philistines. He could not run. There was no place to run to. He could not fight Pharaoh. He knew he would have been annihilated in the conflict. He could do nothing but wait. He had to "stand still and see the salvation of the Lord." Moses was like Sir Henry Lawrence, entrapped in the residency of Lucknow during the sepoy rebellion of 1857. For three long months the little English garrison, surrounded by a hundred thousand murderous demons, had to do nothing but wait. They just kept on waiting for the rescuers, who fought their way up from Calcutta under the leadership of that hero of heroes, Sir Henry Havelock. Moses was like General Charles George Gordon, who for ten long months just had to wait and continue to wait in the besieged city of Khartoum, and then gave up his life only a few days before the English rescuers hove in sight. Moses was like the foreigners, praying and hoping and hoping and praying in the missionary compounds of Pekin, waiting for the allied troops to deliver them from their impending fate during the Boxer uprising of China in 1900. They were too strong as a body to have to surrender. They were not strong enough as a body to fight their way to the English ships. And so, hemmed in and driven in on all sides, they just stood their ground fighting for their existence by day and sleeping on their guns by night. They were waiting—simply waiting. They were standing still, to see the salvation of the Lord.

Very easy it is for most of us to go forward in the battle of life when the divine command is given clearly and distinctly: "Charge! Let the whole line charge!" Easy it is for most of us to retreat when the command is given clearly and distinctly: "Fall back! Let the whole line fall back!" But it is another matter to patiently wait. Yet waiting is a very great element in spiritual success, as it is in temporal success. How much a factor is "the waiting crisis" in the successes of life can be well learned in the words which Dr. Cuyler taught a few years ago, when he said, "I have been conversant in my time with thousands of failures of talented men, both in New York and Brooklyn, and I can bear testimony that ninety-nine hundredths of all those failures were, without doubt, due to the lack of patience, both in a spiritual sense as well as in a temporal." It is to teach the important lessons of sanctified patience that I am preaching this sermon.

The waiting crisis comes to thousands upon thousands of faithful men and women in the struggle for a financial existence. It comes not to the lazy, good for nothing human beings, who think the world owes him a living, and, therefore, they do nothing. It comes not to the tramps, the loafers, the deadbeats, who, as derelicts on the great highway seas of life, are a menace to all with whom they come in touch. But it comes to the young man who gets up promptly at 6 o'clock and goes to the store punctually on time. It comes to the conscientious lawyer and doctor and mechanic who are striving with all their power to do right. It comes to men and women who in every sense are noble, who always seem to be on the verge of making a great success and yet never seem to be quite able to reach the goal.

These men are true and good men, but unfortunate men. They are what worldly people call "unlucky." We know there is no such thing as luck. Men are not lucky or unlucky, but there are some who seem to have more misfortunes than others; who, through no fault of their own, miss the good things of life. The strong man triumphs over them, but as the world witnesses his struggles under successive strokes of adverse fortune it calls him "unlucky." When old Anselm Mayer Rothschild, the founder of the famous banking house of Frankfurt-on-the-Rhine, was dying, he called his children about him and gave to them this parting advice: "First, my sons, never plan any great movement without first consulting your mother; second, never have anything to do with an unlucky man." Mark this! Anselm Mayer Rothschild did not say, "Do not have any business dealings with a dishonest man." He took that for granted. But he did say "an unlucky man." You know who is that unlucky man. He is yourself. You are unlucky in the fact that just as you were about to go to college your father died and you were taken out of school and had to go to work. You are unlucky in the fact that just after you had saved up a little money and put it in the bank the cashier became a defaulter and you lost all. You are unlucky in the fact that just after you had learned to be a good draftsman and had a fine position about to be offered you fell and broke your arm or had your finger cut off by having them caught in the cogs of a factory wheel and you had to start life all over again. You are unlucky because just as you were about to be appointed to a certain position an enemy lied about your character as an enemy lied about a young friend of mine who was about to become pastor of a prominent church in the east. Though your character in one sense was vindicated, yet the damage was done. You are saying to yourself: "Oh, I am always unlucky! What is the use of my trying any longer?"

Discouraged, are you? "Yes," you mutter, "fearfully discouraged!" You have conscientiously done your level best? "Yes, I have done my level best. I can do nothing more." Oh yes, you can, my brother. You can let God now come and do the rest. You are simply "encamped before Pi-hahiroth, between Migdol and the sea, over against Baal-zephon." God is going to open a way for you through the Red Sea to escape the pursuing Philistines. How? I do not know. This, however, I do know. God will rescue you if you are patient, only patient. He will, if like Job amid the tragedy of a wrecked home and amid a ruined fortune and in the agonies of physical as well as mental pain, you can say, and still continue to say, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust him." God will show to you a direct means of escape if you will only stand still just where you are and continue to look for the salvation of the Lord. You may not now think it, but all things, even amid the greatest discouragements, all things are working together for good to them that love the Lord. After the darkest of nights there always comes the brightness of a light giving dawn. Amid the blackest of troubles there will always come a pillar of fire to lead God's children to a promised land. Trust him, brother.

But there is another class of hearers I find to-day encamped among the Israelitish hosts near Pi-hahiroth. They are the men and the women who are not necessarily struggling for a financial existence, but who are unhappy and dissatisfied with the fields in which God has compelled them to labor. They know they could do better work amid other surroundings. Or they are saying to themselves: "I do not know why it is that all my labors should be misconstrued and unappreciated. If God does not open to me another field of work soon I shall drop this position anyhow."

Going to give up your present position? You say you are not happy in it? Don't you do it, my brother. What you need in life in this waiting crisis of yours is a great big invigorating dose of patience. Stand still just where you are, and do your work the best way you can and see the salvation of the Lord. God does not, as a rule, call his workmen from nothing to something great, but from a small position of influence to a higher position of influence. When Christ wanted to select his cabinet and to fill the apostolic positions of the "fishers of men," he did not go into the market place, where he could find the loafers idling around. He went down to the shores of Lake Galilee and found two stalwart men casting their nets into the sea. He said to Peter and Andrew his brother, "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." It is nearly always a hard struggle for a man in a small position to climb up into a higher position. But it is nearly always an almost impossible struggle for a man out of a job to be called to a fine position. Christ uttered sound philosophy when he said in his parable: "Take therefore the talent from him and give it unto him who hath ten talents. For unto every one that hath shall be given and he shall have abundance, but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath." The man without a job is a man whose failure is stamped upon his brow, and every one looks at him with suspicion. Be patient. Everything will come out all right. Just be patient.

But there is still another reason why I do not want you to give up that position which seems to fret you. As far as I can make out, you are getting in life just about as much as you deserve. Instead of complaining, you ought to get down on your knees and thank God for the position which he has given to you. Why should you expect God to make you his favorite child and allow you to rest upon a bed of roses? Are you any different from any of his other children? Are you so smart or so good or so humble that you have a right to expect more than they? Instead of grumbling about your small position, you should see men, in every way your superiors, physically, mentally and spiritually, occupying smaller positions than you. Be patient in that work God has given to you. Most of us—aye, perhaps all of us—have all we deserve in life and more too. If God wants us to go higher, he will open the way. If he does not open the way, then let us do what he wants us to do. You and I are not so important or so brilliant or so perfectly sanctified as some of us think we are.

Let me illustrate my thought by drawing a verbal picture of what we all know to be true: There are four of us boys, all brothers, born in a humble farmhouse away back in the country. Two of my brothers and myself are just happy-go-lucky boys. Oh, yes, we work hard when we work, but we work just as little as we can, and when we have a dollar we always spend the whole dollar. If there is a country dance, my two brothers and I always go there. If a leisure hour, you can always find us lying around the village store or playing pranks upon the boys. We are not bad; we are just ordinary, happy-go-lucky, everyday boys. We are like most of boys. We do what we are told to do and do nothing more.

But I have a brother Jack. The young folks say he is queer and mean and stingy. Some people say he is crazy. My brother Jack is not lazy. He works just as hard as we do, but when he makes a dollar, instead of spending that dollar as we do, he saves it or goes and buys some books. Instead of loafing about the village store in the evening Jack is always home studying. If he is not crazy, Jack is certainly queer. One day Jack comes in and tells us he is going to teach winter school in order to go to college. We think then he is crazier still. After awhile Jack, by working all his summers and all winters, gets through college, and then comes home and tells us that he is going to the law school. We think he is crazier still. After awhile my brother Jack pushes his way to the front of the New York bar. What is the result? Do we boys praise Jack for his labors? Do we say, "If we had worked as he worked we could be where he is?" Perhaps. But that is not the general rule of the average family. We immediately begin to complain, because Jack does not send us money and help to support us. We take from him all we can get. And so, when any man honestly tries to make a success out of life, he immediately has a lot of indigent, selfish, lazy folks about him trying to live off the results of his hard earned toil.

Some one listening to me says, "Yes, that is so." Then you turn and say: "What shall I do about my drunken brother's family? Shall I pay any more money to let him keep on drinking?" "What shall I do about my daughter?" says another. "I do not want her to leave her husband, and yet I certainly do not want to keep on supporting both of them in their foolish extravagances." "What shall I do about my wayward boy?" says another. "Shall I let him go to the dogs and not support him any longer?" "What shall I do in reference to that lazy partner?" says another. "He won't work, and yet he expects half of the profits." "What shall I do in reference to my husband?" says a troubled wife. "He is always loafing around or entering into wild cat speculations which bring us in nothing to support the family." "What shall I do in reference to my wife?" says a troubled husband. "She spends my money right and left. She is more interested in euchre parties than in the economy of the home. Shall I leave her?" What shall you do, my friends? Well, I am not here to tell you in detail, but this I do assert in general: Do not let the injustices of the past blind your eyes to the pressing duties of the present. Because your kith and kin and business partners have been and are now doing wrong to you, do not you do wrong to them. Be patient. Be careful, and if you must err, let it be upon the side of mercy. God does not tell you to weigh the past so much as to conscientiously solve the pressing responsibilities directly at hand. "Stand still" before you snap the golden cords of affection which bind you to that wayward sister, that wayward brother, that wayward child, that wayward husband. "Stand still" if you do not know what to do. "Stand still and see the salvation of the Lord."

But when the advancing years pass on, and by sickness or old age we seem to be laid away upon the shelf as useless by a busy world, then most of us do not appreciate the petition of that song prayer. We do not want to be "nothing, nothing." We want to be "something, something," and have that something a very active "something." Sometimes at the funeral of a strong man we see a suggestive floral tribute in a broken column. That means the man died in his prime. That means most of us say, "Is it not too bad that he had to go when he had so much to live for." But I do not think it takes nearly as much divine grace to die in your physical and mental prime as it takes to live on in physical invalidism or in decrepit old age. In the first instance a Christian man like a warrior is struck down at a blow. In the second instance a man is like an aged veteran in a soldier's home, like a Job's war charger smelling the battle from afar and yet not able to answer the bugle call for the grand charge. As God has placed some of you upon the great "waiting list" as physical or mental ineffectives, be patient. Trust him. Even in your retired field of waiting you have a work to do. It will all come out right. Yes, sick one and aged one, it will all come out right. You may not be able to understand God's ways now, but it will all come out right.

Thus to-day, as the "waiting lesson" is the hardest of all gospel lessons to learn, I am going to close in the beautiful words of one whose poem has been very near and dear to me. I am preaching against my own impatience just as I am against yours. I know that a parent can never bring his child up right unless he teaches that child to learn to trust him and wait; therefore no child of God can ever trust God unless he is at times ready to "stand still and see the salvation of the Lord."

Dr. Giuseppe Lapponi

In Four Cases of Anaemia Their Effects Were So Satisfactory That He Will Go On Using Them.

Dr. Lapponi, whose skill preserved the life of the late Pope Leo XIII to the great age of 92, and to whose care the health of the present Pope, His Holiness Pius X., is confided, has written the remarkable letter of which the following is a translation:

"I certify that I have tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in four cases of simple Anaemia of development. After a few weeks of treatment, the result came fully up to my expectations. For that reason I shall not fail in the future to extend the use of this laudable preparation not only in the treatment of other morbid forms of the category of Anaemia or Chlorosis, but also in cases of Neurasthenia and the like."

DR. GIUSEPPE LAPPONI.

Dr. Giuseppe Lapponi, Physician to the Pope, who has written a letter in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People

It would be impossible to exaggerate the importance of this opinion. Dr. Lapponi's high official position places his professional competence above question, and it is certain that he did not write as above without weighing his words, or without a full sense of the effect his opinion would have.

The "simple anaemia of development" as referred to by Dr. Lapponi is of course that tired, languid condition of young girls whose development to womanhood is tardy, and whose health, at the period of that development, is so often imperilled. A girl, bright and merry enough in childhood, wil in her teens grow by degrees pale and languid. Frequent headaches, and a sense of uneasiness which she cannot understand, makes her miserable. Just when it is time for her to leave off being a girl and become a woman—a change which comes to different individuals at different ages—her development lingers—why? Because she has too little blood. That is what Dr. Lapponi means when he speaks in the scientific language natural to him, of "the anaemia of development." Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People have the power of making new blood. They cure anaemia just as food cures hunger. That is how they help growing girls, who, for want of this new blood often drifts into chronic ill-health, or "go into a decline"—which means consumption—and die. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills could save them.

The value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a nerve tonic, referred to by Dr. Lapponi, makes them valuable to men as well as women. They act on the nerves through the blood and thus cure diseases like St. Vitus dance, neuralgia, paralysis and locomoter ataxia. When buying these pills it is important to see that the full name Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is printed on the wrapper around each box. Never take a substitute, as it is worse than waste of money—it is a menace to health. If you cannot get the genuine pills from your dealer write the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be sent you post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

Why the Negro Is Black.

On the bare arm paint a broad line in india ink and expose the arm to the strong sunshine. A slight inflammation sets in on the unprotected skin, but not under the black paint, which excludes the light rays (but, of course, not the heat rays). Some days after the skin is darker (sunburned), except where the india ink was painted, where is a white line in the skin. Exposing the arm again, the inflammation sets in only in the white line. The brown pigment caused by the sun (sunburned) at the first exposure protects the skin against the chemical rays. Therefore are negroes black, and travelers of white skin may protect themselves in the tropics from the sun by black or red paint.—London News.

THE FAMILY HORSE.

He's such a nice and gentle horse—
No cut up—tell you that!
This summer I'm determined he Shall wear a Quaker hat.
I only wish he didn't have
Enlargement of the feet,
When gentle Dobbin's in the shafts,
The family on the seat.

A yard a minute he can go
Or faster, if he'd try.
It's great to see the fields of wheat
And fences whirling by!
I'll back a turtle any day
To beat him in a heat
When gentle Dobbin's in the shafts,
The family on the seat.

O'er country roads we journey when
The sun begins to drop,
I say "Git ap!" to make him go
And "Whoa!" to make him stop.
And there are twinkles in the eyes
Of every one we meet
When gentle Dobbin's in the shafts,
The family on the seat.

The hair upon his legs is long
And dallies with the breeze.
The stiffness of his upper lip
Has settled in his knees.
It's certainly a lovely sight
When we go down the street
With gentle Dobbin in the shafts,
The family on the seat.

Wanted the Mortgage Himself.

W. Y. Morgan of Kansas City tells of a Swede who came from Dakota to Kansas and wanted to buy a farm. The land agent took him around, and he finally found what he wanted and said, "Ay tak des one." Then he went back to town, and the agent was making out the papers.

"How do you want to pay for it?" he asked.

"Ay pay all. Ay hav da money."

"All right. I'll make out the deed," said the agent.

"No," said Ole Olsen. "Ay no want deed."

"Yes, you do," argued the agent. "You pay the money, and you get the deed."

"No, no," said the Swede earnestly. "Ay no want deed. Ay had deed oop in Dakoty. Ay pay man de money. Ha gif ma deed. Ay gif heem mortgage. Ay tak land. By en by he get land, he get deed, he haf da money. Dees time Ay no want deed. Ay want mortgage. Ay pay da money. You gif ma mortgage."—Louisville Herald.

The Horse In Action.

Did you ever think, says a horseman, how fast a horse in a 2:20 gait moves his feet? When a horse is trotting a 2:20 gait his feet move a little faster than a mile in 1:10. As his body is moving at 2:20, and as each of his feet when in contact with the ground is stationary and then is picked up and moved forward to take the next step, the foot must move as much faster than the body as to make the step, which is over twice as fast. Now, the action is: The foot is at rest upon the ground and is raised some one or two feet high, then forced forward nearly the full length of the leg, then lowered to the ground and is at rest for nearly two-thirds of the time that the next step is being taken. The time, nearly two-thirds, I think, is too long, but it is from one-half to two-thirds of the next step

The Need For Water.

Water constitutes about two-thirds of the weight of the body and enters into the composition of all the tissues and fluids. To keep the necessary proportion, a large quantity needs to be ingested. One of the great dietetic errors is the neglect to take a sufficient quantity. The amount found in foods is insufficient, and about five cupfuls should be taken daily in beverages. A vegetable diet diminishes the need of water, while one composed largely of animal food increases this need.

Yet it remains, doing more good to humanity than many a preparation more highly vaunted and extending its virtues wider and wider and in a larger circle every year. It is the medicine of the masses.

An Anecdote of Richard Strauss.

An amusing story is told of Richard Strauss' early experience as a conductor in Germany. Strauss' favorite Wagner opera was "Tristan und Isolde," the score of which he knew intimately, but with the other Wagner works he was not so familiar, although he had already gained a considerable reputation in Germany as a "star" conductor. On a certain occasion he was called on unexpectedly to direct a performance of "Die Meistersinger," which he did with much apparent self possession. Another eminent conductor who was in the audience noticed that in a certain passage in the third act the bass tuba, to which was allotted a very important phrase, did not make any effect with it at all. After the performance the visiting conductor, wondering if the orchestral player had been at fault, mentioned the circumstance to Strauss. The future composer of the "Symphonia Domestica" looked embarrassed.

"Why," he said, "to tell you the truth, I was so absorbed in bringing out the broader effects that I didn't notice that tuba part."

Lost Historic Treasures.

Every year sees wiped out the remains which have lasted for thousands of years past. Now, in our own day, the antiquities of South Africa and of Central and South America have been destroyed as rapidly as they can be found. Elsewhere engineers of every nation use up buildings as quarries or wreck them for the sake of temporary profit. Speculators, native and European, tear to pieces every tomb they can find in the east and sell the few showy proceeds that have thus lost their meaning and history. And the casual discoveries that are made perish in a ghastly manner. The Saxon regalia of Harold, the treasures of Thomas a Becket's shrine, the burial of Alfred, the burial of Theodoric and the summer palace of Peking have within modern memory all gone the same way as the wonders that have perished in the French sack of Rome or the Greek sack of Persia.—Flinders-Petrie's "Archaeology."

Low Belling.

What used to be known as "low belling" was formerly a common sport in England and an effective method of capturing all sorts of birds which roost on the ground, from larks to partridges. Boys still sometimes amuse themselves with it in the rural districts of England, and the peasants of Spain and the south of Europe make a business of it. The only necessary apparatus is a large bell, like a cowbell or a dinner bell, and a lantern with a reflector to cast a bright ray of light on the ground. The fowler turns out on dark nights and walks the fields ringing the bell steadily and searching the ground in front with the lantern. The noise or the light, or the two combined, have such an effect in dazzling or terrifying the birds that they may be picked up in the hand.

LOG-ROLLING SEASON NOW OPEN ON OUR FREE NORTHERN RIVERS.

Operations of the Hardy River Driver and How He Manages to Steer Safely Down Dangerous Courses—How the Men Live and Work—Courage, Endurance and Physical Strength Are Necessary.

The log-driving season has opened again, and according to all the present indications it promises to prove a notable one. An unusually large number of logs, starting far up on the northern rivers, will be floated down stream to the towns, where the wood will be used for the manufacture of pulp, or turned into lumber at the sawmills.

During the protracted winter, with its steady cold and frequent snowfalls, the logging roads remained in excellent condition for the passage of the heavily-laden sledges, and all the winter's cut of logs, although said to be one of the largest on record, was taken out of the woods successfully.

The work in the logging camps ends each year when the entire cut has been hauled from the forest and is placed on the frozen surface of the rivers, or stacked in piles along the banks, to await the future opening of the waterways. When the first warm days of the year arrive, the ice in the rivers soon disappears, and the crews of river drivers, springing to their posts, start the logs down the swollen streams. From that time forward, often far into the summer months, the men lead a life of unceasing activity, as they follow and guide the drives on their turbulent journey to the mills.

Cause and Location of the Jams.

The logs are often arrested in their course, and many of them become firmly stranded on shallow spots or half-covered rocks. Others, drifting against the piers of one of the numerous bridges, effectually block a portion of the channel, until, as the drive presses down stream, the logs are piled up on every side in almost inextricable confusion. A "jam" containing thousands of logs is often formed in a few hours; yet days of labor are required of the river drivers before the channel is free again.

The difficulties greatly increase when the weather conditions are unfavorable, and extended drought or violent storms seriously impede the progress of the drives, and render them unusually late in reaching the mills. Last year a heavy loss resulted from such an experience on one of the rivers. The stream had been kept remarkably clear by a system of booms, outlining the channel and guiding the logs down the current. Suddenly, in the midst of a violent rainstorm, a cloudburst occurred among the mountains. Brooks and creeks were turned into torrents, small bridges and culverts were carried away, and with almost incredible rapidity the river rose and swept over its banks.

Logs which had been stranded in preceding dry weather were torn from the rocks and shallows and flung by the force of the raging waters against every obstacle that barred the way. The low-lying islands were heaped with logs, which were tossed far up above the level of the water. At one of the largest bridges the booms were swept aside like straws, and a double jam was formed at the piers. Mounting fully 12 feet in height and containing 1,000,000 feet of logs, this formation completely dammed the river, which, rising eight feet in less than an hour, flooded the intervales on either side. Breaking through a portion of the jam at last, the river subsided with equal rapidity, leaving masses of logs high and dry in every direction.

The storm took place in the middle of the night, and the river-men, returning to work the next morning, were amazed to find their easy task transformed into one of exceeding difficulty, and weeks of strenuous labor were necessary before the damage could be undone.

Tools Used by the River-Men.

The river-man's tools are few in number, but well adapted to their especial purpose. Most of the work is done with cant-hook, or peavey, a stout wooden pole, shod at the end with an iron spike. A movable arm is added, which, adjusting itself to the shape of the logs, grasps them so firmly that even the heaviest are managed with comparative ease. A long, slender pike-pole is also used in guiding the floating logs. With these two implements and an ordinary axe, the most obstinate jam is generally conquered. Dynamite is employed on rare occasions, but only as a last resort. Its use in the immediate vicinity of bridges is forbidden, and the logs which gather against the piers, no matter how tightly they may be wedged, must be dislodged with the cant-hook. The log-driver's task is one of much danger. The footing is often insecure, even for the skilful tread of the river-man, who is shod in boots that are heavily spiked on the poles. As the logs are twisted and rent from their places, the mass of lumber moves and settles at most unexpected moments. The men are extraordinarily quick in retreating over the rolling logs, but occasionally a serious accident happens, when, as some "key log" is chopped in two, a portion of the jam is suddenly released and carries the river-men with it in its fall. When the men are working in dangerous positions, the long and pointed river-drivers' boat is usually kept in waiting, and is ready to lend its aid in any emergency. It is also frequently used in transporting the log-drivers.

One of the favorite feats of the river-men is to use some floating log as a boat, and balancing themselves with the pike-pole, they often travel down stream with the current poling themselves to the shore when they wish to land. The men show a pardonable pride in their ability to ride the plunging logs. The most expert are able, in a steady current, to slowly change to a sitting position, or even to lie at full length on the log, a performance which many an acrobat might dread with so unstable a medium beneath his feet.

A number of horses accompany the river-drivers, and by means of a peculiar hook and chain they drag the stranded logs from the islands or river banks, where the use of the cant-hook would involve too much time and trouble. Portions of the drive drift far up the creeks, and these also are brought back to the river by horse-power, the drivers riding the logs all the way.

How the Men Live and Work.

The crews of river-drivers generally consist of 50 or 60 men. They are directed by a "working boss," as he is called, who always accompanies the crew. A "walking boss," somewhat higher in authority, exercises a more general oversight. The life is one of constant exposure, but the men are well cared for in their camps, and the wages are good, ranging from $2 to $2.50 per day. Courage, endurance and physical strength are necessary qualities in their occupation. The men are often knee-deep in water for many hours throughout the day, and a careless step or a rolling log may often result in still deeper immersion. Yet no attention is paid to damp clothing, and many a time the tired log-driver throws himself down at night without change.

The camp is composed of a number of tents, and is moved along the banks of the river as the men advance in their work. All the cumbrous and varied equipment, bedding, cooking utensils and food supplies are easily transported in the "wangan wagon," and the frequent changes of camping ground are made with wonderful rapidity.

At one end of the little settlement the sleeping tents are erected, each one accommodating about 24 men. The kitchen tent is of prime importance, for an immense amount of cooking is necessary to supply the men with their four daily meals. The fireplace stands before the tent, and kettles of coffee, soup and potatoes are hung over the blazing fire. Bread is baked in a tin kitchen, and the tables in the tent show a tempting array of nicely-browned loaves, cookies and pies. The cook is an important personage in the camp, and much of its comfort is due to his skill and the authority he exercises over the men.

Breakfast is served at daybreak, after which the work on the river begins. At 9 o'clock, and again at 2, the men are furnished with substantial meals, which are carried to them by wagon, if their work has taken them far from the camp. At 7 o'clock a steaming supper awaits them on their return.

The river-men, therefore, are not without comforts, in spite of somewhat primitive surroundings, and seem content with their lot. Undaunted by the constant and exhausting toil, they apparently find a strong fascination in the wild, free life on the river, and year after year, at the opening of spring, they return to follow the drives.

Reappearance of Wild Pigeons.

There seems to be no longer any doubt that the wild pigeons, which were once so abundant as to be a nuisance, and which disappeared so mysteriously all of a sudden from the inhabited parts of the United States and Canada, are reappearing in some of their old haunts. It is not likely that they will be ever witnessed again in the vast numbers of former years. Many of our citizens, who are still on the bright side of half a century, will readily recall when they were so plentiful in this district that they sold on the city markets as low as 12½ cents a dozen, while others, whose memories carry them back still further, will remember when their flights were so great as to almost darken the sky and when the Divine intercession was frequently implored to save the growing crops from their destructiveness. On all sides they were shot and trapped without mercy, being exceedingly game as well as toothsome birds. Pigeon hunting was a favorite sport all over the country and contributed largely to the food supply of the people. But their numbers did not seem to very greatly diminish until almost suddenly in the latter sixties or early seventies they disappeared altogther from the settled parts of the United States and Canada. What became of them? All sorts of more or less colorable theories have been imagined to account for that disappearance, but it has never yet been satisfactorily explained. The fact, however, that they are now reappearing is much more important at present, and will be hailed with much joy both by Canadian and American sportsmen.—Quebec Telegraph.

He Got a Pass.

The following story about James J. Hill, the Canadian-born railroad president, is told in the Northwest States. Mr. Hill was talking to some friends in a hotel lobby when a young man bustled up to him and said: "Mr. Hill, you claimed a year ago that no one need be out of a job in this part of the country."

"I did," admitted Mr. Hill.

"Well, your statement is incorrect," declared the young man. "I have been hustling for a job for the past six months, and can't get any work at anything I can do."

"That's just it," observed Mr. Hill. "What can you do?"

"Have had several years' experience as a stenographer, am an expert bookkeeper, have been a shipping clerk, and know the business; am an A1 advertising man; also a first-class book agent," said the young man in one breath.

It ended with Mr. Hill giving him a letter to the Great Northern offices in St. Paul. He was going to try out the young man and see what was in him.

"Thank you, Mr. Hill," he ejaculated as he hurried away; but in a moment he was back again.

"Say, Mr. Hill," he asked, "do I take the breakbeam to St. Paul?"

He got a pass.—St. Louis Republican.

MARKET REPORT.

Compiled by Thompson, Sons & Co.

Thursday, June 23rd, 1904.

WHEAT—During the past week the wheat market has fallen into a stagnant condition. There is no want of interesting surroundings and possibly how the trade has become tired and in a sense apathetic as if traders had instinctively arranged to give it a rest. In the closing days of last week the feeling had become quite weak and a slight decline took place in American markets on some options. On Monday, however, the symptoms of a change towards a firmer sentiment, became evident, and this has continued to a moderate extent up till to day. During the last four days prices have remained almost stagnant except for the fluctuation within market hours. The price changes on the week in the American markets show advances of ¼c to ½c on Sept. and Dec. options and an advance of ⅝c on Chicago July but July in other markets is ⅝ to 1½c lower. close observers of crop reports can see in recent crop developments fair reasons why prices for future months delivery should not decline from present level. It is generally allowed that the consumption of wheat in Europe and also in America has increased largely in recent years, and at the present time it is owing to the pletora supply, from the fortuitous circumstances that Argentine, Australia and India have had record yields in their last crops that prices in Europe are much higher than they are. Should these southern countries have only moderate crops next season Europe will require larger supplies from other countries but from present evidence it does not appear likely that the exporting countries of the northern hemisphere will have as much wheat to spare as will be needed by importing countries. North America, from present appearances, will not be able to su Europe with more in the ensuing season than she has done in the last. The Russian crop is forecasting some reduction in yield. The Hungarian, Roumanians and Bulgarians crops are badly dimished by drought. Serious drought is also reported from Southern Italy which affects the corn crop as well as wheat. Parts of Spain are also damaged by drought and even Sweden in the far North is suffering drought. Then in England only a small outturn is promised as the crop there is small in the acreage and poor in condition. Continued dry weather in Argentine is giving rise to apprehension in regard to the new crop there. Where seeding has been done the weather is too dry for germanation and growth, and where seeding is still to do the ground is in bad shape for want of moisture. In view of the foregoing remarks it is not surprising that Liverpool has shown continuous advances during the past eight days. The daily advances have been small, it is true, but they may be the straws which show the direction of the wind. Besides the outlook for the crop as stated above other matters may be noted as tending to add strength to the situation, such as the shrinkage in the American visible supply which last week was down to 16,343,000 bus. notwithstanding that the export of wheat and flour from North America for the last three months was only equal to 20,665,000 bus. of as compared to 51,232,000 bus for same period last year. The world's shipments are also showing a slight falling off and were expected to decline more in the near future. It is true that the world's visible supply is 17,000,000, bus. more than last year, but this is caused wholly by the increase on ocean passage as compared with last year. As affecting prices in the immediate future much depends on the weather. Should favorable weather prevail over America for the harvesting of the winter wheat crop now progressing in the South, and for the growth of the spring wheat in the North, speculative and investment buying will be held in check and prices will not easily advance, although they may not decline. On the other hand should a spell of unfavorable crop weather develop in the next few weeks some advances would be sure to accompany it. We reiterate what we stated at the begining of this review that there is no lack of interesting possibilities in the present and future market situation and it devolves on traders to be very watchful of the developments in the crops and markets in order to take advantage as well as possible of the opportunities which will surely occur.

Weekly Review of Winnipeg Jobbing Prices Culled From the Commercial of Saturday, June 25

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

FLOUR—The easiness of the wheat market has been followed by a drop of 20c a barrel in flour. Business is quiet. We quote: No. 1 grade, $2.45 per sack of 98 lbs., delivered to the trade; No. 2, $2.30; No. 3, $1.80 to $2.10, and No. 4, $1.30. These prices are subject to the usual trade discounts.

SPELTZ—There is none in sight and the price is nominal at 40 to 45c per bushel of 50 pounds.

MILLFEED—Warmer weather and good pasturage has brought millfeed a peg lower. Bran has declined $2.00 and shorts also. We quote: Bran, $16.00 per ton, in bulk, delivered to the trade; shorts, $17.00 per ton.

GROUND FEED—Prices steady. We quote: Oat chop, $28 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley, chop, $22; mixed barley and oats, $25; oil cake $27 per ton.

OATS—This week's business has resulted in a decline of 2 to 3c per bushel. The situation is peculiar, resulting from the fact that stocks are in strong hands, and large amounts are being placed on contract for the supply of construction gangs. There is no milling demand owing to the cheapness of oats in the east. Grain brokers state that car offerings from country points are large, but that they cannot sell to local feed men, who are well stocked. Inspections continue light, and what few transactions there are, are at higher prices than might be expected. While brokers claim that a further decline is bound to come, feedmen on the contrary, predict a rise, stating that the present decline is only temporary and due to elevator men clearing out their elevators. We quote: No 2 white in carlots on track worth 37c to 38c here, and feed frades 35c to 36c. Farmers' loads in the country bring 29c to 32c.

BARLEY—The market is stagnant.

FLAXSEED — Business appears dead, and there is practically no demand.

HAY—Baled hay has declined $1.00 to $2.50, and loose hay on the street from $4.00 to $5.00 per ton. There is practically nothing doing in imported timothy. Prospects of a large and early crop have made farmers anxious to get rid of their stocks, and now that seeding is over they have an opportunity to come to market. Receipts have been heavy and prices quickly yielded to the pressure. A further gradual decline is confidently expected. We quote: Choice prairie hay is worth $10.50 to $12.50 per ton, for baled in carlots on track here. Loose hay on the street is bringing $10.00 to $12.00 per ton.

VEGETABLES—Potatoes are again 5c per bushel easier. Farmers have more time now and larger amounts of supplies are being marketed. Parsley is scarce, advancing 10c per dozen bunches. Lettuce is 5c easier at 25c per dozen. We quote: Potatoes, farmers' loads, 60c per bushel; turnips, 50c per bushel; lettuce, green house, 25c per dozen bunches; parsley, 40c per dozen; onions 4c per lb.; pie plant, 1c per pound; new cabbage imported, 4c per pound; asparagus, 60c per dozen bunches.

DRESSED MEATS—The market is fairly well supplied for the season and as grass fed beef is looked for soon lower prices may be expected. We quote: Beef, 8 to 8½c per lb. for city dressed, ½c less for country; veal 6½ to 7½c for choice weights; mutton, 11c; spring lambs, $3 to $3.50 each; hogs, 6 to 6½c, delivered to the trade here.

POULTRY—Receipts of poultry are very limited, a few fowl bringing about $1.00 per pair.

CHEESE—Local cheese is coming in more freely aad the season's output is expected to be large owing to the abundance of pasturage. Quotations ruled about 8½c factory and 10 jobbing basis. Eastern stock is being gradually used up, and practically no further supplies coming in.

BUTTER—Creamery—The market is firm. Considerable shipments are being made to British Columbia. Jobbers are paying from 15 to 16c laid down in Winnipeg.

BUTTER—Dairy—Supplies are coming in freely and a large make is expected on account of the good pasturage. Jobbers are paying 11 to 12c for tubs in round lots at country points.

EGGS—The market is firm, as there is a good demand and receipts are none too ample. Dealers are paying 13½ to 14c per dozen for choice case lots at country points.

HIDES — Abattoir hides, No. 2, are ¼c firmer. Shearing is now well under way, and wool skins are practically out of the market. We quote: Abattoir hides, 6½c for No. 1's; 5½c for No. 2's. Farmers' hides are steady at 5 to 5½c per pound flat. Country cured butchers' are the same as city butchers' at 6c for No. 1 grade. Lambs and shearlings, 10c. each.

TALLOW—Supplies have been plentiful and quotations have eased off ½c per lb. No. 1 tallow is worth 4c per pound delivered at Winnipeg. No. 3, 3c.

WOOL—Only a few tag-end lots of Manitoba stock continue to come in. Some few cars of Territorial wool have changed hands at 10 to 12c.

SENECA ROOT—Business so far is not much more than one-third what it was a year ago. The output is not expected to be large. Quotations so far range from 25 to 50c.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—Western cattle are coming forward better, and the quality is reported as considerably improved. Prices are easier at $4.75 off cars here for choice, and from those figures the market ranges down to 3½c for inferior grades. Stockers are moving to the western ranges now.

SHEEP—Quotations are 25c lower at $5.00.

HOGS—The market holds steady. Hogs weighing from 160 to 200 lbs. are worth to-day 4¾c per lb., weighed off cars here; light and heavy weights ½c to 1c less.

MILCH COWS — Good cows are scarce and dear. Prices range from $35 to $55 each, according to quality.

HORSES — Sound horses, in good condition, 1,150 to 1,300 pounds, $300 a team; over 1,500 pounds, from $450 to $500; 1,600 pounds and over, $500 to $600. Drivers, good sound horses, city broke, $250 upwards.

Some hundreds of the Slocum's dead were buried Sunday. The enquiry to fix the responsibility of the dieaster, opened Monday.

Damaged grain or fermented food often induces disease and should never be feed.

Little Willie—Say pa, what is a remote period? Pa—A remote period, my son, is the period due at the end of your mother's remarks. Remember, however, I am giving you this explanation in strict confidence.

A good cement for china is made by mixing with a strong solution of gum arabic and water, enough plaster of Paris to make a thick paste. Apply with camel's-hair brush to the broken edges and unite.

$1200 BEQUEST LOST

Was Left by Philadelphia Woman for Education of Canadian Colored Children.

Townsend, Elliot and Townsend, attorneys at law, of Philadelphia, have written Hon. Richard Harcourt, giving the particulars of a bequest made by one Esther Moore, under a will probated in the city of Philadelphia on 24th November, 1854. The original executors and trustees having died, the Provident Life and Trust Company of Philadelphia has been duly and properly appointed by the U. S. courts in their stead to invest and pay the interest on $1,200 "for educational purposes for children of both sefies of color in Canada, apart from all sectarian or traditional dogmas." In a codicil to the will she further provided: "I wish my executors or trustees to carry out my views in regard to the education of colored children in Canada by paying over the interest arising annually from the $1,200 mentioned in the second item to such school or schools as in their judgment they may deem best, my desire being the benefit of such children of fugitives of slaves residing in Canada West, and other colored children who may be in the same neighborhood with them."

"For a time," says the attorneys, "the interest arising from this fund was paid to the Wilberforce Educational Institute of Chatham, Ont., but no interest has been claimed on the fund by them or anyone else for years and the same has been simply accumulating." The Trust company is anxious to dispose of the income of the fund to the proper parties, if any such exist answering the foregoing description, and the Messrs. Townsend desire advice as to whether there is in Canada West any institution to which the income could be properly paid. Mr. Harcourt is having enquiries made to determine the recipients of the income.

MORSE BADLY TREATED

His Mother Will Demand Apology from Guernsey Governor.

A London cable says: The name, Mrs. Moss of Toronto, in previous cables, should have been Mrs. F. Morse of Winnipeg. Stanley Morse, her son, was accused at Guernsey of photographing secret batteries there. The sergeant who arrested him stated that he had been watching Morse for an hour. Young Morse denied the faintest idea of the existence of any secret batteries. He was detained a short time and then allowed to return to his hotel, where he had scarcely arrived, before the sergeant, accompanied by a policeman, came and again arrested him. He was taken before Colonel Campbell, the lieutenant-governor, and his mother at once offered to cable Sir Daniel McMillan, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Charles Tupper, and several others in Canada, but Col. Campbell did not even reply, and would not listen to her son's release unless the mother would sign a bond and put up £10 bail that her son would not leave the island until the case was investigated. Mrs. Morse is most indignant at the brutal treatment of her son, who is a lad only 14 years old. Col. Campbell was most discourteous, and exceedingly rough in the treatment of herself, and she intends to demand an apology from the Guernsey government through the Canadian government.

FAINTED BEFORE KING

While Being Conferred a Privy Councillor Justice Bruce Is Stricken.

Sir Henry and Lady Taschereau, says a cable from London, were among the few allowed special entree to Buckingham Palace, and after being presented, were permitted to remain in the throne room to witness the presentations. On being sworn in as privy councillor, the lord chancellor asked Sir Henry if he was a Roman Catholic. On Mr. Taschereau replying in the affirmative, the chancellor said there was a special form for Roman Catholics, as well as Protestants, who were being sworn in members of the Privy Council. King Edward, when Sir Henry kneeled to kiss his hand, said, "Rise, with my congratulations; your name is well known to me." It was feared there would be a repetition of Sir John Thompson's unfortunate incident, as Justice Bruce, who was being sworn in, collapsed, and was carried to a chair, but he recovered sufficiently to be sworn. King Edward graciously advancing to where Justice Bruce was seated, and performing the ceremony.

Clever Swindler Caught.

A cable from London says: John Woods, calling himself E. Galt, of Winnipeg, and claiming to be a member of the Winnipeg Rowing Club, has been arrested and tried in the Marleybone police court for the theft of £4. Woods worked a clever confidence game on the Rev. E. Baus, administrator of the St. Vincent Boys' Home, and has been known to work other schemes on several people. He informed the reverend gentleman that he had just given £100 to Charing Cross Hospital, and that for the moment he was short of funds. He requested a small loan until he reached his hotel at Henley, where he had left his effects together with his purse. He was, so he stated, with the Winnipeg crew in training for the regatta, and was a prominent officer in the club. On his failure to return the money at the specified time the police were notified and arrested the clever swindler. He has been guilty of several other offences of a like nature and will

IN THE ELECTRIC CHAIR

Frank Henry Burness, one of the most remarkable prisoners that ever occupied the death house at Sing Sing prison, went to his death in the electric chair on Monday, says a New York despatch, with a smile on his face. He walked from his cell, and seating himself in the chair, assisted the men in adjusting the straps which were to bind him. Four electric shocks were given before he was pronounced dead. The crime for which Burness was executed was the killing of Capt. George B. Townsend, of the schooner Charles Buckley, last November, but he also had confessed to having murdered no less than four persons. Townsend was killed during a dispute over wages amounting to about $20, which Burness claimed was due him. After his arrest Burness freely admitted having killed Townsend, and voluntarily told of other murders he had done. When convicted of the latest crime and brought up for sentence he announced that he was willing to waive the six weeks that the law requires to elapse between the time of sentence and the execution. Despite his objections the case was carried to the court of appeals and the long delay resulted. The sentence was affirmed, however, and the week beginning at midnight Monday was set for carrying it into effect. When informed that the end was to come at last Burness expressed himself as pleased that there would be no more delay. "I deserve to die," Burness told the prison officials who brought the news to him, "and the sooner they put an end to my troubles the better. I've got an uncontrollable temper, and if released would only commit more violent crimes. I'd kill a man for five cents as quick as for anything else. It is better that I should die and it can't come any too soon to suit me." Burness was born in Butler, Pa., 44 years ago, and had followed the sea nearly all his life.

South African Railways.

A Canadian correspondent in London learns that in connection with the resignation of Sir Percy Girouard and the circumstances attending it instructions have been despatched by the Government to Lord Milner to prepare a special report on the working and development of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony railways. The belief is expressed in Colonial Office circles that the constructive undertaken has been too rapid in view of the comparative slow progress of the new colonies.

The Syrian Bulbul.

The Syrian bulbul (nightingale) has the loveliest voice of all God's creatures and the saddest song ever heard. Shady coverts fringing the Jordan still shelter the bird that "sings darkling."

There is a legend that the bulbul sat in the olive tree in the garden of Joseph of Arimathea and the night before the resurrection through the darkness poured out her soul in sorrowing plaint above the still sleeper in the tomb wherein was never man laid. When the first Easter morning broke over the eastern hills the eggs in the nest of the brooding bird sparkled with gold, blue, orange and crimson, and so we color eggs at Easter for a memorial of the lone singer who sang by the holy sepulcher.—"The City of the King," by Mrs. Lew Wallace.

Ancient History.

Aunt Mary—Why, I thought you two had quarreled and were never going to speak to each other again. Mabel—Oh, yes, but that was yesterday.

Inconsistent.

"Oh, George!" exclaimed the young wife. "It was nearly midnight before you got home last night!"

"Well, well!" exclaimed the husband. "You women are so inconsistent. Before we were married you didn't care how late I got home."

ESTABLISHED 1898.

THE FERNIE FREE PRESS, FERNIE BRITISH COLUMBIA

FRIDAY, JULY 8, 1904.

Now is the time to build that "all Canadian" road to the Flathead. To wait till next year, will mean the establishment of a permanent highway from the American side, and the building up of a trade which it will be afterwards hard to divert to the Canadian side,—another example of locking the stable door after the horse is stolen.

* * *

The building of the zinc smelter is but the entrance of the thin edge of the wedge. This town possesses unequalled advantages for the smelting industry and introduction of one plant will quickly lead to others. Unlimited supplies of coal, coke and water, excellent sites, close proximity to the metalliferous mines a healthy, bracing climate and two transcontinental lines of railway are advantages possessed by no other town in the Province.

* * *

The extreme dryness of the season renders the danger of forest fires very great especially along the line of the railway coustruction. The government should have a mounted man patrol the line daily and anybody found guilty of negligence in setting fires should receive the extreme penalty of the law. Millions of dollars worth of timber is at stake and the beauty of our valley and mountain sides may be transformed to an unseemly waste of blackness.

* * *

On Tuesday two boys well connected in town pleaded guilty in the police court to grave and shameful offences committed at a house of ill-fame on the previous night. These boys were allowed to go on the payment of a ten dollar fine each. For the sake of their friends we withhold their names this time, but if these boys appear again in the police court even the respect we bear their friends will not justifty us in shielding them from publicity. There are a number of youths in this town who are shaping careers which will not bring honor to themselves and to their friends. These lads may be seen loafing around at nights, hours after they should be in bed. There is no getting away from the fact that most of the responsibility for this state of affairs must rest upon the parents, many of whom seem to think that when boys reach that age when they can work and provide for themselves their responsibility ceases. That is the age when character is most rapidly developed, and consequently the age when the greatest care should be exercised. Disobedience is the first discordant note which should warn the watchful mother, father or other legal guardian that all is not right. The boy or youth who defies parental authority is far on the road which ends in defiance of the law's authority, and he is then a criminal. Parents, ascertain where your boys spend their spare time, and if you are not satisfied, use that authority which the law allows you to effect a reform The police have hitherto shown considerable leniency in the matter but they have assured us that in future the offenders will be dealt with as they deserve. The fact that the police think it necessary to act should have a startling significance to the parents.

G. N. R. CONSTRUCTION.

Mr. Foss has 150 men on his construction work near Morrissey. This number will be increased to 200 in a couple of weeks. The work on the rock-cut is already commenced and it is expected that a wagon road will be blasted out in a couple of weeks. The mountain at this point rises abruptly from the river for 500 feet making railway construction very slow and expensive. Gorman's road will connect with Foss' at this place.

Camp supplies for A. McDonald's camp which will be situated within 3 miles of Fernie arrived over the C. P. R. yesterday.

A WARNING TO OTHERS

Fourteen Italians were arrested on Wednesday evening at the pest house. They had turned the place into dwelling quarters and had lighted fires outside to cook their meals. A large fire was raging at the same time just north of that place and it was surmised that they were the originators of it. The offenders were brought up before L. R. Forbes S. M. the next morning and fined $50 each, or, in default of which they were sentenced to imprisonment at hard labor at putting out the fire, until it was under control. They chose the latter sentence.

I.O.O.F. OFFICERS,

The Mt. Fernie lodge of Oddfellows held its installation meeting last evening when the following officers were installed in their respective offices.—

Thos. W. Bell, N.G.
Geo. Clapp, G. G.
Owen Ross, R. Sec.
J. C. Hutchison, F. S.
Geo. Reynolds, Treas.
Thos. Beck, R. S. N. G.
P. Van Dusen, Ward.
I. J. Covert, Con.
Jno. Williams. Guard.

The lodge expects its new paraphernalia outfit to arrive shortly to replace the excellent outfit lost in the fire. The lodge wlll meet hereafter in Stork's opera house until the completion of the smaller hall over Mr. Siork's store, when the permament quarters will be made in the latter hall.

An approbation of $2700 was made a the last session of the legislature for a new wing for the Fernie school building. The Government put this work off until the holidays arrived. Nearly two weeks of the vacation has sped away and nothing has yet been done to get this work under way. When the towu is incorporated the school will come under the supervision of the town and all improvements will have to be met from the town treasury. That the government is "hard-up" is no good reason why the money appropriated for specific public works should not be spent for which it is voted. The town in taking up the incorporation scheme counted on the government meeting its obligation in this matter, failing in which unpleasantness may follow.

THE FOURTH AT FERNIE.

On the evening of July 4th the Italian band led a big procession to the recreation grounds where a game of lacrosse was played between two local teams. Later in the evening the procession marched to the residences of prominent American citizens and serenaded them. When the darkness came on many very pretty fire works displays were seen.

E. J. Cann of Fort Steele wil organize a band in Cranbrook.

The Epworth League of the Methodist Church will hold a unique and novel literary evening on Monday, July 11th. They invite all strangers.

The managers of the Catholic Church property have decided to build an addition to their old church building unless its sale can be effected within the period of two or three weeks. They would prefer selling at any reasonable figure, so that they would then be free to erect a new church and those who have any idea of buying the property should secure the lowest terms from A. H. Cree or Father Coccola.

The 4th of July dance advertised by the base-ball club has been postponed a week owing to the non-completion of the hall in time. The dance will be held on Monday evening, July 11th, when the new and spacious hall erected by Mr. Fred Stork will be formally opened. The base-ball club has been under heavy expenses and it is hoped that a liberal patronage be extended to them on this occasion.

The entertainment and social given by the Ladies Aid of the Methodist Church on July 1st was truly as unique and enjoyable as they had advertised it would be. They adhered strictly to the name so that no gentleman contributed to any part of the evening's programme. The entertainment consisted of an open meeting of an "Olde tyme Ladyes Aide." The dress was after the style of that worn a century or so ago and provoked considerable mirth. The reading of the minutes of the previous session and reports of committees replete with local hits and incidents created much amusement but that was only the the beginning of the fun for a motion was introduced to discuss the question of "Woman's Suffrage." The arguments presented by both sides abounded in forcible reasons and sallies of wit which left no moment uninteresting till the vote was taken and the affirmative declared to be carried amid much applause. The ladies then closed their meeting and resolved themselves into a supply committee with ice cream and cake which was much appreciated as the evening was hot. The sum of $110 which was realized attests to the popularity of the entertainment given by the ladies, and encourage them for the future.

CLASH AT SYDNEY

Italians Employed at Sydney Steel Works Attack P.W.A. Pickets.

A despatch from Sydney, C.B., on June 24 says: A clash occurred this morning between Italian non-union men employed by the Dominion Iron & Coal Co. and P. W. A. pickets. In the fight Joseph McEachern was badly cut about the head and face and Archie Wells narrowly escaped death by dodging a blow from an axe which was descending on his head, and which chopped his hand off. Fifteen Italians came out of their shacks to go to work. When about to pass through the gate the picket men endeavored to explain the strike situation to them, and asked their assistance to secure better wages. The Italians turned around, went back to their shacks, and supported by twenty-five others, returned armed with razors, knives, stilettos, hatchets and stones. The picket men again approached them to explain the situation, whereupon the Italians fiercely attacked them. For several minutes the murderous weapons sought the vital parts of the bodies of the pickets, who retired as best they could. With assistance of the regular and special police the Italians were finally disarmed and retired to their shacks. Scarcely one of the picket men escaped injury. The Italians were recently imported by the company to break the strike.

PERDICARIS RELEASED

He and Varley Met With Great Reception at Tangier.

A cable from Tangier, dated June 24, says: Ion Percardis and Cromwell Varley, who were captured by the bandit Raisulli, have just arrived here. Perdicaris is very much fatigued after his long ride, but says he is glad to get back. He is greatly pleased with the reception accorded him by the townsmen, who met him in great numbers. Perdicaris suffered many hardships while in the hands of Raisuil, although he says he does not think that they were the fault of the bandits, and that he had every comfort possible under the circumstances. Varley appears to be cheerful and bright, as if he had just returned from a picnic. Nothing unusual occurred during the exchange of the prisoners, who started immediately for their respective homes. The delay in turning over the prisoners was apparently merely a mistake as to the date set for their release.

MINER SUICIDES

Carl Schmidt Becomes Despondent Over Wife's Serious Illness,

A despatch from New York dated June 24, says: Overcome by the news that his wife, who is an invalid must undergo a dangerous operation to live, Carl Schmidt, a wealthy mining promoter, and president of the Gold Ore Mining Co., of Ontario, Canada, killed himself in his home last evening. Mrs. Schmidt is in a sanitarium. Schmidt made arrangements to go to Canada yesterday, as was his custom every summer, to spend the hot weather hunting and fishing. His sister, Mrs. Beyrodt, with whom he lived, was to accompany him. He left his home at 6 o'clock after making an appointment with his sister to meet him at the 125th street station of the New York Central. Mrs. Beyrodt waited several hours and then tried to locate her brother by telephone. Unable to do this she went to their home. In a bed room on the top floor she found her brother dead, he having shot himself through the brain as he lay on the couch. He had been dead for several hours. Mrs. Beyrodt learned Schmidt stopped at the hospital to see his wife on his way to the train. There he was told of her condition and the hopelessness of her case unless she submitted to a dangerous operation. He seemed very despondent when he left the sanitarium. Bidding an affectionate farewell to his wife, he went home and killed himself. Schmidt was well known among mining promoters and was supposed to be wealthy. He had a fine estate in Canada where he spent his summers, and his mining property in Ontario is said to be a rich one. He was 54 years of age.

FAIR GROUNDS FIRE

Hoo-Hoo Home Destroyed, Loss $60,000 Occupants Escape Down a Tree.

Fire, which threatened for a time to destroy many buildings at the world's fair, on Friday consumed the house of Hoo-Hoo, rendering the building and contents a total loss. So quickly did the flames spread that the five occupants at the building, all on the second floor, had difficulty in escaping with their lives, being compelled to climb down a tree. The loss on the building and contents is estimated at $60,000. The fire is supposed to have started from an electric wire. The alarm was answered by the entire world's fair department and by eight engines of the city fire department. All efforts were directed towards saving the Texas, German, Oregon, and Mines and Metallurgy buildings, which were threatened with destruction on account of the flying sparks. All were saved without loss or damage. A few minutes earlier there had been a fire in the elephant barn of the mysterious Asia concession on the Pike. There was a wild stampede of elephants and camels, but attaches of the company quieted the animals before any escaped from the building. The fire loss was insignificant.

FINISH OF PORT ARTHUR

Russian Fleet Completely Annihilated--On to Vladivostock Now

A cable from Tokio, dated June 25, says: Admiral Togo reports that on June 23 his patrol boat discovered the battleship Peresviet and seven other vessels, accompanied by nine torpedo boat destroyers, near the entrance of Port Arthur harbor. They warned him wirelessly, and he immediately advanced his entire fleet, except those engaged on special duty. The admiral then discovered that the Russian fleet, which consisted of six battleships, five cruisers, and fourteen destroyers, evidently had planned a dash by sundown.

The Russians stopped outside the entrance to the harbor, and after night fall a fleet of Japanese torpedo boat destroyers resolutely attacked the Russian ships and succeeded in torpedoing and sinking a battleship of the Peresviet type, and disabled the battleship Sevastapol. A cruiser of the Diana type was observed being towed into the harbor on Friday morning, and it was evident she had sustained serious damage. The Japanese ships sustained little damage. The torpedo boat destroyer Shirakumo was hit by a shell which fell into the cabin, and had killed three men, and three others were wounded. The Chidori, a vessel of the same class, was hit behind the engine room, but no one was hurt. Torpedo boats Nos. 62 and 66 were slightly damaged.

PRACTICALLY ANNIHILATED.

It is believed here that the bottled Russian fleet made a desperate attempt to escape from Port Arthur and met with disaster. Togo detected the move and his warships poured a destructive fire of shell into the Russians. Togo's victory has resulted in the practical annihilation of the Russian fleet at Port Arthur. This will release his battleships and cruisers, and the Japanese being master of the sea, will at once bottle up and destroy the enemy's fleet at Vladivostock.

This news is taken by experts as evidence that the Japanese army is closing in rapidly on Port Arthur on the land side, and that the city will fall in a short time.

The dash was a desperate attempt on the part of the Russians to save the remainder of their fleet from capture by the Japanese.

KAISER AS THE ENVOY.

A cable from Berlin says: Diplomats hint that the purpose of the visit of King Edward to the Kaiser is to try to devise a plan to end the war between the Japanese and Russia. Both monarchs are anxious to end hostilities, and King Edward believes that the Kaiser would be a most acceptable envoy to approach the Czar.

CLOSING IN FROM THE LAND.

A cable from Ta Tach Kiao, dated June 22 (delayed in transmission) says: The Japanese forces are now twelve miles from Port Arthur, the whole male population of which, from the age of 15 upwards, is under arms. The women are assisting in the work of completing the defences. Civilian cyclists occasionally establish communication with the outside world.

RUSSIANS LOSING HEART.

A cable from New Cwang (via messenger to Koupamtze) says: The Russians seem unable to reform their plans, which have been upset by Gen. Kuroki, and are losing interest and heart in the struggle. The local censor is not passing any communication. The secret police are busy and extra diligent, and it is extremely hazardous to attempt to send out uncensored despatches.

NOTHING SURPRISES ST. PETERSBURG.

A cable from St. Petersburg says: The admiralty has no direct news of the naval battle fought off Port Arthur, June 23, but the announcement of the enegagement evidently created no surprise here, the authorities having been awase that the squadron of Rear Admiral Withofft (in command of the naval forces at Port Arthur) was ready to put to sea at a moment's noticef On Thursday the correspondent of the Associated Press was informed, as announced in these despatches, that important naval developments were anticipated. If an actual engagement occurred the admiralty cannot believe that Admiral Togo got off scott free. Particular solicitude, therefore i is expressed to know whether the Russian battleship Peresviet was sunk by a mine as she was emerging from the harbor or by the projectile, as it is known that the Japanese have repeatedly tried to mine this ship.

MOVING PICTURES.

They Were Used by the Egyptians Long Centuries Ago.

There is reason to suppose that the terrible scenes by which initiates into the ancient Egyptian mysteries were impressed were some sort of moving pictures, although how they were produced before the invention of glass lenses can only be surmised.

From the fourteenth century onward such representations were almost as common, though not, of course, so perfect, as they are nowadays. Chaucer mentions them as the "appearances which subtail tregetours perform at feasts," the kind of shows which would appeal to the taste of the period famed for hunting, hawking and jousting, which were represented. As lenses were known at this date these appearances were probably managed by some kind of rude magic lantern, although that in its modern form was not known until long afterward.

Whatever the apparatus was, its use must have been very widely spread, for such diverse witnesses as Benvenuto Cellini and Sir John Mandeville testify to having seen its results. The latter has left it on record that he saw moving pictures at the court of the Great Khan in central Asia.

PATIENCE BEYOND BELIEF

A Strange Tale From French Penal Colony in New Caledonia.

A wonderful example of the patience of prisoners in preparing means for escape was discovered not long ago in the French penal settlement in New Caledonia. The convicts lived in barracks, and every evening tney were thoroughly searched and locked in.

Among the prisoners were two marine engineers, who were in for political crimes. They lived together in the same hut. Every night for two years, they labored at digging an underground chamber beneath the house, concealing its entrance during the day. Every morning each of them carried out some dirt in his blouse or pockets.

Their hut stood near the seashore. After two years' toil they had dug a tunnel reaching almost to the sandstone bank of the beach. At the end of the tunnel they hollowed out a large cavity, and in this cavity they set to work building a boat. By cutting through to the beach they were able to come out at nights and find pieces of drift wood on the shore and every servicable piece of timber they dragged in.

In their underground chamber they made a forge, and with little bits of steel and iron, some smuggled in from the marine repair shops in their hair and in their armpits, they made first tools, then bolts, rivets and the necessary ironwork for the building of a launch. Then they set patiently to work building an engine for the launch. When that was finally accomplished, they had been working nightly for over seven years.

At this time another convict was lodged with them, a Paris embezzler, and they had to take him into their confidence. For six months he helped them until everything was ready, except to provision the boat. Then the embezzler turned informer, hoping to gain favor thereby. Next night guards surprised the two marine engineers in their underground chamber seized their tools and put them in solitary confindment with ball and chain.

A subsequent investigation brought to light the entire plot. The seven long years of patient toil so impressed the French commandant that a year later he managed to get a pardon for the two engineers, and they returned to France.

BACHELORS CONDEMNED

College Graduates Who do not Wed Are Useless.

In his address to the 527 graduates who received diplomas at the 36th annual commencement of Cornell University, President Jacob Gould Schurman delivered a fierce denunciation of the unmarried college men. "I have no patience," said President Schurman, "for the college graduates who deliberately elect bachelordom. In this country, where there is no place for drones and idlers, the primary duty of every young man is to earn a living, but this is but the lowest expectation that can be had of you. It is equally your duty to provide for a wife and family. The college man who deliberately leads a single life, whose social circle is the club, and whose religion is a refined and fastidious epicureanism, is not a man. It would not be worth while maintaining colleges and universities for the froth like that." On the platform from which the President delivered his denunciation of the unmarried men sat several old bachelor members of the Cornel, faculty, who graduated from the university in its earlier days. Prominent among them were Dean Ernest W. Huffcut of the College of Law, Professor George Lincoln Burr and Professor William B. Finch. President Schurman is a Canadian, having been born in Prince Edward Island.

DROWNED LIKE RATS.

Thirty-three Laborers Meet Death in a Conduit Pipe.

Thirty-three persons were killed by an accident which occurred near Spanishtown, 10 miles west of Kingston, Monday in the main conduit of the West India Electric company, which operates the street cars from Kingston, and the shareholders of which are principally Canadians.

Nearly one hundred laborers have been detailed in removing sand from the enormous pipe which is a mile long, and which conveys water from the intake on the Rio Cobra to the turbine of the power house. The work had been practically completed when orders were given to allow a small quantity of water to enter the conduit. Through misapprehension, mistake, or carelessness, the full force of water was turned on and a mad struggle to escape by means of the manholes ensued with the result that thirty-three persons were killed. A rigid investigation into the cause is now in progress.

Swindled Farmers.

A case of more than passing interest to farmers was finished at Chatham, Ont., the other day, after several adjournments. Perceival and George Waterworth sold in the district a number of what is called "Arctic" creamery, a kind of refrigerator, which, as the witnesses testified, was guaranteed to cool things without ice, being packed with asbestos. The witnesses in some instances said they had signed notes without knowing the nature of the instrument to which they were attaching their signatures. The defendants denied having mentioned the asbestos, and alleged that failure in the use of the refrigerator was due to neglect of the directions. The defendants were found guilty on two charges of conspiracy, but acquitted on one of false pretences, and each was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and spend a week in jail. Default in paying the fine will prolong the term of imprisonment.

THE NEW GRAVE.

Death Is But a Natural Graduation to Better Things.

There is a little scar on the door where the pall was hung, there is a wound in the heart and a vacant chair before the grate in the library, there is a Bible that's worn, there is a fresh-made grave and a new voice in the choir.

He used to have a favorite hymn at family devotions, and we have often heard "Sweet hour of prayer, sweet hour of prayer, that calls me from a world of care."

And when he was called, he did not hesitate.

"Is he sleeping?"

They asked the nurses, and when the doctor called him, there was no answer. He had slept away, turned over, and, with a smile, as one in pleasant dreams, he left the winter's night for a summer's morning.

And here we are tossing on this sea, this sea of life, and there he is safe in the harbor. Here we are subject to the pangs of humanity, and there he is clothed in divinity. Here we are troubled, there he is peaceful. Here we are anxious of the morrow, he has no morrow, there is no night there, it is all to-day.

So the tears are not for him, for he is far better. They are selfish tears, they are the tears of earth's children, who grieve over this loss, forgetting what it means for him.

We know that he would ask why the tears if he saw them; he would question the drawn curtain, the tiptoed step and hushed voice. He would have none of this. But we are human, and so we mourn to-day for the "touch of the vanished hand, the sound of the voice that is still."

Yet we know we should not mourn. To him life alone was serious and worth while.

And death but a natural graduation to better things.

So we stand by the vacant chair, and hold to life's things loosely, for we saw him slip away even as a child kissing its mother closed its eyes, and fell asleep.

Life to-day has a new meaning, for we are bound by ties that reach from earth to the city that knows no sorrow and needs no sun.—Charles F. Raymond, in Toronto Star.

History of Canada's Mail.

Although the first land mail in Canada had been established as early as 1721, until the transference of the Postoffice Department on the 6th April, 1851, the postal arrangements had made but slow progress. On the very day the transference took place the Canadian Parliament made a uniform charge for letters throughout Canada of 3d. This was afterwards, in April, 1868, still further reduced to three cents. The first stamps were issued in 1851; money orders were introduced in 1855, and postcards were first used in 1871. Canada joined the postal union in 1878, though the first bag by parcel post was not sent to England until 1886. The later improvements to the system were the two-cent letter rate between Canada and Great Britain and several of the British possessions—since extended to almost all the colonies—which went into operation on Christmas Day, 1898; the rate of two cents per ounce for domestic letters (Jan 1, 1899), and the new rate on newspapers and periodicals posted in Canada for transmission to the United Kingdom, which went into force on the 7th March, 1903.

Three Months on the Way.

Hutchinson Bros., grocers, of Bracebridge, bought a carload of hay at Mariposa that was shipped on January 16 last. Mariposa is a station on the Midland division of the Grand Trunk, probably 60 miles from Bracebridge. Paul Jones the same day left New York City for a trip around the world. He visited the British Isles, took in the chief points of interest, went to France, to Germany, The Hague, St. Petersburg, over the world-known Trans-Siberian Railroad to Japan, the wonderful little isle of the east, took a flying trip through China, saw the sister colony of Canada in the east called India, went down to sunny Ceylon, across the Indian Ocean to the newly acquired district of South Africa, from thence to Australian, to Honolulu, to San Francisco, and then on the overland limited to New York, landing at that city on March 27, after an absence of two months and nine days, the same day as the car of hay landed at Bracebridge.—Burk's Falls Arrow.

An Error About Irving's Understudy.

It appears from British mail advices that the cable misled Canadians as to Sir Henry Irving's remarks about people mistaking his understudy for himself The Daily Chronicle puts it in this way: "Sir Henry's understudy, who had not a single chance in his six months of waiting, might legitimately have nursed a grievance. However, he got his chance in an unexpected way when the company was in Canada. They were there when 'Our Lady of the Snows' was at her best, and many of the members of the company distinguished themselves on the ice. Particularly was this the case with the gentleman who takes Sir Henry's place on the stage in an emergency. And as he bears some facial resemblance to the great actor, the local papers came out with lengthy accounts of Sir Henry Irving's feats on the ice. As a matter of fact, he has never got beyond sliding."

Photographs Nerve Action.

Dr. Charpentier in a communication before the Paris Academy of Sciences described an interesting discovery as to the possibility of photographing muscular and nervous activity on a plate covered with a layer of platin cyanure of barium.

Nervous sensations and impressions and muscular efforts are flashed on the plate and produce a special fluorescence, showing, for instance, the action of the heart and muscles of the interior of the body.

SAVE BABY'S LIFE.

You cannot watch your little ones too carefully during the hot weather. At this time sickness comes swiftly and the sands of the little life are apt to glide away almost before you know it. Dysentry, diarrhoea, cholera infantum, and stomach troubles are alarmingly frequent during the hot weather. At the first sign of any of these troubles Baby's Own Tablets should be given—better still an occasional dose will prevent these troubles coming and the Tablets should therefore be kept in every home. Promptness may save your child's life. Mrs. J. R. Standon, Weyburn, N.W.T., says: "Baby's Own Tablets are valuable in cases of diarrhoea, constipation, hives, and when teething. I have never used a medicine that gave such good satisfaction." This is the experience of all mothers who have used the tablets. If you do not fine the Tablets at your druggists send 25 cents to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and a box will be sent you by mail post paid.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A YACHTING SUIT.

A Smart and Fashionable Costume of Much Utility.

This yachting suit, illustrated by Vogue, will be a very useful one on many other occasions of the summer. It is of gray linen piped with pale green. The skirt has a narrow graduated panel front, with circular sides tucked on hips and in three deep tucks above the graduated circular flounce, which is similarly tucked at the hem. The sides extend to the hem in panel straps trimmed with wheels of pale green linen soutache set on edge.

GRAY LINEN YACHTING GOWN.

Green linen pipes each tuck edge and the panels. The waist is entirely in deep, piped edged tucks below the yoke which extends in squares over the tops of the sleeves, which also have a group of tucks at the hem and a deep tucked cuff on the undersleeve to match the collar. A crush girdle of green leather is worn. A straw bow and gilt buckle trim the gray straw hat.

