The rule is one condemnation for masculine sins and another for feminine. We all know that the pharisaical ideas of old are common at the present time. Indeed, I go even further than this. I sometimes think that, as far as the world is concerned, many people are prone to admire men if they are not too good, if they have an immoral besmirchment of their record. They are not glad when they say, "He is a square, true man," but they are happy when they can say, "He is a wild fellow, but mighty nice." It is on account of this tendency of the human race to judge man's sins differently from woman's sins that we often find men in public places boasting of their evil deeds as though they were the signs of true manhood and nobility.

Another characteristic of the divine law is that it recognizes no distinction of rank or station. As the divine law makes no distinction between sexes, it also makes no distinction between the sins of the upper and the lower social classes. It does not have one criminal code for the palace and another for the hut. It does not have one for the wealthy Wall street financier who manipulates the railroad stock and "waters" it and cheats thousands of small investors out of their all, and another for the groceryman who has false weights and never sends a full pound of coffee or tea or sugar to his customers when they pay for a full pound. When it says "Thou shalt not" to the plebeian, it also says "Thou shalt not" to the aristocrat. What it denounces in the heart of the serf it also denounces in the heart of the ruler sitting upon the king's throne, or of the judge sitting upon the chief justice's bench of the Supreme Court, or of the Premier governing in statecraft as Joseph did in Egypt, or as Bismarck did in Germany, or as Gladstone did in the British Parliament. And yet, to hear some people speak of it, one might suppose that God's ear was very deaf to the rich man's sins and very alert to hear about the poor man's evil deeds.

Do you believe God discriminates between the sins of the social classes? If you do, let me by the scene of my text disabuse your mind of that surmise. Come, let us push our way through the multitudes crowding in the temple and find out who compose that group. Who are those strong, fine looking men standing in front of Christ? They are not insignificant clerks. They are not laborers or farmers who have come into town with dust begrimed clothes. They are not hirelings or beggars or men and women who from perpetual movings have become tramps and vagabonds. Most of that group just in front of Christ have keen intellectual faces. They have in their physical movements the actions of successful men. They have in the glance of their eyes the searching power which bespeaks command. "Those men," wrote Dr. Strong, "were the scribes. They were the doctors of the law and the interpreters of the Scripture." These other men are the Pharisees. They were so particular to keep themselves outwardly unspotted from heathen customs that they carried extracts from the Hebrew law about with them in little boxes or phylacteries. They had these boxes strapped to their foreheads that all men might see them. But when these men, these leaders of Jerusalem, were standing there condemning a poor outcast woman for her sins Christ in silence was making figures upon the ground with his fingers in which they might read their own condemnation.

What Jesus Christ was writing upon the ground is not recorded; whether Christ was writing history of those accusers on the ground or no we care not, for one fact we do know—by his silence as well as later by his spoken words Christ was teaching the sweeping lesson that a rich man's sins, a prominent lawyer's or physician's or statesman's sins or a minister's sins are just as severely condemned in the sight of God as the poor man's sins. The divine law discriminates not between the sins of the upper and lower social classes, but between sin and righteousness. The sin of the broad-cloth is the same black sin which sometimes nests under the rough woollens of the laborer and the mechanic. Sin is sin wherever found, and sin by the Christ law is to be everywhere condemned.

But I find in the next place another trenchant lesson. The divine law does not accept zeal in bringing others to justice as a ground for absolving the prosecutor of his own wrongdoing. The scribes and Pharisees cannot atone for their sins by denouncing and condemning others. Though a man might prove every other man a living example of total depravity and devote his life to the exposure and arraignment of criminals, he must take his own place at the bar and answer the indictment of his own iniquities. Instances have been known of a criminal under human Government securing for himself immunity from punishment for his own crimes by betraying his leader to the officers of the law or even by himself executing sentence on that leader, but such men are despised by their perfidy, even by the community that profits by the treachery. A similar principle is applied in our courts of justice when a man is allowed to turn state's evidence. It sometimes happens that there is no way of convicting a notorious criminal but by the testimony of a confederate. That confederate's evidence has to be purchased, and the price paid is a pardon for him of his own share in the crime. It is a heavy price to pay, a miscarriage of justice, but it is a result of the inadequacy of human administration, and it has no place under divine law.

But what did Christ do? Did he say: "Pharisee, thou art a libertine. Scribe, thou art morally corrupt." Oh, no! He turned and simply held up before their countenances the mirror of convicting conscience, in which they could see their own sinful selves. Christ said, "He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her." Then one by one they slunk away. Oh, my friends, when you and I to-day, going forth into a sinful world, are trying to prove this woman is bad and that man is bad and that young boy is bad and that young girl is bad we are not deceiving God as to our own characters. We do not improve our standing at his bar by denouncing others. Rather by our harsh and uncharitable judgment we are proving ourselves deserving of condemnation. Let us refrain from casting stones at the sinner. We must all answer for our own deeds at his bar, who said, "He that is without sin, let him first cast a stone at her." And without one exception we must all either slink away before the flashing eye of Christ or, like the poor publican in the temple, moan, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner!".

The divine law is omniscient. Evil deeds that the world does not know of are known to God, and at his judgment bar the evidence of them will confront the wrongdoer if they have not been pardoned through Christ. Even in this world crimes long ago committed and successfully hidden have been unexpectedly disclosed and brought home to the perpetrator. Oh, my friends, be not among the scribes and Pharisees who have no mercy, no charity for sinners! Have our lives been immaculate? Is there any evidence against us that may confront us when we are mercilessly assailing our erring brother or sister? It will be a shameful, a humiliating, position to stand convicted before Christ of those sins. Do you not feel that Jesus is speaking to us, as he spake to the prosecutors of old, "He that is without sin, let him first cast a stone at her?"

But, though the divine law was and is so hard upon the unrepentant sinner, how gentle, how loving, how pardoning, how forgiving it was and is to the repentant sinner who comes asking for mercy at the feet of Jesus Christ. Sweeter than even the coming of a little child to be caressed and forgiven by a loving mother is this picture in my text of a poor convicted outcast, trembling at the feet of Christ and finding pardon and peace and life. I can see her now as the rough men are pushing her up. Her face is scratched and bleeding; she fights them step by step. I see her as they fling her at the Master's feet. There at first she shrinks under his pure gaze, expecting that one so sinless will indorse the condemnation of her accusers and in horror at her crime hand her over to the executioner. But, though he loathes her sin, he has compassion for the repentant sinner. I see her now, when all fear leaves her and the bad men turn their backs upon her. Now she looks up into Christ's face with grateful love. Oh, my friends, though you may be scarred with the sins of an evil past, though you may be cast out by the world as one who ought to die, mercy and pardon in Christ you will find! Will you not as a repentant sinner throw yourself at his feet, where you will find peace and life and hope?

And where did this broken hearted Magdalene find her peace? Ah, yes, it was in the temple! There the "divine law of mercy" was revealed to her. While Christ was teaching the people the great lesson of God's forgiveness of sin they brought her to him. In the temple Jesus turned and said to her: "Neither do I condemn thee. Go and sin no more." In the temple, in this building, this church dedicated for the worship of Jesus Christ, oh, sinful man, you may hear the voice of the Master offering you pardon of sin! You can hear him if, like the broken hearted woman at the feet of Christ, you are a repentant sinner. You can if you will say, "Lord, save me and save me now." That pardon through Christ is the promise of the divine law. Will you take it? Will you receive it now?

FERNIE, B. C.

Not to be Weaned.

Mr. Bascomb was as firm about politics as about everything else. He made a boast that nobody could change his views when once they were formed, and it was true.

"But, father, suppose they don't even suggest having Liph Godding for representative?" pleaded Mr. Bascomb's son after a painful half hour of argument. "I don't believe anybody but you has thought of him."

"If they don't have Liph Godding for representative," said Mr. Bascomb calmly, "I shall winter my vote, that's all."—Youth's Companion.

Domestic Economy.

Mr. Youngbubbe—Don't you think, my dear, that you are cooking twice as much as we shall need? Mrs. Youngbubbe (artlessly)—I am doing it on purpose, darling. Tomorrow I want to try some of those "Hints For Housekeepers—How to Make Dainty Dishes From What Was Left Over From Yesterday."

Then Chaos.

"Why, Mary," said her mistress, "I told you to make up my room an hour ago, and here it is in terrible disorder."

"Yis, mum, and I did," said Mary, "but the master came in to put on a clean collar, mum, and he lost the stud."

FINAL ACT OF THE TRAGEDY.

"Why should I wish to live any longer? All my kin have been murdered. A thousand armed men are on my track, seeking my life. There is no rest for me henceforth, day or night. I am innocent. I have committed no crime. Yet I am to be shot on sight, as if I were a desperate outlaw. I will endure it no longer! I will give myself up! But by the great horn spoon, nobody shall have the satisfaction of killing me!" So saying the hunted creature flew swiftly through the darkness to the nearest city, dashed itself against a skyscraper, and fell to the ground dead. It was the last prairie chicken.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

The value of building permits issued in Winnipeg this year has now reached a total of over $8,000,000. At this date last year the total was $5,201,300. It is expected that the entire twelve months of this year will show over $10,000,000.

WHERE WEAKNESS IS, DISEASE WILL SETTLE.—If one suffers from any organic weakness, inherited or contracted, there disease will settle when it attacks the body. Therefore gripe out the pains that beset you, do not let a cold or cough harass you, and keep the respiratory organs in a good, healthy condition. This you can do by using Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Prevention is the wisest course.

WATERPROOF PAINT.

The following is a good recipe for a waterproof paint for wood or stone. Melt twelve ounces of resin; mix with it thoroughly six gallons of fish oil and one pound of melted sulphul; mix some ochre or any other coloring substance with a little linseed oil, enoughto give it the right color and thickness; apply several brush. The first coat should be very thin.

THE OKA TRAPPISTS.

"Postillon de la Trappe" read an ancient sign swinging under the trees of an Oka street. Oka, you may know, is a quaint little village on the eastern bank of the Ottawa River reached only by the river steamers and within its boundaries are to be found such oddly diverse elements as Algonquin Indians, French-Canadians, summer tourists, Catholic sisterhoods, and the Brothers in White, who constitute the Trappist community.

My postillion—a shock-headed lad of exclusively French speech—proved to be a veritable Jehu as a driver, and the sturdy pony was equally reckless in his mad charges up and down hills, over bridges and around passing vehicles, and his passenger was thankful that we ran into but one fence and hit but one tree. Fortunately the fence post gave way instead of the carriage wheel, and the three-mile journey to the monastery ended with the loss of only a hat, a whip and some breath.

The Silent Brothers give the wayfarer a hospitable welcome. There are there fifty in the Order, together with fifty lay brothers. The former are clad in white; the latter in brown. In addition, there are forty young men attending their agricultural school.

Here the Trappists till an 800-acre farm, and a fairer scene Canada cannot show than this highly cultivated area, with its orchards and vineries, its fields of golden grain sweeping up to the bases of the Two Mountains, and the fringe of green forest that encloses the farm.

The members of the order are subject to rigidly ascetic rules, rising at two in the morning, eating but two meals a day, of a strictly vegetarian diet, and retiring at eight in the evening to their humble pallets in an attic. Four hours of the eighteen are spent in the fields; the remainder in religious exercises and study. If one may judge by the personal appearance of the Brothers, this mode of life results in the best of health. "We nevaire sick," said my brown-gowned guide, and so it would seem.

It is strange and interesting sight to view these silent workers in brown and white, with their sandalled feet, rope girdles and broad-brimmed hats laboring in the gardens and on the farm, or to see them fall suddenly on their knees, even though at work, while the Father in charge performs the office of the hour. Whatever their occupation, it must be suspended when the great bell rings out its summons. Stranger still is it to watch the single file of worshippers, looking ghostly in their long white robes, as they march to their chapel in the early hours of the morning while the world around is yet asleep.

The Trappist farm has a beautiful setting, overlooking, on the south and west, the Lake of Two Mountains, the Ottawa and, in the far distance, the St. Lawrence River. Perched near the summit of the twin hills are three chapels that show strikingly white against the green foliage for a long distance. They are part of the series of seven chapels that line the mountain road—a road that is crowded on the great day of the Trappists—the 14th of September, when the Fete du Calvaire attracts thousands of worshippers, who, in the true spirit of the pilgrim, worship at all the Stations of the Cross that lead to the mountain top.—Frank Yeigh in Toronto Globe.

Our Blind Spot.

On the back of the eyeball is a peculiar expansion of the fibres of the optic nerve, which is called the retina. Every part of this is not equally sensitive to the action of light. A small portion, where the organization is most perfect, is called from its color the yellow spot; this is only 1-6,000th of an inch in diameter, yet it produces the most perfect sensation of vision. A little nearer to the nose is another spot, which, though full of fibres of the optic nerve, is absolutely insensible to light, and is therefore called the "blind" spot. This can be easily proved by well known experiments on paper, of which advertisers of patent medicines have availed themselves. Helmholtz in his lecture tells us that "this blind spot is so large that it might prevent our seeing 11 moons if placed side by side, or a man's face at a distance of only six or seven feet," and that, "Mariotte, who discovered the phenomenon, amused Charles II. and his court by showing them how they might see each other with their heads cut off."

Watch as a Compass.

Forest and Stream gives the following instructions by which a watch will serve as a compass:

Get the number of hours from midnight, divide by two and point the hour at the sun so that the shadow of a match or lead pencil falls directly across the centre of the watch: 12 o'clock will be north, 6 south, 9 west and 3 east. Suppose it is 9 a. m.; number of hours from midnight is 9; one-half is 4½; point 4.30 at the sun so the shadow of a match or lead pencil falls across the centre of watch, and 12 is north, 6 south, 3 east and 9 west. Suppose it is 6 p.m.; number of hours from midnight is 18, one-half, 9; points 9 at sun and 12 is north, 6 south, 3 east and 9 west.

Also, when the sun is hidden on a cloudy day take a lead pencil or stick that is well sharpened and place it on the thumb nail. By looking closely you will see a faint shadow, which will give you a very good idea of the direction of the sun, and may be useful to one lost on a cloudy day.

THE LONGEST NAME.

Mr. James Gill, of Toledo, Ohio, is or should be a proud and happy man, says the London Chronicle. His wife has the longest Christian name in heathendom or out of it; and her father, who was responsible for it, insisted on having every syllable of it placed on the records. There it stands—"Missouri Arkansas Napoleon Four Hundred Miles Below the Mouth of the Ohio Absher." Mr. Absher explained that his daughter was named in honor of an aunt who lived at Napoleon, on the Missouri River in Arkansas, four hundred miles below the mouth of the Ohio. In this case, apparently, a whole atlas is "in a name."

Experience of Two Nurses

Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Miss C. Stanley-Jones, professional masseuse and nurse, 283 Simcoe street, Toronto, Ont., writes: "In my occupation as nurse I have come across many cases in which Dr. Chase's Ointment has been used with extraordinary results. One case I recall was that of a child of sixteen months who was in a bad way with scaly head. It was a really nasty case, causing the child to suffer very much and to be very troublesome. I persuaded the mother to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, and in ten days the child was entirely cured.

"Another case was that of a lady who was greatly troubled with eczema on the face. The doctor was dosing her with medicine, which was doing no good. In this case cure was effected in seven days with only one box of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Both of these cures were lasting."

Mrs. H. A. Loynes, nurse, Philipsburg, Que., writes: "I consider Dr. Chase's Ointment a perfect medicine. I have used it myself, and as a nurse have recommended it in a good many cases for itching piles. It always gave perfect satisfaction in every case, and once people used it they would not think of being without it in the house."

A THEATRICAL TREAT

The Harold Nelson Company delighted two large Fernie audiences on Monday and Tuesday evenings, "Faust" on the latter evening being away and above any previous record at the new opera house. Heart and Sword is a military drama with many touches of high comedy to add plenty of enlivenment. The role of Prince Victor was taken by Mr. Nelson even more cleverly than heavier characters which he has presented here before. His two chief supporters, Mr. Bruce as Stalbach the traitor soldier and Miss Helene Scott the beautiful princess of a rival principality were fully up to their past standard.

In "Faust as presented by this company the people of Fernie witnessed the finest spectacular play ever put on a Fernie stage. The scenery and lights were gorgeous. Mr. Nelson puts much originality into his presentation of Mephisto and in no other character has he appeared to better advantage. Clifford Bruce makes a vigorous Faust giving him manliness despite his weakness. Helene Scott feelingly acted her part as Marguerite, the victim of man and evil spirit.

NOTICE.

SIXTY DAYS after the first publication of this notice, we intend to apply to the Lieutenant Governor in Council for permission to clear out and remove obstructions from the following Creeks in East Kootenay, and build dams and slides thereon and to make other improvements for the purpose of making said creeks navigable for logs:—

1. Little Sand Creek, from the small lake at a point about six miles North East of the Crow's Nest Pass Railway on Block Number 4500 to said Crow's Nest R. R. about three miles East of Jaffray.

2. McBayne Creek, from McBayne Lake to a point where said Creek joins little Sand Creek, a distance of about one and one-half miles.

The only lands affected by these improvements are John Anderson's Pre-emption and said lot 4500.

The only water affected by said improvements are said Little Sand and McBayne Creeks.

The rate of toll proposed to be charged is $1.00 per thousand feet board measure.

Dated this 20th day of October, A. D. 1904.

HUMAN SKILL versus MACHINES.

Man's ingenuity invents machines to do work, man's skill cannot do.

No fingers, however deft, could ever sew a stitch locked inside a piece of leather.

No eye, however true, could gauge with absolute accuracy the length of the stitches on a hundred thousand pairs of shoes—or on one pair.

No human muscle could work eight, ten, fifteen or twenty-four hours a day, and draw the stitches evenly, tightly, all day long.

And no human being would have the patience to wax his thread before every stitch—or remember to do it if he had the patience.

And fifty men could not make as many imperfect shoes in the time one Goodyear Welt Machine takes to makes fifty perfect pairs.

"What does Goodyear Welt mean?"

"It is the very best, most perfect method ever invented for joining the Uppers of shoes to the Soles."

GOODYEAR WELT LOCKED STITCH.

"Why is it the best?"

"Because it's the only method that makes a shoe without a stitch or a tack under the foot and stronger than hand sewing."

"Why is it stronger than hand sewing?"

"Because it locks its stitches inside the leather of the outer sole, draws them tighter and more uniformly than hand sewing."

"What advantage does the lock stitch give?"

"The holding power of the stitch remains till the sole is worn through whereas in hand sewn shoes, the top of the stitch wears off in a few days and only straight strands of thread are left to hold the sole on.

"Does it make the shoe cheaper as well as better?"

"It does because it makes fifty perfect pairs, where one imperfect pair could not be made by hand."

"Have any improvements been made in the Goodyear Machines in recent years?"

"Yes, a vast improvement has been made in the New, Improved Goodyear Welt Machine, now in use in the Slater Shoe Factory."

"What is the nature of the improvement?"

"A better motion of the parts, producing better results in the shoe."

ORDINARY STITCH.

"Can a novice tell a Goodyear Welt by seeing it?"

"Not always because there are imitations."

"By buying only "The Slater Shoe" because "Slater Shoes" are made only by the new, improved Goodyear Welt process."

Stamped on the sole with the makers' name and price,

Write for a Catalogue. It is free.

J. D. Quail's New Hardware and Furniture Fire-Proof Store is being Stocked

Without doubt the most absolutely fire proof building in the city and one which reflects the greatest credit upon its owner, designer and builder is J. D. Quail's new hardware and furniture store. Although one of the heaviest losers in the fire Mr. Quail set to work with indefatigable energy to replace his large wooden building with the genuine fire-proof structure that is now nearing completion.

The entire building is made of concrete, from the bottom of the gumbo bed to the roof itself. The walls were built solid, foot by foot as the substance hardened. The lower floor, the show window stands and the roof are of the same material. The building is sixty feet square. The hardware and furniture departments will be arranged as before, and a large archway, under the back and front stairs, will connect them. Upstairs a large room 26 feet square is reserved for storing linoleums, etc., the other rooms are for office and living purposes. A basement, absolutely fire proof, is under the entire building where several car loads of certain lines of stock will be stored. In addition to this a large 40 foot cellar faces on Baker Ave. equally fire-proof, for the storing of oils and other inflammable material.

A force of men are engaged completing the upstairs of this fine block and another force is busy moving the large and new stock of hardware and furniture into the store building. In a few days everything will be in ship shape and Mr. Quail will be in possession of one of the finest businesses of its kind in the province.

G. N. TRACK AT FERNIE.

Bridge Building will delay Steel. Depot Contract Let

The tracklaying of the G. N. is expected to reach the Elk River crossing at Fernie this evening A little bridge a mile out delayed the work a day or two this week.

The pile driver has completed the piling for the approach on the West side of the Elk and the work of putting down the piling for the bridge piers will go ahead at once. The grading in the yards was completed this week and the grading on the M. F. & M. is also well under way.

The contract for the G. N. Depot and section house was awarded this week to a Kalispel contractor.

CHURCH IMPROVEMENTS

Several improvements are being made at the Coal Creek Methodist church. The road leading directly up to the church has been improved and a hand-rail put along it. The electric lights will be put in the church this week or next. A vestibule is being built adding to the comfort of the congregation during the winter months. The music at the church services is also much improved of late by the addition of several good singers to the choir. Rev. W. P. Ewing, the minister, is indefatigable in his efforts to make things progress as they should.

SHAW-McKANE

On the evening of Wednesday, Nov. 2 Mr. Robert Shaw and Miss Mary E. McKane were united in marriage at the residence of Mr. J. Holbrook. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Robson B. A. in the presence of a few intimate friends of the contracting parties. The bride who is well known to many in the city was very tastefully attired and was accompanied by Miss Ida Davis while Harry Beers supported the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Shaw will reside in the city.

SMALL DEBTS' COURT.

FERNIE GETS THIS CONVENIENCE AT LAST.

W. H. Whimster, city Police Magistrate has been Sworn in Judge of the Small Debts' Court

On Monday of this week Mr. W. H. Whimster was sworn in as Judge of the Small Debts' Court, before Mr. G.G. Moffatt J. P. The appointment came as a communication from the Provincial Secretary's office and it is presumed that this week's Gazette will contain the notice.

Once before a Small Debts' Court was granted to Fernie but for some reason the sittings were discontinued. An agitation for some time past has been made to have this Court instituted at Fernie again, and largely through the efforts of our local member, W. R. Ross, who represented the matter to the government the request has been granted.

All civil cases where less than $100 is involved may be tried in this court. Hitherto every trifling case was held over for the County Court, thus adding very materially to the costs.

Mr. Whimster's appointment will give general satisfaction. His duties as city police Magistrate will fit in very nicely with those attached to his new office.

THE COUNCIL MEETING

CURFEW BY-LAW PASSED ITS THIRD READING.

Curfew Bell at 8 o'clock in Winter and 9 in Summer. Another shuffle on the Purdy Store Question

The city council met last Friday evening. Ald. Trites was absent and Ald. Cree arrived at 9.15 p. m. The minutes of previous meeting were read and adopted.

A communication from A. J. Purdy was read asking the council to reconsider the cancellation of his permit to move his store building, as passed at the last meeting. Mr. Purdy represented that the cancellation had worked a hardship on him, as he had given up another proposition in consequence. He also drew attention to the fact that by this agreement they would secure the removal of his building to outside the fire limits by Dec. 1906.

The letter raised considerable discussion. Most of the Aldermen were of the opinion that a mistake had been made in giving permission to W. W. Tuttle to move his building, but as that permit had not been cancelled it was unfair to treat Mr. Purdy in a different manner. His Worship the Mayor took a firm stand in opposition to this line of argument. If the council had made one mistake that was no reason why the mistake should be repeated. The council was adopting a sinilly-dallying policy in reconsidering a matter on which its vote had been taken on two previous occasions. The council should deliberate well before passing a measure and after passing it should stand by it right or wrong.

On motion by Ald. Liphardt and Lundie a resolution was finally passed giving Mr. Purdy permission to move his building according to contract, all the aldermen present excepting Ald. Beck voting in its favor.

The council then proceeded to legislate against any further applications of a similar nature. On motion by Ald. Liphardt and MacLean a resolution was pasted "that no more permits be granted re moving buildings inside the fire limits."

F. J. Watson, agent for the Goldie and McCulloch safe Co. wrote enclosing purchase contracts for signature. The council authorized the necessary signatures.

The finance committee reported as follows;—We have examined the following accounts and having found them correct have caused vouchers to be issued to the Treasurer for their payment.

School Board	$604.00
F. J. Watson, lumber	21.64
Bell and Farquharson, carpenter work	22.10
Registrar of land titles, Nelson	10.00
J. R. Wallace, printing	70.70

The report was received and adopted.

THE CURFEW LAW

This by-law which has been under abeyance for some time was finally taken up by the council, which went into a committee of the whole with Ald. Beck in the chair to consider the by-law clause by clause. The committee recommended that it receive its second reading. This was done and passed after which it passed its third reading without any amendments. It will be reconsidered at the next meeting before it is finally adopted.

The curfew law or by-law No. 5, makes it compulsory that all children of 12 yrs. of age and under must be off the streets, vacant lots and all other public places by eight o'clock every night from October to March inclusive and by nine o'clock every night from April to September inclusive. The police are instructed to ring the school bell at these hours, after which children not obeying the warning will be sent home with a warning to the parents or guardians. Upon the offense being repeated the parents or guardians are liable to a fine not exceeding five dollars.

The council then went into a committee of the whole to draft the agreement between the city and A. J. Purdy. The agreement makes it binding that the building must be moved outside the fire limits by Dec. 1st, 1906, or as soon as a wall or building is erected on the lot north of Mr. Purdy's lot.

A resolution was also passed authorizing the board of school trustees to have connection made at the school with the city water system and recommending that fire drill be taught at the school.

The council adjourned to meet on Nov. 4th.

UNDER A TON OF COAL

A Miner at Coal Creek met with an Accident this week. In a Precarious Condition.

A miner named J. Gillies, narrowly escaped losing his life on Tuesday night while at work in No. 9 mine, Coal Creek. He was lying on his side working at a low roof. Both he and his mate knew the place was dangerous. Mr. Gillies asked the latter to hold up a large piece of coal that was hanging out while he loosened it with his pick, and to warn him if necessary, but suddenly the whole piece weighing about a ton fell and buried Gillies. The huge piece of coal was probably forced out by the pressure of gas behind, which smelt very strongly after the fall.

Fortunately the coal in falling first struck a post and broke in pieces, thus breaking the force of the fall, Gillies had just time to throw his head back out of the way and the coal fell on his back crushing his chest and shoulders against the post. He was carried to his boarding house on the stretcher and his wounds were quickly attended to by Dr. Keith. He is badly bruised and he will be laid up for some time. The accident is particularly unfortunate as Gillies has been working at Coal Creek only three months and he has a wife and family of three children in the Old Country.

POLICE COURT FINES

City gets rich Harvest from First Month' Returns.

The city police Magistrate took office on Oct. 3rd; from that date to the end of October he held 36 sittings. The fines paid to the city from the convictions amounted to $519.65. The fines in the great majority of cases were paid and only one prisoner is now confined in the jail.

BROWN'S IN TOWN.

C. P. Walker's clever company of comedians who played "My Friend from India" recently will appear in Fernie on their return trip on Monday evening when they will play "Brown's in Town" a very funny comedy from the pen of Mark E. Swan. This company does not need a further introduction to the people of Fernie as they have played here a number of times with increasing success. Mr. Walker's plays are given as written and as played in New York, and he pays a heavy royalty to the authors to get the comedies com lete

At Monday's meeting of the Epworth League in the Methodist Church the election of officers for the next half year was held. The following officers were elected:—

President, A. T. Claxton; 1st, Vice Pres. H. Morgan; 2nd Vice Pres., Miss McBurney, 3rd Vice Pres., Miss E. Bryan; 4th Vice Pres., Miss I. Sheppard; Secretary, Wm. Turner; Treas., Miss May Chapman; Organist, Mrs. Robson.

NEURALGIC PAINS

Enrich The Blood and Neuralgia will Disappear—It is Only Those Whose Blood is Poor and Watery That Suffer.

No part of the human system is more sensitive than the nerves. Many of the most excruciating pains that afflict mankind come from weak, shaky, shattered nerves, and among the nerve pains there is perhaps none causes more intense suffering than neuralgia, which generally attacks the nerves of the face and head, sometimes causing swift, darting, agonizing pains—at other times a dull, heavy aching feeling which makes life miserable. There is only one way to get rid of neuralgia and other nervous troubles, and that is through the blood. Poor, watery blood makes the nerves shaky and invites disease. Rich, red blood makes the nerves strong and banishes all nerve troubles. No medicine in the world can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a blood builder and nerve tonic; every dose helps to make rich, red blood, and every drop of this new blood feeds and strengthens the nerves and banishes all nerve aches and pains. Among those who offer strong proof of this is Mr. John McDermott, Bond Head, Ont., who says: "A few years ago, while working as a carpenter in Buffalo, I got wet. I neglected to change my clothes, and next morning I awoke with cramps and pains throughout my entire body. I was unable to go to work, so called in a doctor. I followed his treatment, but it did not help me. As I was unable to work I returned to my home at Bond Head. Here I consulted a doctor, who said I was suffering from neuralgia, but though he treated me for some time he also failed to help me. I had often read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, so decided to try them. I had not used more than three boxes before I felt they were helping me. From that on I gained day by day, and after I had used some ten boxes I had fully recovered my old-time strength, and have since been able to work at my trade without any trouble. The pains and aches no longer torture me and I have gained in weight. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills an invaluable medicine and shall always have a good word to say for them."