DRESS COATS.

Their Cheerful Symbolism In the Family—True Value of Etiquette.

How far or how much should we behave at home as we do in company? Must we be just as much dressed and just as agreeable in family life as in society? Must our husbands and sons wear dress coats at dinner? Yes, if that means they should be just as agreeable and polite as if they were with other folk than their own; no, if it means that they have not time between office business and ward politics to conform to the usual etiquette of attire, provided that at least they have time enough to seem glad to be at home again.

Shall women wear evening dress at the family home dinner? That depends on whether such dress means low neck or only something better than the morning working gown. At any rate, they should "change their dress," as the phrase goes. But how can they do it when they have to prepare and dish a dinner? Just here comes in the advantage of training. If cooking schools had done nothing else than to show women how to cook without getting red in the face, how to have everything got ready when men and children were out of the house and then how to dish the dinner and yet not seem tired (even if one is) and how to be pleasant (when one does not feel so) they yet would have largely contributed by their teaching to the pleasures of home life.

Whether one should or should not wear the conventional evening dress in daily life depends on the style and spirit of the home. Its style—that is, its income—often forbids rigorous application of such costume, though its spirit always commands it, for the sense of welcome, leisure and ease conveyed by evening dress can be nourished just as much by a fresh collar or shirt waist as by a dress coat or a low necked gown. The symbolism of the dress coat is the grace before meals, the thankfulness that one has wife, husband, child, friend, somebody, if only oneself, for whom it is worth while to look as charming as one can. The less attractive one is in appearance—for not all are beautiful—the more need is there of the dress coat symbolism.

In many homes where dress coats cannot abound, as well as in those where they do, the family reserves its bits of news, its choicest anecdotes, its conundrums and jokes for the dinner table. Such conversation makes palatable many an ill cooked dish and is economical in the long run, for a merry mind and heart aid digestion. If we can but realize the higher meaning of etiquette we shall look upon the dress coat as merely the temporary outward sign of permanent inward courtesy of thought which in act we would as eagerly extend to our family as to our guests.

Then when we do accept society's conventions of dress we do so without losing the large simplicities of our heart.—Kate Gannett Wells in Boston Cooking School Magazine.

The Attractive Modern Kitchen.

Sightliness is no longer considered an unimportant factor in kitchen furnishings, as the displays at house furnishing stores testify. Everything is made as attractive as use warrants. Cleanliness is more easily obtained in the modern kitchen than in the old time one, because metal, enamel and earthen wares have taken the place so largely of wood and iron. Dark, unsavory corners and nooks are no longer possible in the up to date kitchen.

THE POSTMASTER GROWS EMPHATIC

Believes Dodd's Kidney Pills the Right Medicine for Kidney Trouble.

T. H. Belyea, Postmaster of Lower Windsor, N.B., Endorses an Opinion Popular in all parts of Canada.

Lower Windsor, Carlton Co., N.B., July 4.—(Special) — T. H. Belyea, postmaster here, has come out with an emphatic statement that is heartily endorsed by the great majority of people of this district.

"I believe," says the postmaster, "that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the right medicine for Kidney Trouble, and will do all that is claimed for them.

"I had been bothered with Kidney Trouble for years and tried several kinds of plasters and other medicines, but did not get much lasting benefit. Then I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills, and would say they seem to have made a complete cure, as I feel as well as ever I did."

There are numerous people prepared to make statements like that of Postmaster Belyea, but the case of Kidney Disease that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure has yet to be reported.

WHAT HE WEARS.

Comfortable Collars—The Convenient Coat Shirt In Favor.

It is the thoroughly well dressed man whose collar absolutely fits, and the precision herein expressed is carried into every detail of his apparel. To such dressers it will be interesting news that a favorite brand of collars is now being made in quarter inch sizes. The former half inch scale proved inadequate to many men, who found a given number of inches a trifle small and an additional half inch just a shade too large. Splitting the difference has brought the fitting to a nicety never before attained, for with quarter, half, three-quarter and full sizes at command there is no possible excuse for man's discomfort in apparel, so far as his collars are concerned.

As far as styles in collars are concerned, fashion laws are not stringent, and conservative masculine dressers avail themselves of the blessed privilege of wearing whatever they consider is most becoming. More depends on how a thing is worn and when it is worn than just exactly what specific shape is worn. With a proper understanding of what items should and should not be worn in conjunction, and a reasonable compliance with the time and place requirements of dress ethics, a man is at liberty to follow his individual preferences.

Both wing and fold collars are popular, and, while the fold has heretofore been almost universally identified with strictly negligee dress, it will be particularly smart this season to wear with a plaited, soft bosom shirt a low wing collar, supplemented by—not a four-in-hand, but a soft, broad end tie. The latest shapes in fold collars show well rounded points, brought closely together, or having moderate spacing; also the ultra fashionable shape, with sharp points three inches in depth.

In all collars medium heights prevail. This is speaking comparatively, for medium to one man may mean high to another and low to the third, and the correct height must afford no suggestion of a whitewashed fence surrounding the ears nor, on the other hand, leave an expanse of bare neck between the coat collar and hair. The former is bad enough, but the latter is positively criminal. Three of the newest shapes in fold collars are pictured on this page, and any one of them will prove comfortable for warm weather wear.

Shirts and shirtings are this season particularly attractive, showing a preponderance of fine, soft textures in delicate colorings and artistic designs. Gray is strongly in the lead, and some of its combinations with either white or black are immensely effective. Gun metal colorings are even more in fashion than last summer and have a delightful coolness of appearance.

The vogue of the coat shirt steadily increases, and the only wonder is that any other cut can exist. Any shirt which opens all the way down the front comes under this title. The coat shirt in dress form as it originally appeared proved an immediate success and has now extended its province to all kinds, the latest development being the soft bosom negligee. The wash silk negligee shirt, by the way, has proved such a comfortable garment in the past that it will have another and probably many more summers of popularity.—Designer.

Before starting on an all day trip, anoint the face in the morning with a good cold cream or white vaseline well rubbed into the skin. This prevents its burning. BABY ECZEMA AND SKIN DISEASES

Which Torture Children are Soon Entirely Cured by the Use of

Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Especially during the teething period, children are subject to eczema, scald head and various forms of skin disease, which cause the keenest suffering to themselves, as well as anxiety to their parents.

There is no treatment so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and as eczema always tends to become chronic and last for years, prompt cure is of the utmost importance.

Mr. C. Wiley, who is employed as cooper by the Kennedy & Davis Milling Company, Lindsay, Ont., states: "I used Dr. Chase's Ointment for eczema on my little girl some few years ago, and soon brought about a thorough and permanent cure. She had suffered for considerable time, and though we tried a great many remedies, Dr. Chase's Ointment was the only preparation to prove effective. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Ointment, as it certainly effected a prompt and permanent cure.

Mr. Wm. Kirknoss, farmer, Mt. Forest, Ont., states: "I find that Dr. Chase's Ointment is the best thing I ever used for chafing, itching skin and burns and sores of all kinds. It heals them up very quickly, and I believe that there is no better ointment to be obtained than Dr. Chase's. We have found it invaluable and always keep it in the house.

Any mother who once becomes acquainted with the merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment would not think of being without it in the house. Where there is a baby or small children it is of daily value as a means of curing skin irritations and eruptions, chafing and all sorts of burns and sores.

Plum Pudding as Food.

In popular belief plum pudding, though difficult of digestion, contains a large proportion of nutriment. The London Lancet publishes the analysis made of two puddings, of which one was found to have a "nutrient value" of 68 per cent and the other of 59.

It appears that, although most agreeable as an article of food, plum pudding is not quite so concentrated a form of diet as has been supposed, and conjectures that it yields as much sustenance as beefsteak are certainly not supported by its chemical composition. The amount of nitrogenous matter is only moderate, and it must be remembered that in calculating the nutrient ratio and value all the nitrogen has been assumed to be albuminoid. Probably the true albuminoids and consequently the food value are slightly lower than would appear from the results; also the percentage of water is rather large, and the quantities of the remaining components are proportionately lessened.

Stanley as a Fighter.

A thoroughly good man was Henry M. Stanley, whom I first met in the Ashanti expedition. No noise, no danger ruffled his nerve, and he looked as cool and self possessed as if he had been at "target practice." Time after time as I turned in his direction I saw him go down to a kneeling position to steady his rifle as he plied the most daring of the enemy with a never failing aim. It is nearly thirty years ago, and I can still see before me the close shut lips and determined expression of his manly face, which, when he looked in my direction, told plainly I had near me an Englishman in plain clothes whom no danger could appall. Had I felt inclined to run away the cool, firm, unflinching manliness of that face would have given me fresh courage. I had been previously somewhat prejudiced by others against him, but all such feelings were slain and buried at Amoaful.—"Lord Wolseley's Recollections."

FALL OF A GRIZZLY BEAR.

Without Warning a Tractable Beast Kills His Trainer.

A distinct type of a zoo rogue is the beast that goes wrong owing to accidental temptation, like Shaggy, an exceedingly intelligent, tractable Rocky mountain grizzly who reverted to savagery and turned man killer in a twinkling owing to the unfortunate misstep and fall of his trainer.

Shaggy was a big, handsome, gray old fellow, with a jungle thick coat and a lumbering, awkward gait and a funny twinkle that made him particularly adaptable for his part of clown in a remarkably trained group of fourteen bears. He had come under the hands of his teacher when but a helpless cub, had never lost his liking for caresses and, although the mightiest beast in the collection, was least suspected of being dangerous. Once when a striped hyena hung to the ankle of his friend he had run to the rescue, had cut loose right and left with his ponderous forepaws and had bitten and torn and mangled the ugly beast to death before he could be beaten off. Among his accomplishments were that of turning admirably grotesque somersaults and the more difficult feat of balancing himself on his hind legs on a three foot wooden sphere.

Not a scratch or a scar had his trainer to show for the years of work he had put in with the bear, and yet, without an instant's warning, this same beast attacked and injured his master so that when rescued he was semidemented and so dreadfully cut and lacerated that the surgeons decided it useless to try to save his life.

ADOPTING A BABY.

Methods of the Society In Charge of the Tots In New York.

It isn't easy to get a baby for adoption from the organization which has charge of them in New York. On receipt of the application a blank is sent back containing some twenty printed questions, to be filled out by the would be parents and a request for three references. If the answers are satisfactory, further blanks go to the persons referred to, asking information on the applicant's character and circumstances, and reliable citizens of the neighborhood are privately consulted. Then the agent comes and inspects the family. If the home seems a good one, a baby as near the requirements as possible is sought. There is even an attempt to select a suitable temperament—a placid baby for a nervous woman or one who is not bored by attentions for the demonstrative. The visiting agent has to be something of a psychologist. Every one calls for curly hair of course, and blue eyes are much in demand, but the new mother generally forgets all her specifications when she is confronted with the living candidate. The baby is taken to the home by the agent, who leaves written directions about food and care and comes back twice a year to note progress. Frequent reports are encouraged, and even after the child is legally adopted the society tries to keep in touch with it. The motive for this is of course scientific as well as humane.—Juliet Wilbor Tompkins in Everybody's Magazine.

THE SPARWOOD FIRE.

C. P. R. May Pay the Loss Which is $20,900.—New Mill Going up at Once.

W. Wardrop, of Sparwood, was in town on Monday making arrangements or the erection of a new mill at that place. Mr. Wardrop was a heavy loser in the fire last week but he is going to work with undiminished energy to put in a much better mill than the old one.

A careful estimate of the damage done by the fire last Thursday places the total loss at $20,900. The Coal Company had interest to the extent of $4,000 in the mill and this was fully insured. The remainder of the property was owned by Mr. Wardrop who had only $4,000 insurance. The boarding house with $600 of stores was saved and the stables, horses and considerable feed were also with difficulty saved.

No doubt exists as to the manner in which the fire originated. An engine was shunting cars on the siding at 2 o'clock and at three the buildings were consumed. The course of the fire was also traced from the yard where the spark evidently fell. The C. P. R. sent adjusters to Sparwood on Monday so that it is evident that the Company is preparing to pay the damages. Mr. Wardrop had a heavy loss five weeks ago when a large pile of logs and ties were burned This loss amounted to $2,600, and the cause was unknown.

Mr. Wardrop will build his new mill on the river bank and the logs will be taken from the water. A longer spur will then be necessary. The mill will be larger and more up-to-date than the old one. Mr Wardrop stated that his men and horses are already at work preparing a site, etc., and that no time will be lost in rushing it to completion.

He sentenced him to 2 months in jail with the option of a $30 fine. In the event of the offense being committed again he would send him to Nelson for six months.

GETTING INTO SHAPE.

Buildings Being Erected for Manufacture of Concrete Blocks.

The Hollow Crown Block Co., of which a description was given in our last issue, has commenced active operations. Mr. Phillip Carosella who has considerable interest in the Company has charge of the work. He has erected a building 22x 32 for manufacturing purposes and is now engaged in putting up the office.

The machine left Winnipeg on the 3rd and is expected here daily. No time will be lost in getting the plant in operation. Mr. Carosella wishes to intimate that any one wanting sand from their property should apply at the office.

ANOTHER SUB-CONTRACT.

On Friday last a third sub-contract for a portion of Great Northern railroad extension from Morrissey to Fernie was let by Messrs. Stewart & Welsh. This was for 2½ miles of the construction, and was given to A. V. Macdonald, and on Saturday Mr. Macdonald left for Seattle to procure his outfit.

The nine miles from Morrissey to the bridge across the Elk at Fernie is now provided for, Messrs. Foss & McDonald having the contract for the first three miles at the Motrissey end, P. Gorman & Co. the next two miles, A. V. MacDonald the following 2½ miles, while the last mile and a half will be done by Welch & Stewart themselves.—Morrissey Despatch.

POOR FERNIE!

A despatch from Toronto dated July 4th states: "A case of small-pox was removed from a C. P. R. train from the west yesterday afternoon. The victim left Fernie, B. C., about a week ago." Fourteen Italians have been living at the pest house for some time without being able to resurrect this disease, and the last known occurred some years ago, but these trivial facts would of course have little weight with the general public if the gentleman above referred to said that he came from Fernie.

NOTES OF SPORT

Lethbridge lacrosse team defeated Medicine Hat at the latter place on Dominion Day by a score of 6 to 5.

MISS EDMONDS REMEMBERED.

Miss Edmonds, cousin of Mr. Stockett, who leaves with the latter for Nanaimo, was the recipient of two handsome presents on Saturday. The Board of Directors presented her with a very handsome and costly sterling silver toilet set. The selection was made by Mr. Lindsey and the presentation was made by Mrs. Davies and Mrs. Herchmer.

A few intimate friends and co-workers with Miss Edmonds on the staff also gave her a beautiful sun-burst of pearls. This presentation was made at the same time.

NOTICE.

RESPECTING COAL AND PETROLEUM LANDS IN SOUTH-EAST KOOTENAY.

Notice is hereby given that licenses to prospect for coal and petroleum upon and under lands situated within Block 4,593, South-East Kootenay, will be issued forthwith to all persons who have made proper application, in pursuance of the provisions of the "Coal Mines Act" and amendments.

The fee for each license is $100, and all applicants who have not deposited accepted bank cheques to cover that amount are hereby required to do so without further notice.

Licenses will be issued in the following form, viz:—

MINING LICENCE ISSUED UNDER THE COAL MINES ACT AND AMENDMENTS.

In consideration of one hundred dollars now paid under the said Acts, and subject to the provisions thereof, I, W. S. Gore, Deputy Commissioner, acting for the Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works, license to enter, prospect, search and work for coal and petroleum (but no other metal or mineral) upon, in and under all that piece or parcel of mineral land situate in and forming part of Block 4,593, East Kootenay District, and described as follows:—and not exceeding in the whole six hundred and forty statute acres.

Owing to the number of applicants for licenses to prospect for coal and petroleum, and the peculiar circumstances surrounding the application for and issuance of these licenses, and the well-known fact that the issuance has been unavoidably suspended for so many months, the Government of British Columbia finds it impossible to determine the equitable rights of the numerous applicants. Therefore, for the purpose of enabling all persons to go before the proper tribunal for the determination of their respective rights and priorities, this license is issued and accepted subject to such prior rights of other persons as may exist by law, and the date of this license is not to be taken or held as in any sense determining such priority, and further it shall not be taken or held to waive enquiry by the Courts into the proper performance of all conditions precedent as between adverse claimants; and further, on the understanding that the Government shall not be held responsible for, or in connection with, any conflict which may arise with other claimants of the same ground, and that under no circumstances will license fees be refunded.

And the holder hereby waives any claim or demand against the government, and expressly agrees not to take any steps or proceeding, or present any petition, to enforce any alleged claim or demand against the Government of the province of British Columbia arising out of the issuance of this license or any other matter or thing appertaining thereto.

The land being under reserve from pre-emption and sale this license does not include any right other than the right to prospect for coal and petroleum.

The duration of this licence is for one year from the , 190.

BUILDING PROGRESS.

WHAT CONTRACTORS AND ARCHITECTS ARE DOING

Trites Wood Co. Plans are Ready. The Bank Building now Under Way. Other Building Notes.

E. Todd has commenced the building of the sixty foot square block on his lot in the Victoria Hotel block. The contract for the excavation work has been let to Wm. Handley and the job is already about completed. The building will be of brick and stone, two storeys, with a full basement, and will make ample accommodation for two good stores.

E. Wriglesworth has the brickwork of L. T. W. (Liphardt, Thompson, and Watson) Block well under way, the first storey bein about completed. This is the first brick building in the town and naturally creates some little interest. The rear walls are made of Lethbridge brick and the front of Frank bricks. The wood contract has been let to Messrs Smith Bros,, who has sub-let the plumbing to F. Stork.

Messrs Smith Bros have received the contract for the Burns building opposite the Central Hotel corner. This building will be of the same style as the present Burns block, but considerably smaller in each dimension.

The Trites Wood Co. after considerable delay on the part of the architects have received the plans for their new store building, and Mr. E. C. Hopkins of Calgary who drew the plans is expected in town soon to complete the specifications after which tenders will be called for. The building will cover the total area of the three lots, 90x114 and will be two storeys and a basement. Contractors will be asked to submit figures for stonework, concrete and brick. The building is designed very much after the style of the large departmental stores of the East. The one entrance is located at the centre of the front. A number of narrow doors open to a vestibule. The entire front is of plate glass, in four large plates on each side of the entrance. Two large stairways, situated well back, lead to a common landing. The cashier's office is situated between them, and behind where the rear entrance opens is situated the receiving and shipping room. The offices are situated on the second floor on each side of the stair landing. Large skylights will light the area over the stairway. The building which will be one of the finest of its kind between the Coast and Winnipeg will reflect great credit upon the enterprise and progressiveness of the Company.

Messrs. Smith Bros. have received the contract for the new building of the Bank of Commerce. They have sub-let the mason work to E. L. Wriglesworth. The Fernie Cartage Co. who received the excavation contract started their work on Tuesday, and the stone for the foundation is already on the ground. The new building though not large, being only 29x34, will be one of the prettiest business buildings in town. The front will be of expensive Roman cut stone, the walls will be of brick with cut stone corners. The fittings and trimmings will be of the best throughout. The building will contain two storeys and a full basement, with a one storey frame addition at the rear 17x24.

"The Solid Three" buildings of Messrs Quail, Stork and Beck are beginning to make a showing, the foundations being completed, and some of the walls being started. Messrs Quail and Stork are building solid concrete walls and Mr. Beck is building a solid stone, single walls separating each property.

J. L. Gate's new hotel is making rapid progress. The framework is enclosed and it will soon be in the hands of the plasterers. The ground floor is not large but the space is made up in the extra storey. The house contains 28 guest chambers.

The "Muskoka" is now being plastered. It is a great improvement on the building formerly at that corner.

R. Kerr commenced work this week on the Fernie Hotel.

The inside finishing of "The Imperial" is being done and the Hotel will soon be ready for occupancy.

A GRAND PICNIC.

The four Protestant sunday schools, the Baptist, Church of England, Methodist and Presbyterian of the town and also the school at Coal Creek mines have joined hands in an effort to give their scholars a rare good day's outing, and very favorable terms have been secured with the C. P. R. by which an excursion will be run to Elko in the near future. Adult tickets will sell for 80 cents' Sunday school scholars will be taken free and all other children will be charged 40 cents.

The promoters of this event are deserving of the greatest assistance on the part of the public. Such an outing will long be remembered by the smallest urchin as a red letter day in its existence, and here is a relaxation in a day off at Elko which proves very beneficivl to grown-ups The magnificent river scenery at Elko combined with the beautiful verdure of its park-like plains makes it an ideal spot for such a picnic, and no doubt the town will turn out en masse on this big holiday set aside for the children and young people of the various Sunday schools.

DEFEATED AT CRANBROOK.

Local Lacrosse Team Again Meet Defeat By Heavy Score.

The Fernie lacrosse team played the return match with Cranbrook on Tuesday evening and the result was a decided victory for the latter. The teams lined up as follows.

CRANBROOK		FERNIE.
Manahan	goal	Gordon
McLean	point	Kastner
McAvoy	cover point	Rutherford
Marsh	1st defense	Kenney
Manahan	2nd defense	McGuire
Leitch	3rd defense	Kirkpatrick
Fennesey	centre	Rhodes
Matthews	3rd home	Todhunter
McDonald	2nd home	Dunlop
Carruthers	1st home	McLaughlin
Kearns	outside home	Lafortune
Bell	inside home	Ward

The Fernie boys knew before they went on the field that they were up against a hard proposition, as the Cranbrook men are all old players and thoroughly understand the game, while their own team with one or two exceptions is composed of new players. The little fellows, however, were very plucky and gave their opponents a hard fight for their victory.

The game commenced about 7:30 and from the start Cranbrook took the lead, scoring three in the first quarter.

In the second quarter they also scored three, but after that the game appeared to be more even as Cranbrook only scored two in the last half, but they effectually shut out the visiting team from scoring. The game was clean throughout and devoid of rough play.

The juniors who played on the Fernie team, Rhodes, Todhunter, Kirkpatrick, Dunlap, Gordon and Ward all played well and with practise will soon become first-class players.

PAPERS HAVE BEEN SENT.

The committee on incorporation after a lot of work have completed all the necessary papers required by the government for issuing the letters patent and they were expressed to Victoria on yesterday morning's train. These papers included the regular petition, the conditions of incorporation also signed by the petitioners, the statement of the assessed values represented by each petitioner, and various sworn statements relative to several formal matters. Accompanying the papers was a letter from the committee asking the government to give the matter its earliest attention, and suggesting that the election be held about August 1st if possible.

The total assessed values inside the incorporation limits according to the last provincial assessment is $280,025 and signatures of owners representing $210,886 have been secured favoring the movement.

AGAIN BEATEN BY CALGARY.

The second game of base-ball between Calgary and Fernie played at Calgary last Friday resulted in another victory for the prairie town by a score of 10 to 2. The game was a much better exhibition of base-ball than that played the previous day, both teams being in good form and few errors being made on either side. Up to the fifth innings the score stood 2 — 1 in favor of Fernie, but after that Calgary succeeded in shutting Fernie out. Little money was up on the game, the Calgary people fearing that Fernie had something up its sleeve. An effort will be made to get the Calgary team over to play a return game at Fernie later in the season. The Calgary team has won 14 games out of the 15 league games it has played this season.

CONFEDERATE MONEY

ED. BRYANT HAD A ROLL OF IT

Arrested at Cranbrook. Trail on Today. Passed $10 in Fernie and a $5 Bill in Morrissey.

Ed. Bryan was arrested at Cranbrook on Sunday by Constable Walker on the charge of passing worthless money. The catch was a sensational one which reflects considerable credit upon Mr. Walker's detective abilities.

On Saturday R. Moore, bar-tender at the Northern brought a ten dollar confederate bill to the police informing them that the bill had been passed on him by an Italian named Spaeno, who tends bar at the Union Hotel in the Old town. Investigation showed that the bill had been passed on the Italian by a stranger named Edward Bryant on Friday morning about eight o'clock in payment for a flask of whiskey. Bryant left that morning for the West. The police later learned that the man named Bryant had been seen with a large roll of these bills and that he had attempted to pass a $5 bill at Morrissey.

Constable Walker left for Cranbrook on Sunday morning and as he stepped off the train at that place he saw his man get on. With the aid of the local police there Bryant and his travelling companion, who gave his name as O. G. Michael, were arrested. Bryant before he was searched at the jail managed on a simple pretext to hide his roll of bills in the closet but the police in a vigilant search afterwards found them wrapped in a silk handkerchief. The roll of bills consisted mostly of $10 and $20 bills amounting in all to $1,241. The money is made of light paper and is easily distinguished from good currency.

No charge was laid against Michael except that of carrying a concealed weapon, and on Tuesday he was given his liberty on the payment of a $20 fine.

STABBED IN THE NECK.

A drunken row took place in the Queen's Hotel on Wednesday night in which one of the participants received a stab in the throat with a pocket knife. Thomas McFarlane was the victim and the perpetrator of the deed was Edward Andrill. A third party who was largely responsible for the beginning of the row did not take any part afterwards. The wounded man was taken to the hospital where his injury was found to be slight, there being a two inch gash in the side of his neck. Andrill was arrested.

LOCAL DERAILED.

The local going east on Saturday last met with an accident four miles east of Frank which caused a long delay to traffic. The axle of a G. N. steam shovel shipped from Morrissey to Regina broke, causing the derailment of several other cars. Though a temporary track was built around, the east bound passenger train was delayed 8 hours and the west bound 3 hours.

DRAW AT COLEMAN

Michel Lost to Pincher Creek. Fernie Now Leading in Foot Ball League.

The game of foot-ball at Coleman between the eleven of that town and the Fernie team last Saturday resulted in a draw, each team securing one goal. Several of the best players were unable to get away and their places were filled with weaker men. The Coleman boys put up a good game and the play was very even. Both goals were secured in the first half. Coleman secured the first goal and a few moments later J. Stewart Fernie's left forward evened up the score.

On the same day Michel met its second defeat for the season, in a league game played at Pincher Creek. The latter secured 2 goals and Michel did not score at all.

The following is a summary of the games played and the standing of each team, each win counting 2 points and each draw counting 1 point.

	WON	LOST	DRAWN	POINTS
Fernie	3	1	1	7
Michel	3	2	0	6
Coleman	2	0	2	6
Pincher	2	2	2	6
Blairmore	0	5	1	1

The remaining games of the schedule are as follows;—

July 16, Pincher and Coleman at Coleman
July 23, Fernie and Pincher at Pincher.
July 23, Coleman and Michel at Michel.
July 30, Michel and Coleman at Coleman.
July 30 Fernie and Blairmore at Blairmore.
Aug. 3, Coleman and Fernie at Fernie.

Since writing the above further particulars of the Michel-Pincher Creek game have been explained in the Pincher Creek Echo. The game was declared a draw by the referee who was a Michel man and who is said to have favored his friends at every point. The referee refused to allow either goals, in one case at least over-ruling the umpire's decision. The Pincher Creek club has duly lodged a protest with the league committee.

MR. FERNAU COMING.

Mr. Lindsey was seen yesterday in regard to the zinc smelting plant and in answer to a question as to any new developments replied that he had received information from Mr. Fernau intimating that he was on his way to Fernie. Mr. Lindsey further said that his arrival was daily expected and that he (Mr. Lindsey) hoped to have the final arrangements made before his departure for Toronto.

NEW HALL OPENED

The base-ball dance held in Mr. Stork's new hall on Monday evening was well patronized and a very enjoyable evening was spent. The hall was not quite completed in time but the absent windows only rendered the hall cooler, and long strings of electric lights amply made up for chandeliers. The hall has an excellent floor, two neat cloak rooms and an 18 foot stage. Some of the scenery is in place and the remainder with the drop curtain will be in place next week. The hall space is larger than would be supposed, its seating capacity being 500. The town is now in a position to receive good shows.

MAKING CONCRETE BLOCKS

The Crown Block Co. have commenced active operations, their machine having arrived on Saturday last. The machine is a very simple devise, quite unpretentious and apparently not worth more than a fraction of its cost, proving that its patentee is well protected.

On Monday a few sample blocks were made and though at first some difficulties were experienced in getting the mixing done in correct proportions, the first blocks proved beyond all doubt that the concrete hollow block is one of the most satisfactory building materials in use in the world today.

FIRE AT COAL CREEK.

Early on Sunday morning the lamp house caught on fire. The night watchman called for assistance and with aid of the great water pressure the flames were extinguished. The interior of the building was completely gutted. Nearly all the lamps were removed safely and those that were injured were repaired in time for the next shift. The new brick lamp house at Coal Creek is almost completed.

COKING AT MORRISSEY

Afte a shut-down of eleven weeks the coke ovens here commenced burning on Monday last, and sixty ovens are now burning. Six weeks ago the mines started after a close down which lasted five weeks, but the coal has been shipped out for steaming purposes.

It is expected that in about six weeks the whole battery of two hundred and forty will be fired, and the output of five hundred tons a day will be reached. As the coke weight is between 60 and 70 per cent. of the weight of coal put in the ovens it will mean that the mines will have to turnout 700 tons of coal to suply the ovens which is about double the quantity they now ship out. About eighty men will be required to tend to the ovens work.—Morrissey Despatch.

TENDERS WANTED

Sealed tenders will be received by the undersigned up to July 20th for the excavation of a cellar on the post office corner. For particulars apply to

H. J JOHNSON, Postmaster.

The attention of our readers is called to the advertisement of Messrs. Dunne and McLeod, merchant tailors, which appears in this issue for the first time. They have opened up in the Beck building on Baker St. with a large stock of first-blass goods, ACCIDENT AT MICHEL.

J. MICONA ACCIDENTALLY KILLED IN NO. 8 MINE.

While Assisting at Re-timbering He Slipped And Struck His Head Against a Rail.

John Micona was accidently killed in No. 8 mine at Michel early yesterday morning. The unfortunate man was assisting the timber man to re-timber in this mine. While taking out a set of timbers a piece fell and Micona, in jumping to one side to avoid injury, slipped and fell heavily, his head striking the track rail. The blow was on a very vital part, the temple, and the man died almost instantly.

Coroner Trites was summoned, and a verdict of accidental death in accordance with the above facts was rendered. Deceased was an Italian and he was a married man. The funeral took place this afterooon at Fernie.

TO LEASE BRANCH LINE.

Mr. Lumsden, chief engineer of the C. P. R. system was in town yesterday on important business with the Coal Company. A deal is in progress between the C. P. R. and the C. N. P. Coal Companp by which the latter will lease the branch line from Fernie to Coal Creek mines and operate its own transportation business between the town and the mines. If this deal is consummated the new line contemplated by the Coal Company will not be built.

Dr. Sutherland, of Leduc, is visiting friends in town.

Messrs Johnson and Falconer have received the plans for their new block. Little delay will follow in getting the work under way.

The Gladstone Miners Union held its regular semi annual election of officers last Saturday evening. The former President, Thos. Addison and former secretary, D. McCliment were re-elected to their respective offices. Some changes were made in the personnel of the different committees.

Constable Tranter stationed at Morrissey mines has resigned his position. Mr. Tranter who is a member of the Provincial Police has served faithfully at his post under very unfavorable conditions He has had charge of the three towns and without any lock-up in his district he has met very grave difficulties. If the government expects to keep a good man at that station it will be necessary for it to fulfill its promise to build a suitable lock-up at either Morrissey mines or at the Junciion.

Some jolly followers of the worthy Izaac Walton met with disaster near Michel early in the week. The party consisting of several prominent Michel people, who shall be nameless, started out in a wagon which was well loaded with the necessary "equipment" for a fishing expedition. The driver in crossing a bridge drove too near the edge, upsetting the whole outfit into the river. One horse was drowned, and fourteen of the eighteen kegs of beer, and another of something stronger, were carried away by the current. Lucky fish!

Mr. G. O. Foss when up from Morrissey early in the week reported ihat he had two thirds of his right of way cleared and that he had started grading on three cuts. A good deal of the work so far was of a preliminary nature, getting the camps in shape and building a wagon road, but from now on the grading would proceed without interruption. Mr. Welch is at work building the wagon road around the big rock cut. For some ttme he was undecided whether to grade a road on the rock cut or build over the swamp, but the receding of the river has made the latter the preferable way.

Foreman Leamy who is in charge of an extra gang of C. P. R. men at Cranbrook had an exciting time a few days ago which he will not soon forget. It appears that he was instrumental in stopping some drunken rows among his Italian workmen earlier in the day, but in the evening seventeen of them way laid their chief as he descended the ladder from a car in the dusk of night. He was handled without gloves but with clubs and other instruments of warfare. The case was aired in the police court and Phillip Carosella was called to Cranbrook to interpret the Italian language. The magistrate handed out some heavy fines and imprisonment penalties in consequence of the assault.

THE FOURTH OF JULY

U.S. NATIONAL HOLIDAY FURNISHES TEXT FOR A SERMON.

OF UNIVERSAL APPLICATION

The Modest Hero—"The Stone Which the Builders Rejected, the Same Is Become the Head of the Corner"—Story of Heroism and Self-Sacrifice the Theme of Rev. Dr. Talmage's Patriotic Jubilee Talk.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 3.—At this season of patriotic jubilee, when the great ones of our nation's history are recalled, the preacher chooses for his theme the career of Marcus Whitman, through whose heroism and self-sacrifice the great Empire of the northwest was added to our national domain. The text is Matthew xxi., 42, "The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner."

Every Fourth of July it is the custom of patriotic speakers to eulogize the names of George Washington and Samuel Adams and James Otis and Joseph Warren and Patrick Henry and De Witt Clinton and John Adams and John Hancock and Robert Morris and Benjamin Franklin and John Witherspoon and Thomas Jefferson and Nathaniel Greene and Alexander Hamilton and John Jay. These were the mental giants who hewed out of the new world's quarries the titanic stones which became the foundation layers of our national Government. But these were not the only men in those early days of our national history to whom we, as a people, are indebted.

To-morrow we shall celebrate our national holiday. Let me present to you to-day a name that ought to be familiar to us all, but which is seldom placed in the rank it ought to have on the roll of the nation's heroes. While we honor the men who cleared away the debris and dug out the foundation stones of our national capital let us spare, too, a few words of praise for a man to whose daring and perseverance it is due that at least one if not several stars were added to those that glitter on our national flag. I place my wreath of immortelles to-day on the grave of Marcus Whitman, who practically, single-handed, saved the States of Oregon and Washington to the Union. I praise the Marcus Whitman of 1842, who placed the despised capstone of Oregon upon the topmost pinnacle of the Washington legislative halls, made up of the stone of many States.

How did Marcus Whitman save Oregon to the United States? First, by heeding the Macedonian gospel cry of helplessness. Like the pilgrim fathers he obeyed the direct summons which came to him in the voice of many thunderings to carry Christ's message of salvation even unto the uttermost parts of the earth. He left his home among the beautiful hills of central New York State, not out of a spirit of adventure as a Chanler Astor might plunge into the African jungles to hunt big game. He left it not as did John McLaughlin to dangle before the avaricious eyes of North American Indians his prizes, which would make the red-skinned hunters more expert in setting their traps and bringing in their piles of furs. He left it not as did the English gentlemen who came to Jamestown, Va., in the hope of becoming land-owning aristocrats in a new world, or as did the Spanish marauders, who, in their conquest of Mexico, stole upon the land what the pirates of old used to steal upon the seas. But Marcus Whitman and Samuel Parker dared cross the American continent because from the far-off Willamette Valley came the story of the bitter need there was for the gospel of peace to be preached to the Indian war chiefs, with scalping knives and tomahawks at belts, who, by their actions, said: "We need the white man's book of heaven. We need the white man's Christ."

To describe how that Macedonian cry of helplessness came to Marcus Whitman, let me transplant you in imagination, back to the little frontier town of St. Louis, Mo., and, like the shadow on the dial of Ahaz, turn back time until the year of 1832. St. Louis at that time had a population of only a few thousand. There the gambling dens and the dance halls and the low variety shows were in full blast. There were collected many of the dissolute characters, which, always as Satanic emissaries, infest every frontier town with a leprous, immoral infection. We will suppose, in order to make the wild, weird scene we are about to describe more vivid, that the old Indian fighter and territorial Governor, up to 1821, and the United States superintendent of the Indians, from 1821 to 1838, General William Clark, is spending a social evening with two of his old friends, who followed Lewis and himself on their famous journey of the far northwest. Suddenly a messenger raps at the door. In answer to the gruff call, "Come in," there enter four Flathead Indians. Two of them are aged warriors, two young stalwart braves. "Where are you from, my men?" asked the general, eying them from head to foot. "From the murmuring waters of the Columbia? Impossible. From the Pacific shores? Nay, nay, that cannot be. For what did you come? For the white man's book of heaven? What, didst thou have to travel 3,000 miles to hunt up the white man's book of heaven when the representatives of the Hudson Bay Company have for years been buying your furs?" "Yes," answered the Nez Perces Indians. "We have come 3,000 miles for the white man's book of heaven. Will you give it us?" But though the three wise men, coming to seek the new-born king in the Jerusalem capital, never made more stir than did the four Flathead Indians coming to find the white man's Christ in the Missouri frontier town of 1832, yet even there in that St. Louis frontier town they could not find the white man's book of heaven.

Let me now read to you the strangest valedictory ever given at any place. The two older Indians who came on this mission of seeking the white man's God had died. When the two younger braves were about to depart for their own faraway wigwams, one of them in Indian eloquence spake these words, which were published in the little frontier paper of that time: "I came to you over the trail of many moons from the setting sun. You were the friends of my fathers, who have all gone the long way. I came with an eye partly opened for more light for my people, who sit in darkness. I go back with both eyes closed. How can I go back blind to my blind people who sit in darkness? I made my way to you with strong arms through many enemies and strange lands that I might carry back much to them. I go back with both arms broken and empty. Two fathers came with us. They were braves of many winters and wars. We leave them asleep by your great water and wigwam. They were tried in many moons, and their moccasins wore out. My people sent me to get the white man's book of heaven. You took me where you allow your women to dance as we do not ours, and the book was not there. You took me where they worship the Great Spirit with candles, and the book was not there. You showed me the images of the Good Spirit and pictures of the good land beyond, but the book was not among them to tell us the way. I am going back the long sad trail to my people of the dark land. You make my feet heavy with gifts, and my moccasins will grow old in carrying them, yet the book is not among them. When I tell my poor blind people after one more moon in the big council that I did not bring the book no word will be spoken by our old men or by our young braves. One by one they will rise up and go out in silence. My people will die in the darkness, and they will go on the long path to other hunting grounds. No white man will go with them and no white man's book to make the way plain. I have no more words."

It was the publication of these words, copied in the eastern papers, that made Marcus Whitman heed the call of the Nez Perces Indians; it was the publication of these words that nerved Whitman to consecrate all his life to giving the Flathead Indians the white man's "Book of Life." It was that resolve to go in the name of Christ to the far northwest which made it possible for Marcus Whitman to save Oregon to the Union.

But Marcus Whitman was a statesman as well as a humble gospel missionary. Like Livingstone in Africa, he saw how much could be done in that land by the resources of civilization. His prophetic gaze traveled on through the centuries, and he longed to have that fair region under Christian influences and prospering under the white man's skill and industry. He could hear the tramp of the oncoming generations, as well as the creaking of his cart wheels by his side. Therefore, when Marcus Whitman, on the famous Fourth of July, 1836, with his young bride, spread the blankets upon the top of the Rocky Mountains, with Mount Hood and Mount Jefferson standing afar off as guarding sentinels, and dedicated that western soil of God and his native land, like Paul, he was surrounded by a great cloud of witnesses.

He dedicated this western soil in spite of the fact that all could be said to discourage settlers had been said in calumnious disparagement. The Hudson Bay Company wanted it left in the undisturbed possession of the wild animals whose skins they were turning into gold. They wanted it for a perpetual hunting ground. Therefore they declared it to be a land barred by impassable ranges of mountains, a land of undrainable morasses, pestilential and malarial, unfit for the residence of white men, a land given up to barbarism and Indian savagery. So persistent were the falsehoods disseminated by these greedy, selfish capitalists that before Marcus Whitman's advent Oregon had been lying like the capstone of the Jerusalem temple which the builders rejected, but which afterward became the chief of the corner. All the national statesmen, both trans and cis-Atlantic, cared no more for it than a pearl diver would care to carry around with him a cobblestone, or a diamond merchant would care to preserve an ordinary pebble among his precious jewels. Yet Marcus Whitman at once knew Oregon was the strategic geographical key to the Northwest. He said: "It must be ours. It must be ours on account of its future generations. It must belong to the United States as well as to God."

Why, so useless was this Oregon region considered in 1842 that Daniel Webster, then premier of President Tyler's Cabinet, was willing to barter off to Lord Ashburton the whole of the Far Northwest for a few privileges for the American sailors to fish for cod off the Banks of Newfoundland. A few years before this, to prove his utter ignorance of the intrinsic value of this land of the Northwest, Daniel Webster, then the most powerful member of the United States Senate, uncontroverted by Clay and Calhoun and Benton, made this astounding speech: "What do we want with this vast, worthless area, this region of savages and wild beasts, of deserts, of shifting sands and whirlwinds of dust, of cactus and prairie dogs? To what use could we ever hope to put these great deserts, or these great mountain ranges, impenetrable and covered to their base with eternal snows? What can we ever hope to do with the western coast of 3,000 miles, rock bound, cheerless and uninteresting, and not a harbor on it? What use have we for such a country? Mr. President, I will never vote a cent from the public treasury to place the Pacific Coast one inch nearer Boston than it is now."

But Marcus Whitman had more than inspired vision and opened ears. He had a consecrated, noble Christian heart, as well as a clear brain. He was a gospel missionary who was ready, if necessary, to die if by his death he could only accomplish the work which God had given him to do. In order to save Oregon for the Union, in midwinter, alone, he rode straight across this continent. He defied the warning elements as well as savage tribes, the terrors of the snows and the precipices and colds as well as the Indian tomahawks.

But, as I take a step further in my study of this remarkable nation builder, I find, as with Marcus Whitman, the greatest of men are always the gentlest of men. Furthermore, I find that the seemingly unimportant incidents of their lives, which they did out of the pureness and nobility of their hearts, have sometimes had the most far reaching effects in their ultimate triumphs.

Not only do we admire Marcus Whitman as a patriot and a hero, but as a remarkable fact that his public success was in no small degree due to the qualities he displayed in his private life. Do you ask how the one could contribute to the other? I answer by rapidly drawing three verbal pictures. Scene the first: We are now standing in the little village church of Prattsburg, in the central part of New York State. It is in the winter of 1836; February is the month. A rather short, heavily built man of reddish hair and beard, with determination marked upon every lineament of his face, is the bridegroom. Dr. Marcus Whitman is his name. A sweet faced young lady, Narcissa Prentiss, daughter of Judge Prentiss, is the bride. In the presence of their village friends the young couple become one. The congratulations are spoken. The words of farewell are now said. The bride and groom turn their faces west and the long bridal trip of 3,000 miles commenced.

Scene the second: We are now at the frontier station of Fort Laramie, of the Platte River. The little caravan of transcontinental travelers are here told that they must unload their wagons and strap all their goods upon pack mules and horses. No wagon had ever yet crossed the mountains, and no wagon could. Up to this year no white woman had ever crossed the continent. There were two brides in that party. The one was the young wife of Marcus Whitman; the other was the bride of his missionary associate, Rev. Samuel Parker by name. "I tell you that wagon cannot go through," I hear one of the rough members of the caravan say. I now see a set look upon the face of Dr. Whitman. His jaws snap shut with the grip of a steel trap. Then a glint comes into his eye as he says: "But I tell you that wagon will go through. These ladies, my wife and Mrs. Parker, must not be compelled to ride horseback all that way." A muttered oath comes from the lips of the rough man at the fort as he says: "All right. We will try to pull it through." And pull and push and lift that wagon through those men did. They dragged it over the mountains and across the prairies to lighten the journey of two young women who as brides accompanied their husbands to faroff missionary fields.

Scene the third: It is the year 1843. We are now standing in the White House of our national capital. The president of the United States is John Tyler. He is smooth faced, tall and spare of frame. The second member of this notable group has a huge, massive body, a leonine face. He is one with looks expressive of the description given by a famous English jurist: "He is the most magnificent physical as well as mental specimen of his day and generation." He is the questioner. He is Daniel Webster. The third member of the group looks like a rough mountaineer. He is clad in skins. His hair is uncut. But he is one of the immortals of his day. He is Marcus Whitman.

As we stand in the corner of the room I see a strange scene. Tyler and Webster, the two leaders of the American Government are being driven back and back from their old positions of statecraft by this seemingly untutored man of the backwoods. Then, like Paul before Agrippa, I see Marcus Whitman step forward, and hear him say: "Mr. Secretary, you know not what you are doing. Better, far better, barter away all the wealth and the sovereignty of the New England states for a few Newfoundland cod, than surrender to England the priceless treasures of Oregon and the strategic position of the Far Northwest."

"Bah," answered Daniel Webster with scorn, "what is the use of Oregon to the Union? That land is wholly inaccessible. A wagon road could never be built across those mountains." Then, as Richelieu turned upon his king, I see Whitman turn, and hear him triumphantly say: "Mr. Secretary, that is a grand mistake that has been made by listening to interested persons. Six years ago I was told that there was no wagon road to Oregon, and it was impossible to take a wagon there, and yet, in spite of pleadings and almost threat, I took a wagon over that road, and have it now." "Is that so?" said Webster. "Then Oregon must be saved to the Union." And so I find in these few words that the devotion which Marcus Whitman gave to his wife by compelling the men to carry his wagon over the Rockey Mountains was one of the mighty means of helping to save Oregon to the Union. It proved that the Far Northwest and the east were not separated by impassable barriers. And it furthermore proved that all men's greatest and truest successes are always dependent upon their faithfulness in the common duties of ordinary life. Marcus Whitman's love for his country is today associated with the pure love which he bore Narcissa Prentiss. The true successes by which we will be able perhaps to do some great act for our country will be dependent upon how we fulfill the little duties of everyday domestic existence.

Suppose

By KEITH GORDON

...Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure...

The saffron radiance of the electric lights that bloomed as yellow rosebuds on the walls flooded the balcony. Here and there a lamp with a red shade glowed like a carbuncle. From the palm room below the aroma of black coffee greeted the nostrils delicately.

One of the musicians trailed his hands over the keys of the piano and at the sound the violins adjusted their instruments with affectionate care. The men at the bass viol, cello and flute stood at attention, and in another moment the music began again.

It seemed to roll through the place in waves, the thin edges of which went curling through the open doors and out into the darkness of the street, where the passersby slackened their steps to listen. The half dozen persons who sat in the balcony listening succumbed even more completely to its charm.

"Lovers—lovers everywhere!" murmured Agnes Jennings mirthfully as her gaze wandered idly over the scene before her. Her companion's answering smile was somewhat abstracted. While she had been watching the others he had been watching her. It was a habit he had acquired, and it was particularly in moments like this, when her head was thrown back against the chair, her eyes were touched with dreaminess and the shadowy smile was quivering on her lips.

There were, indeed, two absorbed couples near them, and Richardson obediently pretended to be interested in them. Of the older pair, the man was of the stout, flushed, prosperous type so common in our cities. "I'm as good as you are," was written in every line of his face.

But as he gazed at the woman beside him, who was oppressively pink of cheek, bright of eye and black of hair, you saw that he made one exception. For the moment he was an idealist and she was his ideal! In some clumsy, speechless way he showed that he felt that he wasn't so good as she—that he aspired, that he loved!

"He has forgotten that he's the successful Tim O'Donohue," remarked Richardson laughingly. "He has forgotten how he started with a pickax and spade and now wears a diamond in his shirt front—he has forgotten everything but her."

He finished the sentence as if he were speaking to himself, and his companion paid him the tribute of a lingering glance in which a question mark was barely perceptible. Then she returned to her derisive contemplation of the lovers once more.

"They certainly are naive," was her next comment, as with a droll smile she watched the other couple—a slender girl with sweet blue eyes and a lordly youth with a reassuring breadth of shoulder and crisp dark hair. The blue eyes were gazing up at him as if he were a godling, as in fact he looked.

"The cunning things!" ejaculated Miss Jennings softly, as the youth's hand gently touched the girl's as it lay on the arm of the chair. "S-h-h, don't move!" she cautioned, as Richardson shifted his position to get a better glance of them. "You'll attract their attention, and then they will sit up stiff and straight and talk of the weather!"

Apparently they were oblivious to the people about them as well as to the laughing scrutiny turned upon them, as they sat gazing blissfully into each other's eyes.

"Now, what do you suppose they see there?" drawled Richardson, going back to his interrupted contemplation of Agnes' profile. She laughed lightly.

"Everything floating in a rose colored mist. Nothing but joy, joy, joy! Invisible music—and always themselves together and happy," she hazarded. "It's a bit cruel to think how different it will really be, isn't it?"

As she turned toward him with a look grown pensive, Richardson was filled with a sudden optimism.

"It may come true. You can't tell!"

There was something vaguely suggestive in his tone, and Miss Jennings looked again. She was half inclined to believe—but no!

The music stopped. The youth's dark head was bent toward the girl, and he was murmuring to her in low, muffled tones. The man, whose appearance suggested contracts shrewdly and profitably carried through, was making a palpable effort to say something that was determined not to be said. He shifted in his chair, and the red of his face grew darker, while his companion chatted composedly—too composedly, Richardson thought, as his speculative glance came home to the lady at his side.

"Isn't it odd," said she, breaking the silence, "that they are so unconscious? They don't seem to notice us—to think that perhaps we are watching them. Fancy forgetting everything like that!"

Her listener's eyes seemed to be reduced to mere points. He felt oddly nettled at her words and as quick as a flash decided to make an experiment. Was she really so cold and impersonal as she seemed? Well, it was decreed that he should find out some time, and this was perhaps as good a time as any.

"My dear girl," he began in a fatherly tone, "it is only in the shadows that one thinks of the opinion of the public. Don't you know that in the real moments of life, the moments that mean something, one cares as little about the public as about the leaves on the trees? Don't you know that it must be so?"

She opened her lips to protest, but he gave her no chance to speak.

"Now, put yourself in the place of these people here. Suppose"—he managed to fling a word of teasing sarcasm into his words—"suppose, for instance, that I, here and now, should tell you that I love you; that I've loved you since the day we met for the first time; that I cannot and will not live without you; that"—

He stopped abruptly in order to take a fresh start. Something—urgent, earnest, appealing—had crowded the mockery out of his voice. It had the ring of appeal. It sounded far too much in earnest. He called the mockery to his aid once more and resumed.

"What if I should tell you that I would rather have your love than the power of a king or the wealth of a Croesus; that I should count it fine and wonderful beyond all imagining, a moment to die for, if I could read in your eyes that you love me, that some day you will be my wife?"

His voice had become provokingly husky. It was a full second before he could recover his vein of light raillery.

"Suppose that I should say all this and much more that I can think of to you, here and now, to the accompaniment of this bewitching music. Could you sit and listen unmoved? Wouldn't there be some change in your expression and in mine by which a curious person who was looking on might discover that all the world loves? And—would we care very much?"

He was leaning forward, his strong, muscular hands clasped loosely before him, a whimsical smile on his lips. With a thrill of triumph he saw that she was not listening unmoved even to the supposition. But she kept a bold front.

"Do I seem to be melting?" she inquired, with a touch of defiance which comported ill with the tumultuous beating of her heart and a most annoying feeling of tremulousness about the lips. It was too absurd. But at least he should not know how embarrassed she was.

Then he proceeded calmly with his odious suppositions.

"But that was not all. Suppose that I should tell you that, though I love you as a man can love but once, though you are to me the scent of the roses, the sweetness of music, the dearest joy of life, I am honor bound to another. Would there be anything to show that you cared?"

Slowly the color faded from her face. She realized it, but she could not help it, for she felt still and cold and motionless. Then, almost piteously, her eyes sought his. Triumph and gladness were visible there. His look was a caress. The place, the music, the people momentarily vanished from her consciousness. She felt as if they were alone in the world—a fuller, happier world than she had ever before dreamed of.

"Agnes, Agnes!" he admonished, using her first name without a sign of apology, precisely as if he intended using it always in the future. "Beware, my dear girl! If those others," nodding toward the couples whom she had so lately criticised, "were less absorbed in their own affairs, I am afraid they would be justified in thinking that we are having a lovers' quarrel."

"You wretch!" she said at last. It really seemed the only thing to do—to smile and make the best of it. Then her glance strayed to the others. It was a trifle more sympathetic than before. O'Donohue, as they had named him, sat silent, uncomfortable, happy. The godling and the blue eyed girl were talking, but were perhaps saying more with their eyes than with their lips.

"Might I have the honor of your attention?" pleaded Richardson's voice meekly.

She turned toward him, trying hard to look serious, but the corners of her mouth wavered.

"Suppose"—the voice was a bit breathless—"suppose I were to tell you that the first part was true—terribly true—the part about my caring for you?" he questioned. "The rest, of course, was nonsense."

Little waves of color swept over her face and disappeared in the duskiness of her hair. She gave him one quick glance, and her lids covered her eyes and shut out their message.

In the convenient shadow of the chair his big brown hand closed over hers with a touch—gentle, firm, supreme.

There were three pairs of lovers, but, alas, no audience!

Stories of Artemus Ward.

When Artemus Ward's business manager once asked him about his Puritanic origin he replied, "I think we came from Jerusalem, for my father's name was Levi, and we had a Moses and a Nathan in the family, but my poor brother's name was Cyrus, so perhaps that makes us Persians."

When the humorist began his lecture he would sometimes describe it by saying, "One of the features of my entertainment is that it contains so many things that don't have anything to do with it," and in the middle of his lecture he would stop and say:

"Owing to a slight indisposition, we will now have an intermission of fifteen minutes."

The audience would begin to feel uncomfortable at the thought of staring at vacancy for that time, when, rubbing his hands, the lecturer would continue, "But, ah—I will occupy the intermission by telling a few stories."

It is said that even his business letters were eccentric and that once in writing to a publisher who had made some alterations in his manuscript he said, "The next book I write I'm going to get you to write."

LIKE A MIRACLE.

THE WONDERFUL RECOVERY OF A NIPISSING MAN.

Stricken With Partial Paralysis He Was Unable to Use Either Right Arm or Right Leg.

Mr. John Craig, a well known farmer living near Kells, Nipissing district, Ont., is another of the many paralytics, who owes his present good health and ability to go about—if not life itself—to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mr. Craig gives his experience as follows:—"But for the blessing of God and the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I do not believe that I would be alive to-day. I was stricken with that terrible affliction, partial paralysis, I had absolutely no power in my right arm or leg. I was not able to sit up—in fact if I tried to do so I would fall over. I had to be lifted like a child, and my family and friends believed death was very near. The doctor told me that he could do nothing for me, and that I was liable at any moment to have another stroke which would carry me off. I was in this deplorable condition when I was advised to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I sent for three boxes and before they were all used I could move the fingers on my hand which had nitherto been absolutely numb and powerless. You can scarcely imagine my joy at this convincing proof that the pills were helping me. From this on I kept getting stronger and the control of my paralyzed limbs gradually came back until I was again able to walk about and eventually to work. To my neighbors my cure seems like a miracle, as not one of them ever expected to see me out of bed again. I gladly give permission to publish the story of my cure with the wish that it may bring life and hope and activity to some other sufferer."

The cure of Mr. Craig gives additional evidence that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not an ordinary medicine, and that their power to cure in all troubles of the blood or nerves places them beyond all other medicines. You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or direct by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. See that the full name "Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People" is printed on the wrapper around every box.

The Kiwi.

In New Zealand is found the kiwi, a strange bird of the ostrich family. Ostriches have two toes, but the extinct moas had three toes; so also have the existing emus, cassowaries and rheas, or South American ostriches. The kiwi, however, differs from the other struthious birds in having four toes. Further, the kiwi cannot be said to be quite ostrichlike, for in size it is not larger than an ordinary barnyard fowl. It has a small head, with a large and muscular neck and a long, slender bill, with the distinguishing feature that the nostrils are placed very close to its tip. The legs are short, but the muscles on the thighs are well developed, and the feet are strong and powerful and provided with sharp claws. It is a bird devoid of any external trace of wings, and there is no trace of tail visible, while it is covered with long, narrow, hairlike feathers, and on the fore part of the head and sides of the face are straggling hairlike feelers.

How He Made the Alps.

Has any painter ever fixed on canvas visions, distinct and haunting, of lands he had never seen? I know not. The nearest thing of the kind was a wonderful erection of brown paper and apparently ingeniously arranged shelvings, built up in rocklike fashion, covered with little green toy box trees and dotted here and there with bits of mirror glass and cardboard houses, which once puzzled me considerably in the parlor of a cottage. "Do tell me what that is?" at last rose to my lips.

"That," answered my hostess very slowly—"that is a work of my late 'usband—a representation of the Haips as close as 'e could imagine it, for 'e never was abroad." I often think of that man "who never was abroad" and of his representation of the Alps; of the hours of poetic vision, of actual creation perhaps from sheer strength of longing, which resulted in that quaint work of art. As close as he could imagine them!—Macmillan's Magazine.

Anathemas of the Middle Ages.

The Rhenish and Westphalian Society of Popular Studies published in its journal an interesting paper upon the subject of ecclesiastical anathemas launched in the middle ages against animals. These maledictions did not relate to mischiefs already done, but were in the nature of a protection against evils to be apprehended and were solely directed against creatures considered mischievous. Thus in 1121 St. Bernard cursed the mosquitoes, as some unsaintly Americans have done in more recent times and probably with just as little effect. Even post-reformation Protestants sometimes had recourse to comminatory measures, as witness the pastor of Dresden who in 1559 cursed the sparrows for distracting his congregation.

RUSSIAN BRAVERY.

SAKHAROFF TELLS OF BRUSH WITH JAPS.

Infantry Made Repeated Bayonet Charges—Compliments the Surgeons. Successful Demonstration.

The General Staff at St. Petersburg has received the following despatch from Lieutenant-General Sakharoff, the Chief of Staff of General Kuropa?kin dated July 4. "On July 3 the advance guard of the Russian force operating east of Liao Yang occupied a position at Langtse Pass. Towards evening the same day our scouts ascertained that a deatchment of the enemy's advance guard, 15,000 strong, had occupied the villages of Ekhavaun and Ticha Kumen Sea, on our front, the main force having remained in Fen Shui and Motien Passes. At this moment we discovered the movement of a Japanese detachment, consisting of a battalion, to turn our left flank positions in the Langtse Pass in the direction of Lian Dian Sian. In order to check this movement, a force was sent forward in the direction of the threatened points.

SUCCESSFUL DEMONSTRATION.

"In order to learn the strength of the enemy's position in front of Liao Tse Pass the commander of the detachment ordered out was reinforces and a reconnoitering party of ten companies was sent in the direction of Ekhavuan, under the command of Colonel Letschitsky. With the view of making a demonstration insuring the return of Letschitsky's detachment, three companies under Lieut.-Colonel Garnitsky marched to Mahoumizza, about a mile and a half south of Ekhavuan, to the crossing of the roads leading to Sin Khi and the Lok River Passes. Firing began at 2.30 p. m. on July 4. Garnitsky's column reached the cross roads and dislodged a company of the enemy's advance guard, which was almost annihilated. Simultaneously Leitschitsky's column dislodged the enemy's advance posts without firing a shot and approached the foot of the heights, surmounted by a temple. The temple is less than a mile east of Ekhavan, where, although exposed to a heavy frontal and flank fire, our troops dashed forward and dislodged the Japanese from their entrenchments and occupied the pass. As the enemy was preparing to deliver a frontal and flank attack our column then retired, as previously instructed. Three companies of Garnitsky's force occupied the position which they had been ordered to secure.

TROOPS WELL LED.

"When Letschitsky's force began to withdraw the enemy opened a heavy fire from the heights. In spite of this the column retired in perfect order. Brave Letschitsky remained continuously on the fighting line and directed the column with remarkable ability and coolness. He was the last to retire with his chief of staff and adjutant. Garnitsky's column behaved with equal brilliancy and coolness, carrying out their task with no sign of agitation. Our casualties were Colonel Letschitsky, bruised and wounded; Colonel Poapelow, Lieutenant Colonel Trakhemovsky, Captain Soloief, Lieutenants Markoff, Latkine, Bobroslavsky, and Kozine, Second Captain Paly and several other officers wounded. I observed the fighting with my staff from Tkhaoquan tower, and I can personally testify to the conduct of the troops. I cannot pass in silence the remarkable devotion of the surgeons and of the chaplain who attended the wounded under a heavy fire, and even helped to carry them off the field. All the wounded were removed.

DESPERATE BAYONET CHARGE.

Another cable from St. Petersburg says: The fact that Lieutenant-General Sakharoff, chief of staff to General Kuropatkin, witnessed the fighting near Motien Pass, is taken here to indicate that he is in command of the forces east of Liao Yang, which include the army corps under Lieut.-Gen. Count Keller. The desperate character of the fighting is shown by the repeated bayonet charges, the Russians ousting the Japanese from the trenches. The fighting around Senu Chen shows that the Japanese are determined to hold the ground to the south as well as Dalin Pass until a ,avorable opportunity presents itself for an advance on Yin Kow, the port of Niuchwang.

MARKET REPORT.

Compiled by Thompson, Sons & Co.

Thursday, June 30th, 1904.

WHEAT—At the end of last week markets became stronger and under the pressure of bad weather down in the winter wheat country, shorts hastened to cover the longs added to to their lines and a good advance was scored on Saturday, and quite a bullish sentiment prevailed. A rest over Sunday evidently changed the appearance of things in the eyes of many traders for when Monday came around the feeling became as barish as it had been bullish on Saturday. After a sharp decline on Monday and a little further easing off on Tuesday, there was another turn for the better yesterday and to-day markets all held steady and firm without material change at the close. While there has been a fluctuation of 1¼c to 2c in the in American markets during the week closing prices to-day show almost no change from the closing quotations of this day week. Looking over the week's happenings and changes in the wheat trade there has been nothing of special note occurring. We are now at the end of June and the season's crops are gradually becoming fixed in their character, and the action of the market depends almost wholly on the report of the weather as it may tell on the development of the crop. Harvest has made considerable progress in the winter wheat belt in America, although it has been delayed and hindered by heavy rains. Reports as to the condition of the crop and the probable yield has been a little mixed, for in some districts the crop is very good, and in others it is really poor. Jones of the Commercial West has issued a full and detailed estimate of the crop after personal inspection over a large area, and his report will be given credit for thoroughness and reliability. He puts the probable yield of winter wheat for this year in round figures at 342,000,000 bus., as against 401,000,000, bus. last year, the latter being the final government estimate. This makes a reduction of 59,000,000, bus. form last year's total. Such a result as this will have a very bullish influence on prices unless the spring wheat crop developes a large yield. At present the latter crop is getting full credit for looking well, but it will require extradorinary favorable weather during July and August to bring it to the bumper crop which so many (for the most part unexperienced) people see it in June. While the foregoing is the state of the crop in America there is evidence that the crop in Europe may this year run 200,000,000 bus. under last year's total. The drought in Roumania, Austria Hungary and other districts gas reduced the yield by 100,000,000, bus. in the aggregate. In parts of Russia also the crop is very light, as well as in parts af Italy and Spain. At the same time the consumption of wheat-en breadstuffs tend to increase in both Europe and America so that there are very good reasons for expecting that for the coming year at least prices are not likely to go below present level for any length of time, and should any widespread damage befall the growing crops before they are securely saved prices may easily see a higher level. The visible supply decreased last week, 1,169,000 bus., against a decrease of 2,132,000 bus. the previous week and a decrease of 1,001,000 bus. last year. The world's shipments for the week were 9,296,000 bus. against 9,336,000 bus. the previous week and 10,355,000 bs. last year. The world's visible supply according to Bradstreets decreased 3,071,000 bus. against a decrease of 3,000,700 bus. the previous week and a decrease of 2,400,000 bus last year.

OATS—Winnipeg quotations hold about steady, although some sales have taken place at considerably lower prices. In such cases, however, shipments had arrived on "spec," the value not having been arranged before, and the owners were forced to take a loss or pay demurrage, as the present market is so restricted. Transactions arranged, however, before the goods were shipped have taken place at our quotations. Local dealers claim that the market is firmer. We quote: No. 2 white in carlots on track worth 37c to 38c here, and feed grades worth 35c to 36c. Farmers' loads, in the country, bring 29c to 32c.

BARLEY—The market is stagnant.

HAY—Receipts of baled hay continue large, and prices for best New hay, baled, is not expected for quality are $1 a ton lower. Some new hay has come in loose, but it is, of course, very green and sapless about a month. Dealers state that there is a considerable amount of inferior baled hay in store here. We quote: Choice prairie hay is worth $10.50 to $11 per ton, for baled in carlots on track here.

VEGETABLES—Lettuce has taken another 5 cent tumble. Old turnips are about out, and new stock is now on the market at 30c a bushel. POULTRY—Receipts of poultry are very limited, a few fowl bringing about $1.00 per pair.

BUTTER — Creamery — The market holds about steady, quotations ranging from 16 to 16½c f. o. b. factory.

BUTTER—Dairy—Supplies are increasing and quotations are from ½ to 1c lower. Jobbers are paying 11 to 12c for round lots, Winnipeg. Owing to the freer offerings some firms have ceased buying at country points.

EGGS—Prices are somewhat firmer. There is a scarcity of supplies thought be due, largely, to the large number of new settlers. The advance is about ½ to ¾c per dozen. Dealers are paying 15 to 16c per dozen for choice case lots, Winnipeg.

Lambs and shearlings, 10c each.

TALLOW—In sympathy with the remarkably weak condition of the Chicago market, prices are again easier, ranging ¼c lower. No. 1 tallow is worth 3¾c to 4c per pound delivered at Winnipeg; No. 3, 2¾ to 4c.

WOOL—Only a few tag-end lots of Manitoba stock continue to come in. Some few cars of Territorial wool have changed hands at 10 to 14c.

MILCH COWS—Prices range from $35 to $55 each, according to quality.

The first stock train of the season left Calgary for Montreal on July 4. It consisted of 11 carloads and was rushed through as rapidly as possible the schedule time being between 20 and 25 miles an hour for the whole run including stops. The C.P.R. is paying special attention to the rapid handling of stock trains this year and in supplying every facility to get the stock delivered at Montreal in the best possible condition. In view of the lateness of the season this shipment is considered remarkable, but they were a specially fitted lot, and in fairly good condition.

The name of C. A. Young, of Winnipeg, has been mentioned as one of the commissioners for the construc-of the eastern section of the National Transcontinental railway. His appointment is probable.

America claims that the largest orchard in the world is in Missouri. It is the great Winans Orchard, near Marshfield, in Webster County. There are 86,000 apple trees, 40,000 peach trees, and 10,000 pear trees, just at the proper bearing age. The acreage covered is 1,240, and it is estimated that the orchard is now worth $420,000. There are to-day in the county 1,000,000 bearing trees.

The concrete laying on the foundation of the new C. P. R. hotel at Winnipeg is being pushed ahead at the rate of a cubic yard of concrete every six minutes, or about 100 cubic yards a day. The huge cylindrical concrete mixer has a capacity of one half yard every three minutes, and is kept running at top speed all the time, which necessitates having about 30 men to charge it and take away the finished product.

Gagged to Avert Suspicion.

A remarkable development has occurred in connection with the Dominion Day robbery at Vancouver, making it seem almost certain that the man who posed as the assaulted victim of thieves, was himself the perpetrator of the crime. A jeweller named Broadhead had left his establishment in charge of a young fellow named Smith. When the proprietor returned he found Smith lying on the floor under the bed, his hands tied, mouth gagged and a heavy trunk resting on his head and shoulders. Smith told a plausible tale of how robbers had entered the back door when he was alone, slugging him over the head until unconscious. An examination of the safe revealed the fact that $126 was stolen. It is known that Smith has been hard up, so when it was noticed that he was spending money freely in the tenderloin, he was placed under arrest and searched. The envelope which had contained money was found on his person. Evidently he had robbed the safe, and then to prevent discovery and turn suspicion on others, had bound and gagged himself and feigned unconsciousness.

Excursion Steamer Seized.

The steamer City of Nanaimo, carrying Fourth of July excursionists from Victoria to Port Angeles, Wash., was seized on July 4 by the U. S. customs officers for an alleged violation of the passenger carrying resolutions. It is said that the City of Nanaimo failed to submit herself to the usual inspection by the U. S. officials. She was making her second trip to Port Angeles when seized. The steamer is the property of the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway company, and is valued at $125,000. She will be held until the case is submitted to the federal department of marine. The steamer Whatcom, of the Alaska Steamship company's fleet went over to bring the excursionists, who numbered over five hundred, back to Victoria.

The three test actions brought against the Crow's Nest Pass Coal company, claiming damages in respect to the death of many men in a coalmining disaster of two years ago have been dismissed with costs. Judgment in these cases were handed down at Nelson by Mr. Justice Martin. The hearing of these actions lasted during almost the entire month of June at Nelson. Many eminent counsel were engaged and the amounts envolved were large. These actions practically decide a larger part of a hundred odd claims against the company.

The visitors to the Dominion exhibition in Winnipeg will include people from all parts of Canada, from Halifax to the Yukon. Scotland will be represented by a party, among them being Mr. Andrew Montgomery, who is known the world over as the best breeder of horses in the hemisphere, he being the owner of the famous horse "Macgregor." Mr. McQueen, of the Crofts, in Kirkcudbrightshire, and Mr. James Bigger, of the same country, famed breeders of Galloway cattle, will also be in the party.

Word has been received in Duluth that the construction of the railroad to be built by the Pigeon River Lumber Company of Port Arthur through Cook county is now in active progress. A force of 220 men is engaged at grading and cutting the right of way. The road will run across a fine lumber belt in Cook county, on Gonflint lake to Big Bay, on Lake Superior. The latter point is thirty miles east of Grand Marais. The Pigeon River Lumber company owns the pine. The timber will be railed to Big Bay and towed from there to the company's sawmill at Fort William.

South African Railways.

A Canadian correspondent in London learns that in connection with the resignation of 'Sir Percy Girouard and the circumstances attending it instructions have been despatched by the Government to Lord Milner to prepare a special report on the working and development of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony railways. The belief is expressed in Colonial Office circles that the constructive undertaken has been too rapid ln view of the comparative slow progress of the new colonies.

CANADIAN MOCKINGBIRD.

The Catbird, as He Is Generally Called, Is a Feathered Biped of the Most Varied and Versatile Accomplishments.

This most versatile, if not most musical, of all our feathered singers is enjoying the inspiration of the season and contributing to the melody of the lengthening evenings, says The Globe. His sombre coat of slaty grey, darker on the head and tail, lend aid to his naturally secluded habits, for he likes to move about among the low thickets, where his disappearing form may sometimes be mistaken for a robin. The under tail covert of chestnut or dark red is a distinguishing mark which sometimes aids identification. But the catbird, as he is more familiarly called, is generally recognized by his varied accomplishments. The decided, colloquial mew, as of a vagrant cat, coming from the alder, dogwood, and hazel bushes, is often the first intimation of his presence. He does not long adhere to the disquieting feline sounds, but breaks out into an answering melody, sweet, clear, and of wonderful compass. The shrillest trebles alternate so quickly with the richest altos in the bird register that a listener is easily deluded into fancying that two birds are singing together. Then the cat mews again, and the singing seems scarcely interrupted. Throughout the entire day the thickets are enlivened by an occasional strain from the hidden singer, but as evening advances and the sunlight withdraws to the hilltops he abandons himself to the sustained ectasy of song. Then he forsakes the deeper shadows and comes up into the open branches, where his nimble and varied antics amuse, while his song sustains its melodious charm. For a moment his long bill will energetically vibrate to the shrill prestissimo, then it will close, and from his inflated throat will come the deceptive, ventriloquial notes that seem to proceed from the recesses of the woods. The cat call will follow, as if he were tuning his vocal chords, and again the melody flows forth uninterrupted. There are many imitations in his song, for he borrows freely from the warblers and thrushes. But he gives forth his own spirit so abundantly that all his pilferings are forgiven.

Though keeping to the low thickets, the catbird is by no means unfriendly. Once assured of the good intentions of a visitor, he comes out quite freely and in ready confidence. A friendly, trusting pair will even nest in the vicinity of a suburban house if the people are properly appreciative. The nest is a big, straggling affair, and the birds seem to take delight in using a number of abnormally large and unnecessary sticks and broken roots. The large mass of building material fastened in a low thicket serves the purpose of concealment, and is less noticeable than a compact, regular nest. The three, four, or five eggs resemble those of the robin in color, but are much smaller, and the anxious mother is terribly distressed if an intruder ventures near her treasures. These summer residents vary their diet with the changing seasons. On their first arrival they explore the naked thickets and evergreens, and hurry over the ground and among the leaves in search of insects. Beetles, spiders, worms, ants, grasshoppers, in fact all kinds of insect life are eagerly gathered. But they often pause to sing at their work or to perform some extravagant antics for the entertainment, of a visitor. When the young nestlings demand food the mother is unceasing in the pursuit of insects, and is said to be so energetic that she will assist in feeding the young in other nests. If the mulberries ripen sufficiently early the nestlings are treated to their full share of the new delicacies, and as the season advances and the fruit becomes more tempting the insect diet is almost entirely abandoned. Then the valuable service of the earlier season is forgotten, and the catbird is inconsiderately declared a thief and a vagabond. But friendship and affection are superior alike to the evil reports of busy tongues and the deliberate condemnation of the gravest judges. The friends who have listened to the varied songs of the catbird in the evenings of early spring or watched his amusing activity in the naked shrubbery will freely forgive his depredations and reserve for him a favored place among the guests of summer.

Didn't Know "Ditto."

A crowd of National Yacht and Skiff Club Corintian sailors took possession of the dining-room of the only hotel at a village port not far from Toronto on Saturday night. Noise and good-natured chaff made things lively. The solitary waitress did not relish the extra toil the invasion entailed, and let her temper get the better of her good-nature. She exhibited it by snappish remarks to everyone. Once she over-reached herself, however, in her haste to roast the roysterers.

"What will you have," she said to one man, "Eggs or roast beef?"

"Eggs," he replied.

"And you?" to his next door neighbor.

"A couple of fried ditto," he answered.

"That's not a very nice thing to ask for at the table," she exclaimed scornfully. The laughter which followed drove her out of the room. —Toronto Star.

Cholera at Grosse Isle.

We learn from The Quebec Observer that twenty-five deaths from cholera occurred on board the Primrose, now at Grosse Isle, during the passage. Four deaths occurred before she left the Limerick quays. The mortality was not to be wondered at, when we are informed that there were 269 passengers, and no medical man on board. No deaths, however, had occurred since the 25th April, and there are now no symptoms of the disease on board. The passengers had been landed at the healthy end of the island for the purpose of purification.—From The Globe of May 29, 1854.

CORRESPONDENTS DIE

One Killed in Battle, Enteric Fever Claims the Other.

A cable from Tientsin says: It is reported that Edward F. Knight, the correspondent of the London Morning Post with the Japanese army was killed at Wanfangtien. Mr. Knight, well known in Great Britain as a war correspondent, was born in Cumberland in 1852, fought with the French as a volunteer in the war with Germany, 1870, and served as Times correspondent in the following campaigns: Huza-Nagar, 1891; Matabeleland, 1893-95; Madagascar, 1895; Soudan, 1897-98; Cuba, 1898. In the South African war he acted as correspondent for the London Morning Post, and was so severely wounded at Belmont that his right arm had to be amputated. Mr. Knight accompanied the Prince and Princess of Wales on their tour of the empire, and made the acquaintance of a number of Canadians while the royal party were in this country. He was the author of a number of interesting books relating his experiences as a traveller and war correspondent.

A cable from New Chwang says: H. J. Middleton, Associated Press correspondent with the Russian headquarters near Liao Yang, in Manchuria, died on Sunday from enteric dysentery. Henry John Middleton, the first of the American war correspondents to lose his life at the front in the present conflict, was representing the Associated Press at Gen. Kuropatkin's headquarters near Liao Yang. He was taken sick with enteric dysentery less than a week ago, and only on Sunday was a despatch received from him in which he requested that a substitute be sent to relieve him. He was about 33 years of age, unmarried, and was born in London.

British Steamer Confiscated

The prize court at Vladivostock has condemned the British collier Allanton (captured by the Russian Vladivostock squadron, recently in the Straits of Corea), for carrying contraband of war, and has confiscated the ship and her cargo of 6,500 tons of anthracite coal, valued at $500,000. The firm at Singapore to which the coal was consigned is the same concern that supplied Japan with contraband during the Japanese-Chinese war.

The Japanese schooner captured by the Russian torpedo boats at the time of the recent raid has also been confiscated. The captains of the prizes are allowed a month in which to appeal.

The insurance correspondent of the London Times says: "The confiscation by the Russians of the British steamer Allanton may, unless resisted, prove a serious precedent, and affect the whole position of neutral shipping in the time of war. There appears to be little doubt that she was confiscated, not because she had countraband goods on board at the time of her capture, which she had not, but because on the voyage out from Cardoff she took Welsh coal. That is to say she is punished for a past, not a present offence. After discharging the Welsh coal, the Allanton went to Muroran, Hokkaide island, and loaded with Japanese commercial coal for a Singapore firm, and passed through the Sugaru straits in order to take the short west coast route. The Vladivostock squadron there intercepted her. These facts have been presented to the foreign office, but in view that the appeal of the Russian military court is allowed, the case is still sub judice and no steps can be taken by the British Government. Lord Lansdowne would, however, appear to overlook the fact that the appeal, whatever it may be worth, in all probabi,ity will not be heard for months, and all this time the unfortunate owner is deprived of the use of his valuable vessel. The doctrine that the subsequent captured neutral vessel can be condemned for alleged past offences os oneGG GGG HHHH past offences is one which this country can hardly afford to acquiesce.

Memorial of Stevenson.

An Edinburgh cable says: Lord Rosebery unveiled a bas-relief portrait of Robert Louis Stevenson in St. Giles' Cathedral Thursday afternoon. The bronze tablet is the work of the American sculptor, St. Gaudens, the funds for which were subscribed in America and Great Britain. In the course of his remarks Lord Rosebery said the true memorial to Stevenson would be in the school he had founded, for there was an infinite number of readers, and almost idolaters, of his worksHHHH out the world.

Brockville Man Robbed.

Mr. E. J. Peters, traveller for Gilmour & Co., Brockville, Ont., wholesale grocers, lies ill at his home as the result of a brutal assault on him by a highwayman a few days ago. He had been to Rockport and Mallorytown, and was on his way home, about 8 o'clock, when a short distance below Yonge Mills, at a lonely spot on the road, a stranger asked for a lift, and was taken up. After a few words had been spoken the stranger pounced on Mr. Peters and choked him unconscious. When he regained his senses he was lying in the ditch beside the road, the horse quietly grazing nearby. He reached Brockville and wandered into a cigar store in a dazed condition. Medical aid was procured. His neck is badly swollen, and he has a cut over the eye and a bruise on the side, but will recover. Fortunately he had but $37, which the thief took. Usually on this trip he does collecting, and has quite a sum; and it is thought the attack and robbery were committed by some person acquainted with these circumstances.

THE FERNIE FREE PRESS.
FERNIE BRITISH COLUMBIA

FRIDAY, JULY 15, 1904.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A civic holiday would be a suitable way to mark the advent of municipal government in this town. A good program of sports could easily be arranged for some date early in August. Such a holiday would naturally become an annual affair.

* * *

Fernie trade is still the bone of contention between the wholesalers of Calgary and Nelson. According to reports both have been promised exclusive rights in this field. The wholesalers know a good thing when they see it. Fernie itself is the natural distributing centre of the district and with two transcontinental railways will soon have the best facilities for the establishment of wholsale houses in the town.

* * *

THE FREE PRESS recently purchased a gasoline engine through Messrs. Sheppard & Elliott, hardware merchants. The engine is a beauty and works perfectly. Another Gordon press has also been added to the equipment of the plant. This office is now in a position to turn work out on the shortest notice and of a quality to suit the most fastidious taste.

* * *

Considerable annoyance is still caused by the mail clerks on the west bound express carrying mail addressed to Fernie past its destination, and returning it on the evening express. If the mail clerks are negligent in their duties the remedy is simple and if. as it is stated, the duties are too heavy for the number of men employed the remedy is equally as simple. In the first case they need better men and in the second case they need more men.

* * *

The stone basement and foundation for the new jail was built by the prisoners early in the spring and since that time the government has made no move to spend the $1800 voted at the last session for the erection of the new jail. If the government studied economy it would proceed with this work now in the good summer building weather when one dollar will go as far as two in the inclement weather of the late fall. The present jail accommodation, it must also be remembered is not improved by its proximity to the fine new basement, but on the contrary the discomforts are all the more apparent when brought into relief by the comforts suggested by the partly constructed building. Then the present normal number of criminals, which far exceeds the accommodation of the present quarters, will, in the nature of things, be largely increased as the railway construction work proceeds and before the year is out the need for increased room may be shown to be greater than ever before.

* * *

It is more than likely that when the proper time comes the property owners of the town will get together and nominate six Alderman and a Mayor that will be satisfactory to all concerned and Fernie's first council will be elected by acclamation. All the talk about party politics has emanated from two or three irresponsible members of each party and the rank and file, and especially the leaders of the two parties are uncompromisingly opposed to the least suggestion of allowing politics to influence municipal interests. In fact some of the best men of the town, men who are almost indispensable to the first council have stated that if politics are made an issue in the municipal elections they will not allow their names to stand. So long as our citizens show this spirit there need be no fear that party politics will control this town's municipal affairs. "Fernie first, last and always" should be the motto of every candidate for municipal honors in this town.

WE have pleasure in giving publicity to a letter from Rev. D. L. Gordon in which is denied the truthfulness of a report appearing in this paper on June 10th. In justice to ourselves we may say that the clipping was taken from the Manitoba Free Press, one of the most reliable news publications in Canada. The copy of the "Telegraph" referred to in the reverend gentleman's letter was not received at this office until after June 10th. Since that time we have had the privilege of reading in another St. John paper a synopsis of the same address which did not agree with that of the Telegraph. Futhermore "The Presbyterian" of June 11th in reporting the proceedings of The Assembly reports this part of Rev. Mr. Gordon's address as follows:

"Among the forces antagonistic to good social and religious life he referred to the constant struggle between capital and labor. Great companies like the Crows Nest Pass Coal Company practically own the towns and woe be to the miner or missionary who resists the power of the company".

The letter does not require further comment other than that it would have better served its object by merely stating the denial without volunteering further explanations.

Fernie people are notably slow at getting around to public evening functions. The crowd did not begin to assemble until 10:30 at the base-ball dance on Monday night. An hour or two earlier at the beginning and the same time clipped off the end would be a sensible reform.

Mr. Wardrop was down from Sparwood this week. He reports that the work of clearing the river channel preparatory to building a new mill is steadily being pushed. The adjusters for the insurance companies involved in the fire were at Sparwood this week.

A thief broke into the cabin of Andrew Casely across the railway track on Tuesday evening and stole several articles of clothing. The house was well ransacked in a vain search, Mr. Casely believes, for some valuable diamonds he had safely hidden in the house.

The three Fernie candidates who wrote on the High School Entrance examination have all passed. Their names are Muriel Whimster, Lillie Sunberg and Fred Johnson. The first named took the fourth place in the list of successful candidates from rural schools. The result of this examination should be very gratifying to Principal Pedlar.

Orders have been given by the Coal Company for the quarrying of a large quantity of rock at Michel to be used in the foundation of the new office building of the Company at Fernie. The excavation work for this building will be commenced at once and the walls will then go up without delay. The management is not yet decided whether the walls will be stone or concrete.

The announcement made last week by the Pioneer that the Granby Co. was figuring on putting in two more furnaces at the smelter at an early date, making a battery of eight, means that ore shipments from this camp are to be increased to nearly 3,000 tons daily before the snow flies. Evidently the unconfirmed announcement at Vancouver that Mr James J. Hill has control of the Granby does not mean less shipments of ore from this camp. The increase in smelting capacity without putting up more buildings, if successful, will be due to the ingenuity of A. B. W. Hodges, the Granby superintendent.

Band Concert.

The Ladies Benevolent Society of Fernie will give a grand Band concert in the Park next Thursday evening, July 21st. The town band and the Italian band will both provide the music. The admission will be only 10 cents. Refreshments will be served on the grounds. Dancing will be in progress all the evening on a platform specially arranged. Another novel feature will be Egyptian fortune-telling. This promises to be the greatest event of the season, the success of the Presbyterian concert a few weeks ago giving the ladies confidence in making more elaborate plans for the accomodation of a large number of people. The funds are to go to charitable objects of this very worthy society.

Rooms to let over Sheppard & Elliott's store. See F. J. Watson.

The B. C. Furniture Co. has just received a large stock of crockery, toilet sets and glassware. Inspect them.

The Athletic Association received a very handsome and gratifying cash donation this week from Mr. James McEvoy the vice-president of the Association.

J. H. McMu'lin is building a new two story residence on Howland Ave. Messrs Dawson and Digby have the contract.

Mrs. L. M. Proctor, Miss Dorothy and other members of the family left on Sunday on an extended visit to Ogdensburg, N. Y.

The dance to be given by the Bachelors this evening promises to be a very successful affair. The full orchestra will furnish the music.

Wm. Handley who has worked up an excellent general draying business has branched out into the excavation work, and he is now prepared to handle all kinds of contracts of this nature.

Several miners are taking advantage of the cut rates across the Atlantic to bring their families to this country. The steerage rate across is now only ten dollars, including board.

The threatening showers in the early part of the week culminated in a most refreshing downpour on Tuesday, which brought new life to vegetation and clarified the smoky atmosphere.

The C. P. R. are offering very cheap rates to Winnipeg and return during the Dominion Exhibition. The rate from Fernie is $19.55. The tickets are good to go from July 22nd to Aug. 2nd and to return up to August 11th.

Word has been received from Mrs. Robert Dudley, wife of the C. P. R. freight agent, who with three children went East a couple of weeks ago, that Leonard, the 12 year old boy, was taken ill with small-pox shortly after their arrival at Pembroke, Ont., where they went to visit. It is believed that he contracted the disease while in transit. The case though not a severe one will necessitate a tedious quarantine.

CHAMPLAIN AGAIN

TRI-CENTENARY PAGEANT AT ST. JOHOS.

L'Acadie Comes in Again—A Spectacle Unique in New Brunswick History—The Story of the Original Landing Retold in Pantomime.

Champlain and DeMonts sailed up the harbor of St. John, N. B., on the morning of June 24 last, at 9 o'clock, amid the roar of cannon, the yells of 300 Indians and the cheers of 20,000 people, who lined all the wharves and blocked King street and Market square with the greatest crowd ever assembled in the Maritime Provinces, writes a St. John correspondent. This section of Canada has never before witnessed any such pageantry as that which opened Friday's splendid celebration. The city never before held so many visitors. Charming weather and a delighted multitude crowned the series of spectacles.

Gliding into port past the great modern warships of Britain, France and the United States came Champlain's little 150-ton ship L'Acadie under her own sail. She was an exact counterpart of the discoverer's ship of 1604, absurdly high at the bow, and with a still higher poop. Above her floated the lily flag of France. Starboard and port she showed the muzzles of her little battery. On the raised poop as she sailed up the harbor stood the group of discoverers in the costumes of 300 years ago. These were well-known citizens and members of the Neptune Rowing Club, as follows: Samuel De Champlain, Mr. T. T. Lantalum; Pierre Du Guast Sieur Demonts, Mr. H. M. Stanbury; Y. M. Poutrincourt, Mr. W. H. Harrison; Capt. Timothee, Mr. Fred S. Heans; the Huguenot priest, Mr. J. C. Miles; the friar, Mr. Arthur Godsoe; the crew, Messrs. Fred. P. Dearborn, Lewis Munroe, John McFarlane, H. Holder, Robert Watson, Thomas Brown, H. Giggey, William Munroe, Edward Harrington, Henry McIntyre, Peter Johnston, Thomas Powers (gunner).

THE NATIVE ATTACK.

Out from behind Navy Island shot a fleet of war canoes, manned by painted Indians, to repel the white men. A gun thundered from L'Acadie, but the Indians came on discharging a flight of arrows and raising their shrill war cry. Still L'Acadie sails on and a second gun is fired from the vessel, with no result other than to bring another flight of arrows, which happily fall short. Champlain and his comrades are outnumbered two to one, and their leader, who cannot afford to lose a single man, evidently sees that force must be met by diplomacy. The Indians are very near at hand now, and, as if with one consent the explorers kneel on the deck, raising their hands to heaven, and making signs of peace. The chiefs of the tribe restrain their followers and cautiously approach L'Acadie. Greeted by signs of encouragement they clamor on board and are soon deep in a pow-wow and a pipe of peace with three Frenchmen. The remaining Indians, seeing that all is well, swarm round the ship in their canoes, and thus escorted, witn a graceful sweep and lowered sails, Capt. Timothee brings L'Acadie to anchor in the slip. The friar and a few of the most impetuous of the ship's company at once go on shore with the two lesser chiefs. Champlain, Demonts and Poutrincourt follow more leisurely with the Indian leader.

CLAIMING THE SOIL.

A move is made to higher ground, and Demonts, raising aloft the flag he carries, hears with all an explorer's pride the proclamation read by Poutrincourt, claiming the soil for France. Then Champlain produces gifts calculated to please his new-made friends, and in return receives a necklace of shells and other marks of their good-will. The friar must needs kneel to offer up a prayer, and when that is over the inevitable pipe of peace goes round again among the leaders, while the Indians, with a mighty whoop, break into a native dance. So the curtain falls—the curtain that for a brief hour has been lifted to give a glimpse of those days of three hundred years ago, and to bring to life again those hardy and brave voyagers to whose enterprise the city and river of St. John owe their place in history. Parties from the warships and the local militia, 1,000 strong, were drawn up in Market square. Admiral Douglas, Sir Charles Parsons, Lieut.-Governor Snowball, Premier Tweedie, Lieut.-Col. White, D. O. C., and Mayor White occupied a stand in the centre of the square, and reviewed the parade which followed. The long procession, with five bands, moved to the north end, where, near the famous reversing falls, a statue, representing a Canadian soldier in khaki, was unveiled in Riverview Memorial Park in memory of the New Brunswickers who died in South Africa. After the speeches there a tablet to Champlain and Demonts was unveiled in the public library. A firemen's parade ashore and an illuminated marine pageant on the harbor, led by Champlain's ship, were the evening attractions, the warships playing their searchlights upon the scene.

A Woman Forger.

Mrs. Thomas Smith, 22 years old, of St. Thomas, Ont., whose husband is employed at the Erie flour mills, was arrested on Saturday on the charge of forgery. On June 23 she presented at the Dominion bank a Molson's bank cheque for $32, purporting to be signed by J. P. Martyn, broker, and endorsed by Mrs. Mary Fuller, of whom no trace can be found by the police.

STRIPPING OLD QUEBEC

Antique Household Utensils are Fast Disappearing—"Old Curiosity" Shops.

Antiquity is fast becoming one of the chief gods of ancient Quebec city, but it is a sad thing to observe that reverence for the remnants of bygone days usually settles on how much an article will represent in gold. An old copper kettle, in which the hammer-belts and the brazing of the early smith can be readily detected is esteemed, not so much as a sample of a changing art and oftentimes marvellous skill, but as something worth more in the curiosity shop than in the junk shop. Happily, however, there is something to induce a preservation of these things even if eventually the rarest specimens find a way into foreign museums or the homes of wealthy tourists. Old brass, old copper, old pewter, old earthenware—these are the things that are being gathered in, and it is safe to say that within a few more years the Dominion will be stripped of the unappreciated homely relics that Canadians should prize next, almost, to their nationality. The day of the grease dip, the candle pan, the old brass snuffers, the huge brass knockers, the log fire place, the iron crane, the swinging kettle, is gone, but from musty garrets and century-old kitchens the evidence of an earlier civilization are being brought to the light. Now the beaten metal that decorated the living room a hundred years ago finds an honorable place in the best parlors.

The big search for curiosities in the Province of Quebec began three or four years ago, encouraged purely as a commercial undertaking by the wealthy tourists passing through the ancient capital. Huge hand made cauldrons of brass or copper, that had been regarded as so much scrap, splendidly modelled brass demijohns and kettles of all sizes and shapes, slipped through the fingers of the original and unappreciative owners and passed over to those who should really prize them least. An old metal kettle, dented and covered with verdigris and smut, is a very different thing from the old metal kettle, burnished and sparkling showing the marks of a rude yet artful craft, and giving evidence of its years in the apparent method of its production. So articles picked up by the gatherers for 25c. are cleaned, placed in the window and marked three or five or ten dollars, as the case may be. Very rare specimens, of course, sell for more or less, according to the knowledge of the person who handles them.

Being of itself an attraction for tourists, the City of Quebec has become a distributing point for curiosies. Numerous shops have been established for the purpose, and during the summer season places for the sale of this ware appear with little more accommodation than the ordinary candy stand. Every shop of any consequence maintains a staff of collectors, who scour the countryside for their stock-in-trade. It is becoming more and more difficult all the time to get the goods, because the owners are awkening to the fact that they own something to which a sentimental value is attached. The quest for brass and copper has given way in a measure for the products of old English or "habitant" potteries long out of existance. Old delft is in good demand and a dealer will ask ten dollars for an old pattern or two dollars for a willow-patterned plate with the same grace as a baker asks five cents for a small loaf. A connoisseur may pay five or fifty dollars for a rare piece according to his taste and means, and oftentimes according to the impression he makes on the seller. The dealers in antiquities here estimate the style of their patrons with great skill and their prices fluctuate accordingly. As a rule the staff does not cost them much, so the prices depend on the customer. Grandfather clocks and spinning wheels are by no means neglected, and it is the boast of one dealer that clocks having no claims of antiquity or uniqueness, and fit only for kindling wood, sell readily to American visitors for five dollars each.

The observation "Distant hill looks green" seems to apply in this connection, for while collectors have scoured the outlying districts they apparently neglected the opportunities that lie within sight. A recent visitor to Quebec before going a mile from the city procured from a habitant on the verge of the century mark twenty-three pieces of long-used delft for what had been asked for one piece of a similar kind in the city. The regrettable part of the trade is that most of the best specimens are leaving the country. After a while, when it is too late, Canadians will awaken to their lost opportunity.

World's Largest Elevator Burned.

The immense grain elevator of the Boston & Maine Railroad Company Boston, U.S., one of the largest in the world, together with the comaany's freight house No 1, 2, and 3, on pier 1 and 2, Mystic Warf, Charlestown, were burned, July 5, entailing a loss that will exceed $1,000,000. Three lives are supposed to have been lost. Thirty-five sailors of the Allan Line steamer Austrian, which was lying at pier one, jumped overboard to save their lives from the the flames which had communicated to their vessel. Olga Olsen, boatswain's mate, James Flynn, fireman, and Patrick Meehan, fireman, are the supposed victims, and the body of Flynn was recovered from the harbor late that night. Most of the crew swam to the shore but eleven of their number, who were more or less signed and bruised, were rescued by boats and taken to the marine hospital at Chelsea. Before the fire on board the Austrian could be gotten under control by the fleet of tugboats that had hauled her into the steamer, all her upper works had been burned to her decks. The fire started during a heavy thunderstorm. A bolt of lightning struck the northeast end of freight house No. 2.

BOBRIKOFF'S SUCCESSOR.

Prince Obolensky Appointed as Finnish Governor—Emperor's Eulogy.

A cable from St. Petersburg says: In confirming the appointment of Prince John Obolensky as governor general of Finland, the emperor sent an autograph letter to the Prince relative to the situtation there, this letter which is in the nature of an imperial rescript, was published on Monday. The emperor therein expressed his conviction that it will be possible to maintain the local autonomy and the privilege of legislating for herself enjoyed by Finland since union with Russia. "I consider," writes the emperor, "that the murder of General Bobrikoff was merely the work of a madman and a few like-minded confederates and the Finnish people had no part in the nefarious act. The executive power must inflexably strive for the closest union of Finland and the empire. I imposed upon General Bobrikoff when he was appointed the gradual attainment of this end as being his first duty. He fullfilled it with rational firmness until death ended his honorable services which have won him an enduring name in history. I also expect that the new governor general will most zealously follow the instructions now given him. I admonish him before all things to strengthen in the minds of the Finnish people that their historic destinies are indisolubly bound up in those of Russia and that the future prosperity of Finland under the Russian sceptre as well as the political institutions granted her, depend on a peaceful order of things taking firm root in the counrty.

700 PEOPLE PERISH

STEAMER NORGE STRIKES ROCKAL ISLAND

Boats Smashed and Capsized in Heavy Seas—Only One Seaman and 26 Passengers Saved—Captain Went Down on the Bridge.

A London cable says: Over 700 Danish and Norwegian emigrants, bound for New York, are believed to have been drowned in the north Atlantic. Out of nearly 800 souls on board the Danish steamer Norge, which left Copenhagen June 22, only 27 passengers are known to be alive, and for the rest no hope is held out.

When last seen the Norge was sinking where she struck on the islet of Rockal, whose isolated peak rises itself from a deadly Atlantic reef some 290 miles off the west coast of Scotland.

Early in the morning of June 28, the Norge, which was out of her course in heavy weather, ran on to the Rockal reef, which in the distance looks like a ship under full sail. The Norge was quickly backed off, but the heavy seas poured in through the rent in the bows.

The emigrants, who were then awaiting breakfast below, ran on deck. Except that the hatchways were scarcely built for this, and be-became there was no panic. The Norge quickly began to go down by the head.

Eight boats were lowered, and into these the women and children were hurriedly placed. Six of these boats smashed against the side of the Norge, and their helpless inmates were caught up by the heavy seas. Two boatloads got safely away from the side of the sinking ship, and many of the emigrants who were left on board, seizing life belts, threw themselves into the sea and were drowned. Captain Gundel, so say the survivors, stood on the bridge of the doomed vessel until it could be seen no more.

The Norge foundered suddenly and some six hundred terrified emigrants were thrown into the water and drawn down with the sinking ship. Those who could swim tried to reach the boats, but those were already too full, and their occupants beat off the drowning wretches with oars.

The boats kept together for some hours. Practically all their occupants were passengers, and were not used to the handling of such crafts. The boat occupied by the survivors landed at Grimsby was a life boat. One account says three boats were successfully launched, the other two holding about ten each. The life boat made faster progress and fell in with the Salvia. What became of the other boats is not yet known.

The rescue of those on the life boat took place at eight o'clock of the morning of June 29, survivors consisting of twenty men, one of them a seaman, six women and a girl.

One of the survivors said that when he got on deck the Norge was half submerged and was rapidly getting lower in the water. Half mad with fear the survivors in the boats. They fought their way to the big lifeboat and an officer stowed in the six women and the girl and then told the men to get in. The officer then took charge, and got in the boat and got away from the side of the Norge. Seeing that the boat was already overladen the officer, with great heroism, jumped into the water and tried to board another boat which was not so full. He failed and was drowned.

ALL STRUGGLED FOR PLACES

In the sea by this time was a mass of struggling men, women and children gasping and choking from the effects of the water. The boat rowed clear of this seething mass and just as she drew away the Norge went down.

Peter Nelson, one of the survivors, described as a young American, said: "For some hours we rowed in company with the other boats, but the strong tide drifted us away from the boats and nothing has been seen of them since the Salvia picked us up and we were all well cared for aboard the trawler. All of us lost our entire belongings. We had no time in that fierce fight for life to think of anything but getting into the boats."

The only hope execpt for the twenty-seven who escaped is that some few of the emigrants may have been washed up on the barren rocks. Their chances of escape are practically nil, for vessels sailing the North Atlantic give Rockal as wide a berth as possible.

The news of this disaster which, it is feared, its death record is greater than any previous tragedy of the Atlantic, came with the arrival of the steam trawler Salvia at Grimsby, her home port.

The Salvia had been on a fortnight's cruise around the Hebrides. By a lucky chance she steamed further west than is usual for Grimbsy trawlers, and fell in with the survivors of the Norge, who for twenty-four hours had been tossed about in a small boat on the rough waters of the North Atlantic. The survivors were taken aboard the Salvia, and were landed at Grimsby.

The Norge had no first-class passengers on board and only nine on her second cabin list. There was on board 694 steerage passengers. Of these 79 were Danish, 69 Swedes, 296 Norwegians, 15 Finns and 236 Russians. The Norge carried a crew of 71. She was the oldest Danish trans-Atlantic steamer running.

INHUMAN TREATMENT.

A cable from Grimsby, dated July 4, says: Owing to the strict enforcement of certain regulations and the fact that there is no Danish consul here, all the survivors of the Norge who arrived here on the steamer Salvia were kept on that vessel all night. They were in a pitiable condition. This morning in the dining cabin of the trawler the representative of the Associated Press saw over a dozen persons, including five women and two children, huddled together. Three of the women were in a bunk, one was lying on the cabin floor and the other was leaning against the captain's berth, too bewildered to move. Two of the women pleaded to see a Danish minister of the Gospel, but the one settled in Grimsby happened to be out of town.

A cable from Stornaway, Scot., July 4, says: One hundred and one survivors of the Danish steamer Norge have been landed here. The British steamer Cervona, from Leith, July 1, for Montreal, brought in 32 shortly before noon. She picked them up from a boat the evening before westward of the butt of Lewis. They were in an awful plight, nearly all of them being naked; one dead child was with the party. Shortly afterwards the German steamer Energie arrived with 69 persons, rescued from the Norge's lifeboat. All were terribly exhausted. The Cervona proceeded on her voyage, but will keep a lookout for other possible survivors of the Danish steamer.

SYDNEY STRIKE

Strikers Prevent Men from Taking Their Places.

The blooming mill was the only part of the Dominion Iron and Steel company's plant, at Sydney, which started Monday. It was announced that the company would begin operations on Monday, but at an early hour the strikers congregated in large numbers about the different gates leading to the works and both by moral suasion and force prevented the employees going to work. The officials and clerical staff were alone permitted to pass. While there was no serious manifestations of violence it was abundantly evident that the men are determined to prevent the company resuming operations before a settlement is affected. However it is announced that the rod and wire mills will be put in operation to-morrow. Extra police will be sworn in to-day to insure ample protection to the men and plant.

Great Northern Defaults.

A despatch from Ottawa says: It is reported here that the Great Northern Railway of Canada, which runs from Hawkesbury, Ontario to Quebec and in all is 208 miles long, has defaulted in the payment of interest on its bonds due July 1st. This railway has received bonuses to the amount of $2,400,000 from the Dominion Government, the Government of Quebec and certain municipalities some time ago, the Canadian Northern announced that it intended to acquire control of the Great Northern and use it in connection with the Cadadian Atlantic, which report said the Canadian Northern would sooner or later purchase a through grain route from the Georgian Bay to the tide water. The collapse of the Great Northern will probably put an end to that arrangement, which would have been a rival route to some extent to the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. Oddities of La Fontaine.

La Fontaine, the famous French poet and writer of fables, was a notable example of the eccentricity of genius. When he lost his entire fortune, a lady, who was one of his best friends and an ardent admirer of his works, hastened in alarm and distress to find him. She met him in the street, penniless and cheerful.

"You must come to our home," she said.

"I was going there," he replied, and then began a visit which prolonged itself into years, during which La Fontaine never seemed to be troubled by a thought that he was dependent. Nor did the lady or her family have any other feeling than one of delight and pride that he made his home with them.

"Why, that is your son!" he was told.

"Indeed! I am pleased to hear it," was his remarkable reply.

He questioned every one at hand
And asked the boys which one had sneaked
His pet umbrella from the stand

He stepped to get his overcoat,
And there his lost umbrella hung.

He gazed with unbelieving eyes;
Amazement o'er his visage spread.
He took it down in shamed surprise.

When out I this umbrella bring,
And ask me when and where and how?

The Difference.

At one time there were two members of the house of commons named Montagu Matthew and Matthew Montagu—the former a tall, handsome man and the latter a little man. During a session of parliament, the speaker having addressed the latter as the former, Montagu Matthew observed that it was strange he should make such a mistake, as there was as great a difference between them as between a horse chestnut and a chestnut horse.

A Needed Invention.

Progress, which has been marching on three steps at a time in the past few decades, surmounting unsurmountable objects as though they were ant hills, has been baffled in one direction, and inventive genius halts at the door of opportunity, unable to discover the combination by which it can break in.

For years the historical novelists, with a minimum expenditure of gray matter and a maximum of muscular force, have toiled far into the night, regardless of the hot boxes of their typewriters and, notwithstanding this, they have not been able in many instances to turn out more than three complete volumes a week.

What the world is crying for with a wild, agonizing cry is an attachment to the typewriter by which the operator may turn on the electric current, start the works and turn out a historical novel complete and ready for the trade in fifteen minutes. Fame and fortune simply could not resist the inventor of such a machine.

BRAIN CONTROLS EVERY MUSCLE

Injury to Brain or Nerves, Deficiency of Nerve Force Mean Paralysis and Helplessness.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Every muscle of the body controlled by the will is connected with the brain, and every muscular action is originated by nervous force, generated in the brain and transmitted along the nerves to the muscles.

When the nerves are injured or diseased, when there is a deficiency in the supply of nervous energy, paralysis, locomoter ataxia or some form of helplessness results because the brain has no longer control of the muscles.

It may be weak heart action, inability to digest food, failure of the lungs to purify the blood or impaired action of any of the vital organs, but the cause of trouble is with the the nerves.

The restorative action of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is soon felt throughout the entire system, because it restores the vigor and vitality of the nerves—fills them with new nerve force the vital power of the body; weakness, nervousness, irritability, sleeplessness and low spirits disappear and new energy and strength take their place.

Mrs. C. Corkey, 32 Maine street, St. Johns, N. B. states:—"I had been in very poor health and in fact, when I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I had just got up from a bed of sickness, my nerves were in a bad state, I was weak and could not sleep. Now I am getting up in years, and, of course, could not look for immediate results, but must say that I have been delighted with the use of this preparation as it has done me a great deal of good. I am now able to sleep very much better, my nerves are steadier and my strength is gradually increasing."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bate & Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the protrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

Dromedaries Smoke Cigars.

There is no reason why a dromedary should not be partial to a good cigar. Most dromedaries, according to a menagerie proprietor, are particularly fond of tobacco smoke and can be made to do almost anything under its influence.

"Travelers in Egypt," he asserts, "rely more on tobacco smoke for their control over these huge beasts than anything else. When traveling on long journeys the dromedaries are in many cases required to travel night and day without rest, and the beasts are kept up to their tasks by smoking cigars. The driver carries a triangular piece of wood, which is pierced at one point like a cigar holder. This is inserted in the mouth of the beast, the cigar being lit and pressed into the hole in the same fashion followed by man.

"The dromedary immediately closes its eyes and puffs away through its nostrils until the cigar is burned away. The indulgence appears to refresh it, and the keeper has no difficulty in persuading the animal to plod on without further rest."—Pearson's.

TESTIMONIAL from the late SIR SAMUEL BAKER, the famous Nile Explorer.

"Newton Abbot, Devon. Dear Sirs—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effect of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

"Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

"For the last twenty months I have been comparatively free, as one or two attempted visitations have been immediately stamped out by the assistance of Blair's Pills.

There never was and never will be a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated disease rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in sound, unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on nature's own restoratives. It relives the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease, and by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses through the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—result, improved appitite. Northrop & Lyman of Toronto have given to the public their Superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, guaged by the opinion of scientists, the wine approaches nearest perfection of and in the market. All druggists sell it.

THE EXPLOSION SUITS.

FULL TEXT OF THE BENCH'S DECISION

Verbatim report of Mr. Justice Martin's Finding in the Famous Damage Suits Against the C. N.P. Coal Co.

The full text of the judgment given by the Honorable, Mr. Justice Martin, in the famous damage suits, Leadbeater and other plaintiffs vs. the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company, Limited, is as follows.

"During the consolidated trial of these five test actions evidence was given in support of two charges of negligence, viz;

1. The use of the bonnetted clanney lamp, which it was contended was defective and not a "locked safety lamp" within the meaning of the Act: and

2. The accumulation of dust to a dangerous extent.

In regard to the first charge it is sufficient to say that it was clearly established that the type of lamp so used while not perfect, (which indeed no safety lamp in reality is) yet is in very general use and reasonably fulfills the statutory requirements. This was, in fact practically conceded on the argument.

In support of the second charge the plaintiff advances the theory that the explosion was essentially one of coal dust; while in answer to that the defendant company maintains that it was a gas explosion substantially and essentially, though admitting that, as in every explosion in a mine of this nature, dust may have participated in it to an immaterial and unascertained extent. In support of these conflicting theories a great body of evidence was adduced in a trial lasting more than three consecutive weeks, and even if it were desirable for me to do so when discharging the functions of a jury on pure questions of fact (and I do not think it is) it would be almost an impossibility to attempt to review in detail all the evidence which I have listened to and weighed in a trial of such duration and complexity of fact though not of issue. Dealing with such explosions as this, it is manifest that there is much that must remain a mystery for no witness has been bold enough to claim to thoroughly understand the forces of nature or their varying operation when disturbed by man in such undertakings as those under consideration or give other than a speculative account of the cause of ignition, or even fix upon the precise locality of the explosion's origin. But approximately I have no reasonable doubt that some unascertained point in Macdonald's level must be taken to be the place of such origin.

The next fact to be determined is, was it a gas or dust explosion? On arriving at a conclusion on this vital point, wherein science plays so great a part the Court is very largely in the hands of experts, and in determining what weight shall be attached to their testimony, will be guided by their apparent competency and disinterestedness. Applying then, the opinions of these witnesses to requisite facts which have been proved to my satisfaction I am forced to the conclusion that on the evidence it must be held that this was essentially and substantially a gas explosion, and of such a nature and extent that, quite apart from any possible augmentation by dust it was alone sufficient to cause, and consequently must be held to have caused all the results which the plaintiff necessarily assumed the onus of attributing to a dust explosion. In this relation I think it proper to say that I accept as substantially correct the defendants' contention as regards facts of paramount importance, viz; (a) the state of affairs at the overcast; and (b) in the main entry generally, and largely as a consequence thereof I am satisfied that the explosion properly so-called did not pass through that main entry; though if the dust theory be accepted that is the place of all others throughout the length of which it must have passed in the condition of that mine. There is nothing in my opinion, in the conclusions of the coal dust committee (second report 1894, P. 8) which, having regard to the circumstances of this case, conflicts with this view, though it is apparent that there is still much to be learned on the interesting and important subject of dust in coal mines.

Such being the opinion I have arrived at, it is not necessary to consider any other matters, which become immaterial nor to refer to the cases cited, because on the above facts so found no negligence can be attributed to the defendant Company.

It follows that the test actions must be dismissed with costs. It is due to the plaintiff's leading counsel, Mr. Taylor, to say that the manner in which he conducted an exceptionally long and difficult case merits the commendation of the Court.

COMMUNICATION.

To the Editor of "The Free Press."

Dear Sir:—In a recent issue of your paper I notice you copy a paragraph from some eastern paper, which in less than a dozen lines purports to give the substance of a fifteen minute address which I had the privilege of delivering before the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church which met in St John, N. B., June 1st. Noticing that many of the papers gave misleading reports of Home Mission addresses I took the precaution to send a copy of the St. John "Daily Telegraph," to your office, which while it did not contain a verbatim account of my address, gave a much fairer synopsis than the paper from which you made your clipping. Yet for some reason you completely ignored that publication and attacked me for using what you term "extravagant language—calculated to have far reaching effects in bringing discredit upon this town and district." Permit me to quote from a leading editorial in the Telegraph which shows the impression my words and those of my fellow laborers from the west made upon at least one in that audience. "The confidence and buoyancy and power of the great Canadian West were felt by the General Assembly last evening when characteristic addresses were made by such breezy and striking speakers as Rev. Dr. Pringle, of the Yukon; Rev. Mr. McQueen, of Edmonton; and the Rev. Mr. Gordon, of Fernie. These men and others, men of fire and action, not only made clear the mighty importance of the western field but in their words the assembly felt the breath of national progress and greatness. In the Kootenay district, unbroken forest six years ago, Rev. Mr. Gordon reports that to-day there is a rapidly growing and prosperous population representing every country in Europe."

Truly my address to leave such an impression must have been made up of extravagant language calculated to bring discredit upon Fernie and the surrounding district? As a matter of fact I did not make one of the statements with which your 'eastern daily' credits me. That paragraph can boast of neither good grammar, good philosoply, nor good common sense, in none of which I trust my address was altogether wanting. No one would for a moment contend that "organized capital controls South East Kootenay entirely." I did however refer to the extensive rights, privileges and monopolies enjoyed by certain companies operating in the the Kootenays. My language, however, would uot be considered 'extravagant" if compared with certain outbursts of the Free Press, when it was learned that that the B. C. government had even contemplated handing over two valuable blocks of land in South East Kootenay to the C. P. R. company. Further I claimed that many towns were practically in the hands of these companies. For example I said that the towns of Michel, Coal Creek and Tonkin are practically owned and controlled by the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company. When that company is so unfortunate as to get an overbearing or unscrupulous, General Manager the results are disastrous, alike for the company and for the men." In no part of my address did I refer to the relative merits of capital or labor in the many struggles which have marred the industrial development of the Kootenays. I positively deny having stated that "the man who resists the C. N. P. Coal Co., puts his head in a contracting noose." Although I am free to confess that that statement as descriptive of certain periods in the history of the above mentioned towns, contains more truth than poetry. The last sentence is equally misleading. The writer may have honestly endeavored to give the drift of my remarks, but he certainly made a very poor job of it.

I would however take no notice of your attack upon me were it not that you claim I made statements out of Fernie which for some reason I never made in Fernie. It is easy to understand your insinuation which is as unworthy of you as it is false to me. I made no criticism of the conditions existing in South East Kootenay, or the methods of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. before the General Assembly that I have not made more than once from a public platform in Fernie, and which I am not prepared to repeat and defend before any honest tribunal in the land.

Moreover your criticism looses its point from the fact that at least one Director of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company was present on the floor of the Assembly, and heard all that was said. Since he has not felt called upon to come to the defense of that Company, it ill becomes a free and independent Journal to pick up a chance paragraph from some unknown 'eastern daily,' reproduce it as an exact interpretation of my remarks and on it base such a sweep-condemnation of all that was said. Simple justice should have led you to ask for a copy of my address which would have been cheerfully given, then you would have been in a position to discuss the matter on its merits. Such tactics are calculated to bring at least journalism into "discredit" if not into contempt for there are those who will see in your attack upon me only a further proof of my contention that the power and influence of certain corporations are unfashionable and their ways past finding out. I would not however hint at such a thing but close by reminding you of the old proverb that 'it is not wise to attempt to skin your hare until you have caught it.'

Yours truly,
D. L. GORDON.

THREE TEACHERS WANTED.

There are three vacancies in the staff of public school teachers for the town. Miss Lawrence resigned at the end of the term, Miss McNee teacher at Coal Creek mines also resigned at that time, and Miss Fernie who left recently for Vancouver has since resigned her position. The board of school trustees are now looking for teachers to fill their positions.

Notice is hereby given that licenses to prospect for coal and petroleum upon and under lands situated within Block 4,593, South-East Kootenay, will be issued forthwith to all persons who have made proper application, in pursuance of the provisions of the "Coal Mines Act" and amendments.

The fee for each license is $100, and all applicants who have not deposited accepted bank cheques to cover that amount are hereby required to do so without further notice.

Therefore, for the pur- of enabling all persons to go before the proper tribunal for the determination of their respective rights and priorities, this license is issued and accepted subject to such prior rights of other persons as may exist by law, and the date of this license is not to be taken or held as in any sense determining such priority, and further it shall not be taken or held to waive enquiry by the Courts into the proper performance of all conditions precedent as between adverse claimants; and further, on the understanding that the Government shall not be held responsible for, or in connection with, any conflict which may arise with other claimants of the same ground, and that under no circumstances will license fees be refunded.

And the holder hereby waives any claim or demand against the government, and expressly agrees not to take any steps or proceeding, or present any petition, to enforce any alleged claim or demand against the Government of the province of British Columbia arising out of the issuance of this license or any other matter or thing appertaining thereto.

FERNIE VS. THE HAT.

LOCAL LACROSSE TEAM AGAIN DEFEATED.

Interesting Game on the Fernie Grounds on Tuesday p.m. Score 5-2 in Favor of Prairie Boys.

On Tuesday afternoon the Medicine Hat lacrosse team met the Fernie team for the first time this season on the Fernie grounds. The visitors came up from Cranbrook on the local and they complained of feeling stiff after their hard game there the preceding day.

The line up was.

MEDICINE HAT		FERNIE
Peard	goal	Gordon
McNab	point	Kastner
Preston	cover point	Rutherford
Sempleton	1st defense	Kirkpatrick
Taylor	2nd defense	McGuire
Findlay	3rd defense	Schram
Neff	centre	Kenney
Ready	3rd home	Rhodes
McQuarrie	2nd home	Dunlop
Cody	1st home	McLaughlin
Holmes	outside home	Lafortune
McDonald	inside home.	Ward
Green	goal umpires	Sheppard

A. C. Liphardt, of Fernie, refereed the game.

The Fernie boys started off on the offensive and during the first quarter they had decidedly the best of the game. They made many shots on the Hat flags but luck was against them and none were winners. After six minutes play Findlay scored the only goal made in the first quarter.

In the remaining quarters the visitors showed up in good form and played better lacrosse than the home team, their superior combination work giving them the advantage. In the second quarter The Hat scored twice, McDonald makthe first in one minute and Findlay the second in 12 minutes. Half a minute after the 3rd quarter was started Dunlop scored the first for Fernie. McQuarrie landed in 6 minutes and McDonald in 12 minutes closing the quarter with a score of 5-1. In the fourth "Dusty" Rhodes secured the one remaining goal.

The game was not particularly rough though a few players on each side received some hard blows. Within five minutes of the close of the game the good feeling which had hitherto prevailed was seriously threatened and the boys came nearly allowing their overheated tempers to run off with their better judgment. However the squabble was soon adjusted and the game was finished in a friendly manner.

MOVING THE BARRACKS.

A Large Hotel Will be Built on the Site. Other Improvements in the Block.

The Postoffice block is undergoing some important changes, which will make it one of the important business blocks. Wm. Eschwig has made a trade by which he secures the Salvation Army lot. He is moving the Army Barracks to the old Church of England site. The latter corner has been divided into four lots 30x90 each. The barracks is being placed on the back lot facing the Royal corner. Mr. Eschwig will move the building now occupied as a drug store and the barber shop across the street on the vacant lot next the Northern. This will leave him a space 60x88 upon which he intends to erect a large hotel.

C. O. Demaurez has moved his jewelry store across the street onto the Thompson lot which he has leased for five years. This leaves a vacant lot next to Burns & Co.

Mr. T. Beck started the foundation of his store building today.

When Thos. Beck and Messrs. Johnson and Falconer get their buildings up this block will be nearly filled.

NO 2 CENT RATE

(From the Ottawa Free Press July 7.)

The unceremonious rejection by the Railway Committee of the House of Commons yesterday of Mr. W. F. McLean little pet project for the establishment of a two-cent passenger rate on railways, with modifications permitting variations according to earnings, was just the kind of ending that might have been expected to a proposal that was surrounded by features of a highly objectionable character.

The bill would have given the public no advantage whatever in the way of cheap travelling that they do not already possess, and it would have been made the excuse for the withdrawal of excursion and other privileges in the matter of holiday travel that are highly prized.

The fate of the bill was a foregone conclusion when the attempt to show that travel on the American railways was cheaper than on the Canadian broke down.

No substantial reason could be advanced for interference when it was shown that although the earnings on large American systems are, as a rule, higher than the Canadian, the average rate per mile is, generally speaking, lower in Canada than in United States.

Another contention which the committee could not overlook was the fact that although passenger rates, generally speaking, remain as they were some years ago, except in Western Canada where sweeping reductions have been made, the cost of operating passenger train have been greatly increased. Wages have advanced 12 per cent. in the last five years; coal is higher, and more of it is consumed, than when lighter trains were run, and the acceleration of the speed of trains and the general improvement of the service have added to the burdens of the company.

The theory that the loss of revenue that might be entailed by the application of the principle of uniformity would be made up by the increased travel, was shown, by reference to the experience of rate wars, to be unsound.

For these and other reasons Mr. Maclean's legislative bantling was doomed to somewhat ignominious extinction, and the abrupt termination of its career has evoked no expressions of regret.

TWO SERIOUS ACCIDENTS.

E. Gallagher and J. Langdon Hurt at Coal Creek Mines this week.

Edward Gallagher a miner in No. 2 mine, Coal Creek, met with a serious accident while at work at 2:40 on Monday afternoon. A large piece of coal fell on him breaking his leg and bruising his head. He was removed to the Fernie hospital. The accident was due to undermining the face without putting in props to prevent a large quantity of coal from breaking away at one time. The injured man is married and he came here six weeks ago from Montana with a number of others, one of whom was Gus Grant the victim of the accident on the C. P. R. track the same night.

John Langdon a 14 year old boy employed as fan oiler at No. 5 mine Coal Creek met with a very sad accident at 11:30 Wednesday morning. John was evidently not kept busy at his duties and in a spare moment he thought he might be of assistance to the men in making up a train of cars to go into the mines. Accordingly he scrampled down to the tracks and assisted in coupling cars. No one saw the accident but it appears that the lad must have slipped in such a way that the cars ran over his leg crushing it in a horrible manner. He was tenderly taken to the hospital where the doctors found compound fractures of the bones of the leg as well as a fracture of the knee joint. The leg cannot be saved and it is even questionable whether the lad's life can be saved, the loss of blood and the shock being so great. John's parents live at Coal Creek.

NOTES OF SPORT

The Fernie foot-ball team played Coal Creek eleven on the Fernie grounds last Saturday evening. The game was a draw, each securing one goal.

An interesting game of base ball was played on the old recreation grounds last Saturday evening by the boys of the town and a team from Coal Creek. The former won by a score of 32 to 19 runs.

The Cranbrook and Medicine Hat lacrosse game at the former place on Monday resulted in a draw, each side scoring four times. The game is said to have been a rough one.

The Lethbridge lacrosse team is expected to make its first bow in Fernie this season on Monday next. An interesting game may be expected.

The Fernie foot-ball team will try conclusions with Pincher on the latter's grounds tomorrow.

The secretary of the Michel foot-ball club writes the FREE PRESS that the game between that club and Pincher on the latter's grounds on the 11th inst. was not finished on account of darkness. The writer says that the Michel team is eagerly looking forward to a time when the game will be played again.

EXCURSION TO ELKO.

UNION S. S. PICNIC ON TUESDAY A GREAT SUCCESS.

Over 500 Fernieites Spent the Day at Elko. The C. P. R. Ran a Special Train Each Way.—The Sports.

After a few days of refreshing showers the sun rose on Tuesday morning in a cloudless sky, an excellent omen for the success of the union Sunday school picnic to Elko on that day. Feverish excitement reigned in nearly every home in Fernie on that morning as hasty preparations were made for the early start, and long before eight o'clock little parties could be seen wending their way from every direction to the common centre, the C. P. R. depot.

The C. P. R. officials entered into the spirit of the undertaking and exerted themselves to provide ample accommodation for the vast throng which crowded the platform. Three cars were first provided but the crowd was not comfortably seated until two more had been added. A refrigerator car carried the baskets and other supplies. The train which carried fully 500 people was run as a special and arrived at Elko shortly after ten o'clock.

Beautiful shady grounds just south of the town were immediately in possession of the happy picnicers, and many willing workers soon had a bountiful spread on the verdant grass. After lunch the large crowd sought amusement and pleasure in divers ways. Many sauntered down the Elk and viewed the matchless canyons, others secured horses and went driving and riding. The larger number proceeded to a cleared space near by where a very interesting series of sports were conducted under the management of Fred Stork, J. H. Bricker and Thos. Beck. After a baseball match the following races were run, generous cash prizes being made from a collection taken on the train.

Sack race—John Redhead, Dave Martin, Ernest Kent.

Boys under 12—Earl Thomas, D. Martin, Harold Minton.

Boys under 15—R. Dunlap, C. Eschwig, H. Quigg.

Under five—James Alexander, Constance Bonnell, Douglas Stork.

Potato race—Albert Lightly, Max Mutz.

Wheel-barrow race—George Blake, Harold McKane.

Ladies race—Mrs. Clode, Mrs. Joyce, Mrs. Reid.

After another hearty repast about six o'clock a supplementary list of sports was held. In several girls' races Cecelia Eckstein, Irene Robson, G. Hazell, Ina Lewis and others took prizes.

A free-for-all men's race was well contested—A. T. Claxton, Jack Michel, Indian, Frank Bean.

Minister's race—Mr. Ross, Mr. Reid, Mr. Wilson.

The picnicers arrived home at 8:30 p.m. all well pleased with the day's outing. The seven ministers who were present meterially assisted in making the event so great a success.

A BUSINESS CHANGE

N. E. Suddaby of the firm of Suddaby and Hazelwood has purchased his partner's interest in the drug business conducted under that firm's name. The deal was put through this week and Mr. Suddaby has taken personal charge of the business. Mr. Suddaby in the old stand worked up a good business and he doubtless will be even more successful when he gets into permanent quarters. Mr. Hazelwood who will probably go into business for himself in Northern Alberta leaves behind him many friends who wish him good luck.

SCHOOL IMPROVEMENTS.

Government Will Build a new Wing and Generally Improve the Old Property.

Mr. J. A. Rennie, secretary of the School Board has received plans and specifications for certain improvements in connection with the present school buildings that will be received with great satisfaction by every resident of the town. A notice to contractors appears in this issue in regard to this week.

A new wing will be built on the north end similar to that formerly added to the south end: This wing will be two storeys and will contain two rooms. In addition the entire building will be given two coats of paint, the porch entrance will be remodelled and storm windows will be put on every exposed window. New closets and a new coal house will also be built. All tenders are to be in by July 27th when it is expected that the work will be rushed to get as much as possible done before school re-opens.

E. BRYANT SENTENCED

GOT FOUR YEARS FOR PASSING BOGUS MONEY

Judge Forin Held County Court on Wednesday. List of Civil Cases Disposed of.

His Honor J. A. Forin, County Court Judge, held a county court sittings at Fernie on Wednesday, July 20th. There was only one criminal case, that of Edward Bryant charged with fraudulently passing confederate money. H. W. Herchmer appeared for the prosecution and W. R. Ross for the prisoner. Jos Spaeno, bartender at the Union Hotel, old town, positively identified the prisoner as the man who presented him with a bogus Charlestown $10 bill in payment for drinks and a flask on the morning of July 9th. He gave him in change $9.25 of good money. Geo. Illsingworth who keeps a small store at Morrissey Junction, swore the accused handed him a $5 confederate bill in payment for tobacco and received in change $4.50 of good money. Constables Walker and Morris related how the money was found hidden in an out building at Cranbrook.

The defence attempted to prove an alibi by O. G. Michael who swore that he was with the accused from 7.45 until the train pulled out at 8:24 and that he was not near the Union Hotel. Colin Murchison saw the prisoner at 7:15 and also at train time.

His Honor threw out Michael's evidence on the ground that he was an interested witness, being a travelling companion of Bryant. He found the prisoner guilty and he sentenced him to four years in the penitentiary.

Macdonald vs. Winstanley—Action for $222 for goods sold. Defendant admitted $94.87, which he paid into court. Trial as to the balance—judgment for defendant with costs on question of balance. Ross for plaintiff and Eckstein for defendant.

Macdonald vs. Smith—Action for goods sold. Defendant filed confession for part of claim and disputed the balance—trial as to balance. Plaintiff not having proved delivery of goods was non-suited with costs. Ross for plaintiff and Eckstein for defendant.

Robinson vs. Ashmore. Action for Board—defendant confessed part of claim and disputed the balance. Judgment for plaintiff for balance. Eckstein for plaintiff, Ross for defendant.

McDonald vs. Richards. Action for $288.75. Ross for plaintiff, Herchmer for defendant. Defendant proved contra account for $156.66. Judgment in full for balance.

Griffiths vs. Beck. Action for claim of $112.16 for plastering a house. Defendant's claim that $50.00 had been paid not proved. Judgment for plaintiff. Ross for plaintiff, Herchmer for defendant.

Pollock Wine Co. vs. Lacey. Action to collect liquor bill. Defendant claimed husband had ordered the liquor. Judgment in full for plaintiff with costs. Herchmer for plaintiff, Ross for defendant.

Five papers for naturalization were passed by the judge.

A RECORD DAY.

July 15th was a record day at Coal Creek. On that day 1,870 tons of coal were mined at that colliery. This is the largest day's record there since the single shift system was introduced, and it approaches within a few hundred tons of the double shift record.

The Coal Creek mines have been idle several days during the past two weeks and the immediate cause of the shut down at the present time is due to a shortage of cars. The orders for coal and coke are also occasionally slack.

BEHEADED ON TRACK.

GUS GRANT MET SHOCKING DEATH ON MONDAY NIGHT.

Run Over in C. P. R. Yard While in an Intoxicated Condition. Victim a Stranger In Fernie. The Inquest.

About 10:30 on Monday evening the decapitated body of a miner named Gus Grant was found on the C. P. R. track near the C. P. R. coal bins. The police were notified and took the body in charge. The body was found between the rails, and the head about six feet distant on the outer side of the east rail. The head had an ugly gash and one shoulder was badly bruised. An examination of the track revealed marks which indicated that the body had been dragged about 100 yards in a southerly direction. Blood drops were found on the east rail over this distance. The rear tender wheel of the mine engine was found splashed with blood and the first wheel of the car next to it also had some blood on it.

The body was buried on Wednesday morning in the Fernie cemetery. The inquest was held on Thursday before Coroner Forbes, W. Eschwig being chairman of the jury. Evidence was produced to show that the deceased had been under the influence of liquor at 9 o'clock that evening. He lived at the mines and evidently intended going back on the eleven o'clock train that night. The body had apparently been killed about half an hour before it was discovered, it being still warm when found.

The train crew were unable to throw any additional light on the accident. The first that any of them knew of the accident was after the body had been found. The engine with 9 cars attached had pulled out of this track at about the time when the accident was supposed to have occurred and the engine had not been over the track in the meantime. The most reasonable theory as to how the accident occurred, is, that Grant evidently took the train pulling out to be the mine train and attempted to board it at the first car behind the tender. He missed and fell upon the brake beam inflicting the wounds. The torn condition of the clothing favors the theory that the brake rods caught the clothing and the body was probably carried in that manner. The head was hanging over the east rail during this time which would account for the drops of blood. When the engine was reversed to shunt some cars the jar dislocated the body from the rods and it fell with the neck over the rail and the tender wheel did the rest.

The jury brought in a verdict of accidental death, no blame being attached to anyone.

Very little is known of the deceased man. He is a Swede, single, and about 33 years of age. He came to Fernie from Montana about six weeks ago in company with four other feilow countrymen. Since that time he has worked in the mines.

THE CHARITY SOCIAL.

The band concert and social given in the park last evening by the Ladies Benevolent Society was attended by hundreds of townspeople. The half moon aided by Chinese lanterns hanging from trees shed just enough light to make the whole scene most picturesque. The ladies with entire confidence in the success of their undertaking provided a very large supply of refreshments, and the people, charitably inclined and with a keen relish for the ice cream and other delicacies, spent their money freely. The music of the two bands was much appreciated. Special dance music was provided by three members and the temporary dance platform was well patronized, from which was realized a nice sum. The fortune telling by Mrs. Davies in Gipsey costume was a very attractive feature. Her tent was always surrounded by waiting patrons and all who received a reading were impressed with her marvellous knowledge of palmistry. The returns for the evening are not yet announced, but they must be very satisfactory to the ladies who worked hard to make the event so successful.

POLICE COURT.

G. Matheson was fined $15 and costs for trespassing on C. P. R. property. He was found sleeping off a jag in a C. P. R. car in the yards.

W. Davis was fined $5 for breaking How Foon's window in a drunken spree.

KRUGER CALLED.

REMAINS MAY BE SHIPPED TO SOUTH AFRICA.

Late Transvaal President Died at Clarens, Switzerland, of Pneumonia and Heart Weakness—Unconscious Since Monday.

A despatch from Clarnes, Switzerland, says:—Paul Kruger, former president of the Transvaal Republic, died here at 3 o'clock Thursday morning, from pneumonia and supervening heart weakness. Mr. Kruger lost consciousness on Monday. His daughter and son-in-law were with him at the time of his death. He had been out only once since his arrival here, at the begining of the month.

The ex-president's body was embalmed, and will be placed in a vault pending funeral arrangements. Application will be made to the British government for authority to transport the remains to the Transvaal. In the meantime they will be temporarily interred here.

Mr. Kruger, who was staying at the Villa Bu Boichet had been gradually failing for a long time, but he was able to attend to affairs, read the newspapers and receive visits until Saturday. A change for the worse set in on Sunday. He became unconscious Monday and remained so until death. Beside the Eloffs Mr. Kruger was attended by his own physician Dr. Heymann, and by his secretary, Mr. Redel. On several occasions Mr. Kruger had expressed a desire to be buried beside his wife in his own country.

MUCH REGRETTED IN FRANCE

The death of the former president of the Transvaal, Paul Kruger, at Clarnes, Switzerland, aroused widespread regret in Paris, owing to the French sympathy for the Boer cause and the personal admiration for the ex-president. When he recently left Mentone his health was gradually failing through old age, constitutional disorders and throat troubles, which threatened to extend to the lungs. Kruger resisted the idea that his physical powers were failing. He had arranged to return to Mentone next fall, releasing his picturesque villa which he had occupied on the outskirts of the town. Nevertheless his friends recognized that Mr. Kruger's once rugged constitution was gradually falling to pieces. Visitors described him as being a pathetic figure of calm endurance. His eyesight had dimmed, but he sat much at times with his Bible open before him, muttering well-known passages. He avoided reference to the Boer war, but when it was occasionally mentioned he showed no resentment, and expressed the belief that Providence would eventually render justice to the Boer cause.

Stephanus Johannes Paul Kruger was born near Colesburg, Cape Colony, on Oct. 10,1825. When he was about nine years old he took part in the Great Trek over the Vaal and is one of the few survivors of that time. While still young he was appointed a field cornet, and afterwards was chosen to command the Boer forces. He entered upon the more active career when he was made a member of the executive council of the Transvaal in '72. President Bergers being then head of affairs. Though he held an official position during the British administration of the country after Majuba, he was one of the leaders of the rebellion which led to the battle of Majuba and the convention of '81. In '82 he was elected president of the South African Republic for the first time. In '83 he was re-elected for five years, and in '88 after a contest with Gen. Joubert, he was again chosen president. After that he was twice re-elected and the last time in '98, when the late General Joubert stood in opposition to him as the candidate of the progressive party. As president, he received a salary of about seven thousand pounds a year. His career since '98 has been a matter of history. When the organized resistance by the Boer army to Lord Roberts' forces broke down he fled to Lorenzo Marquees, and thence by the courtesy of the Dutch government, sailed in a Dutch war vessel to Europe, landing at Marseilles Nov. 22, 1900. He went on to Paris, and left there Dec. 1, for Cologne. He had intended visiting Berlin, but was informed that the emperor could not receive him, and so he went to Holland. He was received at the Hague with enthusiastic demonstrations of welcome and was accorded interviews with Queen Wilhemina, subsequently remaining in the country. Associated with him were Dr. Leyds and a number of Boer delegates, who strenuously denied that peace could be concluded unless the independence of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State were granted. After the conclusion of peace, Generals Botha, Delarey and De Wet visited England and went on to Holland to see Mr. Kruger.

Crooked Russians.

A few years ago a certain Russian warship was on special duty in the Behring Sea, guarding the seal fisheries—that is to say, preventing the slaughter of the female seals during the close season. The admiral of the station in the course of an inspection of the vessel invited any of the sailors who had any complaint to make to step forward. One of the men, as spokesman for the whole crew, complained that the 'seal money' promised them had not been paid. On the astonished admiral inquiring what he meant, it came out that the ship's commander had been doing a lucrative trade by killing the seal placed under his protection and sending the skins to London, and had taken the crew into partnership.