Neuralgia, sciatica, rheumatism, St. Vitus dance, and the many other blood and nerve troubles all vanish when Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are used—but you must get the genuine, bearing the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around every box. Sold by druggists or direct by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EVILS OF "GET THERE."

The Dangers That Lurk In Our Modern Hustling Methods.

If we may judge by its effects on those who obey its command, our slang motto, "Get there," is not an elevating or ennobling one. On the contrary, it is brutalizing. It appeals to the lower and not the higher instincts in man.

Yet this motto is quoted all over our land. It is demoralizing the law, it is creeping into the pulpit, it speaks from our schools, it looks out of the eyes of the ambitious, it undermines health, and it frequently destroys all nobility of character.

The old fashioned slow and sure methods of attaining a competency are tabooed. The man who spends half a lifetime in making a fortune is regarded as "slow." Short cut processes, at any cost, are the demand of the hour. From the time a boy enters school he is goaded on by unnatural ambitions. He is not satisfied with steady, permanent growth. He must progress by leaps and bounds. Boys and girls are encouraged by their parents to get ahead in their classes, even if they must burn midnight oil and risk their health in order to do so.

It is pitiable to watch a typical American going to business in the morning. He is not content to sit quietly and relax until the train carries him to his destination in the city. Long before that he leans forward in his seat and makes ready to leap off while the train is moving. With every muscle tense, an anxious, worried expression in his face and a nervous twitching of the hands, clutching his cane, umbrella, parcel or the back of the seat in front of him, he wastes enough energy and strength before he reaches his office to execute the labor of half the day.

The life of the average American is feverish, unhealthy and unnatural. We are in too great haste with everything and consequently lack poise. In the perpetual rush to "get there" we are in very great danger of losing our equilibrium.—Orison Swett Marden in Success.

Ocean Cannibals.

Such fierce carnivorous fishes as exist in the depths of the ocean are unknown at the surface. There is a "black swallower" which devours other finny creatures ten times as big as itself, literally climbing over its victim, first with one jaw and then with the other. Another species is nearly all mouth, and having no power of locomotion it lies buried in the soft ooze at the bottom, its head alone protruding, ready to engulf any prey that may wander into its cavernous jaws. There is a ferocious kind of shark, resembling a huge eel. All of these monsters are black as ink. Some of them are perfectly blind, while others have enormous, goggling eyes. No ray of sunlight ever pierces the dark, unfathomed caves in which they dwell. Each species is gobbled by the species next bigger, for there is no vegetable life [illegible]

ANECDOTES OF JUDGES.

Many stories are told of the late Baron Huddleston, who died in 1890. When he received notice of his appointment as a High Court Judge he was at Guildhall conducting a case, and the court had just adjourned for lunch.

After reading the letter Huddleston became greatly excited, took off his wig and gown, and, handing them to the nearest barrister, said:

"Here, my boy, take these; I shall not want them any more!"

"Old 'Awkins."

Lord Brampton, better known as Sir Henry Hawkins, now living in retirement, was much feared by hardened criminals. This is illustrated by an incident that occurred when the late Sir James Stephen acted as judge for the last time.

A policeman was in the box, and His Lordship asked:

"What did the prisoner say, constable?"

"He said, my Lord, that he didn't care, as long as he weren't brought up before old 'Awkins, 'cos if he was then the angels 'elp him, for mortal man could not, my Lord!"

Useful Experience.

There was a certain philanthropic judge who, being on a visit of inspection to a penal institution, trusted himself on the treadmill, and, with a view to gaining a little practical experience, desired the warder to set it in motion.

This was accordingly done, and His Lordship commenced lifting his feet. In a few minutes, however, the new hand had had quite enough of it, and called to be released. But this was not easily done.

"Please, my Lord," said the warder, "you can't get off yet. It's set for twenty minutes!"

So the indignant judge was kept at the novel "exercise" until the period had run out.

Neglected Study.

A legal paper told this of a late eminent judge. Several lawyers gathered one day in the judge's room after an adjournment of court, and were discussing the retirement of a member of the Bar. In the company was one whose practice was worth a good many thousands a year. He said:

"I have been practising for many years now, and have made a considerable fortune. I have thought I should like to retire and devote my remaining years to studies I have neglected."

"Study law," said the judge, promptly.

A Coincidence.

That eccentric, but kind-hearted, judge, Sir James Allen Parke, acquired, among other inconvenient habits, a trick of thinking aloud.

One day, when trying an old woman for stealing faggots, he unconsciously ejaculated:

"Why, one faggot is as like another faggot as one egg is like another egg!"

The counsel defending the prisoner caught the aside, and naturally made a strong point of it in his defence.

"Stop! stop!" cried His Lordship. "It is an intervention of Providence. This was the very thought that passed through my own mind! Gentlemen, acquit the prisoner."

Friendly Advice.

One of the best known of the judges of former times was Justice Maule, about whom a great many stories are told. A man was once indicted before him for breaking open a young lady's jewel case and robbing her of the contents.

"What have you to say?" asked the judge.

"My Lord, I did it with her consent," said the highwayman.

"In the future," said the judge, blandly, "you should get the consent in writing!"

And he gave him a stiff term of imprisonment.

Liked It Strong.

It seems that one of the Irish judges of recent times had a habit of dozing during the more or less interesting speeches of counsel, and, from time to time awakening, ejaculating an odd remark in the course of the speech.

An eloquent counsel was addressing His Lordship on the subject of certain town commissioners' right to a particular waterway, and in his address he repeated somewhat emphatically:

"But, my lord, we must have water, we must have water."

The learned judge therefore awoke, and startled the Bar with the remark:

"Well, just a little drop, thank you; just a little. I like it strong!"

Bacon and Hogg.

It is related that Sir Nicholas Bacon was about to pass judgment upon a man who had been guilty of robbery, at that time punishable by death, but the culprit pleaded for mercy on the ground that he was related to the judge.

"How is that?" he was asked.

"My Lord," was the reply, "your name is Bacon, mine is Hogg, and hog and bacon have always been considered akin!"

"That is true," answered Sir Nicholas, "but a hog is not bacon until it has hung, until you are hanged you are no relation of mine."

Slight Mistake.

The late Dr. Pankhurst, a well-known English agitator, was a barrister, and both in personal appearance and in the tone of his voice appeared to be the very reverse of a revolutionist.

An amusing story was told of him and of one of the judges before whom he happened to be pleading. The judge was rather short-sighted, and, not seeing Dr. Pankhurst, who was beginning to address the jury, but hearing his slender voice, put on his spectacles, and, leaning forward, said, much to the amusement of those who heard him:

"My good woman, you really must not address the court!"

Cured Mrs. Jas. Murphy and Everyone Else She Recommended Them To.

River Gagnon, Que., Oct. 31.—(Special).—No complaint is so common among women as Pain-in-the-Back. It is a safe estimate that fully half the women in Canada are afflicted with it. For that reason every evidence that there is a sure and complete cure in existence is thankfully received. And there is abundant evidence that Dodd's Kidney Kidney Pills is just such a cure. This district could furnish a dozen cures, but one is enough for an example. The one is that of Mrs. Jas. Murphy. She says:

"I suffered for thirty-eight months with a pain in my back. I took just one box of Kidney Pills and I have never been troubled with the pain since. I also recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to other people, who complained as I did, and in every case the Pills did their duty and brought relief."

BIELA'S COMET.

All Europe was in pangs of terror when in 1832 it was announced that Biela's comet would cross the earth's path. People died of terror, and so serious did the scare become that a Parisian professor begged the Academy of Science to publicly refute the assertion.

The comet came, blazed awhile in the sky and vanished. Its period of revolution round the sun being just under seven years, it came again in 1839 and was due once more early in 1846. But in that year, instead of one comet, two appeared! The original comet had divided into two parts, each of which had a separate existence, though their paths were the same.

In 1852 the two comets again came flying into sight. Their path in 1859 was too close to the sun for telescopic scrutiny, but in 1866 it was expected that they would be plainly visible. But the double comet never turned up. Nor has it ever been seen since.

Comets are naturally somewhat unreliable. They are of very flimsy texture. One great astronomer indeed has said that you could pack the tail of the average comet in a portmanteau. So if they pass too near to Jupiter or any of the big planets they are very apt to get caught and so to disappear completely.

An Unnecessary Distinction.

The two expressions "by and by" and "by the bye" are really derived from the same original word, and the words "by" and "bye" have the same general sense. But the spelling "bye" has long been used in the second of these phrases without any real reason for the change. We should not speak of a bye law or a bye path, and yet many are careful to write "by the bye" and "by the by." In "goodbye" there might be some reason for keeping the final "e," since it stands for the word "ye" in the shortened form of "God be with ye;" but where so much has been dropped the "e" is hardly worth keeping, especially as the old meaning is seldom recalled.

Red Hair and Sunstroke.

Nobody ever heard of a red headed man being sunstruck. Why a red head should afford any protection from the rays of the sun or give its owner immunity from one of the most singular affections that humanity is heir to is one of those mysteries that even the doctors cannot fathom, but the fact remains that men with red hair can stand almost any amount of exertion in or out of doors during the hottest weather and never feel any serious results from it.

AN AID TO MOTHERS.

It doesn't help a sick baby to give it "soothing" drugs. On the contrary, it lessens baby's chance of recovery. If your little ones show any signs of being unwell promptly give Baby's Own Tablets and see how speedily they will be bright, cheerful, well and happy. The medicine is sold under a guarantee that it contains no poisonous soothing stuff, or hurtful drug, and it cures all the little ills of babyhood and childhood. Mrs. W. H. Austin, Farmington, N. S., says: "Baby's Own Tablets are just what every mother needs when her little ones are cutting their teeth. When my little one cries I give him a Tablet and it helps him at once. Mothers who use the Tablets will have no trouble with their babies." Baby's Own Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers, or can be had by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LAKE OF PITCH.

Asphalt, in its natural form, is too brittle when cold and too sticky when warm to make a serviceable road, but when mixed with sand, gravel and tar, answers every requirement. In its natural state, it is found in many parts of the world, but in only one place to perfection, and that is the Island of Trinidad, one of Great Britain's numerous possessions in the West Indies.

Trinidad's great pitch lake, which is the chief wonder and attraction of the island, is situated in a low, sandy stretch of the southwest coast, near Cape Corbaray. The surrounding country is low and malarial, in striking contrast to the high hills and rich woodlands to the coast further back.

The laborers are all negroes, even the coolies shrinking from the heat and low fevers of the place.

The lake itself is about a mile in diameter, hard at the edges and softening toward the middle. The surface is continually changing, apparently from subterranean action. Little oases of dry land, and even trees and shrubs, will disappear in a single night and fresh islands of soil be reared in other places.

The lake is in all probability merely an unusually large deposit of bitumen or soft coal, that has undergone its transformation from decaying vegetable matter in contact with water, and too near the surface for the earth pressure above to harden it thoroughly.

The asphalt crust is broken up with picks and crowbars, and is loaded on dump-carts, drawn by a single mule. The carts crunch through a long, sandy road down to the wharf at the water's edge, where the load is dumped and carried by wheel barrows on board of lighters, which in turn carry it out to ships, lying a half mile out in the shoal water.

The rough lumps of pickings are hoisted on board in baskets and piled in the hold, where they sink down into a compact mass, requiring a fresh filling the next day, and so on till the solid cargo is completed.

When the vessel reaches its port of discharge the asphalt has to be broken up again before it can be removed from the hold.

Owing to the viscous quality of the native "pitch" it has, in the course of ages, filtered through the sand soil around the lakes, and of these great fields the asphalt is, if anything, better after its filtering process than the original deposit.

Canadian Women.

Mr. P. B. Ball, Canadian Agent at Leeds, England, writing to Toronto Sunday World, says: Some little time ago I noticed that an English lady was writing some rather severe criticisms on Canadian women, and I wondered if it could be my friend, Mrs. Margaret Polson Murray. At that time I had not been very long in this country, and remembering my earlier predilection for English women I did not like to get in the mix up, more especially as I knew how well able both our women and men are to defend the sex. The longer I live in the country the more predisposed I am to acknowledge the better qualities of Canadian women. Many years ago in my callow youth before I had been sufficiently acquainted with their many good points, on my trips here I was disposed to give foreign women the preference, but I thought I would allow my more matured judgment to speak before writing on the subject. It has been my privilege to visit Great Britain, Germany, Austria, France and the United States, and meet women in each of these countries. Hitherto I had always thought that English women were probably the finest, next to them the Austrian, having in mind a visit to Budapest in the late seventies. Looking at the matter after some years' experience I can say honestly that no nation produces a finer class of women than Canada. We do not, as the Germans do, have women for breeding children only, or as upper servants. We do not stand as a race, producing money to clothe the women in purple and fine linen only, as the United States men do. We do not keep our girls back and not allow them to have any say for themselves until after they are married, as France or Austria. We take them something between the British and American. We have the good looks of both, and the sound common sense of the one and the good dressing of the other. We are apt to treat them more as companions than other nations.

Marconi As He Is.

Mr. Marconi has a striking personality. Quite six feet in height, powerfully built, the young inventor has none of that physical frailty which so often distinguishes men great in mind. Many of the published photographs make him boyishly good-looking; in reality his face is the stern, impassive one of a strong man. Somewhat pallid, with clear cold eyes, and a towering white forehead, he has a touch of the dreamer as well as of the remorseless student of facts. He crosses the room with a lounging, leisurely stride, and he speaks to new acquaintances reservedly, almost distantly. To the casual observer there is not a spark of enthusiasm in the young man whose enthusiastic researches have resulted in a discovery which has made him famous all over the world. But once break beneath the surface, and you will find Mr. Marconi a keen and clever talker. He has a wonderful gift of expression, with that cold eloquence that convinces rather than persuades. And yet some of our hardest-headed men have been both convinced and persuaded after a talk with Mr. Marconi.

THE ONLY TEA on the continent that is imitated

"SALADA"

CEYLON TEA. Its leadership is recognized. Black, Mixed or Natural Green. Sold only in sealed lead packets. By all Grocers.

That deadly implement, the hatpin of modern times, is a descendant of an equally formidable toilet article used by Roman women. The Aspasias and Julias and Claudias who decked themselves a couple of thousand years or more ago, to the undoing of the particular Balbus or Marcus they desired to fascinate, wore bone hairpins of prodigious length. Yet, like the women of this present time, they seem to have experienced the same difficulty in keeping them in place. This fact came to light during excavations at Silchester, near Reading, England, a hundred or so of these bone hairpins being found in the Roman bath, collected maybe by the bath attendant, to prove all these centuries later that there is nothing new under the sun and that in all ages the same little foibles have been possessed by women.

The Dragon Fly's Eggs.

Any one who has watched a dragon fly flitting about the surface of small, reedy ponds or near the shores of large ones during the summer and early fall months has noticed its frequent dipping of the extremity of its long body in the water as it skims along. The dragon fly thus engaged is always the female, and every time she dips her body in the water she deposits an egg. The specific gravity of the egg is such that it sinks to the bottom among the weeds.

BLAIR'S GOUT AND RHEUMATIC PILLS

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY.

"Newton Abbot, Devon. Dear Sirs—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effect of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

"For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout and life had lost its attraction owing to the uncertainty of health and sudden visitations of the enemy which prostrated me for months, or weeks according to the virulence of the attacks.

"Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

"For the last twenty months I have been comparatively free, as one or two attempted visitations have been immediately stamped out by the assistance of Blair's Pills.

CANADIAN NEWS.

The Latest Happenings In The Dominion.

CANADA AT ST. LOUIS.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Darby returned to Winnipeg a few days ago from the World's Fair at St. Louis and other places of interest in the United States. Mr. Darby states that he was not only pleased but greatly impressed by the fact that what Canada has done at the St. Louis exhibition has been done remarkably well. The Dominion exhibit is not only proving a special attraction for visitors, but is being talked about in most favorable terms on trains and in other cities miles away from St. Louis. Canadians who visit the fair, Mr. Darby says, have every reason to be proud of their country by reason of the manner in which it is reperesented by the various exhibits collected and arranged by the Dominment. It excels in all departments, and the management is faultless. The staff of officials are intelligent, obliging and courteous, so much so that the Canadian section is the Mecca for thousands of visitors from all parts of America every day. The Canadian metallorgical exhibit is one of the most unique on the grounds. The interior of the building is constructed of different kinds of mineral quartz found in Canada, each piece varying in size and shape, the effect being very striking. There is a plate glass front with glass shelves behind, on which are arranged dozens of small glass dishes filled with gold dust and nuggets aggregating in value $50,000. When the section is illuminated the effect is dazzling and the display well deserves the attention bestowed upon it by visitors.

SHUNTED OFF AND KILLED.

On Sunday afternoon at Fort William, August Duprau, an employee at elevator "D," was killed by falling off a grain car, one of the wheels of which ran over his breast. Duprau's work was with the gang which shovels the grain out of the cars, and when the cars are being shunted into the elevator, some of the men are on top of the cars to set the brakes. It was while on top of one of the cars that Duprau fell off, thrown by the sudden jar caused by a shunt being made. He was only 18 years of age and had only been at the work at the elevator a short time. Word was sent to his father, who is in the employ of the boarding car department of Richard Smith at McLeod, B. C.

C. P. R. ROBBERS LOCATED.

C. P. R. and Pinkerton detectives expect at any moment to have in irons the men who held up the train near Silverdale a couple of months ago and for whom search has been made ever since, says a despatch from Vancouver. The theory is that the men are on Vancouver Island, and that they came from Ladysmith in a motor launch to the Fraser river to rob the Imperial Limited. After committing the crime they used the stolen boat to turn the police off the scent, and then returned home in the launch. Spurred on by the $12,000 reward standing in the name of the Government and the C. P. R., the detectives have kept hard at work, and expect in a few hours to have the quartette rounded up.

MUST GET OUT OF THIS COUNTRY.

The party of twenty Russian immigrants, headed by John Mitchell, who arrived at Montreal a few days ago by the Allan liner Ionian, and were refused admittance to the United States, are now making a fight to remain in Canada, but the health authorities are determined to deport them. Eminent legal counsel has been engaged on both sides. The authorities have allowed two of the mothers and eight children of the party freedom of the city on payment of a $1,000 cash security, which was put up by a lady from Boston.

GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER.

A despatch from Port Arthur says: Peccelo, the Italian who shot and killed his fellow-countryman, Mezzo, at Fort William road in June, was tried at assizes Wednesday. The evidence showed that Mezzo had robbed him of a sum of money under threat of shooting. A struggle ensued, in which Peccelo secured possession of a revolver after being shot in the hand. He turned the revolver on Mezzo and shot him dead. The jury was out for about three hours and returned a verdict of manslaughter.

ALL MARRIAGES PUBLIC.

At a meeting of the Anglican synod of New Westminstes, held at Vancouver a few days ago, it was decided that henceforth no marriages should be solemnized in private residences, save under the special permission from the bishop. The sentiment of the clergymen was unanimously in favor of this provision, and when the canons were not amended the synod adopted the arrangement as an unwritten law, to be observed henceforth.

WOMAN IN THE WHIRLPOOL.

A despatch from Niagara Falls on the 26th says: The body which has been floating in the whirlpool for several days has been secured. It is the body of a woman, nude, except for shoes and stockings and a bit of ribbon about her throat. Identification is not possible. Officer Kelly of the Ontario police also took the body of an infant from the river at Old Maid of the Mist landing. Both bodies are at the morgue on the Canadian side.

WORRY OVER LAW SUIT CAUSES SUICIDE.

Mrs. Sarah Jane Hawes, aged 46, 167 Bay street, Toronto, died Tuesday morning as a result of a dose of "rough on rats" taken the morning before in a fit of despondency. Behind the rash act is a long story of a fight for a $2,500 legacy, which was carried on in the courts, and worry over which is said to have been the cause of leading Mrs. Hawes to end it all.

FOUND DEAD IN HIS LAUNCH.

A despatch from Westbourne, Man., Oct. 23, says: Our usually quiet village was thrown into a state of consternation early this morning when it became known that Mr John Gowan, one of our oldest and most prominent residents, who had gone out last evening with his daughter, a child of about seven years of age, for a sail on the river in his steam launch, had not returned. Search was made immediately, and the launch was found about one mile down the river, where it had run on a submerged log, and Mr. Gowan lying in the boat dead, and his little child sitting beside the body of her father, nearly perished from exposure to the bitterly cold night. There the poor little child had sat during the long, cold night, thinking her father had fallen asleep. Dr. Armstrong, of Gladstone, and Coroner Cory were were immediately summoned. Meantime the body was removed from the boat., when it was found that death had evidently been caused by the accidental discharge of a revolver in the deceased's own hand, the bullet entering the right groin and severing the femoral artery. It is supposed that the deceased had drawn the weapon with the intention of using it, when the concussion caused by the boat striking the log caused him to stumble, this discharging it, and inflicting the fatal wound. Mr. Gowan leaves a widow and eight young children, who have the sympathy of the community in their terribly sad bereavement.

GORED BY A BULL AT PORTAGE CREEK.

John Wicnall, an aged farmer residing at Portage Creek, was gored by a vicious bull on Sunday and probably fatally injured. He was passing through the enclosure where the animal was tethering when it attacked him, knocking him down and trampling and goring him. Five or six of his ribs were broken. Mrs. Wicnall was a spectator of the horrible scene, and pluckily went to her husband's rescue with a spade. The bull then turned upon her and injured her severely before one of the neighbors, who also observed what was occurring, could rush to the assistance of Mr. and Mrs. Wicnall. He had wisely armed himself with a gun, and shot the infuriated animal, wounding it so severely as to cripple it. Dr. Gordon Bell, of Winnipeg, who happened to be in the neighborhood on a shooting expedition, was summoned and rendered prompt surgical treatment to Mr. and Mrs. Wicnall. However, but slight hopes are entertained for the recovery of the former, who is 70 years of age.

DRUMMOND PLEADED GUILTY.

J. F. Drummond, an employee of the Manitoba Mortgage and Investment Company, who was accused of embezzling $5,480 from his employers, was brought back from England on the 21st by Mr Mr. E. J. Elliott, chief of the provincial police. The following day at the court house in Winnipeg he appeared before Magistrate McMicken, when he pleaded guilty to the charge and was remanded for sentence. Drummond was accountant in the office of the Manitoba Mortgage and Investment Company and appropriated large sums of money, which he spent in fast living. Last summer he left on a pleasure trip to England, and it was then that his defalcations were discovered. On his arrival in England he was held in custody until the arrival of Chief Elliott three weeks ago. The prisoner is only 21 years of age. He has since been sentenced to serve three years in Stony Mountain penitentiary.

BAPTIST CONVENTION.

A telegram from Toronto on the 22nd says: The Baptist convention for Ontario discussed the state of religion, Bible stewardship, temperance and the relations of the Church and State to-day, and closed with an evening meeting, when Sunday schools and young people's work were the topics. Reports presented this morning showed that 27 ministers had removed or died during the year, 13 were ordained and 4 came in from abroad, leaving a net loss of 10, which is considered a very serious matter. Churches' receipts for all purposes totalled $149,000, an increase of $29,000.

COMPANY GRANTS DEMANDS OF MEN.

The difficulty between the machinists of the Dominion Iron & Steel company and the management, at Sydney, with respect to the substitution of unskilled labor for experienced machinists in the company's shops, has been settled, the management granting the men's demands. Hereafter unskilled labor in the machine shops will be employed as helpers only. The men have all returned to work.

ONTARIO DEATH RATE.

The report of the provincial health officers of Ontario for September shows a large decrease in the number of cases and deaths from diphtheria, there being a decrease of 32 per cent. in the cases, and of 36.6 per cent. in deaths. Typhoid fever, however, has increased. Deaths reported from all causes totalled 1,967, in a population of 2,012,114, or 11.6 per thousand. A year ago it was 11.7.

MYSTERIOUS SHOOTING.

John Pidgeon, of Chatham township, Ont., was accidentally shot while duck shooting at Bear Creek, Wednesday. His companion was Simon Thibodeau. The latter had just shot at a duck, and on turning around was horrified to find his friend lying on the ground shot in the breast. Death came almost instantly.

THE MARKET REPORT

Winnipeg, Oct. 22.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

FLOUR—Millers report a good demand for flour. Not only is their local trade good, but the shipping movement is also active. Prices are very firm. Reports from Minneapolis to-day say that flour is up there and this has strengthened the Winnipeg market. Best Hungarian patents are selling to-day at $2.90 per sack of 98lbs.; seconds at $2.70 and strong bakers at $2.10 to $2.40, according to make; XXXX is worth $1.50. All prices given are subject to usual trade discount.

MILLFEED—We quote: Bran, $1 per ton in bulk, delivered to the trade; shorts, $19 per ton.

GROUND FEED—The market is steady. We quote: Oat chop, $26 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley chop, $20.50; mixed barley and oats, $25; oil cake, $27 per ton.

OATS—There is a good demand for all offerings. Best grades seem to be scarce, but as buyers are of the opinion that they will be more plentiful they are not offering over 32 ½c. per bushel for No. 2 oats to-day and 2c. less for No. 3. Feed grades are worth about 30c. These prices are all for carlots on track here.

BARLEY—No. 3 barley is worth 37c. per bushel; No. 4, 35c., and feed grade 34c. on track, Winnipeg.

FLAXSEED—There has been very little movement bs yet and the market is quiet.

SPELTZ—A few cars have been offered this week and have sold at 35c per bushel on track.

HAY—Receipts are light. We quote: Baled hay, new, in carlots on track here, $8 to $9 per ton. Loose hay farmer's loads, $8 to $9 per ton.

VEGETABLES—Potatoes are firmer and about 5c higher for farmers' loads. Green tomatoes are out. We quote: Potatoes, farmers' loads, 45c per bushel; cabbage, $15 per ton; Swede turnips, 20c per bushel; parsley, 25c per dozen; onions, 1¾c per pound; pickling onions, 3c per crate; carrots, 40c per bushel: parsnips, 1¼c per lb.; cauliflower, 75c to 90c per dozen; beets, 40c per bushel; celery, 30c per dozen; Ontario tomatoes, 60c per basket; vegetable marrows, 60c per dozen; pumpkins, 1c per lb.; hubbard squash, 1½c per lb.

DRESSED MEATS—We quote: Beef, 5½c to 5¾c per lb. for city dressed; ½c less for country; veal, 7c for choice weights; mutton, 8c; spring lambs, 10c per lb; hogs, 8¼c, delivered to the trade here.

POULTRY—The market is steady. We quote: Fowl, live weight, 9c per lb.; spring chickens, 11c per lb. live weight.

CHEESE — Most of the Manitoba make is now rounded up. Buyers paid 9c this week for choice makes f.o.b. factory print.

BUTTER — Creamery — We quote 18½c to 19½c f.o.b. factory, being about the prevailing figure paid by local jobbers for assorted boxes.

BUTTER—Dairy—Receipts of fresh made dairy are light and there is not much movement in the market. We quote prices at Winnipeg as follows: No. 1, 14c; No. 2, 9c to 10c; pound bricks, 18c. Price for round lots, Winnipeg, is 12½c, and from 1c to 2c more for special selected shipments by express.

HIDES—Prices remain unchanged. We quote' Abattoir hides, 7c for No. 1's, 6c for No. 2's. Country cured butchers at 6½c for No. 1 grade; lambs, 30c to 40c and shearlings, 30c to 40c.

TALLOW—The market is steady. No. 1 tallow is worth 3¾c to 4c per lb., delivered at Winnipeg; No. 2, 3c.

SENECA ROOT—Receipts are moderate and the market remains at about last week's figure. Clean, dry root is worth 58c per pound deliver- in Winnipeg.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—The market for butchers' cattle is steady and unchanged. Exporters are moving well. Export stock is worth $3 to $3.25, Winnipeg, weighed at point of shipment. We quote $2.75 off cars here for choice butchers down to $2 for inferior grades.

SHEEP—Market steady. We quote $3.25 per cwt. Winnipeg.

HOGS — Supplies are scarce and prices continue steady. In fact Ontario stock is being imported. We quote 5¾c per lb. selected weights.

Friday, October 21, 1904.