WINNIPEG FOUR WIN.

Splendid Victory for the Canadians at Putney—Won the Thames Cup.

Following up the victories at Kingston-on-the-Thames, where the Winnipeg four won the first heat from the Thames Rowing Club, and the final heat from the London Rowing Club by 2½ lengths (the distance being seven-eighths of a mile), the Winnipeggers Thursday, won a splendid race, carrying off the fours, at the Metropolitan regatta. This ranks in importance in England second only to the Henley. The four's splendid record at Henley, where they forced the champion Third Trinity to equal the record for the course in order to win, and their victory at Putney shows that the crew is well worthy of the confidence placed in them by their friends in Canada, and proves that Third Trinity must have been an extraordinary crew to beat them. Last year the Metropolitan, the course being slightly under a mile and a half, being over the regular championship Thames course, was won by the Kingston Fieldland crew. The trophy is called the "Thames Cup."

Found Sanctuary in Chimney.

For the past ten days the Town of Newry, in Ireland, has been convulsed over the curious strategy by which a small contractor, named James Gill, has defied the efforts of the police to enforce the penalty of a 40s fine or, a month's imprisonment to which he was sentenced for drunkenness.

The man had recently undertaken the demolitation of a factory chimney round which the scaffolding neccessary for the work had been erected, and he sought security from the clutches of the authorities at the top of this structure climbing by means of a short ladder, which he drew up after him as he reached each successive platform of the staging. Food and drink are furnished to him by his son, and raised to the summit of the chimney by an ingenious mechanical device. The other evening Mr. Gill descended to the ground and reached his home unobserved but he returned to his lofty perch early on Monday morning.

Large crowds of people have flocked from all the country round to Sugar Island, where his hiding place is situated, and the police have now resigned themselves to waiting till the work of pulling down the chimney is completed before attempting to arrest him.

A Kansas Wedding.

Harper's Weekly reproduces the following graphic account of a wedding which took place recently in a town in Kansas, as given in the local paper:—Married—At the home of the bride's parents, three and one-half miles west of Altamont, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Greer, their only daughter, Miss Pearl, to C. C. Carson of Wilsonton, Kan., on Wednesday, at 6 o'clock p.m., by Rev. Rulbson of Mound Valley, at early candle light, while the wedding march was being played by Miss Edith Olson, of Angola, the groom, a fine and well-behaved young man, dressed in a blue-black, all-wool suit, and the bride, a lady loved and respected by all, dressed in a light blue cashmere trimmed in white, marched downstairs from single life into married blessedness. After the cermony a bounteous supper was served. They will reside on their farm, near Timber Hill, in the oil and gas reigon. Her many friends lose a very dear girl, but our loss is Charlie's gain. Among the presents were the following:—Mr. and Mrs. George Greer, a cow and a set of chairs; Julius Johnson, china tea-pot, Mr. and Mrs. G. Hoke, pair of towels; Grandpa Greer, wash-bowl and pitcher; Grandma Wilson, a handkerchief; Samuel Greer, a big rocking chair; Mr. and Mrs Oscar Johnson, mush set; Charlie and Frank Johnson, mustard dish; Mr. and Mrs. Tratchell, lovely fruit picture; Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Hunt, rug; Wintress Johnson, tooth-pick holder.

Law's Wise Leniency.

Judge Morgan, of Toronto, had a very sad case before him the other day when 18 year old Maud Hebden was arranged on the charge of stealing three ladies' wheels. The girl had a most pleasing appearance and was quietly dressed. It is the old story of a country girl wanting to live in the city, working in the factory for hardly enough to pay her board and yielding to temptations. The spectacle of such an innocent looking girl in the prisoners dock was painful. Her counsel J. M. Godefry, entered a plea of guilty to three of the charges and the poor child's slender form shook with sobs as her counsel admitted she was a thief. The Judge let her go on suspended sentence.

Girl's Long Drop.

At noon on Tuesday, when six girls belonging to the establishment of Richard Hall & Sons, Peterboro, Ont., took the elevator at the fourth story, the cable parted and the lift fell to the basement, a distance of sixty feet. Nora Fitzgerald suffered a broken leg and arm; Ida Sheran, severe injuries to spine; Josephine DeLaire, leg broken. The elevator boy had his arm broken. None were fatally hurt.

Labor Leader Bailed.

A Denver despatch says:—Chas. H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of miners, was released from custody by Sheriff Bell, of Teller county, July 4 after furnishing bonds of $10,000 on the charges of murder and inciting riot, filed against him at Cripple Creek. Bonds were provided by a guarantee company. Moyer had been a prisoner one hundred and three days, and during the greater portion of that time was confined in the bull pen at Telluride, on the plea of "military necessity."

A STENOGRAPHIC FEAT

REPORTING THE IROQUOIS THEATRE FIRE INQUEST A RECORD.

4,900,000 Words, or 3,300 Newspaper Columns, Taken by Three Shorthand Writers in Fifteen Days—With the Aid of Four Typewriters the Report Was Ready for the Signature of the Witness as He Stepped Down.

The work of the shorthand writers in reporting the Iroquois Theatre fire inquest, held in Chicago a few weeks ago, was an event of more than ordinary importance to the shorthand world. It established a record in fast shorthand writing and the quick delivery of copy which will probably stand for a long time to come.

The inquest was held in the Common Council chamber in Chicago, and the reporters were Messrs. Walton, James and Ford of that city. The proceedings began Jan 7 and lasted for 15 days, during which time 176 witnesses were examined concerning that awful calamity. In that time 3,117 pages of testimony, or more than 700,000 words, were taken and transcribed by the reporters. Seven copies of this were made, which would make a total of 4,900,000 words. Set in ordinary newspaper type, this matter would have made 3,300 columns, and if printed in column form would have reached more than one mile.

As each witness left the stand he was escorted to a committee room by a deputy coroner, where the typewriters and shorthand men were engaged in getting out the testimony. As soon as the witness arrived in the room he was handed the first part of his testimony, which he read, signing each page thereof. Before he had concluded the reading of the first portion of his testimony the remainder of it was typewritten and ready for his examination and signature, with the result that every witness' testimony was in typewriting within three minutes after he left the witness stand. Five minutes after the inquest was concluded Coroner Traeger asked Mr. James, who was in direct charge of the work, how many days it would be before the official copy would be ready for delivery.

"If you will step to the typewriting room we will give it to you now, with each page signed by the witness," answered Mr. James. "I have already sent copies of the testimony to the State's attorney, to the mayor, the corporation counsel, the city attorney, the fire marshal, and to the Iroquois Memorial Association."

Three expert shorthand reporters and four typewriter operators were used to accomplish this work. The first shorthand man had a "take" of five minutes, and was then relieved by the second. Going to the typewriter room, the first man would seat himself between two expert typewriter operators, split his take in the middle, and dictate his first portion to the typewriter on the left and the last portion to the typewriter on the right, dictating to two typewriters at the same time. The second man would be relieved after taking five minutes, and he would use the other two operators in the same manner. By the time the third operator had concluded his five minutes' report the one who took the first portion of the testimony would have the first take transcribed and would relieve the third. In this way the shorthand men kept within five minutes of the actual proceedings in the delivery of copy.

The pay received by the operators for this 15 days' work was more than that earned by a man in the ordinary walks of life in three years. Walton, James and Ford were retained by seven different people to report the inquest, and each of these people paid an attendance fee of $1 per hour, and the inquest ran, on an average, more than eight hours each day, making a total of $840 received for attendance alone. For the original official copy they received 50 cents a page, and for each of the carbon copies 15 cents a page, making a total of $1.40 a page, aside from the attendance fee. There were 3,117 pages in the inquest, and the readers are good enough mathematicians to figure out the profits.

A Clock Which Strikes 13.

The Bridgewater Trust, England, has a unique possession in a clock at Worsley which strikes thirteen. The Duke of Bridgewater, who built the canals and founded the Trust, maintained a personal oversight over the works and his employes. He was much irritated by the unpunctuality with which the men came back to work after the mid-day dinner hour. The men pleaded in excuse that they did not hear the clock strike one—the signal for their return. Thereupon the Duke had a clock constructed to strike thirteen at one o'clock, thus cutting away the possibility of excuse. The clock was set up in 1789 and still strikes its baker's dozen at one p.m., though a bell has long been used to summon the men back to work.

Advertising Her Attractions.

Many of the Japanese ladies, as we know, are very charming, and this is how one of them advertised her attractions:

"I am a beautiful woman. My abundant, undulating hair envelops me as a cloud. Supple as a willow is my waist. Soft and brilliant is my visage as the satin of the flowers. I am endowed with wealth sufficient to saunter through life hand in hand with my beloved. Were I to meet a gracious lord, kindly, intelligent, well educated, and of good taste, I would unite myself with him for life, and later share with him the pleasure of being laid to rest eternal in a tomb of pink marble."

Compared with that, matrimonial advertisements in this grey land of ours are prosaic indeed.

"NOVEL" TITLES.

Cognomens of Modern and Ancient Fiction Woven Into a Thrilling Romance—Quite an Ingenious Story.

"Two Years Ago," "All the World and His Wife" were visiting "William the Conqueror" in the "Palace of the "Idle Tales" of the "Indiscretion of a Duchess" being "The Heavenly Twins" and created "A Scandal in Bohemia." "To Right the Wrong," "Sherlock Holmes" followed by "The Golden Dog" was told to investigate, and, if successful, some "Very Hard Cash." "Alone in London" and a share in "Mammon & Co." would be granted to him. "Thaddeus of Warsaw," "The Lunatic at Large," sitting in "The Secret Orchard," Under Currants," when asked his name said he was "Called Back" and lived a good "Deal in Wheat," so was immediately put "Under Sealed Orders." "Mr. Dooley" inquired was "Percival Keene" on "Incomparable Bellairs," but "Sir Richard Calmody" did not think so, as he had heard him call her "Diana of the Cross Ways." "The Surgeon of Gasten Fell" from "Castle Omragh," but had been borne by "The Wings of the Morning" to "Place and Power." From there he could see "Elizabeth and her German Garden," as no one was allowed to visit her except "When Knighthood Was in Flower," "Patience Sparhawk and Her Times" said "Lettice" take "The Yellow Van" and call at once. "The Lightning Conductor" let them off at the "Parting of the Ways," and leaving "The King of Paradise," they entered "No. 5 John Street," "Via Crucis." Inside they found "Paul and Virginia" sitting on "The Earth's Enigmas" and blowing "Bubbles we Buy," which were "Maid of Athens," "Lady Rose's Daughter," who had sold her "Harvest of Wild Oats" to "Sir Mortimer," who was reeling "Under Two Flags," making desperate love to the "Minister of State" in spite of "My Lady Nicotine," who declared she would have her sent "Over the Border," "Bootle's Baby" and "Wee Macgregor" were in the music-room playing "Key Notes," "Ballads of Revolt" and "The Heir of Radcliffe."

"Romeo and Juliet" the latter clad in "Scarlet and Hysop," were having a sumptuous repast on "A Bit of Human Nature" and "The Waters of Oblivion," in view of everyone. "The Candle of Conscience" being "The Light Behind" cast "The Shadow of Crime" in "Questionable Shapes," which caused "The Wind in the Rosebush" to sigh audibly. "Dombey and Son" were discussing "Martin Chuzzelwitt" and they came to the conclusion he was "No Hero," because he had "The Gadfly" impaled on "A Point of Conscience." "At the Time Appointed" "Sherlock Holmes," aided by "The Schemers," came in, disguised as "Richard Rodney," wearing "The Grey Cloak." "The Blue Goose" under one arm and in his hand "A Bunch of Blood Lilies." Passing "The Main Chance" he tripped over "The Modern Obstacle" and picked himself up the most "Rejected of Men." However, "All's Well that Ends Well," and he finally discovered "The Duke" and "The Duchess" playing "Bridge," who assured him that there had been "Much Ado About Nothing."

Secretary to Prince of Wales.

The Prince of Wales, private secretary, Sir Arthur Bigge, born on Waterloo Day, 1849, is an official as popular as he is discreet, and a man of many friends both within and without the circle of the Court. His connection with royalty, says The London Chronicle, began four and twenty years ago, and he was Queen Victoria's secretary during the last two years of her life. Her late Majesty shared the objection of her predecessor, Queen Elizabeth, to the young men in her service taking to themselves wives; and when Captain Bigge contemplated matrimony in 1881 his royal mistress evinced some dissatisfaction. When, however, it turned out that the future Lady Bigge was the granddaughter of a former Dean of Windsor, who had stood high in the Queen's favor, the light of the royal countenance was instantly turned on the young couple, who basked in it ever afterwards. Sir Arthur hails from Northumberland, where his father was a country vicar for many years.

John Used to Get Angry.

At one time there was an Englishman in India, John Nicholson, who in his own proper person was worshipped as a god in spite of his protest. Such a hold had his powerful personality taken upon the native mind that a strong sect of worshippers persisted in regarding him as a god. If, however, one of the Nikkasseyn fakirs so far lost control of himself as to offer worship to the diety in person Nicholson was in the habit of ordering him to receive a dozen lashes, a fact which did not in the least interfere with the worshippers' belief in his divinity.

When Nicholson was killed some of the worshippers slew themselves upon his tomb, but the remainder went over in a body to Christianity, saying, "Our god told us that he was but a man, and now we see that it was true. We wish, therefore, to be Christians as he was."

What a "Sotnia" Is.

"A sotnia of Cossacks" has been frequently referred to by correspondents of late, and everybody perhaps does not know what a "sotnia" is. It is a term which has a social as well as a military application and among the Cossacks means what "hundred" in local Government used to stand for in England, says The New York Globe. For war purposes the mounted Cossacks are organized in "polks," or regiments, of light cavalry about 900 strong and formed usually of six "sotnias." The English military equivalent is squadron.

MARKET REPORT.

Compiled by Thompson, Sons & Co.

WHEAT.—The American markets have been practically closed the past week. Owing to the 4th of July holidays an adjournment was made from Friday till Tuesday, but when Tuesday's business got started, trading at once began to show a different spirit to what it had done for sometime previously. Owing to small world's shipments last week, and the prospects of shipment from exporting countries decreasing some sometime to come, Liverpool and London made quite a sharp advance on Tuesday. At same time other European markets, such as Paris and Budapesth showed sharp advances on unfavorable crop reports from their own countries. The advance on the other side helped to influence the markets on this side, which owing to continued unfavorable weather for harvest in the South West, were ready to start a good advance on their own account. Thus, on Tuesday, the American markets became very active and advanced rapidly, the day's trading closed with an advance of 2 to 3c over the close on Friday previous. Since Tuesday the American markets have had no further help from Europe as cables are practically unchanged since that day, but the weather over the Southwest has been from bad to worse, and now the cutting of the ripened wheat is not only being delayed, but damage is being done to the fields in stook, and loss of quantity is being caused in fields ripe but not cut. The heavy rain in Kansas, Western Missouri, Nebraska and Iowa are causing serious floods, and some fields are a total loss on that account. Altogether the prospects according to latest reports is serious over a wide area. If immediate or early improvement in the weather the net loss and damage will not prove extensive, and markets would have a sharp setback, but should present damaging weather continues, further advances will follow, even although wheat prices are already comparatively high. The course of the market will also depend on the development of the spring wheat crop. Up to the present very favorable reports regarding it have been presented through the newspapers, but the reports by more closely interested and experienced observers others, and generally the weather has is running a fair chance to be spotted, an uneven crop, good in some districts and poor in others, and even good and poor fields side by side. There has been too much rain in some parts and not enough in been and continues too cool for best results. There is a prospect that much of the crop may be late, unless weather in the ensuing six weeks. we have a warm spell of warm dry The uncertainty regarding the spring wheat, together with the unfavorable weather in the surplus winter wheat States and the anticipated deficiency in yield in the European crops, with increased consumption of wheaten bread stuffs, not to mention the uncertainty of developments in the eastern war, make a very interesting study for the wheat trade. In the meantime, the speculative markets have advanced in price during the week of 4 to 5c per bushel. At the same time it should be noted that very poor reports are being made about the cash wheat and flour trade. There is almost no demand for milling and shipping. Prices are comparatively high now, and the miller and merchant has no desire to lay in a stock of high price wheat on the eve of the movement of the new crop, in case the situation should undergo improvement and lower prices rule. In this connection, however, it is quite likely that the present slackness in buying by the trade that supplies the consumer, results from overbuying during February and March when the war boom was on. The large quantities of wheat and flour bought then in anticipation of war prices have resulted in heavy losses to many houses whose business is in, handling actual wheat and flour and who do not as a rule do anything on the speculative markets. Thus many of the people who are buyers of actual wheat and flour are still struggling to get rid of highpriced purchases and some of them are not in a position, and none of them are anxious to buy freely on present advances. It is the natural reaction of the boom at the begining of the war. The trade must form its opinions and plans for the ensuing operations from day to day according as the crop situation developes in Europe and America, giving close heed to stocks at points of accumulation, the weekly shipments from exporting countries, and the relation of market prices to the rate of consumption. Also a close watch needs to be kept of the corn and oats markets as to their influence on the wheat markets.

The visible supply decreased 597,000 bus. last week as compared to a decrease of 1,692,000 bus. the previous week and a decrease of 1,485,000 bus. last year. The world's shipments 7,312,000 bus. against 9,400,000 bus. last year. The world's visible supply according to Bradstreet's decreased 5,669,000 bus against a decrease of 3,071,000 bus. the previous week and a decrease of 3,066,000 bus. last year.

The market for Manitoba wheat livened up under the influence of the situation in the American markets and on the week there has been an advance in value of from 2¾c to 4c on milling grades, but feed grades are only ½c to 1c higher. At close of business to-day we quote prices 1 Nor. 90¼c., 2 Nor. 87¼c., 3 Nor. 83½c., No. 4. wheat 75½c., Feed 59c., No. 2 Feed 50c., spot or July delivery. For August delivery 1 Nor. 91¼c., 2 Nor. 88¼c., and 3 Nor. 84½c., and October delivery 1 Nor. 83c., 2 Nor. Port Arthur.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE

FLOUR—Business is reported brisker. There has been no farmer trade for a month or more, but it is now thought country supplies are pretty well cleaned up. Prices are steady. We quote: No. 1 grade at $2.45 per sack of 98 lbs., delivered to the trade; No. 2, $2.30; No. 3, $1.80 to $2.10, and No.4, $1.30. These prices are subject to the usual trade discounts.

SPELTZ—There are none in sight and the price is nominal at 40 to 45c per bushel of 50 pounds.

MILLFEED—The market is steady. We quote; Bran $16.00 per ton, in bulk, delivered to the trade; shorts, $17.00 per ton.

GROUND FEED—Trade is very dull as must be expected at this season of the year, especially when the pasturage is so good. Prices are steady. We quote: Oat chop, $28 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley, chop, $22; mixed barley and oats, $25; oil cake, $27 per ton.

OATS—There is very little change in the situation. Two sales have been made at 35 to 38c for No. 2, one car being sold at the low figure, in order to avoid paying demurage or sending on to Fort William. At the same time holders of oats will not sell at less than 39 to 41c for No. 2, yet refuse to buy. They claim there is no further warehouse capacity, and are thus enabled to keep the price up.

HAY—Greatly increased receipts have borne the price for baled hay down from $1.50 to $2 per ton. We quote: Choice prairie hay is worth $8 per ton, for baled in carlots on track here. New hay, loose, on the street, $8 to $10 per ton.

VEGETABLES—Five and ten cent declines have been general, new turnips, lettuce, parsley, onions pie plant, asparagus aad new beets being affected, New potatoes, imported, are now in season. Lettuce has taken another 5c tumble. Old turnips are about out, and new stocks is now on the market at 30c per bushel. New beets and new celery are now on the market the opening prices being about the usual figures. We quote: Potatoes, farmers loads, 60c bushel; new, imported, $2.25 per bushel; new turnips, 20c per dozen bunches; parsley, 30c per dozen; onions, 3½c per pound; pie plant ¾c per pound; new cabbage, imported 4c per pound; asparagus, 55c per dozen bunches; new beets, 35c per dozen; celery, 50c per dozen.

DRESSED MEATS—Trade has been exceedingly quiet, due largely to the warm weather and the departure of many people to summer resorts. Values are steady. We quote; Beef, 8 to8½c perlb. for city dressed, ½less for country; veal, 6½ to 7½c for the choice weights; mutton, 11c; spring lambs, $3 to 3.50 each; hogs, 6 to 6½c, delivered to the trade here.

POULTRY—Receipts of poultry are very limited, a few fowl bringing about $1.00 per pair.

CHEESE—Expectations of a large make are appearantly to be realized. Manitoba cheese is offering freely. Quotations are weak at last week's figures; 8c factory and 9½c jobbing basis.

BUTTER—Creamery—The market holds about steady, quotations ranging from 16 to 16½c f.o.b. factory. Considerable quantities are being stored.

BUTTER — Dairy — Offerings continue heavy. On the basis of present quotations, which remain steady, jobbers are taking off the bulk of the offerings. Jobbers are paying 11 to 12 c for round lots, Winnipeg.

EGGS—Although production is not so large, owing to the season's advance, the market is rather weaker, jobbers thinking prices, as compared with the east, are high enough. Some are holding off on that account.

HIDES—Receipts are more limited and prices firm at previous quotations. We quote: Abattoir hides, 6½c for No. 1's; 5½c for No. 2's. Farmer hides are steady at 5 to 5½c per lb. flat. Country cured butchers' are the same as city butchers' at 6c for No. 1 grade. Lambs, 15 to 20c; shearlings, 10c each.

TALLOW—In sympathy with the remarkably weak condition of the Chicago market, prices are again easier, ranging ¼c lower. No. 1 tallow is worth 3¾c to 4c per pound delivered at Winnipeg; No.3, 2¾ to 3c.

WOOL—Only a few tag-end lots of Manitoba stock continue to come in. Some few cars of Territorial wool have changed hands at 9 to 11c for average quality, 12 to 14c lor finer grades. Manitoba wool, 8 to 10c.

SENECA ROOT—The local market is rather firmer. At the same time the export demand is off color, Russia, Germany and Great Britain not wanting as much as usual. Quotations so far range from 48 to 50c, Winnipeg, for good dry root.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—Receipts of western stock have been heavy, and prices have declined. There is a slow sale for the considerable amount of half fat, green cattle offering. Prices are 25c lower at $4.50 off cars here for choice and from these figures the market ranges down to 3c for inferior grades. Stockers are moving to the western ranges now.
or Europe with a larger capital.

SHEEP—Although offerings have not been very large, local buyers are well stocked and prices are steady at last week's decline. Quotations range from $3.50 to $4 per cwt.

HOGS—The market is less brisk as offerings are large and packers are grading more closely.

HOT WEATHER DANGERS

More little ones die during the hot months than at any other season. At this time stomach and bowel troubles assume their most dangerous form, and sometimes a few hours delay in the treatment means the loss of a little life. Baby's Own Tablets is the best medicine in the world to prevent these troubles, or to cure them if they attack the little ones unexpectedly. Every mother should have a box of these tablets in the house—their prompt use may save a child's life. Mrs. Arthur Cote, St. Fortunat, Que., says: "My little one was greatly troubled with colic and bowel trouble, but since using Baby's Own Tablets the trouble has disappeared, and she is growing nicely and has good health." These Tablets are guaranteed to contain no opiates, and are safe for a new born baby or a well grown child. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville Ont.,

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

"Yes," said the girl who chanced to stop;
"There's room up in your head."

THIS MUSICIAN IS DELIGHTED

His Kidney Disease and Gravel Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills

Tried many Medicines but got no Relief till he used the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Roseden, Ont., July 18, (Special).—Mr. Samuel J. Crow, the well-known musician of this place, relates an experience that adds to the already great popularity of Dodd's Kidney Pills in this locality.

"I suffered for years with Kidney Trouble," says Mr. Crow, "which became aggravated with every attack of cold and caused me much agony. The disease developed into Gravel when I was totally unfit for anything.

"I tried different remedies without the desired result and was in misery when I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills when to my astonishment and delight I immediately began to recover.

"After using five boxes the ailment had entirely ceased and I was again enjoying perfect vigor, all of which I owe to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

The fact that gravel yield so readily to Dodd's Kidney Pills is good news indeed, as it does away with those terrible operations that were supposed to be the only relief from this trouble.

At a musical evening last week a singer was requested by an extremely sedate looking individual to oblige with the Japanese national anthem. it was explained to him that the tune was the same as the British national anthem, and that all he had to do was to pronounce the Japanese words provided for him on a sheet of paper, precisely as they were spelled. Accordingly up rose the willing warbler burst forth with the following lyric:—

O wa ta fu lyam,
A fu lyam.

He was only pulled up by roars of laughter from continuing the confession. There was no encore.

A GOOD MEDICINE requires little advertising. Dr Thomas' Eclectric Oil gained the good name it now enjoys, not through elaborate advertising, but on its great merits as a remedy for bodily pains and ailments of the respiratory organs. It has carried its fame with it wherever it has gone and it is prized at the antipodes as well as at home. Dose small effect sure.

Humor and Philosophy

MY DENTIST.

I know a man who's most polite;
He's kind and full of tact,
But on my spirits like a blight
His smile and presence act.
When I'm compelled to visit him
My mental sky is gray and grim.

He seems most gracious and urbane;
A courteous person he,
But I reluctantly remain
In his suave company;
I don't like his style a bit;
With me the man is not a hit.

His little hammer out he takes
And knocks and knocks and knocks.
And how I hate it, goodness sakes!
I'd not endure such shocks
As he distributes every day
If I were sure of princely pay.

With saw and hammer, drill and file,
He deftly shows his skill
Upon my aching jaws the while
He's chasing up his bill.
And then to meet that bill's demands
My last lone dollar leaves my hands.

Fable of the College Boy Who Came Home.

A young man who had filled up on a College Education clear to the Hatband and had accumulated all of the Branches, including Latin, Ancient History, Football, the College Yell and the ability to Smoke a Brier Pipe, came Home after It was All Over to show his Old Fogy Parent how to Run the Farm.

Naturally the Neighbors who had kept their own Sons at Home, hopping over Large Triangular Clods and separating the Cows from their Milk, Shook their Heads and said that William's Highfalutin Notions might do to run a Bank, but they they would never be of Much Service in Snatching Success from the Bosom of the Unwilling Earth.

William heeded not their Scoffings. After Kissing his Mother and Shaking hands with the Dog, he said to his Father, who was Admiring his Broad Shoulders: "Father, You have Worked Hard and have Earned a Rest. Tomorrow Morning you remain in Bed. It has been My Custom for Some Time to take an Hour's Exercise before Breakfast. I can just as well take that Exercise Doing the Chores. After that Meal I shall Sally forth to the Field, where, as Added compensation, in Addition to the Joy of Labor, I know I shall Accumulate a Beautiful Tan that will be the Envy of all my Mates. Do not Call me for Dinner, for I have Adopted the Two Meal a Day Plan, and by Adding that Hour to the Working Day I think we will be Able to Discharge the Hired Man after the Rush Season is Over."

Then William went out Into the Kitchen to Blow Smoke wreathes, so that the Hired Man would no Longer feel superior to Him.

William was as Good as his word, and it was not many Months until he had paid off the Mortgage and Purchased another Farm.

Chronic Liver and Stomach Trouble Thoroughly Cured by Using

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

In every home there is more or less suffering as the result of constipation and derangement of the digestive system.

Because Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cure such ailments more promptly and thoroughly than other preparations they have come to be considered almost indispensable as a family medicine.

Mr. C. F. Immel, shoemaker, Western Hill, St. Catharines, Ont., states "I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills regularly for some time and consider that they are unsurpassed for torpid liver, defective circulation, indigestion, headache and constipation, as these were my troubles, I used many remedies, but got no relief until I tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and a few boxes of this preparation have entirely cured me. I am not in the habit of indorsing any medicine, but in this case I cannot speak too highly in praise of Dr. Chase's Pills for what they have done for me.

Mr. D. C. Holmes, Justice of the Peace lor Lincoln County, states,—"I am acquainted with Mr. C. F. Immel and consider him a reliable citizen in every sense of the word, in fact, I have known him from boyhood up and can say I believe him to be truthful and honest."

Acting directly on the Liver, Kidneys and Bowels, these pills increase the vigor and activity of these organs, thoroughly cleanse the system, purify the blood of poisonous impurities and set the digestive organs in perfect order.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

LOOKED LIKE A TRAP.

Clever Oriental Stratagem That Was a Complete Success.

Many a man has failed to guess an easy riddle because the simple solution looked like a trap to him. Here is an instance in which this trait of human nature was cleverly played upon by a Japanese nobleman.

The old lord had been forced to flee with only 300 men before an enemy with 10,000 and barely had time to reach his castle ahead of his foes. There were no re-enforcements near at hand, and he knew that if an attempt was made to storm his defenses he and his men would be dead before help could come.

The enemy's forces advanced rapidly, and scouts rode up near the castle to reconnoiter. To their amazement, they found the gates, doors and windows open and all the appearance of a holiday celebration. They rode hastily back to inform their master that the foe was dancing and that bands were playing music in the castle.

The powerful enemy was too wise a man to put his head into any such trap as that. The defenders of the castle must have some plan to slaughter his forces by wholesale or they would never invite him in that way. He drew back a safe distance and encamped to await developments.

Soon the re-enforcements for the castle came up behind, attacked him suddenly and defeated him, while the garrison which had risked all on its strategem, charged him on the other side.

Heading Them Off.

Mrs. Villadom—Why do you want to call on the Borems tonight? Mr. Villadom—Because if we don't they're certain to come over here. It will be easier to go home when we're tired of them than to ask them to go home.

Too Candid.

Miss Highup—I think Miss Globetrot ought to be ashamed of herself. She says she found the paintings of the old masters dreadfully stupid. Miss Wayup—So do many others. Miss Highup—Yes, but she says so.

A CAREFULLY PREPARED PILL.—Much time and attention were expended in the experimenting with the ingredients that enter into the composition of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills before they were brought to the state in which they were first offered to the public. Whatever other pills may be, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of much expert study, and all persons suffering from dyspepsia or disordered liver and kidneys may confidently accept them as being what they are represented to be.

Wilson's Fly Pads are the best fly killers made.

The Kew Gardens collection of orchids has no equal in variety in the world. It comprises 1,750 species and fifty hybrids.

HOW TO CLEANSE THE SYSTEM.—Parmelee'sVegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has demonstratd in many instances that they regulate the action of the Liver and the Kidneys, purify the blood, and carry off all morbid accumulations from the system. They are easy to take, and their action is mild and beneficial.

The famous Cheapside tree at the corner of Wood st., London has not forgotten how to put forth buds, and is now in full leaf. The redoubtable and only John L. Sullivan is credited with giving this advice to two small boys who paid homage at his shrine not long ago: "Boys, if you want to get along, do your work. Work is the only thing that make men happy and successful. Don't be like a boy whose father wrote to the boy's boss asking where his son slept. The answer the man sent back was: 'We don't know where your son sleeps at night; he sleeps in the shop daytimes.'"

FRIDAY, JULY 22, 1904.

If Mr. Gallagher is successful in securing the grant for the new post office building, as there is little doubt he will be, it will be another mark of the general confidence in the future of this town.

Fernie can boast what few towns of its size possess,—two bands. The erection of a band stand on some public corner would be one simple way by which the town could show its appreciation of the efforts of these organizations to supply music in the town.

THE VERNON NEWS special number of July 1st is a highly creditable production. The Okanagan Valley, "The Garden of B. C.," is described by word and picture and its marvellous possibilities for fruit growing and for almost every line of agriculture are clearly shown. Settlers looking for a good location on a piece of land should send 25 cents and get a copy.

* * *

A case of typhoid fever is reported this week in town. The doctors are unable to locate the cause, unless it be the using of the spring water below the hill. The time must soon come when this water must be prohibited for drinking purposes if an epidemic of fever is to be avoided. These springs drain underneath the whole town and though the water is very cool and looks clear and enticing it must contain many impurities.

The Elk River Coal and Oil Company have incorporated under the above name. The Company which is composed chiefly of Fernie men holds extensive coal properties up the Elk above Michel. The incorporation of the Company is not for the purpose of developing the coal fields but in order that the regular routine business of the Company may be conducted more satisfactorily. Several parties are now negotiating for the purchase of these coal properties

THE Spokesman-Review in summing up the different rival interests in the Flathead country and the recent action of the Government in throwing open these lands says:— "The result has caused a turmoil at Spokane. Inevitable litigation faces the locator. There is is no certainty of the outcome. In order to protect their interests some of the various groups are forming incorporated companies, to which each locator will turn his claim and receive a pro rata share of stock. There is no question of the enormous value of the coal lands. They should be worth millions. It is now a question who will get them.

THE BRANCH LEASED.

Deal Practically Concluded between C.P.R and Coal Company.

The deal between the C. P. R. and the C. N. P. Coal Company for the lease of the branch line between Fernie and Coal Creek mines has practically been concluded. Mr. Lumsden, chief engineer for the C. P. R. and Messrs. Lindsey and McEvoy for the Coal Company, drew up a basis for an agreement last week and the details have been submitted to another meeting at Winnipeg this week. Messrs. Lindsay and McEvoy left for Winnipeg on Wednesday evening where they will meet Messrs. Lumsden and Whyte of the C. P. R., and the agreement will be finally signed.

The Bachelors Ball on Friday evening last was a very enjoyable society event. Nearly all the invitations were accepted and the gathering was a large one. The new hall proved itself superior to the old one in its accommodation of a big crowd. The music was excellent, being supplied by four members of the Fernie orchestra. The refreshments served by the bachelors were of the best. Many new and exceedingly pretty gowns were worn by the ladies.

The Blairmore players resented such decisions and protested the game.

NOT FAR FROM KINGDOM

TAKE STEP THAT WILL MAKE YOU HAPPIER THAN WORLDLY SUCCESS.

SADDEST WORD IS "ALMOST"

"Not Far From the Kingdom" Is Just to Be As Irretrievably and Utterly Lost As If You Had Never Heard the Gospel at All—Dangers of Delay Vividly Portrayed By the Preacher.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 10.—The preacher in this sermon shows by illustration and incident that true and enduring happiness and satisfaction are not to be found in worldly success, but in embracing the offer of salvation through Christ. The text is Mark xii, 34, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God."

What is to you the saddest word in all the English language? Edgar Allan Poe, that brilliant genius of American literature, whose dissipations endungeoned him in a chamber of horrors as ghastly as that in which Thomas De Quincey was compelled to live and whose raven of delirium tremens sounded his death knell when he had just reached forty years of age, has made the word "nevermore" awful in its significance. In it we hear the black bird of demoniacal despair croaking a dirge. In it are heard the sobs of breaking hearts and are seen the ghostlike horrors of a living charnel house. "Nevermore! Nevermore! Nevermore!" To many that word will always be the saddest of all words.

Thomas Carlyle, the great English essayist and philosopher, the master of mighty sentences and prose master-pieces, dipped his pen in the reddest of all inks when he wrote the word "ought." The great author of the justly famous philosophical dissertation upon "The French Revolution" declared that the word "ought" is the saddest of all words. It has in it all the harsh and reverberating voices which run the gamut of remorse. Carlyle's conception of the Imperial force of that word "ought" had in it the thunder of Sinai, and to the offender recreant to duty it still sounded, mingled with the taunts of the fiends of the eternal inferno, deriding and mocking the miserable sufferer with the reminders of the bliss he might have enjoyed if he had done as he ought. Some have declared that the saddest of all words is "gone," others "death," others "despair." But to-day I want to call the attention to another word which I think is the saddest word ever uttered by man. It was that which King Agrippa spake to Paul when on the Roman tribunal of Caesarea Philippi he said: "Almost! Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." Ah, yes, King Agrippa was so near the kingdom of God that just one step forward would have changed him from a pagan into a humble and repentant follower of the Nazarene. But that one step was never taken. King Agrippa was "almost" persuaded to be a Christian, but his "almost" never brought him into safety and eternal life.

To-day I am going to try to help some of you to overcome that saddest of all words, "almost." I am going to show some of you that, like the scribe of my text, who came to question Jesus, you are "not far from the kingdom of God," but I am also going to show you that to be "almost" saved and yet not saved is to be lost completely and utterly lost. As the man whirling down the rapids of Niagara, who just misses by one inch the rope which is thrown for his rescue, so you who miss by a little the offer of redemption are as utterly lost as if you had never heard the offer. Nay, there is in your fate the unutterable sadness of being so near salvation and missing it after all. The loss of your soul is like the loss of life to the hunter whose rifle ball just misses the heart of the tiger that is leaping upon his defenseless body. It is to be lost just as much as were the poor fellows who were imprisoned a few years ago in the iron hulk of the steamers burning at the wharfs of Hoboken, in New York Harbor. Frantically they stood at the barred portholes. Frantically they stretched forth their arms through the iron gratings. They could see the blue waters of the harbor. They could hear the calls of the would be rescuers hard at work. But they were lost, entirely lost, though there was "only one step" between them and perfect safety.

Almost saved! Yes, you are. How do I know it? I learn how near you have come to salvation as I look at the entries on those white pages sewed between the Old and the New Testaments of the family Bible. By this record of the family births and deaths I find your father was a Christian. Your mother was a Christian. Your sisters and brothers were all Christians. I find also that your parents reconsecrated their lives for God's service when they held you before the sacred altar on the day you were baptized. It is a very easy matter for you to become a Christian, with such a family history as that. The son of a good doctor, all other conditions being equal, has at least ten years the advantage of a young man entering the medical profession who is not the son of a physician. The child who comes from a Christian home has a far greater chance of being a Christian than one who is not the son of a Christian, or than one who has never been brought by youthful association in contact with the Christian life.

"'Tis true," says some young man to me, "I was born in a Christian home. I am not near, however, but very, very far from the kingdom of God. Why, after I left my Christian home I seemed to be possessed not with seven devils, but seventy times seven devils. No sooner did I leave home and go away from mother and father and I plunged into a life of dissipation. I drank, I gambled, I blasphemed. I did everything I ought not to have done, and I left undone everything I ought to have done. It is said that when Lysimachus was fighting against the Getae he was entrapped by his enemies in the desert sands. His thirst became so great that he offered his whole kingdom for a drink of water, as Esau sold his birthright for a mess of pottage. But no sooner had Lysimachus slaked his thirst than he cried: 'Ah, wretched me, who for such a momentary gratification should have lost so great a kingdom.' Though I have been brought up in a Christian home, for the momentary satisfying of my evil desires I have stifled all those pure influences of the past. I am like a man who, to quench his thirst, has done more than to barter away a kingdom. I have bartered away my life. The chalice of sin which I have lifted to my lips was of poison. I feel it now, dulling my brain, dulling my heart, dulling my moral sensibilities. I feel as if I were already dead, for my nobler self has perished. Eternal life is lost to me."

Not so fast, brother; not so fast. You have flung yourself into the quagmire of sin, but by your very words of despair I know you are near to the kingdom. I have had in my time much experience with young men, and I have sometimes found that, like the prodigal who left his father's home for the far country, many young men reared in the best of homes have flung themselves into the seething whirlpool of sin. But these young men were like the prodigal also in that they came back to their father's home after they had spent their all. The golden cords of parental prayer are now tugging at your heart. Vilest of sinners you may have been; most heartless of wayward boys may have been your history, but to-day God is calling; your dead mother, your redeemed mother, is calling; your broken hearted father is calling: "Come, come, come home! Oh, sinner, come home!" Will you hear the cry? Way off in that far country of sin "thou are not far from the kingdom of God." Thou art not far from Christ, but near, on account of your early Christian home training.

Almost saved! Yes, you are. I know it by the unhappy looks that are chiseled in the wrinkles of your face. When you started out in life you thought the height of a man's happiness could be estimated by the length of his bank account. You thought the worldwide area of his joy could be always circumscribed only by the hemispheric spread of his fame. But now by bitter experience you know that wealth and fame only bring added cares. You know that if a man lives for himself alone, if he does not seek the higher joys of the soul, if he does not live for Christ, seeking also the welfare of his brother man, he can find no happiness on earth at all.

You think worldly success can bring true happiness? If it could, why did it not bring happiness to James G. Blaine, the "Henry Clay" of the latter part of the past century. Murat Halstead relates how he went to see Mr. Blaine in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York. The death pallor was on his cheek. In a few weeks his broken heart was to cease to beat. Mr. Blaine sat looking into the blazing fire. Murat Halstead could not say a word. His heart was too full. After the two friends sat thus for a short time, Mr. Blaine heaved a deep sigh as he said, "Oh, Halstead, I could have stood it all if I had not lost my two boys." He was finding then, as Hanna found, and as a host of famous men have found, that happiness and true satisfaction cannot be obtained from the world. The world misrepresents them, ridicules them and decries them, and, whether it gives them its prizes or not, it wounds and tortures them.

Oh, rich man! I appeal to your experience. Have you not realized that happiness is not in wealth? Have there not come times in your life when you have felt that money and honor and power alike fail to give you satisfaction? You are disappointed with your life. Turn to Christ, who says to such as you, "He that drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst again." Come to him. Thou art not far from the kingdom of God.

Almost saved! Yes, I know it. Why? For weeks, perhaps, you have been lying prostrate with a dangerous sickness near the dividing line, the crossing of which means the recreation and the spiritualization and the redemption of your life. That sick bed means to you in a spiritual sense what an invalid's bed meant in a physical sense to him sick of the palsy who was laid at Christ's feet. In the second chapter of Mark we read about the wonderful incident which took place in Capernaum. No sooner did the people of that city hear that Jesus had come than the multitudes began to gather about him. They crowded into the room where he was. They crowded the front yard of his residence. On the outskirts of the crowd we see a couple of men carrying between them one who was sick of the palsy. "Oh," they say to each other, "if we can only bring our brother to Christ, he will cure him." I think, from reading between the lines of this chapter, that the invalid himself did not care whether he saw Christ or not. He was too sick to care. His limbs hung limp and heavy. His eyelids dropped; the eyes were glassy. His skin was flabby and almost dead. But because the invalid was nine-tenths dead that made no difference to the two friends. As they could not push through the crowds who were jostling about the front door they climbed up to the roof of the house. They then let down the ropes and pulled the sick man up, bed and all. Then with their axes they broke open the door and lowered the sick man down through the roof to the feet of the Saviour, who, seeing their faith, said unto the sick of the palsy, "Son, thy sins be forgiven thee." And he arose. The loose muscles stiffened. The eyes became alert. The blood again coursed rapidly through the clogged arteries. He walked; yea, the sick man walked. He was healed by being placed, a hopeless, helpless invalid, at the feet of Jesus Christ.

Sickness has been a spiritual blessing to you, O man, as the palsy was to the invalid of old. It has placed you almost within touch of our Saviour and King. For years and years you did not know what a pain meant. When you heard people complaining about their invalidism you had no sympathy. You would petulantly say, "Nine-tenths of these so-called invalids are mere hypochondriacs. If men and women would only get up and stop their complaining and stop dosing themselves with medicines they would be all right." When a minister in church would preach from the text, "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee," you would settle back in your seat and smile. You would say to yourself: "Perhaps. Perhaps not. My ancestors were all long-lived. I guess I will be also." Then you would complacently pat your chest as you expanded your lungs three or four inches, and you would say: "Well, my ancestors never had a finer breathing apparatus than I have. Perhaps I shall die to-night. Perhaps not."

But two years ago there came that sudden attack of illness. It came almost without any warning at all. You remember how your cheek became as white as that of a corpse and your lips turned blue and cold. You remember how that pneumonia stabbed at your lungs, or how that typhoid made you sink so low that for weeks and weeks you hovered between life and death. You remember how asthma choked you until it seemed as though you would go mad with the agony. Aye, that sickness made out of you a changed man. When the minister now announces the text, Luke, twelfth chapter and twentieth verse, "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee," you do not flippantly say: "Perhaps. Perhaps not." You know it is not out of the range of possibilities that this night you may be brought face to face with God at the judgment seat of Christ. O man, even while I speak to-day all the good and the bad of your past life are flying swifter than the winds through your seething brain. Aye, they are flying as swiftly as the panorama of bygone years in a second of time moves before the vision of a drowning man. Your past sicknesses have changed your feelings toward God. The pain at your heart is warning you that "God shall bring every work unto judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil." This day—aye, this very minute—on account of that past sick bed, "thou art not far from the kingdom of God."

We all marvel at the wonderful ability of observation to which the trappers and the hunters of old were able to train their visual powers. For days and weeks the Indian scouts were able to follow their enemies across the western prairies. By the twisted blades of grass and by other minute signs they were able to tell how many Indians were in the war party ahead, how many horses and cattle and squaws and papooses. During the Austro-Prussian war in 1866 Archduke Joseph of Austria was warned of an imminent night attack by a gypsy soldier who was able to foresee the advance of the pursuing hosts by watching the birds fly over the Austrian encampment. This soldier said to Prince Joseph: "Your Highness, birds sleep as well as men. These birds would not be flying about at this time of night if they had not been disturbed. The enemy in large numbers is marching through the woods and has frightened them. There will soon be fighting on our front lines." But, though hunters and trappers have almost miraculous seeing powers in reference to the natural world, it does not take an inspired vision to see that we are now living in a time of great religious awakening. How else can you account for the thousands who, as converts, as giving their hearts to Jesus Christ under the consecrated labors of the evangelistic committee of the Presbyterian Church? How else can you account for the wonderful meetings of Campbell Morgan in America and of Torrey and Alexander in Australia and England, and the crowded schools for Bible study in Winona and Northfield and Chautauqua and Moody's Institute of Chicago? Everywhere the vital question is upon every lip, "What shall I then do with Jesus, who is called the Christ?" Like Pilate before the Jewish people, you must decide the question in reference to Jesus. You must decide for Christ or against Christ. And in bringing you up to this question I cannot be far wrong in stating that "thou art not far from the kingdom of God."

The last time Dwight L. Moody ever preached was at a great series of meetings being held in Convention Hall, Kansas City. Suddenly he broke down, and the doctors told him he must stop work at once. They bundled the great evangelist up and started him east for his Northfield home. But, though the doctors could silence his tongue, they could not keep still his pen. When they carried him to Northfield, with his weak fingers he wrote out a telegram to his Kansas City friends who were carrying on the meetings in his stead. His telegram went something like this: "Mr. So-and-so, Kansas City: Have reached home safely. Regret exceedingly being forced to leave. Had I been with you to-night I would have preached on, 'Thou art not far from the kingdom of God.' My prayer is that many may be led into the kingdom under Mr. Torrey's preaching." Oh, my friends, the redeemed lips of the sainted evangelist are pleading with you from this text in this service to-day. That same divine power which brought thousands and tens of thousands of sinners to the fountain of eternal life is pleading with you to come to Christ, even now while great multitudes are seeking him. Like King Agrippa, are you going to be "almost persuaded" and lost? Or like Paul, the "chief of sinners," are you to be coronated and to have a seat upon a throne in heaven with Jesus Christ?

Two Fools and A Woman

By F. B. WRIGHT

Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure

"The firemen's ball is going to be next week, and I want you to take me."

Thus spoke Gloriana McRay with a dewy tenderness in the depths of her dark eyes.

Coventry had intended leaving Yellow River at the week's end, but he hesitated.

"All the boys from the ranches are comin' in to it and the firemen off the road," said Glory persuasively. "It'll be a mighty swell fandango." She sighed and glanced at Coventry. "I'd sure like to dance with you onct—just to remember," she added with a wistful ring in her voice.

It would only be a few days longer, Coventry said to his conscience, and, besides, it would make good material for a sketch—this cowboy ball. As for Glory, "she'll forget me in a month or so," thought he. "Meanwhile where's the harm in it of a bit of flirtation with my western rose?"

It was to a jack rose that Coventry compared her on the night of the dance. The excitement and the swift motion had sent a warm, rich flush to her cheeks. The black masses of her hair were charmingly disordered and her eyes flashed and sparkled with pleasure. She was a good dancer, too, Coventry discovered, and even the clumsy, heavy footed cowboys who were at intervals her partners could not spoil the easy grace of her movements.

There had not been many of them. On the tawdry little dance card the initials "B. C." occurred very frequently after the numbers. Not all of them Coventry had danced. Some he had "sat out" on the upper porch of the hotel, with the moonlight silvering the sagebrush and softening the harsh contours of the distant buttes and inclining the heart of man to tender sentiment.

Glory never had enjoyed any dance as she had this, she told Coventry frankly, and her eyes more than said the same thing as she swayed and swung to his guiding beneath the hot lamps of the hotel dining room.

It was all rather interesting, Coventry thought in one of the intervals when his partner was dancing with some one else, but on the whole he was rather glad he was going to leave the next day. He had not told Glory he was going. There was no need of spoiling her fun. It was best for her that he went. Perhaps he had paid her too much attention; she did not realize the gulf between them, and besides she had been rather too demonstrative this night. That was one of the difficulties of an affair with a woman of such a simple, unsophisticated nature.

He looked at her critically as she swirled by, and she returned the look with a dazzling smile and a softening of the eyes that Coventry could not mistake—nor any one else, he feared. She was a beautiful woman, of an animal type, of course, but—

Coventry's thoughts were interrupted here. Some one had touched him on the shoulder.

It was a tall, fresh faced, brown haired young fellow, one of the outfit from the Three Forks ranch, as Coventry knew by name.

"I'd like to speak with you, if so you don't mind?" said the man. There was just the suggestion of a frown between his keen gray eyes.

"Certainly," replied Coventry. "Sit down."

"Not hyer. It's a little too promiscous hyer for what I've got to say. Maybe you wouldn't mind takin' a little paseur outside?"

Coventry rose and followed the man, and together they strolled down to the river's edge. There was a fallen log here, on which Coventry seated himself. "Fire away," he said, lighting a cigar. He offered one to his companion, but it was declined.

The man hesitated for a moment, as if he found it hard to commence.

"My name is Hackett," he said gravely. "Mort Hackett. Maybe you've heard it?"

Coventry bowed courteously.

"I hear tell," Mort continued, "that you're 'lowing to go back east tomorrow. Is that a fact?"

"Yes," answered Coventry. "Want me to do something for you back there?"

"No, I reckon not. It's somethin' hyer I want you to do. It's to answer a question. What are you goin' to do about Glory?"

"About Glory? What should I do about Glory? What do you mean?"

"You know right well what I mean. Are you going to marry the gal?"

"And may I ask, Mr. Hackett, in my turn, what affair it is of yours what I intend to do or not do?" said Coventry coolly. "Are you Miss McRay's guardian?"

"Maybe I be," returned the other quietly. "I reckon you've the right to know before you answer."

He put a foot on the log and looked down at the moon flecked river.

"You see, I love her," said he simply, "an' so I've got to know. I've been lovin' her this long time, since she fust come hyer a young gal. I'm a right awkward sort of a cuss, without manners, but I reckoned to ask her some day when I got fixed so's I could give her a home. And then—then you come hyer with your good looks an' your city ways an' your easy way of talkin' an' turned her head. I ain't beefin' about that—it's fair fightin' if you're playin' a square game, but are you?"

Coventry laughed pleasantly. "My dear man," he said, "make your mind easy. I've not the slightest notion of pretending to Miss McRay's hand. I go back east tomorrow and in all probability shall never see the girl again."

"An' yet you've been right familious with her sence you've been hyer—ridin' an' walkin' in the buttes an' sittin' out in the moonlight. There's been right smart talk."

"I'm not responsible for the talk if fools choose to make it," said Coventry impatiently. "I've done nothing more than I would with any pretty girl back east."

"Then you don't keer for her. Then what you said up thar on the porch warn't so?"

"Oh, come," Coventry replied. "You mustn't think that what a man says to a girl in the moonlight is gospel truth. The moonlight makes him a bit sentimental."

"An' the gal?"

"The girl too. A little flirtation does no harm, and the next day it's forgotten."

"It's forgotten—I see! You've just been havin' fun with her then—not meanin' anything—like they do back whar you come from."

"Exactly."

"An' you're a-goin' back an' leave her after makin' her love you. It maybe is all right in your section, but we don't call it square hyer—not with nice gals."

"But the girl doesn't care for me. She has a passing fancy perhaps, but that's all."

"Yit she let you kiss her thar on the porch tonight. I seen her."

Coventry arose angrily. "I'm not accustomed to have my"— he began, but Mort interrupted.

"I know you ain't, but you're goin' to be. I'll trouble you to set quiet thar while I talk. You come hyer an' meet a gal. She's a nice gal, an' a purty gal. She ain't never seen a man liken you—or heerd one. The men she knows ain't much on dancin' an' scrapin' an' bein' dressed up. They are just men—the men around these hyer parts.

"You know that gal is fallin' in love with you more an' more every day, an' yet you stay hyer. When she gives you what I ain't never even dared to ask her for; when she cares so much she ain't carin' who sees it, why, you gits ready to pull your freight for home an' forgit her offun your mind.

"It's a powerful curious world," Mort continued, with a grim smile. "It don't appear to be put together right somehow. Hyer I am lovin' the very groun' she steps on, an' she ain't carin' for me any more than for that same ground. An' she loves you, an' you"—

The man's face worked in the moonlight, and Coventry was genuinely sorry for him.

"It will be all right, old man," he said, "when I'm gone."

"You're not goin' away," Mort returned quietly, "leastways not until you've married Glory."

"Are you crazy?" Coventry cried.

"You made her love you. Well, now you're goin' to marry her."

"But if I won't?"

"Then I'm goin' to kill you!"

He said it quite calmly, and before Coventry realized the words he saw the moonlight glinting along the barrel of a revolver.

"Some men," said Mort, "would have put a bullet into you when you fust come hyer foolin' around, but I thought you was in earnest, an' Glory was happy."

"Do you mean to say you're going to murder me unless I agree to your crazy nonsense?"

"I don't know about murder. It ain't murder to kill a snake. But anyway I'm a-goin' to kill you unless you do as I say. You want to think mighty quick. I'm goin' to count ten, an' then"—

Coventry knew what would happen then, and he had an instant picture of all that would follow his refusal and a vivid sense of his folly.

"One—two—three"—the words fell steadily like strokes of a pendulum—"four—five"— There was a rustle of parting twigs, and Gloriana sprang out of the willows by the stream edge.

"Don't shoot, Mort!" she cried as she sprang between the men, and then she said something which stings Coventry even to this day when he thinks of it.

"Do you suppose I care for him," she cried, pointing disdainfully at Coventry—"him?" Again came the accent which hurt. "It was you I cared for all along, only you wouldn't speak, an' I had to make you jealous so you would, only I didn't think it would come to shootin'. I want a man, an' I've got him!"

Mr. Coventry didn't stay for the wedding. He went home, as he intended, the next day, but in telling his adventures in the west he says nothing about how he was used as a stalking horse.

Who Supported Atlas?

Not long ago the genial superintendent of a public school was asked by one of his youthful friends to listen to the latter's rehearsal of a lesson in which there was a reference to Atlas.

"Do you know who Atlas was?" asked the superintendent.

"Yes, sir. He was a giant who supported the world."

"Ah! Supported the world, did he?" went on the superintendent. "Well, tell me who supported Atlas?"

The little fellow looked as though he had not given the subject any particular attention, but showed immediate willingness to think it over. The superintendent stood looking on, trying hard to keep back a smile, but the youngster finally brightened up and answered:

"Well, I think he must have married a rich wife."

MASSAGING THE SCALP.

It Is the Root of All Systems of Stimulating the Hair's Growth.

The massage of the scalp is at the root of all treatment of the hair. By stimulating the flow of blood to the scalp new vigor is given to the hair. Without this massage hair restoratives are of little avail.

Now this massage may be better done by a masseur than by the man or woman who is growing bald, but it is possible for that individual to massage his own scalp well enough to do the hair a great deal of good.

The hands should be half folded and the ends of the fingers made to touch the scalp lightly. Then rub them slowly over the scalp.

It is convenient to begin at the back of the neck and rub the scalp slowly up the center of the head to the forehead. Then the rubbing should be done all over the head from one side of the scalp to the other. It should be repeated several times.

The same glow that the expensive fingers of the masseur produce follows, showing that the circulation in the scalp has been stimulated. The fingers should be pressed on the scalp with sufficient force to cause the blood to tingle.

TIDAL WAVES.

The Forces Which Start These Dangerous Volumes of Water.

The ocean tidal wave—sometimes called the primitive—is formed by the union of two waves, produced by the combined attractions of the sun and the moon. This wave in its most dangerous form sometimes sweeps over ships in the open sea and in its ordinary course produces the tides proper.

Where the outline of the land, as in the bay of Fundy and the Bristol channel, compresses the force of its flood with narrow estuaries it also gives rise to tidal waves, which are termed derivative and are also known colloquially as "bores," or eagres.

Earthquakes are also a cause of tidal waves of two sorts. One is due to shocks which occur on land and cause a retreat and reflux of the sea within the usual tidal limits, but where an earthquake shakes the sea bed a dome shaped mount of water rises over the center of the disturbance and draws the surrounding water into the vortex beneath it. As this dome subsides it sends an immense rolling mass swinging across the ocean, which creates a most formidable tidal wave.

THE SWEETEST ECHO.

It Answers a Call at a Tomb at Agra, In Hindustan.

One of the finest echoes of which we have record is mentioned by Barthius, in his notes on the Thebais of Statius. This was on the banks of the Naha, between Coblenz and Bingen, where an original sound was repeated seventeen times.

At Milan is an echo which reiterates the report of a pistol from fifty to sixty times. In a cave of the Pantheon it is said that the guide, by flapping his coat, makes a noise equal to the report of a twelve pounder. Pliny speaks of a cave in Dalmatia where a stone tossed in would raise a perfect storm.

The sweetest echo in all the world answers a call at the side of the tomb of Nur-Mahal dud Jehanhgir, at Agra. The guide raises the cry, "Great is God, and Mohammed is his prophet—Allah! Allah!" At first three distinct musical notes are heard in the echo, which reverberate round the dome and ascend until they reach the smaller dome, where they reunite and escape from the temple as one tone.

A Feeble Imitator.

Albert Vandam, a French writer, gives this description of one of the leading republicans of Gambetta's time: "Bizoin had a tendency to imitate the great Napoleon. He who had joined Lamartine in his vigorous protest against the removal of Napoleon's ashes from St. Helena to Paris struck Napoleonesque attitudes at the camp of Conlie when reviewing the troops or the undisciplined, woebegone masses, standing knee deep in mud, who were supposed to represent troops. He trudged up and down the lines with his hands behind him, then came to a sudden stop and, nodding his head, whispered (he had no voice), 'Soldiers, I am pleased with you.'"

Unique Advertising.

Some of the Japanese tradesmen in the smaller towns of Nippon have a curious way of advertising their business. On their right forearms they tattoo figures—the shoemaker a shoe, the woodcutter an ax, the butcher a cleaver. Underneath these emblems are such inscriptions as, "I do my work modestly and cheaply," or "I am as good at my trade as most of my fellows." When they are hunting work they bare their arms and walk about the streets.

His Greatest Sorrow.

Burt—I have no doubt you are sorry about your uncle's death, notwithstanding it brought you into a lot of money. West—Yes; he was doing a good business, you know, and if he had lived a year or two longer he might have left me a good deal more.

Only on the Outside.

"Why, Ethel, you don't mean to tell me you want to marry that baldheaded Professor Wiseman?"

"It is true he is bald," said Ethel, "but think how many young men of today are bald on the inside of their heads."

To please, one must make up his mind to be taught many things which he already knows, by people who do not know them.

LONDON NEWS.

PAN-PRESBYTERIAN CONFERENCE.

Sir H. Taschereau Succeeds in His Mission.—Captain Mahan on Imperial Federation.—Newfoundland Fisheries Conference.

A correspondent in London sends the following:—At the Pan-Presbyterian conference Dr. Caven opened a discussion on the deficiency of probationers in the ministry. If the present decline continues there would soon be two few pastors for the churches. In the States the candidates were 203 less than what they were a few years ago, and in Canada the supply did not equal the demand and the same state of affairs existed in Scotland, England and in Germany. The chief cause of the trouble was the tempting offer made by commerce and the theological difficulties of young men. Dr Moffatt said that one cause of the deficiency was that the parents no longer kept prominently before the children the prospects of the ministry. The question was referred to the business committee.

Since the education committee of the London county council started a correspondence plan with the London schools and distant parts of the empire 1,330 children are corresponding with Canada, Australia and South Africa.

The parishioners of the Witton parish church, Northwich, decided to place a brass tablet in the church as a memorial to the late Mrs. Binney, widow of the late Bishop Binney, of Nova Scotia.

A conference of the Newfoundland fisheries held a meeting July 6, in the colonial office. Sir Thomas Sanderson, of the foreign office, and Sir R. Bond were present.

Mr. Farquharson, M. P., on behalf of the Scottish Liberal members of the house of Commons, presented Capt. Sinclair, on the occasion of his forthcoming marriage to Lord Aberdeen's daughter, with a silver bowl and a three handled cup.

Sir H. Tashereau, speaking to the Canadian Associated Press said: "I have succeeded in obtaining the solution of the complaint of the Canadian bar re certain delays required by the present privy council. The solution will prove most satisfacory to Canadians. After the present session the objectional posting method now in vogue will be abolished. In some cases this will save six months.' Sir H. Taschereau said that the question of the abolition of English solicitors was not raised, and that they had rights which had to be respected.

Captain Mahan, speaking at a banquet given in his honor by the Imperial Federation committee at the Trocadero, said that in the matter of Imperial federation it behooved a foreigner to speak with moderation. Interest in the Imperial movement was great in America because of the analogy the question bore to those Americans had to deal with. It was largely to the interest of the United States that England and the English-speaking colonies should exert their power as one great nation and in union with the United States. Under the ideal of Imperial federation both these great civilizing forces were moving toward the period when all the nations of the world should live at peace with one another.

Right Hon. Mr. Balfour, replying to G. Bowles, M.P., re the ratification of the Newfoundland treaty, asked for a delay of ten days before replying. The present time was inopportune to answer across the floor of the house the scope of the forthcoming deliberations.

At the National Union of Conservatives association at Southampton, F. L. Harris, M.P., moved that the time had now come when his Majesty's government should invite representatives of our colonial possessions to arrive at a mutual arrangment promote inter-Imperial trade by a reciprocal preferential tariff within the empire.

Gibson Bowles, M.P., will ask the first lord of the treasury if conferences were held at the foreign office between British, Canadian and Russian delegates regarding the proposed British defence of certain Russian islands in the Behring Sea; if a Japanese delegation was present; and asks that the correspondence of the subject be laid on the table, in view of the derogation of the law of nations by a neutral power.

Chicago Cattle Experts.

The eyes of American cattlemen and capitalists interested in the world's beef supply are becoming more and more directed to the Canadian west as the district from which they must draw their meat supply of the future. To gather definate information about the possibilities and advantages of this country from the stockman's stand point is the mission of two Chicago newspaper men who have just arrived in Winnipeg. Messrs. John C. Shaver and George A. King have been deputed by the Chicago Live Stock World to visit all parts of western Canada, and they are now in Winnipeg gleaning preliminary facts for their readers, before starting west and south to other live stock centres. Both these gentlemen report the greatest possible interest among American agriculturists in the future of this portion of the Dominion. The Chicago Live Stock World, which is a daily paper, has as its managing editor, Mr. J. S. Poole, a Winnipeg newspaper man, well remembered by the old timers.

Ten thousand Indian children are being educated in nearly 300 Canadian schools.

PLANTING A FAMILY.

Art Reduced to a Science by Canada's Agents in the Northwest—Good Humor as Capital.

This art of planting a family where none has grown before has reached a high degree of development in Western Canada. The evolution of the business is interesting—this preliminary foundation of Empire construction. The perfection of the system may be understood from Immigration Agent Smith's statement to me that in four days last year 2,100 individuals from foreign lands passed through his office and were distributed to salaried positions. In less than 96 hours this number of people were made independent and placed on the higaway to permanent gomes. Imagine the comprehensive nature of an organization that definitely settles a crowd of this magnitude in so short a time!

And yet this is no record work in Winnipeg. It is going on constantly five to seven months of the year with less noise and less display than may be witnessed in any 6 o'clock rush on Yonge street. The marvelous part is that with few exceptions none of these people so rapidly sent out of the immigration building had the slightest idea where they wanted to go five minutes before the interpreters began to talk with them. To go west and get a job—any kind of a job—that is the limit of the average immigrant's ambition for the time. This is the temporary resort. They begin to broaden later.

The student of the various aspects of the problem will see in the scattering of these crowds into the agricultural districts the best evidence of an easy solution of the usual difficulties. Unlike the European immigrants who are landing at the big cities of the States, these people have no opportunity to settle down in the foreign colonies of the congested municipalities. Seldom does one locate in Winnipeg. Their idea is that their home shall be somewhere out beyond where the sky seems to go down west of Winnipeg. They are routed to this point and understand in a vague sort of way that from here they are to be distributed to places of employment "in the west." In turning the tide out over the great prairies in the first place Canada is averting many of the serious features incident to the rush of the new blood encountered by the States.

A Day's Receipts.

And the machinery that accomplishes this tremendous part of the game does not appear so complex. The human cogs seem to work into each other with mechanical exactness. This morning two trains of eleven coaches each steamed into the depot. Each car held 64 people. With the exception of a hundred Russian Jews all were from different sections of England—mostly London, Birmingham and Liverpool. The trains arrived at daylight. The men were held in the coaches two hours. Before noon there was no unusual excitement around the station. The only thing that remained to remind the casual observer that a thousand immigrants had just completed their long journey was great piles of boxes and bags of personal effects around the platform. Most of the men had been given temporary accommodations at a big frame building adjacent. This speed would not be possible, however, where the newcomers consisted of Galicians and those from remote sections of Europe.

At several tables clerks skilfully classify the men. The questions are direct and few—name, former residence, what previous experience as a farmer and age.

"A man who knows enough to feed and clean and harness a horse is in the farmer class," observed one of the agents to me, "and you would be surprised to learn just how many grown men don't have this simple requisite. Some of these chaps scarcely know which end of a horse to put the halter on, to say nothing about whether the animals eats wheat, oats or potatoes."

Like the Scotch Boys.

These English boys from the great cities make up in energy and alertness what they lack in knowledge. It is the experience of the department here that they learn rapidly, but the Scotch boy is most in demand of those who come from the other side. He combines sturdy qualities with an ambition and quickness that makes the class much sought for by those in need of farm hands or other kind of manual labor. The Europeans do not seek farm work nor homesteads the first year. They have an invariable system—to secure employment if possible in railroad construction the first year and seek a homestead near by. The scheme has proven quite practical. The best evidence of the soundness of the plan is that many men who have passed through the Winnipeg immigration office in the past year or two are this year applying to the authorities to have farm hands sent them this spring.

Good Humor as Capital.

In the rush for free homes the man with the smiling face has got more than the best of it. Among these discriminating students of human nature a good disposition can be capitalized. The speed with which men are picked out for different positions is necessarily swift here. The surface indications must largely guide the judgment. General Agent Smith says he does not hesitate to advise the selection of the chap who combines a smile with other acceptable qualities. He instanced a young Scot who passed through last year. He observed the boy in the line. He was dancing a jig and bubbling over with good nature. A friend wanted a good man for his ranch. He called the Scotchman out, questioned him and sent him on. The other day his friend dropped in to say he was the best hired man within a hundred miles of Medicine Hat. He was a waif and a pauper, but he could capitalize his smile. Backed by intelligence and muscle it has a high commercial value among these strenuous men of the West.—G. C. Porter, in Toronto World.

NOT ONE TO SPARE.

"Which shall it be? Which shall it be?"
I looked at John—John looked at me
(Dear, patient John, who loves me yet
As well as though my locks were jet);
And when I found that I must speak
My voice seemed strangely low and weak.
"Tell me again what Robert said."
And then I, listening, bent my head.
"This is his letter: 'I will give
A house and land while you shall live,
If, in return, from out your seven
One child to me for aye is given.'"
I looked at John's old garments worn,
I thought of all that John had borne
Of poverty and work and care,
Which I, though willing, could not share;
I thought of seven mouths to feed,
Of seven little children's need,
And then of this: "Come, John," said I,
"We'll choose among them as they lie
Asleep": so, walking hand in hand,
Dear John and I surveyed our band.
First to the cradle lightly stepped,
Where Lillian, the baby, slept,
Her shining curls, like gold slight,
A glory 'gainst the pillow white.
Softly the father stooped to lay
His rough hand down in a gentle way,
When dream or whisper made her stir,
And huskily he said, "Not her!"
We stooped beside the trundle-bed,
And one long ray of lamplight shed
Athwart the boyish faces there,
In sleep so pitiful and fair;
I saw on Jamie's rough, red cheek
A tear undried. Ere John could speak,
"He's but a baby, too," said I,
And kissed him as we hurried by.
Pale, patient Robbie's angel face
Still in his sleep bore suffering's trace.
"No, for a thousand crowns, not him!"
He whispered, while our eyes were dim.
Poor Dick! bad Dick, our wayward son,
Turbulent, reckless, idle one—
Could he spared? Nay, He who gave
Bids us befriend him to his grave;
Only a mother's heart can be Patient enough for such as he.
"And so," said John, "I would not dare
To send him from our bedside prayer."
Then stole we softly up above
And knelt by Mary, child of love.
"Perhaps for her 'twould better be,"
I said to John. Quite silently
He lifted up a curl that lay
Across her cheek in wilful way,
And shook his head, "Nay love; not thee."
The while my heart beat audibly.
Only one more, our eldest lad,
Trusty and truthful, good and glad—
So like his father. "No, John, no,
I cannot, will not, let him go."
And so we wrote, in courteous way,
We could not give one child away;
And afterward toil lighter seemed,
Thinking of that of which we dreamed,
Happy in truth that not one face
Was missed from its accustomed place;
Thankful to work for all the seven,
Trusting the rest to One in heaven.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES.

Workingmen's Paper Wants Civic Beauty Conserved and Enhanced.

At great expense the civic corporation and private citizens have done much in recent years to beautify the city, and the result has been most gratifying and favorably commented upon, both by residents and visitors.

Still, more might be done in the line already adopted, with but little expense on the part of the city or individuals; but in a direction involving absolutely no expense no move has been made.

Who with an eye for beauty or an abhorrence of outrageous ugliness can have failed to notice the ragtown appearance the city presents for weeks preceding the advent of the annually-looked-for circus? Great flaming streamers are tacked all over buildings, even on the main streets, windows are disfigured with flaring pictures of impossible performances, and the billboards made to look so loud that they can be heard blocks away.

The result is unmitigated ugliness, without the slightest excuse therefor.

Billboards in their normal state are an eyesore, and should be done away with by a city bylaw, as was done in Cleveland. In that city the owners refused to remove their abominations in accordance with the city's orders, so Mayor Tom Johnston had them chopped down and carted away, and the result was less ugliness and more beauty.

Another feature offensive to good taste is the glaring advertisements of the patent medicine fakirs on the blank walls and buildings of business places and private houses. There is no reason why the city should allow these to be used for other than the announcement, in a decent and reasonable way, of the business of the occupant.

Then there is the overhanging sign nuisance and backwoods, huckstering way of displaying goods outside their windows and doors—sometimes the displays being disgusting to the sight as well as malodorous, and always looking out of place.

Occupants of property have a right to use their premises up to the street line, and not one inch farther. If one man appropriates a foot, another will take two and a third three, greatly to the inconvenience of pedestrians.

Why should all these things be permitted? The nuisance is apparent, the city gains no advantage, and the growing beauty of the city is marred.

What lover of decency in the City Council will take the initiative?—Toronto Toiler.

First G.W.R. Engine.

The Galt Reporter states that the first locomotive engine on the Galt branch of the Great Western Railway arrived upon the line on Monday last with a load of rails for the track. The workmen are now engaged in laying the rails, and there is a prospect that the road will soon be opened.

The disastrous accident which took place a few days ago on the Great Western Railroad was occasioned by a cow attempting to run under the third car, which threw it off the track and precipitated it down an embankment of seventy feet, causing the death of seven persons, three fatally wounded and several severely injured. No blame attached to the conductor.—From The Globe, June 8, 1854.

A Sarcastic Parson.

During the crofter disturbances in Skye a British gunboat was sent up to Portree, having on board, among other people, the sheriff of Inverness-shire, Mr. Ivory. A clergyman who sympathized with the crofters took for his text on the following Sunday the words from Kings 10, 22: "Once in three years came the navy of Tarshish, bringing ivory and apes and peacocks."

"QUAKER GUNS."

Russians Complain that the Japanese Fool Them with Wooden Guns.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Telegraph says that the Russians complain that the Japanese employ a number of wooden articles painted to resemble cannon, which, now that smokeless powder is used, are often mistaken for genuine guns. On them the Russians concentrate a scathing fire, while the real guns are screened from view and a few minutes' start in an artillery attack means some times all the difference between victory and defeat. The Japanese owe many of their successes to their "quaker" guns.

Siberian Cities in Straits.

Siberian cities are in straits on account of the war, and the interrupted import of commodities. Nikolaiev at the mouth of the Amoor river, is out of oil, gas, and tallow, and pretty nearly out of coal. Other and smaller towns are in similar extremity with the outlook for their replenishing not so promising as it might be. Night in these towns and reigons lasts all winter, when it sets in, and lack of oil would be a situation not to be thought of with anything like composure. War risks on shipments there in Hamberg and London are 20 guineas per cent., and the underwriters still not thinkibg them high enough. What little business is being done in war risks to Japanese ports shows no advance in rates, the situation in that country as to provisioning being comparatively favorable—in fact, about as good as it is on an average.

The life of an eyelash is from a hundred to a hundred and fifty days. They grow very slowly, but finger nails grow quite rapidly in comparison. If a person could live without breaking or cutting his nails for a lifetime they would attain a length of seventy-three inches. It takes about a hundred and twenty-one days for a new nail to form on the little finger and a hundred and thirty-eight on the thumb.

England's Policy.

A London cable says:—The Associated Press learns from a high British source that exchanges of views are taking place between America and Great Britain with respect to Tibet. Being a dependency of China the fate of Tibet is of considerable importance, especially to America, not because Americans have any interests of value in that country, but because its acquisition by any power would mean a violation of the principle of the intregity of China which is the keynote of Secretary of State Hay's far eastern policy, to which Great Britain has given adherence. Mr. Hay therefore, has watched with the closest attention the British treatment of the Tibetan question, and it is believed through Ambassador Choate has delicately presented the possible bearing of the British military procedure on Chinese integrity. Itais understood that the British government frankly disavowed any ulterior purpose regarding Tibetan territory, reiterating that it has no intention to permanently occupy Tibet, and that Great Britain's motives are those already proclaimed to the whole world. In view of this declaration the British government announces that Brigadier-General Macdonald's expedition is expected to retire, so soon as the purpose for which it was organized has been achieved.

Read Riot Act.

A despatch from Sydney C. B., July 6, says,—The 63rd Rifles and the 66th Fusilliers, numbering 200 men, under command of Lt.-Col. Irving, arrived from Halifax this morning to assist the local milita in protecting the plant and employees of the Dominion Steel company. Immediately upon their arrival the riot act was read by the stipendiary magistrate and the strikers ordered to disperse, which they did without the least sign of resistance. The city is now under militaty rule with Lt.-Col Irving, D. O. C., in command. The best of order prevails among the strikers and they take the new phase of the situation good naturedly.

FROM SCOTLAND.

Glasgow Chamber of Commerce on Cattle Embargo.

A Glasgow, Scotland correspondent sends the following:—Douglas MacKinnon Baillie Hamilton, C.B., C.V.O., twelfth Earl of Dundonald and Baron Cochrane of Renfrew, who has been the cause of so much talk in Canadian political and military circles, comes of an old Scottish family, and in nowhere is his career watched with greater interest than in Ayrshire, where the old castle of his forefathers may yet be seen. He has had a military lifetime of great brilliance, is one of Scotland's representative peers, and the inventor of a gun carriagel Among his ancestors was Admiral Lord Cochrane, his grandfather, who as a sailor made a great name for himself in the navies of Great Britain, Brazil, Chili and Peru. When Lord Dundonald went to Canada we congratulated the Dominion on having obtained the services of a clever man and an able soldier. As to this, we have not altered our opinion one whit, as we believe his rupture with the political authorities to be simply a misunderstanding.

Chambers of Commerce and farmers' associations seem determined not to let the agitation for the repeal of the laws preventing the landing of Canadian store cattle die out. Many a dash of cold water has the agitation got from the home government, but still it lives, apparently as hopeful as ever. Glasgow Chamber of Commerce wrote this week to Lord Onslow, President of the Board of Agriculture, urging once more that there was next to no danger of cattle from Canada bringing contagious disease to this country, and adding that, as it was the acknowledged policy of the nation to admit imports, there should be no restriction on any one class of imports without some very good reason. Over in Dundee the Canadian Cattle Importation Association have had a meeting, and they have almost decided not to support any candidates for parliament who will not promise to support the repeal of the regulations. So we shall arrive by and by, and we will yet see the time when Canadian cattle will be landed as free as Canadian grain now is, to live and be fed in Scotland.

The movement in favor of commorating the four hundredth anniversary of the birth of John Knox—which is alleged to take place next year— promises to bear fruit. St. Giles', the High Kirk of Edinburgh, from the pulpit of which the great reformer thundered his denounciations of Popery and Prelacy and all the vice of his age, has no indication whatever of his association with it, and the proposal is that a monument should be placed in one of the aisles There is considerable doubt as to the exact date of Knox's birth, and even as to the year, but the churches have agreed to celebrate the anniversary in May next, before which time it is hoped the monument will be ready. The monument is to be in the form of a Gothic pedestal and niche seventeen feet in height with a figure of Knox six feet in height placed on it. The scheme will cost about £1,350, but of this £1,150 has already been subscribed.

ARMY REFORM IN ENGLAND.

Most Drastic Measures Said to Be in Contemplation.

The London Express says: The reconstruction of the army, which is a counterpart to war office reconstitution, is still engaging the attention of the Government, but an early statement will be made by Mr. Arnold-Forster on the subject. The most drastic measure contemplated is a general reduction among regiments possessing more than two battalions. The Guards are included, and it is likely that the whole battalion of the Third Scots will be struck off the establishment. The reason lies in the paucity of recruits, the brigade of Guards being 1,100 men and over 30 officers short. The Irish Guards are not to have their contemplated second battalion, and the Grenadiers and Coldstreams will probably lose 100 men each. Great efforts are to be made under the direction of Major-General H. S. G. Miles, to reorganize the recruiting for the army. He will be assisted by Colonel Crutchley of the Guards; Captain C. Mansel-Jones, V.C., and Major Dykes. The general improvements which will be effected includes the following: Better barracks and more allowances; greater freedom to soldiers; lodging list to be extended; khaki to be superseded by a more becoming cloth; a better head-dress for walking out; long and short service; a new territorial organization; complete scheme for home defence work; creation of a real army reserve. For the present Mr. Arnold-Forster will be unable to make any satisfactory statement with regard to the application of the Esher reforms to the regeneration of the War Office. The deadlock with the treasury continues, and the scheme for the establishment of a general staff, or brain of the army for war, is suspended, because the treasury have refused to find the money. No further appointments are, therefore, being gazetted at present.

British Railway Business.

A Parliamentary paper just issued in England contains a summary of the railway returns of the United Kingdom for 1903, compared with the two preceding years. The total mileage in 1903 was 22,380 miles; in 1902, 22,152 miles; in 1901, 22,078 miles. The paid-up capital totaled, roundly, $6,220,000,000 in 1903, $6,080,000,000 in 1902 and $5,975,000,000 in 1901.

The number of passengers carried, exclusive of season-ticket holders, was 1,194,000,000 in 1903, 1,188,000,000 in 1902 and $1,172,000,000 in 1901. The number of season-ticket holders was 592,000 in 1902 and 618,000 in 1903. The total gross receipts in 1903 were roundly $550,000,000; in 1902, $545,000,000; in 1901, $525,000,000.

The increase of capital is comparatively so much greater than the growth in mileage and divisible profits as to be considered in financial circles a serious menace to the future prosperity of the railway companies. The gain of receipts from passenger traffic in 1903 was mainly from the third-class; the first-class showed a decline, indicative of hard times.

Birds' Big Appetites.

If a man could eat as much in proportion to his size as a sparrow is able to consume he would need a whole sheep for dinner, a couple of dozen fowls for breakfast, and six turkeys for his evening meal. A tree-sparrow has been known to eat 700 grass seeds in a day. Birds can and do work far harder than human beings. A pair of house-martins when nesting will feed their young on an average once in twenty seconds—that is, each bird, male and female, makes ninety journeys to and fro in an hour, or perhaps 1,000 a day. It must be remembered that on each journey the bird has the added work of catching an insect. Even so tiny a bird as the wren has been counted to make 110 trips to and from its nest within 30 minutes, and the prey it carried home consisted of insects much larger and heavier than were caught by swallows.

Little Unction In It.

John Morley, the biographer of Gladstone, being commended for the serious teaching of his writings, said laughingly: "No; that is all wrong. You remember the French story of the monk who was a great friend of the devil—quite an old story. One Sunday the monk found himself too ill to preach, and the devil appearing in the sacristy he persuaded that obliging person to go into the pulpit and harangue the congregation. The devil preached a most masterly sermon, covering himself with shame and confusion. 'How now,' said the monk when the devil came down. 'You have pretty nearly ruined yourself with that sermon.' 'Oh, dear, no,' answered the devil; 'no harm done, no harm done. There was no unction to it.' Well, there is little unction in my poor books."

The Dead Sea.

There are no fishes in the Dead Sea—no life of any kind. The percentage of solids in the water is enormous—about 26 per cent. The principal solid ingredients are the chlorides of sodium, magnesium and calcium. The deepest part of the Dead Sea's bed lies 2,600 feet below the level of the Mediterranean; its depth there is 1,310 feet. Oddly enough, it has a cloud system of its own, for one may frequently see cloud banks lying over the Dead Sea which are 600 or 700 feet below the level of the ocean.—Chicago News.

"College men," replied Mark, after a moment's thought, "college men and convicts."

TO PAY HEAVY DAMAGES

Victoria, July 16—The trial of the Centre Star Mining Company's action against the Rossland Miners Union, was completed late this afternoon resulting in a verdict against the Miners' Union, damages being assessed at $12,500.

The jury decided that the Miners' Union maintained and assisted in maintaining a strike by molesting, intimidating men who were working for the plaintiffs, or for other mine owners of Rossland with a view to inducing them to cease from so working; by inducing or attempting to induce men who were willing to enter contracts of service with plaintiffs or with other mine owners of Rossland to work for them, to rerain from so working, by furnishing strike pay, or other relief or assistance; by unlawfully watching and besetting the premises of the plaintiffs and other mine owners, and the roads and railway stations, and that they maliciously conspired together to molest and intimidate the plaintiffs in carrying on their business. The jury did not find that there had been any interference with mining contracts.

Written arguments respecting the judgment are to be submitted by counsel later.

NOTICE.

RESPECTING COAL AND PETROLEUM LANDS IN SOUTH-EAST KOOTENAY.

Notice is hereby given that licenses to prospect for coal and petroleum upon and under lands situated within Block 4,593, South-East Kootenay, will be issued forthwith to all persons who have made proper application, in pursuance of the provisions of the "Coal Mines Act" and amendments.

The fee for each license is $100, and all applicants who have not deposited accepted bank cheques to cover that amount are hereby required to do so without further notice.

Licenses will be issued in the following form, viz:—

MINING LICENCE ISSUED UNDER THE COAL MINES ACT AND AMENDMENTS.

In consideration of one hundred dollars now paid under the said Acts, and subject to the provisions thereof, I, W. S. Gore, Deputy Commissioner, acting for the Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works, license to enter, prospect, search and work for coal and petroleum (but no other metal or mineral) upon, in and under all that piece or parcel of mineral land situate in and forming part of Block 4,593, East Kootenay District, and described as follows:— and not exceeding in the whole six hundred and forty statute acres.

Owing to the number of applicants for licenses to prospect for coal and petroleum, and the peculiar circumstances surrounding the application for and issuance of these licenses, and the well-known fact that the issuance has been unavoidably suspended for so many months, the Government of British Columbia finds it impossible to determine the equitable rights of the numerous applicants. Therefore, for the purpose of enabling all persons to go before the proper tribunal for the determination of their respective rights and priorities, this license is issued and accepted subject to such prior rights of other persons as may exist by law, and the date of this license is not to be taken or held as in any sense determining such priority, and further it shall not be taken or held to waive enquiry by the Courts into the proper performance of all conditions precedent as between adverse claimants; and further, on the understanding that the Government shall not be held responsible for, or in connection with, any conflict which may arise with other claimants of the same ground, and that under no circumstances will license fees be refunded.

And the holder hereby waives any claim or demand against the government, and expressly agrees not to take any steps or proceeding, or present any petition, to enforce any alleged claim or demand against the Government of the province of British Columbia arising out of the issuance of this license or any other matter or thing appertaining thereto.

The land being under reserve from pre-emption and sale this license does not include any right other than the right to prospect for coal and petroleum.

The duration of this licence is for one year from the , 190.

TO BACHELORS.

There are some hhndreds of thousands more men than women in the Central and Western States of Amerlca and in Canada.

As a result thousands of trustworthy men—Farmers, Miners and others—living in certain districts there cannot possibly get wives in their own neighborhoods.

But in England' Scotland, Ireland and Wales there are a million more women then men and, in these Countries, thousands of good, intelligent and attractive girls—many of them daughters of farmers and all of them qualified to make excellent wives—see nothing before them while they stay here but the prospect of living and dying as old maids and this, to them, is a decidedly unpleasant prospect. They would willingly emigrate to America, could they be assured that they were going to meet worthy men there as husbands, and that they could look forward to happy, if humble, homes on the other side of the Atlantic.

We may say that all of them could afford to emigrate at their own expense.

We are prepared to give good men introductions to these girls.

If you wish to get an intraduction please write us with such particulars of yourself (age, nationality, occupation and circumstances) as a sensible girl would expect to get and we shall write you in reply, with a view to bringing about a suitable introduction without undue delay.

Tell us what kind of a wife, (age, nationality, appearance, and disposition) you wish to get.

If you have preference for any particular Christian Sect please names it.

You will also enclose our Fee of 5 Dollars, A further Fee of 45 Dollars will be due us within one month after marriage, thus making 50 Dollars altogether. We do not confine ourselves to one introduction. We give as many as will be necessary until marriage. But we make no charge for any introduction after the payment of our said Fee of 5 Dollors for the first.

It is not at all necessary that you should be a wealthy man.

But it is necessary that you be a man who would make a kind and good husband to a good wife.

If you are not such a man please do not write us.

SERIOUS FOREST FIRE.

THE TOWN OF FERNIE THREATENED BY FLAMES.

Fire From G. N. Right-of-Way Swept West Fernie. Elk Lumber Co. Heavy Losers.

A terrible bush fire which threatened not only the destruction of many millions of feet of timber but the very existence of the town of Fernie broke out on the west side of the Elk River opposite Fernie last Saturday at about 10 a. m. The fire it is claimed, spread from the right of-way clearing for the Great Northern construction about a mile and a half south of the town. The wind which had been more or less strong during the preceding night increased in the morning hours to a stiff gale, blowing directly up the river.

The fire ran quickly over the right-of-way slashing and in a twinkling was spreading over the slashing of The Elk Lumber and Manufacturing Company. The high wind drove the fire over the dry bush with irresistable fury. The smoke rolled upwards in dense black clouds darkening the sun and making an impressive sight not soon to be forgotten by the towns-people who became alarmed for the safety of the town. Considerable damage was done to residential property on the west side. John Beaumont lost his cabin. J. Rease lost his cabin, and a stable belonging to Thos. Plante was burned but his cabin was saved. L. R. Forbes and J. Podbielancik had a hard fight to save their residences, and later in the day J. Turner's chicken house and W. Hanley's stable were burned. Mr. Turner's house was saved after a hard struggle.

In an hour or two the flames were encrouching on the green timbers to the north where the limits of the Elk Lumber and Manufacturing Co., join those of the Fernie Lumber Co. Owing to recent rains and the absence of underbrush the fire did not make great headway, though it was feared by many that the wind was so strong that the flames would sweep everything before it.

Shortly after noon the wind veered to the west, blowing the smoke direct to the town. The fire tacked against the wind in the underbrush towards the mill of the Elk Company, and finally in spite of the efforts of the mill men it ignited a huge pile of logs on the river bank. It was at this time that the danger to the town manifested itself and the assistance of every available man was sought to patrol the river bottom on the East side. Live sparks and embers were carried across the river and started hundreds of fires on the townsite, some even up on top of the hill. The south end of the town was also in danger as the fire got into the park half a dozen times. Finally the fire got a foot hold opposite Jeffray St. and a large body of men were taken there to put it out, which they practically accomplished by night. The house holders in all parts of the town, but especially in the west and north ends were considerably alarmed and many had their goods packed all ready to be moved. The town hose was out and a large supply of new hose was brought from Coal Creek, a lot of men also came down from the latter place to assist in extinguishing the fire.

The mill of the Elk Lumber and Manufacturing Co. had a close shave, and but for the good water supply and ample hose the whole plant and lumber yards would have gone up in flames. The Company lost about 11,000 logs aggregating about a million and a half feet. Only about two days' cutting were left of the entire lot. The mill is now closed down and will remain closed until a new supply of logs is secured. Messers B. Lynch and Geo. Barnes, the former the secretary and most important Director of the Company and the latter a heavy shareholder, arrived on the morning of the fire fron St. Paul and assisted in directing the fight. The large stable of the Company at the camp a mile back on the mountain was destroyed but the camp was saved.

It is understood that claims for damages have been filed against the Great Northern railway. The total loss that the fire has caused the Elk Lumber and Manufacturing Co. is about $30,000.

Coroner Forbes in compliance with a duly signed requisition has ordered an inquest to be held on Monday next when an effort will be made to determine the cause of the fire.

On Wednesday the flames broke out again in the neighborhood of Messrs Forbes and Podbielancik's houses and gave considerable trouble but fortunately the wind was not so strong as on Saturday. The fire is still smouldering on both sides of the river and a heavy wind may yet fan it into new activity.

FIRE AT MORRISSEY.

SAW MILL AND BREWERY BURNED ON SATURDAY.

Three Italians accused of Setting the Bush Fire Which did the Damage Were not Convicted. Heavy Losses.

While the fire was at its worst in west Fernie another disastrous fire was raging at Morrissey Junction. Shortly after noon on Saturday last a fire broke out in the brush behind the Windsor Hotel near a shack occupied by some Italians. The wind carried the flames towards the saw-mill purchased by Mr. Gilpin from the Cedar Valley Improvement Co., and in spite of the efforts of those about the mill ignited and was burned. A four room cottage near by was also destroyed.

Still the fire fiend was unsatisfied. The sparks ignited across the G. N. track and in a short time the Morrissey Brewery was in flames. The latter building was purchased recently by Mr. A. Mutz of Fernie at a sheriff's sale. The loss of the Brewery amounts to about $3,000 which is covered by insurance to the extent of $2,000. Neither the saw-mill nor the brewery have been operated for some time. The former was worth about $2,000.

The cottage contained the personal property of Mr. Grady of The Morrissey Lumber Co. and his loss is about $500. The fire also destroyed considerable green timber.

The Italians above mentioned were suspected of setting out the fire and were arrested on this charge by Constadle Beaudwin. They were tried on Wednesday at Fernie and were discharged.

FOOTBALL

Fernie Defeats Pincher Creek Score 1-0

The Fernie match on Saturday night was a disappointment to spectaotrs. The Pincher Creek eleven did not turn up till late and then several places had to be filled on the grounds. Fernie scored in the first half, play was slow and not exciting. In the second part Pincher had to play with 10 men, T. Neuman being laid off. No further scoring was done. The Fernie boys put up a good clean and gentlemanly game, and the referee proved a good one being as fair as could be wished. If the Pincher Creek club is going to claim support from the town it must get its eleven out properly and not depend on picking up chance men on the grounds.

COMMUNICATION.

To the Editor:-

The time is opportune for the people of Fernie Riding to enquire whether or no the sums voted by the Legislature for various works are to be expended this year. The summer is fast passing by. Ere long we shall be told that owing to the lateness of the season the Government consider it wise to defer the work until next year. No apologist for the Government can accuse the people hereabout of being a complaining class. Far from it. There are few places where so much temporizing would be tolerated, It is perhaps this very submission to injustice that is taken advantage of by the Government and those in its employ to thwart our wishes. I may refer, among other things to the lockup at Fernie. It is not supposed that when an unfortunate is deprived of his liberty that he is to suffer loss of health in the bargain. But with the miserable accommodation for the prisoners that exists it may well happen that disease and death will follow incarceration. The officials do all they can to ameliorate the condition of the prisoners and no blame attaches to them but why not finish the new lockup at once? Who will explain its delay. Then we have Morrissey and Michel as instances of neglect both as regards lockups and schools. I dislike going into print over these subjects but unless they be brought forward as publicly and as strongly as possible it is ten to one that things will continue as they are. Let us have a public meeting if necessary and show the Government where we stand.

ELECTION AUG. 19TH.

LETTERS PATENT FOR INCORPORATION ISSUED.

Yesterday's Gazette contains the Official Notice. Three Weeks to Select a Council.

Yesterday Mr. Jas. A. Rennie received a wire from W. R. Ross M. P. P. at Victoria conveying the welcome information that the incorporation of the town of Fernie had been passed by the Executive Council and that the letters patent would be published in yesterday's Gazette. The nomination day is set for Aug. 19th. Mr. J. A. Rennie, whose name was suggested by the committee, has doubtless been appointed returning officer.

According to the Municipal Act only those persons qualified to sign the petition for incorporation, i. e. registered property owners, will be qualified to vote at the first election. The preparation of this list is one of the first duties of the returning officer. The property qualifications for a mayor are, having been for six months previous to the day of nomination the registered owner of property assessed for not less than $1,000 according to the last assessment. Nominees for Aldermen are required to have registered property to the value of $500.

NEW EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

The contract for the new Episcopal Church has been let to R. Kerr who will commence work at once. Already some of the material is on the ground. The building will be 77 feet long, the main body of the church being 50 feet. The plans show an elaborate building of the most up-to-date style. The outside is shingled to the ground, with plastered gable ends. The entire timbers are exposed to view on the inside. These will be well hand-dressed. The building will be on a stone foundation. The Church will cost in the neighborhood of $4,000 It is probable that a rectory will be built this year on the adjoining lot.

The wagon road at the big rock cut near Morrissey was completed yesterday and several wagon loads of material were taken over. It is expected that the construction will proceed faster now.

Fernie is now at the head of the football league. The one game lost and the one draw gives it a loss of three points from the total, while Coleman which comes second has no defeats but four draws which deduct four points from its total count.

Dr. Ker returned to Fernie from Montreal to take a position with Drs. Bonnell and Corsan, as surgeon on the G. N. construction. Dr. Ker has always been popular with all the people of the district and his appointment will be received with much satisfaction.

Rev. A. O. MacRae, Ph. D. Principal of the Western Canada College, Calgary, will occupy the pulpit of Knox Church morning and evening on Sunday next, in the absence of Rev. D. McK Reid. Rev. Mr. Ross of Morrissey substituted for Mr. Reid last Sunday evening.

L. P. Eckstein has entered into partnership with F. C. Lawe of Morrissey and the law firm is now Eckstein and Lawe. Mr. Lawe will maintain his connections at Morrissey and will visit that town once a week. The firm will shortly take up their quarters in the Cuthbert block. Mr. and Mrs. Lawe will make their home in Mr. Bentley's residence, West Fernie.

Sheppard & Elliott gave a practical demonstration on the side-walk on Wednesday evening of the utility of the famous Dr. Yoho bath heater. A handful of chips were thrown into the little copper furnace followed by a lighted paper. Immediately after cold water was steadily poured into the funnel at the side and the water came as steadily from a spout, boiling hot.

CHANGE OF MANAGEMENT.

The P. Burns & Co. have made a change in the local management of its business. F. W. Burn who has had charge of the Fernie branch for several years has been transferred to Toronto where he will have charge of an important railway contract for the Burns company. Mr Burn's successor is Mr. J. S. Gusty who has been in charge of the Sandon branch for the past seven years. He comes highly recommended as a successful business man. Mr. Gusty arrived early in the week. Mr. Burn left for Nelson on Tuesday. On his way east he will remain in Fernie a couple of days.

BUILDING NOTES.

The Trites-Wood Co. on Monday commenced the excavation for the foundation walls of their new store building. The specifications are about complete and tenders will called for at once.

W. W. Tuttle has decided to build on the one lot next to the Trites-Wood Co A partition wall will be built between them. Mr. Tuttle commenced the excavation for a basement early in the week. He will erect a two storey structure of fire proof material, and it is his present intention to add to it later.

H. W. Herchmer is calling for tenders for the erection of a residence on his fine property overlooking the river bank

Mr. E. Todd has the cellar of his block completed. He is now putting up the framework and the bricks are on the ground ready for the walls. The temporary building at the rear has been torn down and Mrs. Todd has moved her millinery business into Mr. Turner's building formerly occupied by the Calgary Cattle Co.

Messrs Kenney and McLeod are erecting a tailer shop next to Demaurez's jewelry store.

The Imperial Hotel is building commodious sample rooms three lots south of the hotel on Baker St. Messrs Swallwell and Thomas have the contract.

Wm. Eschwig has commenced the excavation for his new hotel across from the Northern.

ACCIDENT AT COAL CREEK.

Ralph Smith a miner at Coal Creek was buried in a fall of coal while at work on Monday in the mines. He was completely buried but was quickly rescued by his companions. He was taken to the Fernie Hospital where the doctors found a couple of ribs broken and some injury done to the lung. He is progressing satisfactorily.

LEASED FOR 10 YEARS.

TERMS OF CONTRACT BETWEEN COAL CO. AND C. P. R.

Large and Steady Contracts Secured in Montana for Crow's Nest Coke. The Smelter will be Built at Once.

A FREE PRESS representative yesterday had a few minutes' chat with Mr. G. G. S. Lindsey in which the managing director and Third Vice-President of the Coal Company good naturedly submitted to our bombardment of questions.

"Yes" said Mr. Lindsey "I returned yesterday from Winnipeg where the final arrangements were made with the C. P. R. for the lease of the branch line to Coal Creek. The line has been leased for a period of ten years with the option of renewing the lease for another ten years at the expiration of that time. The branch will be taken over on Sept. 1st under the name of the Morrissey Fernie and Michel Railway Co. Will we buy the C. P. R. rolling stock? We will own our rolling stock, and at the present time we are negotiating with the C. P. R. for the purchase of theirs but the matter is not settled yet. The appointment of train crews etc. will be left to our local management. Yes, this will alter our plans with regard to the location of the Junction of the branch with the G. N. Extension. The connection will be made nearer the town than was planned with the new line we contemplated building to the mines. Our engineers are now working on this.

THE COKE MARKETS.

Mr. Lindsey gave some very encouraging news about the condition of the coke market. He had visited Montana points in his trip and had secured large contracts for coke extending over a long period of time. He was sanguine as to the future in this regard. The lack of cars at the present time was causing a short close down and at Morrissey the mines were closed for the remainder of the week owing to the fact that the G. N. were temporarily overstocked. The coke for the Montana markets would go via Lethbridge until traffic was opened over the Boundary Falls cut off. The Coal Company would continue to develop Morrissey with unabated vigor. The coal there was exceptionally good for domestic purposes.

THE SMELTER.

In answer to a query on this subject Mr. Lindsey handed us a cable received that day from Newcastle in answer to a message to Mr. Fernau, which stated that Mr. Fernau had already arrived in New York and that he would at once arrange to see Mr. Lindsey. The managing Director stated that the arrangements with Mr. Fernau were completed and that the latter was coming with the intention of bnilding the smelter at once.

Mr. Lindsey leaves today for Toronto where a lot of work has piled up for him. He expects to return to Fernie about the middle of September.

Rev. and Mrs. Reid will return from Calgary and Lethbridge on Monday next. Mr. Reid's mother and sister will accompany them, also Mrs. Anderson and little son Harold who will be guests at the Manse. Mrs. Anderson is the matron at the Western Canada College, Calgary, and the widow of Harold Anderson who a dozen years ago was a conspicuous figure in the Kootenays.

The Cranbrook Herald in its account of the Cranbrook—Medicine Hat lacrosse game has this to say of the Fernie referee Milt Kastner of Fernie refereed the game in a manner that gave eminent satisfaction to both sides, and the man who can do that is a snollygoster in the business. He was firm and fair and from start to finish, displayed a disposition to see a square game and the determination to have it if he had to fight for it. He had it."

A committee of residents from the northwest end of the town waited upon General Superintendent Drinnan on Monday to ask that a standpipe be put in at the corner of Howland Ave. and Jaffray St. that the fire hose might be attached to it in case of fire. Mr. Drinnan very kindly promised to have it done, and before night the new pipe was in place. The people in that corner of the town will now feel much more secure from fire, especially during this season when the danger from bush fires is so great. The nearest hydrant previously was at the Free Press corner and the thousand feet of hose was inadequate to serve from that distance. Also the trouble of connecting so long a piece of hose is considerable and requires time.

CHAPTER I.

AMITY.

HORACE OAKFELL, representative from the parish of Avoyelles, was the youngest member of the Louisiana legislature of 1857. Of medium height, broad of shoulder, deep chested and brown haired and brown eyed, with a countenance brave and frank, he was regarded as the Adonis of the house. His dress of milk white cassimere, ruffled shirt and deep Byronic collar gave warrant to the poetic appraisal of the women. But his colleagues set a different estimate upon him. To them he was known as a well trained lawyer, a close student, a young man much given to philosophic research and meditation, one of learning and gravity unusual at his age, true, courageous, but of a seriousness bordering upon melancholy. He was a forceful debater, though his years were but 24, and his utterances were always heard with sincere respect.

Though himself a slaveowner, he had from motives of humanity eloquently but unsuccessfully opposed the bill which enacted:

"That from and after the passage of this act no slave shall be emancipated in this state."

His speech had been published in full by the leading journals, and its peroration was long remembered.

"Can it be," he exclaimed, "that in this part of Christendom, in a time of profound peace and tranquillity, an American legislative body will from the black cloud of slavery tear the narrow fringe of hope and in its stead inscribe by statute the frightful legend seen by Dante over the portals of hell? Can it be that enlightened citizens will forbid the reward of liberty to the slave who serves the state? Will the law-making power deny to the master the exercise of the noblest virtue of his nature by prohibiting him from conferring the boon of freedom upon the slave who has stood between his life and the knife of the assassin or safely borne his fainting wife through the flames of the burning mansion or plunged into the down sucking Mississippi to bring back the fair haired child to the frantic mother? Can it be that the flower of civilization will make unlawful that kindness to a faithful human slave which it approves to a dog or a horse? I cannot believe it. But if I mistake the sense of the house then let me say that the logical consequence of this measure will be the stifling of moral growth in the master, the removal of incentives to loyalty in the slave; the one must become more narrow and cruel, the other desperate and ferocious; the sense of justice of other communities will be shocked and their righteous anger will be provoked; a decade cannot fail to bring some frightful catastrophe on our state as the fruit of this unholy measure. I protest against it. I appeal to my colleagues to be true to their better nature and prove by their negative votes that the white race in Louisiana can defend itself and yet be not ungenerous."

His appeal was ineffective. The bill was passed by a pronounced majority, was approved by the governor and became law.

After the adjournment of the legislature Oakfell returned to the parish of Avoyelles, taking passage on the steamboat Red Queen. The vessel was one of those popularly called "floating palaces," of which a score plied the lower Mississippi and its tributaries during the decade preceding the civil war, when no railroads had been laid in that part of Louisiana lying west of the great river. She was a side wheeler, with high pressure engines, capable of great speed and with accommodation for over 150 passengers. There were a profusion of white paint upon her exterior and a plenitude of gilding and low hanging chandeliers within the cabin.

The boat carried some 60 passengers, many of whom were planters returning from their annual spring visits to New Orleans factories to settle accounts of the past planting year and arrange credits for the new. Some were accompanied by their wives and daughters, and a sociability prevailed among the company which is wholly wanting in the commercial travel of the present day.

Three were planters in Avoyelles, one of whom, Dr. De Roux, added the business of a physician to that of cotton raising. His plantation was near the Marais des Cygnes, in the Avoyelles prairie. The second was Constant Quillebert, a low browed, long nosed Gascon Frenchman who had lived on Bayou des Glaises for 20 years, but had never married or become an American citizen. The third was Leonidas Latiolais of Bayou Rouge, a man of 60, whose hair was white and whose blue eyes and short chin bespoke a kindly but weak character. Of the three Latiolais alone threw any warmth into the salutation of Oakfell. The others referred to the legislative incident in a purely polite manner, as if tenderness for him required that it be quickly passed over. Latiolais, however, spoke regretfully of the result, but rather out of sympathy for the young legislator than for the cause he had championed.

Oakfell received their different expressions with apparent unconcern and evinced a preference to avoid any discussion of the supposed merits or demerits of the bill.

After the evening meal had been partaken of in the long saloon, with the usual clatter of china service and scurrying of the numerous yellow and black waiters, the extension tables were closed and run together, and while music, dancing and conversation engaged the women and young folks in the ladies' cabin the tables in the forward end were arranged for cards and were speedily occupied by the older men and some of the younger, gambling being an unfailing feature of the steamboat travel in the fifties. These card tables were in close neighborhood to the bar, and this was the beginning of the barkeeper's business day.

Oakfell passed the greater part of the evening reading in the captain's stateroom on the hurricane deck. Returning to the cabin at 11 o'clock, he found his constituents from Avoyelles at the table nearest the bar. They were not playing, but cards, ivory chips and half drained glasses of liquor were on the table. None of the chips was on the side where Latiolais sat. Some few were in front of Dr. De Roux, and the remainder, in many stacks, were before Quillebert.

The young man sat at a distance from the three, but not so far that their conversation was not audible to him.

Quillebert in a half jocular and half bantering tone had said:

"Leonidas, if I were not a man of extraordinary good nature you and I would now be at outs instead of sitting here over a friendly game of poker and clinking our social glasses, because it wasn't neighborly in you to sue me for $2,000 for that old negro of yours when you know that you couldn't have sold him for $700 even on credit."

"No, I don't know that," replied Latiolais. "I could have sold him for $750. But that isn't it. I never tried to sell him, I didn't want to sell him, and, although he was 50 years old when you shot him, I wouldn't have sold him for $2,000 cash. I was attached to Baptiste. He was the best judge of horses among my negroes. He was faithful and nursed me and my son through the yellow fever, and, although my son died, I have always believed that had it not been for Baptiste's care and watchfulness I should never have recovered. Therefore I never thought that $2,000 could have at all repaid me for his loss. Moreover, it would have been the act of a good neighbor in you to have complained to me of any offense Baptiste had given you and allowed me to correct him. Instead of that you shot him dead."

"I admit that," said Quillebert, "but when he struck my pointer dog with that ox whip and I saw the blood redden the white skin of the poor brute I was so enraged that I couldn't help shooting the infernal negro down in his tracks, and you would have done the same."

"But had not the dog bitten the negro before he struck it with the whip?" Latiolais inquired.

"I have heard something of that sort," said Quillebert curtly.

"It was a fact," insisted Latiolais, "and the wounds inflicted by the dog's teeth were found upon the dead man's body. But, as we never quarreled about that," Latiolais continued, "let's not quarrel now. Of course, when you destroyed my property you owed me something, and, since we couldn't agree upon the amount, there was nothing to do but leave it to a jury, so I brought the suit. I was willing to abide by the award of the jury, although it was only $1,200; but you have seen fit to carry the matter on appeal to the supreme court and prolong this only cause of difference between us."

The young man sat at a distance from the three.

"I think," Dr. De Roux remarked, "that you both made a mistake by letting the matter go into the courts. Litigation always begets bitterness. The longer it is drawn out the more inveterate becomes the ill feeling. I think yet you ought to take it out of court and settle it as friends and gentlemen."

"I am afraid it is too late," said Latiolais, "as Constant perfected his appeal yesterday and employed a city lawyer to argue his cause for him in the supreme court."

"No, it is not too late," Quillebert exclaimed; "it is never too late to do good. Let us have another toddy, and when we drink that to friendship I will make a proposition to you."

Their glasses were filled and drained with expressions of good feeling.

"Now," said Quillebert, with a knowing leer in his eyes, "you say, Latiolais—at least I have heard you say many times—that you are the best old sledge player in the parish of Avoyelles. I know you play that game better than you do poker." And he significantly glanced at the bare space on the table in front of Latiolais, then at the piles of red and blue chips on his own side, and continued: "I will offer to play you 11 games of old sledge. If you win six out of the 11, I will pay you $2,000 as soon as we reach home. If I win six out of the 11, you will give me a receipt in full for the judgment and costs in your suit against me for killing Baptiste. If you agree, I will now write to my attorney in the city instructing him to withdraw the appeal and deliver the letter to the captain to be mailed when the boat stops at Bayou Sara."

"That certainly is a liberal proposition," said Dr. De Roux. "You would do well to accept it, Leonidas."

Latiolais looked down, and his face assumed an expression of doubt and trouble. Oakfell watched the workings of his countenance intently.

"Let's have one more toddy before I decide."

"Agreeable."

With this aid Latiolais accepted the proposal. Calling for writing material and a new deck of cards, Quillebert wrote the message to the lawyer in New Orleans, passing it to Latiolais to be read, addressed, sealed, and handed it to the captain of the boat, with the request that he mail it at Bayou Sara. The cards were shuffled and the game was begun, Dr. De Roux keeping score.

The play was silent. Victory went alternately from the one player to the other through ten games. The eleventh was close, but by turning a knave as trump and scoring a six spot as low Quillebert won by a point. Latiolais took pen and paper, wrote and signed a receipt in full of the judgment, principal, interest and costs which he had obtained for the killing of his negro man Baptiste and gave it to Quillebert; also an I O U for the sum of $300, representing his loss in the game of poker they had previously played. Forcing a smile, he ordered three more glasses of whisky, and when these had been tossed off bade his companions good night and retired. Quillebert and Dr. De Roux strolled to the hurricane deck to soothe their nerves with cigars before seeking sleep. Oakfell repaired to his stateroom soul sickened by what he had witnessed.

CHAPTER II.

THE FERRY AT BAYOU DU LAC.

FROM Fort De Roussy, on the Red river, to Pointe Midi, on the Bayou Claire, near which "L'Esperance," the Oakfell plantation, lay, was a distance of some 20 miles. The dignifying name of fort was given to a small earthwork which had been thrown up by direction of the United States government under the supervision of Colonel De Roussy at the first rise of Avoyelles prairie abutting on the low alluvial river bottom. Four miles inland from the fort the highroad ran through the little town of Marksville, the parish site or seat of justice. The courthouse and two magazines for cotton were the only brick structures of which it could boast. All the other edifices, including the church, were of wood, painted white or yellow, ranged on either side of a long main street and two lateral and four cross streets intersecting at right angles. The situation of the village was a gentle dip in the prairie, the two sides of which, when the thick foliage of umbrella china, pecan, fig and oak trees was at its full and softened by the sprinkling of rosy flowered myrtles, gave the resemblance to the trough between waves of a great green sea. The population of 600 or 700 souls was almost entirely Gascon French and French creole, of whom but few spoke English. The exceptions were the families of four American lawyers, who had acquired the French language and used it more frequently than their mother tongue.

Nine miles southward from the village the smooth surface of the prairie broke suddenly and the land declined sharply to a broad belt of stiff soil, incalculably fertile, bearing a thick growth of cypress, gum and oak and terminating at Bayou du Lac, wide and deep, on the farther side of which lay the Magnolia hills. These latter were a series of gentle undulations, rising somewhat above the general level of the alluvion and extending quite eight miles to the fine, sandy soil of that perfect agricultural country formed by the network of bayous Rouge, Huffpower, Bœuff and Claire. Here the stately magnolia tree dominated, its evergreen leaves of olive hue and varnished freshness preserving to the landscape throughout the year the warm sylvan tints of summer and its big blossoms of creamy white loading the air with the fragrance of combined jasmine and lemon and imbuing with sensuousness the luxuriant spring. Robed in gown of woven vines, which trailed to the ground and flowered in yellow, red, blue and white, the magnolia was truly queen of the forest.

The day had been sultry, overcast by low hanging clouds, from which fell a steady, soaking rain from noon until nightfall. An intense darkness succeeded the day, and the rain became fitful, while the lightning was frequent and blinding in its lurid brilliancy. The public road leading from the rope ferry of Bayou du Lac to the Magnolia hills and which constant use had worn to a deep gully in the soft ground was reduced by the rain almost to a state of ooze, rendering travel arduous and slow. The dwelling of Valsin Mouillot, the ferryman, stood in an inclosure near the road and 50 yards from the bayou. Valsin was short and muscular, of middle age and scant education, but blessed with a cheerful mind. He was a widower, with three little girls dependent upon him, and his resources were the public ferry and the yield of 30 acres of cleared land, which he operated with the aid of three slaves—an old man and woman and a boy. This last drew the ferryboat along the wide stretch of rope more frequently than did the ferryman and on such nights as this occupied the lookout shed on the bank to respond to the calls of travelers.

Notwithstanding the warmth of the night and the open doors of the house, a bright fire of cypress bark burned on the hearth of the largest room to resist the moisture with which this low region reeked. In front of the fire sat a stout, broad faced, dark skinned man of advanced years, whose garb of black and turned down band of white about his neck discovered the Catholic priest. His hair was thick and as yet untouched by the gray of age, eyes large and strong, and his countenance, though confessing to good living, advertised a spirit of benevolence and charity. This was Father Francois Grhe, cure of Mansura, whose ecclesiastical dominion extended southward to the Bayou Bœuf. He had heard a call to the ferry, and later, when the sound of rushing hoofs and wheels in the road fell upon his ear, he had peered out into the darkness, but, notwithstanding the illumination of a lightning flash, had discovered nothing. Valsin entered the room swishing the rain from his broad felt hat and, stamping his wet and muddy boots upon the floor, said:

"I don't like a night like this, father—hot and dripping and heavy. It always makes me feel that something bad is going to happen."

"Keep your soul clean, Valsin," said the priest, "and whatever happens on a night like this cannot be bad for you."

"Oh, it is not for myself—no—that I am uneasy, but I think that persons traveling abroad are sure to meet with accident, and if a man is hurt in the Magnolia hills on such a night he may lie there until morning and no one know of his suffering."

"I have just heard some one drive up from the ferry," observed the priest, "and pass on toward the hills. Who was it, Valsin?"

"I do not know," replied Valsin. "I did not go to the ferry. The boy Pierre is there tonight. But come, father; your supper of chicken, eggs and coffee is ready. You must be very hungry after driving so far and waiting so long."

"Thank you, Valsin. I have an appetite, you may be sure, although I am not impatient, for, you know, I am practiced in fasting."

As the priest rose to follow his host to the supper table a voice came from without, calling:

"Hello, Valsin! Hello! Hello!"

The dogs of the yard set up a furious barking.

Both men stopped, and Valsin, stepping out on the veranda of his house, responded:

"Hello yourself! Who is it? Come in!"

"I can't until you call your dogs off."

"Wait; I will be there in a minute. Here, you rascal, Jacques; get away! And you, Rosa; go off! Do you want me to kick you? Now, sir, they won't bite. They know I am here. Who is it I see?"

"Oakfell, Valsin. I have to claim shelter of you."

"Why, bless my heart, Mr. Horace! How do you do? I am glad to see you, sir. Come right in." And he grasped Oakfell's hand and shook it warmly. "What's happened? Where's your buggy?"

"Never mind the buggy, Valsin. Let us get out of this rain and mud," said Oakfell, "and then I will tell you what has happened."

"To be sure, to be sure," said Valsin. "How foolish of me to keep you here at the gate to tell me about it when you can just as well come inside and get dry and comfortable and then tell me and take your own time." And he led his unexpected guest into the house.

Father Grhe gave Oakfell an affectionate greeting, but, observing that his face was scratched and his clothing torn and smeared with mud, manifested anxiety and asked with an air of concern:

"Why, my son, you have met with an accident. Are you hurt?"

"No, I believe I have sustained nothing beyond a rude shaking up. I arrived on the Red Queen at Fort De Roussy this afternoon and, stopping for a short time at my office in Marksville, concluded to drive to my plantation this evening. The big black which was recently sent me from Cincinnati had been stabled in town since I left for Baton Rouge in the early part of the session. I had him put to the buggy today. Just as I was getting out of the gully beyond Valsin's field the horse took fright at the upright shafts of an ox cart tilted on end in front of old Grineau's house, which I in the dark did not see. Before I was aware he bounded to the left, leaped up the bank and started on a dead run into the Magnolia hills. I braced myself to hold him in, but he was beyond control, and, positively, I expected to be killed. Had he got as far as the woods he surely would have dashed my brains out against a tree; but, fortunately, at the edge of the field the left wheel of the buggy struck a thorn stump, and everything went to pieces. The buggy, I suppose, has been broken into a thousand fragments. I was thrown violently to the ground, the reins left my grasp, and the horse has gone dashing through the hills like some mad creature. So here I am, all that is left of the cortege that started out so bravely from Marksville, and I may thank my stars that there is this much left sound and unbroken."

"The kind God be thanked, it is the best part which has been saved," said the priest fervently.

"Yes, yes," Valsin added, "we could not afford to lose such a one as Mr. Horace, and we must take the best of care of what God has been good enough to preserve to us."

He hurried Oakfell into another room, calling to his aid the old negro Alonzo, and the two, after delving into various cypress chests and armoirs and bustling about like busy housewives, shortly returned him to the fireside dry and comfortably clad in a suit of Valsin's homemade and clean Attakapas cottonade, his feet incased in a pair of soft moccasins of deerskin. The garments were indeed a scanty fit, but they bestowed the desired comfort, and, no women being present, slight importance was attached to mere appearance.

Valsin urged his guests to the meal that was awaiting them, and after grace by the priest the three played at knife and fork in the manner of men blessed with good health and quiet consciences.

"Who else of Avoyelles came on the boat, Mr. Horace?" inquired Valsin.

"Dr. De Roux, Constant Quillebert and Leonidas Latiolais."

"Constant, I hear, has carried to the supreme court that unhappy lawsuit between himself and Latiolais," said Father Grhe. "It is a great pity that such disputes should arise between neighbors and a greater pity that they should be prolonged."

"It is deplorable," said Oakfell, "that in a Christian country the very possibility of such a dispute as that should exist, but there is no longer any lawsuit between those two neighbors. It was settled last night in a manner both unique and impressive." He described how the price of a human life had been liquidated by the hazard of cards under the inspiration of whisky.

"Most lamentably un-Christian," said Father Grhe. "I am especially sorry that Leonidas Latiolais was a party to such an act. He is a good man at heart. His intentions are right, but he is in some things weak, very weak. At times I am grievously distressed by apprehensions of misfortune to his granddaughter, Estelle. As her guardian he controls her inheritance, and, while I know his love for her is little less than a worship, yet his yielding nature is a continuing menace to her interests."

"Your fears are in all probability correct," Oakfell observed. "Latiolais' improvidence may be hurtful to his grandchild in the dissipation of the estate which she should inherit from him, but he could not without gross dishonesty imperil that which she derives from her mother, and Latiolais, I am sure, is honest."

"Certainly he means to be," said Father Grhe. "I trust my fears will never be justified by the event. But, speaking of Estelle, my son, I must give you a bit of news which probably has not reached you since you have been at the capital. The new bell presented to the church by our good friends at Bordeaux arrived from France last week and will be christened the first Saturday after Easter. On the Thursday before a fair is to be held at the Mansura schoolhouse to raise money to pay the expenses of bringing the bell from New Orleans and to build and paint a new belfry. At the fair the godmother of the bell will be elected, and quite a spirited contest is being waged by a number of our girls who are ambitious of that honor. Estelle has been persuaded to enter the competition, and I am afraid her grandfather's absence in New Orleans has not improved her chances of winning. She is too modest and timid to canvass for herself, and, while I ought not to be a partisan of any in the race, yet I grieve to think that Estelle should suffer for the want of a champion."

"Is it too late for a champion to be of service to her?" asked Oakfell.

"By no means."

"What is the mode of election?"

"Each vote must be accompanied by $1. The candidate in whose name the greatest number of dollars are contributed is elected godmother to the bell," the priest explained.

"The candidates are, of course, all young girls?" queried Oakfell.

"Oh, certainly," replied the priest. "No matrons are admitted."

"How many candidates are there?"

"Six. The lists were closed last Sunday."

"Then," said Oakfell, "though I have not had the pleasure of meeting Mlle. Latiolais since her return from the convent, I suppose she is now regarded quite a young lady. I will be her active champion from this on to the close of the polls, but, of course, incognito to her."

"Good!" exclaimed Valsin. "I will give you five votes for Estelle to begin with."

"Steady, my good friend," said the priest. "No voter can cast more than one ballot."

"Well, I will give my own vote," persisted Valsin, "and get four others. I will be good for five anyhow. I polled five votes for Mr. Horace to go to the legislature, and I can poll that number for his candidate for the bell christening."

"Thank you, Valsin," said Oakfell. "Our present candidate is more deserving than the other and less likely to disappoint you."

"How so?" asked Valsin. "When have you disappointed me?"

"When I voted against the antiemancipation bill, I am afraid," replied Oakfell.

"Not by a jugful!" declared Valsin. "But you would have done so if you had voted for that bill. What! I paid my own money for old Alonzo and old Jeanne and I cannot set them free if I want? I could have thrown my money into the bayou. Then why cannot I free my negroes, for whom I paid my money? No, sir. You voted right, like a real man, and I honor you for it."

"And so do I, my young friend," said the priest, "and I advise every man who wishes to see and do the right to read your speech and engrave it on his memory. You spoke for that broad humanity which was the especial care of the Lord Jesus and in which alone lies the ultimate safety of the nation."

"Should all others disapprove these expressions from you, two would suffice to sustain me, for in your sincerity and judgment I have abiding faith." Oakfell spoke warmly and sincerely.

When the meal was concluded, the rain had ceased and the late moon risen above the tree tops of the surrounding forests. The priest announced his determination to push on to Mansura, and, his horse and buggy being led out by Alonzo, he thanked Valsin for his entertainment, gave his blessing and good night and drove on, to be ferried across the water by the boy.

Oakfell's sleep was that of the young man fatigued. At sunrise of the following morning he was speeding in the ferryman's buggy through the glistening, odorous magnolia woods to his plantation at Pointe Midi.

CHAPTER III.

THE MANSURA BELL.

THE fair and election were had as notified to Oakfell by Father Grhe. It was a notable occasion. The quaint little hamlet of Mansura, whose residents were all French and whose verandaed dwellings and shops fronted its single street, broad and umbrageous, in two ranks of unequivocal yellow, was throughout the day denied its accustomed sleep by noise of buggy teams and saddle horses hitched to its trees and the chatter and laughter of women, young and old, pretty and otherwise, who vended gumbo, roast fowl, coffee, cake and claret punch at famine prices to the men boisterously patronizing their tables. The concourse was distinctively French. No English word was heard in the greetings, jests and chafferings. The pale nuns of the Holy Family convents at Marksville and Mansura chaperoned coveys of shy girl pupils and stood between them and the bold glances of dark eyed youths, and the priests of Moreauville, Choupique and Marksville lent the influence of their presence to the interests of their good brother of Mansura.

The four reverend gentlemen, smoking cigars in front of the schoolhouse

"Good day, fathers four."

in which the fair was held, were accosted by Quillebert, whose manner evinced but slight respect for their profession and who was, truth to tell, displeasing to them by reason of his boasted fondness for the literature of Voltaire.

"Good day, fathers four," was his airy salutation as he approached. "Do you know a strange thing? Whenever I meet more than one nun or more than one priest there are always two or four or some greater number of them, but never three. They seem to avoid the number of the Trinity as if they feared it would bring bad luck. Now, that is even odd, is it not, my good fathers? How do you account for it?" And he laughed loud and hard at his own wit.

"That is no more strange than my own experience, Constant," said Father Galotte. "Whenever I have met the devil he has always been alone." And, jabbing his pudgy forefinger against Quillebert's ribs, he shook from his throat an oleaginous gurgle which had served him as a laugh since his first appointment to a parish in Louisiana.

OF MODERN MIRACLES

SCIENCE'S ACHIEVEMENTS IN THE LIGHT OF CHRIST'S PROMISE.

TALMAGE'S CONSTRUCTION

Jesus Christ Superior in His Day to All Natural Laws—Still He Says: "Greater Works Than These Shall He Do" That Believeth on Me—Wonders Accomplished in the Present Dry.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by William Mally, of Toronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 17.—In this sermon a new construction is placed upon many of the "miracles of modern science," which are interpreted in the light of Christ's promise to his followers in John xiv., 12, "Greater works than these shall he do."

Man increases not his gospel faith by lowering the standards of the cross. You might as well expect water to run uphill of its own accord, or violets to grow during midwinter in a snowbank, as for a radiant faith capable of transforming character to exist in any temple unless the chief corner-stone of that temple is Jesus Christ. "And I, if I be lifted up from earth, will draw men unto me," said Jesus Christ just a short time before his crucifixion, "I am the way, the truth, and the life. No man cometh upto the Father but by me," speaks our resurrected Redeemer to the gospel workers of the present day.

Let it be clearly understood at the outset that by no word or thought would I seek to depreciate the power and influence of Christ's personality and work. He it is who fills all created things; he it is who gives life, natural, mental, social. He is the inspirer, the spring from which come all our triumphs. But I want to show you that the promise which he gave to his disciples, "Greater work than these shall he do," has been fulfilled and that man inspired with his spirit has with the natural forces at his disposal done more for uplifting humanity, as Christ said he should, than did Christ himself. Man has taken hold of the power which Christ bestowed and has applied it beyond the opportunities which Christ had to complete the work that he initiated. Christ fed the multitudes; Christ opened the blinded eyes and straightened the crooked limbs; Christ assuaged pain and stopped the chronic issue of blood. Christ fought against the heathenish doctrine that "might is right." Christ was the greatest of all workers of wonders that the world had ever seen. There was only one Christ. There will never be another. Yet there are senses, natural as well as spiritual, in which his promise has been kept to his followers, and they have been enabled through the power emanating from him to do works which surpass those he did in his life on earth. But let it never be forgotten that these "greater works" which man has done have been accomplished only because Jesus has lived and Jesus' prophetic words have been fulfilled. In order to get a better grasp of this theme let me read to you the full verse in which the words of my text are found. "Verily, verily I say unto you he that believeth on me the works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father."

Jesus Christ was the amazement of amazements to the people of his day and generation as a worker of natural phenomena. He seemed to his time superior to all natural laws. When he went out to visit his disciples in their ship, he did not have to use the land, as other people had to do. He stepped upon the crystal pavement of Lake Galilee as easily as an Alpine climber might rest his foot upon solid rock. When he spoke, the homage of obedience was rendered to him, not alone by men in the synagogue, by beasts of the field and the fowls of the air, but by the winds and the waves. He called to the Galilean tempest, "Peace be still." At a word from his lip the fig tree dried up and withered away. All he had to say was, "Let no fruit grow on thee henceforward forever." At his call came whole schools of fish to be caught by the Galilean fishermen. By his touch whole ovens full of bread seemed to be miraculously created. After the sermon upon the mount he fed the multitudes by simply breaking five loaves of bread into pieces. He kept on breaking those pieces again in twain until at last all were fed with bread, as much as they cared to eat. Christ was a wonder worker in natural phenomena. He could tell Peter just where to go and catch a fish which had in its mouth the "piece of money" by which the disciples should pay the just taxes to the Roman Government. In the hour of his suffering and death the earth trembled and the sun was shrouded in darkness. In him was the power which the psalmist ascribed to the Most High, "He looketh upon the earth and it trembles; he toucheth the hills and they smoke."

Wonderful were those triumphs over natural laws and forces, but what triumphs has man achieved since that time by compelling those natural laws and forces to serve his purposes and by harnessing them as his servants! What wonder can be greater than for man to speak in a telephone receiver, as I have done, in Chicago and have my voice heard in New York city, 1,000 miles away? Christ walking upon the waves of Lake Galilee excited the wonder of the spectators, but how they would have wondered could they have known how a spark, as a mermaid, could carry man's message by running along the pathway of a Pacific cable from Vancouver to Australia, or how a great iron hull could be made to battle against storm and tide and carry thousands of human beings, besides tons upon tons of freight, from New York to Liverpool.

When I see an Edison making an electric light blaze and burn upon the tip end of a dirty piece of carbon; when I see the marvels of machinery, born with everything but a soul; when I see ice frozen in the tropics, and when I know that nations separated by broad seas are brought into speaking distance by wireless telegraphy, I know that one of the fulfillments of my text has come. "Anything which excites wonder, surprise or astonishment in the broad sense is a miracle," wrote the lexicographer. Surely Christ was alluding to man's triumphs in the world of natural phenomena when he said, "The works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father."

Not only did Christ astonish the people in his day by his power over the forces of nature; he revealed his divine nature by showing his power over physical diseases. He tried to convince the people in his day of his power as a healer of spiritual maladies by proving himself the cleanser of leper spots, the opener of blinded eyes and the only one of his time who could send the sluggish blood of health coursing through the withered limbs of him sick with the palsy. Yet to-day, as I study Christ, the healer of the sick, I see that the work he did has been taken up by his followers and its triumphs multiplied. By the few words of his power he gave sight to a few blind men, but in our day the Christian surgeons, by their operations, are giving sight to thousands. The virtue from his garment stopped one issue of blood, but in our day the Christian physician, with his medicaments is stopping thousands of issues. Christ's touch relieved a few sufferers of pain, but in the hospitals of our time thousands pass painlessly through suffering which in former times would have racked them with excruciating torture.

But to-day are the "wonders of modern surgery" any more marvelous than the "wonders of modern medicine?" Is the power of modern medicine to cure disease any more marvelous to-day than the power of modern bacteriological investigations to prevent disease? You see Christ stopping here and there to open a blinded eye or to unstop a deaf ear or to loosen the heavy and labored breathing of the asthmatic sufferer. But to-day the achievements of the healer include more than here and there an isolated physical cure. I see the lights in thousands of hospital windows gleaming like the stars in the heavens. I see the white-robed nurses and the doctors coming forth as did the angels of health who troubled the waters at the pool of Bethesda, crying to the sick everywhere, "Come and be cured of your ailments." I see thousands and tens of thousands of strong men and women who would have died twenty years younger than they are now had they lived and been sick in the days when Christ lived and he had seen them not or touched them not. Christ as the physician of the body was a wonder worker. But man to-day as a curer of physical ailments is accomplishing far more than Christ ever did. Man is not only opening the eyes of those born blind, but he is making by the thousand and the tens of thousands the deaf and the dumb speak until this ancient miracle has ceased to be a wonder because of its commonness.

Now, study Christ from another standpoint. What did Jesus come down upon earth to do? He came to save the world? Oh, yes; he came to save the world by drawing men unto himself and banding them together as Christians. That means men were to become followers of himself. Yet, after he came to earth and was born in the manger and lived in Nazareth, he literally became the "despised and the rejected of men." After he had lived and suffered, preached and worked on and on until the day when he was crucified, the converts he had won were only a little handful of followers at the foot of his cross. If I should take you to a country pastor and say, "Rev. Mr. So-and-So, how large is your church?" he would say: "Oh, very small. We have only sixscore members all told. But we are part of the great Presbyterian church, with its hundreds of thousands and millions of members. Therefore we are proud to belong to the great body of this church militant." But Jesus when he died did not have any great church. He was only the humble Nazarene with one hundred and twenty disciples all told in Jerusalem. From a worldly standpoint Christ's life seemed to be an abject failure. Do you wonder that Christ said to his disciples in the words of my text, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do." How has the promise been fulfilled in the great preachers and organizers of the Christian church? Inspired by his life and teaching, men have arisen whose achievements, as far as they can be measured by numbers, have surpassed a thousandfold those of their Divine Master.

Compare if you will the rapid advancement of Christianity during the century just passed with the seemingly paltry number of 120 whom Christ gathered about him in Jerusalem during his earthly ministry. In 1844 George Williams of London organized the first Y.M.C.A. association of the world. Forty-six years later, as a direct outgrowth of his work, there were 6,625 different Y.M.C.A. association societies with their enrollment of 650,000 members, with property worth over $26,000,000. In 1865 William Booth, a humble Methodist minister, stepped out of the church of his birth and in Nottingham, England, organized the Christian Mission, the outgrowth of which is the modern Salvation Army. In thirty-five years that army, as a direct result of William Booth's work, had its 11,000 officers stationed in all parts of the world, holding annually over 2,000,000 meetings and possessing its own printing presses, scattering forth 43,000,000 pamphlets and papers of gospel news and with an income of nearly $4,000,000 per year. In 1880 Francis E. Clark, a comparatively unknown minister, organized his young people into a band of Christian workers, called the Christian Endeavor society. He is called "Father" Clark now, not, however, because he is an old man, but because he was the father of a movement which in twenty years had a society with nearly 4,000,000 members. Consider the work of John Wesley. Compare the first band of 120 members with the conversions under the power of the Holy Ghost of Whitefield, Finney, Moody. These men led the people by the tens of thousands to kneel at the foot of the cross. Tell me, in reference to the criterion of number, has not man as a preacher and a Christian organizer done "greater things" than did Christ?

But, again, in this worldwide sweep of man's "greater works" we must see how man is everywhere overturning the heathen doctrine that "might makes right" rather than "right makes might." We must see man as the defender of the weak man, the hope of the helpless man, the friend of the bereft man and in one sense the rescuer of the lost. Christ comes as the friend of the friendless. But, oh, how friendless and helpless he himself became!

All India was yet to give up its widow burning and the tossing of its helpless girl infants into the Ganges to be eaten by crocodiles and the heathen worship of idols, but Christ was not, in body, able as a man to set foot on the soil of India. William Carey and Alexander Duff and Bishop Thoburn were to do that. Africa, with its murder and rapine and cannibalistic orgies, was to build its altars to the worship of the "true God," but Christ, as a physical man, was never to penetrate into those dark missionary fields. A Livingstone, a Taylor and a Hartzell were to do that. Europe at that time shaking under the tread of the Roman legions; North and South America utterly unknown to civilization; the islands of the sea, most of them unvisited—all are yet to bow to Christ and come under the reign of love and gentleness and purity and truth. These are to be won through the instrumentality of men. Men energized by the Holy Spirit are to gain the whole world for him. Truly, as we look at such a conquest and compare it with the work that he accomplished in Palestine we see what he meant when he said, "Greater things than these shall ye do." Christ saw all this future conquest of the world, but as a man he never went away from the Palestine hills. He grew up in Nazareth. He journeyed from Nazareth a few times to Jerusalem. There at the Davidic capital he was at last led as a guilty criminal out to the Calvary heights to ignominiously die. To his followers he left the stupendous task of evangelizing the world, promising that he would be with them to the end and that through his power they should be able to win more souls than he had done.

But though we have been praising man's "great work" we would have you bear well in mind this one tremendous fact. No work of man is truly greater than Christ's work, because all of man's greater works are the outcome of Jesus' work. If you read the verse in which my text is found you will find the whole trend of the thought in the one word "because." "He shall do greater works than these because I go to my Father." Because Christ is in God and God is in us is the reason man is able to accomplish greater works than did Christ.

Never be deluded by the idea that man in his own strength is able to do anything apart from God. Only as Christ's life in its influence touches our lives are we able to do the "greater works" which are given man to do.

"Oh, no," says some one, "that cannot be. Some of the greatest inventors, some of the greatest statesmen, some of the greatest of American men have been agnostics and did not believe in Christ at all. How then could they get their power from God?" By the law of association. The influence of Christianity is an elevating, civilizing, inspiring power. Even those who are personally strangers to it are affected by the atmosphere it produces. Have you not noticed that nearly all inventions, nearly all true progress, nearly all the world's best blessings are found in Christian lands alone. God blesses the just and often the unjust in a Christian land, because Christ's work and sacrifice have been blessed in that land. Therefore, my brethren, the only way for man to achieve his greater works is by spreading abroad, as far as he can, the works of Jesus Christ, upon which all men's greater works are dependent. When Christ goes up, man goes up. When Christ goes down, man goes down.