WHEAT: The market has been generally strong during the course of the past week, but the outstanding feature to the world's wheat situation has been strongly exhibited, viz., the local or domestic strength of the American markets and the almost complete indifference of the European importer to the advances made on this side. On some days sharp advances have taken place in the American markets and these have been quite ignored in the European markets, which next day would show lower quotations in face of the previous day's advance in America. The ability of Europe to thus ignore the American market is something entirely new in recent times. One does not, however, require to search far for the causes. Perhaps the principal cause is the large crops produced in Argentina, Australia and India during the last season, enabling them to supply Europe during the last eight months with unprecedented quantities of wheat. The next principal cause has been a succession of three large crops in Russia, and the willingness or necessity of that country selling apparently all it could ship away. There is no doubt that the aggregate yield of European crops for 1904 is considerably smaller than last year, but the quality being better and the prices higher it has been more freely sold by farmers in the early part of the season. This and the large supplies from other countries have kept the European situation easy in face of a very strong situation in America. On the first inst., the stocks in sight available for Europe were 17,000,000 bushels larger than a year ago, while the stocks in sight available in America were 1,000,000 bushels less than a year ago. Besides the large increase in stocks in Europe and afloat for Europe, there is the present prospect of another large crop in Argentina, a fairly good crop in Australia, and favorable prospects for the seeding of larger acreage in India and Europe. At present Europe is receiving from America and Canada a little over a million bushels in wheat and flour per week. Should American prices advance further this quantity may be lessened or cut off altogether, and later on if Europe has to come to America for wheat European prices would have to advance. In the meantime there are two sides to the wheat question, and it merits careful and deliberate study. The visible supply increased last week 2,622,000 bushels, against an increase of 3,221,000 bushels the previous week and an increase of 1,429,- bushels last year and the total visible showed an increase over previously corresponding weeks for the first time in several years. The world's shipments were 11,386,000 bushels, against 10,616,000 bushels the previous week and 10,538,000 bushels last year. The world's visible supply, according to Bradstreet's, increased 7,100,000 bushels, against an increase of 9,897,000 bushels the previous week and an increase of 4,- 193,000 bushels last year.

Manitoba wheat has been fairly steady and firm. Cash trade has been slow, but trade for future delivery on the option market has been active. The Northwest Grain Dealers' Association issued a report yesterday estimating the crop in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories at fully 59,000,000 bushels. The movement of wheat by rail to the lake ports is now on a fairly large scale, and stocks are accumulating at Fort William and Port Arthur. Exporters are doing little or nothing as our prices are still somewhat above an export basis. Farmers are not selling freely but incline to hold in hope of higher prices. At the close of business to-day values are 1 Northern, 98½c.; 2 Nor., 95½c.; 3 Nor., 90½c.; No. 4 wheat, 82½.: No. 5 wheat, 65½c.; feed wheat, 55½c., spot or past Winnipeg, and on the option market October closed 98½c.; November, 97½c.; December, 95⅞c.; May, $1.00½; all prices are for in store Fort William and Port Arthur.

Husband's Awful Crime

A Winnipeg exchange, bearing the date of Oct. 19, contains the following: At 4 o'clock this morning the city police received a telephone message that a foul murder had been committed in a house on Nena street, between Alexander and Logan avenues. The message was a very confused one, and the patrol sergeant and a policeman were immediately rushed to the scene. A reporter called up W. A. Blair, night clerk in the store of F. W. Colclough & Co., who kindly gave the following brief particulars: The man, R. W. Taylor, was sitting in the kitchen of his house, 256 Nena street, in an apparently sulky mood, and his wife was lying on the lounge in the sitting room. They had apparently been quarrelling all night, as about 3 in the morning he suddenly arose and went in the adjoining room and spoke to his wife. She did not answer him, probably being asleep. He quietly withdrew, and, going to the woodshed, brought in the axe and struck the woman on the head in a blind fit of anger, killing her almost instantly. He was neither crazy nor drunk, but simply beside himself with rage, although it is said that he had been drinking the day before. The noise of the awful tragedy going on in the room beneath them woke up his children, three girls, aged respectively 16, 14 and 10, who came down stairs, and according to a neighbor's evidence, he would have slaughtered them too, but that they fled screaming from the house to the drug store in question, arousing Mr. Blair, who promptly telephoned for the police and Dr. Dorman of 561 Logan avenue. Both were quickly on the scene of this shocking murder, but of course the woman was a corpse within a few minutes after the fatal blow. After he had driven out the children he went upstairs and woke up the half-dozen boarders for whom the poor murdered woman had been keeping house, in her frantic attempts to pay expenses, as her husband had been ill and out of work for some time. The men immediately secured the inhuman brute, and he was arrested on the arrival of the police. Dr. M. S. Inglis, the coroner, was shortly afterward on the scene and viewed the body, and the murderer was taken to the police station.

The following appeared in a Winnipeg paper the following day: A verdict of wilful murder against Robert William Taylor, who split open the head of his wife, Winnifred Taylor, with an axe, yesterday morning, was returned last night by the coroner's jury after an adjournment of but a few minutes, and the prisoner will have to stand his trial under that charge at the fall assizes, which open in Winnipeg on November 5. Sensational as was the evidence, nothing further than what has already been reported was brought to light. The following is the verdict: "On Oct. 26, 1904, at Winnipeg, in the County of Selkirk, Robert William Taylor did feloniously, wilfully and of his aforethought, kill and murder one, Winnifred Taylor, against the peace of our Lord the King, his crown and dignity."

C. P. R. TRAFFIC RECEIPTS.

The C. P. R. traffic receipts for the week ending Oct. 21 were $1,106,-000. For the same week last year 1,109,000.

GENERAL GLEANINGS

BIG INCREASE IN ELEVATOR CAPACITY.

The Trade and Commerce Department at Ottawa has received from the chief inspector of the Manitoba grain inspection district a comparative statement showing the number of licensed elevators and warehouses, with the capacity of each, in his district, for the years 1902-3 and 1903-4. In the former years there were 822 elevators and warehouses, with a total capacity of 30,356,440 bushels. In the latter years there were 982 elevators and warehouses, with a capacity of 41,186,000 bushels. The elevators increased by 178 and the warehouses decreased by 18. There was a gain in capacity of 10,-829,560 bushels. In Manitoba the Canadian Northern last year had 37 more elevators than it had the year before and seven less warehouses. The elevators of both the railways in question at Ontario terminals remain the same, viz., 5 C. P. R., 1 Canadian Northern.

WESTERN WHEAT FOR MINNEAPOLIS.

A despatch from Minneapolis says that the "B" mill of the Washburn-Crosby company will be bonded to grind Canadian wheat, application having been made to the United States treasury department. John Washburn made this statement a few days ago in an interview. The company has bought one million bushels of wheat, and will buy more. This is the second experiment of Minneapolis millers in grinding Canadian wheat, the Washburn-Crosby company having tried it about a year ago. The plan has its origin in the scarcity of good milling wheat in this country, and has been discussed among the Minneapolis millers for some time.

MINE INSPECTOR'S REPORT.

Inspector W. E. H. Carter, of the Bureau of Mines, Ontario, has reported that the Sunbeam gold mine A. L., No. 282, on the Canadian Northern, west of Port Arthur, is in active operation, and that the directors recently took away two gold bricks, each worth $3,000. On adjoining property, the A. L., 200, considerable preliminary work has been done. At Sleepy Rock Lake, Mackenzie, Mann & Co. are using a diamond drill on the iron pyrites property; at Look Lake, east of Port Arthur, Wiley & Co., Flaherty and Knowles and R. McConnell are working on the hematite proportions.

COUNTERFEITERS ARRESTED.

United States secret service men arrested in New York the other night five alleged counterfeiters of Austro-Hungarian 20-kroner bank notes, and seized the counterfeiting plant. The names of the prisoners are Louis Glatt, Simon Goldfisher, Barnet Bleir, Meyer H. Klein and Nathan Grubert. The plant for the manufacture of the notes was in Union avenue, the Bronx, in a house in which were found two printing presses, six copper plates for notes, three lithographing stones, 1,500 notes printed on one side only, 500 paper blanks for other notes, and paper sufficient to print $30,000 worth of spurious notes.

ALLAN LINE PRISONERS.

About a score of people, comprising two families are nominally prisoners on board the Allan liner Ionian. They were destined for the United States, and it is claimed met all the requirements of the immigration laws of that country. Alex. Mitchell, head of one of the families, is a naturalized citizen of the United States. The father of the other family is deaf. It is claimed that the detention by the agents of a foreign government is a violation of the law.

B. C. HERRING INDUSTRY.

J. M. Cowie, the Scottish expert, left on Wednesday for British Columbia to inquire into the herring industry on the Pacific coast, says a despatch from Ottawa. For the past three years herrings have been plentiful on the coast of Vancouver Island. So far there has been no herring fishing on the Pacific coast. Mr. Cowie goes to report on the industry. In Nova Scotia he raised the price from $2.50 to $3 per barrel.

WITHOUT LIGHT FOR WINTER.

A London cablegram quotes the Londan Times' insurance correspondent as saying: "The steamer Canton, chartered to take oil, etc., to Nicholaviesk, at the mouth of the Amur river, has been unable to reach her destination owing to ice. In consequence of the failure of the Canton to deliver her cargo the unfortunate inhabitants of Nicholaviesk will be without light during the Siberian winter."

TREATY OF PEACE SIGNED.

A definite treaty of peace between Chile and Bolivia was signed a few days ago, says a cablegram from Santiago, Chile. The German Emperor is appointed arbiter in case of difficulty. Bolivia renounces all rights to a port on the Pacific, and Chile guarantees the construction of a railroad between La Paz, Bolivia, and the Chilean port of Africa.

TO REVISE RUSSIAN PEACE LAWS.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says that Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky, the new minister of the interior, has invited all classes, and especially the Zemstvos and peasants, to choose representatives to sit with the committee which is considering a revision of the peasant laws.

ANOTHER WOMAN SUICIDES.

Mrs. Annie Feitch, a widow of Peterboro, Ont., about forty years of age, committed suicide Tuesday night by taking Paris green.

FINE YIELDS IN SPRINGFIELD.

A despatch from Old Bank, Man., says that threshing is not yet completed, but returns are in many instances better than expected. Numerous yields of wheat are reported of 40 bushels and over to the acre, and of good quality.

It is current talk in well informed shipping circles, says a despatch from Tacoma, Wash., that negotiations are on between the Russian Government and Alfred Holt & Co., of Liverpool, for the purchase of the steamer Calchas, which the Russians captured on the way to Japan and took as a prize to Vladivostock. It is understood that the purchase price is three-quarters of a million dollars, which will be ample to cover all the damage incurred in the seizure of the vessel.

STEALS THE MONEY AND FAKES THIEVES.

After investigating for a month, a grand jury of Pomeroy, Ohio, indicted County Treasurer Thomas J. Chase, charging the embezzlement of $14,500 from the Meigs County treasury on Sept. 9, when he said the treasury was looted in daylight by two masked robbers, who locked him in a vault. Chase's bond was fixed at $10,000. He was sent to jail. Indictments are expected in a jail. Indictments are expected in a few days against other persons. Chase was found locked up on Sept. 9, by his daughter, who rushed to a bank and thence to the fair grounds for some one who could open the vault. It was shown to the grand jury that at least half a dozen men were sitting in front of the court house all the forenoon on Sept. 9, and that none of the men had seen any person pass down the steps.

War Summary

Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky's explanation of the attack of his squadron on British trawlers, while it is received with incredulity in Great Britain, probably has turned the current of diplomatic negotiations into a new channel. The British foreign office is in courtesy obliged to investigate the circumstances narrated by the Russian admiral. There are on the side stories of Russian ships firing upon vessels of several neutral nations and on the other of incidents tending to establish Admiral Rojestvensky's report that there were armed hostile vessels in the vicinity, at least, of the Hull fishing fleet. Pending developments the British admiralty is showing the utmost activity in bringing fleets within the course of the Russian squadron. The Russian ships at Vigo, Spain, it is promised, will depart as soon as necessary repairs are completed. France and Germany may be regarded as throwing the weight of their influence in the scale for a peaceful conclusion of the controversy.

A cablegram from London says: Notwithstanding the diplomatic check in consequence of Admiral Rojestvensky's report, it is evident that Great Britain is preparing for the possibility of war. Tremendous activity is reported from all dockyards where vessels under repair are being made ready for sea under urgent orders from the admiralty. At Cardiff securing great quantities of coal for Gibraltar, Portsmouth, Malta and other ports, paying high freights. The Mediterranean fleet is hastening in the direction of Gibraltar, and it is announced that the Channel squadron, with decks cleared has left Gibraltar, its alleged object being a "sham attack on the rock." The home fleet, likewise, is concentrating. In fact, almost the entire British navy is pointing in the direction of the Baltic fleet, a portion of which has sailed from Vigo.

RUSSIAN ADMIRAL'S STATEMENTS DOUBTED.

Another cablegram from London says: Admiral Rojestvensky's report seemed to stagger almost everyone. Its statements were met with incredulity and evidently the reply was regarded as merely an adroit counter in regard to get time. The text of the admiral's telegrams are calculated to inflame instead of allaying the sentiment of the British public. His statement that "he endeavored to spare the trawlers and ceased to fire as soon as the torpedo boats were out of sight," together with the virtual accusation of complicity with supposed Japanese torpedo boats against the fishermen is hardly likely to reconcile an angry nation to the possibility that there is another side to the case calling for investigation. The Daily Telegraph says: "If the admiral believes his own story all that can be said is that the sooner he returns home and is looked after the better it will be for himself, his family." The Standard editorially describes Rojestvensky's whole story as the creation of a disordered imagination, bearing its refutation on its face, and says: "For Russia to enter a controversy with England on the basis of such a tissue of misstatements can only lead to trouble."

GERMAN SHIP ATTACKED.

A despatch to the Lokalanzieger, dated Oct. 27, says: "The fishing vessel Sonnetag which arrived here today reported that it had been fired upon for two and a half hours off the Dogger Bank, but was not hit."

SWEDISH CRUISER FIRED ON.

The skipper of the Swedish steamer Alebaran, from Hull, England, which arrived on Friday at Gefle, Sweden, says his vessel was chased in the Skagerack during the evening of Friday, October 21, by a foreign cruiser, apparently Russian, which threw its searchlights on her. The cruiser, increasing her speed, passed the Aldebaran and fired a shot, which had no effect. The Aldebaran thereupon hoisted her flag and the cruiser again threw her searching light on the steamer and a few minutes later hailed shot around the Aldebaran's without, however, hitting her. The Aldebaran's skipper then ordered the steamer to be stopped and with his crew sought refuge below. The foreign warship thereupon disappeared in the darkness.

THE INSURANCE RATING

The new insurance rating for the city of Fernie has been issued by the Mainland Board of Underwriters. Generally speaking the rating seems high in view of the fact that so many fire-proof buildings have been erected. It is not possible that a large conflagration similar to that which swept the town on April 29th could again work such devastation in our midst. Under the old system each building in the business part of the town added to the risk of every other building in that area, but under the new system this is altered. A wooden building in the South end could scarcely be said to be a menace to the safety of a similar building three blocks to the north, with many fire proof buildings between. Yet in some cases we find the rates on this class of buildings materially higher than they were previously. The rating on the fire-proof buildings is also higher than was expected. The following is a synopsis of the ratings along Victoria Ave. Beginning at the Stork Opera House is 6.50 grading down to 5.50 at the Napanee corner. The Fernie Hotel is 5.25 and the fire-proof blocks down to the L. T. W. block grade from 2.85 (Quail's) to 4.25 (Senkbeil.) The Burns corner is 8.25 as are all the buildings down to the J. & F. which is 4.00. Across the street beginning at the Free Press corner a rate of 9 per cent has been levied holding good up to the new bank building which is 5.50.

The crop bulletin from Manitoba and the Territories states that over 75 per cent of the grain has been harvested. The crop in many cases exceeds an average yield of 20 bushels to the acre. A comparatively small amount appears to be No. 1 Hard but No 2 Northern is shown to be about the average.

A petition is being circulated among residents of the north end of the city asking the council to take steps towards having a ditch dug at once to drain the low lying district between the Free Press corner and the hospital. This is a matter which has long needed attention. The expenditure of a hundred dollars or so for a ditch will result in many times that amount of benefit to property, not to speak of public convenience, sanitation and other ways in which good drainage always helps out.

* * *

The other evening as a wedding ceremony was being performed the hideous charivari struck suddenly upon the gathering. This has occurred before in Fernie but on this occasion an officer of the law was one of the wedding party and he made short work of the boys' plans. We understand that the police are determined to put an end to the barbaric practice. The charivari was originally instituted as a mark of scorn and insult and was inflicted only in rare cases. Gradually its use became more general and its application attained a more charitable and friendly meaning. Sometimes however in the present day its old barbaric use is vividly brought to light. It is made the occasion of indescribable torment with petty blackmail and extortion as its ultimate object. A group of hoodlums, some very young, and others surprisingly old if they were brought into the light and recognized, secure everything possible that will make a discordant noise, which they hammer and pound like maniacs until the groom bribes them off with money which is always spent foolishly, and sometimes in debauchery. Let us hope the curfew bell will toll the death knell of the charivari in the city of Fernie.

MARRIAGE BELLS

RUTLEDGE-SMITH

A very pretty wedding was consummated on Wednesday evening, Nov. 2nd, at the residence of Mr. C. J. Tuttle, Howland Ave. The contracting parties were Mr. Edwin Rutledge and Mrs. Edith M. Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tuttle. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Robson, B. A. under a beautiful arch of evergreens neatly erected on one side of the drawing room. The groom was supported by Mr. A. T. Claxton and Miss Bessie Tuttle, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. It was a pretty scene, the bride wearing a beautiful gown of white silk and the bridesmaid being dressed in pink. After the ceremony a goodly company sat down to a bountiful dinner provided by Mrs. Tuttle. The many and beautiful presents attested the high esteem in which the young couple are held. Mr. and Mrs. Rutledge have taken up their residence in their own home, recently vacated by Dr, Higgins.

TEACHERS WILL CONVENE

S. E. Kootenay School Teachers will have a Convention of Their Own.

The school teachers of South East Kootenay will convene at Cranbrook on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week for the purpose of organizing an Association of their own. Principal Pedlar has worked hard to bring this about and when at the Coast he secured the hearty support of the Supt. of Education. Inspector Wilson will be present at the convention and probably Supt. Robinson also.

The Fernie teachers will all be present and the school will be closed for the entire week. An exhibition of work will be sent from the pupils of the Fernie school.

Fire swept away half the business portion of Ymir early on Tuesday morning loss estimated at $33,000 with insurance of $18,000. The fire broke out at 2 o'clock in a building 30 feet from the fire hall. The hose nozzles were missing and half an hour was consumed in finding them. It is rumored that this was a result of a halloween prank.

C. W. Hamilton this week opened up his gents' furnishing business in the larger store room of the Hotel Fernie block. Everything about the store bears evidence of newness and neatness. Mr. Hamilton's stock has not all arrived, but all the lines already here are tastefully arranged on shelves and in cases. This promises to be one of Fernie's lightest and best kept stores.

On Tuesday at about noon smoke was seen issuing from the Park House and the alarm of fire was at once given. The brigade were quickly on the spot with the engine before it was learned that the big house was not on fire. It appears that the Chinaman who lighted the furnace did not know how to regulate the drafts and that as a result it smoked badly filling the whole house and causing the alarm to be given.

MASTER and SLAVE

"If you have correctly stated the case, monsieur, how can I save the poor dear sufferer?" Estelle asked, terrified.

"Will you, if you can?" demanded Evariste.

"You need not ask that question," she replied.

"Then it rests with you, Estelle. Be my wife and redeem your grandfather," said he, fiercely springing the trap.

"Evariste!" she whispered, starting to her feet as if in fright.

He also rose and advanced toward her, but was checked by a repelling gesture.

"Yes, be my wife," he exclaimed hotly. "Estelle, it has been the dream of my life from boyhood. I have loved you with every breath I drew since long ago we met at Father Grhe's table on the day of the races. My love and hope of winning you have sustained me through trials, indignities and injustices. I remained a civilian throughout the war and endured the contempt which is the coward's lot to be near you and protect you. I loved you in silence, for I was poor. But now, Estelle, I have ample fortune. Peace has come; life begins. Be my wife, and my whole existence shall be devoted to your happiness. Share my fortune; be mistress of my estate as well as of my heart. Give me the husband's right to guard your interests, and my joy will be to put away the burdens from your inheritance, lift the crushing load from your grandfather's shoulders and give to his declining years the boon of calm and ease. We will take him to our home, and I will vie with you in affectionate, venerating care for his tranquillity and comfort. I can control the debts that bear him down, and I can command Quillebert. Consent, Estelle, and I promise that within a month after our wedding day the debts shall pass into your hands and Quillebert shall pass to France. Do not refuse, Estelle," he cried frantically, observing she was about to speak. "Take time to reflect. Answer me another day."

"I need no time for reflection. My answer is ready now and must be delivered. What you ask can never be." She spoke gently and firmly, but her voice was not wholly free of resentment.

"Not to save your grandfather from poverty and disgrace?" he said, his face darkening with anger and malice.

She staggered, but answered resolutely:

"No!"

"And yet you said you would die to give him peace and health."

"And so I would, but I did not say I would commit sacrilege."

"What do you mean?"

"I prefer not to explain."

He eyed her suspiciously.

"You have not taken a nun's vows?"

"I wished to do so, but Father Grhe would not give his sanction. He instructed me that I would best serve God through my duty to my grandfather."

"And by dooming him to shameful beggary you perform that duty?" he sneered.

"The duty must be a sinless one. Rather than profit by a sinful service my grandfather would cheerfully lay his hand in mine and walk forth from this house forever homeless, beg from door to door and sleep under the trees." So serene and self trusting did she appear as she spoke and looked away to the green forest that Evariste felt himself dwindle before her.

"Have I asked of you a sinful deed?" he demanded.

"Yes. A loveless wife is a sinning woman. I could not give you my love with my hand. I have no love to give."

"You were not always loveless. Why now?"

"My love is dead," she moaned piteously, no longer able to restrain her emotion, and hid her face against the mantel.

"I understand," he said tauntingly, "and lies buried under the apple trees in Kentucky."

She turned upon him a withering look of mingled contempt and indignation. "Wretched man," she cried, "how can you speak such ruffian words of the noble dead? Can you not see him hide his head from the shades of his comrade heroes, humiliated by the perfidy of the brother whom his love and generosity strove in vain to make a gentleman? Oh, unhappy ingrate, spare from your desecrating hatred that sacred spot where sleeps your benefactor, whose narrow bed beneath the sod shines with a light the black darkness of your heart will never know."

"Then you do not deny that your love lies dead in that same hallowed grave?" persisted Evariste, writhing under the denunciation. "And you seek to play against me Horace dead as you did Horace living."

"Monsieur," she cried, do you dare"—

"Yes," he interrupted insolently, "I dare anything now. You have made me desperate. I decline to accept this answer as final. I will come this day next week for another. Dare! Yes, I will dare to come again, and I will dare meanwhile to make such provision that you will not then dare say me no again."

"Do not return."

"I will."

"It will be useless."

"We shall see."

"I will not receive you."

"You shall."

Blind with rage, he dashed furiously up the bayou road and across the swamp to Dede's cabaret to inform waiting Quillebert of his rebuff.

Estelle flew to her priedieu and fell upon her knees. In anguish she prayed for strength to bear her through the approaching ordeal. Rising, she stood a moment gazing into the sky of cloudless blue and murmured softly:

"Rest, my Horace. My love shall wake only with you. Remember the vow I made when they told me you were dead. That vow shall not be broken."

CHAPTER XVIII.

DURESS.

DESPITE the protest and entreaty of Estelle the feeble invalid responded to the summons of Quillebert to a meeting at the old cabaret. He dared not disobey, though the journey was made with pain of body and mental misgiving. He had vaguely connected Evariste's last visit to his house with impending catastrophe, for Estelle had since been more depressed, more reticent and even more tenderly solicitous in her watchfulness over him, but he feared to question and was left in ignorance of what had occurred. At the cabaret he was ushered by Dede into the familiar rear room, where Quillebert and Evariste awaited him at the baize covered table. Evariste was smoking a fragrant Cuban cigar. One glass and a bottle were before Quillebert, who was doggedly drunk. Latiolais was received with ominous coldness. No glass was offered him. He lacked courage to ask for one.

"Leonidas, settling day has come," said Quillebert, with brutal abruptness, terminating an embarrassing silence.

"What? How, Constant?" Latiolais asked, shaking as if with an ague.

"What? Your indebtedness to me. How? In money. Pay me the money."

"Now?"

"Yes, now. It is past due. You have had more time than I ever asked of a creditor."

"But the notice is so short, Constant"

"So is my time, Leonidas."

"My debt is large."

"I know that, to my sorrow."

"I have not the money."

"Get it."

"Within what time?"

"Thirty days."

"Impossible."

"Then the property must answer."

"Oh, Constant, my friend, spare me!" groaned the unhappy man.

"Leonidas, my very dear friend, I have not time. My other dear friends, Americans and Christians, are pressing upon me inducements to return to France which really I cannot resist. We are getting old, you and I. Just think of it, I am older than you! I may not live to come back to this paradise, and therefore my affairs here must be closed up just as if I meant not to come back. I really have not the time to spare you, Leonidas." Quillebert appeared to enjoy the pains of his victim as much as he did the rum, which he quaffed at shortening intervals, his insolence increasing with each potation.

"Are you serious, Constant, and will not pity for my grandchild move you?"

"I never was more serious in my life, and nothing but death can move me. At present, Leonidas, I enjoy perfect health."

"My God! My God! My poor Estelle must suffer want and hide her head in shame for my disgrace. And there is no escape, no hope!" The old man's head was lowered, and his shaking frame rocked to and fro.

"There is hope, there is escape," in emphatic tone said Evariste, whose silent presence had been forgotten by Latiolais in his distress.

"Where? By what means?" cried the latter, looking up with wonder and wistfulness in his haggard face.

"Estelle can save you," Evariste replied.

"Estelle? My Estelle? Explain, my dear young friend."

"Be calm, monsieur, and I will make my meaning plain to you." Evariste exemplified his advice, being as unperturbed in manner and free from excitement in speech as if he were discussing persons and affairs remote from his own interest. "In the course of business with Quillebert I have become possessed of a portion of your obligations—namely, some of your notes, your granddaughter's procuration to you to contract debts for the maintenance of her property and authorization to cancel her mortgage against you so as to give first rank to the security I hold. M. Quillebert has determined to leave this country very soon, and I appreciate the necessity for haste. There must be mutual accountings between him and me to adjust finally our joint ventures during the past four years, some of which have been quite heavy. As your notes and their securities held by us two are in the main concurrent, if he forecloses I shall be compelled to do likewise. I understand, of course, you have not the means of payment. The sale or surrender of your property and your granddaughter's must follow pressure. Now, I will purchase all your obligations which M. Quillebert has and deliver them, together with those which are in my hands, to you, making you a debtless, solvent man and reinstating your granddaughter's estate on one condition."

"And that is, monsieur?"

"That Estelle becomes my wife within a month. You now understand that Estelle, and she alone, can save you," Evariste concluded, as he had begun, speaking coldly, deliberately, precisely.

"You are a prince in generosity, my dear friend. I am overwhelmed by your munificence. You give me life, peace and health, and in return I can give you only an old man's thankfulness." Latiolais in a transport of gratitude rose and started to embrace Evariste, but in sheer weakness reeled and would have fallen to the floor had not the young man caught him and returned him to his chair.

"Collect yourself, monsieur. There is no occasion for demonstration," said he dryly. "Do you promise Estelle's consent?"

"Certainly I do," he replied, half weeping, half laughing. "She, dear child, will be honored and overjoyed, and she will be as grateful as I am. To save her grandfather and become the happy wife of the noble and great hearted M. Oakfell. Ha, ha, ha, ha! Oh, I promise, I promise her consent."

"Attend, monsieur. This is Wednesday. On Saturday next at 4 o'clock I will call on Mlle. Latiolais and ask her hand in marriage. Her answer will decide the matter we have discussed today."

"Will you not come in time to dine with us?" said Latiolais almost affectionately.

"No; that can await her answer," Evariste curtly replied.

"Never fear the answer, M. Evariste. It will be as you wish. Is all this agreeable to Constant?"

"It is. He wants his money; that is all. Eh, Quillebert?"

"Hone!" grunted the latter, waking from the torpor into which he had suffered the rum to sink him since he had been left out of the conversation.

"Then," said Latiolais, "let us drink to amity, peace and happiness for us three."

"No," Evariste objected; "you must not drink until this matter is concluded."

"I will do the needful drinking, Leonidas," said Quillebert, refilling his glass. "You make sure of Evariste's bride."

"Well, my kind friends, I must go to my grandchild. I am grateful and happy."

buggy, gave him the reins, started the horse homeward and stood in the doorway gazing after him and wondering by what miracle it was that he left the cabaret sober.

How long the buggy and patient horse had stood in the shade of a spreading umbrella china tree beside the home gate was not known. A passerby, receiving from the proverbially polite old man no acknowlegment of his salute, looked attentively into his face and discovered that Leonidas Latiolais was unconscious, though sitting erect on the buggy seat, holding the reins loosely in his hands. The household was alarmed, and he was tenderly lifted and conveyed to his chamber. The breathing was deep and regular, the limbs were warm and mobile, but a heavy sleep seemed to have settled upon him, from which he could not be awakened. Dr. Tougarre, the family physician, after vain experiments with black coffee, limited his treatment to such medication as would sustain the patient's strength and trusted to nature and perfect rest for the restoration of the mental faculties, strictly enjoining absolute quiet. Thus for days the stricken man lay mute and almost motionless, rousing only sufficiently to receive nutriment, and no word had escaped his lips when the day and hour arrived, so fateful to him and his ward, set by Evariste for the visit of weal or woe.

Nourishment.