And Moses but the instrument.

To-day will you not feel that you can only accomplish the greater work Christ has given to you to do by living and working in Christ? When Marshal Bernadotte, who afterward became King Charles XIV. of Sweden, was a young man he was a revolutionist. At the beheading of King Louis XVI. of France, in order to show his hysterical joy, he had tattooed upon his arm this sentence, "Death to all kings and royal tyrants." Bernadotte afterwards was himself raised to a throne. He closely guarded that tattooing from the eyes of his people until he was dead. Oh, my friend, marked with the signs of infamy upon your heart, marked with the signs of rebellion against Christ, will you not change your belief, as Bernadotte did, to become an enthroned king? You bear on your soul the marks of sin, but if you will come to him he will take you into his employ and will send you forth to bless and help the world. As the apostle bore on his body the marks of the Lord Jesus, so you may wear the badge of his service and in his name and by his power carry on the work that he began. To you, too, the promise is given, "He that believeth on me the works that I do shall he do also, and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father."

A man who is looking for trouble can usually find it without trouble.

CHAMBERLAIN IN HARNESS ACAIN

Asserts Still Necessity for Liberal-Unionist Party—Imperial Policy.

Mr. Chamberlain, amid a brilliant scene at the Albert hall, said that the Liberal Unionists appealed to the government to see whether it was possible to draw the Empire closer by the bonds of reciprocity and preferential conditions. That policy might be right or wrong, but it was a living policy, not a dead superstition. In raising the issue of reciprocity they had the full support of the government. The second more important issue was whether, taking advantage of the friendly disposition of the colonies, by a mere rearrangement of taxation we shall not now open the way for further fuller intercourse with our kinsfolk and best customers by bonds of mutual interest. This would prepare the way for the coming, glorious time, when the British Empire, founded on complete independence in its local divisions, shall still be united in common purposes and objects, and shall be self-sufficient and self-sustaining before the world, and amid the strain and stress of clashing ambitions stand four squares to all the winds that blow. The Liberal Unionists would promise the government support, and stated that they would march to the front with them to victory. Mr. Chamberlain in conclusion declared that British instinct was national and rose nobly to the conception of the nation's imperial mission.

Lord Lansdowne said he believed the people were weary of the invertebrate, molluscous type of free trade. Mr. Chamberlain's proposed measure would constitute a critical point in the history of the world. No government, however strong, was able to impose a policy of that kind, either on the people of this country or on those of the colonies, because we are not starting with a clear slate. The question of dealing with the colonies is infinitely more serious than with foreign countries. With the latter it is possible to come together, or to part company, but with the colonies there must be not a hasty marriage with repentance at leisure. The outlying states developed their own constitutions. They were self-reliant, devoted to self-government, and recent interference. Our statesmen must be able to explain to the colonies just what was wanted. He was able to state that Mr. Belfour's sympathy was in the direction of closer union within the empire.

The Hon. Alfred Lyttelton declared himself in accord both with Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Balfour, but that there must be no hurry.

Mr. Chamberlain presided over and delivered a speech at an immense meeting in the Royal Albert hall under the auspices of the Liberal-Unionists council. The vast building was crowded in every part, and was decorated with sentences from Mr. Chamberlain's previous speech. On the platform were Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, the Marquis and the Marchioness of Lansdowne, the Earl and Countess of Melbourne, and a large number of the nobility and members of the House of Commons and colonial repersentatives.

In beginning his speech Mr. Chamberlain, who was given a tremendous ovation, said that the organization of the Liberal-Unionists council was primarily for the maintenance of the union between England and Ireland under the control of one supreme council. There was nothing in the present circumstances to justify the relaxation of vigilance in this direction.

After discussing the length of the fiscal question on practically the same lines as his former speeches Mr. Chamberlain returned to the Irish question, and said that the council was impressing upon the government the necessity of reform in the Irish representation. The leader of the Nationalist party in the house of Commons controlled some 80 votes which were swung from side to side without regard to the merits of the case, and with the avowed object of making the British government impossible, and coercing the British parliament to give him what he wanted.

Strikers to Run a Federal Candidate

Beaten almost to a standstill in the great strike at Sydney steel works, the Provincial Workman's Association Thursday night sprung a new move when at a monster demonstrtion they decided to enter the political lists and nominate a labor candidate for the House of Commons at the coming Dominion elections. The action is taken, it is believed, to force the government to take action in the grievances between them and the Steel company, as the presence of a third party candidate in the constituency, where the bulk of the voters are members of the P.W.A., they think would imperil the election of government candidates, as well as opposition. Three thousand men attended the meeting, and passed resolutions protesting against the presence of troops sent by the government, and calling for their immediate recall, failing which they will oppose the government until it "delivers the people from the fangs of the great bounty-fed corporation in Sydney."

King's Only Unmarried Daughter.

The 36th birthday of Princess Victoria, the only unmarried daughter of King Edward, was observed July 6 with the usual salute and flying of flags over the royal residences. It is a matter of regret to her relatives and numerous friends that the Princess is once again in such a delicate state of health that she has been obliged to leave London at the height of the season and go to Scotland for rest in complete retirement. Like her grandmother, the late Queen Victoria, the Princess is never well when in London.

JACQUES CARTIER.

In the seaport of St. Malo, 'twas a smiling morn in May,
When the Commodore, Jacques Cartier, to the westward sailed away;
In the crowded old cathedral all the town were on their knees
For the safe return of kinsmen from the undiscovered seas;
And every autumn blast that swept o'er pinnacle and pier
Filled many hearts with sorrow, and gentle hearts with fear.

A year passed o'er St. Malo—again came round the day
When the Commodore, Jacques Cartier, to the westward sailed away;
But no tidings from the absent had come the way they went,
And tearful were the vigils that many a maiden spent;
And manly hearts were filled with gloom and gentle hearts with fear
When no tidings came from Cartier at the closing of the year.

But the earth is as the future, it hath its hidden side,
And the captain of St. Malo was rejoicing in his pride;
In the forests of the north—while his townsmen mourned his loss—
He was rearing on Mount Royal the fleur-de-lis and cross;
And when two months were over and added to the year
St. Malo hailed him home again, cheer answering to cheer.

He told them of a region, hard, iron-bound and cold,
Nor seas of pearl abounded, nor mines of shinging gold;
Where the wind from Thule freezes the word upon the lip,
And the ice in spring comes sailing athwart the early ship;
He told them of the frozen scene until they thrilled with fear,
And piled fresh fuel on the hearth to make them better cheer.

But when he changed the strain—he told how soon is cast
In early spring the fetters that hold the waters fast;
How the winter causeway, broken, is drifted out to sea,
And rills and rivers sing with pride the anthem of the free;
How the magic wand of summer clad the landscape to his eyes,
Like the dry bones of the just when they wake in Paradise.

He told of the Algonquin braves—the hunters of the wild;
Of how the Indian mother in the forest rocks her child;
Of how, poor souls, they fancy in every living thing
A spirit good or evil that claims their worshipping;
Of how they brought their sick and maim'd for him to breathe upon;
And of the wonders wrought for them thro' the Gospel of St. John.

He told them of the river whose mighty current gave
Its freshness for a hundred leagues to ocean's briny wave;
He told them of the glorious scene presented to his sight
What time he reared the cross and crown on Hochelaga's height;
And of the fortress cliff that keeps of Canada the key—
And they welcomed back Jacques Cartier from the perils over sea.

—Hon. Thomas D'Arcy McGee.

USES OF A SHANK.

A Toronto Housewife Tells the Secret of Her Management.

A thrifty Toronto housewife, says The Star, the other day confided to a friend, new at the business, a few of her pet economies in the purchase of meat.

"You see," she explained, "by the end of the month my finances are usually very run down—in very poor health indeed. I find then that a good beef shank is a friend in need. It is put on in cold water and allowed to simmer for hours, until the meat drops from the bone, then cooled and the meat cut up very small with a knife—the meat-cutter is no use here. If there is much liquid it must be reduced by boiling, strained, added to the meat and the whole very highly seasoned with salt, pepper, and a very little allspice and nutmeg, just a suspicion. Put the meat in molds to be turned out when needed. If the family is small we have a hot stew the first day, and after a day's intermission the cold. The flavor can be varied by browning the meat first in the pot before adding the water. Take some marrow out of the bone to put in the bottom of the pot, brown the meat well with a minced onion, and then barely cover with water. The seasoning may be added after it has cooked a couple of hours, and I find that a bunch of summer savory tied in cheesecloth improves it. If the bones and all the scraps of gristle and fat are saved they can be simmered for hours the second day, and after straining and cooling you will have a pot of excellent jelly for stock and a bowl of clear fat from the top which will do for frying, pastry, or ginger cakes. So, you see, we get two dinners anyway, sometimes three, stock for future use, and a big dish of scraps for the dog or chickens, all for 35c or 40c. A shank is the poor man's refuge and the rich man's delight—if his wife knows how it ought to be cooked."

Race for a Canadian LL.D. Degree.

In a race against time with an LL.D. degree as the prize, President Harper, of the University of Chicago, started on a flying trip from Madison, Wis., to Toronto, Ont., on the 9th June. A special train to Chicago and the holding of a Michigan Central express at Buffalo by special arrangement, were features of the trip. President Harper was in Madison attending the jubilee of the University of Wisconsin, where he was given an LL.D. degree that day. In the afternoon he left on a special train over the North-Western, arriving in Chicago at 4.45 p.m. At 5.20 he started over the Michigan Central, reaching Buffalo at 6.45, Central time. The hour scheduled for the departure of the train for Toronto was exactly the minute of the arrival of Dr. Harper's train from Chicago. He duly arrived in Toronto, and on the 10th Dr. Harper delivered a convocation address in the afternoon at Toronto University, received another LL.D., and left for Chicago in the evening.

The Secretive Hen.

Hens like to lay in a rather dark nest, the opening from which is hidden from view. If box nests with the opening towards the wall are placed in the poultry house, very few hens will steal their nests in out-of-the-way places.

LIEUT.-COL. MERRITT.

Splendid and Unique Military Career of the New Commander of the Governor-General's Bodyguard.

Among the recent changes announced in The Militia Gazette is that of the Governor-General's Body Guard, the command of which passes from Lieut.-Colonel Clarence A. Denison to Major Wm. Hamilton Merritt. Though there is a break in a family command, for the first time, yet the military traditions of the country should be fully maintained by the present commanding officer, whose family took a leading part in the French war, the revolutionary war and the war of 1812, 13 and 14. The Historical Record of the regiment sets forth these facts and the editor, Capt. E. J. Chambers, now of Ottawa, gives the following as a record: Major Merritt entered the G.G.B.G. as a trooper on the 28th of October, 1882, Second Lieutenant Feb. 29, 1884; Lieutenant 6th of June, 1884; Captain, May 31st, 1889; Major, second in command, June 11th, 1898; was appointed Adjutant August 2nd, 1889, and acted as such for some nine years, including service as acting Adjutant in Northwest campaign, 1885. He was in command of the party which captured the Sioux Chief, White Cap, and his band. When the South African war broke out he went at his own expense to Cape Town and offered his services and was appointed a squadron commander in 1st Brabant's Horse, he also was at different periods of his service second in command of 2nd Brabant's Horse and A.D.C. to Gen. Sir E. Y. Brabant, K.C.B., C.M.G., and Colonel Dalgety, C.B., his successor in command of the colonial division.

While connected with the colonial division, Major Merritt took part in the following general engagements: Labuscagnes Nek, Aliwal North, Wepener, Wittebergen, Lielefontein, Veredefort, Schoolplatz, Magato's Nek, Doornhoek, Kwaggafontein and Cyferfontein. In an official record of services, issued after the breaking-up of the colonial division, Brigadier-General Sir E. Y. Brabant, reported that Major Merritt's conduct "gave entire satisfaction" to his commanding officers, and, further, that he performed his duties "with zeal and ability."

On the colonial division being broken up Major Merritt returned to Europe and Captain Chambers goes on to state "December 29th, 1900, Major Merritt applied to the War Office for permission to raise in Canada a corps of light horse, 600 strong. His Majesty's Government were willing and anxious to have "the Canadian Rangers," raised by Major Merritt at the earliest possible moment after February 15, 1901. On the date in question the Under Secretary of State for War wrote the Under Secretary of State for the Colonies requesting him "to inform Mr. Secretary Chamberlain, that, if he concurs and if the Canadian Government agree, Mr. Brodrick is prepared to accept this (Major Merritt's) offer." The conditions of organization provided that the selection of officers and men should be in the hands of Major Merritt.

Feb. 20, 1901, the Colonial office wrote Major Merritt, transmitting a copy of the War Office letter and adding: "A copy of this letter has been forwarded to the Governor-General of Canada with an intimation that if his Ministers see no objection and are willing to assist in the manner indicated, His Majesty's Government will be glad to avail themselves of your offer."

It is doubtful if there is another case where the British Government authorized a Canadian officer to raise a corps in Canada entirely at the Imperial expense, and further giving that officer the right to choose his own officers and men. The final outcome of the matter was the despatch of the Second C. M. R. to South Africa in January, 1902, under the conditions originally agreed upon by the War Office, except that the Government of Canada selected the officers and men.

Home Precepts in Boys' Letters.

In their "composition" exercises boys often make statements which on the face of them are the expression of some precept or teaching emanating from home—not from school. In the following extract—taken from a lad's essay on "Cleanliness"—the teaching of the mother does as plainly appear as if she herself had guided the child's pen:

"We should always keep ourselves clean in case of an axident in the street. If you was run over, and you hurt your leg badly, you would be undrest by the doctor, and you would be disgraced all down the street if you was unclean. If you was to fall over and cut your hand, the 1st thing is to wash your hand well, and get all the bits of dirt out.

The Fernie Free Press

ESTABLISHED 1898.

H.G. WATSON, Editor — J. R. WALLACE, Manager

THE FERNIE FREE PRESS, FERNIE BRITISH COLUMBIA

FRIDAY, JULY 29, 1904.

The City of Fernie, if you please! How does it look in print?

* * *

THE incorporation of Fernie will be welcomed by all, if only for the reason that many of the dogs in the town, those that are not worth the price of a tag, will be exterminated.

* * *

Fernie when built up may appropriately be termed "the city of cellars". Nearly every reputable building is on a foundation enclosing a first class cellar or basement. They ensure ample storage room and the excavated matter is gradually raising the streets to the proper grade.

* * *

The failure of the fire of last Saturday to spread in the green timbers where no slashing has been made must cause considerable satisfaction to those who have invested in timber limits. Fire is about the only foe that the speculator in timber has to fear, and it is gratifying to learn that under normal conditions this danger is not so great as is generally believed.

* * *

SEVERAL weekly papers in the interior of B. C. have published complaints against the Provincial Conservative Association because certain advertising debts contracted previous to the last provincial election have not yet been settled. The FREE PRESS adds its voice to the others. This paper carried a lengthy advertisement for the association on the order of John Houston, the then President. The old and the new executive were billed at different times but with no satisfactory results. The local Liberal and Conservative Associations paid their bills and it is hard to understand why the Provincial Association should evade its honest debts by procrastination. When Mr. Green spoke of the uncharitable attitude of the Press towards the government he probably overlooked the fact that the Association which put the government in power have not treated the Press in a charitable manner.

* * *

THE Corbin Road from Spokane to a point on the C. P. R.—probably Yak or Cranbrook, will certainly be built in the near future. Such a road will be of immense advantage to Spokane and to the towns along the Crow's Nest line. It is no secret that the C. P. R. is identified with this line with the object of competing with the Northern Pacific and Great Northern. It is said that the C. P. R. will then run daily trains between Spokane and St. Paul via the Crows Nest and the Souris lines. The present traffic between Spokane and St. Paul is enormous, five passenger trains running each way per day being required to meet this end of the trade. The serious encroachment made upon C.P.R. territory by the Great Northern will naturally be met by the former in a like spirit, and a healthy competition that will be beneficial to everybody will result.

"Geo. Fraser, M. P. P. for Grand Forks, is in the city on private business, a guest at the Vernon. Mr. Fraser, who is deeply interested in the coal and oil lands of Southeast Kootenay, has visited that section of the country since he was here a few weeks ago. He says there is an immense crowd of those interested now in the country prospecting. That part of the country is becoming a great centre of industry. Unfortunately no provision has been made for the building of roadways into it from B. C. points, and in consequence trade is flowing through United States avenues. Provision should, he thinks, be made at once for putting in trails, thus reserving to the province all the benefits possible from the opening up of this rich tract."

This coming from a supporter of the McBride government should carry considerable weight. When Mr. McBride was in Fernie the matter was brought before him and although he was given the opinion of a competent trail builder who had been over the route many times that a trail could be built from Fernie into the heart of the Flathead for the small sum of $800 yet the premier put the matter off on the ground that the government could not afford it.

* * *

AUGUST 20th, the day following Fernie's first municipal election, should be set aside as a civic holiday. A good program of sports could be arranged, in fact the base ball club is now in communication with Calgary for a game at about that time.

* * *

THE Trackmen's union from Kootenay Landing to Medicine Hat is thinking of again bringing its annual excursion to Fernie on Labor Day. The Trackmen may count on a warm welcome as well as financial assistance if they decide to again visit Fernie.

McDOUGALL—HARVEY.

From the Arnprior Chronicle.

Mr. Alexander McDougall, of Fernie, B. C., and Miss Kate Harvey, of Arnprior, third daughter of John Harvey, Esq.., of this place, handed out a genuine surprise to the major portion of the community on Wednesday of this week by being made husband and wife. They were married at high noon in the R. C. church here, Rev. Father Chaine conducting the ceremony. The bride, who wore a travelling costume of blue broadcloth with hat to match, was attended by her sister Miss Minnie, whose costume was of pongee silk with lace trimmings. Mr. J. L. Harvey, the bride's brother acted as groomsman. The bridal party had the church to themselves, which would have been by no means the case had it not been the wish of the principals that the event should be marked by quietness and an absence of display. The only visitor from a distance was Mrs. Logue, of Maniwaki. The wedding feast over, Mr. and Mrs. McDougall took the Pacific express for the west. En route to Fernie they will halt for a few days at Winnipeg, where both bride and groom have many friends and where the latter has an extensive business connection. A finer looking couple has seldom entrained upon a honeymoon tour here or elsewhere, and in addition to this quality they have popularity, as was evidenced by the many gifts received. They bear with them to their home in the Pacific province the very best wishes of a legion of friends for a long and happy life.

Mr. Wright stated that the stone for the foundation was being quarried at Michel and that the excavation and foundation work would soon commence. It is not yet fully decided what material will be used in the construction of the walls but it is probable that concrete blocks will receive the preference.

The Imperial Hotel was formally opened last evening. A large number of citizens to whom neat invitations had been sent sat down to a very elegant repast. A walk through the house from kitchen to the last bed-room shows a first class hostelry, that is a credit to the enterprising proprietors, Messrs. Jean and Murchison, and to the hustling contractors, Messrs. Swallwell and Thomas who completed the job from beginning to end in seven weeks. The rooms are all bright and airy, and the bar is furnished throughout with cut glass. The house contains 26 bedrooms. Already the house is nearly filled with guests.

A TRIBUTE TO MR. BLAKE

NO IRISH PATRIOT HAS DONE NOBLER THINGS FOR ERIN THAN HE.

Freeman's Journal of Dublin Eulogizes His Recent Self-Sacrifice to Cause He Has at Heart—Former Canadian Statesman Always Gave His Compatriots Moderate and Sane Advice—Persistent Patriotism.

The Freeman's Journal of Dublin, in its issue of May 30th, says:

In the County of Longford we have evidence, the practical experience through many years, of what a faithful and devoted representative like Mr. Blake can become to his people, and how strong their attachment can, in the course of time, be to him. Mr. Blake's position in the Irish national movement is unique. He had been known in Ireland, no doubt, as a powerful Canadian friend of Home Rule before he actually joined the Parliamentary party; but it may be said that when he was first elected for Longford he was a stranger to its people. The people of Longford, however, soon found out the calibre of the man they had made their representative. He had been leader of the Liberal party in the great Dominion of Canada, but, as a member of the Irish Parliamentary party, he observed the rules of discipline which made that party so powerful in Parliament with as strict a punctiliousness as the rawest recruit to its ranks, who, through inexperience, might have feared making some mistake that would have brought down on him the censures of his leaders. That was the first characteristic of Mr. Blake that appealed to the electors of Longford, and to the people of Ireland. From the first he was prepared to shoulder his musket and to march in the ranks, if need be. He came into the fight, in fact, not for glory or gain, but for the deep and profound love he bears the country from which his forbears came. It was not in the nature of things, however, that a man of his commanding ability and long political experience should fail to influence profoundly the counsels of the party. From the beginning his advice was sought; it was always moderate and sane, but always firm and definite. He went through many miserable years with as quiet and firm a determination to see the Irish cause triumphant as if no catastrophe had ever occurred, hoping always that the dark days would soon pass. They did pass at last, and found the member for Longford still at his post, still giving to the benefit of the Irish cause in the English Parliament the weight of his influence and individuality. This persistency of patriotism was the second feature in the character of Mr. Blake that appealed to Longford and to Ireland. He had put his hand to the plough, and there was no turning back. And now he gives the final proof of his devotion to Ireland. In his speech yesterday to his constituents he referred to his recent illness, to the fact that the home of his children and his grandchildren is four thousand miles away across the ocean, to old age creeping in on him. "I have been convinced at last," he said, "that I can no longer do all the work that I used to be able to do, and that I have got to give up some of my work, and the choice was before me, therefore, whether I would give up the professional work with which I had been connected for nearly fifty years or the representation of this constituency. I have decided to give up the one and to stick to the other so long as you want me to stick to you; and, therefore, although with lessened energies, yet with a more concentrated use of those energies for the Irish cause, I hope, as soon as arrangements can be made, and in the course of the next year, to give my single attentions to those concerns which you entrust me to represent." This is a decision the self-sacrifice of which only those who understand the professional position of Mr. Blake can appreciate. From time to time Irish patriots have given up much for the love of Irish liberty, but never, we believe, has any Irish patriot, considering all the circumstances, short of giving up his life, done a nobler thing than this. Mr. Blake, a man who might to-day have been Prime Minister of Canada, gives up entirely a great legal position and large income rather than resign from the ranks of the little army that he rightly believes is keeping, through every criticism and every discouragement, the flag of Irish nationality flying. The people of Longford should be proud, indeed, to have such a member.

Mr. Blake's speech to his constituents covered the whole field of Irish affairs as they are at the present time. He dealt at some length with the question of land purchase, showing why it is that Mr. Wyndham's act has not been the success it might have been. First, the Government refused, and still refused the necessary amendments demanded by the National Convention. Secondly, the landlord has attempted to play the part of Shylock. "What the landlord," he says, "has been attempting to do is to obtain all the advantage gained by the use of British credit—this money being lent at a moderate rate of interest—as well as all the advantage of the bonus, and to suggest to you to take upon yourselves for the whole of your own lives, and for the lives of the children who live after you, certain fixed burdens as to which you will have an inexorable creditor, the Government of the country, whom you will have to pay to the day, and as to which the credit of all your local funds is charged for the default of anyone amongst you, so that the country, the locality and your neighbors go bail for the defaulters. They want to get all the benefit of that as well. You have therefore a long day to look forward to, and you have to make your bargain a fair and liberal bargain, but a bargain made with due regard to the inexorable nature of it, the length of its term, to the circumstances of agriculture, present and future, and to the consideration of whether it affords you a reasonable chance of seeing in your own day, if you are very young, or seeing, at any rate, daylight for those who come after you. Now, that is a question which is to be disposed of by yourselves, and there is nobody better able when the position is set before them to judge of it than the farmers of Ireland, but you must never forget that you have always at your back the old safeguard, unsatisfactory as it is, of the judicial rent. You are not shut up to buy on any terms the landlord demands, and to hold your hand may often be the best way, and to demand a second term rent may often be the best way of making a tolerable bargain." It is to be hoped that the farmers of Ireland will ponder these wise words. Mr. Blake had also some timely remarks to make on the question of the redistribution of grazing lands, on that of the laborers and the town tenants, and his references to Sir Horace Plunkett's schemes for doing away with the necessity for Home Rule will perhaps repay perusal as much as any other portion of his address. The speech is worth studying from beginning to end. It is the pronouncement of a statesman and a patriot, of a man to whom Ireland owes a deep debt of gratitude for wise advice in moments of crisis, and for an unsurpassable devotion to her ideals through all vicissitudes.

THE PLAINS OF ABRAHAM.

Major Woods' Description of the Battle in His Recent Book.

In his recent work, "The Fight for Canada," Major William Wood, of the 8th Royal Rifles, Canadian Militia, secretary Quebec branch of the Navy League, president Literary and Historical Society, Quebec, thus describes the Battle of the Plains:

The bad example of the Canadians was presently followed by the French, and a scattered fire broke out at some two hundred paces. It was a hurried, nervous, and undisciplined attempt to shake the British at long range before closing in on them for the final charge. And it was all in vain. There stood the long, straight, two-deep line, with shouldered arms—a steadfast, living wall of red, flashing defiance from its steel-pointed crest of bayonets—magnificently silent, yet eagerly waiting to seize the long-despaired-of-chance to fight it out fairly, hand to hand, on equal terms, and in the open field. Closer and closer came the densely massed attacking line of battle, its officers leading it on with the utmost gallantry to the very last; but with its far right and left both melting away as the Canadians sought their familiar brushwood cover and its French battalions themselves breaking it asunder as they instinctively bore outwards from the centre to save their deserted flanks for a double overlap of fire and steel. And soon even these tried veterans lost heart a little when they began to near the narrow forty paces where they had to meet that silently expectant line in the death-grapple which was to decide the fate of half America. They still came on, however; though now their thronged white ranks only surged forward a few steps at a time and broke again and again in wild bursts of impotent flame and smoke, like baffled waves off a reef-protected shore. And as they came, Wolfe's straining eye was measuring every pace of the fast closing interval—a hundred— seventy-five—fifty — forty— "Fire!"—and the first volley thundered from the Grenadiers, being instantly followed by another one from each battalion all down the British line. So perfectly delivered were these famous volleys that they sounded like single discharges of artillery, and so truly aimed that the whole front rank of the enemy went down, almost to a man, before their terrific storm of bullets.

Mastodon Found in Ice.

James H. Startman, popularly known as "Slim," who, with Joe Oates, returned to Nome recently from a search on the Koyukuk for Midas Creek, affirms with great deliberation that, in a sort of ice cave, about five miles from the Koyukuk River, a huge mastodon rests enshrouded in a sheet of ice. Startman avers that he accompanied a number of natives to the cave, and, while he did not obtain the exact dimensions of the huge beast, he convinced himself that the extinct animal was there in a good state of preservation. Startman's story is confirmed by Oates, who states that the natives of a village about 400 miles above the Koyukuk's mouth, showed him a lot of mastodon's hair, about five inches long, coarse in fibre and brownish in color. The natives alleged that it was found in the cave, and through an ice-coat of three or four feet thick, the monster of primeval ages could be seen.

Sowing the Seed.

The colporteurs of the Upper Canada Tract Society during May sold 1,774 copies of Scriptures and religious books on their many journeys throughout Ontario.

The Sailors' Rest, or "Snug Harbor," is now fully open for the sailors in Kingston, and will be a great boon to such men. Hearty thanks were received by the directors at a recent meeting in Toronto from Central China for the annual grant of $500, which keeps 70 native Christian Chinese colporteurs at work in the great Provinces of Hunan and Hupeh.

Last year these men sold no less than 328,000 Chinese books of many kinds, and 4,000 copies of the Scriptures, with 31,000 Portions of the Word of God. Well might the Rev. Dr. John say at the late annual meeting in Hankow, "Our best thanks are due to the Religious Tract Society of Upper Canada for its valuable help."

"It is strange that the people of his time did not pay more attention to Noah's warning."

"Perhaps they had had experience with weather prophets."

PRACTICAL IMPERIALISM.

Canadian Children's Correspondence With London and Australia—Interesting Letters From Distant Fellow Britons.

A valuable and interesting medium for diffusing Imperial sentiment is being conducted by Mr. R. W. Hicks, Principal of the Queen Victoria School, Close avenue, Toronto, through correspondence between his pupils and other children in England and Australia. Two years ago the plan was originated by Mr. Robert Cook, a teacher in the Fields School, London, England, who inquired at the office of the Canadian High Commissioner in London for some Canadian school with which his pupils might correspond, with a view to inculcating Imperialism. The name of Mr. Hicks, for reasons which Mr. Hicks in his modesty cannot see, was suggested, and a correspondence was entered upon between the pupils of both schools, which proved of value as well as interest. The London School Board, however, heard of it some time ago, and asked that it be stopped until they could think of a plan by which all board schools in London might correspond with one or more schools in the colonies.

Mr. Hicks meantime found the scheme working so well that he desired to extend it to Australia. He wrote to the Superintendent of Education, for South Australia and, the letter being published in The Children's Hour, an official publication, as a result an extensive correspondence has developed. Later on Mr. Hicks made an attempt to start a similar correspondence with pupils in Pennsylvania, but the frank manner in which Toronto pupils discussed American affairs from a Canadian standpoint soon demonstrated that this was unworkable, and it had to be abandoned. That more education will have to be inculcated is shown by the fact that some letters reach Toronto children from Australia, after passing under the review of the school teacher, addressed to "Toronto, Canada, U.S.A."

From the Canadian side the correspondence has proved beneficial in spreading a knowledge of this country, the Canadian boys' descriptions of their holidays inspiring a keen desire among London boys to come and share their enjoyment. The letters are written as homework by the pupils, who are in this way instructed in letter-writing.

The correspondence has a broadening influence, as it presents the children's views of events from the standpoint of other worlds. For instance, Alfred Parry, writing from the London Field School, Hackney, London, says: "I live in the northeast of London in a quiet street. At present I am not very well off, but I must not grumble, as there are many who are poorer than I. I will tell you about our football teams. Of our first eleven the captain is a small chap named Abraham Goodman, who is a forward and plays inside left, while the vice-captain, Henry Barry, plays centre halfback. He is a hard kicker." Then follows a lengthy description of other members of the team and their conduct on the field, ending with: "Henry Fuller is vice-captain and often scores a goal for his team because he dashes at the ball and carries everything before him. Wishing you a merry Christmas and a happy New Year, I remain your friendly fellow-subject, Alfred Parry."

A letter from Holman Arndt of Mylor, South Australia, said in part: "In answer to your teacher's letter which I saw in The Children's Hour, a special book printed for the use of schools, I am going to write you a few lines about South Australia. South Australia is a very pretty country, at least the part where I live is very pretty, but the north is dry, for it does not have enough rain. The people succeed pretty well in their attempts at farming, gardening, fruit-growing and fishing. Mylor is one of the suburbs of Adelaide, which is in the south of South Australia. The district is very often flooded because of terrible rainfalls which we have. The City of Adelaide is a very busy city. It has large streets, which are always crowded with people, and some very large and beautiful buildings, all of stone. Brushes and all different kinds of things are manufactured in this city. Fruit is also sent away in abundance from here also fishes. . . Our school room overlooks beautiful scenery, of large green trees, several bubbling little creeks and lovely bush flowers of all colors. We have a lot of beautiful flowers here, one particularly, called "wattle," and is of a yellow color with pretty green leaves. . . My mother's cottage is situated in a low valley with hills all around it, for the country about here is very hilly, and lower down still lies a very pretty gorge, much admired by every person who sees it."

An Imperial touch is given by William J. Wade of Yunta, South Australia, who says: "I started going to school the day the Queen died." He says the average annual rainfall there is about five inches, and that the drought has had awful effects on the country. The production around there are wool, sheep, cattle, fat and skins. In a postscript he says: "When writing I wish you would give me a description of the Niagara Falls."

"The South Australia people are very much like the English," writes Miss Dolly Byrne of Warooka, South Australia. "Their favorite amusements are swimming, hunting, bicycle riding, cricket, football, tennis and horse racing. We are also fond of music and dancing. There is quite a craze for walking matches here lately."

A Sailor Boy's Rendition.

Amusing was the effort of the lad who, on being requested to write down what he could remember of the teacher's lesson on the Sermon on the Mount, reproduced one precept as follows: "If thy brother compel thee go with him one mile, go with him by train."

WON HIM A FORTUNE.

How Genin Got Barnum to Advertise Him All Over the Country.

When Jenny Lind, the great Swedish singer, visited America in 1848 she not only won a fortune for herself, but made two men wealthy as well. One of them was Barnum, the showman. It was Barnum who brought her to America. He ventured all that he could raise in advertising the wonderful woman, and his successful management of her tour in this country lifted Barnum to grand business success.

But there was another man who got rich without having anything to do with the management of the Jenny Lind concert tour. It was Genin, the New York hatter. His name and business were advertised by Barnum wherever the Jenny Lind concerts were advertised, and it didn't cost Genin one penny for all of the advertising that Barnum did for him.

There was no hall in New York big enough to accommodate the crowds which attended the first concert in this country, so Castle Garden was fitted up for the purpose, and the seats were sold at auction. Now, Genin was an unknown hatter, although he was a good one. He went to the auction sale of seats at Castle Garden and outbid everybody. He ran up the price of the first ticket until some of his friends thought he was going crazy and tried to induce him to desist. But Genin was not crazy by any means. He kept on bidding until he finally got the first ticket for $750. He had outbid the richest men in New York.

The next day and every day afterward for many months it was announced that "Genin, the New York hatter, had paid $750 for the first Jenny Lind ticket."

And wherever Barnum advertised his concert he advertised that fact to show what a great attraction he was touring with. As a consequence Genin's hats were in demand all over this country, and he became enormously rich.

COURTSHIP IN FRANCE.

Lovemaking Begins After the Wedding Bells Have Rung.

The word "courtship" has no equivalent in the French tongue, because the thing itself does not exist. Stolen tete-a-tetes, even furtive kisses, may, of course, be indulged in, but only under a modified chaperonage, the half shut eye of parents or guardians. No young French lady would be permitted, for instance, to undertake a cycling expedition with her future husband. Still less could she take train with him for the purpose of visiting relations in the country were the journey of half an hour's duration only. Lovemaking begins with the honeymoon.

For centuries, alike in the humblest as well as the highest ranks, matrimonial settlements have kept family possessions together in France—and enriched village notaries!

No sooner was serfdom abolished than the peasants followed bourgeois example, dowering their daughters and securing the interest of their sons by law. In provincial archives exist many of these documents, the rustic bride's portion consisting of furniture, clothes, money and sometimes cattle or a bit of land. The archives of the Aube contain the marriage contract of a skilled day laborer (manouvrier) and a widow whose property was double that of his own. The deed secured him joint enjoyment and ownership. I cannot here, of course, enter into the intricacies of the French marriage laws. There is the regime dotal, which safeguards the dowry of the wife. There is the regime de la communaute, which makes wedlock strictly a partnership as far as income and earnings are concerned. And there are minute regulations as to the provision for children and widows. The latter are always sacrificed to the former.—Cornhill.

One of Them For the Company.

A well known comedian celebrated for his eccentricities boarded a street car the other day and duly paid his fare upon demand. After riding a block or so farther he produced another nickel and tendered the same to the passing conductor.

The honest conductor refused the proffered coin, while the actor vehemently protested his desire to pay his fare.

"You have given me your fare already," argued the man in uniform.

"I know," responded the comedian, "but this is for the company."

Every one laughed excepting the discomfited conductor, who had omitted to register the first collection.

Your Dear Old Mother.

Young man, did you ever put your arms around your dear old mother, who has loved and cared for you, and tell her that you love her and are grateful for the tears she has shed and the prayers she has offered for you? She may think that you love her without your assuring her that you do, but it costs you but little effort to tell her, and your words may bring more joy and sunshine to her heart than you ever dreamed of.—Exchange.

A Wonderful Memory.

Miss Antique—I remember, when I was a little tot, I could play several pieces on the piano by ear. Miss Snappey—How very remarkable! Miss Antique—That I could play by ear? Miss Snappey—No, dear. That you can remember it.

Shifting the Dazed Identity.

"Oh, no; I'm all right. It is you who are some one else."

Nothing can bring you peace but the triumph of principles.—Emerson.

DIVINE OPTIMISM.

I held it truth, with him who sings
To one clear harp in divers tones,
That men may rise on stepping-stones
Of their dead selves to higher things.

I sometimes hold it half a sin
To put in words the grief I feel;
For words, like Nature, half reveal
And half conceal the Soul within.

But, for the unquiet heart and brain,
A use in measured language lies;
The sad mechanic exercise,
Like dull narcotics, numbing pain.

In words like weeds I'll wrap me o'er,
Like coarsest clothes against the cold:
But that large grief which these enfold
Is given in outline and no more.

I hold it true, whate'er befall;
I feel it, when I sorrow most;
'Tis better to have loved and lost
Than never to have loved at all.
—Alfred, Lord Tennyson.

PERPETUATE CHARTER.

The Ontario Government Purchases the Toronto Medical School Building.

At the last session of the Legislature an act was passed authorizing the Government to purchase for $12,000 the building of the Toronto School of Medicine on Gerrard street, which, since the federation of the universities, is no longer required. Recently an Order-in-Council was put through, taking over the building at the price stipulated, as well as the charter of the Toronto School of Medicine. "There can be now no revival of that school as a rival to the university," said Premier Ross, speaking of the matter. "It is believed that the property can be sold for at least the price we paid for it under the terms of confederation, and probably for more than that. We will sell it as soon as we get our price for it."

The Toronto School of Medicine was incorporated in 1851 by special act of Parliament, the charter being granted to Dr. John Rolph, Dr. Joseph Workman, Dr. W. T. Aikins, Dr. James Langstaff Gavin, Dr. Russell and Dr. T. D. Morrison. The corporation at the time of its merger was as follows: Dr. J. H. Richardson, Dr. Hugh Ogden, Dr. James Thorburn, Dr. W. W. Ogden, Dr. Moses Aikins, Dr. R. A. Reeve and Dr. William Oldright.

An interesting little ceremony took place in the office of the Minister of Education when the charter was formally turned over to the Government. The nominal members of the corporation now are: Hon. R. Harcourt, Mr. J. R. Cartwright, K.C., Deputy Attorney-General; Mr. John Millar, Deputy Minister of Education; Mr. Thomas Mulvey, K.C., Deputy Provincial Secretary, and Dr. C. A. Hodgetts, Assistant Registrar-General.

The charter of Trinity Medical School was surrendered to Trinity College some time ago, and in the federation was absorbed by the University of Toronto.

OUR PEDAGOGUES.

Provost Macklem Gives Some Good Advice to Embryo Teachers.

The closing exercises of the Toronto Normal School were marked by forceful addresses to the students from the Minister of Education and Rev. Dr. Macklem, provost of Trinity University.

Mr. Harcourt dwelt on the importance of inculcating Christian character in the minds of children. Added to this was perseverance, which was the foundation of genius, a high aim and tenacity of aim. The habit of reading should also be inculcated, and the direction of pupils in the selection of literature was most important.

Provost Macklem said that teachers were looked to just as preachers to foster higher ideals and assist in the formation of character. That the Canadian youth required training in manners was hardly open to question. The average boy knows little of respect and nothing of reverence. The Bible Society meeting in Massey Hall, of which they were thoroughly ashamed, proved there was much to be done. The lack of good manners ran like a thread through our whole social system.

"Each of you should become such a book to your pupils that in future life they will keep you on the shelf of memory," said the speaker in referring to the inspiration which each should give to the scholars. "Success was impossible without discipline and true success was achieved easily and naturally and not forced. Tact was the greatest possession, and it was comprised of joy, love, faith, meekness, confidence and moderation."

In conclusion he impressed upon the graduates high ideals, broad sympathies and unfailing hopefulness. Narrowness was always weakness, while broadness meant strength; and they should always keep in touch with the best and greatest in the movements of the world.

A Successful Canadian.

Dr. Adolf Lehmann is a Canadian who has met with success in India. A native of Simcoe County, Dr. Lehmann was graduated from the Ontario College of Agriculture, Guelph, in 1889, and later went to India. Five years ago the Maharajah of Mysore decided that his Government should take up the question of scientific agriculture, and to this end, Dr. Lehmann was appointed to establish the department and to be its head. The appointment was for five years, and when the term elapsed a few months ago he was re-appointed for a similar term and given a year's furlough. The other day he was at the Parliament Buildings renewing acquaintance with Mr. C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture. Dr. Lehmann said that there were very few Canadians in Mysore, a fact which caused the doctor some surprise. He thought that Canadians would do good work in the Indian Civil Service. The examinations had to be taken in England, but the appointments were very lucrative, ranging from $2,000 a year up as high even as $20,000.

VIGOR OF WESTERN LIFE.

Phenomenal Increase in Vancouver's Population Within Two Years.

The rapid increase of the city of Vancouver during the past two years, and the rate at which building operations are proceeding in every available direction are noteworthy facts, writes Bernard McEvoy in The Toronto Telegram. The population is now estimated by the civic officials at 36,000. The census of 1901 gave it as 26,196. As a consequence, although building has gone on with much vigor since 1901, the stress of population is so great that the boarding houses and hotels are all full, and it is almost impossible to rent any sort of a house. A friend of mine, wishful to obtain a dwelling, advertised twice, in two newspapers, the other day, and the only reply he got was from a man who had two rooms and a hen-walk to let, and that was about four miles from the city limits. The house agents either greet home-seekers with a broad smile, or escape by the back door when they see them coming. To build, therefore, is the only way for people to get a roof over their heads, and under these circumstances, not only are the contractors full of orders, but the building and loan associations are doing a rushing business. This will go on until the law of demand and supply has had time to work, when there will no doubt sometimes be a house with a "To Let" notice in the window. But the vigorous rush is simply a healthy development. It does not amount to a boom.

The difference between our climate here and yours in the east is shown by the fact that building has gone on here without cessation, except, perhaps, for a couple of days, right through the winter. The builders and contractors have worked under the pressure of customers with money to spend and no house to shelter them. A considerable number of them have come from Australia and New Zealand, finding conditions there scarcely to their minds. There has also been a sensible influx from Manitoba and the Northwest Territories of farmers who have made money and who are willing to put up with the prevailing wetness of the B. C. winter for the sake of its comparatively high thermometer. These newcomers are also well-to-do. One Australian is building fifty houses, the rental of which will average $25 to $30 a month.

The speed with which houses are built in Vancouver might well astonish those accustomed to the slower and solider methods of the east. With the exception of the stone that is used for the foundations, the only materials employed are fir and cedar, with a small amount of fair-to-middling brick for chimneys. The two kinds of lumber mentioned are the best in the world. The strength of Douglas fir is enormous. The only thing against it is that the turpentining resin will keep exuding from it to a greater extent for years. Otherwise it is an admirable building material. The great saw mills are working at it night and day. As for cedar, its workability and durability make it a fine wood for internal fittings. The lumber is prepared to such an extent at the mills that the store-rooms of these immense enterprises make every visitor who has the constructive bump at all developed, long to begin building houses.

There are the main timbers, the foundation posts, the joists, the "scantlings." There are the windows, ready glazed, in all convenient sizes. There are the noble-turned colonial pillars for the verandah, the ornamental cresting for the roof, the finial with which to surmount the gable. Doors of all kinds are there by the hundred; newel-posts, balusters, stair treads, "siding" or weather-boards to form the outside coating of the house. You see at once that much of the work that was formerly done on the premises of the builder is now produced by the quicker agencies of machinery and steam.

Nearly all the vacant lots in Vancouver having been forest land fourteen or fifteen years ago, are still covered for the most part with brushwood, and they also are dotted here and there with the stumps of giant pines and cedars. The first thing when a house is to be built, therefore, is to clear the lot, a work usually performed by Japs, who are surprisingly strong and patiently clever at it, and who charge an average price of from $30 to $50 per lot of the standard measurement of 66 feet x 163 feet. The building lot being cleared, a small amount of excavation, rarely more than two feet deep, is done by means of an excavating shovel and team. The operation of clearing has probably exposed enough boulders to build the foundations with, and these are drilled by hand and split into useful sizes, either by means of steel wedges and water—after the drill has done its work—or a small charge of blasting powder. The masons build the foundation walls 18 inches thick, and two or three feet or less above the ground. The basement walls consist, therefore, of two or three feet vertical of stone and six or seven feet of wood.

The quickness with which the skeleton of a house is erected on the stone foundation is marvellous. The roof is shingled, often in the second week after operations have begun, and the house is soon ready for the plasterer, who work about twice as quickly as his prototype in Ontario.

The working hours are from eight o'clock in the morning until five in the afternoon. Carpenters' wages are 40c. per hour, plasterers 45c., masons 60c. My observations lead me to the conclusion that the rate of speed at which work is done is very much greater here than anything I have seen in the east. It exceeds that of eastern Canada in about the same ratio as that of eastern Canada exceeds that of the Old Country. The designs of the houses are artistic and full of variety. There are homes here that in every way fill the requirements of people of taste.

When you attempt to strike a match in the dark the head is always on the other end.

ST. VITUS DANCE

MUST BE TREATED THROUGH THE BLOOD AND NERVES.

One of the Worst Cases on Record Cured Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

St Vitus dance is a nervous disease chiefly afflicting children. There are a number of signs by which it may be detected such as a twiching of the muscles of the face, shaky hands, or a jerky motion of the arms, a trembling or a dragging of the legs, irritability and restlessness. St. Vitus dance is caused by disordered nerves and blood—that is why it is always cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The pills fill the veins with pure, rich red blood, which in turn soothes and braces the nerves, making the sufferer well. Mrs. Luffman, Poucher's Mills, Ont., tells how Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured her daughter, Louise. "I do not think it possible," says Mrs Luffman, "that anyone could be afflicted with a more severe form of St. Vitus dance than that which attacked my daughter. Her arms and legs would twich and jerk, her face was drawn, and finally her left side became numb as though paralyzed. Her speech became thick and indistinct and she could neither stand still or sit down. Two doctors attended her but gave her no benefit. The last doctor who attended her told me she would never get better. It was at this discouraging time we decided to give her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After taking two boxes we could see an improvement; she could sleep better and the spasms were less severe. From that on she steadily grew better, and after using eight or ten boxes she was as strong and healthy a girl as you will find anywhere, and she has not had the least symptom of the trouble since."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the surest cure for St Vitus dance, hysteria, neuralgia, nervous exhaustion, paralysis, and all the nervous troubles of men, women and children. But you must get the genuine with the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around every box. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS.

For Weak Sickly Children During the Hot Weather Months.

Thousands of infants and children die through the hot weather months, because summer complaint and stomach troubles come suddenly, and mothers do not have the means at hand to promptly check and cure them. In homes where Baby's Own Tablets are used these little lives can be saved, and no home in the land where there are children should be without the Tablets. They promptly cure all stomach and bowel troubles and give relief to the teething children, and the mother has a guarantee that they contain no opiate or harmful drug. You can crush the Tablets to powder and give them with perfect safety to a new born babe. Mrs S. M. Black, St. Peters, N.S., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for most of the troubles from which little ones suffer, and I find them the best medicine I have ever tried." All medicine dealers sell these Tablets or you can get them by mail at 25 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

What would you do with a million—
Suppose that you had it to spend?
Would you do all the good that you possibly could
And never forget an old friend?
Would you go to the people who suffer
And chase the gaunt wolf from their door?
Or would you shut up like a cupboard
And eagerly grasp to get more?

What would you do with a million
Tucked safely away in a bank?
Do you honestly think you would paint the town pink
And turn yourself into a tank?
Would you purchase a swift automobile
And turn the thing loose for awhile?
Or would you drink water and travel
On foot to add more to your pile?

What would you do with a million,
All counted to show it was there?
Fixed up spick and span, you may have a plan
To loll back and chase away care.
But all of your schemes might work crosswise,
Get tangled and then go awry,
But still you would like nothing better,
I'll venture a dime, than to try.

Seeing no one, she raised her right foot, yanked off her toe slipper and shook a pebble from it. A look of relief spread over her face as she replaced the slipper and her jaws relaxed their rigidity. Will work wonders; think I'll try it.

Contrary to the Rules.

"Bertha, will you love me always? Will you think of me every moment of the day and dream of me by night? Will my name be engraved on your heart like a shoe sign on a billboard? Will you carry my image with you in your mind while you are doing the housework, peeling potatoes or doing up your back hair? My darling, I plead for all of your time. Do I ask too much?"

As he spoke these passionate words John Pendergaster took her soft, clinging hand in his ham-like fin and stroked it a few times while he waited for her answer.

"Dear John," said the beautiful young thing at last, a smile lighting up her face and disclosing the four dollar filling in her front teeth, "you know I love you, but do you realize what you have asked? I should just love to do that better than anything I can think of right now, but woe is me. I am a member of the union, and by its rules we are forbidden to love a man for more than eight hours a day."

The Noblest Sight.

To see a hilltop bathed in light
Is certainly a pretty sight.

To see a sweet girl passing by
Is more than pleasing to the eye.

A nice and nobby new spring hat
Is certainly worth looking at.

A fiery, high strung prancing steed
Is worth a passing glance indeed.

Than all these it is better still
To look at one ten dollar bill.

Possible Explanation.

"What made the tower of Pisa lean?" asked the teacher.

"Was there a famine in the land?" timidly asked a little girl in the back seat.

Sign of Youth.

"How old is Miss Jenks?"

"She must be pretty young. I heard her telling what the man must be like whom she would marry."

Cause and Effect.

Where are the brides of yesteryear?
I cannot tell, but, maybe,
The reason that they are not here
Is that they're tending baby.

Deadly Insult.

"That man I was just talking to insulted me, and I shall never speak to him again."

"Did he ask you to go to work?"

One Exception.

"Don't you believe the trusts should be smashed?"

"All except the egg trust."

ALL USED UP BY HEADACHES.

Could Not Eat or Work—Powders and Quick Cures of no Avail—Lasting Cure Obtained From

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

This case of Mr. Barber well illustrates the way in which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures headaches.

He tried the so-called "quick cures" first, but without obtaining benefit. It is a well known fact that such remedies when they do bring temporary relief do so with a tremendous waste of nerve force and consequent injury to the system.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures by enriching the blood, vitalizing the nerves and building up the system. Headaches, as well as all other symptoms of an exhausted system, disappear before its influence. Its cures lasting because it removes the cause of the trouble.

Mr. O. Barber, Simcoe, Ont., writes: "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a splendid medicine. I was troubled for a long time with headaches, which would come on about once a week with such violence that I could not eat or do my work. I tried headache powders and quick cures, which did no good.

"About eight months ago I took six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I have not been troubled with headache since. It made a thorough and lasting cure."

Mrs. James Clancy, 714 Water street, Peterboro', Ont., states:—"I have used four boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and found them an excellent medicine. I was troubled more or less for ninteen years with severe headaches, which made me useless as far as accomplishing my work was concerned.

"The Nerve Food seemed to build me up generally, and so made a thorough cure of my old trouble. I would not think of being without Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in the house, and would strongly recommend anyone suffering as I did to give it a trial. It succeeded in my case after a great many remedies had failed."

Dr. Chases Nerve Food 50 cents a box, six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

EDDY'S IMPERVIOUS SHEATHING

The Best Building Paper Made.

It is very much stronger and thicker than any other (tarred or building) paper. It is impervious to wind, keeps out cold, keeps in heat, carries no smell or odor, absorbs no moisture, imparts no taste or flavor to anything with which it comes in contact. It is largely used not only for sheeting houses, but for lining cold storage buildings, refrigerators, dairies, creameries, and all places where the object is to keep an even and uniform temperature, and at the same time avoiding dampness.

A remarkable duck story comes from Nantes, France. Some fishermen were out at sea during a terrible thunderstorm, when suddenly a number of roasted ducks fell into their boat. The lightning had struck a rock and cooked the birds to a turn.

There never was and never will be a universal panacea, in one remedy for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine when obtainable in sound, unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease, and by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses through the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame and giving life to the digestive organs which naturally demand increased substance—result improved appetite. Northrop & Lyman of Toronto have given to the public their Superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate and, guaged by the opinion of scientists, the wine approaches nearest perfection of any in the market. All druggists sel. it.

"Newton Abbot, Devon. Dear Sirs—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effect of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

"For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout and life had lost its attraction owing to the uncertainty of health and sudden visitations of the enemy which prostrated me for months, or weeks according to the virulence of the attacks.

"Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

"For the last twenty months I have been comparatively free, as one or two attempted visitations have been immediately stamped out by the assistance of Blair's Pills.

SHOT LIGHTER KILLED

MR. ROBERT LEE OF MICHEL STRUCK BY FLYING MISSILE.

One of Michel's Most Respected Citizens Almost Instantly Killed. Body Shipped East.

Robert Lee, shot-lighter in No. 8 mine, Michel, was fatally injured while firing a shot on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Lee had put in a last shot in a cross cut where the excavation was about completed to meet the cross-cut from the adjoining room. After lighting the fuse Mr. Lee left his companion to guard the entrance while he went around to the opposite room to warn anyone away from the path of flying missiles. For some inexplicable reason Mr. Lee stood in the passage way directly exposed and when the explosion occcurred a piece of flying lagging struck him on the head fracturing the skull and rendering him unconscious, from which he did not recover and he died the same evening.

The deceased is one of the best known and most respected miners in the camp. He was about fifty years of age and leaves a widow and two children, a son and daughter, the latter the wife of Spurgeon McKay. Mr. Lee was one of the early timers in Fernie. He left here for New Zealand and after his return worked in the Michel mines. His body was taken east for interment.

A BAD ACCIDENT.

Walter McLean while working the lather at the Fernie Lumber Co's mill yesterday morning met with a very unfortunate accident, by which all the fingers of his left hand were cut off, the two bones of his fore-arm were broken, and the hand was otherwise lacerated.

McLean who is a young man of 19 years old was feeding a bolt of wood into the lather at the time. He was not watching very caaefully and the saw caught his left hand; at the same time the wood was whirled against his arm-breaking the two bones. The fingers and thumb were cut off. He was taken to the Hospital where the wounds were dressed.

POLICE COURT.

James Cross charged with stealing $28 and a revolver at Wardner was arrested at Fernie by Constable Sampson and taken to Wardner yesterday.

James Doran appeared before the magistrate on Saturday charged with the theft of a $20 dollar bill belonging to A. McQueen. It was claimed that McQueen had lost the money and that Doran found the same, converting it to his own use. The accused was committed to appear at the first superior court and there answer to such charge, if any, as may be brought against him. He was immediatly admitted to bail. It remains for the Crown to determine whether the case will be further proceeded with. Mr. Eckstein appeared for Doran.

Thomas Wentorwich was charged with having written a letter threatening to kill his wife. The circumstances showed that if the accused were bound over to keep the peace the ends of justice would be met. He accordingly admitted to owe our Sovereign Lord the King $500 should he within the next six months commit a breach of peace. Mr. Eckstein represented the accused.

Three Italians were arrested at Morrissey Junction on Tuesday charged with contravention of the Bush Fire Act. From the fire alleged to have been started by the accused it was contended that a conflagration resulted and among other things destroyed was the Morrissey saw mill and the large new brewery. The evidence was of a contradictory nature. The magistrate gave the prisoners the benefit of the doubt and discharged them, warning them as to the danger of setting fires and leaving them unprotected. Mr. Eckstein defended.

THE MORRISSEY ROAD

It is reported this morning that Mr. McKay, Government road superintendent, has received instructions to proceed with the construction of the wagon road between Morrissey and Fernie. The road will be built on the east side of the Elk and a bridge for which a grant of $7,000 was passed last session, will be built at Morrissey.

TO BACHELORS.

There are some hundreds of thousands more men than women in the Central and Western States of America and in Canada.

As a result thousands of trustworthy men—Farmers, Miners and others—living in certain districts there cannot possibly get wives in their own neighborhoods.

But in England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales there are a million more women then men and, in these Countries, thousands of good, intelligent and attractive girls—many of them daughters of farmers and all of them qualified to make excellent wives—see nothing before them while they stay here but the prospect of living and dying as old maids and this, to them, is a decidedly unpleasant prospect. They would willingly emigrate to America, could they be assured that they were going to meet worthy men there as husbands, and that they could look forward to happy, if humble, homes on the other side of the Atlantic.

We may say that all of them could afford to emigrate at their own expense.

We are prepared to give good men introductions to these girls.

If you wish to get an introduction please write us with such particulars of yourself (age, nationality, occupation and circumstances) as a sensible girl would expect to get and we shall write you in reply, with a view to bringing about a suitable introduction without undue delay.

Tell us what kind of a wife, (age, nationality, appearance, and disposition) you wish to get.

If you have preference for any particular Christian Sect please name it.

You will also enclose our Fee of 5 Dollars, A further Fee of 45 Dollars will be due us within one month after marriage, thus making 50 Dollars altogether. We do not confine ourselves to one introduction. We give as many as will be necessary until marriage. But we make no charge for any introduction after the payment of our said Fee of 5 Dollors for the first.

It is not at all necessary that you should be a wealthy man.

But it is necessary that you be a man who would make a kind and good husband to a good wife.

If you are not such a man please do not write us.

ANOTHER FOREST FIRE

IMMENSE DAMAGE TO FERNIE TIMBER.

Smouldering Fire Broke out on Tuesday and Raged for Miles up the West Bank of the Elk.

A fire which had been smouldering in the green timbers on the edge of the Fernie Lumber Co's limits at the base of Mount Fernie broke out in flames on Tuesday at about 2 p. m. The stiff breeze that was blowing soon fanned the flames into a raging conflagration which swept from tree to tree with marvellous rapidity Flying timbers ignited fires half a mile in advance of the fire's van and soon the old slashing of the Company was in flames. Then the fire assumed much greater proportions and travelled with greater speed.

By six o'clock it had gone two miles above the camps which are about two miles up the River from the mill. At this time it was thought that the camps were safe as the fire had confined itself to a comparatively narrow strip well back from the River. The wind however changed a little and in an hour or two both were in ashes. The seven teams of horses were saved with difficulty as they had to swim the Elk to escape the flames. The Company lost a million feet of lumber in logs.

The fire burned slower during the night but with the morning it started with renewed vigor. During Wednesday it burned the Fernie Lumber Co's limits, onto the Jackson limit. The Government agent was communicated with to put men on to fight the fire, the contention being that the Government was losing fifty cents of revenue in every thousand feet of timber destroyed. Mr. Armstrong came up on the evening train and hired 25 men to fight the fire under the superintendance of Mr. F. Waters bush foreman at the Elk Lumber Co. The fire burned through the Jackson limit into the Elk Lumber and Manufacturing Co's limits yesterday where since then considerable headway has been made in checking its march. In the meantime the fire is working back further into the mountain along its trail. At the present time no one can make an approximate guess as to the loss in green timber.

Smoke had been seen issuing from the place where the fire started for several days previous and Mr. Proctor claims that he sent up a force of men to put it out. These men had apparently almost succeeded but a heavy gust of wind came along and rendered futile all their efforts on Tuesday while they were present, and they had some difficulty in escaping. It is the contention of the Fernie Lumber Company that the fire was caused from the right-of-way fire on July 23rd and the G. N. Railway will be held responsible for the damage.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTION

J. A. Rennie, returning officer, has issued a proclamation setting forth the qualifications for voters and candidates in the forthcoming municipal election. These qualifications also appear in the legal notice in this issue. Everyone who applies to have his name on the voters list will be required to sign a declaration stating that he is a male British subject of the full age of 21 years, that he is a freeholder, homesteader or pre-emptor within the boundary of the municipality and that he has resided in the said limits for a period of 12 months prior to August 11th, the day previous to the nomination day. All who are eligible to be placed on the list should have the matter attended to at once.

WESTERN CANADA COLLEGE.

During the past few days Dr. McRae has been in town. In the course of conversation he spoke of the progress made by the Western Canada College. Though opened by Premier Haultain only last September it has rapidly come into favour. During the year just closed some 38 boys have been in attendance. The Board of Tsustees has been compelled to provide accommodation for increased numbers. Recently they acquired 20 acres of land from the C. P. R. These grounds are beautifully situated in the west end of the city of Calgary. Their new building is about to be erected.

The College and College School are strictly undenominational. The staff is thoroughly representative. The Boys' residential and Day School is conducted on the lines of the best institutions of this kind. The instructors are of wide experience. The aim is to give boys a thorough grounding according to a carefully chosen and not over loaded curriculum. In the college there are courses for teachers, and those who wish to pursue courses in Liberal Studies or music. or as a preparation for Ranching or Business life. To this end the College has secured the aid of several lecturers, men widely known in their professions.

The prospects of the coming year are very good. It is certainly a hopeful thing to see the application the West has shown for higher Education.

The prospects of this young institution seem very bright. It is the pioneer College and College School of Canada west of Manitoba, and by its ordinance of incorporation is strictly undenominational. Though the encouragement of the College Corporation, a Ladies' College will be opened in Calgary in September. The Lady Principal is at present a teacher in Havergal Hall, Toronto. The advertisement of this progressive College appears in another column.

FERNIE WINS TROPHY

FOOT-BALL TEAM HEADS CROWS NEST LEAGUE

Locals Defeat Coleman in the Most Exciting Game of the season. Much Depended on the Game

The Coleman foot-ball team played its first game of the season in Fernie on Wednesday evening when after a very hard struggle they met defeat by a score of two goals to one. The result of this, the last game of the schedule put Fernie in the lead.

The teams were, Coleman,-Smith, Benedict, Wandsley, Hackett, Purkis, Graham, James, Johnson, Fowler, Rudd and Musgrave. Fernie,-McDonald, Linton, McFegan, Stewart, Henderson, Marsh, Newbiggan, Spiers, Munro, Gowrie and Parkinson. The referee was Davis of Coleman. Since the last game with Coleman the latter's team has been strengthened by two players from Pincher Creek, who, it is stated, now live at Coleman.

Certainly the game put up by Coleman on Wednesday was of the first order and nothing but the supreme efforts of the local team turned what seemed perilously near a defeat into a hard-earned victory. The visitors played well on the aggressive during the first half and in spite of the Fernie defence they scored once. In the second half the play continued for some time very even and it began to look as if Coleman would hold its lead. A Fernie man sent the ball through the opposing goal but the referee called it an off side.

This decision put new metal into the Fernie men and they went at it with irresistable determination. With only ten minutes to play and the fate of the league's pennant resting on this bit of play the game grew exceedingly exciting. The Fernie men carried the ball down with a rush: time after time the ball was stopped but the attack was renewed with greater vigor and finally amid a great cloud of dust the coveted goal was secured. The wild enthusiasm of the onlookers cheered the locals to greater efforts. More than one similar rush was successfully repulsed by the stalwart Coleman defence but the attacks were so heavy and so frequent that a pregnable point was at last reached and the ball shot through. Thus Fernie won by two goals to one.

The winning of this, the last game of the schedule, by Fernie places the latter in a safe lead as winners of the gold medals offered by the league. This last game was an important one insomuch that had Coleman won it and had the three protests against Michel been disregarded the three teams, Fernie, Coleman and Michel would have been tied and a series of games would have been necessary to decide the supremacy.

Each team has played eight games. Of these eight games Fernie has won six, lost one to Michel, and drawn one with Coleman. Each member of the Fernie team will be presented with a beautiful gold medal purchased by the league with a fifteen dollar contribution from each club.

Constable Sampson has been transferred to Morrissey where he will succeed Mr. Tranter as guardian of the peace for the three towns. Mr. Sampson is a painstaking officer who will no doubt fill this difficult position satisfactoily. The Government could very materially lessen his difficulties by building a lock-up in neighborhood.

CONCRETE WALL FELL

JAS. McLAUGHLIN INSTANTLY CRUSHED TO DEATH.

While Engaged in the Excavation Work on the Royal site. An old British Soldier.

A fatal accident occurred on the Main St. at the excavation work for Mr. Tuttle's new hotel, on Monday morning at about 9 o'clock in which James McLaughlin was instantly killed. Deceased was on the gang working under contractor Macdonnell at the excavation work. Just prior to the accident McLaughlin had voluntarily taken the place of a fellow-workman in excavating near the old concrete foundation. Mr. Macdonnel had given orders for the excavation under about three feet of this concrete, it being his intention to remove it in pieces. His orders had not been followed and the wall for about ten feet had been undermined. The contractor had just come up and noticing the dangerous condition of the wall he had peremptorily warned the man away, explaining that his orders had not been carried out. McLaughlin gave another vigorous stroke with his pick, and almost before Macdonnell's voice had ceased the ten feet of the wall fell into the cellar. A fellow-workman who had been leaning against the wall on his elbow felt the jar and gave the alarm. McLaughlin sprang back or perhaps more correctly speaking was shoved back by the concrete mass, and would have escaped uninjured had not a huge piece weighing about four hundred pounds broken from the top. This piece of almost cubical form fell on his back and crushed the life out of him instantly. The rock rolled off the body by the force of gravitation.

The body was taken in charge by the Government authorities and buried the next day. Some friends in Wardner with whom the deceased had lived for some time prior to about six weeks ago were wired but no reply was received. Little is known of James McLaughlin, He was a man of about fifty-five, an Irishman who had served 19 years in the British Army and who was in receipt of a pension.

IMPERIAL COAL CO.

W. R. Wilson was in town on Tuesday in Company with H. Hall and W. H. Evans, President and Secretary of the Imperial Coal and Coke Co. On Tuesday evening the latter gentlemen returned to their homes in Montreal and Mr. Wilson left for Michel where he has further investigations to make for his Company.

The President and Secretary of the the Imperial Co. were unwilling to talk much about the future plans of the company, beyond the fact that they were quite satistied with the present indications and that they intended to go ahead with development work that was already started. The deal with the Laidlaw people was practically concluded.

YARDS AND DEPOT LOCATED.

The yards and depot for the G. N. R. have been definitely located, and the work of clearing the right-of-way was started this morning under Ed. Jordan. The yards commence near the Northern limit of the recreation grounds and extend northward for 3,000 feet. The depot is about midway, which brings it opposite the Fernie Brewery. The right-of way for the yards will be 300 feet wide and the grading will be 150 feet wide. Four tracks will be put in on the start, but ample room will be left to double this number.

The clearing and grading at the other end of the line has been somewhat retarded by the construction surveyors, but the cross section work is progressing more rapidly now and the 350 men at present engaged will be augmented by 200 more in a few days.

READY IN TWO MONTHS.

What the Columbia Cut Off means to Fernie.

St. Paul, Minn., July 30th.—In sixty days the Great Northern Railway will abandon 100 miles of its present main line in Montana in favor of a new route covering the same distance which strikes north from Columbia Falls to a junction with the Fernie, B. C., branch at Rexford thence back again over the Fernie branch to the main line at Jennings.

The existing main line will become a branch to all intents and purposes and fourteen prosperous main line towns—La Salle, Kalispell, Batavia, Sedan, Athens, Marion, Haskell Pass, Lucerne, Pleasant Valley, Lakeview, Melbourne, Atlanta, Sterling and Fisher River—will be cut off from the principal channel of the through business.

By the abandonment of the 100 mile section President J. J. Hill will secure a minimum grade for the Great Northern which he claims to be slightly less than that of any of the American transcontinental routes. The new route will be used by all through trains of heavy tonage, while lighter freights and local passenger trains will continue to use the old route, which will still be kept up.

Not only does this cut off bring the Fernie coal and Coke supply nearer to the Montana markets but it does away with a heavy climb over a mountain pass. The Northern will be in a position to transport the Fernie products at a much lower cost than at present.

DUE TO NEGLIGENCE

INQUEST ON THE FOREST FIRE OF JULY 23RD

Many Witnesses Examined. Jury Found That Fire Came From Right of Way on G. N. R.

The fire inquest to enquire into the origin of the big bush fire of July 23rd which destroyed $30,000 worth of timber and logs and which sence developed into a more serious conflagration farther up the valley, was commenced on Monday morning before coroner Forbes and a jury composed of the following gentlemen,-W. H. Whimster, foreman, J. A. Rennie, F. J. Watson, W. W. Tuttle and Owen Ross. Last night the following verdict was brought in,-"We find that the said fire was caused from fires set on the right-of-way of the Crows Nest Southern Railway and we find that negligence in the method adopted by the railway company in clearing and burning the right-of-way was the cause of the said fire." The opening days of the inquest was unimportant as many witnesses were examined who knew nothing of the origin of the fire. Messrs. C. Tuttle, F. Waters, Kildahl, and Quaife gave the chief evidence. Mr. Tuttle watchman at the cedar Valley Mill told of careless methods employed by Mr. Quaife in burning the right-of-way. Mr. Waters' evidence was very similar. Mr. Kildahl manager of the Elk Lumber co. had also warned Mr. Quaife and read the Bush Fire Act to him. None of the three considered Mr. Quaife a competent man for his position.

Mr. Quaife's own evidence went to show that the fire sprang from the embers of a fire on the right-of-way ahead of where he had last burned. He could not account for the origin of this second fire. The fire started up a hundred feet from the right-of-way, possibly from a spark. Two of his men named Smith and McLeod testified that they were watching the right-of-way on July 23rd. They saw the fire start up off the right-of-way and ran back to the camp for help.

The jury drove to the scene of the fire and on the burnt right-of-way gathered evidence which went to prove that Mr. Quaife had piled brush along the edge of his clearing.

CRANBROOK THE WINNER.

Heads the Crows Nest Lacrosse League.

The Cranbrook—Lethbridge Lacrosse game at the latter town on Monday resulted in a victory for the mountain team by the close score of 3 goals to 2. The game was closely contested and excellent lacrosse was played. Moore of Pincher Creek refereed and kept the boys in their proper places. Cranbrook scored first and Lethbridge pulled even in the first quarter. In the second no goals were scored. In the third Cranbrook started with a rush and landed two goals in quick succession, within three minutes of the start. No other goals were scored in that quarter. In the fourth Lethbridge scored once. Towards the latter end of the quarter the play became somewhat rough. The Lethbridge Club protested the game on the grounds that Bert Black played with Cranbrook,

This game gives Cranbrook possession of the Lacrosse Trophies of the league. That club has won twice from Fernie and twice from Lethbridge. With Medicine Hat it played a draw.

MASTER and SLAVE

By... T. H. THORPE

Copyright, 1901, by T. H. Thorpe.

"Which," explained little Father Chaline of Moreauville, "makes quite plain Father Galotte's frequent and easy victories over him of the cloven hoof. One lone devil is no match for him."

The laugh was now a quartet, and Quillebert did not long hesitate to make it a quintet.

"Well, in this encounter of my own seeking I yield to numbers and will pay tribute in forage to my vanquishers," Quillebert said, with a mock air of submission. "It is noon and time for solid nourishment. Come with me, fathers, to old Mme. Goudeau's table and take a stout absinth and anisette, and then we will sample Mother Pierrot's turkey and rice with a bottle of bordeaux." And as host he led the priests into the building.

Mme. Goudeau received her patrons with profuse acknowledgment of the honor conferred, and with great ceremony mixed five glasses of the appetizing decoction.

"Sante to you, fathers, and success to my candidate," was Quillebert's sentiment as he raised the green liquor to his lips.

"Dominus nobiscum," responded Father Galotte. "How is the election progressing?"

"Satisfactorily," said Quillebert "Laure Luneau is a sure winner. My guess now is that she is 22 votes ahead of Estelle Latiolais, and the race was really between those two. It is too late in the day for Estelle to overcome such a majority, as her strength was chiefly from Borodino and the Big Bend of Bayou des Glaises, and it has been voted. I am sorry for her; but then, Laure's father and I came from the same part of France, and, you know, I had to stick to my clan. I have worked hard for Laure, and she cannot be beaten. How proud the saucy little Gasconne will be!"

Having laid a coin upon the table, Constant was leading the way to Mother Pierrot's, when Mme. Goudeau called:

"Hold, M. Constant, till I give you your change."

"No change is coming to me, madame. I gave you a gold dollar, and 20 cents apiece for five absinth anisettes is cheap enough for a church fair."

"No, M. Constant, this is not $1; it is a five dollar piece."

"Oh, Mme. Goudeau, your sight is failing like that! This comes of reading your prayer book so much. Put on your spectacles, madame, and examine the coin carefully, and if you find it a five I may stop again for the change." And, bowing merrily, he moved on.

"Well, that is handsome of Constant and will get him two more votes for Laure Luneau," remarked madame to Maximilien Cantonet, an ancient ex-justice of the peace, who in religiously intoxicated condition devoutly assisted her with the bottles and glasses.

Mother Pierrot bustlingly superintended the carving by her mulatto man and served five heaping plates of breast and back, declaring one gobbler to have been a 20 pound bronze and the other a cream yellow of equal weight and both to have been fed on pecans for three weeks prior to their martyrdom in the cause of the church. A pyramid of steaming, flaky rice flanked each plate, beside which was set a bottle of bordeaux wine of good body. There is no need to discuss the efficacy of the absinth. The fact is, the five portions were disposed of by the five men with every indication of hunger, thirst and appreciation.

"Is our little Laure still ahead, M. Constant?" inquired the old woman.

"She is and will remain ahead till the poll closes at half past 5 o'clock," Quillebert replied confidently. "Leonidas Latiolais is no politician. He believed he could elect Estelle by simply interesting the neighbors on Bayou des Glaises, while I have electioneered for Laure not only on the bayou, but on the prairie also. She has had votes today from Marksville, Isle de Cote, Le Coigne, Par en Haut, Bayou Blanc and even Pointe Maigre."

"You have indeed been very active," said Father Grhe. "I am edified to see you manifest such interest in a matter of the church."

"It is not the church—no," Quillebert protested; "it is politics with me. Whoever enters a canvass against me cannot win by sitting quiet and looking amiable. He has got to travel and maybe get mud on his shoes. Good Mother Pierrot, this will about pay for our refreshment," he added, placing a coin in the old woman's palm.

"But this is $20, M. Constant!" she cried in amazement.

"I said it would about pay for our refreshment, and thank you," said he, walking away.

"Such a generous man! I wish he was on better terms with the church. Certainly I must get some more votes for Laure," soliloquized Mother Pierrot as she dropped the glittering golden eagle into her silken purse.

Declining with thanks an invitation to join the priests in pipes at Father Grhe's house, Quillebert sauntered along the grassy sidewalks of the street and had proceeded but a short distance when he encountered Dr. De Roux and Leonidas Latiolais lounging under a flowering china tree. Latiolais looked bored and worried. He knew nothing of the condition of the contest, but he felt he had not perfectly championed his grandchild's candidacy and was apprehensive of the result. Her defeat would grieve him deeply, and he would lay it to his own supineness.

"Ah, my friends, this is a slow affair for full blooded men," remarked Quillebert. "You both look as thoroughly dejected as I feel exhausted. Can we not have a small game and hasten this afternoon off? Else I will go into the graveyard and take a nap."

"Yes," said Dr. De Roux, "let us go to Dede Lebrun's cabaret at the coulee bridge and swap chips; either that or I will go home. I cannot stand this any longer."

Latiolais hesitated, then consented, and the three proceeded to the one storied public house of the village, where in the back room they were joined by the brothers Tailleur of Isle de Cote, and, supplied by Dede, the stunted, swarthy, pock pitted proprietor, with cards, chips, rum and whisky toddies, they were soon absorbed in the problems of American poker. Quillebert was not without ulterior aim in his proposal. He was confident of Laure Luneau's election should no especial activity be displayed in her rival's interest and concluded that the surest means to prevent that would be to seduce her champion from the field; hence he set about to make the game unusually attractive by betting boldly and drinking freely, and in a measure his tactics proved successful, for soon the attention of the players was so engrossed that they were unconscious of the flight of time and the passing of many buggies and troops of horsemen over the coulee bridge into the one street of Mansura.

To the surprise and, it must be admitted, the disappointment of Father

Bestowed the name "Ste. Cecile."

Grhe, Oakfell did not appear at the fair. The priest feared he had forgotten his pledge of support to Estelle given at the house of the ferryman at Bayou du Lac on the night he so narrowly escaped death. But he took heart when at 4 o'clock he saw Valsin ride in at the head of seven neighbors from the Bordelon slough and lead them to the poll for Estelle, and ten more from Lac de la Pearle marched up in the same interest, and these followed at short intervals by dozens and twenties from Choupique, Cottonport, Pointe Midi and a company of non-Catholics from Evergreen and the surrounding plantations, and learned that every one of these late comers deposited a vote for the granddaughter of Latiolais.

The game at Dede's was running high, and the strong drink had taken possession of the players, when at 6 o'clock a cheer from the schoolhouse fell upon their ears. They knew the priests had counted the vote and announced the result, and the cheer was for the victor. Quillebert doubted not she was Laure, and, hastily gathering in the winnings, which, as usual, had fallen his way, he proceeded with his companions to learn the exact figures. His heavy eyes and purpling face took on an expression of cruel exultation. Latiolais lagged behind as if loath to hear the decision.

Seeing Father Grhe in the doorway of the schoolhouse, Quillebert called:

"What's the majority, father?"

"Seventeen," the priest said.

"Is that all?" said Quillebert coarsely. "At 1 o'clock she had 22 over Estelle Latiolais."

"Who had?" asked the priest.

"Laure Luneau," shouted Quillebert.

"But Estelle Latiolais has now 17 votes over Laure Luneau, and the poll is closed. Estelle Latiolais is elected godmother of the bell," said Father Grhe.

Quillebert's features fairly quivered with rage, but his exclamation, no doubt profane, was drowned by the renewed cheer from the crowd, while old Latiolais' white face was wet with tears of joy, unexpected and unmerited.

The fast falling darkness speeded the dispersion of the assemblage, and the choosing of the church bell's sponsor was a scored event in the history of the parish.

The christening day of the bell was the most perfect of that incomparably lovely season, the Louisiana spring. The pale blue sky had not a fleck in it. The bosom of the little prairie was spread with velvety green sprinkled with buttercups and violets, and on the edges of coulees bright willows rocked in the gentle breeze. The lanes were bordered by walls of dark cherokee vines, against which white roses glistened in the sunlight. The cones dotting stretching branches of pecans were opening in light hued leaves, while afar in the swamp above the bluish gray festoons of Spanish moss could be seen the feathery fringe which later would be plumes in the crowns of royal cypresses. The soft air was scented with jasmine, china flower and sweet gum and rang with the joyous song of the mocking bird.

The bell, secured upon the stoutest of plantation wagons, drawn by six sleek mules, was arrayed in a robe of white swiss, set off with bands of blue satin and bunches of pink roses. A string of red coral, the gift of the godmother, encircled its brow, above which was a wreath of white magnolia blooms. The wagon was clothed in white cotton cloth, the harness of the mules decked out with knots and bows of ribbon, and the herculean black who drove them was attired in his holiday raiment, with a broad red sash across his chest.

The cortege escorting the bell in its progress of six miles from the warehouse at Marksville to the church at Mansura was composed of full 200 persons on horses, in buggies and afoot. It was headed by Eloi Durant, the ancient volunteer sacristan, bearing aloft a banner of blue silk on which was embroidered in yellow the name of the sodality society. Following him rode Homer Debellevue, holding a tall, slender wooden cross painted white and garlanded with flowers. A dozen younger men with silk banners inscribed with sacred legends formed a cavalcade preceding the carriage of Father Grhe, who in black robe and cap, white surplice and gilded stole sat between two acolytes gowned in red and white and carrying censer burners. On each side of the wagon six horsemen sashed with blue rode as a guard of honor to the bell and then the fair sponsor in an open conveyance seated beside her grandfather. She was attired in white, a thin veil over her hair and shoulders, and held a nosegay of large white roses in her lap. A sweet, childish face, brown hair and hazel eyes distinguished the victor of the contest, a girl of 15, gentle, shrinking and blushing. On a roan pony at the side of the carriage a young mulatto woman rode and screened the face of her mistress with a sunshade. The cavalcade closed with vehicles, in which were many women, matrons and maidens, and a long line of white youths and negroes marching afoot came after.

As the procession wound past the Marksville church the bell in the tower, rung by Father Chaline himself, greeted its new sister with a merry peal, while all the men uncovered their heads.

Arrived at Mansura, the bell was reverently lifted and hung in the sheltered temporary scaffolding which had been provided for it at the church front, and around it the people arranged themselves in a wide circle. Two trays of white roses were placed on the scaffold, an acolyte brought from within the church the silver vessel of holy water and sprinkler, the aromatic gums in the censers were lighted from live coals, and Father Grhe, reading the words of dedication and bathing bell and flowers with incense and blessed water, bestowed the name "Ste. Cecile," chosen by the sponsor. Estelle sang a sweet "Ave Maria" in a voice so fresh and musical that it reached the hearts of all, and the very birds seemed to cease their warblings to catch its tender melody. She repeated after the priest her sponsorial vow of unfailing solicitude for the bell, to care for it and protect it and pray that it should be the ever eloquent messenger summoning increasing numbers to the worship of God.

"Gloria In Excelsis Deo!" was sung by the choir, after which Estelle emptied the trays of flowers over the bell and distributed them among the throng, by whom they were now regarded as especial aids to holiness.

As the sinking sun touched the rim of the swamp forest the chime from the spire at Marksville came floating over the prairie on the moistening evening air. Estelle stood before the scaffold, and all heads were reverently bowed. Father Grhe, with padded hammer, struck three mellow notes upon the side of the bell.

"The angel of the Lord declared unto Mary," sweetly chanted Estelle.

"And she conceived of the Holy Ghost," came the response from the circle.

Again the strokes fell gently.

"Behold the handmaid of the Lord," the girl intoned.

"Be it done unto me according to thy word," answered all.

Thrice more the musical waves rose in undulating ascent skyward.

"And the word was made flesh," she sang, with a graceful genuflection, in which the multitude joined, replying:

"And dwelt among us."

The bell of Mansura had tolled its first Angelus.

CHAPTER IV.

AT "L'ESPERANCE."

"L'ESPERANCE" was a fair domain of 1,800 acres, which, with slaves, live stock, mills, gins and implements, had descended to Horace Oakfell from his mother at her death in 1837. She as sole heir had inherited from her father, Colonel Bixlow. A thousand acres were under fence and in culture of sugar, cotton and corn; the remainder was woodland. A yield of two hogsheads of sugar and five barrels of molasses per acre h... open kettle process of reduction then in vogue and 500 pounds of lint cotton to a like area attested the prodigious fertility of the fields.

Oakfell's father endured widowerhood a year and married Fidele Gaspard, a Spanish looking girl of 16, daughter of Antoine Gaspard, who, it was said, had escaped from Paris with a price on his head after the fall of Danton and who was remembered as a man of cruel aspect, taciturn and furtive, as one haunted by a terrible fear or horrible memory. He was shiftless and poor, but his daughter was humble, pious and beautiful. She was mistress of "L'Esperance" six years, ministering to her stepson as to a superior being, and on her deathbed prayerfully besought his interest and protection for her own little boy, Evariste, whom she left at the dependent age of 5 years. Mme. Fidele was universally loved and by none with greater fervor than by Horace. The fullness of his boyish affection he transferred to the half brother, now like himself motherless, and generously assumed responsibility for his welfare. The demise of their father in 1854 gave to this assumption the character and obligations of actuality.

Evariste was dark and beautiful as his mother. His figure was slight and exquisite, with hands and feet small and delicate, like a woman's. Neither the squirrel nor the swallow surpassed him in agility and gracefulness, but his manner was undemonstrative, secretive, and, avoiding playmates, he was ever content to be alone. His eyes were black, his lips thin and firm.

To these sons the father had left nothing but a debt owed in Kentucky for blooded horses, which Horace speedily discharged. Evariste was portionless; his brother bade him consider himself half owner of all the estate and assured him that partition should be made on his attaining majority, or as soon thereafter as he might deem it desirable, and made unstinted expenditure for his maintenance and education. The elder's fraternal love was sobered by paternal solicitude relieved of all austerity. The difference between the ages of the two was five years, Evariste being 19 when Horace was sent to the legislature.

The home was now presided over by the Widow Wyley, whose long experience as the wife of an overseer had given her a knowledge of the negro character which enabled her to rule efficiently and kindly. Thrift and neatness came naturally from her Dutch mother, as did also her passion for cows and bees. Her face was big and red, and so was her heart; her hair was white and strong, and so was her nature. Binker Wyley, her stalwart son, was the abstemious, tireless overseer, who had announced on taking charge that the lash was only for oxen, mules and dogs and to whose shrewd, frugal management was due the fact that the prosperity of "L'Esperance" was second to that of no plantation in the parish of Avoyelles, with the possible exception of Baldonino's, on Bayou des Glaises. The dwelling was a brick structure of two stories, with broad, covered verandas projecting from the second in front and rear. On the ground floor, which was tiled, were at one side of a wide hall a dining room and housekeeper's sanctum, at the other an office, library and medicine store, in which were kept considerable quantities of medicaments of approved use on large plantations. The second story contained parlor and sleeping apartments, high ceilinged and spacious, separated by a hall corresponding with the one below and reached by exterior stairways piercing the verandas. The furniture was heavy, old and rich. An acre set in pecan, walnut and fig trees and inclosed by a high white fence made a shady lawn between the house and the public road along the bank of Bayou Claire. On the left were the overseer's house and plantation stores, a hundred yards farther the negro quarters, barns, stables and cattle sheds; on a bend of the bayou was the steam cotton gin and at the rear of the fields the brick sugar mill, with long, low roofed purgery and massive chimney for bagasse burning.

The warm day was closing. Oakfell sat at the western window of the office near a table on which lay written reports which had been left with him by the overseer. From a perusal of them he had turned to a volume of English poetry and read these lines:

He finds his fellow guilty of a skin
Not colored like his own and, having power
To enforce the wrong, for such a worthy cause
Dooms and devotes him as his lawful prey.

* * * * * * *

And what man, seeing this
And having human feelings, does not blush
And hang his head to think himself a man?

The book was closed upon his finger, and with lowered eyes he pondered these thoughts when the open doorway was filled by the generous figure of Mrs. Wyley.

"Mr. Oakfell, where is Evariste today?" she asked. "I have not seen him since morning."

"He went to attend the races at Mansura, I believe," Oakfell replied.

"You will not, I hope," she said, settling herself comfortably in a rocker, "think me meddlesome if I question the propriety of one so young frequenting such gatherings, where gambling, drinking, profanity and sometimes homicide are the features. I forbade them to Binker. Evariste goes to them so often." The old lady's manner evinced the sincerity of her anxiety.

"I appreciate your interest and desire you always to speak your thoughts without restraint on any subject which may concern my brother," said Oakfell. "In this instance, however, I think you need have no apprehension. Horse racing, you know, is expressly encouraged by our law, which puts betting at it on an equal footing with other contracts. It has received the countenance of our best citizens and has thus had its respectability preserved. Were such as Evariste to absent themselves the turf would soon degenerate to a merg gambling affair and contest of chicanery. So long as honor rules the track the excitement is healthful to men. I have no misgiving of Evariste. He is thoughtful and prudent beyond his years, has a perfect control over himself, which I envy him, and his spirit is too high and proud to yield to a low temptation or to be led by an unworthy example. My faith in him is perfect, and I love him as if he were my son."

"How blessed he is to have such a brother," said Mrs. Wyley, her fears for the one forgotten in her admiration of the other.

"There he is now!" exclaimed Oakfell, rising and going to the door. "Was there ever such a little man beauty as he? And he is so free from vanity that I do not believe he is at all aware of his good looks."

Evariste had alighted from his foaming horse at the gate and, having thrown the bridle to a negro boy, was walking up the bricked path to the house with the easy step and calm air of one returning from a short and leisurely stroll in a shady grove, his regular breathing betraying no sign of the hard run of 11 miles he had given the panting beast now being led to the stables. And Horace's tribute of unconsciousness of self was scarcely sustained by the faultlessly fitting suit, unflecked collar and fashionably adjusted neckscarf, the dainty shoes and carefully oiled locks resting on his shoulders in a glossy black roll. And a suspicion of daudiness might have had confirmation in the delicate perfume scattered from his handkerchief as he passed it across his brow.

"How was the sport today, my boy?" Horace asked cheerily as Evariste entered the room.

"One excellent half mile race between Quillebert's Charlotte Corday and Judge Elgee's Belle Cheney," said Evariste. "The others were only ordinary."

"How was the betting?"

"Quite brisk. The odds were in favor of Belle Cheney. I took Charlotte Corday and won $60. She came in by a neck. Leonidas Latiolais backed the Elgee mare and lost heavily. Father Galotte parted with some of his tithes on the same risk. Somebody told Elgee that his jockey had been tampered with by Quillebert, and he swore he would kill them both if the charge could be proved. For a time it looked as if some blood might be let, but friends interfered, and the matter quieted down."

"Who rode Charlotte Corday?" Horace inquired.

"Quillebert's yellow boy Leon. By the way, brother," said Evariste, "Quillebert got into a boastful vein when his mare came in winner. He said he had set in to beat Belle Cheney and knew from the beginning he would do it and declared that when he made up his mind to a thing nobody in Avoyelles could overmatch him. Little Fi Ferrier spoke up and asked how about you electing Estelle Latiolais godmother of the bell. He said it was not you that did it. Father Galotte asserted it was you; that he had it on good authority. Quillebert was stunned. He had never suspected that you had a hand in that. He became furious and I believe was about to relieve himself of some uncomplimentary remarks about you when he caught my eye looking steadily at him and concluded to bottle his rage. But I never saw so ferocious an expression settle upon a man's countenance as that which came over Quillebert's as he turned away. I fear he is your mortal enemy from this time on. Beware of him, brother."

"He is a bad man and hurtful to the community," said Oakfell, "but he is a coward and need not be feared, only watched. I very much regret my name was mentioned in connection with the contest over the christening of the bell. It was quite contrary to my wish."

"If you had seen how delighted Estelle was when her grandfather told her what Father Galotte had said, your regret would not be so poignant."

"Did you see her? Where?"

"At Father Grhe's house. The priest insisted upon my dining there with her and her grandfather, and I tell you, brother, the priest is your stout friend, though you are not a Catholic. He declared there never has been in this parish your equal in all the good qualities of head and heart and that you were the ablest, safest leader the people could choose. Estelle's eyes sparkled and her face flushed with pleasure at these encomiums upon you, and she charged me with so many pretty messages of gratitude to you that my horse was blown up with the weight of them. When her face lights up in that way, it is radiant beyond compare. I am sure at 20 she will be the loveliest woman in Louisiana."

"Boy, boy," said Horace, smiling, "you are becoming excited, going into a rapture. Miss Latiolais must indeed be a vision to move you thus from your famous imperturbability. Calm yourself, my little Evariste. It is some time yet before you will be 21 and still longer before Estelle will be 20."

"From the signs of today," said Evariste, with a tinge of bitterness in his voice, "you are the one interested in her twentieth birthday, not I."

"Well, supper is by no means so far off as that," interposed Mrs. Wyley good humoredly, "and if you will hasten to your room, Evariste, you will get the dust of the road brushed off you before I have the bell rung."

As the young man, acting upon this reminder, disappeared into the house his brother remarked:

"What a boon it is to be gifted to live the fullness of life as that boy does. Though of grave and sedate exterior, his whole being vibrates in sympathy with the life around him. Every breath he inhales is a draft of sparkling wine to another man. His sleep is but the opiate effect of the day's joy; his eyes close in thankfulness for the day that has passed and open in eagerness for the day that begins. Apparently impassive, he is keenly observant of and responsive to every event, possessing a marvelous power of seizing and assimilating what is pleasant and rejecting what is disagreeable. He delights in the graceful spinning through the air of the falling leaf, but will not look at it when it has touched the dust, and with all his air of unconcern he is a philosopher, quick to adjust men and things and give them their proper estimate."

"If I heard another speak in this way without naming the person, I would understand him to describe Mr. Horace Oakfell rather than Evariste," Mrs. Wyley remarked.

"No, no!" said Oakfell. "My temperament is too opaque. Everything affecting it throws a shadow. I anticipate dangers, I brood over events, I busy myself to guard against troubles which may never arise. In some of my moods life seems a grewsome necessity. Not so with Evariste. To him it is all a glad song."

"What do you think will be his calling? Will you make a lawyer of him?"

"By no means."

"How so? Do you not like your own profession?"

"As a branch of learning, a science, a mental discipline, yes. But as a practical profession I loathe it already. No, Evariste will never be a lawyer by my advice."

"What then? A physician or a minister?"

"Hardly the latter," said Oakfell, smiling. "I do not think his bent of mind is toward religious enthusiasm. You have put a question the answer to which I have not thought out to my own satisfaction. This is the nearest approach to a plan that I have yet been able to formulate. I fancy politics and dislike the practice of law and therefore at times incline to propose to Evariste later that he shall manage our joint interests on the plantation while I exploit a political career."

"That seems a wise arrangement," Mrs. Wyley assented, "leading to the happiness of yourself and brother and the good of the people."

Binker Wyley, in clean apparel donned after his day of toil in the fields, joined his mother and Horace, and, Evariste returning, the four at the signal of the bell proceeded to their evening meal of poultry, hot bread, rice, coffee, milk and preserves of figs served by two quick moving griffe women and fanned by the waving of peacock feathers in the hands of two silent boys of ebon black. As they ate and conversed songs and laughter and the jingling of harness chains told of the coming of the laborers from the furrowed reaches of sugar cane and cotton plant.

The supper ended, the three men, leaving the room, found standing under the veranda, hat in hand, a young quadroon of small stature and intelligent face. He was well clothed, and his manner was polite and humble.

"Well, Leon," said Oakfell, "this is a surprise. I should have thought after jockeying so skillfully for Mr. Quillebert today you would have been kept at home tonight to be exhibited to his admiring friends."

"He did try to keep me, Mr. Horace," replied Leon, "but I would not stay."

"What! You ran away, Leon? Do you not know the patrol law and the danger of your being out after dark without Mr. Quillebert's written permission?"

"I came away, Mr. Horace. I did not run away, and I know of the patrol law," answered the young fellow firmly, but not offensively. "I had to see you tonight, sir, and I have come to tell you my troubles and ask your advice and help. If I am wrong, you will tell me so. I will believe you and submit to punishment. If I am right, you will tell me so, and I hope you will help me. I have always believed you to be the best man in this country, and I know you cannot do or aid a wrong. I beg that you will hear me." Tears rolled down his face, and his hands were held out beseechingly.

"I cannot refuse to hear you, Leon," said Horace. "Walk into my office."

"Mr. Horace, will Mrs. Wyley be so good as to be present when I tell you about myself? She has known me all my life. I want her to hear me. She may know much about me that I do not. Will she be so kind as to come into the office, Mr. Binker?" turning to the overseer.

"I have no doubt she will," the latter said.

"Request your mother to do so." Horace said to Binker, "and you, Leon, go to the kitchen and get supper. Come here half an hour from now."

"If you will excuse me, brother, I will go to my room. I believe the tragedy of 'Richard III' will interest me more than Leon's melodrama," Evariste said and mounted the stairway.

Oakfell lighted a cigar and awaited Mrs. Wyley and Leon in the office.

VLADIVOSTOK FLEET

CAPTURES BRITISH, GERMAN AND U. S. VESSELS.

A Menace to Canadian and American Pacific Shipping—Sunk an Unknown Vessel—New Chwang Abandoned by Russians.

A Yokohama cable says: The Vladivostock squadron on July 24 sunk the American Knight Commander from New York off the province of Izu, after transferring the crew of the Knight Commander to the steamer Tsinan, which arrived July 25. The Vladivostock squadron also captured a German vessel, believed to be the Arabia, with 30,000 tons of flour, and an unknown British steamer. The two vessels were sent to Vladivostock in charge of prize crews. The American Trading Company are the agents in Yokohama for the Knight Commander.

SEARCHED BY JAPANESE.

A cable from Chefoo says: The German steamer Chefoo, from New Chwang, reports that at 2 o'clock on July 25, when she was 50 miles from Chefoo, she was stopped by four torpedo boats and searched. After being released she was fired on by rapid-fire guns.

RAIDERS MAKE A CAPTURE.

A cable from London says: It is reported that a merchant vessel is accompanying the Vladivostock squadron which was sighted July 24 60 miles off Izeu. It is probable that the merchantman is a captive.

AND SINK HER.

A Tokio cable says: The Russian Vladivostock squadron has sunk the merchantman which it captured off the coast of Izeu province July 23. The name of this ship and her nationality is not known, and nothing has been learned of the fate of her crew. Witnesses ashore saw the merchantman following the fleet. Then they saw her fired upon, after which she disappeared. The Russian warships were last reported at 11 o'clock on the morning of the 24th to the southwest of Cape Iro, Izeu province, steering to the west. Cape Iro is about 65 miles southwest of Yokohama, and about 50 miles from the entrance to the bay upon which Yokohama and Tokio are located.

A later despatch from Tokio says: The Vladivostock squadron was sighted at eight o'clock on Sunday morning, July 24, off the southern coast of the province of Izeu. It was veering to the coast. Izeu forms the peninsula between Suruga and Sagami Bays. It is about fifty miles sothwest of Yokohama.

A MENACE TO CANADA.

The Tokio correspondent of the London Times, in a despatch dated July 24, says he believes that the object of the Vladivostock squadron is to interrupt trade between the United States and Japan; and that steamers on the way from Canada and San Francisco are in serious danger. He says that another aim of the squadron is apparently to seal Tokio bay.

NEW CHWANG EVACUATED.

News has reached Tien Tsin that a battle is raging outside New Chwang. The fighting could be clearly seen from the house tops. In the engagement of July 25 the Russian losses are reported to have been 700. The Japanese are slowly nearing New Chwang. Great excitement prevailed in that city during Monday's battle.

In accordance with orders issued by Gen. Kuropatkin the Russians commenced to evacuate New Chwang Sunday. Monday morning the Russian railway station was in flames. The Russians are evidently destroying their property previous to evacuation.

ALGIERS SCENE OF MALACCA'S RELEASE.

A St. Petersburg cable of July 24 says: It is now stated that the liberation of the Peninsular and Oriental steamer Malacca will occur at Algiers.

ORDERED TO CEASE INTERFERENCE.

Another dispatch of the same date from the Russian capital says: Orders have been sent to the volunteer fleet steamers St. Petersburg and Smolensk to refrain from interference with foreign shipping. It is expected these steamers will eventually join the Baltic fleet and be replaced by ordinary warships.

MARKET REPORT.

Compiled by Thompson, Sons & Co.

Thursday, July 21, 1904.

WHEAT—The course of trade in the wheat markets during the past week has been nervous, irregular, and uncertain, but the result up to the close of business to-day has been a fair advance in prices. The speculative markets have been very active, and a large trade has been done in them, for the influences arising and prevailing during the week naturally tended to activity. The principal factors influencing these markets have been the prediction of a hot wave about Saturday and Sunday over the Northwest spring wheat country, and the apprehension of political complications in Europe over the action of Russia in interfering with German and British merchant ships in the Red Sea. The predicted hot wave raised prices on Saturday ½c. to 1½c. On Monday the weekly statistics were bullish, and at the same time information came of Russian vessels interfering with neutral vessels in the Red Sea, and this added to the strength, and caused another 1c. advance in prices. On Tuesday it was seen the predicted hot wave had not come, and the advices from the East were more pacific, and markets closed at a decline. Yesterday the easiness and decline continued, but to-day a renewal of rain in the winter wheat belt and further uncertainty regarding the outcome of the Russian Red Sea incident, together with reports from Europe that the French and Spanish crops are likely to yield much less than previously counted on, turned the American markets very strong and a sharp advance took place, so that on the week there is an advance of a round 2c. on the September and December deliveries, but the July is quite irregular, showing an advance of 2½c. in New York, 1½c. decline in Minneapolis, ⅜c. advance in Duluth, and ½c. decline in Chicago. The foregoing shows how nervous and uncertain the course of the market is from day to day, and it will be well for trade to keep in view that present prices are comparatively high. With a spell of good weather over America for the ripening of the later crops and the safe gathering of all, the present feeling of apprehension would decline soon. At the same time the general world's situations is one of strength as regards the wheat trade. American crops, however good, will not be heavy, and European crops are going to be short in the aggregate compared with last year. The only hope for moderate prices for the European consumer is large crops in Argentina and Australia for the ensuing season. These crops have just been planted recently, and to some extent the weather has not been altogether favourable for the start. More recent weather, however, has been entirely favorable, plenty of rain having fallen in both countries, and as the acreage in both is considerably increased the coming harvests due in December and January may see large increase in yield. World's shipments have fallen off largely in the last two weeks and quantity on ocean passage is reduced; this of course strengthens European markets. The visible supply decreased 759,000 bushels last week against a decrease of 577,000 bushels the previous week and a decrease of 1,244,000 bushels last year. The world's shipments were 6,808,000 bushels the week previous and 10,324,000 bushels last year. The world's visible supply, according to Bradstreet's, decreased 5,796,000 bushels against a decrease of 5,141,000 bushels the previous week and a decrease of 2,228,000 bushels last year.

Manitoba wheat kept rather easy in the forepart of the week and did advance so much as wheat in American markets, but it is much stronger the last three days. One of the large mills has come into the market recently and bought very freely of wheat in store lake port elevators and also for local delivery. This has raised the price actually, and caused a much stronger feeling besides, so that on the week our prices are 2c. to 2½c. higher. The stock of old wheat is now getting into very small compass, and exporters are practically out of the market. To-day our prices for spot or July delivery are: 1 Nor., 93c.; 2 Nor., 90c.; 3 Nor., 87½c.; No. 4 wheat, 78½c.; feed wheat, 62½c.; No. 2 feed, 53½c.; all in store at Fort William and Port Arthur. On the open board July closed 93¼c.; August, 93⅞c.; October, 86¼c.; December, 84c.; May, 89c. THOMPSON, SONS & CO.

Weekly Review of Winnipeg Jobbing Prices Culled From the Commercial of Saturday, July 23

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

FLOUR—Prices are steady. We quote: No. 1 grade at $2.45 per sack of 98 lbs., delivered to the trade; No. 2, $2.30; No. 3, $1.80 to $2.10 and No. 4, $1.30. These prices are subject to the usual trade discounts.

SPELTZ—There is none in sight and the price is nominal at 40 to 45c. per bushel of 50 pounds.

MILLFEED—Despite the quietness of the market prices hold steady. We quote: Bran $16 per ton in bulk, delivered to the trade; shorts, $17 per ton.

GROUND FEED—Trade is very dull as must be expected at this season of the year, especially when pasturage is so good. Prices are steady. We quote: Oat chop, $28 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley, chop, $22; mixed barley and oats, $25; oil cake, $27 per ton.

OATS—The market remains in about statu quo. Some carlot sales by local feedmen at 40c. for No. 2 are reported. On the other hand the same grade shipped in has sold considerably lower. Those holding stock claim that country supplies are low, —shipments being made to country points, in fact—and that the new crop cannot be expected on the market for over two months yet. Receipts have not been large. No. 2 white appears to be worth 37c to 38½c. on track here.

FLAXSEED—The mills are now closed for the season. Practically no business is doing.

HAY—Continued unfavorable weather for packing has caused baled stock to advance $1 to $2 per ton, quotation now being $11 to $12 in car lots on track here. At the same time offerings of loose hay on the street have increased, quotations being up to $2 easier, at $10.

VEGETABLES—Imported new potatoes are ½c. to 1c. easier. New turnips are now on a bushel basis at 1¼c. per pound. Quotations for carrots, new beets and celery declined 10c. during the week. Asparagus is almost done, but green peas and butter beans are on the market at 5c. and 7c. per pound respectively. Parsley is 5c. lower. We quote: Potatoes, farmers' loads, 60c. per bush.; new, imported, 2½c. per pound; new turnips, 1¼c. per lb.; parsley, 20c. per dozen; onions, 3½c. per pound; pie plant, ⅜c. per pound; carrots, 20c. per dozen; cauliflower, 75c. per dozen; new cabbage, imported, 3c. per pound; local, 60c. per dozen; asparagus, 55c. per dozen bunches; new beets, 20c. per dozen; green peas, 5c. per lb.; butter beans, 7c. per lb.; celery, 40c. per dozen.

DRESSED MEATS—The market is again easier, beef declining ½c., veal 1½c. to 2c., mutton 1c. to 2c., and hogs making a low quotation ½c. down. Further declines are expected owing to visitors to the exhibition bringing supplies to market. Spring lamb is now on a pound basis at 12½c. to 14c. We quote: Beef, 7c. to 7½c. per lb. for city dressed, ½c. less for country; veal, 6½c. to 8c. for choice weights; mutton, 9c. to 10c.; spring lambs, 12½c. to 14c. per lb.; hogs, 6½c. to 7c., delivered to the trade here.

POULTRY—Fowl are coming forward better and quotations are at 11c. to 12c. per lb. Live weights are 1c. lower. Offerings of chickens are practically nil.

CHEESE—The market is about steady. We quote: 7½c. to 8½c., factory, and 9c. to 9½c. jobbing basis.

BUTTER—Creamery—If anything a slightly firmer feeling prevails at 16½c., f.o.b., factory, being about the prevailing quotation.

BUTTER—Dairy—Farmers are holding off the market, but jobbers are confident of a large make and quotations are about steady at 11c. to 12c., jobbing price for round lots, Winnipeg.

EGGS—Prices have advanced 1c. per dozen on limited receipts. Good stock is worth 17c., Winnipeg.

HIDES—Owing to the strike of meat packers in the States, tanners began to buy, and prices for a day or so were better. As soon as the strike was declared off, however, the buying orders closed, and quotations dropped to last week's level. Boston advices state, however, that the demand for leather is likely to improve soon, and a better trade in hides is anticipated. We quote: Abattoir hides, 6½c. for No. 1's; 5½c. for No. 2's. Farmer hides are steady at 3c. to 6c. per lb. Country cured butchers' are the same as city butchers', at 6c. for No. 1 grade. Lambs, 15c. to 20c.; shearlings, 10c. each.

TALLOW — The market remains weak, prices steady. No. 1 tallow is worth 3¾c. to 4c. per lb., delivered at Winnipeg; No. 3, 2¾ to 3c.

WOOL—Supplies are pretty well cleaned up, and the season practically over.

SENECA ROOT—Business is unsettled, jobbers complaining that they are getting no orders. Export demand appears dead.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—The export season has opened, with prospects for a good trade. Prices are steady at last week's figures—$4.50 off cars here for choice, and from those figures the market ranges down to 3c. for inferior grades.

SHEEP—The market is firm, owing to light offerings, the advance being 50c. per cwt. Quotations range from $4 to $4.50 per cwt.

HOGS—Hogs are about steady at 4½c. to 4¾c. per lb., selected weights.

A TRAGEDY AVERTED.

Steam Yacht on Fire—One Hundred and Fifty Passengers Aboard—All Saved.

A dispatch from Clayton, N.Y., says:—The steam yacht Castanet of the Visger Line, returning from Kingston, Ont., Sunday, with a load of excurcionists, caught fire in midstream, and only by the most fortunate circumstances was an awful accident averted.

The yacht was four miles from Kingston, and half a mile from shore. A stiff breeze was blowing aad the passengers were enjoying the sail, when suddenly, without a sound of warning, a sheet of flame shot up through the hatchways. The passengers at once ran to the ends of the boat. The flames swept up to the canvas awnings, and in a moment these were ablaze to the stern. While the passengers were huddled forward and aft in fear, the engineer and fireman crawled from the flames of the engine room. The crew had meanwhile caught up armfuls of life-preservers, which they handed to the passengers. Then they began to fight the blaze. The captain, Barney Nunn, turned his boat from its course, heading it for the shore, followed by the steam yacht Nokomis, which was a mile away when the blaze burst out. The burning boat was beached on Cedar Island, and in a moment the Nokomis was run in close behind her. The transfer of passengers was quietly made without the loss of a life, and the united efforts of both crews extinguished the blaze. Engineer Charles Wood and his son, Raymond Wood, the fireman, were both badly burned, but will recover. The cause of the accident was an explosion of gas in the firebox, which threw the fires out into the engine room and down the galleys. The boat was a handsome excursion yacht, built in 1898. The damage to her can be repaired.

A FIGHT WITH LIONS.

Whole Cage Full of Infuriated Beasts Engaged in a General Fight.

A New York dispatch says:—At Coney Island on Sunday night, as Captain Jack Bonavita, a well-known lion tamer, was starting his act with twenty-seven lions, Caesar and Baltimore, two of the lions, jumped down from their stools and began fighting. The other lions joined in the mix-up and the fight became general. Bonavita attempted to drive back the lions with a heavy pole, but he in turn was attacked by Baltimore, who broke down the pole and buried his teeth in the trainer's arm, lacerating it terribly. The trainer then attempted to fire his blank cartridge pistol at the lion, when another lion sprang at him from the rear and bit at the pistol, thereby causing the charge of powder to enter Bonavita's left arm.

The latter's wounds were then bleeding profusely, but the plucky trainer did not cease his efforts until he had driven the lions back to their cages, when, overcome by loss of blood, he had to be carried to his room. Later he was taken to the hospital. This is about the tenth or eleventh time that Bonavita has been attacked by his lions since he returned from Paris. The trainers give the warm weather as a reason for the outbreak.

SUNDAY'S FIGHT.

RUSSIANS DRIVEN BACK TOWARD LIAO YANG.

British Steamer Ardova Brought to by Loaded Shots from Volunteer Fleet Steamer Smolensk—British Cruiser Lying Close by Vessels at Suez.

A battle took place on 24th July east of Ta-Tche-Kiao, which resulted in the Russians being driven back, and it is believed that they will have to retire to Laio Yang. The battle lasted all day.

BRITISH CRUISER IS CLOSE BY.

The British steamer Ardova, which after being fired at by the Russian volunteer fleet steamer Smolensk, was seized by that vessel, has arrived at Suez. She is flying the Russian naval flag, and has a prize crew on board. It is declared her destination is a Russian port. The British cruiser Venus is anchored close to the captured steamer.

ARDOVA'S CAPTAIN OBJECTS.

Captain Smith, of the Ardova, has lodged a protest against the capture and detention of the steamer. Part of the Ardova's crew, who are on board, will be landed at Jedda, Arabia.

CREW AT YOKOHAMA.

The British steamer Chinan has arrived at Yokohama with the crew of the British steamer Knight Commander, which was sunk by the Russian Vladivostock squadron off Izu. The Knight Commander's cargo was a general one. Her European passengers were detained by the Russians and her crew of 21 transferred to the Chinan, which also reports that the Russians sank two Japanese schooners.

IS A BRITISH SHIP.

The Knight Commander, sunk by the Vladivostock squadron on July 24, according to the maritime register, is a British ship of 2,716 tons burden, commanded by Captain Durant. She sailed from New York on May 6 for Singapore. On June 23 she was at Manila, and later was reported as having arrived at Shanghai. The owner of the Knight Commander is the Knight Steamship Company, Ltd., of Liverpool. She was built at Newcastle by the Palmers.

RAIDING FLEET AGAIN SIGHTED

The Vladivostock squadron was sighted 20 miles off Katsu Ura, in the Perfecture of Shimosa, at 7 o'clock on the morning of the 25th July, steaming slowly east. Katsu Ura is about 100 miles northeast of Cape Iro, where the Vladivostock squadron was reported July 24. Katsu Ura lies almost due east of Tokio.

Great Britain's bill for damages against Russia for demurrage and other indemnities connected with the arrest, detention, and shelling of British ships in the Red Sea will probably be very heavy. Already it is roughly estimated at $5,000,000. The popular version of the Red Sea entanglement, which has so embarassed the Russian Foreign Office, is that it grew out of Grand Duke Mikhaileovich (head of the department of mercantile marine) practically taking the matter into his own hands, and commissioning the vessels of the volunteer fleet, which had passed through the Dardanelles bound for the Far East to hoist the Russian war flag and seize merchantmen in the Red Sea. It is understood that the Emperor has censured his brother-in-law for taking a step of such gravity without consulting the Foreign Office. There is general relief, however, at the fact that Grand Duke Alexander Mikhaileovich's precipitate action has not resulted in irreparable complications. The blunder of the Grand Duke is attributed to his comparative youth and inexperience in affairs of state.

The Slums of London.

A young Indian lady, Miss Olive Malvery, has recently been studying the conditions under which women live in the poorest districts of London, and this week she has been expressing her opinion that the poverty of the slums of London is more degraded and awful than is the normal poverty of India. Miss Malvery, who is known in the East End as "the little princess," has worked as a Whitechapel factory girl, and has sold flowers and played the organ in the streets and slept in shelters and tramped all night with the homeless poor. She has also worked as a barmaid and as a waitress. She thinks most of the destitution is due to the sickness and weakness of mind and body caused by unsanitary condition of living and working, improper food, ignorance of cooking, and drink, which is the greatest blight of all upon the industrial population. Miss Malvery has been advised to devote herself to missionary work in India, and she replies scornfully there is more need for missionaries in the slums of London, and more need to teach the people thrift and simple cookery and the selection of simple foods, and above all, more need to enforce sanitary laws, and the necessity of doing away with sweating in the factories, and of enforcing the living wage in all industries. It is a humiliating thing to hear from a cultured and experienced young Indian woman that London more than India wants missionaries.

The countries with the largest population (China, India and Russia) are by no means the strongest States, either industrially, commercially, or in any other way.

A silk, elastic strap placed under the chin and fastened, so it will fit snugly on the top of the head, together with exercises and massage, will reduce a double chin.

A GERMAN SENSATION.

Extraordinary Evidence Regarding Russian Methods Offered by the Defence.

At the session of the court which began the trial of the seven Social Democrats accused at the instance of the Russian Government of smuggling Anarchistic literature into Russian, the testimony given showed that some of the pamphlets in question appealed to the army, urging the soldiers to disobey the command to fire upon the populace.

The defence, near the close of the session, caused a sensation by moving to summon Mayor Petkoff, of Sofia, a former Russian dragoman in Bulgaria, and the editor of a Sofia newspaper, in order to prove that the Russian Government had been keeping agents in the Balkans since 1881 to incite the people against the rulers. The defence wishes to prove through these witnesses the Russians' responsibility for the murder of King Alexander and the premier, M. Stambuloff, in order to draw the conclusion that Russian is not a civilised State having right of protection in German courts. 6

The court took the matter into consideration.

Another sensation was caused by a telegram from the Foreign Office stating that a treaty between Russia and Germany covering paragraph 260 of the Russian penal code does not exist. The paragraph refers to punishment for high treason against foreign potentates, which was shown to apply only where a treaty explicitly provides for it.

The newspapers are departing from the usual practice here of avoiding editorial comment on trials in progress. A number devote leading articles to the Konigsberg case this evening, showing the painful impression made on the public mind by the disclosure of the relations existing between the Russian and German Governments. The testimony brought out the fact that the Russian Embassy in Berlin gave the court at Konigsberg incomplete and misleading translations of passages of the Russian penal code, whereas the court's experts supply the missing words, which give an entirely different result. The National Zeitung expresses amazement, and The Tageblatt says it expects the case will soon be dismissed.

MEN WERE AFRAID.

Eighty Men Watch Brave Girl Rescue Three People from Drowning.

A Toronto despatch says: About eighty men watched Miss Rae Petrie, a fifteen-year-old girl, paddle out to the rescue of three people, Miss D. Cosgrove, Miss Inez Kidner and Mr. Arthur Murdoch, who were upset in a canoe about a mile off the Island shore about 5 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. Miss Petrie and her friend, Miss Trees, were walking from Ward's Island towards Centre Island, when they suddenly saw the Petrie, seeing that the men were all upturned canoe out in the lake. Miss standing around in groups talking about the poor chances the people had for the rescue, and not thinking of making one themselves, seized the beach with two paddles in it, upon a canoe, which was lying on and pushed it off into the water.

A man cried to her to come back, and she did, but, seeing that the men were still unwilling to go, started back again, this time accompanied by a small boy about 11 years old. The capsized canoe was a long distance out, and as she approached she saw to her horror, Miss Kidner disappearing. As she neared the drowning girl appeared again, and Murdoch grabbed her and threw her across the gunwale of Miss Petrie's canoe, and Miss Rae pulled her in. Miss Beatrice Cosgrave, who had also seen the accident, approached the scene in another canoe, and took Mr. Arthur Murdoch and her sister on board, and taking the upturned canoe in tow paddled for the shore. Miss Petrie, finding out that Miss Kidner had fainted, paddled as quickly as possible for the shore, where she was given quite a reception by the men who had been afraid to venture out in the strong northwest wind that was blowing. Mrs. H. W. Petrie, the mother of the brave girl, did not know of the incident until after supper, when she was told of it by one of her neighbors. Miss Rae had not returned home, but had supper at Mrs. Trees'. When spoken of it, she said that she would not have thought of going only the men seemed to be so much afraid of the water and themselves to venture out. The rescue was the talk of the island for that night, and not a few young men received quiet reminders of their cowardice for not going to the rescue. Numbers of excuses were turned over to the fair sex for the incapacity of the men, and one of the ladies was heard to exclaim, "The women will do all the brave things after a while."

Armenian Massacres Repeated.

Dispatches received at Berlin report the Armenian massacres in full swing again, all the males in six villages near Lokeyan having been killed by the Turks. The women were attacked and the children tortured. Whole villages were burned.

A similar slaughter is reported in the vicinity of Mush, where from 60 to 80 Armenians have been killed every night. The inhabitants of one village, who had fled to a place of safety, were induced to return under promises of protection. The Turks, however, fell on them and killed almost the entire population. The roads in Armenia are strewn with corpses. The horrors of 1894 and 1896, when Europe raised the outcry, have been equalled. So far the authorities have not attempted to stop the mass have not attempted to stop the massacres.

Swiss watches, according to a report just published, are becoming popular in China. Those with fantastic designs on the face find the most ready sale.

THE FERNIE FREE PRESS, FERNIE BRITISH COLUMBIA

FRIDAY, AUG. 5, 1904.

There seems to be little doubt but that Mr. Stork will be elected Mayor by acclamation, as no other name has been seriously associated with the position.

* * *

It has been decided that any person who has entered into an agreement to purchase a lot and who has made a payment on the same is a "freeholder" and is entitled to a vote in the coming municipal elections.

* * *

Remember that after 5 p. m. on Thursday August 11th the first municipal voters list for the City of Fernie will be closed. For anyone to neglect getting his name on will be little short of criminal negligence. Procrastination is the thief of time. Attend to it now and it will be done.

THE Crows Nest Pass Coal Company has entered into a contract with the American Coal and Coke Co. of Butte Mont., for the sale of coal and coke for Montana points. This American Company has been formed for the purpose of purchasing fuel and supplying the Montana markets. The new arrangement not only simplifies matters for the C. N. P. Coal Co. in that all its dealings are done direct with one firm, but it ensures larger and ever-increasing demands, as the American Company is always in close touch with the markets in its territory. The smelters of Butte, Helena, Anaconda and Great Falls consume between eight and nine hundred tons of coke per day and there are strong indications that the American Coal and Coke Co. will supply most of this demand from the output of the Crows Nest Pass Coal Co.

As a result of throwing open the Flathead country about a thousand licenses have been applied for. Allowing for many who will not risk the hundred dollar fee on account of their inability to uphold their claims in the courts, and for many whose hands will be tied during the time of litigation, it is only fair to assume that active prospecting and developing will begin at once on hundreds of claims. This means that considerable traffic will pass over some trail into that country, and that the towns on that route will receive very material advantages as outfitting points. Under the present policy of the Government the trails used will not be Canadian trails and the towns benefitted will not be Canadian towns. A route once well established from Uncle Sam's land into the Flathead will continue to flourish after other routes are opened up and the trade which should belong to the Canadians will continue to go to the towns across the border. The Provincial Government in withholding the expenditure of a paltry thousand dollars for the establishment of a trail from some point on the C. N. railway is pursuing a-penny-wise-pound-foolish policy, that will become more and more apparent as time goes on.

IT is reported that three camps of surveyors are at work between Lethbridge and Pincher Creek making a preliminary survey for the extension of the Great Northern from Lethbridge to Pincher Creek. This report is in accordance with the general accredited plans of J. J. Hill for a connected line through the Crows Nest and Southern Alberta. It is reported on what may be considered very good authority that the Morrissey-Fernie line will not stop here, but that the work of extending the line to Michel will go on without delay. It is probable that the same contractors will do the work and that the construction supplies will be kept here over winter that the work may commence early next season. This is another link in the chain, and but one more remains, that from Michel over the summit to Pincher Creek. When this line is an accomplished fact, as it doubtless will be in the course of a couple years, the Crows Nest towns will be greatly benefitted by the increased traffic. No one knows the possibilities of this section better than does Mr. Hill and the fact that he sees the need for another through line may be regarded as a bright omen for the future of the Crows Nest.

The other story was evidently concocted to evade awkward questions about carrying a gun.

Wilson Creek Valley contains some of the finest timber in this part of the Province. J. G. Cummings, Provincial land surveyor, who owns seven claims on that Creek had an expert over them last week and he estimates more than 20,000 feet to the acre, aggregating one hundred million feet. The timber is clear spruce and fir. Wilson Creek empties into the Elk from the west side a little north of Michel Creek. The Creek carries a large body of water, quite sufficient to carry logs at any season if cleaned out. Mr. Cummings has an excellent mill site at the Junction of Wilson Creek with the Elk River.

FAMOUS HYMN WRITERS

TWO OF THEM WHO LIVE PLEASANTLY AT NEWPORT, ISLE OF WIGHT.

Mr. Albert Midlane's "There's a Friend For Little Children"—Its Author's Views of Children Past and Present—Mrs. Jemima Luke, Who Wrote "I Think When I Read That Sweet Story of Old," in Her 91st Year.

Mr. Albert Midlane, author of the children's favorite hymn, "There's a Friend for Little Children," was visited by a representative of Lloyd's Weekly News (London) at his pleasant home in Newport, Isle of Wight. He was hale and hearty, and much happier for his visit to London, which had resulted in his being freed from all financial difficulty. The venerable hymn writer produced a handsome gold medal, which he said was presented to him at the City Temple in recognition of his work through the minstrelsy of sacred song. It is inscribed, "A sweet singer in Israel," and is surmounted by a crown and a miniature representation of an open Bible, and it further conveys the intimation, "For distinguished service to the Sunday School." Mr. Midlane went on to state, in his easy style, that a choir of trained children's voices sang his hymn, "There's a Friend," and at the close he had to shake hands with the dear children.

"How many hymns have you written in the course of your long life?" was asked. He replied, "about 730, 315 of which appear in my little book, entitled 'The Bright Blue Sky.'" In the preface Mr. Midlane thus expresses his aim: "These hymns are written for the glory of Him who is, indeed, 'The Children's Friend,' and at whose feet this tribute of song is laid."

Mr. Midlane, in reply to a question respecting his most famous hymn, said: "I have heard of the children singing it in Gaelic, Italian, German, in the language of the natives of Bechuanaland (whatever that may be), and also, what is a great joy to me, I have received an account of the little Japs in Yokohama singing the hymn, and I am told that they greatly enjoy it.

"I once saw the late Rev. Chas. Haddon Spurgeon in his own home, and after we had been discussing some points of doctrine, on which we were compelled to differ, he wound up the interview by placing a hand upon each of my shoulders and looking me straight in the face, he said in his deep, kindly voice, 'It isn't a wide gulf that separates us—farewell.'

"On one occasion I saw the late Dr. Parker in the vestry at the City Temple at the close of one of the services. He said, 'I would sooner have been the author of your children's hymn than the preacher of the most eloquent sermon. At best, a sermon reaches only a limited number, but your hymn has gone the wide world over.'

"I first began writing hymns when I was twelve years old, and I wrote under the signature of 'Little Albert' to the penny magazines."

"What is your opinion of child-life to-day compared with your early days?"

"Oh," he remarked, "there appears to be a deplorable lack of reverence. It seems to me that the children in the early days of my life were kept closer under parental control. Discipline was more strict. Of course, I recognize that we live in a very different age, competition is much keener, and so forth; still, I cannot help thinking there is far too much time spent in the pursuit of pleasure. Life is not regarded so seriously as it ought to be."

In conclusion Mr. Midlane said he was grateful that his health still permitted him to conduct services on Sunday at the Mission Hall; and he added that he had been a Sunday school teacher for over sixty years, and that if spared until Jan. 23, 1905, he would be 80 years of age. "On March 20, 1901, we celebrated our golden wedding, and now my partner and I have lived together 53 years—53 years of connubial bliss."

Mrs. Jemima Luke.

The authoress of the favorite children's hymn, "I Think When I Read That Sweet Story of Old," was visited the other day at her pleasant home in Newport, Isle of Wight. A representative of Lloyd's found the lady, who is in her 91st year, well and cheerful, though her lot is lonely, as she has survived her husband and all her children. She is gentle and refined, and speaks with a clear, musical voice. Her face lights up with the sunniest of smiles when she is talking about the work which lies nearest her heart—the work of foreign missions. On this subject Mrs. Luke is an enthusiast. In her early days she longed to engage in it.

"When I wrote the hymn in 1841 to which you have referred I was intending to enter the mission field," she said. "At this time I attended the Normal Infant School in Gray's Inn road, and it was there I first heard the air to which my hymn is sung. In 1843 I married a Congregational minister, and went to Chester. Subsequently we removed to Orange street Congregational Church, Leicester square, a church which is historically associated with the coming of the Huguenots as French refugees to the city of London. When I was quite young I was a prolific writer of verse, but as soon as I came to read good poetry I was so disgusted with my efforts that I threw the verses away."

In answer to a question, Mrs. Luke said: "I attend the Congregational Church on Sunday morning, when it is fine. I go in a bath-chair. I can hear the minister best in his prayers. I suppose it is because he is more deliberate. I have sometimes thought I should have to get some kind of ear trumpet for the sermon, but I don't really think I shall, because it must be a little disconcerting to the minister," she laughingly remarked.

"How do the little folks of to-day compare with those of your early years?" was asked.

"Well, I don't know that I can give any opinion," she said, "but I think children are to a great extent what their parents make them. If they have cause to respect their parents then so much the better for the children, but as I say I am not very much in touch with children."

The venerable lady remarked, "When I was young we used to sing the hymns of Jane and Mary Taylor, 'Hymns for Infant Minds,' as well as those of Dr. Watts, but I think I like the former better than those of Dr. Watts—they are more refined, and I wish they were sung now."

Mrs. Luke settled in the Isle of Wight in the hope of prolonging her servant's life. She was suffering from consumption, and the change did her a great deal of good. In kindly tones the old lady spoke of her servant: "She is an intelligent woman," she said, "and often tells me how the struggle is going on between the Japs and the Russians, and about many other questions of the day."

V.C. HERO.

How the Cross Was Won in Somaliland by Lieut. Smith.

For conspicuous bravery in Somaliland, the King has conferred the coveted Victoria Cross on Lieut. Clement Leslie Smith of the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry. Thrilling, indeed, was the act that won the cross. Hospital Assistant Rahamat Ali was hit early in the fight with the dervishes at Jidballi on Jan. 10. Lieut. Smith and Dr. Welland went out to his assistance and endeavored to bring him out of action on a horse. But Ali was killed, and his two brave would-be rescuers were surrounded by the enemy.

Helping the doctor on to his horse, Lieut. Smith turned his head to the lines of safety. Fate was against the two; the beast went down with a crash. A passing mule was caught. There was another attempt to mount; the mule was killed.

Then Dr. Welland was speared, but his dauntless companion stood by him to the end, pouring the contents of his revolver into the surrounding foe.

"I was much astonished to find he had escaped with his life," reported Lieut. Stevens to the major-general.

Inmate's Legacy to a Workhouse.

At a recent meeting of the Birmingham Board of Guardians it was announced that a legacy, worth £150, had been left to them by an inmate of the workhouse infirmary. This bald but interesting announcement has, on inquiry, ripened into quite a singular story.

The testator is a man of culture. Years ago he was a prosperous merchant, and executed large orders for helmets for the army; indeed, he once fashioned a Life Guards helmet for the King. He spent a good deal of time in traveling on the continent, and was an ardent student of French literature. He was, however, something of a misanthrope, and lost touch with all his relatives and friends. Of late years he has earned his living as a metal worker, but failing health and lack of energy caused his trade to leave him.

Lying neglected in a squalid lodging, the thought came to him a few weeks ago that he would be much better off in the workhouse infirmary, and a messenger was sent to the relieving officer. The official immediately decided that it was a suitable case for admission, and, incoherently muttering his feelings of gratitude, the old man was removed to the institution. The following day he called on the relieving officer, and handed to him his will, legally drawn up, leaving to the Guardians the deserted metal shop, with its plant and fittings, his books, and a sum of money, the whole of which, it is estimated, will result in £150 being available.

The old man told the relieving officer that he was very comfortable where he was, and that he wanted to pay for the comforts he was receiving during the few brief weeks which remained for him.

Mary Queen of Scots' Relics.

Few dead-and-gone sovereigns are more liberally represented by relics than Mary Queen of Scots, whose harp was so keenly bid for at Edinburg on a recent Saturday. At Newby Hall one may see the massive four-poster in which she slept for two nights at Nappa, the historic seat of the Metcalfes, of Yorkshire, and at Low Hall, Yeaden, is treasured a pair of hawking-gloves presented by the Queen to Lord Scrope, her jailer at Bolton Castle. A few years ago Sir James Naesmyth presented to the Peebles Museum a hawk's lure, of wonderful workmanship, which was once her property. At Oxford is preserved a dainty leather glove, embroidered with silver wire and decorated with flowers worked in varicolored silks; at Dunrobin Castle is a cast of her face; and at Hardwicke Hall are tapestries of her working. The Duke of Devonshire has a pane of glass taken from an old hall at Buxton on which the unhappy Queen had scratched these lines:

Buxton, farewell; no more perhaps my feet
Thy famous tepid streams shall ever greet.

And in an old moated house near Alfreton is another pane, on which she inscribed this sad legend: "Trop heureuse en toi; Malheureuse en moi."

The Earliest World's Fair.

In the centuries before the nineteenth the nearest approach to an international exhibition appears to have been the Frankfort fairs of the sixteenth century. Henry Estienne, the scholar, describes this institution as "the epitome of all the markets of the world." But it is from an event within the memory of many persons now living that the fairs at Philadelphia, Chicago, Buffalo and St. Louis trace their genealogy. The mother of all such displays was the exhibition held in a palace of glass in Hyde Park, London, in 1851. It owed its existence to the Prince Consort, and was enormously successful from every point of view.

HUMOR AT SCHOOL.

Henry J. Barker, M.A., Compiles Some Excellent Examples of British Children's Unconscious and Ready Wit.

The following are examples of schoolboy wit, though whether conscious or unconscious one cannot say:

"Boys," asked a master in a history lesson, "what was the Great Revolution?"

And one young prodigy answered: "Why, it was when William of Orange turned round, sir!"

An equally smart answer was given by a boy who was observed by his teacher to have sketched a railway engine on his slate:

"Why don't you draw the carriages, too?" inquired the teacher.

"Oh, the engine draws them," responded the boy.

Lessons on elementary science (a favorite subject in many of our schools) often evoke answers of a very unscientific nature. The governess of a school in Brixton had given a lesson on the different parts of a flower, external and internal, viz., the leaves, petals, stamens, pistil, ovary, etc.

A few days later, in continuing the subject, the lady commenced by asking a few questions.

"Mention," she said, "one of the important parts of a plant which you cannot see."

And one girl, who had not been present at the former lesson, replied:

"Why, the inside, teacher, of course!"

"Why are duck eggs of a bluish tint?"

And the young urchin who happened to be pointed at stammered out:

"Becose, sir, the duck is—is bluish inside!"

During the course of an examination in grammar, an inspector came to the somewhat difficult subject of the irregular comparison of adjectives; e.g. little, less, least; much, more, most, etc.

"Comparative, worse, sir."

"Right," said the inspector, "go on."

"Superlative, dead, sir!"

In the course of a Scripture lesson on the temptation of our first parents in Eden, the teacher had explained to the children that Adam's chief occupation was the simple and delightful one of dressing the garden and keeping it in order. Later on in the lesson he asked:

"Why was it, do you think, that the devil decided to tempt the woman and not the man?"

"Becoze," replied one youngster, "Adam was too busy a-watering the garden."

During an examination on the life of Jacob and his sons, the master asked:

"Why was Joseph put into prison?"

And one old-fashioned little urchin answered:

"Why; he loved a Pharoah's wife, sir; so he locked him up safe so as he couldn't get at her!"

On this same subject of the life of Joseph, a teacher came to that part of the story where the brethren arrive from Canaan to buy corn. He gave the children a graphic account of the reception which Joseph accorded them, and the feasting which accompanied the event. He touched upon the special favor shown to little Benjamin in serving him with a mess of food five times greater than that of the others.

"There, what do you think of that?" said the teacher, placing his hand on the shoulder of a lad just in front of him.

"Why, I should think he was fair busted!" responded the youngster.

This little story shows the risk which teachers run in giving "show lessons" to visitors:

The vicar of a country parish brought a couple of ladies to see the working of the village school. Both visitors were members of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Whilst in the girls' department, the mistress kindly consented to put some questions to the children upon their knowledge of the uses of animals to man.

The girls answered very intelligently all the questions put to them in connection with the common domestic animals; and the mistress was thus emboldened to proceed to less familiar ground.

"What useful articles do we obtain from the elephant?" she asked.

"Ivory," answered the first girl.

"Right; and what from the whale?"

"Whale-bone," said the second.

"Very good; and what from the seal?"

"Sealing-wax," answered the third.

Many teachers of our East London schools have an excellent custom of giving the scholars an annual outing into the country. The children are allowed to roam about Epping Forest (or other sylvan retreat) at their own sweet will, and are afterwards regaled with a good substantial meal. On the occasion of one of these treats, a lady teacher who was assisting in serving the children at their meal came up to one little lad and said:

"Will you take some bread-and-butter, my child?"

"No," responded the urchin, rudely and decisively."

"No, what?" mildly suggested the lady.

"No jolly fear, while there's curran-cake abart!"

THE EVILS OF POLITICS

PARTY PRESIDENTIAL CONVENTIONS SUGGEST PREACHER'S TEXT.

PEOPLE'S CHOICE OF RULER

When the Bad Elements Got Control in Politics the Result Was a Curse to the Nation—Who Are Trying to Drive the Almighty From the Control of Public Life—National Value of Righteousness.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 24.—With the national conventions as a theme and an oriental fable as a text the preacher makes some timely reflections on certain evils that afflict our politics and threaten the well being of Government and people. The text is Judges ix, 14, "Then said all the trees unto the bramble, Come, thou, and reign over us."

This is the year of great national conventions. The Republican party sent its representatives last June to Chicago to nominate their candidate for the presidency of the United States. The Democratic party this month met in St. Louis to nominate their candidate for the same office. The Prohibition party, the Populist party, the Labor party, all have had their conventions and nominated their leaders. From among the different statesmen nominated for the office of the Presidency of the United States by the different political parties the next chief executive of our nation is to be chosen. We, as intelligent men and women, are conversant with the struggles which the different political parties made in late convention halls. It is not inappropriate, therefore, for us to take as our sermonic theme to-day the vision which Jotham had when all the trees of the forest came together in convention in the valley of Shechem, with the blue dome of the heavens for a roof, and selected the useless, destroying bramble as their King.

This famous parable or fable of Jotham was truly realistic in more ways than one. For a convention of trees it had a perfect topographic setting. On the southern side of this famous valley is mighty Mount Gerizim. On the northern side hoary headed Mount Ebal lifts its seared and wrinkled face. These two mountains as sounding boards tossed the echoing voices of the cheering delegates backward and forward, even as the shuttlecock might be thrown through the air by the powerful blows of two battledoors. The soil of that valley was black and rich. There the gurgling waters of many fountains sounded a musical accompaniment to the murmurings of many voices trying to win votes for their favorite sons. Isaiah, in prophecy, saw "all the trees of the fields clap their hands." Jotham, in vision, saw the trees, as convention delegates, with moving hands, moving feet, moving lips and sparkling eyes. Their rustle was to him articulate speech. Their branches were outstretched arms. Their names were symbols to him of honor and truth or of dishonor and disgrace.

Hardly had this great convention of trees assembled in the valley of Shechem to select a king than it became self evident that the great majority of the delegates were ready to be stampeded for one tree. "Come," the majority cried, "come, let us make the olive tree our king!" To Jotham the olive was the symbol of strength and wealth and power as well as of healing. But the olive tree would not become king. It declined the scepter of kingship over the trees. Then this great convention wanted to elect the fig tree king. The delegates next offered the nomination for rulership to the vine, whose rich blood had made the vineyards of Shechem famous. But the fig tree and the vine both refused the scepter of the forest.