A man is a very broad, omnivorous animal and needs a great variety of food, both mental and physical. No matter what element we omit in his bill of fare there is a corresponding loss, omission or weakness in his life. You cannot get a full, complete man on half a bill of fare. You cannot nourish his body and starve his soul and expect him to be symmetrical, well balanced, poised. Nor can you starve his body and nourish his soul and expect him to be a giant on the physical as well as on the spiritual plane.—Success.

THE GIFT OF SYMPATHY

GIVES BALM TO WOUNDED HEARTS AND CHEER TO THE SUCCESSFUL.

IT IS NOT GOOD TO BE ALONE

Christian Sympathy a Necessary Gospel Attribute—Influence For Good Is to Know That Your Fellows Are Wrapped Up in Your Life—We Are Not Independent Entities, But Joined in Bead of Bretherhood.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 23.—To give congratulation to the successful and sympathy with the sorrowing and the distressed is urged by the preacher in this sermon. The text is Romans xii., 15, "Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep."

Perpetual segregation, isolation, separation, seclusion, voluntary exile, were considered by many of the ancients as necessary adjuncts to the attainment of the highest earthly development of Christian perfection. Because Christ fasted and prayed in the wilderness for forty long days many disciples of old believed that to be like Christ they must continually live in a wilderness, wear sackcloth and ashes and do nothing but pray and starve and starve and pray. They tried to walk with God, to be like Enoch, by refusing to walk with their fellow men. They tried to live with Christ by sleeping on stone couches and shivering in damp cells and clothing themselves in coarse woolens, by trampling through snows with naked feet and by mumbling daily prayers with sepulchral countenances, while they refused to smile an encouragement to the little children playing in the street or to help carry a heavy pack under which a poor, tired peasant was staggering on his way to town. Hence the monasteries and the nunneries and the cloisters and the abbeys and the priories, which are only a few of the many names given to the ancient buildings within which the monks and nuns immured themselves for separation from sinful men, of whom they did not wish to be a part. But away back in the time of creation God said, "It is not good for man to be alone." And what God spake to Adam, our first ancestor, God is speaking to us now.

"Not good for man to be alone." Yes, we know it. We know it in spite of the fact that the cloister has segregated some good men from contact with the busy, anxious, sinful world. Thomas a Kempis was a hermit, a recluse. Thomas a Kempis was a good man. Within the gloomy walls of the Augustinian convent of Zwolle, in the dark recesses of an ascetic's cell, he wrote the wonderful pages of "De Imitatione Christi." But, though his book is a wonderful guide to Christly life, Thomas a Kempis' cell is a poor place in which a modern Christian could practice the gospel truth. By all odds the best place to translate the teachings of Thomas a Kempis is not in an ascetic's cell, but in God's sweet, pure, golden sunlight, among just such rough, horny-handed men as the fishermen with whom Jesus Christ associated. Human perfection is never best developed in the happy valley, where the young Prince of Abyssinia was secluded with his brothers and sisters and there separated from all the gruesome and repulsive sights which make life sad to those of tender heart, but it is best developed in a great, busy, smoky, rushing, crushing and forgetful metropolis like London, in which Samuel Johnson starved and growled and wrote his philosophical romance of "Rasselas," as James Boswell recorded, "that with the profits of it he might defray the expense of his mother's funeral and pay some little debts which she had left."

San Marco Convent of France is a poor nursery for spiritual life. There Fra Angelico has drawn the students of art to come and study his figures of Christ which he painted upon the cold walls nearly 600 years ago. But the best place to be a modern Fra Angelico and to paint Christ in the hearts of living men is to do as Paul did on his missionary tours. It is to do as Christ did when talking to men.

Christian sympathy is a necessary gospel attribute, in the first place because no human power on earth does so much to make a good man or even a bad man try to live better as to know that other lives are wrapped up in his life. "Sympathy," wrote the lexicographer, "is literally a fellowship with others in their various conditions of joy or grief." It is the power which a Christian man has of putting his hand through another's arm and saying: "Old fellow, you are not alone in this world. My interests are combined in your interests. When you are happy I am happy. When you are sad I am sad. When you live right I rejoice. When you sin I sorrow as much as if I had committed the sin. Therefore, O friend, you must be very careful how you live. In one sense you are exactly in the place of a locomotive engineer who has a long train of coaches attached to his engine's tender. If your true aim fails, then other lives besides your own must suffer on account of your weakness." When Christian sympathy speaks thus an average man will suddenly stop and say to himself: "What! Does any one care for me? Is my life an important factor in other lives? If this be true, I must be careful where my feet go, how I laugh, how I cry and what I do. My life is not an independent entity. My spilled blood will stain other garments besides my own. My heart beats must find their pulsations in many breasts instead of in only one breast. Therefore I shall beware how I ruin other lives as well as my own."

"What kind of soldiers are the most reckless?" was one day asked Lord Kitchener, the British general of the Boer war. Without any hesitation he answered: "Bachelor soldiers. Not that they are at heart braver, but when a man has a wife and children dependent upon him for daily bread he guards his life more carefully on their account and does not run into any useless dangers." Now, my friends, when a true father is careful not to run into physical dangers, fearing he may deprive his wife and children of their daily bread, is not a man by the same law of reasoning the more unwilling to run into spiritual dangers and temptations if he realizes that the joys of others, in a spiritual sense, are wrapped up in his own joys and that sorrows in other lives will be caused by his sins? In the crisis of life, when success is won by the man who casts everything into the scale, the married man hesitates because he is afraid to risk the future of his wife and children. But he overlooked the fact that his love for his family will keep him from running foolish risks. So when a man enlarges his circle and makes the welfare of others his concern he has an inspiration to a better, truer, nobler life. He shrinks from wrong-doing because he knows that he will injure others by his example. The ascetic has only himself to consider, but the man who has entered into other men's joys and sorrows knows that his fall or his good life may affect the lives of others.

But how is Christian sympathy to enter truly into the existence of another's life? First, my text says, "Rejoice with them that do rejoice." Do you know what that means? Why, the interpretation is simple enough to understand. It means when you see an old school friend getting ahead in life, when you see a brother succeeding at the law or in medicine or in the pulpit, when you see a sister living in a finer house than yours or driving in a carriage while you walk, or when you know that your brother-in-law is able to take his family and children to the country to get back the flush of health to their pale cheeks, while you cannot afford to go, that you must not be jealous of their successes. If you are a minister and you hear of another church holding a great revival and gathering in new converts by the scores, you are to go to the minister of that church with a warm, loving gospel handshake and say: "Brother, I congratulate you! We are praying for you and the great good you are doing. May God bless your new members and make them mighty agents for Christ!" It means that if you are a candidate for some office and another is elected to the presidency of that society in your stead then you are to pitch in and work just as hard for the successful outcome of your successful rival's administration as you would have worked for your own, and, furthermore, not only work just as hard for the new man, but be just as happy in his successes as you would have been in your own successes.

"Oh," says some one, with a quick gasp, "I did not know this text meant as much as that. That is pretty bitter medicine for an average disciple to swallow." Yes, my friend, you are right. It is not natural for a sinful man to "rejoice with those that do rejoice." But the gospel of Jesus Christ can make what is unnatural for sinful man natural for a redeemed man. "The hardest act of life is to get any man to be willing to completely sink his individuality in a cause," once wrote General Samuel Armstrong, the founder and first principal of the Hampton Institute. "It is comparatively easy to get rich men to endow a scholarship or to erect a building or to do this or that for which their names will be known far and wide, yet it is almost impossible to get any man to give his money to help out the ordinary running expenses of a college, which have to be met and must be met right away." Difficult, is it, to rejoice with a man when he rejoices and to help on his success? Yes, but I believe the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ is even able to accomplish that wonder, and it can accomplish it, O man, in your heart, so that you can go to your successful brother and say: "Brother, give me thy hand. I rejoice with you in your success. How can I help that success to become greater?"

If a brother needs your help in time of success, does he not also need you all the more "to weep with him when he weeps?" Does he not need you to come to his sympathetic aid when all the world seems black and when it truly seems, on account of his wrongdoings, that he can never become a noble man again? Does he not need your help when, floundering in the quicksands of sin, he seems to be deserted by God and man alike and to be only the sport and plaything of devils? And does he not also need your help when, in the awful hours of black temptation, he is about to yield as well as in the black hours of remose after he has done wrong?

If a man who has done wrong or is about to do wrong needs your help, how much more does a woman in her hours of trial? I always had a great deal of sympathy for the prayer of that woman who said, "O God, keep me from going over the precipice of sin, for if my feet ever leave the path of virtue even thou canst not bring me back to the straight path again." And yet how many women there are to-day being torn and lacerated by the thickets of sin who could be brought back to live honest, pure, true, respectable lives if only the Christian men and the women in the name of Christ would go forth to bring them back! The beginning of my text opens amid the shouts and gay laughter of the merrymakers. It closes with the sobs and moans and the groans of breaking hearts. Brother, sister, will you to-day in the name of Christ "weep with those that weep?" Will you stretch forth the broad, strong, loving hand of rescue and say, "Brother, sister, in the name of Jesus Christ, give me thy hand, and I will help thee up to God, up to a heavenly and an earthly rescue?" Will you do this for Christ? Will you "weep with those that weep" and help others, no matter how far astray their sinful feet may go or are about to go?

"Yes," answers some one, "from this day I promise to help all those in distress that I can." You do? Well, then, let me put that resolve to a practical test. At a large religious gathering in the east where a collection was about to be taken up for famine stricken Ireland that big hearted philanthropist William E. Dodge arose and said: "Gentlemen, we have been hearing some wonderful speeches about this famine. Some of us have been crying, some praying. Now I want to put your gospel sympathy to a practical test. What Ireland needs is bread, bread, bread, bread, bread! In order to buy that bread my sympathy is worth just $500. What is your sympathy worth?" As William E. Dodge put his sympathy to a practical test I want to put your sympathy to the same kind of a test. You say as a Christian man, "By the grace of God I will always help those who need help." Well, here is a convict just liberated from jail. Work! He will do any honest work that he can get, but the trouble is he cannot get any work to do. All earth and hell seem to be arrayed against him living an honest life. Every door of business is shut against him. Too few places for honest men. For him no room, no room. The other day he applied for work as a coal heaver. When about to be employed a rough workman stepped forward and said to the owner of the yard: "Mister, I would not hire that man if I were you. He has just finished a sentence in the penitentiary." With that the employer turned and said: "Out of this yard, you scoundrel! My office is no reformatory!" Trying to be honest, who will give him a chance? Pray God he may not give up. To-morrow you may see him. What, then, will your sympathy be worth?

Here is a poor, weak sewing girl struggling on to make an honest living and to live right. But, try as hard as she will, in her weakened physical condition she can make but $3 a week, and that is just 50 cents less than she can live upon. Oh, what an awful life! No sounds are heard in that room save the continual scratchings of her needle, the sighs of a crushed heart or the low, hectic cough of a diseased lung. Sewing for others while she has hardly a rag of her own. All well enough for you to talk about the holiness of virtue. You have your three good meals a day. But to-morrow when you ask her to make you a new dress or you see her going down the street in her faded shawl what will your sympathy be worth?

Here is a street urchin, just as good a boy as yours, and if he had any chance he would make just as good a man. But what chance has he? The kindest word he ever received was a curse. No mother save a drunkard; no father save a felon; no school save sin; no literature save an obscene pictorial. Where did he spend last night? In a low Bowery theater, the ticket bought by pitching pennies. Oh, my friends, Christ came into the world to "weep with those that weep." He came to save the lost sheep, not those safe within the fold. Be ye like Christ. Go out into the highways and the hedges and compel them to come in. Fine churches will not do it. Missionary subscriptions will not do it. But by the help of the Holy Spirit Christian men and women can do it, who in a plain, practical way will share the joys and the sufferings of others and thereby, by the help of God, bring those sinners back with them to the Master's feet.

There is no picture on earth more beautiful than that of a Christian, by the Holy Spirit inspired love of Christian sympathy, trying to bring lost souls to Jesus Christ. There is a beautiful legend told of Zacchaeus when he had become old and feeble. He still lived in the outskirts of Jericho. Every morning he would go off alone for a walk and remain away two or three hours and then would come back smiling and happy. He would never tell any one where he went. But one morning his wife followed him. Then she saw her old husband go to the old sycamore tree made memorable by his history. He kissed it. He caressed it. He watered it. He plucked up the weeds about it. When his wife asked him why he was doing this the old man answered: "Why, do you not know, my dear? This is where I first saw Him. This is where He called to me, 'Zacchaeus, make haste and come down!'"

Ah, that is a beautiful legend. But it is not to me the most beautiful story I have heard about Zacchaeus. The most beautiful fact I know about the publican is not that he caressed and kissed a tree, but that after his conversion he was ready to do anything and everything to serve Christ among sinful men. When Zacchaeus said, "Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor," I know that Zacchaeus at once went forth to "weep with those that weep." I know that at once he had an unquenchable desire burning within him to bring all classes to the feet of him whom he called Saviour.

Oh, my friends, will not you and I have this holy desire burning within us? Will we not live to bring the happy and the troubled alike to Christ?

A Remarkable Phenomenon.

A curious phenomenon has been noticed in the tropics that can never be seen at higher latitudes. A mining shaft at Sombrerete, Mexico, is almost exactly on the tropic of Cancer, and at noon on June 21, the sun shines to the bottom, lighting up the wall for a vertical depth of 1,100 feet or more.

CHEEK, PUSH AND CASH.

Three Essentials, Says a Cynic, to Success In Life.

Fighting for cards to entertainments, pushing up by hook and by crook, giving dinners and dances (typewritten descriptions of which are given to any journalists who wish for them)—these things are essentially opposed to "that repose which stamps the caste of Vere de Vere."

These influences are very widespread. To "get on" is the great object of every one, and to get on one must drop as many refinements as possible. They "do not pay." This may seem cynical, but it is unfortunately true. Cheek, push and cash are the three essentials to success, and if the last be lacking the two former are necessary for its getting.

This is all false, unworthy. It is only the veneer of a butterfly class. The aristocracy is one with the upper middle classes in its rejection of these influences. Refinement is not dead among us, but it is overshadowed. Sane and serious people are sickened by the frothy life that goes on about them. If it really brought enjoyment to its devotee it would be justified, but that it does not is amply evidenced by the discontented, artificial faces under the horribly pretty hats above the vulgarly elaborate dresses. Better things will come, better things exist now beneath this false surface, but the man who beats the drum can drown the strains of the violin. Just now the drum is very loud. Let us lower our voices and wait.—London Outlook.

QUEER ENGLISH BELIEFS.

Superstitions That Still Abide With the Country Folk.

There is a well known weed with dark blotches on it, not unlike blood stains. I have been twice assured with the utmost seriousness by an old woman that "where you find them there a-growing there's been a battle long ago."

The same dame once seemed rather in a hurry when buying a setting of eggs from me about tea time, and I found the reason was that she believed you had no luck with eggs if you did not set them before sundown. This is curious, for, though the modern poultry keeper might make the nest and place the eggs in it during the daytime, he would probably defer putting the "broody" on them till dusk that she might have the best chance of settling down quietly.

The other day in a neighboring cottage I was admiring a fine baby and ventured to suggest that if its nails were left so long it might scratch its face. The mother said she would cut them, but the grandmother burst in with: "You'll do nothing of the sort, my dear, asking your pardon, sir. You don't seem to know, sir, that to cut a child's nails before it's twelve months old makes it light fingered." And I am perfectly certain the nails will not be cut. It will be of interest to add that the cottagers I speak of live near enough to London to see its lights in the sky.—London Chronicle.

THROWING THE DICE.

The Ancient Germans Were Furious Gamblers at This Game.

The invention of dice has been of old ascribed to Palamedes, the son of Nauplius, king of Euboea, about 1244 B. C., and also to a Greek soldier named Alea, which is the Latin for a die, but Herodotus assigns both dice and chess to the Lydians.

The ancient Germans would gamble away at dice all that they were worth and then their liberty, submitting to slavery if they lost, and the Saxons, Danes and Normans were all addicted to the game. Fox Talbot is of opinion that the Latins invented, if not the game, at least the name for the single point, which they called unus. The Germanic races, adopting this practice from the Greeks, translated the Greek corruption of unus into ass, which has now become ace. The rest of this word lies in the Latin as, the monetary unit.

John of Salisbury in the twelfth century mentions ten different uses of the dice. Stow mentions two entertainments given by the city of London at which dice were in evidence.—London Telegraph.

THE BIRD'S SONG.

It Is Produced by a Unique Voice Organ In the Syrinx.

Birds have no vocal chords in the larynx, but they possess a unique voice organ in the syrinx, which is provided with what are really vocal chords of a very effective and complicated kind. This syrinx lies in the lower part of the windpipe and the upper part of the branching bronchi, but varies much in its exact position and details of structure in different birds.

Briefly it consists of a varying number of muscles, as many as from five to seven being found in the best songsters, attached to folds of membrane and the bony half rings, which at this part of the throat form a sort of enlarged Adam's apple.

Distinctness of the several muscles and the mode of their insertion indicate a bird's musical capability. The syrinx of the skylark and nightingale, for instance, is a marvel of adjusted muscle and membrane, while, on the other hand, the ostrich and some vultures have no voice organ, the pigeon has but little to show, and the common fowl has no muscles to modulate its cry.

Talked Too Much.

Speaking one day of club sociability, Hy Mayer, the cartoonist, told of a club to which he was invited while in Berlin. The club was composed of elderly Germans, who met in a back room to drink beer and smoke. At intervals one of the clubmen would remove his pipe from his mouth, nod his head vagely and remark, "Yah." After a little pause another of the smokers would say, "Yah." That was the extent of their conversation. "One night," said Mr. Mayer, "one of the members brought his son to the club. After several of the older ones had spoken as usual the youngster spoke. He said, 'Yah, yah.' They expelled him at once," concluded Mr. Mayer, "for talking too much."

An Effective Whistle.

A popular English author was wholly incapacitated from work by a lady who lived next door and strummed through Handel's "Messiah." His idea of the inviolability of an Englishman's house did not allow him to send in any message, and he was at his wits' end till he saw in a daily paper that steam whistles could be bought to fit on to kettle spouts. He provided himself with one and put the kettle on the fire in the room nearest the singer. As soon as the whistle began he went out. Of course the bottom came off the kettle, but it cost little to solder it on again, and after two or three solderings the lady took the hint.

Some of the leading French statesmen, including Rouvier, Combes and Trouillot, have given their sanction to the socialistic scheme of granting every person aged over 60 a pension of $72 a year. This scheme, if carried out, would cost the country $60,000,000 a year.

Why are cowardly soldiers like tallow candles?—Because when exposed to the fire they run.

The custom of taking a text as the basis of a sermon originated with Ezra, who, accompanied by several Levites in a public congregation of men and women, ascended a pulpit, opened the book of the law, and, after a prayer, "read in the book in the law of God distinctly and gave the sense and caused them to understand the reading."

Until forty years ago an English book was practically unknown in Japan, the only foreign literature studied was the Chinese, and the first language to be taught in the schools was the Dutch. Now, while English is the most common among the people, and is studied by all high-school pupils, German and French are favored generally by scholars and physicians.

BIG SHIRT

Made big enough for a big man to work in with comfort. Has more material in it than any other brand of shirt in Canada. Made on the H.B.K. scale it requires 39½ to 42 yards per dozen, whereas common shirts have only 32 to 33 yards.

That's the reason why the H.B.K. "Big" Shirt never chafes the armpits, is never tight at the neck or wristbands, is always loose, full and comfortable and wears well.

Each shirt bears a tiny book that tells the whole history of the "Big" Shirt, and also contains a notarial declaration that the H.B.K. "Big" Shirt contains 39½ to 42 yards of material per dozen.

Run Down and Out of Sorts

Suffered from Pains and Aches and was Discourged and Despondent — Made Strong and Well by

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

When the nervous system becomes exhausted there is suffering of both mind and body.

Even the pains and aches are not so hard to endure as the spells of blues and the gloomy forebodings.

New hope and confidence come with the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. By supplying an abundance of rich, red blood it creates new nerve force and instils new vigor into body and mind, permanently overcoming weakness and disease.

Miss Minnie J. Sweet, Collingwood Corner, Cumberland County, N. S., writes: "I used five boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food last winter, and it did me more good than any medicine I ever took. It is difficult to describe my case, but I felt all run down and out of sorts. I had headache and backache and dull pains through the lungs. I was so discouraged that I didn't seem to care what became of me.

"I hadn't finished the first box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food before I felt a lot better, and it continued to build me up until I became strong and well, and was restored to good health and spirits. As I was once cured of a severe case of kidney disease by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills I can strongly recommend these two great preparations."

MORRISSEY NEWS

The grading of the G. N. track is now completed and all the camps excepting that of Foss and Macdonnell, are broken up.

A fire broke out in one of the rooms of the Australian hotel in the early hours of Saturday morning. Everything in the room was completely destroyed before the fire was extinguished. It is supposed that a lamp left burning in the room exploded, causing the fire.

On Saturday last a serious fire broke out at Carbonado in the house and store belonging to Joe. Gall, situated across Morrissey Creek. The dwelling house and store with goods were completely destroyed. The origin of the fire is not known. The buildings were insured for $600 and the stock for $2,500. The stables of the Trites-Wood Co. near by had a narrow escape.

Miss Clifton arrived from Greenwood this week to take charge of the Morrissey Mines public school. School is being carried on for the present at the Eagle Cafe until the new building is completed, which will be in a month or six weeks. The school district includes Carbonado, Morrissey Mines and Morrissey. The children at the start number about 30.

BASICS

In sky-scraper, or foot-wear, the covered up base, that which is least seen is of greatest importance.

No single item in a shoe costs so much as the best sole leather, and no part can be "robbed" so easily, without revealing it to the eye.

Paint and polish cover equally the best, and the worst, sole in the finished shoe.

Wear alone tells the consumer (too late for remedy) what grade of leather has been put into it.

As the Slater Shoe Makers brand their own price on the sole of every pair, they thus become directly responsible to the Wearer up to that price, for its durability and shape retention, in addition to its window appearance.

They dare not rob the vitals of the shoe to put the plunder into the mere selling points—into surface value, and finish chiefly.

Goodyear Welted and priced on the sole, $4.00, $5.00.

CONSERVATIVE MEETING

MESSRS. MACINTOSH AND BLAKEMORE SPEAK.

Mr. Blakemore gives a Clear and Forcible Exposition of Conservative Policy. The Candidate Well Received

A fair-sized audience gathered in the Stork Opera House on Wednesday evening to hear the political issues discussed from the Conservative platform. W. R. Ross M. P. P., occupied the chair and opened the meeting by a few introductory remarks after which he called upon Wm. Blakemore, M.E.

Mr. Blakemore opened his address by urging the claims of a conservative candidate on the ground that if a solid liberal representation went to Ottawa from B. C. the government would be justified in assuming that the Province had endorsed this policy and was perfectly satisfied with its treatment at their hands. Such a conclusion would be both natural and just. But, he asked, was the Province satisfied? Were we prepared to endorse the Premier's treatment of our demand for "better terms" when he contemptuously told us that we must be content with our terms of Union as he saw no reason to advise any alteration. In effect he said "You made your own bed when you entered Confederation and you must lie on it," and this in spite of the fact that better terms had been conceded to Nova Scotia. Mr. Blakemore pointed out that the per capita taxation of British Columbia was three times that of Quebec, four times that of New Brunswick and seven times that of Nova Scotia. This heavy taxation has been incurred in developing the Province in the face of natural and physical difficulties which did not exist in any other part of the Dominion, railway, bridge and road construction, all indispensable for the development of our natural resources, cost three or four times as much as in other parts of the Dominion. In struggling with this problem we had spent in the first 30 years of Confederation $22,000,000 more than would have been the case under the average conditions prevailing in Canada, had incurred a public debt of $13,000,000 involving an annual burden for interest of $750,000 which was crushing the life out of the Province and rendering it increasingly difficult, almost impossible, to finance. Whilst this condition of things prevails the Dominion government has since 1896 taken $11,000,000 more revenne from B. C. than she has returned to us in any form. In spite of this we are told that we can get no relief. Our condition does not demand it. Do we wish the government to understand that we are satisfied? asked Mr. Blakemore. If so by all means send a solid phalanx to represent us but if not let there be at least one voice raised in parliament against this injustice.

Mr. Blakemore then proceeded to discuss tariff issues, pointing out the essential difference between the Liberal and Conservative party as being that the former gave little protection, and that reluctantly, while the Conservatives gave it consistently and spontaneously as if they believed in it. He instanced the case of the lead bounty which was finally conceded after two years constant effort and was then a poor substitute for a duty which alone would have imparted that element of permanence and security to the industry which would attract capital and insure development.

He next dealt with the lumber industry which all through B. C. has just finished a most disastrous season. Not half the product had been shipped out, capital had received very small returns and now most of the mills were closing down indefinitely and 8,000 lumbermen would be thrown out of employment. These conditions had been explained to the government but they had refused to do anything in spite of the fact that lumber was coming in from the U.S. free and flooding the North West, our natural market, whilst there was a duty of $2 a thousand against us in the States. Mr. Blakemore quoted from the Trade and Navigation returns showing that the importation of America lumber into the North West was at the rate of $3,000,000 a year.

He then dealt at length with the iron and steel industry on which more than $40,000,000 had been spent in Canada and which had received practically no protection from the government until it was on the verge of bankruptcy, and then very inadequate support.

STEEL MANUFACTURE

Mr. Blakemore advocated the establishment of a steel industry in the Kootenays, and pointed out that we possessed every natural requisite in the best fuel, iron ore and flux.

He declared that there was a sufficient market in the West to render the industry profitable but that it was impossible to induce capital to undertake the investment without a substantial duty as it would be impossible to contend against American competition without it.

In conclusion the speaker drew a lengthy comparison between the trade conditions in the States with its "scientific" tariff and Canada with its halting half-hearted fiscal policy, and showed the inequality of the contest all along the line He urged the adoption of a whole hearted policy of protection for all our industries. He contended that the commercial prosperity of the Dominion was bound up with this, that the undoubted prosperity of the last few years was due to natural conditions which would speedily moderate, and not to the policy of the government, and urged his hearers to rise above local and sectional considerations and support a policy which was as broad as the Dominion and was the only possible foundation of its commercial prosperity.

THE CANDIDATE

Hon. C. H. MacIntosh was then introduced amid applause. He emphatically denied the truth of a rumor that had been circulated that he contemplated retiring. He not only scorned the idea but he looked forward optimistically to the result on Nov.32nd. He had undying faith in the great conservative party, and still greater faith in the future of the Kootenays for whose interests he was prepared to fight to the last.

The honorable speaker scored the Dominion government for deferring the election in the Kootenays and several other constituencies. Mr. Galliher had deplored the necessity for such a condition of affairs on the floor of the house, but he had voted against Mr. Borden's motion which would have satisfactorily done away with this necessity.

The Liberals had been returned to power with a sweeping majority. If the province of British Columbia returned seven liberals would it not be natural for the government to infer that the people of this Province were entirely satisfied with the treatment accorded B. C.? Yet how misleading those inferences would be. The Province had many grievances and if he were returned to Ottawa he would deem it his first duty to support every measure which was calculated to assist the Province.

He had been called an agitator, and he was accused of causing the strike in Rossland. He had not caused it but he had stood firmly for the men's cause because he believed they were right. He then attempted to show that the conservative party had always proved a better friend to the labor party than had had the liberal party.

Mr. MacIntosh contended that Mr. Galliher had not worked for a tariff on lumber, and that he had voted against Mr Borden's measure for a duty on American rough lumber. Similarly with the lead protection. Mr. Galliher had tamely submitted to the bounty proposition and afterwards claimed all the credit for it.

The candidate made a strong plea for a readjustmont of the terms of confederation, claiming that the government at Ottawa was ignoring the just demands of the Province. He touched lightly on Socialism and ended with an eulogy on the great confederation of the Canadian Provinces and the high honor imposed upon those who served the public at Ottawa.

EX-GOVERNOR C. H. MCINTOSH

The Hon. C. H. MacIntosh, Conservative candidate for Kootenay has had wide experience in public life. In 1879 he was elected Mayor of Ottawa, the workingmen of the city being his backers. Again in 1880 and 1882 he was re-elected and became member for the House of Commons for Ottawa until he came to Regina as Lieut. Governor of the North West Territories. He resigned in 1898 and came to British Columbia where he has been prominent in mining circles. Mr. MacIntosh entertains a firm belief in the future of British Columbia, his candidature being based upon the advocacy of protection in its mining, lumber, lead and iron industries and a readjustment of the terms of union. The conservative candidate claims he has the support of labour organizations in various parts of the Kootenay Division.

TWO COUNCIL MEETINGS

TEMPORARY DRAINING HAS BEEN UNDERTAKEN

Curfew Law Finally Passed. Various Sidewalks to be Improved. MacPherson Ave. to be Cleared of Shacks.

The council met on Friday evening, Nov. 4th, all the members except Ald. Trites being present.