But in this Jotham parable, after the olive and the fig and vine had all refused the scepter, the worst elements got control of the convention hall. Then these bad elements said to each other: "Let us nominate a king after our own spirit. Let us make the curse of the field our king. Hail, bramble! King Bramble! Hail, bramble, our future ruler!"

Jotham's purpose in this parable was to show a danger which menaced his own country and has menaced our country all through its history. There have been in the past, as there are to-day, men who conspire to get control of the political parties in order that they may nominate men utterly unfit for the high office of the Presidency of the United States. Thank God, they have not succeeded yet, for the men who have been nominated by the various parties are men of high character and sterling worth. But we need to be on our guard against the conspirators, who will never cease their efforts to win that great prize. Let us identify them, that we may sedulously guard against their insidious attacks.

First among the Satanic conspirators are the infidels. They say: "We cannot fight God in the open. We cannot as yet blot off the American silver dollar the sentence, 'In God we trust.' But we can plead for so called religious liberty. We can say that the Bible should be driven out of the public schools. We can place upon the statute books the statement. 'The United States Government is entirely a human Government. No divine hand is to-day guiding the helm of state. Therefore no name of God and no prayer to any God shall ever be heard in any of its legislative buildings or public halls. We, the people of this fair land, can decree that hereafter we can attend to our business. We will make no public recognition of an overruling Divine Providence.'"

My friends, as intelligent Americans, have you not recognized the fact that the infidels, the agnostics, the atheists, the deists and all those who would deny public recognition of God are trying to drive out the Almighty from the control of our public life? What is the meaning of the movement that has accomplished this one fact? There is hardly a state college in all this land where the Bible is now studied as a text book. In all those different schools the faculty makes provision for the teaching of English belles lettres. They are willing to teach Grecian and Roman and Scythian and Alexandrian and Asiatic mythologies. They are willing to teach Buddhism, Confucianism, Brahmanism and all other isms, but they are not willing to teach who Jesus Christ was and is and for what the gospel of Jesus Christ stands.

Now, for my part, while I hold that denominationalism ought never to be taught in a state institution, I contend that no young man is properly educated who has not been made familiar with the Bible and its religious and moral principles. I claim that as educated men and women it is just as important to know who were Moses and Joshua and David as who were Shakespeare and Burns and Walter Scott and Goethe and Victor Hugo. I claim that it is more important educationally to know who Jesus Christ is than who Mohammed was and what was the cause of the Trojan war. If the atheistic elements of this country are not trying to get possession of this Government, why did certain infidel newspapers a few year ago denounce the presidential act of taking the oath of office upon the leaves of an open Bible? They claimed that, "as the Government had no established church, therefore the President elect had no right to render allegiance to any one particular God." Men who write sophistries of this kind are enemies whom we cannot afford to deride. I tell you that to-day the church as well as the people at large should recognize the evil influences which are working underneath us and all about us to render this a godless nation and to exclude all recognition of God from the acts and policy of the United States Government. Already this evil monster calling itself "Free Thought" has a grip upon our ballot box.

I would especially plead with the American people to fight the evil "bramble of free thought," because resistance of God is the spirit of anarchy, which, when developed, becomes social and political anarchy and is subversive of every form of Civil Government. When under the teaching of that great infidel Voltaire the churches of Paris were closed and a harlot dressed in gorgeous robes and seated about the French capital and worshiped, then the "reign of terror" was at hand. Where were the bullets of the slayer of Garfield and of the slayer of William McKinley molded? Amid the hot, hissing flames of a fire started in the attempt to burn up the throne of God! You never saw in your life an anarchist who was not at heart an infidel.

I was never more impressed with this thought than when some years ago from a noted atheistic as well as anarchistic paper I cut out the full developed poisonous results of those two accursed doctrines. Like Siamese twins, these two words, atheism and anarchy, in their ultimate meaning should never be separated. This was the editorial I found in that famous sheet: "This is our doctrine: We believe in no divine Government. We believe in no human Government. Might only is right. The only remedy for wrongs is butchery. The tree of liberty bears fruit only when manured with the bones of fat usuers, insolent despots, perfidious politicians and blacklegs generally. If squatters oppress you, plant rackarock for their buggies; also fire low and lay them out. If Shylocks of the bloody city fleece you, make their homes desolate. Study the science of death. Use bullets, steel, melinite, kerosene, phosphorus, fire sticks, torpedoes, lithofracteur, poison, blasting powder, bombshells—any weapon you can get hold of. Also you must steel like Spartans, think like heroes and lie like hell." Such is the full grown, poisonous plant which the soil and seed of atheism will ultimately produce if left alone. Ah, my fellow countrymen in the convention hall of the American people, fight this foe miscalled "free thought" as you would fight death. Drive God away from your land, and you hand over this Government to be the playing of anarchists, the spot of nihilists. Then you send forth the death knell to all order and to the protection of life and property.

But standing to-day in the great convention hall of Jotham's vision we see the bramble being advocated as king by another powerful faction. It is composed of the worshipers of wealth. When the members of this faction rise to make their nominating speeches we see that the speakers' teeth are all of gold, and their arms are of gold, and their hair is of gold, and their legs are of gold. Their fingers are of gold, though they have gold rings upon those fingers. Their necks also are of gold, though the collars around those necks are of pure gold. Their feet are of gold, though the shoes which cover those feet are not made of leather, but of gold. By the old Roman law a man could not vote unless he was a property owner and his property was valued, I believe, at something like $1,200 in our money. To-day there is a tendency not so much to restrict the vote in Presidential elections to the property owner as to those who either own gold or can be influenced by the prospect of getting gold.

Do you profess to believe that gold—yellow gold—as a would be bramble king, is not trying to get possession of this Government? Do you for one moment profess to believe that the United States would be as quick to declare war against England or Russia or Germany or France as it was against a poverty-stricken nation like Spain? Touch the nation's pocketbook and in many parts of this land you will make the word "patriotism" written in letters of gold, turn as black as the heart of selfishness and deceit. One of the great dangers threatening the welfare of our land is the power of the great money combinations. It is a rapidly developing power, and it is ever aimed to seat in the Presidential chair of this free nation its bramble king, gold, as the supreme ruler of this great people. When the great railroad trusts and the oil trusts and the tin can trusts and the beef trusts and the sugar trusts and the steel trusts can dictate who is to be President of the United States let us beware! Take thy cloven foot, O yellow and would be King Bramble, from off the front doorstep of the White House. Thou didst destroy the Roman and the Grecian Governments when their national power passed into the hands of the few capitalists. Thy foul breath is now hot upon our cheeks, but by God's help thou shalt not be allowed to destroy us.

But again we find the destroying Bramble canvassing for supremacy in American politics in another way. He now appeals to the diseased and inflamed appetite of man for strong drink. But, though, if a man may look at this Bramble long enough, he can see him changed into the wriggling coil of a snake; yet, like Melusina, the most famous of all the French fairies, when he first appears he looks like a beautiful god, instead of like a devil. His hair is a cluster of luscious grapes, rich as those of Eshcol, which the spies carried back from the promised land to the Hebrew encampment. His cheek has not upon it the pale look of a corpse, but it is flushed with what looks like the redness of health. He comes to us not as a pauper. In his pocket he jingles the coin of his taxes as he says: "You cannot, you dare not, do without me. I am King Alcohol. There is not a political convention in all this land except one that has dared hurl defiance at my sceptre. My den may seem to be the saloon, but my throne will yet be built under the great dome in the rotunda of our national capitol. I shall yet be publicly recognized as king in American politics as I am everywhere in secret recognized as King Alcohol now."

Is not the defiant assertion true? What political convention, with the exception of the Prohibition convention, dared double up its fist and smite this Bramble Alcohol a staggering blow?

Not one alone, but all of the great political parties, with but one exception, are bidding for the alcoholic vote to-day. There may be silver planks, anti-trust planks, anti-imperialistic planks, woman suffragist planks, high tariff planks and low tariff planks found in the different convention platforms upon which the various candidates for the Presidency stand, but with the exception of the Prohibition party not one assembly of delegates to a national convention called to nominate a candidate for the Presidency of the United States has dared to say to the saloon keeper, to the brewer and to the wine merchant: "Get out of this convention hall! Be off! We defy you and your Satanic hirelings. You are destroying our youth and our strong manhood with your liquid poison. Out, agents of darkness! Out! Out!" No, that is not the way the different conventions spoke. In their suggestive silence they say: "Bramble Alcohol, we may yet elect you king—but not now. However, if you promise to help us now we will promise not to hurt your trade hereafter." Am I wrong in stating that Bramble Alcohol is one of the threatening dangers confronting the future sovereignty of this land?

I would like, if there had been time enough, to have spoken of another form of evil threatening this land and bidding for kingship. I allude to the bramble of licentiousness or of immorality. I know that most people will lift their hands in horror as I speak and say, "Why, there is no danger like that threatening us!" Yes, there is, my friends. When an honest man is elected to the highest executive office of a city he finds out, much to his surprise, he cannot shut up the brothels as he would. He cannot stop the immoral evils of the low dance halls. Everywhere our cities are honeycombed with vice, merely because the voters at the polls back up dishonest officials in their willingness to allow these evil resorts to exist.

"Well," says some one, "how, then, are we to keep the bramble—the hateful, worthless bramble—from becoming ruler in American politics?" Ah, my friends, the direct teaching of this Jotham's fable tells the whole story. What did those delegates of trees down in the Valley of Shechem do? They first offered the rulership to the olive tree, then to the fig tree, then to the vine. But these three practically said: "Nay, we would not leave our respectability and comfort to go and mingle in dirty politics. We would stay off here alone in dignity and quiet and ease." That is the whole story. The reason the bramble became king in Jotham's fable was because the olive, the fig and the vine refused the rulership for which they were so eminently fitted. And to-day the reason the bad element predominates in so many of our city and county and State elections is because so many of the better element refuse to go to the primaries, refuse to be candidates for the humbler offices, refuse to see that public moneys are administered as honestly as private funds.

Thus Jotham's fable or parable teaches us that a man has a responsibility to his Government as well as to his home; a responsibility to those who shall rule over him as well as to those under him. By this statement am I here to tell you for whom to vote? Oh, no! In the coming election I say to you, "As a Christian man think for yourself and let your conscience be your guide." But hereafter, in the home or on the street and in church, always make your public business your Christian business. Always make your duty to your city, to your State, to your nation, your Christian duty. Then the great dangers which threaten this, our native land, from the rulership of the worthless bramble and its kind will be done away with, for the olive and the fig and the vine will be bending the knee in national worship at the foot of the cross.

BABY'S DANGER.

The summer months are a bad time for babies, and an anxious time for mothers. Fermentation and decomposition in the stomach and bowels are the cause of the many summer complaints of babies and young children. This is the reason why the hot weather months are more fatal to little ones than any other season. Baby's Own Tablets should always be found in every home where there are young children, and their prompt use during hot weather may save a precious little life. The tablets cure constipation, diarrhoea, and stomach troubles, and are guaranteed to contain no opiate or harmful drug. Mrs. Walter Rollins, Sissons Bridge, N.S., says: —"Before using Baby's Own Tablets my little one cried almost continuously with stomach troubles. I can truthfully say I never had any medicine act so promptly and give such satisfaction as the tablets do. I do not think you make any claim for them which their use will not substantiate." The tablets can be had from any medicine dealer or by mail from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Price 25 cents a box.

When offering a woman his seat in a street car or any other public conveyance a man invariably lifts his hat; the perfectly courteous man removes his hat when stepping aside in a narrow way to allow her free passage; also when passing a lady on the stairs.

Most of the rules of etiquette are based on kindness and unselfishness.

The simplest form of introduction is the best: "Mrs. A., let me present Mr. B."

Before an invitation of hospitality is given to a stranger a call should first be made.

Manners are of more importance than laws, being the foundation stones of civilization.

A dinner call is paid about a fortnight after the dinner, whether the invitation was accepted or not.

Origin of Knives.

The first knives, according to the conclusions of a scientist who has made a study of the subject, were fractured stones that happened to have a sharp cutting edge. But the vegetable kingdom also furnishes very keen cutting edges in the leaves and stalks of certain plants, which might have been availed of before artificial knives were made. The fractured stone knife easily suggested the shaping of flaked stones, like flint, into the form of blades. Among the Seri Indians on Tiburon island, in the gulf of California, the primitive custom of utilizing fractured and water worn stones for knives still exists.

Kissing the Icon.

Icons are often placed on pedestals in Russian churches for the worshipers to kiss as they enter.

Flow of the Thames.

DEATH COMES TO ALL.—But it need not come prematurely if proper precautions are taken. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and to have prevention at hand and allow a disease to work its will is wickedness. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil not only allays pain when applied externally, but will prevent lung troubles resulting from colds and coughs. Try it and be convinced.

A call upon the hostess is obligatory after an invitation to a musical, dinner, breakfast, or luncheon.

Gentlemen do not smoke in the presence of ladies without their permission.

It is a general rule that a hostass may introduce any guest without first asking permission to do so.

Where can I get some of Holloway's Corn Cure? I was entirely cured of my corns by this remedy and I wish some more of it for my friends. So writes Mr. J. W. Brown, Chicago.

Ceremonious calls are not made between women in the morning, evening, or on Sunday afternoon. A gentleman, owing to the exactions of business, may call in the evening and on Sunday afternoon.

IN NATURE'S STOREHOUSE THERE ARE CURES.—Medical experiments have shown conclusively that there are medicinal virtues in even ordinary plants growing up around us which give them a value that cannot be estimated. It is held by some that Nature provides a cure for every disease which neglect and ignorance have visited upon man. However, this may be, it is well known that Parmalee's Vegetable Pills, distilled from roots and herbs, are a sovereign remedy in curing all disorders of the digestion.

A pretty idea for a silver or golden wedding is to have the monogram stamped in gold or silver in the center at the top of the invitation; the date of the marriage and date of the anniversary is engraved on either side or just below the monogram.

DOWN IN ST. LOUIS.

I'd like to see my mother's aunt.
I think that I must visit her.
One often finds he really can't
His presence on his kin confer
As he would like, but now, I guess,
That we will visit dear Aunt Bess.

Time has certainly been long
Since we have sent a word to her,
But then, you know, that kinship strong
Binds closely, and she'd much prefer
A nice long visit, don't you think,
Than oceans of the best spent ink?

Down in St. Louis, on the Pike,
Aunt Bess will surely happy be
To show us everything we'd like—
Or what she thinks we'd like—to see.
It's really nice she'll have the fair
To entertain us while we're there.

Heard by the Stars.

It was a quiet, calm, peaceful night in the month of June. The stars sparkled like bits of brass newly burnished by the bartender, and the mellow moon lent about $7.50 worth of its luster to the scene. All nature was as reposeful as a sitting hen. The faintest suspicion of a breeze stirred the whispering leaves, but they had no monopoly on whispering that evening.

Underneath a spreading elm Roy McClintock was spreading himself in an oratorical undertone to Mabel Clare, his only adored. He was telling her the old, old story. It was indeed old to her, but he did not know that. He thought he was springing it on her for the first time.

The stars winked at each other, for they were on as big as a red barn.

Mabel sat and listened. She might have prompted him, but she was too wise.

"Yes," she whispered, "you are the first man I ever loved."

One of the brightest stars that had been listening threw three fits, and Professor Skysweeper, who was looking through his thirty-nine cent telescope, made his everlasting reputation by discovering a new comet.

The Morning Horror.

God bless the man who first invented sleep!
But it's to weep
For the man who first invented the lawn mower.
He was no bestower
Of benefits on the human race.
Just as your face
Is snoring like a train of cars
This invention jars
The morning atmosphere with its harshest number,
And it's goodby slumber.
When a man has been out the night before
In more
Or less mischief and wants to forget it,
The lawn mower says "Nit."
It must unload its tale of woe,
So
You may as well arise and pack
Your wrath in your grip, for it does like to have people talk back.
Click, click,
It plays its little trick,
And you may readily believe
That although it has none it laughs in its sleeve.

THIS BUTCHER IS ALL RIGHT

Had Diabetes but was Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Great Interest in the Case, as People Realize What Will Cure Diabetes Will Cure Any Kidney Disease.

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 1 (Special).—As the people learn to realise how much the general health depends on keeping the kidneys right, and how many diseases are the direct result of bad kidney action, every verified cure of a severe kidney disease is received with interest.

For that reason the case of A. W. Holman, the well-known butcher of 193½ Mutual Street this city, is well-worthy of attention. Mr. Holman had Diabetes. Now he is a well man. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured it. Asked concerning his case, Mr. Holman said:—

"Yes, I had Diabetes for six years. I tried all kinds of remedies, but to no use. My attention was called to Dodd's Kidney Pills by an advertisement and I began to use them. I only used six boxes when I was completely cured."

As it is conceded that what will cure Diabetes will cure any Kidney Disease it must be admitted that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure any Kidney Disease.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Were Great Sufferers From Kidney Disease and Pains in the Back--Now Unite in Praise of

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Those who are best acquainted with the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills do not wonder at their immense popularity as a family medicine.

In thousands of cases they have cured where physicians and ordinary medicines have failed. This is the test by which they have been proven.

Miss Kate Doyle, lot 1, post office, P. E. I., states:—"About three years ago my father was seized with a severe form of kidney disease, which caused him much suffering, as well as anxiety lest the ailment should become chronic or prove fatal. We immediately obtained Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and he began at once to improve under this treatment, the symptoms gradually disappearing, until he became quite well again. Since then we always keep these pills in the house for use in the case of sickness of this kind.

"For some time I suffered from pains in the small of the back and accompanying ills, and though I was treated by a doctor at considerable expense, I could obtain no lasting benefit until I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which seemed to be exactly suited to my ailment. Father and I are greatly pleased with the excellent medicine and wish to recommend it to others."

A Seven Days' Feast.

Here is a description of the marriage entertainment of the eldest daughter of a knight of King Henry VIII.'s time: Seven days of feasting and revelry were indulged in, the following being among some of the numerous items provided: Beer and ale, $35; two hogsheads of wine, $20; one hogshead of red wine, $10; nine cranes, twelve peacocks, three red deer, twelve fallow deer, seventy-two fat capons, thirty dozen of mallards and teal, two dozen of herons, two oxen, and among the fish turbot, pike, sturgeon, ling, salt and fresh salmon, eels, lampreys, oysters and porpoise figured. For the amusement of the guests there were "first a play and straight after the play a mask, and when the mask was done then the banquet, which was 110 dishes and all of meat, and then all the gentlemen and ladies did dance, and this continued from the Sunday to the Saturday afternoon." The wedding outfit, included in which was apparel for the bridegroom, cost $135.

When Koi Floats In Japan.

When the koi floats from its bamboo pole it means trouble is brewing—in Japan. The koi is a paper fish brave in purple and gold, orange and black, so skillfully made that the wind, inflating it, sets it swirling and swerving as if alive with an energetic flapping of its fins. A fisherman will tell you that it represents the carp, that mighty swimmer which makes its way upstream against all obstacles. A poet will affirm that the koi typifies predominance. It is all one and the same. When the fish floats over a Japanese dwelling it announces the birth of a male child, but when war is imminent or in progress the streets of the cities are gay with the polychromatic emblem flaunting and flashing before the door of every loyal household. This is equivalent to the display of bunting in the occident when troops go forth to war.

The Vital Element In Art.

Surely the vital question as to any creative work must be, What lasting effect does it have on him who has once come under its spell? That effect must always take the form of a more or less vivid and enduring impression stamped upon the memory by the greatest of artists, the imagination.

Few may be able even to recall that hour of delicious terror, doubt and hope, whether in the actual theater or curled up with the folio in the cozy corner, while we really wondered breathlessly whether Juliet and Romeo would at last escape together through the tomb of the Capulets to some far land that does not sin against the rights of youth. But now what is it all to us save a single pathetic picture of love, despair and death? The end is, indeed, even while we watch the passing scene, always much nearer to us than the beginning. Mercutio, Paris, Romeo, are dying already, when they utter their first defiant jest or tender phrase.—Scribner's.

"Well, why doesn't she take up something?"

"She does. She takes up other people's time."—Judge.

THE DEMON, DYSPEPSIA.—In olden time it was a popular belief that demons moved invisibly through the ambient air, seeking to enter into men and trouble them. At the present day the demon, dyspepsia, is at large in the same way, seeking habitation in those who by careless or unwise living invite him. And once he enters a man it is difficult to dislodge him. PETER RATTRAY LUNDIE, nominated by J. G. Coward and A. J. Farquharson.

OWEN ROSS, nominated by W. H. Whimster and E. A. Kummer.

Up to Saturday last it was believed that Mr. Stork's election would not be contested. On that date a requisition form was circulated by John Coward in support of Mr. Quail's nomination. The paper was liberally endorsed and Mr. Quail then consented to allow his name to be placed in nomination.

From the long list of candidates for Aldermanic honors there should be little difficulty in selecting six who are well qualified to sit on Fernie's first council board.

A publci meeting will be held in Mr. Stork's opera house on Monday evening at eight o'clock, when the different candidates will be present to explain their respective policies. This meeting will doubtless be largely attended. The poll will be open at the court house next Friday between the hours of ten and four, Pacific time or eleven a. m. and five p. m., Fernie time.

MORRISSEY NEWS.

Miss M. Foss, of Minneapolis, daughter of Mr. G. O. Foss, railway contractor, arrived in Morrissey on Saturday, and will visit several months, the guest at present of Mrs. J. Gillis. She was accompanied from Minneapolis by W. A. Mitchell, who has been visiting the St. Louis exhibition and eastern points.

It is understood that E. Stewart, the Trites-Wood book-keeper at Michel, wil succeed W. J. Blundell in the management of the Big Store here. J. F. Spalding will be transferred to Michel, to take charge of the books there. Mr. Blundell is being retained here for a week or so when the proposed change will take place.

L. Burgess and A. Ainslie, of Morrissey went into the Flathead from here on Monday, expecting to return at the end of the week. They purpose going down below the coal areas, and may cross into Alberta.

A dance was given at the Australian Hotel, on Friday evening in honor of Miss Foss on the eve of her departure for St. Paul, Minn.

The contractors at work on the new sidewalks in Morrissey Mines are making good progress.

Information was laid against Frank Stephens by the Coal Company officials on the charge of carrying matches into the mines. The case will be tried on Friday.

A BEAR STORY

A good bear story is told by one of a crowd of berry pickers who drove out to Lizzard Creek on Tuesday to gather blue berries. Mr. A. Milton had found an excellent patch somewhat detached from the others. After a time he heard a rustle but paid no attention to it thinking it was one of his companions. The rustling continued and he called but got no response. Finally he looked over and saw the head of a brown bear. He went nearer and the bear rose on his hind legs to get a better view of the intruder. He proved to be a monster being the largest of his kind that Mr. Milton had ever seen. The bear with a dissatisfied grunt ambled off, but a few minutes later he again made his presence known and this time he evinced no desire to relinquish the fine juicy berries to his visitor and the latter finally drove him off with stones.

MICHEL NEWS.

The new hotel will be completed by pay-day.

A very fine catch of fish was brought in by a party of four last Sunday. It consisted of about 70 good-sized brook trout, caught in Fording river.

The fires here are very bad. The mill and the hotel at the Loop are in serious danger, the fire up the Elk is now out about three miles from Michel and is working this way.

The clearing for the new school site is going ahead. The contract for the school is let to a local contractor named Jensen. The building is a two room school.

C. L. Smith, a rancher at the government bridge, while out hunting recently caught two young mountain goats and a little mountain sheep. They are thriving nicely in captivity. Mr. Smith has a standing offer of $1,000 for the former when they are a year old.

Travellers between Michel and Fernie have on two occasions seen a fine herd of monntain goats from the train while passing between Sparwood and Hosmer. There were eight in the bunch and they were near enough to be easily distinguished.

BORN

ALLAN—At Fernie, on August 12th, to Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Allan, a son.

THE STAFF COMPLETED

The Fernie public school will re-open on Monday August 15th with the following staff of teachers—George L. P. Pedlar Principal, Misses Margaret H. Moody, B. A., Laura E. Marshall, Carrie Hall, Mary G. Ramsay, and Evah M. Cartwright. Miss Ramsay comes from Nanaimo and Miss Cartwright is from Cranbrook. The latter will succeed Miss McNee as teacher at Coal Creek.

CONTRACT LET

The Government has let the contract for the building of the two roomed wing to James Broley who will commence work at once. This addition will be sealed inside and Mr. Broley says he will have it completed in about two weeks

THE WAGON ROAD

A. Milton has been appointed to oversee the building of the wagon road from Fernie to Morrissey. He has ten men employed and another gang is working on the other end. A camp has been located at Cokato. The sum of $2000 has been appropriated for this week. It is expected that, while the expenditure of this sum will not complete the road, it will make it at least passable.

THE BUCHANAN COMPANY.

The Robert Buchanan Dramatic Company opened a six night engagement in Stork's hall on Monday night. The company is a very good one, much above the average, and it has been drawing good houses. Robert Buchanan himself is an actor of considerable abilily. He is well supported by his brother E. H. Buchanan and Theodore Joos. Miss Adeliade Harland the leading woman in the company is vuite a clever actress. Miss Payton and Miss McAlphine also take parts well. The company presents a new play each night, introducing also new musical specialties. To night they will present the very funny comedy hit, "An Eye on Hubby" and tomorrow night they will conclude with a drama "King's Evidence." The management of the company expressed great satisfaction with Mr. Stork's new hall, classing it with the best on the road. The audience also are delighted with it. The seats are very comfortable and the lighting and stage fittings are very cheerful and artistic.

THE clearing of the right-of-way for the G. N. R. yards for the width of 300 feet and on to the river bank is through very heavy timber which it is difficult to handle without burning. On the other hand a fire started there now in this dry season will jeopardize the town's safety as well as that of much very fine green timber bordering the town. There seems only one way to safe guard these interests and that is by the strict enforcement of the bush fire act. In this extremely dry season no fire no matter how well guarded it may be is safe, for the first gust of wind scatters the sparks which easily ignite fires wherever they may fall. In this case an ounce of prevention is worth more than a pound of cure for a fire in this dry season backed by a wind is beyond human power to control

To the Electors.

TOWN IN DANGER

FIRE BROKE OUT IN CLEARING FOR G. N .R. YARDS.

The Right-of-way Contractor Arrested.—Fire on the West Side Again. Hundreds of Millions of Feet of Timber Destroyed.

Last Saturday a fire broke out on the right-of-way below the Fernie Brewery The wind was blowing strong from the north and it looked as if the edge of the town was in danger. The fire started on the right-of-way for the G. N. R. yards and depot. The clearing for this right-of-way had been commenced the day previous by E. Jordan in charge of twenty men. The fire started in the clearing and the huge piles of dry brush burned fiercely. In spite of the efforts of the men the fire got into the timbers and flying embers started fires off the right-of-way. In the evening one started quarter of a mile nearer the town and a number of near by residents worked hard to extinguish it. At this time the gathering clouds seemed to protend a heavy shower but the fire hose was attached to the stand pipe and the water was played on it to make doubly sure. Scarcely any rain fell and at eleven o'clock the fire was again burning brightly. The wind fell and little fire was burning the next day. On Monday Jordon and his men worked again at it and got it well under control.

Jordon was summoned to answer the charge of violating the Bush Fire Act. It was shown that the fire started on his right-of-way and that it was not properly guarded. His Worship dismissed the case on the promise of the accused that he would not put out any more fires in violation of the Act.

ON THE WEST SIDE.

The fire in West Fernie was fanned up by the heavy wind on Tuesday and the whole mountain side was in flames again. The smouldering fire in the green timber on the Fernie Lumber Co's limits again broke out and covered a large area of fine timber. The fire crept around to the rear of L. R. Forbe's house and in the evening burned up fiercely. The house at one time was on fire and the danger was so great that the contents were removed. The efforts of the fighters prevailed however, and the property was saved. Messrs. Proctor and McDougall of the Fernie Lumber Co. have as yet not estimated carefully the extent of their losses in the fire of last week. Roughly speaking about a year's cut has been desroyed, amounting to eight or ten million feet. The first fire was confined chiefly to the old cuttings and the damage to the green timbers was not so great as might have been expected. The fire is still burning, however, getting higher up and more into the green timber all the time, and if rain does not soon come the loss may be very much greater.

FIRES EVERYWHERE

Reports from all over the province aud the border states show an appalling state of affairs which if not soon relieved by a rainfall will result in very heavy timber losses. Already these losses aggregate to many hundreds of millions of feet. Fires are raging throughout the Province from Vancouver to Crow's Nest. Around Nelson the fires are encroaching on the town. At Wardner valuable limits have been hurned, in fact all along the Crow line serious fires have broken out. Much timber has been burned near Michel and the Loop, to Crow's Nest. It is stated that the C. N. P. Coal Co. have had forty million feet destroyed by fire. Reports from the Montana border and the Flathead indicate similar fires there. It is now nearly three months since the last rain fell in the Crow's Nest Pass and the drought seems to be general throughout the West.

PRETTY WEDDING IN WEST.

Moosomin, N. W. T., Aug. 9.—The wedding of Norman Musgrave, a traveller for the Ames Hoden Co., to Flora McDonald, of Fernie, B. C. took place this morning at the Methodist Parsonage. Rev. Mr. McHaffie officiated. The happy couple will spend their honeymoon at the Detroit Lakes. T. D. Brown and Miss Mae McDonald were groomsman and bridesmaid respectively.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS

Mrs. Evans and Miss Evans left on Monday for their home in Guelph, Ont. On Friday evening the latter was presented with a beautiful Oxford bible by her class in the Presbyterian Sunday School.

The C. P. R. will bnild a spur from its depot at Pincher Creek into the town this Fall. This is the result of an agitation by the people of Pincher Creek who are building a gris mill at their town.

Mrs. Maud Smythe and Mr. J. F. Pinkman were married at Cranbrook last week. The groom is the manager of the Imperial Bank at that place and the bride is a sister of W. S. Keay of this place.

Mrs. J. W. Nunn returned yesterday from Winnipeg where she was consulting a specialist for her baby's eyes. One eye is thought to be beyond recovery but by careful treatment the other may be saved.

Miss Andrews who has been acting matron at the Galt Hospital during Miss McDermid's absence, has accepted the position of Matron in the hospital at Kalispel and left for that town Tuesday night.—LethbridgeNews

R. L. Firestone succeeds Mr. Hunter as mill foreman at the Elk Lumber and Manufacturing company's mill. Mr. Firestone is a first class millman well qualified to take the position. The company have men out in the bush cutting logs in the burnt area and it is expected that the mill will be started next Monday.

Two C. P. R. coal experts, Prof. Wilson and Professor Guillam, have been looking over the C. P. R. coal claims this week at Fording River where the C. P. R. have 46 square miles of coal lands. From there these men will proceed to Banff. It is understood that the C. P. R. is figuring on building a line up the Elk to tap these rich coal lands.

Four marriage licenses have been issued at the Fernie office recently. The names of the contracting parties are Chas. Douglas of Coal Creek and Miss Mary Malloy of Coal Creek. Wilhem Mukkila and Miss Brila Lind, both of Michel. G. F. Clifton and Miss Agnes Miller both of Morrissey Mines. John Hunt of Coal Creek and Miss Sarah Bayley of Fernie,

Now that the town is incorporated there will be a re-arrangement of the police affairs. Chief Constable McMullin assisted by Constable Walker will represent the Provincial interests in the vicinity of the town and when the first council is elected the question of the town police will be taken up. In the meantime the Provincial police are looking after the town affairs.

W. Wardrop, of the Crows Nest Pass, and W. Wardrope, jr., of the firm of Wardrop and Sons, of Sparwood, B. C., manufacturers of lumber and railway ties, are in the city to-day, adjudicating a fire loss with the Canadian Pacific. A fire said to be originated by a spark from a locomotive, occurred in the yards several weeks ago, resulting in a loss estimated at $13,600. It is expected that the matter will be adjusted by the company to-day.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Mr. G. O. Foss was in town on Wednesday. He reports that his construction work is progressing satisfactorily, about 20 per cent. of the grading being completed. Under favorable conditions he will have his contract of three miles completed by October 1st. He is tunneling through one cut, composed partly of gumbo. A. V. McDonald who has the two miles this side of Mr. Gorman is working on a heavy gumbo cut which will take months to complete. He has also had considerable rock blasting and the wagon road has been blocked with broken pieces of rock.

Wm. Cranston of Winnipeg and Geo. Tempest of Calgary were through the Crows Nest to Nelson last week arranging a theatre circuit for the west, which will include Great Falls, Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, Calgary, Macleod, Fernie, Cranbrook, Nelson, Spokane and Revelstoke. Mr. Tempest stopped off at Fernie on his return and interviewed Mr. Stork relative to entering Fernie on the circuit. Arrangements were partially made and Mr. Cranston will stop off on his way back from Spakane to complete the deal. Mr. Tempest spoke in the highest terms of Mr. Stork's opera house.

Fred. Starkey, of Nelson, was in town on Tuesday on his way home from Winnipeg where he had gone to interview the C. P. R. authorities with a view of securing better rates over the Crow line from Nelson. Mr. Starkey expressed some satisfaction with the result of his trip. A new tariff had been put on the first of the month, which materially lessened Nelson's grievances. Under it Nelson got lower rates than Calgary as far west as Jaffray and in some minor details of the tariff, which had not been understood before, Nelson got other advantages covering the whole Crow line to Alberta. Mr. Starkey was strongly of the opinion that the trade of Fernie and its two sister towns should go to Nelson wholesalers as that town was consuming considerable coal and coke from these collieries.

DO THE LIVING DUTIES

NOR LET THEM BE SIDETRACKED ON ACCOUNT OF SECONDARY ONES.

LET THE DEAD BURY THE DEAD

An Exposition of a Much-Misunderstood Passage of Scripture, With a Beautiful Illuminative Incident in the Life of Christ, Showing His Filial Love When He Was Almost Extremis—Henry Ward Beecher Quoted.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by William Baily, of Toronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 31.—That men and women should ever be alert to heed the call of the highest duty and not to put it aside with frivolous excuses is the theme of the preacher to-day. The text is Matthew viii, 22, "Let the dead bury the dead."

Never make the mistake of treating half truths as if they were whole truths. With his spade the farmer may cut a worm in two, and then each of those two parts will form a whole worm to wriggle off in opposite directions. But truth is not a worm, headless or tailless. In the study of truth we must not consider an individual atom as a complete whole. "Half a fact may be a whole falsehood," once wrote Colton. "Falsehood is never so successful as when she baits her hook with truth. No opinions so fatally mislead us as those that are not wholly wrong, as no watches so effectually deceive the wearer as those that are sometimes right."

What is true in laboratory investigations is also true in reference to Bible study. We must not study the words of my text with a microscope. We must not isolate this sentence from all its connections. We must compare this passage with other passages, this chapter with other chapters, this book with other books. "I cannot understand why Christ should have trampled upon the filial affections of his disciple who wanted to go back and bury his dead father," said a gentleman to me some years ago. "This young man evidently intended to be a devout disciple of Jesus. But surely he had a duty to his home as well as directly to Jesus. There, in the old homestead, lay the corpse of his earthly parent. It was natural for a dutiful son to want to be present at the funeral. Yet when the young man said, 'Let me, I pray thee, first go and bury my father, and I will follow thee,' Christ showed no sympathy with his natural feeling, but practically said: 'Let the neighbors and the strangers come in and, close the eyelids and wash the cold flesh. Let the neighbors sing the death chant and dig the grave. Let strange hands wrap the motionless corpse in its white shroud and carry it to its last resting place. You must come with me at once. Shut your eyes to the past. Let the dead bury the dead.'"

That way of regarding the incident utterly misrepresent it. Never suppose for a moment that Christ demands that any man should show his reverence for him by slighting or neglecting or deserting an earthly parent. Why, the last human being for whom Christ provided when he was dying upon the cross was his mother. He turned and looked toward the gentle John, the beloved disciple, sobbing at his feet, and said to him: "John, look after my old mother. Now that she is friendless and alone she will need your love and sustenance." Then he looked at the agonized face of his mother as he said, "Mother, let John take my place and be a loving son to you." These are Christ's exact words: "Woman, behold thy son!" "Son, behold thy mother!" Those were not the words of one who disregarded filial duty. His body was racked at that moment by excruciating agony, yet his thoughts were not of himself but of her who, by his death, would be left dependent. It was she for whom he was concerned even in the hour of his dissolution. His own conduct in that crisis proves that when he spoke to the young volunteer the words of my text he was not insensible to the claims of natural affection.

In the words of Henry Ward Beecher, Christ was enunciating the great truth that the primal duties of life should not be sidetracked or pushed to the rear on account of the secondary or the more unimportant duties. "It is not that you desire to avoid right things, but you say, 'Suffer me first to do the inferior, then I shall be ready for the superior. Suffer me first to take care of myself. Suffer me first to take care of my household. Suffer me first to look after this enterprise, and then'— No! This constant habit of humbling the higher and making it subordinate to the lower, this constant preference of the inferior to the superior works demoralization. A man does not need to throw away his Bible nor defy his God nor sell his soul voluntarily. He only needs to say, 'Suffer me first to do the lesser thing!' The moment that is done there will be another 'Suffer me first' in its place. And so we shall put the inferior duties in the place of the higher duties and go through life and fail at last." This comprehensive view of my text is, I am convinced, its true interpretation. These words of Christ need to be remembered in other situations than beside the bier of a dead parent. They have a warning lesson for any man who is postponing his duties to his Lord until he has fulfilled his obligations to the world or to society—to any one who fails in his higher duties through selfishness or sloth.

Sidetracked obligations to God! We see them everywhere. We see them first in the excuses which the young man makes when he is fitting himself by education to enter the battle of life. I enter the theological seminary, where thirty or forty young men are gathered into a class room. They are bright, intelligent young men, eager for knowledge, intent on getting thorough equipment for the work they have undertaken. I put to each student this question: "Young man, where do you go to church? In what Sunday school are you teaching? What mission work are you doing for Christ?" Some there will be two, in order to pay their way through college, are performing some duties by which they earn a little money. But the others, in nine cases out of ten, will answer: "Oh, I am not attending any particular church here. I am not teaching in any Sunday school. I am now studying to be a minister, and therefore each Sunday I go to hear a different minister in the town." The result is that nine-tenths of our young theological students, and I think I am not overrating the proportion, do practically nothing for Christ while they are living within seminary walls unless they are paid for their services. What is the result? With a critical, censorious spirit they go from church to church. They pick flaws in this minster, they find fault with that minister, and all the times they belong to the great army of religious tramps, whom I call the "go-rounders." During these years of study their own life is ebbing away. By the time the young man who pursues this course graduates from a theological seminary he is on the verge of spiritual bankruptcy. Why? Mainly because in the three long years of mental preparation for the ministry he has neglected to do personal work for Jesus Christ.

A large number of students in medical schools are the sons of ministers. And, furthermore, I do not believe I am going beyond my right when I say eight-tenths of all medical students came from Christian homes. Yet medical students as a class are noted for their neglect of spiritual work. Thousands of Christian physicians are found all over the land. But while in college most medical students do nothing for the service of their Master. They say, "Wait, Lord, until I pass my examinations." The result of this waiting is that many young men entirely lose their hold upon Christ. Oh, young man, young woman, Christ ought not to have to wait for you to get a mental education before you are ready to serve him. The development of the spiritual life in the heart should go on simultaneously with the mental development.

But these words of my text not only apply to the young people who are sidetracking their gospel duties to make way for their preparations for a profession. They also apply to the busy men and women who, in the prime of physical strength and mental power, are like tired peasants staggering along the highways under greater burdens than it seems possible for them to bear. When I speak thus I mean that this text is applicable to nearly all men and women in midlife. Why? Because I believe that most people are overworked. They are physically tired. Most people are overworked in the struggle of life. Yet this text, O man, O woman, in the prime of your physical and mental strength, applies to you. No right have you to sidetrack your duties to God. No right have you to say to Christ, "Lord, suffer me to do this or that, and then I will follow thee." Christ should be first, not last. Christ's command, no matter how or when it comes, should be heeded or obeyed; then all other duties will fall into line in their right places.

Christ's command, "Follow me," comes to the tired merchant, the worn out merchant. It comes to you even in the whirl and the bustle of business life. "Oh, no," you say, "I have no time for Christ. My business absorbs every atom of my energy. I am so tired from my week day tasks that I am too weary to go to Church on Sunday. Why, when I go, I fall asleep during the sermon. It makes but little difference to me then who preaches the sermon. Come down to my store any time and you will see how I am overdriven. There is a steady stream of men in my outer office all the time. I must see them. It is work, work, work until I am nearly dead." Yes, my brother, in one sense what you say is true. You are an overworked man, but how much of that labor that so fatigues you is voluntarily undertaken? Have you, as a Christian man, the right to give to your own concerns, to your business and the world the whole of your time and energy? Have you forgotten the claims that God has upon you? Better leave undone some of the work you are now doing that you may have strength to serve him. Why should you not be willing to drop some of that business drudgery? Do you not know that much of that grinding, useless, selfish toil is making a failure out of your life? The temporal necessities of life are very small, yet thousands of people plod on, and on, and on, in a treadmill of mercantile drudgery, as though their very happiness depended upon raising their store from a four-storey to a ten-storey dry goods emporium.

What I have said to the busy, tired merchant I would also say to the busy, tired mother, with a large brood of little ones. I would speak the same words of advice to the anxious, wearied, half-sick professional man—the lawyer, the doctor, the teacher, aye, to the minister himself. I would also speak the same words of warning to the mechanic, the clerk, the commercial traveler and the servant in the kitchen. You say, "I have no time to serve Christ." You know that the reason you have no time is that you devote to worldly concerns that portion of your time which properly belongs to Christ. Busy? Aye, you are busy. But if you want any work to do you must always go to a busy man or woman to get them to do it. The lazy, loaferish individual never has any time. The reason you are not willing to serve Christ is because you are placing to the forefront tasks which you need not do unless you wanted to do them. "Follow me," says Christ to the busy man and woman of the world. "Follow me, and follow me now."

But this text has still another application. It is a word of reproof to people who waste their time and strength in useless remorse over their undutiful conduct to parents who are now dead. Many men and women have sidetracked their direct duties to God by switching them off to a family plot.. Useless regrets for the dead may have a great part in the sidetracking of our duties to God. Who was this young disciple to whom Christ spoke? I do not know. The Bible does not mention his name. But perhaps he belonged to that great multitude who spend one half of their lives in abusing and neglecting the living and the other half in mourning and sobbing over the dead. Their love and grief are purely Carlylean. They say that Thomas Carlyle, the disgruntled, fault-finding, iconoclastic philosopher, was the founder of a big school of copyists. However that may be, I know there are many people who emulate the writer of "Sartor Resartus" in one fact. After the death of his wife his habitual lament was, "Alas, alas, she can never know how I loved her!" During her lifetime he had for her only sharp words and none of the little delicate attentions which would have made her happy. After she was dead he was embittered by his consciousness of his negligence and added to his fault vituperation of the people around him. Better for him and them had the sorrow for past failure toward his wife led him to kindliness toward his living friends. Perhaps this young man of my text was one who had ill-used his father while he was alive, and now that he was dead he wanted to give him a big funeral. Do you wonder, if this was so, that Christ said, "Let the dead bury the dead?"

Perhaps this young man was one of those poor, deluded sufferers who wanted to hug his grief as a luxury. Some people are never happy unless they are miserable. Their smile is a tear. Their laugh is a sob. They never enjoy themselves unless they are moaning over a corpse twenty years old. Christ, in the words of my text, is not telling that young man to be disrespectful to his dead sire. He is, however, enunciating the tremendous fact that a young man does not honor a dead parent so much by weeping over a grave as by living the true, honest, noble Christian life which that dead father would have him live. "Let the dead bury the dead" might be translated into the words, "Let the dead one's precepts live in the living, and let the living fulfill the mission of the dead."

But I think there is another reason why Christ spoke the words of my text. Jesus is here not only enunciating the fact that the primal duties of life should never be made subservient to the secondary, but also the great truth that a man has his duty to the world at large as well as to his father and mother, his wife and child, his brother and sister and friend. Because men and women are bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh that is no reason why we have not a duty to our fellow men who are not akin to us by blood—duty to your fellow men and to your fellow men's children whom you have never seen. A man never learns this lesson more easily than when he is a soldier. I remember some years ago, during the Spanish-American war, we were encamped in the old fair grounds of Springfield, the Illinois capital. Dewey's guns at Manila had spoken. The troops were being hurried to the front. Our regiment was to move south within a couple of days. The surgeon of our regiment came to my quarters one night and said, "Chaplain, read that." It was a letter from Chicago telling him that his wife was hovering between life and death as the result of a very serious operation, and she wanted to see him just for a few hours before he went south. "Why don't you run up to Chicago to-night and come back to-morrow?" we asked. "You will be here in plenty of time." "The colonel won't let me. The orders have come down that no leaves of absence can be granted, as we may go to the front any moment." "Orders be hanged!" said I impulsively. "If my wife were dying, orders or no orders, I would go to her." "Then you would be captured as a deserter and perhaps shot," said my companion quietly. "For the good of the service I must obey orders and go with my regiment. My duty to my country is now even greater than my duty to my dying wife." "Yes, surgeon," said I, "you are right. There are duties in life even greater than those we bear to our loved ones, dear though they may be. God help you in this your hour of trial."

So Christ in these words of my text was enunciating an infinite and omnipotent truth. Jesus is practically saying: "Young man, higher than your love for father or mother or wife or child is your duty to me and to the great world at large. Come with me and help save the millions who are dying in their sins. Come with me and bring back to a life of purity and love those who will never know me unless they see me as a result of thy guidance. Come with me. Come with me." This sentence, "Follow me, and let the dead bury the dead," is only another wording of the same thought which Christ spake unto his disciples: "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me, and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me." Yes, there come certain times in life when our duty to Christ and our fellow men should have precedence over our desires to be with our dear ones in our own homes.

But, though these words of my text may seem to separate some of us for a little while from our loved ones on earth, is it not a sweet and treasured thought that Christ will never separate us, his children, from each other in that better land. According to Christ's great laws, we may believe that the separations of earth are only for a little while and that these earthly separations ultimately mean the reunion in heaven if we only trust Christ and accept Christ for our Saviour.

THE RUBBA MUMMA.

One of the Queer Superstitions of the West Indies.

One of the queerest of the many queer superstitions in the West Indies is that of the "Rubba Mumma," or river mother, of Jamaica. While the colored people laugh to scorn the idea of ocean mermaids, many of them firmly believe that water nymphs inhabit every fountain head of the mountain streams, which are so numerous in their island.

In the old slavery days the sources of such streams were worshiped and sacrifices offered to the "Rubba Mumma." The slaves on the plantations used to persuade their overseers or masters to sacrifice an ox at the fountain head of the stream which turned the wheel of the sugar mill, so that drought might be averted. Unless the "Rubba Mumma" was propitiated, the slaves contended, she would not send down enough water to turn the mill. On most of the sugar estates a bullock was annually killed for this purpose.

The "Rubba Mumma" is still believed in, and in time of drought the peasants still sacrifice a goat or a chicken to her. She is said to be marvelously beautiful, with a lily white skin, long black hair and soft blue eyes. She comes out of the water at noon every day, sits down on a rock in the stream and combs her raven tresses. If any Peeping Tom sees her and their eyes meet he is blasted upon the spot, but if she does not happen to see him it is all right.

Food is sometimes taken to the river head and left there for the "Rubba Mumma." The natives will not eat the fish of the rivers which she inhabits, for they are supposed to be her children. It is said that wherever the river nymph resides, provided the fountain is deep and blue, there is a table of pure gold at which she dines. It is an enchanted table, and at "sun hot" (noon) it rises for a moment above the surface of the water and quickly sinks again.

MARRIAGE MUSINGS.

The honeymoon sometimes reaches its last quarter.

Marriage is woman's sphere and man's hemisphere.

To the altar may be only fifty feet. From it may be fifty years.

Some husbands are known by the keys they are allowed to keep.

Love lights life's pathway, but for practical purposes the gas stove has advantages.

It does not add to the joys of the wedding trip to recall that there are no Pullmans on the suburban schedules.

The word "obey" sounds well in the ceremony. There is always plenty of time afterward for laughing at the joke.

Relatives sit in the front pews at the ceremony, on the front porch in summer and in judgment on the bride and groom throughout the year.

Japanese Jugglers.

The most graceful and at the same time the most undoubtedly genuine performances seem to be those of the Japanese jugglers. Their pharaphernalia is of the slightest, consisting chiefly of a top and some paper butterflies. An eyewitness thus describes them: "He took an ordinary boy's top and spun it in the air, then threw the end of the string back toward it with such accuracy that it was caught up and wound itself all ready for the second cast. By the time it had done this it had reached his hand and was ready for another spin." The paper butterflies he made by help of a fan to alight wherever he wished. The spectator requested that one might be made to settle on each ear of the juggler. "Gentle undulations of the fan waved them slowly to the required point and there left them comfortably settled."—London News.

Icon Subjects.

Icons may represent anything from the figure of a saint to a historical scene, such as a martyrdom. Often they take the form of a diptych or a triptych or a polyptych crowded with angular or diminutive figures of saints or miniature scenes from the life of the Virgin or some other Biblical personage. From the number of scenes contained in these objects the peasants came to call them "churches," for there were not more pictorial representations within the church itself. Such icons may be of brass or of carved boxwood, being sometimes ornamented with enamels.

Durability of Ivory.

The durability of ivory is proved by the fact that billiard balls, which for the sake of curiosity have been made of well preserved mammoth ivory undoubtedly many thousand years old, were played with for several months by experienced players without its being noticed that the balls were not made of fresh ivory. Mammoth ivory is, as a rule, not as tough as fresh ivory.

Source of Discontent.

"Then you don't believe in higher education for women?"

"Certainly not. I think it's a shame to even teach 'em how to read. If a woman couldn't read the bargain advertisements she wouldn't be so unhappy over the lots of things she can't afford to buy."

The Sweetest Words.

A magazine writer wants to know what are the four sweetest words in the English language. Some would say, "Here, take this money."—Somerville Journal.

SEQUELS TO STORIES.

As a Rule They Are Not as Good as the Earlier Books.

The question of sequels was under discussion in a literary gathering the other day, and the consensus of opinion was decidedly against them. It was even roundly maintained that no sequel had ever been a success from the literary point of view. Some one demurred and suggested "Paradise Regained," but that suggestion, greeted with a burst of laughter, practically determined the argument. "Paradise Regained" was a distinct falling off from "Paradise Lost." It might even be declared a dignified, dismal failure. No; Milton's sequel was no exception to the rule.

If there be a rule, are there any exceptions that prove it? Stevenson's "Catriona" was not up to the level of "Kidnaped." Mr. Anthony Hope wrote a better book in "The Prisoner of Zenda" than he did in "Rupert of Hentzau." Wise authors never undertake sequels. Once upon a time Mr. Rider Haggard was tempted to adventure a sequel to "She," but repented at discretion. It is altogether a different matter when successive books include the same character. Thackeray used that trick in "Pendennis" and "The Newcomes," but in no sense is the latter a sequel to the former. In a way Thackeray's novels may be said to constitute a chain right down from "Esmond." The links subsist, but there is no continuity of narrative which defines a sequel proper.

He who will may compare the respective merits of Zola's "L'Assommoir" and "Nana." There does not appear to be much to choose between them, but undoubtedly the earlier book has been more popular. Zola's habit, as is well known, was to keep the same families in his various treatises, for to him they were specimens of natural history and mightily portentous. Contrast with Zola our immortal Fielding, who began one of his novels by way of a parody of Richardson. It would be interesting to collect into one volume the stories of the masterpieces. In what circumstances were the great books of the world written? Think of Dumas pere and his firm of assistants! Well, Pope preceded him and farmed out his translation of Homer. That was a conscienceless thing to do. A work of art is not a contractor's job. But then Pope's Homer was not a work of art. But Dumas! Grub street lies in Paris too.

A Japanese Shrine.

A romantic custom of the Japanese is described in the "Kokoro" of Lafcadio Hearn. It is narrated that those who are anxious for the safety of absent ones repair to the mountain of Dakeyama to perform a singular rite. There is a shrine at the summit to commemorate a princess of antiquity who daily watched hopelessly until she pined and died, when her body was changed into stone. One who looks with the eyes of a believer still sees the princess on Mount Dakeyama in the shape of a perpendicular rock. Before her shrine are heaps of pebbles, and those who ascend to pray for the safe home coming of one they love take a pebble away with them as a talisman. And when at last reunited with the beloved, another pilgrimage is made to the shrine on Dakeyama to replace the pebble, with a handful of others, in devotional gratitude.

Carlyle's View of Macaulay.

In one of his letters Carlyle says of Macaulay, the historian: "We have had Macaulay for two days. He was a real acquisition while he lasted and gave rise to much good talk, besides an immense quantity of indifferent, which he himself executed—a man of truly wonderful historical memory, which he has tried in really extensive reading and has always lying ready, with this or the other fact, date or anecdote on demand; in other respects constantly definable as the sublime of commonplace, not one of whose ideas has the least tincture of greatness or originality or any kind of superior merit except neatness of expression."

A Mean Insinuation.

Sir Henry Thompson, who was equally famous as an author, an artist and a surgeon, was once staying at a country house with another surgeon of great fame, and somehow the talk turned on the number of letters that each received. When the post arrived only one or two letters came for Sir Henry, while his friend received an imposing batch. The friend proudly called attention to his mail. "Yes," said Sir Henry, with a twinkle in his eye, "but I see yours are all in black edged envelopes."

Beyond Doubt.

"Do you believe that two can live as cheaply as one?" he asked, for the reason that he undoubtedly wished to know.

"Yes," replied the fellow who draws more fool questions than his share. "I believe that most any two men could live on what my wife spends."

His Choice.

"I shan't put up with your conduct any longer. I intend to go home to mother."

"Well, anything is preferable to having her here."

THE HUMAN LINCOLN.

How the Great and Simple Man Would Romp With the Children.

In my boyhood my family lived almost directly across the street from Mr. Lincoln. He had two sons, Robert and Thomas, nicknamed "Tad," who were about the same age as my brother, Dr. Jesse K., and myself. We, with the other boys of the neighborhood, used to gather on Lincoln's corner in the summer evenings and play the usual games of boys until bedtime. Often Mr. Lincoln would romp with us, and we were perfectly safe in playing jokes on him. There was one prank which never failed to be great sport for us.

The front fence of Mr. Lincoln's Springfield home, then and now, was about three feet high and stood on a brick wall which was about five feet high. Almost directly in front of the steps leading up from the sidewalk to the house was a tree planted by Mr. Lincoln himself, which still stands there. At that time it was about eighteen or twenty feet high.

Mr. Lincoln, as I recall, invariably wore a high hat, commonly called a "plug" hat. During the time of his great debates with Douglas and just preceding and after his nomination for the presidency Mr. Lincoln was much preoccupied in mind. When at home he usually went up to the statehouse after his evening meal to consult with his party associates. He was quite regular in his habits and usually came back about 8:30 in the evening. His habits were so well fixed that the boys could calculate on his movements, and we tied a string from the tree to the fence at just such a height as to strike Mr. Lincoln's plug hat about the center. We hid ourselves behind the fence in the adjoining yard, behind the wall around the corner and in various places.

When Mr. Lincoln, with his arms folded behind his back and evidently in deep thought, would be suddenly aroused by having his hat knocked off by some unseen power we would raise a mighty yell, rush out from our hiding places, grab hold of him wherever we could find a place and shout for joy. All his serious thoughts would vanish instantly, and he would laugh and romp with us, and not infrequently march up the street with all the boys clinging around him until he could find a place to buy us some nuts or fruit.

When a boy ten years of age, I was one of the great crowd of his neighbors and friends who assembled at the Wabash depot in Springfield in February, 1861, and heard him bid farewell to his neighbors and friends in a speech tinged with sadness, but with Christian hope.—Senator Dubois in Address at Soldiers' Home in Boise, Ida.

Power of Radium's Heat.

Lord Kelvin has been approached to see whether he is prepared to admit that radium as a widely diffused element of the earth's composition could suffice to account for the long eons during which geologists assert that this planet has existed. His lordship hesitates. He doubts whether it is yet proved that radium gives out for any length of time the marvelous amount of heat which has been recorded during the short period the element has been under observation. If radium does emit this heat, which is by far its most astonishing property so far, then the veteran physicist thinks, like Mme. Curie, that it must receive and be constantly receiving energy from some cosmic store, transmitted somehow by ethereal waves. Sir Oliver Lodge thinks this hypothesis has been shown "to be in many respects feasible, though, taken all round, unlikely and rather artificial." The subject is altogether one on which it is better to suspend judgment than to theorize at present.—London Telegraph.

Making Rubber In Colorado.

The announcement that rubber has been found in a supposedly useless weed growing on the arid plateaus and high mesa lands of the Colorado mountains sets at rest all fears of a rubber shortage. The rubber tree is a product peculiar to the tropics. The newly discovered rubber plant of Colorado, however, grows at an altitude of from 5,000 to 12,000 feet, where the climate holds all the rigors of winter and all the withering force of a rainless summer. The discovery of the plant relieves the world's rubber market from its dependence on the tropics and makes it possible for rubber to become a stable crop even in countries where extreme cold prevails.—The World Today.

Ancient British Stronghold For Sale.

Dunstanburg castle is about to be offered for sale by auction. It was first a British stronghold, then a Roman fortress and at a much later period was garrisoned for Queen Margaret after the battle of Hexham, when it was besieged and taken after an assault lasting three days. The legend of "Sir Guy, the Seeker," told in a ballad by M. G. Lewis, is connected with the castle. "Dunstan diamonds" are crystals found in the neighborhood. A deep chasm in the rock at the east of the castle is known as the "Rumble churn." In rough weather the sea rushes in, and great clouds of spray are thrown up.—London Chronicle.

The National Capitol.

When the extension now planned for the nation's capitol at Washington has been made the edifice, including the works of art which it contains, will have cost nearly $20,000,000. In 1790 the first building lot on which the capitol stands cost $500. The cornerstone was laid Sept. 8, 1793, with a speech by President Washington, a military procession and a barbecue.

WHEN SICKNESS COMES.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Should Be Used to Bring Back Health.

Sickness comes sooner or later in the life of everyone. Many who for years have enjoyed the best of health are suddenly seized with some one of the numerous ills of life. Most of the ills result from an impoverished condition of the blood; thus if the blood is enriched the trouble will disappear. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have had a greater success than any other medicine in the world in curing sick and ailing people. These pills actually make new, rich, red blood, strengthen every nerve in the body and in this way make people well and strong. Mr. Alphonse Lacoussiere, a well known young farmer of St. Leon, Que., proves the truth of these statements. He says: "About a year ago my blood gradually became impoverished. I was weak, nervous, and generally run down. Then suddenly my trouble was aggravated by pains in my kidneys and bladder, and day by day I grew so much worse that finally I was unable to rise without aid. I consulted doctors, but any relief I obtained from their medicine was only temporary, and I began to despair of ever being well again. One day I read an article in a newspaper praising Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them. I got six boxes, and before they were all gone my condition was so greatly improved that I knew I had at last found a medicine to cure me. I continued the use of the pills for a while longer, and every symptom of my trouble was gone, and I have since enjoyed the best of health. I think so much of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that I am never without them in the house."

It is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new blood that they cure such diseases as anaemia, rheumatism, kidney and liver troubles, neuralgia, indigestion and all other ailments due to poor blood. But you must get the genuine bearing the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper around every box. Sold by medicine dealers everywhere, or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CHILDHOOD DANGERS.

How the Heavy Death Rate Among Children May Be Reduced.

The death rate among infants and young children during the hot weather is simply appalling. For example, in the city of Montreal alone in one week, the death of one hundred and six children was recorded. Most of these deaths were due to stomach and bowel troubles, which are always alarmingly prevalent during the hot weather, and most, if not all, of these precious little lives might have been saved, if the mother had at hand a safe and simple remedy to check the trouble at the outset. As a life saver among infants and young children, Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in every home. These Tablets prevent and cure diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera infantum and all forms of stomach trouble. If little ones are given the Tablets occasionally they will prevent these troubles and keep the children healthy. The Tablets cost only 25 cents a box, and a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the home may save a little life. They are guaranteed to contain no opiate or harmful drug, and may be given with safety and advantage to a new born babe or well grown child. If your dealer does not keep the Tablets, send the price to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and a box will be sent you by mail post paid.

IGNORANCE IS BLISS.

There are microbes in the water,
There are germs upon your cash,
Loaded also for the slaughter
Doubtless is the old style hash.
There are microbes everywhere,
On the ground and in the air.

Way back in the days of Adam,
When the folks were raising Cain,
People did not know they had 'em,
And they reckoned that a pain
In those simple days primeval
Was the work of spirits evil.

Then the ignorance was blissful,
For the young, impulsive man
And the lady fair and kissful
Didn't know the risk they ran
Every time they stole a smack
When the old folks turned their back.

That is why you hear folks calling
Ancient times the good old days,
For they didn't know that crawling
Microbes hung about their ways.
In these days all comfort flies
Just because we are too wise.

Barbara's Bright Idea.

Milton Murphy paused at the doorstep, his paws toying idly with his flowing mustache. He was yearning with a large 2 by 6 yearn to say something that had been resting on his mind like a hen on a china egg for six weeks.

Barbara Bushford saw that something was troubling him. She wondered if it was his dinner or a gas bill. Innocent young creature, she never dreamed that it was love for her that was causing him to stand around on one foot and look foolish.

Milton essayed to speak, but there was a lump like the planet Mars in his throat, which, the reader might infer if given three guesses, somewhat interfered with fluent conversation.

"Barbara," he said, after an intense effort, "I would do anything to make you happy."

Barbara's big eyes bulged beautifully. "Would you really?" she said.

"I would," he replied. "Can you tell me how?"

The girl thoughtfully bit off the end of her finger nail. "I have it," she exclaimed. "In place of bringing me candy in person send it around by a messenger boy."

Wasting His Woe.

His cup of woe was running o'er,
But idly he sat still
And said, "I don't need any more,
So I'll just let 'er spill."

Wouldn't Work Both Ways.

"Is my face good for a drink here?" asked the red nosed individual.

"Possibly," replied the astute bartender, "but I can tell you as a friend that a drink wouldn't be good for your face."

Worth Fighting For.

"I don't allow men to put their arms around me."

"I am glad to hear it. It wouldn't be worth doing if you were to give me a written permit."

Why J. J. Perkins Owes his Life to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Doctor Had Given Him up and he was Hopeless and Destitute Before the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy put Him on His Feet.

Tyndall, Man., Aug. 8.—(Special.)—When a man has had kidney disease; when the doctor has given him up; when that man takes Dodd's Kidney Pills, begins at once to recover and is soon a well man, that man is surely in a position to say that Dodd's Kidney Pills saved his life.

That is the experience of Mr. J. J. Perkins of this place. Speaking of his case Mr. Perkins says:—

"For two years I was troubled with my kidneys, and at last became so bad that the doctor who was attending me gave me up and said I was incurable.

"I continued to grow worse. I was unable to work, and was becoming destitute when to please a friend I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"The first box did me so much good I felt like a new man, and after taking five boxes I was completely cured."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the kidneys, and cured kidneys cure Dropsy, Rheumatism, Heart Disease and all other diseases resulting from impure blood.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer One Hundred Dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

THE BODY OF THE SUN.

Is Its Density It Resembles Somewhat a Globe of Tar.

It is generally agreed that the ma'n body of the sun—the nucleus within the photosphere—must be purely gaseous. This seems to be an unavoidable conclusion from the sun's low mean density and its tremendous internal temperature, which must almost certainly be far higher than that of its outer surface, so high that even the enormous force of solar gravity is able to compress the vapors to a density only one and four-tenths that of water, although among the constituent elements are many of the metals (iron being the most conspicuous) which in the solid or liquid state are from three to eight times as dense. The reader must not imagine, however, that this gaseous nucleus is like air or other gases as we encounter them upon the earth. Denser than water and strongly viscous from the heat, it more resembles a globe of tar except near the outside. There the vapors relieved from pressure are free to expand and to cool both by the expansion and by radiating heat to outer space in a region of powerful currents, ascending, descending and cyclonic.

The photosphere or luminous surface is generally believed to be what it looks like—a sheet of clouds enveloping the nucleus and consisting of minute drops and crystals formed from those vapors which condense at the highest temperatures. These clouds float in an atmosphere composed of the permanent gases like hydrogen and helium mixed with the more numerous vapors which condense only at far lower temperatures than those that form the clouds. As to the substances which compose the cloud particles, opinions are unsettled.—Professor C. A. Young in Harper's Weekly.

Palestine.

When one thinks of the great events that have taken place in the Holy Land, the multitude of cities, villages and towns, the countless millions who have been born there and whose bones now lie in its rock ribbed hills, the small dimensions of Palestine are almost startling. West of the Jordan, where most of the historic events took place, there are only 3,800 square miles, including all the geographical divisions now called Palestine. Including the land both east and west of the Jordan, the total area is 9,840 square miles. The length of Palestine from north to south is about 150 miles. It varies in breadth from twenty-three to eighty miles.

THE DRUGGIST RECOMMENDED IT.

Because He Knew of Scores of Severe Cases of Piles that were Positively Cured by

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Like hosts of others, he was only disappointed with the many treatments he tried, until his druggist told him of what Dr. Chase's Ointment was accomplishing as a cure for this wretched ailment.

Mr. G. W. Cornell, who is with the Shaw Milling Company, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "In justice to suffering humanity I write to tell you of the world of good I obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. For about six years I was the victim of itching and protruding piles and was in dreadful agony day and night. Doctors were unable to help me and I could get nothing to relieve the suffering. I was about as miserable a creature as was to be found on the face of the earth.

"One day my druggist, Mr. A. J. Greenwood, advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, which I did, and obtained relief from the first box and complete cure with the second. My trouble was caused by heavy lifting, and I consider that Dr. Chase's Ointment would be cheap at fifty dollars a box, in view of the good that it did for me. A feeling of sympathy for others similarly affected prompts me to give this testimony."

THEY NEVER KNEW FAILURE.—Careful observation of the effects of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills has shown that they act immediately on the diseased organs of the system and stimulate them to healthy action. There may be cases in which the disease has been long seated and does not easily yield to medicine, but even in such cases these Pills have been known to bring relief when all other so-called remedies have failed. These assertions can be substantiated by many who have used the Pills, and medical men speak highly of their qualities.

There never was and never will be a universal panacea, in one remedy for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine when obtainable in sound, unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of intrest in life is a disease, and by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses through the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame and giving life to the digestive organs which naturally demand increased substance—result improved appetite. Northrop & Lyman of Toronto have given to the public their Superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate and, guaged by the opinion of scientists, the wine approaches nearest perfection of any in the market. All druggists sell it.

The Fernie Free Press

ESTABLISHED 1898.

R. G. WATSON, Editor — J. R. WALLACE, Manager

THE FERNIE FREE PRESS, FERNIE BRITISH COLUMBIA

FRIDAY, AUG. 12, 1904.

The importance of selecting a strong, progressive and far-seeing council is apparent to all who have given the subject any consideration. Fernie is now at the most important stage in its history. The first council will have the moulding of its future and much depends upon the men selected to perform that operation.

* * *

Among the matters which will claim the first council's consideration are, the adoption of a code of by-laws, the securing of buildings in which to conduct the civic affairs, the appointment of officials, the building of sidewalks and grading of streets, and preliminary steps should be taken towards the installation of a sewer system and the municipal ownership of light and water systems. This when looked into, is a big program, and none but big men are qualified to carry it out successfully. Of course it would be preposterous to expect the first council to accomplish all this during the brief four and a half months of its official life, therefore a council should be elected that will so earn the public confidence that it may be returned next year to complete the work it will have begun.

* * *

A man to sit on the first council should be broad-minded. He should be above sectional interests and he should work steadily for the advancement of the whole town. He should be progressive, to cope with the public improvements that this town stands sadly in need of. He should be far-seeing, so that present needs do not hide or distort future requirements. He should be willing to sacrifice his own time in the interests of his town, for this sacrifice will be required of him. Above all, he should be honest and economical in the use of the public funds, opposed to excessive taxation and heavy indebtedness, yet fully alive to the requirements of the town.