A petition signed by forty interested persons was presented asking the council to open a ditch for the purpose of draining the low-lying area north of the skating rink. His worship thought that this matter deserved immediate attention Ald. Lundie believed a ditch down Jaffray St. to McEvoy St. would drain the district. Ald. Cree favored a ditch on each street. Finally on a motion by Ald Liphardt and MacLean it was decided to leave the matter in the hands of a committee appointed by the Mayor. His worship named Ald. Beck, Lundie and Cree as the committee, and at the suggestion of Ald. Beck the Mayor consented to become one of the committee.

The finance committee passed the following accounts.

C. N. Trading Co.	$6.71
J. R. McEwing	5 70
Calgary Cattle Co.	8.25
Trites Wood Co.	4.60
Dr. Higgins	4.00
Trites Wood Co., Hardware for pound	5.15
Sheppard & Elliott nails	4 66
A. Stork, stoves	15.20
A. H Cree, clerk's bond	25.00
J. A. MacLean, lumber	34.24
Trites Wood Co., hardware	5.00
Canadian Law Book Co.	9.40
October pay-roll	350.00
Jas. Wallace, 10 p. c. dog taxes	6.20
Prov. Gov't, prisoners	4.27

By-law No. 5 (the curfew by law) was then brought up for reconsideration. Ald. Cree suggested that the age be made 14 instead of 12. Every member except Ald. Beck favored this alteration. No other changes were suggested and the by-law was finally passed.

On motion by Ald. Cree and Lundie it was decided that the school bell should be rung at the curfew hour by the jailor, and that the by-law should come into effect on Nov. 14th and that it should be published in the local papers.

A complaint was made that rubbish was being dumped over the bank on Riverside Ave. and orders were given that printed notices should be put up prohibiting this practice.

On motion by Ald. Liphardt and MacLean the property and works committee was instructed to have new street crossings made and sidewalks repaired.

The squatters on McPherson Ave. again came up for discussion.

A motion presented by Ald. Beck and Cree was adopted, instructing the city solicitor to notify the said squatters to remove their shacks within thirty days.

Jas. Wallace presented his resignation as poundkeeper. This was accepted. The jailor was instructed through the chief of police to act as poundkeeper until a successor could be secured.

The meeting then adjourned until Nov. 10th.

The deputy finance minister at Victoria wrote stating that the city owed $40 on trades licenses, being the pro rata amount for July collected by the city. The amount was ordered to be paid at once.

The committee appointed at the last meeting reported that they had looked carefully over the ground and that they had favored a drain down Jaffray St. with sub drains to it in the lane. They considered a box drain desirable but had ascertained that this would cost $725. In view of the fact that the city would soon have a sewer system they believed this to be too big an outlay. Ald. Lundie as a member of the committee favored the enlarging of the present open ditch down McEvoy St. with another leading to it down the lane from the skating rink. This would not be expensive. The other members favored this view and the committee agreed to get estimates on it.

(Acting on this suggestion the committee this morning decided to have the ditch dug at once by day labor.)

Ald. Beck reporting for the Property and Works committee stated that he had been unable to get men to start work on the crossings at once. Wm. Eschwig had refused to put in the piece of sidewalk opposite his property on Baker St, and the committee was authorized to have it done and charge it to Mr. Eschwig. Mr. Beck asked that another member be added to the committee in the place of Ald. Trites who was absent. Ald. MacLean was appointed to the position.

Various sidewalk improvements were brought up by the different members, and the property and works committee was instructed to carry them out as far as their funds would allow. Considerable discussion followed as to the ways and means of raising a loan for needed improvements.

The Mayor spoke of the advisability of taking preliminary steps towards putting in a sewer system and a water works system. In regard to the latter two things were first necessary, an analysis of the water from Fairy Creek and securing the water right. Acting on this suggestion a resolution was adopted instructing the clerk to send the sample to the government analyst at Ottawa.

An application for the position of poundkeeper from R. McKane was accepted.

The council then adjourned to meet on the 18th.

FIRE AT MORRISSEY

A fire occurred on Monday evening at Morrissey, by which the Windsor Hotel Mrs. Higby's restaurant and J. Rogers' vacant butcher shop were totally destroyed by fire. The fire broke out in the restaurant about 7.30, caused, it is stated by a lamp exploding. Despite the fact that a large number of men were about the fire the flames caught the Windsor Hotel 30 feet distant, and soon it was in ashes. The vacant butcher shop nearly 60 feet beyond the Hotel was also consumed.

J. Illingsworth's general store, only about 20 feet from the restaurant had a close call, but with aid of many willing hands a bucket brigade was formed and the building saved.

The Windsor Hotel, belonging to Eugene Walter was valued at $3,000 and it was protected with $1500 insurance. Only a small percentage of the contents was saved, but a great deal was stolen.

Little was saved from the restaurant, Mrs. Higby's loss is not great, the property being covered with $1,000 insurance The total loss will aggregate nearly $5,000.

One eye witness of the fire tells a different story of its origin. He says the fire first started in the front room of the restaurant. It was apparently extinguished but in a few moments it again started up, but this time in the back end of the building.

KNOX CHURCH CALL A PASTOR

A congregational meeting of Knox church was held on Wednesday evening for the purpose of moderating a call for a pastor. Rev. W. G. Fortune, of Cranbrook, moderator for the Kootenay Presbytery, was present and delivered an impressive address, after which a unanimous call was extended to Rev. Alexander Dunn, B. D. Every person present signed the call and the list is being further signed by those members and adherents who were not present. Mr. Fortune complimented the congregation on its wise choice saying that he doubted if the Presbyterian church possessed Mr. Dunn's peer among any of her young men in the west.

The wholly unanimous nature of the call from a congregation many of whose members have known Mr. Dunn for several years is a high testimonial of the esteem in which his rare ability and personal worth was held. If Mr. Dunn accepts the call the induction service will be held sometime about the end of November.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Todhunter desires to thank the many friends who assisted her during the recent serious illness of her son. Their kindness will not soon be forgotten.

PLANT IS PURCHASED

ELK LUMBER CO. MILL WILL BE LARGER THAN PLANNED.

Will Cut 125,000 ft. in 10 hours.—Mr. Pitts, a Mill Expert arrived to Construct the Mill.—River Improvements

The plant for the Elk Lumber and Manufacturing Company's mill has been purchased, and it is considerably larger than was at first planned. The capacity of the new plant will be 125,000 feet per ten hours. The machinery, which was purchased in St. Paul, will amount to twenty-five car loads.

The preliminary work on the new site is well under way, and Mr. Pitts, a mill expert, arrived this week from Ashland, Wis., to take charge of the building operations. He has had many years experience in building large saw mills. Piles are now being driven to bed-rock to form a solid foundation, and some of the new timbers are already on the ground.

The new plant is most complete and modern. It is equipped with a double carriage action. A battery of six boilers will supply the power which will be distributed bp four engines. An electric light plant will be installed and a huge burner will be built to consume the waste material.

The Company also expects to spend many thousands of dollars in improving the Elk River from Sparwood to Fernie for logging purposes. The Elk is a turbulent river and many obstructions will have to be removed to facilitate the floating of logs. The Company has large timber holdings along the west bank of the river to near Sparwood.

A Free Press representative paid a visit to the present logging camp of this company a few days ago. This camp is located about a mile from the River at an altitude of 600 feet. Comfortable quarters have been provided for man and beast and judging from the bountiful spread at dinner time the impression was soon given that the culinary department was not stinted. The logging operations are under the superintendence of F. G. Waters who has had many years' experience in Michigan forests. Mr. Waters stated that the timber tributary to this camp would cut about eighteen million feet. It was the intention to divide this into several years to be used as a reserve. This timber is all to be taken to the mill on sleighs. A large camp will be established six miles up the River where the large bulk of each season's demand will be cut and floated down the River. During the time each year that this timber is not available the mill will draw on the reserve.

THE TELEPHONE SYSTEM

City will Likely have a Telephone System this Fall.

The telephone project from which little has been heard for some time, has been resurrected this week and there seems little doubt but that it will be rushed ahead without delay. Mr. D. V. Mott the promoter, who has been promised a charter by the council is asking intending subscribers to sign an agreement by which he is safeguarded against a rival company putting in a system. On the other hand he agrees to put in an efficient system at once and that the rates will not be more than $3 per month for business phones and $2 for residence. He is meeting with success and in a day or two he expects to have sufficient backing to justify his going ahead at once to put in the poles and order his plant.

ROYAL ARCH CHAPTER

Instituted at Fernie by Rev. C. A. Procunier, of Revelstoke. Banquet Afterwards.

On Tuesday night the Royal Arch Masons of the Fernie lodge gathered in force for the institution of that chacter in the Fernie lodge. Rev. C. A. Procunier, grand superintendent of that order for the district was present and officiated. Several outside masons came in for the event, among them being J. F. Armstrong, of Cranbrook, and Messrs. H. M. Burrows and A. B. Grace, of Fort Steele. At the close of the proceedings in the Masonic lodge room the members repaired to the dining room of the Napanee where an excellent spread was prepared. A few short toasts brought the event to a close in the small hours of the morning.

SCIATICA CURED

Another Triumph For Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mr Etsell, of Walkerton, Suffered for Months and Got no Relief Until he Began the Use of These Pills.

Of the many employees of R. Truax & Co., Walkerton, Ont., none stands higher in the confidence of his employers than does Mr. Thos. J. Etsell. He is an excellent mechanic, and has been in the employ of this firm for upwards of ten years. But although Mr. Etsell now ranks among the few men who are never absent from their post of duty, the time was when he was as often absent as present, all because of his physical inability to perform his work. For years Mr. Etsell was a great sufferer from sciatica, and at times the suffering became so intense that for days he was unable to leave the house.

During these years, Mr. Etsell, as may readily be imagined, was continually on the lookout for some remedy that would rid him of the disease, but for a long time without success. Doctors were consulted and although he took the treatment prescribed, it did not help him. Then he tried electric treatment, but this also failed to give relief, and in despair he had about made up his mind that his case was hopeless and that he would be a suffering, helpless cripple to the end of his days. Then one day a neighbor advised him to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. At first he refused, believing they would prove like other medicines, but the neighbor was so insistent, having herself been greatly benefited by these pills, so that at last he consented. The remainder of the story may best be told in his own words:

"When I began taking these pills," said Mr. Etsell to a reporter of the Telescope, "I had been off work for three months. The cords of my right leg were all drawn up, and I could only limp about with the aid of my stick. The pain I suffered was terrible. I could not sleep at all during the night, and I was in misery both day and night. At first I thought the pills were doing me no good, but after I had taken six boxes I fancied I was feeling better, and was encouraged to continue the treatment. After that I got better every day, and by the time I had taken about fifteen boxes every vestige of pain had disappeared. For over a year," continued Mr. Etsell, "I have not had a twinge of pain, and although I am forty years of age I feel as well as when I was twenty. Pink Pills cured me, and I have no hesitation in announcing them the best medicine in the world for sciatica."

The cure of Mr. Etsell proves that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not an ordinary medicine, and that their power to cure in all troubles of the blood or nerves places them beyond all other medicines. You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or direct by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. See that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is printed on the wrapper around every box.

VIOLIN MOODS.

Little Things That Make an Instrument Lose Its Tone.

Some obscure but definite change takes place in the material of the body of a violin through the vibrations of the music produced, and it is very possible that some stages of this change are detrimental to the tone. The style of playing is said to influence the change, and rest checks it.

The maturing of a violin has been compared with the growth of a child who progressively increases in wisdom and stature, but has stages of weakness due to the irregular development of parts.

The tone of an instrument is also gravely influenced by the setting up of the movable parts, the sound post, the strings, the bridge and even the pegs.

Many instruments lose much of their power or sweetness if the sound post is altered a fractional amount from its best position and angle, if the bridge is inclined a little more or less or shifted or if the strings are not exactly suited to the violin. Some instruments prefer one pitch and others another, and all vary with the weather. In addition to this the best players have moods when they cannot play, and the instrument is often blamed for these.

CROSSING THE BAR.

Almost All Deaths Are Practically Without Physical Pain.

Death nearly always ensues from cessation of the heart's action, whatever it may be that causes it to stop. Almost the only exception to this rule is in the case of poisoning with prussic acid, where the whole body becomes dead before the heart ceases to beat.

It is scientifically certain that almost all deaths, even those that are seemingly most agonizing, are practically without pain. The fear of extinction may cause mental agitation amounting to pain while consciousness exists, but that is quite another thing. In death by burning pain ceases at an early stage by suffocation, while a man killed by a gunshot wound probably does not know that he has been hit, the action of the bullet being more rapid than the message to the brain announcing it. For this reason wounded men sometimes drop without knowing why.

In chest diseases pain is relieved by suffocation at the death moment, and in fevers the nervous system becomes depressed to such utter apathy as to induce quite a painless end.

CHINESE LANGUAGE.

The Most Intricate and Cumbrous Vehicle of Thought Extant.

Chinese has been described as "the most intricate, cumbrous and unwieldy vehicle of thought that ever obtained among any people." There are eighteen varieties of it, besides the court dialect, and until recently no European knew more than three of these fluently, while it may be doubted whether any Chinaman ever fully understood them all.

In what is commonly called Chinese there are 30,000 recognized written character, yet there is no alphabet and practically no grammar. Even this immense number of characters may be indefinitely extended, for a learned Chinese scribe, if he does not know a sign which he thinks entirely suitable to the word he desires to express, coins one. There is a Chinese printed book in the British museum with thirty-two different samples of these fancy characters.

Basque is the most difficult of European languages to acquire, chiefly because of the arbitrary adoption of extraneous words into its sentences. This character marks no other European tongue, but it is one which also renders American Indian languages very troublesome to learn. Gaelic is also difficult, for it has no affirmative and no present tense.

A POSTOFFICE BABEL.

Languages Necessary to Singapore's Mail Delivery.

Singapore is the only British postoffice which employs letter carriers for each language. Within that city there are so many different races who receive correspondence addressed in their own vernacular writing that proper delivery is extremely difficult.

So hard is it that in some districts it has been found necessary to send the postmen upon their rounds in sets of three.

One of these is a Malay in charge of all packets for Europeans, Jews, Armenians, Malays, Arabs, Parsees and Japanese, which are presumably addressed in European script or in writing akin to it. The second of the trio is a Chinaman, who deals with correspondence bearing ideographic characters, while the third is a Tamil, who takes out letters addressed in the writing of his own race as well as any in Telegu and southern Indian writing.

These cosmopolitan postmen have, of course, often to consult each other as they deliver the mails, but sometimes even their varied linguistic attainments have to be supplemented by a Sikh who understands Hindoostanee, Persian and northern Indian characters.

THE CAUSE OF SURF.

Why Waves Always Become Breakers In Shallow Water.

Long and oscillatory waves run by gravity, the first agitating the water to nearly the same amount at all depths, while the chief disturbance due to the latter confines itself to the upper layers of the water.

These oscillatory waves, the most typical example of which is perhaps furnished by the "swell," or regular rolling waves which continue to run in deep water after a storm, will break on a shelving shore when their height is about equal to the depth of water. When the depth is sufficient to allow the oscillations to proceed unimpeded no progressive motion takes place, each column being kept in its place by the pressure of surrounding columns.

If, however, free oscillation is prevented, as by the interposition of a rock or by the shelving of the shore, the columns in the deep water are not balanced by those in the shallower, and thus they acquire a progressive motion and form "breakers." For this reason waves always break against the shore, whatever is the direction of the wind.

The Ship Rigger.

Even compared with the work of a circus acrobat the job of a ship's rigger is extremely perilous, for whereas the circus performer is safeguarded in every way possible and the ropes and supports are thoroughly tested the rigger's duty is to ascend masts often made extremely perilous by rot or dangerously impaired by storms. Extreme coolness and caution are necessary, and the men engaged in this calling are a clear headed, hard handed lot, who take risks cheerily and work with an instant understanding of their business. Taking into consideration the extent and character of their work, comparatively few meet with accident.

The Explanation.

Balty Moore—How was that last cook you had?

Calvert, Jr.—The limit—positively the limit.

"But you gave her a corking good letter of recommendation."

"Well, what was I to do? She sat right down in the kitchen and wouldn't go on any other terms."

Mitigating Circumstances.

"Did you find it difficult to reconcile yourself to the loss of your daughter?"

"Yes; very at first. But her husband unexpectedly inherited $100,000 about six weeks after they were married."

Undisguised.

Blobbs—In spite of all the money Newrich spends on his clothes he can't disguise his plebeian origin. Slobbs—No; it's like putting a ten dollar collar on a thirty cent dog.

The flower of civilization is the finished man, the man of sense, of grace, of accomplishment, of social power—the gentleman.

SUFFERED TORTURE FOR FOUR YEARS.

Then Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Wm. Doeg's Rheumatism.

He was so Bad That He Could Not Lie Down, But Had to Sit Night and Day in a Chair.

Sundridge, Ont., Nov. 7.—(Special).—Mr. William Doeg of this place, now a hale, hearty man, tells of his almost miraculous cure of Rheumatism by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"For four years I suffered excruciating torture," says Mr. Doeg. "I was scarcely an hour free from pain. I could not lie down to take rest, but had to sit night and day in a chair.

"I was treated for Rheumatism by several doctors and also tried several medicines without receiving any benefit. Almost in despair I feared I never again would be free from pain. Then I read of some remarkable cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills. I procured a box and soon found they were doing me good, and before I had finished the second box I was entirely free from pain and a new man."

Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure Rheumatism by putting the Kidneys in shape to take the cause—Uric Acid—out of the blood.

INFLAMMABLE AIR.

The Product Dr. Hales Distilled From Coal In 1726.

In the early days of the last century Sir Walter Scott, writing from London to a friend in Edinburgh, said, "There is a fool here who is trying to light the city with smoke." Sir Walter's "smoke" was not a human invention. Accumulations of gas from coal beds found their way to the surface and, being highly inflammable, attracted the attention of men who erected altars over them, and their perpetual fires were dedicated to the gods. For thousands of years the Chinese have speculated upon the meaning of the natural gas which has escaped abundantly from the earth in several provinces. In 1726 Dr. Hales informed chemists that by distilling a few grains of coal he had obtained an equal number of cubic inches of "inflammable air" and that if attempted on a large scale millions upon millions of cubic feet of that valuable substance could be made and conveyed unseen along the highways of the land and become the means for obtaining perpetual day. In 1813 Sir Walter's "smoke" was burned on Westminster bridge in London, and one year later the streets of St. Margarets, Westminster, enjoyed illumination from gas, it being the first parish contracting for such a luxury.

Romance of a Statue.

The statue of Charles I. which now stands in London was sold to a brazier during the commonwealth with the understanding that it should be broken up. The buyer, however, saw a chance to make money and buried it instead. To cover his action he made a large number of bronze knives and forks, which were eagerly bought by both royalists and Puritans as souvenirs. When the monarchy was restored to power the statue was dug up again and bought by the government to be placed in its present position, where it has remained since 1674.

Striped Suit; Lively Walk.

Once in my callow days I accepted a wager that I could wear a prison suit and walk from Buffalo to Cleveland without serious molestation. It took me over four days to get thirty miles. I was arrested nine times, and at Dunkirk I came near being mobbed by a Sunday school picnic and was compelled to discard my uniform for citizen's clothes. Yet I was a free man and innocent of crime, and there was no law defining what I should wear so long as it was male attire.—Elbert Hubbard in Philistine.

Rusty.

A little three-year-old miss, while her mother was trying to get her to sleep, became interested in a peculiar noise and asked what it was.

"A cricket, dear," replied the mother.

Nothing to Show.

Young Kallow—You guaranteed that elixir you sold me to raise a beard and mustache in six weeks' time. Druggist—Yes? Young Kallow—Yes, and I want to say it's a barefaced lie.—Exchange.

Let us believe we can and hope for the rest.

A WISE PRECAUTION.

No matter whether the baby is sick or well, Baby's Own Tablets should always be in the house. They not only cure infantile disorders but they prevent them, and should be used whenever the little ones show the slightest signs of illness. No other medicine is so enthusiastically spoken of by mothers—no other medicine has done so much to make little ones healthy and good natured. Mrs. Albert Luddington, St. Mary's River, N. S., says: "I do not believe my baby would have been alive to-day had it not been for Baby's Own Tablets. Since using them he is growing nicely, is good natured and is getting fat." Good for the new born baby or growing child—and above all absolutely safe. You can get Baby's Own Tablets from your druggist, or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE STONE BREAKER.

An Example of Content in Honest but Monotonous Toil.

In my country of Alsace, on the solitary route whose interminable ribbon stretches on and on under the forests of the Vosges, there is a stone breaker whom I have seen at his work for thirty years. The first time I came upon him I was a young student setting out with swelling heart for the great city. The sight of this man did me good, for he was humming a song as he broke his stones. We exchanged a few words, and he said at the end, "Well, goodby, my boy, good courage and good luck!" Since then I have passed and repassed along the same route under circumstances the most diverse, painful and joyful. The student has finished his course; the breaker of stones remains what he was. He has taken a few more precautions against the seasons' storms—a rush mat protects his back, and his felt hat is drawn further down to shield his face. But the forest is always sending back the echo of his valiant hammer. How many sudden tempests have broken over his bent back, how much adverse fate has fallen on his head, on his house, on his country! He continues to break his stones, and coming and going I find him by the roadside smiling in spite of his age and his wrinkles, benevolent, speaking—above all in dark days—those simple words of brave men which have so much effect when they are scanned to the breaking of stones.—From "The Simple Life," by Charles Wagner.

A SHREWD OLD LADY.

How She Got Her Will Drafted and Fooled Her Lawyer.

A certain lawyer, famed for high charges, had incurred the enmity of an old lady on account of the same. Wishing to get even with him, she consulted him about drafting her will. As she was a very wealthy old lady, without near relatives, she had many charitable associations to benefit, and the accurate draft of the will required much patience, skill and time. Among the provisions she made a generous bequest to this lawyer and nominated him executor. After the execution of the will she called for her bill, whereupon the lawyer, with the vision of ample fees in the prospective settlement of the estate and the memory of the generous bequest, told the old lady that under the circumstances he should charge nothing, but finally, to satisfy her business scruples, made out a receipt in full to date for $1, whereas the smallest sum he could have properly charged would have been $100.

The old lady marched home with her will, set herself to work, copied it out carefully word for word, leaving out the bequest to the lawyer and nominating a new executor.

In the course of time she died, and the disgust of the lawyer at the contents of the will was so great that he inadvertently let out the secret, to the huge delight of his brother lawyers.—Leslie's Monthly.

The Sacred Twelve.

The "patriarchal and apostolical number of twelve" as the proper and only admissible number for a jury trying cases according to the common law has come down to us from remote antiquity. Yet this number was not always universal. In 1652 a Cornish custom to have juries of six was declared to be bad, but evidence was given that such juries had been widely used in the county, and by a special statute of Henry VIII. juries of six were allowed in Wales. But the jury of the grand assize consisted of sixteen men, which still finds a parallel in the jury of presentments of the Liberty of the Savoy. The modern grand jury, the coroner's jury and the jury at lunacy and ecclesiastical inquisitions number anything between twelve and twenty-three, whereof twelve at least must agree on a verdict.—London Law Journal.

Gordon's Sudan Throne.

Gordon's Sudan throne is a folding chair he always sat in at Khartum and carried with him on his camel journeys. It was a little straight backed chair, having a skeleton frame of round iron, a carpet back and seat, gilt knobs for ornament, and small pads on the arms for comfort. The carpet had grown dim in the African sun, which deprived it of all royal pretensions, so that when Gordon returned from his governorship of the Sudan and suddenly asked, "Where is my throne? Has it been brought in?" they were all surprised. His throne! Nobody had seen a throne. But at length the camp stool was found where it had been stowed away.

Dumas' Bottled Joke.

Not every one has so successful a method with the autograph fiend as Alexander Dumas had. Prince Metternich once requested an autograph of him. Dumas wrote in his best round hand, "Received from Prince Metternich twenty-five bottles of his oldest Johannisberg." Metternich sent the wine with a good grace.

Rule For Cyclists.

One of the rules of a bicycle club reads, "A horse should never be passed on both sides at once." We suspect that when a cyclist attempts to pass on both sides of a horse "at once" he is expelled from the club. He would certainly be dismissed from a temperance organization.—London Tit-Bits.

A Real Genius.

Jigsmith—That fellow Piker is certainly a clever, ingenious chap, isn't he? Browning—Why, I never heard of his doing anything remarkable. Jigsmith—That's just it. He manages in some way to get along without doing anything.—Exchange.

JOHN HAWKES.

JOHN HAWKES,
Editor of the Carnduff Gazette.

John Hawkes, editor of the Carnduff Gazette, is a forceful figure among the people of the Northwest Territories. He is as sturdy and independent of mind as he is vigorous of body. His opinions he forms for himself, and permits no other man to do his thinking. He has strong convictions, and, like all men with strong convictions, has some prejudices. These, however, are the mere excrescences of a mind that has reached definite conclusions on all matters after careful thought and deliberation, and therefore holds with tenacity what it believes. Each judgment at which Mr. Hawkes arrives is the result of deliberate personal thought, and hence it is no wonder that he holds none of his opinions lightly. But, withal, Mr. Hawkes has no trace of intolerance for those who differ from him. Any man whose views are sincere, and honestly arrived at, may be assured of his respect, howsoever those views may conflict with his own.

It will thus be no wonder that Mr. Hawkes is a virile personality wherever he is known. The average citizen is content to adopt conclusions ready made, and to leave the process of reasoning to others. On such plastic characters Mr. Hawkes has left an indelible impress, and it is certain that by this means his views will be perpetuated long after his personal influence has been removed.

Editor Hawkes is an Englishman, being by birth a native of Kent, the county that disputes with the Isle of Wight the title of "The Garden of England." He was born in 1857, and, thirty-five years ago came to Canada. He returned, however, to the Old Land, but came out again in 1885, since which year he has continuously resided in Assiniboia.

Mr. Hawkes was educated at Brunswick House School, at Maidstone, the county town of Kent. When he was fourteen he told his astonished father that he wanted to leave school. "Why?" asked his parent. "Because I want to be a newspaper man," was the reply. The boy had his way, and for four years was a junior on the staff of a solid Whig paper, the South Eastern Gazette.

Since that day, like Shakespeare's hero, Mr. Hawkes has in his time played many parts. Before he was out of his teens he was a railroad contractor, taking a big contract on the Toronto & Nipissing line. Subsequently, he went to the Southern States, spending a winter in Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi, where he took great interest in studying the conditions of the negro population, which had recently been emancipated.

Returning to England, he resumed newspaper work, following it successfully till 1885, when he again came to Canada. For several years he farmed, and took a prominent part in all co-operative measures for the benefit of that section of the community, being elected first president of the Whitewood Farmers' Institute.

Mr. Hawkes relinquished farming, owing to the absence of school facilities, and removed to Whitewood. Here, for a time, his activities were very various. He was town clerk for two years; he operated a well-boring machine in 1895-96, and in 1897 he started the Whitewood creamery and became editor of the Whitewood Herald; next he went for a brief time to Regina, and finally, in 1900, he settled in Carnduff as the proprietor of the Gazette.

In 1896, as secretary of the Northwest Dairymen's Association, Mr. Hawkes made a tour of the Territories, for the purpose of creating and stimulating interest in the Government creameries.

In purely public matters, as might be expected from his interest therein and his personal energy, Mr. Hawkes is widely known in the West. In 1887 he was an unsuccessful candidate for the Territorial Assembly, and in the election of 1896 he stumped Northeastern Assiniboia as a Dominion Conservative candidate. He is widely known as an effective platform speaker, and as a forceful writer. Within the past few months Mr. Hawkes has gained widespread notoriety by his announcement of his intention to support the Liberal Government—chiefly on its present railway policy. This action is another illustration of his fair-minded openness to argument and his native independence of thought, as he has, as is well known, been a lifelong, active Conservative. The political conversion of such a man as Mr. Hawkes is rightly interpreted by his friends as an event of considerable importance, for his influence is, as has been said, considerable, and his fame is more widespread than is the lot of the average editor in a small town.

Editor Hawkes in his time has set type, railroaded, "punched bulls," plowed, split rails, and ginned cotton; he has campaigned in England, and from the Rockies to the East; he knows the continent from the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the Gulf of Mexico, and from New York to British Columbia, but he is proudest of all that he is a newspaper man. And, like the great Disraeli, he "knows

The Latest Happenings In The Dominion.

LEAVES TO MANY CHARITIES.

A despatch from Brantford, Ont., says: By the will of the late Mrs. Harris, relict of John Harris, of the Massey-Harris Co., $600 is given to the First Baptist Church, $300 to the foreign missionary board and $300 to the home missionary board of the Baptist Church in Canada, and $200 to the Grand Ligne mission in Quebec. The net income of her stock in the Brantford Starch Works, about $100 per year, goes to the Y. W. C. A. for all time to come. She also pays off the debt of $5,000 on the new Y. W. C. A. building. Her personal estate is to be sold and proceeds invested. The income from this is to be contributed for charitable purposes from time to time, as the trustees see fit. The trustees are Lloyd Harris, son, and C. Cook, son-in-law.

RUNAWAY ACCIDENT AT BRANTFORD.

Five men had driven to Burford in a two-seated covered rig and were returning via the Paris road Wednesday night, when the horses were frightened by an electric car and ran away. The rig collided with a telephone post, overturned, and the occupants were thrown out and all injured. Six legs were broken and other wounds inflicted. All were caught between the rig and posts. John Syrett had one leg broken and one rib fractured; William Coleman, one leg broken; George Walters, both legs broken; Charles Mahler, two legs broken; William McMeans, bruised knee. All the men are moulders in the employ of the Buck company.

UNKNOWN MAN KILLED.

A man whose identity is unknown was killed on Saturday, Oct. 29, at Lockhart & Co.'s sawmill, eight miles from Fort Frances. He was sawing logs in the mill, when a piece of wood flew off striking him on the head, inflicting a gash from which he died in a few hours. He was a Scotchman, about 35 years of age, and apparently unmarried. Efforts were made to ascertain the whereabouts of his relatives, but were of no avail. His remains were buried at Fort Frances.

MONSTER ENGINES FOR WHEAT RUSH.

The three most powerful engines ever used on the wheat rush in the West have just been placed in commission by the C. P. R., says a despatch from Montreal. The engines are the first delivery of an order at the Kingston Locomotive works. Prior to their arrival the New York type were the largest on the Western lines. The engines will work exclusively during the wheat rush between Rat Portage and Eagle River.

C. P. R. APPEALS.

The C. P. R. has entered an appeal against the jury's verdict at Toronto of $4,000 in favor of R. Blain, of Brampton. The case went to the privy council, which ordered a new trial. Blain was assaulted on the train between Brampton and Toronto, and had warned the conductor that he wanted protection. The jury at the first trial awarded $3,600, which verdict was upset on the appeal. The privy council ordered a new trial.

COLLEGE PROFESSORSHIPS.

At a meeting of the Ottawa Presbytery last week two nominations for professorships were discussed. Rev. Dr. Ramsay, of Knox church, being nominated for the chair of the Old Testament and exegesis of Montreal Presbyterian College, and Rev. J. W. Falconer, of Halifax, being nominated for the chair of apologetics and church history of the same institution.

DEATH OF BENJAMIN FOOTE.

The death occurred Wednesday night of Benjamin Foote, 125 Market street, Winnipeg. He was well known throughout the West, having resided in Winnipeg for many years. For some time he had been living retired after carrying on a successful grocery business for a number of years. Besides his widow, three sons are left to mourn his loss, all of whom are resident in Winnipeg.

TRADING STAMP MERCHANT IS FINED.

At Toronto, Wednesday, a jury handed out judgment in the trading stamp case, inflicting a fine of $25 and costs on W. R. Stewart, one of the four members of the Merchants' Exchange, who was found guilty of a breach of the by-law. The by-law was passed some months ago abolishing trading stamps.

ONTARIO ELECTIONS DEC. 13.

The Toronto Telegram says: "The provincial elections will be held on Tuesday, Dec. 13. There is the best of authority for this statement. Premier Ross will go to the country on that date, irrespective of Dominion election results in Ontario. The ballots and other election printing is now being done in the city offices.

EXPLOITING LARDEAU MINES.

Messrs. Forbes and Morton, the Minnedosa capitalists interested in the Trienne mine, Lardeau district, B. C., have secured adjoining claims and are furnishing $100,000 cash to drive a tunnel one and a half miles in length, to thoroughly exploit their ground.

TAX CASE HEARING.

The hearing in the cases of the municipalities in Manitoba and the Northwest Territories against the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, in relation to the collection of taxes, was continued again in Ottawa in the supreme court, and the arguments were still incomplete when the adjournment until Wednesday was made. Judgements in Quebec appeals were rendered as follows: Victoria Fire Insurance company vs. Home Insurance company, of New York, appeal allowed with costs; Girourad and Nesbitt dissenting. City of Montreal vs. Cantin, appeal dismissed with costs; Girourad and Nesbitt dissenting.

ELKS FOR TORONTO.

Francis H. Clergue has presented to the City of Toronto for the Riverdale zoo, a pair of fine elks.

INCREASED CUSTOMS.

The customs collected at Toronto for October were $806,012, an increase of 37 per cent. over last year.

DROWNED DUCK SHOOTING.

Harry Bull, book-keeper in the Cananian Pacific cannery, Silverstone, B.C., was drowned on Sunday while duck shooting. The boat in which he was capsized sank, and in an attempt to swim ashore he was drowned. His companion, Jack Donnelly, of the Colonial cannery, clung to the overturned boat and after a two hours' struggle with the waves, was washed ashore, being picked up by a Chinaman in an exhausted condition. The deceased leaves a widow and a little child.

FRACTURE OF SKULL CAUSE OF DEATH.

Coroner A. W. Young, of Toronto, has issued a warrant for an inquest on the body of Thomas Peacock, a C.P.R. painter, who died suddenly on Saturday in St. Michael's hospital, shortly after his admission. Peacock was discovered in an unconscious condition in his yard. Dr. McMahon was called and the condition of the man indicated that he had had convulsions. Peacock was hurriedly taken to the hospital, where he expired without gaining his senses.

FOUND BY ROADSIDE DYING.

John Lummis, of Wyebridge, Ont., died at the Royal Victoria hospital, at Barrie, on Sunday as a result of injuries received in a runaway accident the same day. After attending a meeting of the License Commissioners Saturday evening, he started to drive home. Some hours later he was found lying unconscious on the roadside at the outskirts of the town, with his head badly crushed and several ribs broken. For over twenty years he had been a member of the Board of License Commissioners for the riding of Barrie.

POULTRY WINNERS AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Private reports from St. Louis show that Canadians did remarkably well with their 1,000 enteries in the poultry show at the World's fair. No other country or any state in the union had so large an entry. In Hamburgs, Polands and ornamental bantams, Wm. McNiel Roke, of London, and H. B. Donovan, and Geo. Bourge, of Strathroy, won nearly everything. Jas. Dundas, of Toronto, showed the best pullet in buff Leghorns. Cr. Cromwell, of Thamesville showed the best cockerel. J. H. Minshall of Brandon won two firsts in black Minorcas and Arthur London two firsts in silver Wyandottes, selling his hen for $140. Geo. Colwell of Paris and M. T. Brown of Tilsonburg were among other Canadian winners, their exhibits in ducks and geese taking a large share of prizes.

BESSEMER ORE FOUND IN CANADA.

Just as the great industries of the great Lake Superior corporations have commenced to operate it is announced at Sault Ste. Marie that bessemer ore has been discovered on the Canadian side of the river, in the Williams iron mine about three miles from the main line of the Algoma Central railroad. A spur is to be built to the mine at once. A majority of the stockholders in this mine are St. Paul men, and it is probable that the Algoma steel plant will use a good share of the ore in the manufacture of steel rails if it proves equal to the test. It has been asserted by numerous manufacturers that it will be impossible to continue the manufacture of steel rails in the Canadian Soo with success because ore must be shipped in from the Michigan and Minnesota mines. But if bessemer ore can be secured within a few miles of the Soo, it will remove the last argument against the Clergue rail industry.

DRUNKEN REVEL ENDS IN DEATH.

A despatch from Montreal says: On Sunday evening, at 6 o'clock, William Parks, a glass-blower, thirty years of age, was crushed to death beneath the wheels of an electric car in Notre Dame street, near St. Raymond street. Donald Lamont, another glass-blower, forty years of age, had a narrow escape from death. He was taken to Notre Dame hospital, suffering frome severe internal injuries. The two men, who were under the influence of liquor, were fighting, and were clinching and rolling in the street when the accident occurred. The men, with others, were returning in a buggy from Maisonneuve, where all had been drinking heavily. Coming up Notre Dame street a quarrel arose between Parks and Lamont. They decided to get out of the buggy and settle the dispute in the street. The horse was pulled into the sidewalk just below St. Raymons street, and Parks, Lamont, James Kane and Julius Zimmerman got out of the buggy. While Parks and Lamont were on the ground fighting, Car No. 458 came along, running west. The street was so dark it was impossible for the motorman to see, and the first intimation he had of the accident was when the fender struck something and dropped. James Kane and Julius Zimmerman disappeared immediately after the accident and could not be found. George Zimmerman, aged 78, was found sitting in the buggy hopelessly drunk and was taken to the police station and locked up.

THE MARKET REPORT

Winnipeg, Nov. 5, 1904.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

FLOUR—Quotations are unchanged but an easier tendency is said to have developed. Local sales are slack, and it is thought prices will decline in readjustment with the condition of the export trade and the wheat market. Best Hungarian patents are selling to-day at $2.90 per sack of 98 lbs.; seconds at $2.70 and strong bakers at $2.10 to $2.40, according to make; XXXX is worth $1.50. All prices given are subject to usual trade discount.

MILLFEED—The market is steady. We quote: Bran, $17 per ton in bulk, delivered to the trade; shorts, $19 per ton.

GROUND FEED—Prices are lower, oat chop easing off $1 per ton, barley chop, 50c, and mixed, $2 per ton. We quote: Oat chop, $25 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley chop, $20; mixed barley and oats, $23; oil cake, $27 per ton.

OATS—Deliveries are moderate and the demand good. It is reported that receipts will be decidedly scarce owing to farmers being busy ploughing, etc., and neglecting to thresh. No. 2 and 3 white, however, are easier, while feed oats are advancing, being more on the level with No. 3. We quote 31½ to 32½c per bushel for No. 2 oats to-day and 29½c to 30½c for No. 3. Feed grades are worth 29c to 30c. These prices are all for carlots on track here.

BARLEY—Receipts very light, demand good. No. 3 barley is worth 37c per bushel; No. 4, 35c, and feed grade 34c on track, Winnipeg.

FLAXSEED—There has been very little movement as yet and the market is quiet.

SPELTZ—A few cars have been offered this week and have sold at 35c per bushel on track.

HAY—Owing to the finer weather receipts of pressed stock have been freer and prices are 50c per ton lower in consequence. Loose hay remains steady, however. We quote: Baled hay, new, in carlots on track here, $7.50 to $8.50 per ton. Loose hay, farmers' loads, $8 to $9 per ton.

VEGETABLES—There has been another nickel advance in potatoes this week. Swede turnips and beets are firmer by 5c bushel, while onions are ½c per lb. higher. Cauliflower and Ontario tomatoes are practically out of the market. Celery is worth 40c per dozen. We quote: Potatoes, farmers' loads, 55c per bushel; cabbage, $15 per ton; Swede turnips, 20c per bushel; parsley, 25c per dozen; onions, 2c per lb; carrots, 40c per bus.; parsnips, 1½c per lb.; beets, 45c per bushel; celery, 30c per dozen; vegetable marrows, 60 to 70c per dozen; pumpkins, 1c per lb.; hubbard squash 1½c per lb.; celery, 40c per doz.

DRESSED MEATS — Veal is ½c lower, and spring lamb the same amount higher, per lb., quotations being 6½ to 10c respectively. Beef steady. We quote: Beef, 5c to 5½c per lb. for city dressed; ½c less for country; veal, 6½c for choice weights; mutton, 7 to 8c; spring lambs, 10c per lb.; hogs, 8c, delivered to the trade here.

POULTRY—Chickens are 1c per lb., dealers paying 12c, live weight. From all indications country shippers will pursue the usual hold off policy and swamp the market on Thanksgiving eve, causing a slump in prices. We quote: Fowl, 9c per lb.; spring chickens, 10c per lb.; turkeys, 12c per lb., all prices live weight, paid by local dealers.

CHEESE—Factories are pretty well sold up. Local jobbing prices are: Ontario, 11½c per lb.; Manitoba, 10½ to 11c per lb.

BUTTER—Not very much moving. Creameries pretty well sold up. We quote, on a jobbing basis, Winnipeg, prints 24c per lb.; assorted boxes, 22½ to 23c per lb.

BUTTER — Dairy — The market is quiet and steady. We quote prices paid by jobbers at Winnipeg as follows: No. 1, 14c.; No. 2, 9½ to 10½c; pound bricks, 18½ to 19c. Price for round lots, Winnipeg, is 12½ to 13c, and from 1 to 2c more for special selected shipments by express.

EGGS—Receipts from the country are practically nil. We quote for imported stock on a jobbing basis, fresh, 23 to 24c; glycerined, 23c per dozen.

HIDES — Business good; prices steady, save for lambs and shearlings, which are worth 10c more owing to growth of wool. We quote: Abattoir hides, 7c for No. 1's, 6c for No. 2's. Country cured butchers' at 6½c to 6¾c for No. 1 grade; lambs, 30c to 40c., and shearlings, 30c to 50c.

TALLOW—The market is quiet. No. 1 tallow is worth 3¾c to 4c per lb., delivered at Winnipeg; No. 2, 3c.

SENECA ROOT — The market is still weaker, prices declining 1 to 2c a lb. Clean, dry root is worth 55 to to 57c per pound delivered Winnipeg.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—Offerings of export cattle are free, and prices have declined 25c per cwt. Butchers' are steady. Export stock is worth $2.50 to $3. Winnipeg, weighed at the point of shipment. We quote $2.75 off cars here for choice butchers' down to $2 for inferior grades.

SHEEP — The market is firmer, prices advancing 50c per cwt. We quote $4 per cwt, Winnipeg.

HOGS—Local prices have increased The general price is 5½c per lb., a decrease of ¼c per lb. As high as 6c has been paid during the week, but firms paying this figure announced a drop to 5½c per lb. to take effect Nov. 5. We quote 5½c per lb. Selected weights, Winnipeg.

Thursday, Nov. 5, 1904.

WHEAT: By the end of last week the excitement caused in the wheat markets by the British-Russian incident in the North Sea had pretty well subsided, and the feeling of tiredness which had been coming over the trade was again showing itself. A moderate decline in prices on Saturday was followed by a heavy drop on Monday which made a decline of 2½c. to 3c. in the three days. On Tuesday certain movements and actions of the British and Russian fleets off Gibraltar caused a renewal of foreboding sentiment, which sent the markets up again with a sharp advance. Later information showed there was no cause for alarm, but in the meantime other strengthening factors have appeared, and yesterday and to-day, although markets have not been active, prices have kept firm and even advanced slightly. On the week, however, the price changes shown by the quotations of the American markets are a decline of 1c. to 2c. in December wheat, a decline of ½c. to ¾c. in May and an advance of ½c. to 1c. in July. The strengthening factors alluded to above are principally that the weather in the winter wheat States is becoming too dry for the new crop (this is the cause of the advance in July), and there are many reports about the hessian fly being prevalent. From the Argentine cool and wet weather is reported, which, if continued, might be very detrimental to the favorable development of that crop. What to us, however, seems the most important item of strength is the fact that the primary receipts of wheat in the United States for the last four days are 1,690,000 bushels less than for the corresponding four days last year, and of course should this be tontinued for a time in anything like the same ratio it would soon have an important effect on the wheat markets. Except when a war scare shows up the European trade does not show any anxiety over the situation. Up to the present time supplies to importing countries have been ample. America is only shipping about one-third of the quantity weekly which she did last year, but Russia more than makes up her immense exports for decreased quantity from America. Last week Russia shipped over 6,000,000 bushels; America, 1,480,000 bushels. It has been a matter of surprise to many how Russia could ship so largely with a great war being prosecuted, but the reason is simple. Russia has had three large wheat crops in succession, therefore a large amount of wheat available for export. This would, under ordinary circumstances come out gradually, but owing to the war money is tight, and bankers will only make advances on grain at usurious interest and large margin, and it is this which is forcing such large shipments in the meantime. While the movement of wheat in the United States is decreasing, it is increasing in the Canadian Northwest, and while the American visible supply increased last week 1,840,000 bushels more than half of this increase occurred at Fort William, the increase there on the week being 979,071 bushels. The number of cars of wheat inspected at Winnipeg during the month of October was 9,074, compared with 8,289 cars in October last year. The visible supply increased last week 1,840,000 bushels against an increase of 1,236,000 bushels the previous week and a decrease of 268,000 last year. The world's shipments were 10,856,000 bushels, against 10,920,000 bus. the previous week and 11,560,000 last year. The visible supply, according to Bradstreet's, increased 3,500,000 bushels, against an increase the previous week of 3,539,000 bus., and an increase of 519,000 bus. last year.

The Manitoba wheat market has for the most part been rather dull and inactive throughout the week. There was some expectation that there might be a squeeze in closing up the October trades, but evidently they had been well provided for in good time as there was plenty of spot wheat for sale on Monday. Since then cash wheat is selling at a shade under November price. Shippers are not active and stocks are accumulating at Fort William, the increase there last week being 979,071 bushels, against an increase of 84,431 bushels same week last year. Prices to-day are 1 Northern, 97½c; 2 Nor., 94c.; 3 Nor., 89½c.; No. 4 wheat, Extra, 82½c.; No. 4 wheat, 81½.; No. 5 wheat, 69½.; feed wheat, 60½c.; No. 2 feed, 50½c., spot or past Winnipeg. On the option market November closed 97½.; December, 95½c.; May, $1.00⅜c. All prices are for in store Fort William and Port Arthur.

The development of the dairy industry in the United States is scarcely realized by business men. In 1898 the butter haul over the Minneapolis and St. Louis railroad was four hundred thousand pounds, and last year it was nearly fourteen millions, the gain coming wholly from developments of creameries along that road.

SAYS KAISER PLANS TO GERMANIZE ALL EUROPE.

Mr. Eduoard Lockroy believes that Germany will be the ruling power and will make all Europe German. He thinks, in fact, that the Kaiser is already scheming in this direction. Russia will be crushed after the war with Japan, even if she comes out victorious in the end. Austria is already German; Italy is also under the German thumb, one of the Kaiser's sons has been named Atilla, and has learned the Hungarian language to be ready to occupy the Hungarian throne when Emperor Francis Joseph dies. The Scandinavian countries are even now turning to Germany for fear of Russia. Denmark was robbed of half her territory by Prussia in 1864. In Turkey German officers are drilling the army; a German Princess, and sister of the future German Kaiser, will be Queen of Spain, another in time will be Queen of Greece, and a German Prince is the consort of the Queen of Holland. France, M. Lockroy says, is beloved of all in Europe, but she will be swallowed up and Germanized when a United States of Europe will be formed under German hegemony.

OLD WORLD NEWS.

DAUGHTER OF MARQUIS OF FAMOUS HUNTER.

Among the latest additions to the list of successful young sportswomen is Lady Margaret Compton, the debutante and only daughter of the Marquis of Northampton. Quite recently she has secured a very heavy stag with a fine head, and earlier in the season a magnificent fallow buck fell to her rifle in Loch Luichart Forest in Rossbire.

MARLBOROUGH WILL GIVE A MOVING DINNER.

The Duchess of Marlborough will inaugurate quite an innovation the coming winter. None of her dinner guests shall be bored, if she can help it. To facilitate this, ladies and gentlemen will change their neighbors at every course. Of the contemplated changes the diners are advised by a card they find under their napkin. The Duke and Duchess promise themselves much diversion from the change which will probably please all—except lovers.

MISS ASTOR WEDS CAPTAIN CLAY IN LONDON.

Miss Pauline Astor and Captain Spencer Clay were married in London on Oct. 29. The best man was Captain Cleude de Crespigny of the Second Life Guards, aide de camp to Lord Curzon, Viceroy of India, and son of Sir Claude de Crespigny. Miss Astor's pages wore cavalier suits of white satin, pink-lined capes slung from the shoulders. The suits were worn with blouses of white chiffon, with ruffles, cravats of white lace and white shoes and stockings.

KING GETS GRAPES OFF HIS 136-YEAR-OLD VINE.

On the famous vine at Hampton Court Palace the vintage has been commenced, the best of the fruit going to the King's table. This year only about 400 bunches were allowed to mature, over 1,000 having been thinned out, with the result that the grapes have been of better quality and color. The vine, which is 136 years old, has been known to produce as many as 2,200 bunches in one year. This season all are over one pound in weight, and many have turned the scale at nearly two pounds.

ENGLISH WIDOWERS RUSH TO THE ALTAR.

The discussion as to the "Handicap Marriage" is still in full swing in London. The question as to whether the marriage is becoming, in the ?yes of the men, an increasing burden, the weight of which they shun, has been discussed in the press by well-known men and women from all parts of the British Isles. The pertinent question now asked is "Why, if marriage is such a burden, do widowers remarry?" The latest annual report of the Registrar General states that during the year 23,857 widowers were married in England and Wales, and the previous year the marriages of widowers numbered 25,222. If young men marry from ignorance of what the burden imposed upon them may mean it is strange that those who have already experienced what matrimony really is should seek again to meet its drawbacks and responsibilities.

SHERLOCK HOLMES TO RETIRE FROM PUBLIC LIFE.

It will be a matter of great regret to many that next December will mark the final retirement from public life of the eminent detective, Sherlock Holmes. Despite his iron constitution and nerves of steel, Mr. Holmes is at last feeling the strain of his great achievements. The bald announcement of his retirement is chronicled in the The Bookman as follows: We hear that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has written for the Christmas number of the Strand Magazine the last adventure of the famous Sherlock Holmes which he will ever chronicle. It is said to be "The Adventure of the Second Stain." When Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was asked for the reasons and circumstances of the famous detective's retirement, he said: "A man must retire some time. He can't go on forever. Yes, his retirement is now absolute and final. So far as I know, there is not the slightest intention of his ever again entering the work of the detection of crime. His last adventure will be a strenuous one, and will, I think, be on a level with some of his higher achievements. After it he retires for good.

KING EDWARD TAKES TO A FISH DIET.

The King, like his mother, the late Queen Victoria, has very domestic ideas, which have sometimes a rather extraordinary way of developing. Queen Victoria, while lavish in all matters of state or in the entertainment of her guests, was very careful about the expenditure in her personal household, and the King is very much like her in this respect. On his return from Scotland the other day His Majesty sent round to a fishmonger nearest to Buckingham Palace for two fresh herrings. The order was presented by a royal footman gorgeous in scarlet and gold, and the King ate the herring for breakfast. In olden days the extravagant Kings of England would have bought the entire herring supply in the shop. This taste for fresh herrings was cultivated in the King by Sir Francis Laking, the court physician, who thinks they are the best form of food obtainable. It is a fact that King Edward, on the morning of his coronation, ate nothing but two fresh herrings, which were ordered in exactly the same way. Since that time His Majesty has "fancied" them many times, but the order is invariably for "two only." The King has lost several pounds in weight through the exercise he has taken in Scotland, besides the pounds he has lost at Marienbad, and is in better health than he has been for several years past.

WAR NEWS.

SEALS THE DOOM OF PORT ARTHUR.

A despatch from Chefoo says: Port Arthur is doomed. The correspondent of the Associated Press here has received information, the reliability of which is beyond question that the Japanese now occupy positions which place the east side of the town at their mercy. The last assault has gained for them positions which ensure the ability to enter the main east forts whenever they are ready.

From the headquarters of the third Japanese army in front of Port Arthur, Nov. 3, by way of Chefoo, comes the following particulars: The Japanese are now in position to commence the beginning of the end of the operations to capture the eastern fortified ridges. Their siege plans have been completed by the placing of 11-inch Howitzers. During the night of Oct. 29 all the reserves advanced through a network of trenches in front of the eastern fortified ridges from south of Keekwan to west of Keekwan and to the west of Rihlung mountain, called by the Japanese "Schochosan." The bombardment began at dawn, Oct. 30, and infantry attacks were planned at noon against Rihlung mountain, an entrenched hill between the east of Banjusan and the east of Keekwan forts. There is tremendous excitement among the troops, who are convinced of success and mean to capture the fortified ridges and mean to compel the surrender of Port Arthur in time for the Mikado's birthday. It is calculated by the Japanese that if the Russians do not surrender Port Arthur, the latter will be capable of prolonging their final stand at Liaoti mountain and on the Tiger's Tail for a much longer time with the mere hope of proplonging the struggle. Long before the second Pacific squadron arrives the Japanese flag will be waving over the wrecked citadel. This will end Viceroy Alexieff's dream of an unconquerable city. The Japanese have not occupied the main forts and highest points of the east hills, but they occupy in overwhelming numbers positions which will enable them to drive the Russians back whenever they desire. When the Japanese occupy the east port ridge they will completely dominate the other Russian forts with their artillery.

CAPTURE IMPORTANT POSITION.

Japanese arriving from Chefoo at Dalny, report that the Japanese captured Rihlung mountain and Sungshu mountain, which lies between the railroad and Rihlung mountain. They also report that the Japanese have captured east Keekwan mountain. Conservative Japanese, realizing the intense desire of the Japanese for good news on the Emperor's birthday, received the above reports with reserve. Regarding the capture of Rihlung and Sungshu mountains the report is not considered improbable, but Japanese say that it is not intended to occupy east Keekwan mountain. In August the Japanese succeeded in entering east Keekwan Fort, as was related in these despatches at the time, but under the concentrated fire of the other forts they were compelled to retire. Japanese officers here say that it is impossible to hold east Keekwan, and that therefore an attempt on that position is merely on a feint. When the Japanese occupied the Russian trenches on Rihlung mountain it is said that the Russians turned a current of water into the trenches, but that the Japanese held fast. Previous to this Japanese shells exploded two land mines on Rihlung mountain.

JAPS IN CANADA CALLED HOME.

Hundreds of Japanese from different sections of Canada are leaving for the Orient to join the colors and fight in defence of their beloved land. Many of these little brown men are trained in the art of military science, having, before coming to America, belonged to the reserve. Their names and addresses are on file with the military authorities in Japan, and in a time of necessity, such as the present, communications are sent, requesting them to return and take up arms in defence of the land of their nativity.

"DAN" LENO IS DEAD.

"Dan" Leno, the principal attraction at the Drury Lane pantomines, London, for many years, and the most noted music hall comedian in Great Britain, died Tuesday morning of heart failure.

THESE CLUBITES GO TEN TO THE TON.

An extraordinary club in Paris, which counts among its members only men weighing 200 pounds and over is in the habit of giving monthly dinners which are Gargantuan feats. At the last meeting of the 200-pounder club one of the liveliest members present was M. Manembourg, who weighed 320 pounds, and was 62 years of age. Unfortunately this aged fat man reckoned beyond his strength, for, though he ate heartily and felt no inconvenience from his meal during the feast, as soon as he reached his own doorstep he was seized with apoplexy and died without regaining consciousness.

BIG CHANGE IN BRITISH ARMY.

The British Army Council, says a cable from London, has issued an important order under which recruits, instead of enlisting three years with the colors and nine in the reserve infantry of the line, will in future enlist for nine years with the colors and three in the reserves, thus practically abolishing the short service system. War Secretary Arnold Forster foreshadowed this change in a speech last July, in which he declared that the existing system had proved a failure, because so few men volunteered to extend their service with the colors. Some critics, however, declare the existing difficulty of obtaining recruits will be greatly enhanced under the new order.

The Fernie Free Press

ESTABLISHED 1898.

THE FERNIE FREE PRESS, FERNIE, BRITISH COLUMBIA

FRIDAY, NOV. 11, 1904

THE ROSSLAND MINER is boosting W. A. Galliher for Minister of Mines. It also politely hints that Hon. C. H. McIntosh should drop out of the contest.

* * *

The Board of Trade will hold a meeting to urge a trail into the Flathead from Fernie. This is a matter of the most vital importance to the city and no time should be lost in putting forward every effort to attain that end. We understand that the Board is in possession of certain facts which go far to prove the superiority of the Fernie route over every other.

* * *

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has been sustained at the polls, the republicans winning a victory quite as marked as that scored by the liberals in the Dominion elections. The latest returns show that Roosevelt has a larger majority than was ever won by any preceding candidate. His total plurality over Parker is given at 1,500,000, the next greatest victory being that of McKinley in 1896 when the republicans tallied up a plurality of 850,000.

* * *

WOULD not an excursion from Spokane to Fernie be an admirable manner of commemorating the opening of the G. N. Branch to Fernie? We have no doubt that many of our American cousins from that city would take advantage of such a trip, were the Railway Company and the Fernie people to offer suitable inducements. The wonderful resources of this district will bear the closest inspection and the more they are inspected the quicker they will be developed.

* * *

Now that the Dominion and the Presidential elections are over the two countries can settle down to business again. It is a noticable fact that the Presidential election usually affects commercial and industrial activity on this side of the line almost to as great an extent as does our own general elections. It is fortunate therefore that the two dates came so close together and that the ordeal is now over. In the coal and coke industry a decided impetus is expected. The mining and smelting industries have suffered the usual depression and reduced the market for fuel. A lively resumption of these industries to the fullest capacity will now likely follow.

OFF TO ST. LOUIS

Mr. George Clapp, secretary treasurer of the local trackmen's union left on Tuesday for St Louis, where he will attend the international convention of this large order. Mr. Clapp is the delegate from the Crows Nest Branch, an honor which he also held two years ago. He will be absent three weeks during which time he will avail himself of the opportunity of taking a look over the World's Fair.

Mrs. Marion Rutherford, Dominion organizer for the W. C. T. U., addressed a public meeting in the Methodist church last week on temperance reform. Mrs. Rutherford is a sister-in-law of Fred Rutherford, of this city.

Wm. Handley has purchased the lot north of the Roma hotel where he will erect a three storey stone livery stable. He has commenced hauling the stone already but the actual building operations will be deferred until spring.

Don't forget the fifth annual Thanksgiving social to be given by the ladies of the Methodist church, Thursday, Nov. 17th. Good programme consisting of recitations, solos, duets, etc., and a very amusing pantomime. Tickets 25c.

Mr. J. A. Macdonald, K.C., of Rossland, leader of the opposition in the provincial house, will address the electors on Monday, 14th inst. This is Mr. Macdonald's first appearance before a Fernie audience. There should be a good attendance to hear him.

The eastbound express was delayed an hour and a half on Tuesday evening on account of an awkward mistake of the train despatcher at Cranbrook. The express was ordered to pass a freight at Yak and the freight received orders to pass the express ten miles east of Yak. The trains were thus waiting for each other that length of time with ten miles of track between them. Fortunately the mistake was on the right side and the orders did not overlap.

A car loaded with slack fell over the the end of the high slack tipple at the coke ovens last Saturday morning. The accident was due to a misunderstanding on the part of the Crew as to the number of cars in the train. The car was a total wreck.

NOTICE

A general meeting of the Board of Trade will be held on Monday evening at seven o'clock at the Fire Hall to urge the building of a trail to the Flathead from Fernie.

Mr. Langlois is much pleased with the growth and solidity of Fernie. In an interview he stated that his Company had decided to loan again in Fernie to a limited extent, keeping at least up to the maximum amount loaned in the past, "You know," he said, "that until the passage of the iniquitous tax bill at the last session of the Legislature we were doing a big loaning business in the Province. Since then we loaned nearly all our money outside of the Province. Had it not been for that tax we would have loaned a quarter of a million more in this Province this year."

New England Dinner

The Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian church are following out a novel idea for the celebration of Thanksgiving. It will consist of a New England Dinner given in Stork's hall. A bountiful spread will be provided after which a good program of music will be given. The dinner will be served from 6 to 8 o'clock. Coupon tickets will be issued that those leaving after the dinner may return for the program afterwards.

Walker's Comedians played "Brown's In Town" to a medium sized audience on Monday evening. The play was well enjoyed judging by the hearty applause which it received. Mr. W. M. Walker, brother of C. P. Walker was with the show this time. He stated that the Company would probably have a couple of good comedy dramas with well defined plots throughout, on its next western tour This change will be welcomed in Fernie as the close resemblance which this company's light comedies bear to each other makes them somewhat monotonous.

The need af a resident constable at Coal Creek has for some time past been strongly impressed upon the citizens of that growing town. Chief McMullin has done what he could to have the appointment made. Temporary appointments have been made but the government have heretofore been unwilling to incur the extra expense of maintaining a regular officer. Chief McMullin is now hopeful of overcoming this objection by retrenching in other parts of the district. The constable has been taken off at Fort Steele and in a short time one of the Morrissey constables will be taken off.

CHAPTER XIX.

CASSANDRA SURVIVES TROY.

THE midday meal had been eaten, coffee had been served on the veranda to Estelle and Father Grhe, whom she had persuaded to prolong his duty call at the afflicted home. Suffering was depicted in her face, but also the meek resignation of the martyr. The priest, whose breadth of girth had grown in the pinching times of war, but whose hair had thinned and was whitening, inhaled the smoke of perique from a long pipe with evident satisfaction, though a look of protest seemed to have settled upon his benignant countenance. Odette, matured and grave, sat on a cypress block outside the gate, listlessly looking up and down the deserted road. The warm languor of spring was in the air, the hush of tropical noon was on all the scene.

"My child," said Father Grhe, "the life of a Discalced Carmelite nun is one of unutterable severity. It is but a breathing death. Her cell is, in fact, a grave, her convent a cemetery. More than figuratively she is dead to the world. She can scarce be called a shade of her former self, immured behind walls and grates, barefoot, shorn, her sight riveted to the ground, subsisting on crusts dogs would scarce eat. Were I pope the order should be abolished. Think of some other—a Sister of Charity, a Little Sister of the Poor, a Sister of the Sacred Heart. Any of these serves God by serving his children in the world he made for them."

"It is your tender heart, father, which counsels," she replied, "and it cannot fully know the needs and cravings of my spirit. To mingle with the world even on pious errands must always remind me in some degree of what I have lost, of what I have suffered. Forgiveness of wrongs, forgetfulness of sorrows, absorption in God the Consoler, will soonest come in the cell of the discalced nun. And it may be there my soul will soonest be chastened and released."

"I fear it is the latter hope which most recruits the order," sighed the priest.

"Let not the subject disturb you further for the present, father," she said, "for I will stay by my poor grandfather to the end, as I promised, and possibly then I may be able to see as you do. Will M. Quillebert, you think, be cruel enough to disturb grandpere while he is so ill?"

"Cruel enough, yes, but scarcely bold enough to risk the indignation of the people."

"And can you believe M. Evariste will fulfill his threat of coming here again and repeating his demand upon me? Can you believe he will after what I said to him, as I have told you?"

"I fear he will have the hardihood and meanness to do so. Whatever of manliness and generosity he may have had in former years seems to have been educated out of him by his tutelage to Quillebert," answered Father Grhe, with a bitterness for which he atoned that night with 30 Ave Marias and three readings of the daily office.

"Then, I pray you to stay here, father, as late as you can. I will not ask you to be present at the dread interview, but I shall have courage from knowing you are near."

"Fear not, daughter. I will remain."

"Oh, I wish it was over," she whispered, shuddering.

A shrill scream at the gate startled both to their feet to see Odette dart down the road like a bird of flight.

"What can have happened to the girl?" exclaimed Estelle, alarmed.

"Stay here. I will go and see," said the priest, and he hurried hatless along the gravel walk to the gate and out into the road.

A strange sight met his gaze. The primitive mail coach from Red River Landing, on the Mississippi, with its leather curtains down and drawn by two lean and weary ponies, was approaching. It was surrounded by a score of men on horseback and afoot, crowding past each other and eagerly peering through the front and the sides of the ancient vehicle, all speaking at once, so that their excited voices produced an unintelligible hum. Odette, with her arms round his neck, appeared to be dragging a handsome dark man, whose arm was about her waist, toward the coach, entreating wildly:

"Make him get out! He must get out! Do not let him go by! Help him down! Lead him in! He must not go by!"

Father Grhe rushed through the group, threw aside the curtain, looked within and fell back a step, his face radiant with ecstatic astonishment. Raising his eyes heavenward and spreading his open palms, he said solemnly:

"Blessed be the name of the Lord now and forever!"

Instantly every head was bared and reverently bowed, and from Imel, the old schoolmaster, came the response:

"From the rising to the setting sun blessed be the name of the Lord!"

Seizing the bridle bits, the priest pulled the unwilling beasts to the gate, tore off the curtain and extending his arms within, said:

"Come, your duty stops you here. The merciful and mysterious God has sent you. Come!"

In affectionate embrace he tenderly lifted from the coach a frail figure clad in faded, threadbare gray. The left arm clung to the priest for support; the right hung limp from a drooping, shrunken shoulder. The dark man stepped quickly to the maimed side and passed one arm about his body. As the emaciated face turned in mute and kindly recognition a mighty shout of joy and welcome went up from the men on horses and echoed far into the still forest. At a sign from the priest the company halted at the gate while he passed in with his tottering burden and proceeded slowly up the path. Odette ran to Estelle, who stood on the veranda bewildered, and, seizing her hand, said:

"Come, my mistress, but be calm. Come, mistress."

"What does it mean, Odette?" asked Estelle, trembling from head to foot.

"Come, mistress, but be calm. Come, come!" Odette repeated and led her down the walk.

As he drew near the man in gray raised his head and disengaging the unwounded hand held it out to her and said:

"Estelle, sweet angel, come!"

She threw a quick, intensely searching look into the pallid face smiling through pain and in an instant was on her knees kissing the thin hand that closed upon hers.

"My love, my hope, my life! Oh, how wonderful and good is God!" she sobbed.

"'The Lord lifteth up them that are cast down; the Lord loveth the just,'" exclaimed the priest, down whose cheeks great tears of joy were coursing, and led his charge to the veranda.

The return of Horace Oakfell seemed a veritable resurrection of the dead. But there was no miracle. It was all explained by the story of Leon, who told it at Oakfell's request and told it with modesty and self negation rare in heroes even of less merit:

"Mr. Horace fell by the spring at Perryville, just as at the same moment a shell burst above him and a volley was fired from the stone fence. I was behind and saw him fall. I was not hit, but fell, too, for I was in the service only for him and determined to leave him above ground and if they buried him to know where to find his grave. I felt his chest moving and found he was breathing. The southern soldiers were early driven from the neighborhood of the spring. I bathed Mr. Horace's face and neck with water and wound my shirt about his shoulder, which had been torn away by a minie ball and a piece of the shell. He has no right shoulder now. The battle was over before sunset, and when the Union soldiers came to bury the dead and carry off the wounded he had opened his eyes, but could not speak or move. A sergeant said he would die before morning, and it was of no use to take him from the field, but I begged and implored them not to leave him, and a captain ordered him to be moved to the rear. With others he was hauled in an open wagon to Bardstown and put in a big Catholic college, which was turned into a hospital. They said I had nothing to do with secession and was not a prisoner, but I walked behind the wagon and saw him laid on the floor, with hundreds of the wounded of both sides. They let me wait on the poor men, and I attended to Mr. Horace through the six months they kept him there. Then they sent him to a hospital at New Albany, in Indiana. I managed to follow and got employment in the hospital kitchen. They never did take the little pieces of broken bone from his shoulder, and his wound did not heal. But he got so that he could sit up, and they sent him to the Rock Island prison. It took me a long time, but I worked my way there, and, though I could not get inside the wall, I heard he was still alive. I got a place as waiter in a little hotel and kept pretty well posted about the dispositions made of the prisoners.

"Next they changed him to the Camp Douglas prison at Chicago. He was not able to walk, as the others did, and they carried him in an ambulance to the boat. I went, too, and at Chicago got work in a livery stable. They were strict on the prisoners at Camp Douglas, I could not get inside, but I kept asking questions of people near the prison and learned something of what was going on. About a year ago I was led to believe he had been sent to Fortress Monroe in Virginia for exchange. I just swore not to lose him, and after weeks of walking and some stolen rides on railroads I succeeded in reaching that place, to be told that a wounded lieutenant answering his description had been exchanged and forwarded to Richmond. It was not much trouble for me to get through the lines, but at Richmond I could find no trace of him. I did not know what to do and like a crazy man wandered from camp to camp and place to place searching for him. At times I was almost starved. It was only last March I saw a boatload of exchanged men come up the James, most of them too weak to hold a gun. Mr. Horace was the second one to stagger down the gangplank, and if I had not caught him he would have fallen. He had been in Camp Douglas all that time. He went twice to the front and was twice ordered back to the hospital. Then came the surrender, and we started for home without rations or money. We crossed the country by slow stages, getting food and shelter from kind country people in West Virginia and Kentucky, but at times Mr. Horace gave out and said he could go no farther. Then I would tell him that I had vowed to bring him home alive or dead, for Mlle. Estelle was waiting for him. He would smile and say, 'Then, God give me strength; come on,' and we would march again. At Louisville he borrowed a small sum of money, and we took passage on the steamboat City of Memphis for Red River Landing. We arrived there this morning in time for the mail back, and here we are."

"God bless you, Leon, and repay you for your noble devotion," exclaimed Estelle, weeping in sympathy and thankfulness.

"God will bless him," Father Grhe said authoritatively.

"A truer heart than Leon's beats not in the breast of any man, whatever be his color or station, and his comfort and advancement are especial charges on my life and fortune," Oakfell added.

"Mr. Horace," Leon protested, "you owe me nothing. Remember, you stood by the poor negro jockey when all the world and all the law were against him. Only be my friend and adviser, and I will be content."

It was touching to see Odette's honest, comely face flush with pride as Leon's narration proceeded and her bosom swell when his praise was spoken by the grateful hearers.

"Estelle," said Horace, stroking her head lovingly, "in the long, dreary nights of imprisonment I have dreamed of this and awakened to wish I had died while dreaming."

"And I, too, have dreamed of this," she softly answered, "but thought we had died and met in heaven."

The click of a latch drew the eyes of the group on the veranda to the gate. Evariste, who, to avoid the sun and the meeting of acquaintances, had ridden through the swamp instead of along the bayou road, entered, slamming the gate behind him, and started briskly up the walk with a swaggering air. Estelle blanched. The priest frowned. Leonie smiled and sat up in his chair. Evariste had almost reached the veranda before he recognized his brother's countenance. He stopped suddenly, an expression of consternation came over his features, and, uttering an inarticulate cry of terror, he turned and ran to the gate, leaped upon his horse and sped like one pursued by demons. His flight was not slackened until Quillebert's house was reached, where Laure stood in the doorway as if expecting him. He drew rein, flung himself from the saddle and, his eyes starting from his head, whispered hoarsely:

"Where is Quillebert?"

"Gone to Marksville to sell this place to Dr. De Roux," Laure replied, with a calmness wholly unruffled by the excitement under which he labored.

"How soon will he return?"

"Not before 9 o'clock tonight. Come in and tell me what has happened."

He followed her into the house and exclaimed:

"Laure, I have seen a ghost!"

"You have not. You are not of the kind that see ghosts."

"I tell you I have seen my brother's ghost."

"You have not. It was your brother himself."

"Then he lives? He has come back?" Evariste cried in agony.

"Yes. I sensed he would."

"And I," groaned Evariste, "foiled, detected, exposed and beggared, I"—

"Have come to me at last, as I knew you would." Laure finished his sentence with the assurance of one who viewed a result of her own designing.

She threw her arms around him in a sudden burst of passion and pressed him unresisting to her breast, hungrily kissing his clammy brow and whispering: "It is fate, Evariste. Submit."

A Fish Peculiarity.

There are some indications that fishes possess a sixth sense, the organs of which are the pores of the head and of the lateral band. This band is a row of little canals connected with the external world by holes through the scales. In these cavities, under which runs a large nerve, are found nerve heads or terminations like those of other sense organs. The use of this apparatus is unknown.

Not In Silence.

"You're forever trying to give the impression that you're a martyr," snapped Mrs. Henpeck. "I suppose you want everybody to think that you suffer in silence?"

"No," replied Mr. Henpeck; "I suffer in the perpetual absence of silence. A little silence would be a positive pleasure to me."

VALUE OF GENTLENESS

BEAUTIES AND POTENTIALITIES OF RARE CHRISTIAN VIRTUE.

"BE GENTLE UNTO ALL MEN"

The Moral Leaveners of the World Have Always Been They Who Believe in the Gentler Methods Which Produce Life, and Not in the Fierce, Passionate Methods of the Iconoclast, the Anarchist and the Firebrand.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1901, by William Bally, of Toronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 30.—In this sermon the preacher tells of the beauties and the potentialities of gentleness and human kindness in the home, in business and in our everyday dealings with friends and enemies. The text is 11. Timothy ii, 24, "Be gentle unto all men."

The great moral leaveners of the world have used but little blasting powder. They are not past masters in the "High Order of Babbling Quarrelers." Like the laborers, lifting higher and higher the walls of Solomon's temple in Jerusalem, they make but little noise. They tread the pathway of life with feet, for the most part, sandaled in velvet. Their voices are not an angry growl, but a dulcet whisper. Their breath is not cyclonic, but a summer zephyr. Their countenances are not twisted with the demoniac passions of a Hogarth's caricature. Their eyes are not flashing with the lightnings of a Mediterranean euroclydon. They are red lipped and laughing eyed and rosy cheeked, with the happy smile of a glorious June sunrise. They believe not in the strenuous life, with its swords and spears and battle-axes and clubs and bludgeons and conflagrations. They believe not in hurling storm cloud against storm cloud, until the deluge comes, and the bridges are swept away, and the harvest fields are battered down, as though two mighty armies had turned the valleys into a gigantic battlefield, where the heavens were resounding with the cannonading of the elements. But they believe in the "gentle life." They believe in the golden pulleys of evaporation, gathering up the waters into the reservoirs of the clouds, to be scattered abroad in the blessed refreshment of April showers. They believe in the gentler means, which produce life, and not in the fierce, passionate methods of the iconoclast, the anarchist and the firebrand, which destroy life.

Nature has her storms, eruptions and earthquakes, which in her angry moods carry death and destruction in their path, but the gentle ways are always used by nature to accomplish her greatest good. Standing upon a ship's deck some day, I say, "Where did yonder tall, straight mast come from?" "Why," you say, "hundreds of years ago a bird was flying over the Maine hills toward her nest with a little seed in her mouth. The keen eye of a hawk spied her. When the hawk began to soar higher and higher in the heavens that he might make one terrific plunge upon his prey, the little bird saw him. Before she fled to safety she gave one little frightened cry. When she uttered that cry her bill opened and the seed dropped to the ground. A gentle wind blew up the valley and covered over that seed with a little soil. A little shower then came and moistened that soil, and the little seed began to sprout. It took root. It grew into a bush. It grew up into a sapling. It rounded out into a great big tree. One day a Maine lumberman came through that valley. With his ax he marked that tree for the shipyard. The tree was cut down. It was dragged to the river and floated down to the sawmill. It was scraped and fixed for a mast. When this ship was launched that tree was fitted in its present place for man's use. Nature developed that tree, not in the upheavels of a day, but by the gentle ways of maturing years."

"What will become of that tree?" "Why," you answer, "by the same gentle means with which that seed was changed into a tree nature will also change that tree into something else. Perhaps next week or next month there will be a storm. This ship will roll and tumble in the trough of the sea and threaten to founder. The captain in order to lighten the ship will put his trumpet to his lips and cry, 'Cut away the mast!' When the boat gives a lurch to leeward over will go the mast. That mast will float around the sea until after awhile it will become waterlogged. Then it will sink to the oceansj bottom. Then the waters will cover over that log with submarine deposits. Years later that log will be changed into coke. Then by a gentle process the coke will be changed into coal. Then, years later, the bed of that ocean by certain changes will be lifted. The submerged continent, which now lies buried between African and America, again may be raised above the waters and toss back its wet locks and put on another crown of green foliage. Then the miners with their pickaxes will begin to dig out the coal. They will come to the old tree now changed into coal. This tree as coal will then be thrown into the open grate of some home to be built a thousand years hence. Then about that burning coal another Ik Marvel may have his reveries, or perhaps before its glow two young lovers may plight their troth while the flames leap and sputter and laugh at the old, old story which they hear—that old, old story of love which is ever new. As nature gently and quietly changes the seed into a bush and the bush into a sapling and the sapling into a great tree, so it will gently change the tree into coke and the coke into coal."

Nature deals gently with her own in her wonder workings. Paul, the old gospel veteran, tells young Timothy, who is about to succeed him, to deal in the same gentle way with the human trees he is about to try to develop into spiritual maturity. Paul practically says, "Kindness and gentleness and love will accomplish far more for Christ than hate or bitterness or fault finding." The old psalmist cried out in rapture, "Thy gentleness hath made me great." May we by gospel gentleness make others great, even as Christ's gentleness can make us great.

The gentle life of the Christian must be manifested toward those with whom we come into closest contact. We first of all should be gentle to our parents, our wives, our husbands and children and brothers and sisters and home associates. We should be gentle when we arise in the morning and prepare for the breakfast table, be gentle when we are fixing the children for school, be gentle when we kiss our wives good-by as we start for the train, be gentle when we come home at night from the store, be very gentle when we tuck away the little ones into their beds for the night, for it is by the gentle words, the gentle deeds and the gentle memories that we hold our greatest influence over our dear ones and not by the rebukes and the censoriousness of our bitter tongues.

We all know that it is only by gentleness we have our greatest influence over our loved ones. Yet, strange to say, when anything goes wrong at the store or in the home and we lose our tempers we nearly always turn our anger against our own children or our own wives or our own husbands or our own brothers and sisters. If the cook is mean and suddenly leaves us in the lurch or the laundryman ruins our best washed dress or we become fatigued from the spring or the fall house cleaning or our clerks cheat us at the store, then we are very apt to vent our displeasure upon our helpless children or our wives or husbands, who have done nothing. The domestic squalls and upheavels are often due entirely to outside causes and not to inside dissensions. Now, my friends, let us one and all learn to guard against speaking harsh words against those we love. Let us deal gently with those who are by our side and who are bound to us by the strong ties of domestic affections.

Remember that in the influence of the "gentle life" in the home we can serve God just as truly in the small things and in the little duties as in the great. "In the effort to appreciate various forms of greatness," wrote Edward Howard Greggs, "we must not underestimate the value of a simple, good life. Just to be good, to keep life pure from degrading elements, to make it constantly helpful in little ways to those who are touched by it, to keep one's spirit always sweet and avoid all manner of petty anger and irritability, that is an ideal as noble as it is difficult." But that is an ideal which God will let us all reach if we daily go to him in prayer. That is an ideal we all should try to reach, for in order to have our loved ones spiritually sweet we must set them an example and avoid all manner of petty anger and irritability. We ourselves must learn by practice to be true types of the Christian's "gentle life."

Thousands of men are ready to say they will be kind and gentle to their friends. They are not ready, however, to say they will be kind and forgiving to their enemies. They pride themselves upon the fact that they are good lovers. They also pride themselves upon the fact that they are good haters. If a man does them a kindness they store that fact away in the most secure treasure room of the "temple of memory." They will wait, if need be, ten, twenty, thirty or even forty years to pay back that kindness. But though some people never forget a friend, on the other hand, others never forgive an injury done by an enemy. They may have to abide their time a quarter or even half a century, but when the time comes they are as vindictive as though the past injury was of yesterday. Now, my text emphatically says: "Deal gently with friends. Deal gently with the enemy also." Love those who love you. Yes. But love those who hate you and ill treat you and despise you. That is the commandant of my text also.,

Dare you disobey God's orders to deal gently with those who have done you an injury? If you do God will make you rue your defiance in more ways than one. The "sword of hate" is two-edged and keener than any Damascus blade. With one stroke it slays a foe, but when the swordsman draws forth the "blade of vengeance," whetted with mortal blood of his dying enemy, this sword springs back with its unused edge and slays the vindictive swordsman also. Two lives are generally destroyed, and not one. Now, my text demands that you shall try to destroy your foes not by crushing them, but by winning them to your ranks. You are to destroy them, even as Napoleon on his escape from Elba made Marshal Ney and his grenadiers fall at his feet, because they felt he loved them. You are to destroy them by dealing gently with them, by forgiving as well as forgetting the evils of the past.

But greater sweep than the establishment of harmonious relationships with our personal enemies has the application of my text.

To bring the lost sheep back to the Shepherd's fold ought to be the highest wish and desire of every Christian. And that is not to be done by menaces and denunciation. God, as Elijah found, is not in the earthquake nor in the fire, but in "the still small voice." Men may be wooed back to God, but they are seldom driven. And why should we not deal gently with God's wayward children? Do you for one instant think those people who spiritually and morally have gone astray are having a good time? Do you for one moment suppose that the man who, like Laocoon, knows that he and his family are struggling amid the crushing coils of deadly serpents on account of his sins would not gladly be rescued from those enveloping coils if we could only go to him gently in Christ's name and offer to him the peace and the pardon and the hope and the eternal life of the gospel? Ah, yes, my brother, he would, he would!

No man enjoys drinking the bitter dregs of remorse. No man for mere pleasure would allow Satan to keep on flaying him alive, as Satan is doing to his victims all around us. Sometimes at first looks are deceiving in reference to this. From the opened door of the saloon or low haunt of vice we hear the songs and the guffaws of laughter. Then we say, "Oh, what a high carnival is sin?" But stop. Is that all? Do you see that young man who now comes toward us in seedy attire? His step is staggering. He is blear-eyed and maudlin in drink. He turns down a side street and staggers on to his lodgings in the upper room of a poor tenement, where live his wife and four or five half-naked and half-starved children. That young man only ten years ago was dressed as well as you or I. He had then a finer business than you have to-day. He once had just as happy a home. Tell me that man is happy? Is that the man whose wife so proudly stepped to the altar to give herself to him in marriage? Is that the young man her friends congratulated her upon marrying?

Call that fun? Fun to be kicked out of your home? Fun to have the sheriff sell your store over your head? Fun to have all your old friends turn their back upon you and look upon you as an outcast? Through the midnight darkness I hear the echoing of the song of ten years ago now singing, "The wages of sin is death." Oh, no, my brother; that young man is not happy. The worst taskmaster on earth is the devil. No man so much wants to crush the power of sinful temptation as that man who has been compelled to drink the bitter dregs of despair. Do not despise him; pity him, and with gentle words try to win him back to honor and to Christ. He deserves your commiseration. Therefore, if you and I are ready to go to God's outcasts, if we are ready to go to the sinners in Christ's name and say gently, "Brother, Jesus is ready to save you, Jesus wants me to be your friend and help you," there would be no difficulty in most cases about the spiritual rescues. But the trouble with this old hateful and hating world is, as Josh Billings quaintly put it, "When a man starts downhill it seems as though everything was greased for the occasion." And when a man once strikes the bottom of the hill but very few people are ready to fling him the gospel rope and haul him up out of the mud. Oh, man, can you not hear Christ speaking to you in behalf of God's wayward children, as David, the broken-hearted father, once said to General Joab about his wayward boy: "Deal gently for my sake with the young man, even with Absalom."

Oh, how many sinners could be brought to Christ if we would only practice the gospel of a gentle life! It is said that one of the hardest criminals of an eastern penitentiary was converted by the gentleness of a little child. This little girl and her father were being shown through the prison wards. When the party came to a long flight of stairs the warden turned to this hardened life prisoner and murderer near by and said, "Jack, carry her upstairs." When the hard-featured convict stooped down to pick up the little girl she looked up into his face with a smile and said, "Jack, will you kiss me?" And when he was about to put the little one down she said, "Now, Jack, will you let me kiss you?" No sooner were those last words spoken than the old criminal's heart was melted. God struck the rock of Horeb and it gushed forth with tears of penitence. Kindness did it. The gentleness of a little child accomplished what the blows of the keeper and the iron bars could never do. Oh, man, will you not start forth from this moment to win sinful men and women to Jesus Christ by the omnipotent power of a gospelized "gentle life?"

To save immortals for Christ ought to be the chief mission of man. In view of which fact again I ask the same question I asked before, Why should we not be gentle with the sins and wrong-doings of other people? Has not God been very gentle in his dealings with our sins? When William E. Gladstone, the "great commoner" of England, was dying his son was reading to him this beautiful verse from Paul's epistle to young Timothy, "This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners," and no sooner did the son come to the word "sinners" then the dying statesman finished the verse, "of whom I am the chief."

We have seen how man in his devotion to man was ready to sacrifice his all for an earthly master. Cannot we, at least in the same ratio, be willing to sacrifice our lives to the service of Jesus Christ, to bring sinners to Christ through the influences of a "gentle life." Amid a large gathering in London of literary men William Makepeace Thackeray one night said in reference to Shakespeare, whose name was being discussed, "I should like to have been Shakespeare's shoeblack, just to have lived in his house, just to have worshiped him, just to have run on his errands and have seen that sweet, serene face." If the greatest of all English satirists was ready to give such devotion to the greatest of all English dramatists should not we be willing to do what a living Christ wants us to do? Should we not, shall we not, gladly go forth to bring sinners back to the altar of mercy by kindness and Christian love? Charles Wagner, the Alsatian preacher, in pleasure-loving Paris has rung the changes in the power of "the simple life." To-day I preach the gospel of the "gentle life"—the tender gentleness by which God made David great and by which we can, through Christ, make others great, and, through Christ, become great ourselves.

HANDLES FIRE WITH HIS BARE HANDS.

The Barber Asphalt Company of Akron, O., has the only asbestos-skinned workman in that city. He is Tom Huey of Cincinnati. Sticks of wood are burned by the workmen over the material to keep it in a soft condition. It is sometimes necessary to move the fire, and in such cases Huey moves it with his bare hands. The blazing sticks and red hot coals do not affect him in the least. He does not make a quick grasp and throw the fire before it can have a chance to burn, but deliberately picks it up and carries it slowly as the average man would carry a pail of water.

FORGETS SHE IS A WIFE AND PAYS FULL FARE.

Because Mrs. Lee Kerlin forgot for a moment that she was married she was compelled to pay extra fare on her way home to Kokomo, Ind., a few days ago, from St. Louis, where she and her husband went on their wedding tour. They travelled on passes, and, returning, Mrs. Kerlin had to sign the pass. She forgot that she was Mrs. Lee Kerlin and signed her name Miss Nellie Weser. The conductor could not understand the mistake and Kerlin paid full fare for his wife.

"Yes——" (He had been waiting for that little word, and his heart beat faster as it trembled on her lips. "Yes——" How he longed to take her in his arms; but she spoke as though there was more she wished to say. "Yes," she continued: "today I promised to be another's!"

BULLDOG FIGHTS WITH COW IN PARLOR.

A bulldog and cow at Wooster, O., a few days ago, furnished a lively quarter of an hour at the home of John Swank, a railroad man, and when it was over Swank's best parlor furniture was a wreck. The dog and the cow are both owned by Mr. John Bowersox, a neighbor of Swank's. While the cow was being driven home from pasture it was attacked by the dog, which seized the animals's ear and hung on with such tenacity that the cow, crazed with pain, dashed from the road and plunged through a screen door into Swank's parlor. Mrs. Swank and her daughter fled. The cow, with the bulldog hanging to its ear, circled madly about the parlor, crashing over tables and chairs. When the frenzied cow, with blood dripping from its ear where the dog still hung, finally staggered out the front door, every piece of furniture in the room was smashed, the carpet was ruined and the wallpaper was torn and blood-streaked.

HEIRESS TO BE BRIDE OF POOR CONDUCTOR.

Miss Enid Phelps, daughter of a wealthy lawyer and one of the smart set of Denver, Col., is to wed William H. Seip, who was a street car conductor when their acquaintance began. Since he fell in love Seip has invested the savings of nine years in a little grocery, and if he succeeds in business the wedding is to take place. He will not insist upon the fulfillment of the engagement if he fails, as he says he does not want to touch a penny of the girl's money. Miss Phelps first met Seip on his car about two years ago, while she was on her way to a music class at the Denver University. It is understood that her father has withdrawn objections to the match, as he was poor himself when he was young, and finds much to admire in the handsome young conductor.

Superfluous Hair
De Miracle

It is better than electricity, because it does not scar or produce a new growth. Better than X-ray, because it does not burn, scar or paralyze the tissues under the skin. Better than depilatories, because it is not poisonous; therefore, it will not cause blood poisoning, or produce eczema, which is so common with depilatories, and does not break off the hair, thereby increasing its growth.

Electrolysis, X-ray or depilatories are offered you on the bare word of the operators and manufacturers. DE MIRACLE is not. It is the only method which is indorsed by physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and prominent magazines.

DE MIRACLE will be mailed to any address, sealed in plain wrapper for $1. Your money back without question if it fails to do all that is claimed for it.

Our booklet — the most complete treatise on Superfluous Hair ever published—containing the testimonials of numerous physicians and surgeons and those of hundreds of others—will be sent free, in plain, sealed envelope, upon request. GRAIN ELEVATOR SLIDES INTO WATER.

From some cause which cannot be definitely explained, the Ontario elevator at Buffalo, N. Y., collapsed on Oct. 30 and sank into the waters of the Evans slip. The elevator contained about 370,000 bushels of barley, a large portion of which lies at the bottom of the slip. The loss on the grain and the building is estimated at $350,000. Charles Bartholemay, 62 years old, the elevator superintendent, was seriously injured.

KIDNEY DISEASE BAD CIRCULATION

A License Commissioner, Who Suffered Dreadfully from these Ailments, Entirely Cured by

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The blood cannot possibly be pure and in a fit condition to nourish the body when the kidneys are diseased and fail to filter from it the poisonous waste matter.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, by their direct and healthful action on the kidneys, not only overcome diseases of the kidneys, but by doing so ensure a purifying of the blood.

Mr. William B. Best, License Commissioner for the County of Haldimand, and who lives in Cayuga, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled with cramps in my legs. I would awake from sleep in keen distress. The pain would seize me at the ankle and work up the leg almost to the body.

"Believeing this trouble to arise from kidney derangements and bad circulation of the blood, I bought some of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills at W. J. Quinsey's drug store and began using them. They benefitted me from the very first, and by continuing their use I have been completely cured. I would recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to any suffering as I did. I was so bad that I would have to jump out of bed two or three times during the night."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

Three drunks were up also on Tuesday. These men had imbibed too much free whiskey at the Morrissey fire. They were fined $5.00 each. Constable Lorsch brought the six men to Fernie single-handed on Tuesday s train.

Three Slavs named J. Krikoski and Joe and Igneas Mahuga were arranged in the Police Court for assaulting a fellow-countryman named Mike Gostic who appeared in the witness box with a badly disfigured face. The assault took place at Carbonado after a Slav wedding and whiskey had a hand in it as the three accused men seemed to have no recollection of the incident. They contributed $10.00 each toward the Provincial exchequer.

Four knights of the green table faced the city police magistrate on Tuesday morning to answer to the charge of following the gaming profession. They each pleaded guilty and the four cases were disposed of in quick order. James Shea got off with a fine of $25 and $1 costs, as it was his first appearance on this charge. The others, Harry Hudson Charles Johnson and Harry Nash, were each fined $30 and $1 costs, this being the second offense. The fines were all paid, thus swelling the city funds by $119

COAL CREEK NEWS.

An addition is being built to the Trites-Wood Co's store at Coal Creek, The addition is 36 x 40 and will be used for furniture and stoves

Another unmistakable evidence of the growth of Coal Creek is seen in the rapid increase of the school enrollment. Miss Lamont, the teacher, now has an enrollment of 70 children and the single room is taxed to the utmost. The need of increased school accommodation for Coal Creek is very apparent. Another room should be added to the present school without any loss of time. There is little doubt but that there are sufficient children of school age in Coal Creek to fill two rooms. The school is closed this week owing to the absence of Miss Lamonte who is attending the Convention at Cranbrook.

NEW NAMES ADDED

Government has Authorized Returning Officer to put all Names to date on Voters List.

W. H. Whimster held a court of revision on Monday for the new voters list. No objections were made and all the forty-one names were added except one, that of a deceased person.

Mr. Whimster has received a letter from the department at Ottawa stating that the returning officer of Kootenay, Mr John Boultbee, of Rossland, has received instructions to add the sixteen names omitted from the last November revision, and also to include the names in the present revision. This will mean an addition of 56 names. Those who have recently registered should remember that they will be entitled to a vote in the election on Nov. 22nd.

SOLE leather, or apology—which?

—Can you tell from appearances?

But how about vitality—flexibility—shape retention—continued satisfaction?

Is the sole of tough, close textured, long fibred leather, which holds the stitches like wax, repels water, bends like buckskin, and wears to the thinness of a wafer without breaking?

Or—is it short grained as linoleum, brittle and stiff like cardboard, without cling to the stitches, and with a chronic thirst for water, like blotting paper?

How do you know which kind of sole leather is in the shoe, under the finish?

How can you hold the Manufacturer responsible for it—or for value,—if the Dealer, not he, regulates the price?

There are shoes made to sell merely, and shoes made to wear.

The Slater Shoe Makers dare not rob the covered up sole of The Slater Shoe, to give an extra selling effect to the visible shoe upper, because their brand, and price, pledges certain fixed values, from which there is no hedging.

The limit of the Makers' direct responsibility is clearly stated—viz:—their own prices, $4.00 and $5.00—stamped on the soles by themselves.

NOTICE.

SIXTY DAYS after the first publication of this notice, we intend to apply to the Lieutenant Governor in Council for permission to clear out and remove obstructions from the following Creeks in East Kootenay, and build dams and slides thereon and to make other improvements for the purpose of making said creeks navigable for logs:—

1. Little Sank Creek, from the small lake at a point about six miles North East of the Crow's Nest Pass Railway on Block Number 4590 to said Crow's Nest R. R. about three miles East of Jaffray.

2. McBayne Creek, from McBayne Lake to a point where said Creek joins little Sand Creek, a distance of about one and one-half miles.

The only lands affected by these improvements are John Anderson's Pre-emption and said lot 4590.

The only water affected by said improvements are said Little Sand and McBayne Creeks.

The rate of toll proposed to be charged is $1.00 per thousand feet board measure.

BY-LAW NO. 5.

A by-law to regulate the hours during which children may be abroad unattended,

(1) The Council will provide a bell and shall cause the same to be rung at the hour of 9 p. m every evening during the months of April to September inclusive and at the hour of 8 p. m. every evening during October to March inclusive

(2) Between the hours in the last preceding section appointed and the hour of 5 a. m. on the following morning it shall be unlawful for any child under the age of Fourteen years to be in or upon any public street, lane, alley, bridge, park, square, vacant lot or other unoccupied ground or other public place within the limits of the Municipality unless such child is in the charge of and is accompanied by its parent or guardian or some adult person therennto duly authorized by such parent or guardian.

(3) The police constables and such other persons as the Council may appoint shall have the power to arrest and take into custody any child apparently under the age of Fourteen years found unattended as hereinbefore provided during the time hereby prohibited in or upon any public street, lane, alley, bridge, park, square, vacant lot or other unoccupied land or other public place.

(4) Every constable or other officer who shall arrest or take into custody any child under the age of Fourteen years as provided in Section 3 (Three) hereof shall forthwith take such child to his or her home or place of abode and shall warn the parent or parents or guardian of such child against the breach of this By-Law.

(5) If upon the hearing of any information under this By-Law, it shall appear to the Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, or other competent authority before whom such information is heard that the warning mentioned in section 4 [Four] hereof has been duly given in the manner therein described, and that the offence has been repeated, such Magistrate, Justice of the Peace or other competent authority may impose a fine not exceeding Five Dollars [$5.00] for each offense with costs upon such child or upon the parent or guardian of the said child and in default of payment of such fine and costs, such child, parent or guardian shall come liable to imprisonment for a period not exceeding Six [6] days.

(6) Upon any prosecution under this By-Law the evidence of any witness that to the best of his or her judgement any person, with reference to whom any such prosecution is being brought, is a person under the age of Fourteen years shall be prima facie proof that such person is under the age of Fourteen years and shall cast upon the defendant the onus of proving that such child is of greater age.

This By-Law comes into effect on the evening of the 14th of November, 1904.

Mine Horror at Carbonado.

Sudden Outburst of Gas Sweeps Fourteen Men Employed in No. I Mine into Eter ity.

A terrific outburst of gas occurred at No. 1 mine, Carbonado, shortly before twelve o'clock today. The telephone at the Coal Company's office has been kept busy up to the time of going to press and the particularsof the terrible catastrophe have by degrees been partially learned.

All the bodies but Greenman and one of the Brondse brothers had been recovered at five o'clock this evening. The family of Wm. Jenkins arrived from the old country yesterday. Lewis Carter is an unmarried man of about 45 years of age. "Paddy" Boyle was an old timer in the camp, as was Jas. Greenman.

J. Darcy, a driver, escaped after a terrible experience. He was on his way out of the mine, just a little while after parting with Boyle. when he heard a great noise in the mine, like that made when all the cars get off the track. This was followed by a rush of gas and dust. He is still in a dazed condition and could give no clear account of the accident.

All the officials are at the scene of the explosion. Several went down from Fernie and General Superintendent Drinnan went through on his speeder from Michel as rapidly as possible. There seems to be little doubt that the disaster was due to a blow-out. Last year a blow-out occurred in this same mine causing the death of four men. A blow-out is caused by a sudden outburst of a large body of gas.

RICHER THAN EVER

ANOTHER RICH STRIKE OF GALENA IN ST. EUGENE.

The encountering of large, and in some cases unexpected, bodies of ore is becoming of frequent occurrence in the St. Eugene mine. Better still most of these big finds are made in the lower levels, showing that with depth the ore is becoming wider and richer. The mine never looked more promising and there is now about double the quantity of ore blocked out that there was three years ago, before the shutdown. Only within the last few days a big strike has been made. This is in the 125 foot level of the shaft and in a distance of about 1250 feet. Through the courtesy of Patrick Bonner the shift-boss, the editor of the Leader was allowed to go in and see it for himself last evening. It was a sight well worth seeing. In the face of the drift is about 15 feet of clean galena of the highest grade yet found in the mine. The hanging wall had not then been reached, so it was not known how much wider this ore body was. It is clean shipping ore and will be sent to the smelter just as it is. In a vertical line this ore body has a depth of about 1200 feet from the surface, and is back about 250 feet from where the big strike was recently made in the raise from No. 1 tunnel.—Moyie Leader.

SKATING RINK LEASED

Mr. C. J. Digby has again leased the skating rink from Messrs Dobson and Willingham. Mr. Digby is making extensive repairs to the roof to guarantee against leakages during the winter. He has also arranged for more electric light. Eight or ten 50 candle power incondescent lamps will be added. Mr. Digby states that he will have the rink in running shape as soon as the weather permits.

ROMANTIC COMIC OPERA.

The lovers of comic opera will find a charm in "Fra Diavolo" that is seldom found in the popular productions of the day. For over forty years this masterpiece of Anbois has stood the test. The plot is intense, the music standard, the comedy good and in addition to the tuneful melodies there are several dainty scenes of an alluring character. The Beggar Prince Opera Co. will present "Fra Diavolo" on the 23rd. On the following night they will present "La Mascotte" or "Beggar Prince". This is a high class opera company which Mr. Cranston has secured at great cost. Nothing but liberal patronage can enable him to take it through this threatrical circuit at the low price he is, $1.00 and 75 cents.

TEACHERS' CONVENTION

Association Successfully Organized last week at Cranbrook.-G. L. Pedlar President.

The South East Kootenay Teachers' Association was organized at Cranbrook last Tuesday morning. The following teachers were present:—

G. L. Pedlar, Misses Moody, Hall, Ramsay, and Marshall, of Fernie; G. A. King, Mrs. Brock, Miss Lewis, Miss. Cartwright and Miss McVicar, of Cranbrook; Mr. Holland, Fort Steele; Mr. Phalen, Moyie; Miss Nicholson, Ryan; Miss Lamont, Coal Creek; Miss Gibson, Morrissey and Miss Burton, Moyie. David Wilson, of Nelson, inspector of schools and Mr. Dunnell, of Vancouver, Supt. of Manual Training, weve also present.

The election of officers was the first work of the meeting. The following is the result:—

1st Vice Pres., Mrs. Brock, Cranbrook.
3nd Vice Pres., Miss Moody, Fernie.
Secy.-Treas., G. A. King, Cranbrook.
Cor. Sec'y., Miss C. Hall, Fernie.

An open session followed in the afternoon. Inspector Wilson gave a paper on "Teaching of History."

The Wednesday morning session was devoted to a talk on drawing by Mr. Dunnell and a short discourse on the teaching of patriotism, by G. A. King. In the afternoon the teachers were taken for a drive to the St Eugene mission where they learned many interesting facts about the training of the Indian children. The party lunched on the banks of the St. Mary's River, returning to Cranbrook in the evening much pleased with their outing.

On Thursday morning Inspector Wilson gave an address on "The Art of Questioning," followed by an able paper by Mr. Pedlar on "The Teacher as a Student." In the afternoon Mr. Dunnell gave an interesting talk on "Brush Work."

On Thursday evening a public meeting was held in honor of the newly formed Association. Various addresses were given by speakers in the town. Music was furnished by Wright & Millward's Orchestra. Later an informal dance was held.

BUDGET FROM MICHEL

No Better Fire-protected Town in Canada.

Nos. 8 and 9 Produce a lot of Coal. Two Churches under way. Two Miners Burned to Death. Other News Notes.

Nos. 3, 4 and 5 have been closed down and about 75 men have been laid off. Nos. 8 and 9 which supply the best coal at this colliery are being pushed ahead and are producing nearly as much as all the mines previously.

On Monday evening the Debating Society discussed the question, "Resolved that Chinese and Japanese immigration is a detriment to the country." The affirmative won.

The new instruments for the Michel orchestra arrived this week. The money for these excellent instruments was raised by public subscription, the Coal Co. contributing $100.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Dee died on Monday.

The new school is completed and will be in readiness for Monday. Each room is furnished with seating capacity for 50 children. P. Terrion, the present teacher, will be the principal and Miss Amy Nicholson, of Ryan, has been offered the assistant's position. The school grounds which cover an acre of ground are neatly fenced with a high board fence at the sides and a picket fence at the front.

The new Roman Catholic church building is now well under way. C. Greer has the contract.

The new wash house is being rushed rapidly ahead. It is now being shingled and will be completed in ten days. The building is a large one being about 30 feet by 80 feet in size.

Mr. A. R. Wilson has purchased 320 acres of agricultural land at Kootenay Landing.

Michel has as good fire protection as any town of its size in Canada. The new new fire engine was given a thorough test this week. It maintained a steady pressure of 140 lbs. with four streams from one inch nozzles. The town has 5,500 feet of fire hose and five hose reels. The Board of Underwriters will be approached to decrease the rating in the town.

Two miners named Thomas and James Kennedy who lost their lives in an explosion at Canmore the other day worked in these mines until just prior to their death and they were well known here. The two brothers, it is believed, filled a lamp with gasoline in mistake for kerosene at the hotel where they were staying. Thos. was burned to death and James, though he managed to escape from the building, succumbed a few hours later.

WEDDING BELLS

On Wednesday evening a pretty wedding took place at the home of S. W. Chambers when his third daughter Miss Edith was united in marriage to Arthur Lionel Blanchet of Frank. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. D. G. McPhail, who came up from Pincher Creek for the occasion. The newly wedded couple left on the evening express on a honeymoon trip to the Coast where they will spend a few weeks. Upon their return they will take up their residence in Frank.—Blairmore Times.

The bride is well known in Fernie she having lived here for some time. Mr. Blanchet is accountant for the firm of Chambers and Grady.

An Italian from the Old Town was up on Wednesday on the charge of beating his wife. The magistrate bound him over to keep the peace in the sum of $100 The man was perhaps sufficiently punished by his wife's brother who attacked him and in the scuffle chewed off half his upper lip.

LIBERALS' BIG RALLY

J. A. MACDONALD'S FIRST APPEARANCE IN FERNIE

The Leader of the Provincial Liberals Creates a Favorable Impression. Several Good Speeches.

On Monday night a very successful political meeting was held under the auspices of the local Liberal Association. The chief speaker of the evening was J. A. MacDonald, of Rossland, leader of the opposition in the Provincial legislature. He was met at the evening train by members of the Association and escorted to the Napanee. Later the Italian band led the way to the Stork Opera House where a large audience gathered. Across the street from the Opera House was spread a large banner with these words "Fernie welcomes J. A. MacDonald, our next Premier." This was lighted with a long string of incondescent lamps.

Mr. R. Coulthard took the chair at 8.30. He asked the audience to give each of the speakers a good hearing, and his request was followed to the letter. Never at any public meeting had we before observed such good order.

Mayor Stork was called to start the ball rolling. After extending a welcome to Mr. MacDonald, Mr. King and Mr. Ross, all members of the local house he touched lightly on the result of the general election. The conservative defeat he attributed largely to the fact that the party lacked both a policy and a leader. He urged against over-confidence on the part of the Liberals in the Kootenay election. Each Liberal should do all in his power to roll up a big majority for W. A. Galliher and a "full dinner-pail."

W. R. Ross M. P. P. was then invited to speak for the conservative party. He opened with a word of welcome to Mr. MacDonald and Dr. King. The G. T. P. was no longer an issue as the people by their votes had declared in its favor and he was prepared to stand by their verdict. There were many matters pertaining peculiarly to the Kootenays, however, which did enter into the present contest. He accused the liberals of stealing the conservative policy of protection when they came into power, and of maintaining it without regard to changing conditions. Referring to Mr. MacDonald's speech at Cranbrook the night before Mr. Ross anticipated some of that gentleman's arguments. The conservatives had removed the duty on American rough lumber in 1894 but the conditions on the prairie were vastly different now. In two months this year $534,000 worth of American lumber was shipped to Canadian markets. He favored a $2 duty, and he had no faith in the promise of the liberals that the industry would be protected

The Province demanded "better terms" but not in the sense that it was a "baby province" as designated his worthy colleague, to be pampered and humored with favors on condition of it being "good."

In closing he dwelt at some length upon the liberal argument that Mr. Galliher should be returned because he had the ear of the government and he could get more than an opposition member. This he characterised as a "flesh pot argument", which he believed the Kootenay electors would resent on Nov. 22nd.

J. A. MACDONALD

The leader of the liberal party in B. C. was then introduced. He proved to be a forceable and logical speaker, though he frankly admitted that he laid no claims to oratory. He opened by good naturedly railling Mr. Ross for having taken his speech out of his mouth.. In dwelling on the great liberal victory throughout Canada he showed that Mr. Laurier amply disproved the conservative taunt that he could not get along without his two lieutenants, Tarte and Blair in their respective Provinces, and that Mr. Borden in his native province was not only defeated himself but every one of his party.

British Columbia was the "baby Province". He used the term in its truest sense. It was young and needed assistance. Its industries needed fostering and the government at Victoria was not giving it the aid that it should to develop it into the brightest jewel in the crown of Confederation. The G. T. P. would open up vast tracts to the north of us. The north and the south would join the hands of prosperity over the whole province. The speaker then compared the G. T. P. with the substitute offered by Mr. Borden in which the interests of the West were to be ignored.

Mr. MacDonald then dwelt on the emigration policy of the Liberal government and stated that the provincial government had no such policy, the agent general in London, England being only a figure-head.

The Liberal government believed in reasonable protection, with a tariff for revenue purposes. The Liberals had reduced the tariff by 13 per cent., and several articles of commonest use had been placed on the free list.

The speaker went fully into the lumber question. He wished to face it squarely, he said. He believed it ought to be protected in the same manner and to the same extent that other industries were protected. Hon. G. E. Foster had removed that duty on lumber in 1894 and it was improbable that the Conservatives under Mr. Foster would now go as far as the Liberals in replacing the duty. The real grievance of the B. C. Lumbermen had been the lack of markets; and the Laurier administration had already done much to protect the millmen's association by preventing the middlemen on the prairie from making exorbitant profits. This had made the lumber cheaper to the consumer and thus brought it into fairer competition with the American product. There was still the "dumping question" which he believed the Government were considering at the present time. A small duty would probably be placed on American lumber and the dumping clause would then prevent any slaughter of the Canadian market.

Coming down to the two candidates and the choice each elector must make the speaker advocated Mr. Galliher's cause as a straight business proposition. Mr. Galliher was a man who had the ear of the government and who knew the wants of the district. Politics had a strong element of self interest in it and, so far as honor and honesty would permit, it was the duty of the electors of Kootenay to send to Ottawa a representative who would have the best opportunity of furthering the interests of this great constituency. The speaker dwelt on the fact that Mr. McIntosh's home was in Ottawa and he also referred to the Le Roi mining deal.

DR. KING.

Dr. King, M. P. P. was the next speaker. He made some felicitous remarks about Mr. MacDonald "our next Premier." He complimented the people of Fernie on the rapid manner in which they were building up the city. He turned a nice simile by comparing it with the progress Canada was making under Liberal rule. He took up the lead bounty question. The late member had been up against a stiff proposition. He had been the only member in the Dominion House of Parliament whose constituencey was directly interested in lead industry. The bounty was better than a duty as the output of lead in the Dominion was greater than its consumption. On the lumber question Dr. King said that as an interested party he preferred to leave the lumber duty to Mr. Galliher rather than put it in the hands of an opposition member.

D. V. MOTT.

D. V. Mott closed the meeting with a brief though forceable speech. He tackled the lumber question from a provincial stand point. The legislature had raised the license on timber limits to 18 cents an acre the product of which was brought into competition with lumber from Dominion lands paying less than a cent an acre per year. Mr. Mott paid a high tribute to Sir Wilfred Laurier which aroused much enthusiasm.

After hearty cheers for the King, Galliher and Laurier the meeting broke up.

JOHNSON-THOMPSON

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Parsonage by Rev. John Robson, B. A., on Tuesday evening, the contracting parties being Mr. G. Fred Johnson and Miss Fanny Thompson. They left on Wednesday morning's train for Spokane and the coast cities to spend their honeymoon. Returning here in a couple of weeks they will make their home on Jaffray St. The event was kept a secret and their closest friends did not know of it until afterwards. Mr. Johnson is the accountant in Herchmer & Herchmer's law office. Both the bride and groom have resided for some years in Fernie where they have a host of friends. The Free Press joins these in extending heartiest congratulations and good-wishes

Those desirous of joining the select Quadrill Assembly for the winter months are requested to leave their names and addresses with the undersigned as early as possible so that a dance may be held next week. First class music will be provided and no expense spared to make the class a success. H. Beech, Opera House.

A NEW IDEA.

Tonic Treatment for Indigestion—New Strength for the Stomach From New, Rich Red Blood.

The Tonic Treatment—that is the latest and only scientific cure for indigestion. All the leading doctors of Europe and America are using it with sensational success. No more purgatives, no more pepsin, no more patent foods, no more long diet lists saying "Thou shalt not eat this or that." No more of all this—nothing, in fact, but plenty of new, pure rich red blood to tone the liver and give the stomach strength for its work. That is the Tonic Treatment for Indigestion.

The tonic treatment is based on the new idea that drugs which digest the food for the stomach really weaken its powers through disuse. The digestive organs can never do their work properly until they are strong enough to do it for themselves. The only thing that can give the stomach and the liver new strength is good blood—and the only thing that can actually make new blood is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They have long been known as the greatest blood-building tonic in the world, and all the highest medical authorities agree that the one scientific cure for indigestion is the Tonic Treatment. The marvellous success of the treatment has been proved in every corner of the Dominion. One of the latest witnesses is Mr. Joseph Rochette, St. Jerome, Que., who says: "I simply hated the thought of food. Of course I had to force myself to eat, but afterwards I always suffered with dull, heavy pains in the stomach. I seemed to be bilious as well, and this caused severe headaches, which further aggravated my unfortunate position. I grew pale, fell away in weight and the trouble seemed to be undermining my whole constitution. I tried several remedies, but without success; a doctor whom I consulted advised absolute rest, but this was out of the question, as I had to work for my living. Fortunately for me, one of my friends advised me to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to do so. After taking the pills for several weeks there was a decided improvement in my condition. Not only was my digestion better, but my general health improved in every way. New blood seemed to be coursing through my veins, bringing new health and strength every day. I took eight boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills altogether, and those who see me now would never know I had seen an unwell day in my life. I owe my splendid health to these pills, and strongly advise every dyspeptic or weak person to lose no time in taking them."

Mr. Rochette's statement is a strong tribute to the Tonic Treatment. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured him because they actually made new rich blood for him. These pills go right down to the root of the trouble in the blood and cure that. The new blood they make carries healing health and strength to every part of the body. That is the new Tonic Treatment, and the highest medical authorities now recommend this treatment for all the common ailments such as anaemia, headaches, backaches, rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, nervousness, dyspepsia and general weakness. These are all caused by bad blood and therefore are all cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c a box, or six boxes for $2.50 by writing to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

In the old days in this country farming and manufacturing were carried on together to a very large extent. A letter written from Virginia in 1648 gives the following picture of life on the plantation of a certain Captain Matthews, a leading citizen of the colony: "He hath a fine house and all things answerable to it. He sows yearly store of hemp and flax and causes it to be spun. He keeps weavers and hath a tan house, causes leather to be dressed, hath eight shoemakers employed in their trade, hath forty negro servants and brings them up to trades in his house. He yearly sows abundance of wheat, barley, etc. The wheat he selleth at 4 shillings the bushel. He kills store of beeves and sells them to victual the ships when they come thither. He hath abundance of kine, a brave dairy, swine great store and poultry."

Snake Venom.

The action of snake venom on cold blooded animals has been tested by Dr. Noguchi in a long series of experiments. Three venoms were employed—viz, those of the cobra, water moccasin and rattlesnake. Snakes and frogs succumb easily to cobra venom, but are relatively insusceptible to the other venoms. Turtles are more susceptible to all venoms than the foregoing, and fish are still more so. The grasshopper and some crabs are almost insusceptible, while the lobster is only moderately resistant. Excepting the earthworm, all the worms showed a low degree of susceptibility. The venoms have little effect on the echinodermata; sea urchins succumbed, however, but starfish and sea cucumbers were not perceptibly affected.—London Nature.

Canada and the Canoe.

Abolish the canoe and Canada might have a war every five years and then lose fewer young men than the great number that must go down to death in ten years of summer holidays. It is pitiful the mothers who weep, the fathers who mourn and the homes that are darkened simply because young people will take chances that they have no business to take. Death may part the young man from his canoe. Good advice cannot. "Ephraim is joined to his idols," and the victims of the canoe habit will neither keep out of canoes nor be careful while they are in canoes.

SIZE OF AN ATOM.

An Illustration That Gives Some Idea of Its Littleness.

How large is an atom? "Perhaps the simplest though not the most exact way of arriving at a rough estimate of the size of atoms is by measuring the thickness of a soap bubble film where it is as thin as possible just before it bursts," says a writer. "Such a film if composed of atoms must be something like a pebble wall. Now, a pebble wall would not stand if it were not several pebbles thick, and if we had reason to suppose that it was about a dozen pebbles thick we could easily make an estimate of the size of a pebble by measuring the thickness of the wall. That is the case with the thinnest region of a soap film. It is found to have a very definite uniform thickness. It is the thinnest thing known, and by refined optical means its thickness can be accurately measured. It must contain not less than something like a dozen atoms in its thickness, and yet it is only about the twenty-millionth of an inch in thickness by direct measurement. So that the diameter of an atom comes out between one two-hundredth-millionth of an inch. In other words, from about 200,000,000 to 300,000,000 of atoms can lie edge to edge in a linear inch."

BLADES OF GRASS.

The Reason They Grow So Abundantly Throughout the World.

Grasses are widely diffused throughout the world in order to provide abundantly for the sustenance of a very large portion of the animal kingdom.

"Grasses," says Paley, "are nature's care. Cattle feed upon their leaves, birds upon their smaller seeds, men upon the larger, for our bread corn is a grass. They thrive under treatment by which other plants are destroyed. The more their leaves are consumed the more their roots increase, and the more they are trampled upon the thicker they grow. Many that seem dead and dry renew their verdure in the spring. On lofty mountains, where summer heats are not sufficient to ripen the seeds, grasses abound which are viviparous and consequently able to propagate themselves without seed."

It is interesting to note in this connection that animals at liberty in their pasture to range and choose attack the leaves and leave unharmed the stalks which support the reproductive flowers.

A CURIOUS ANIMAL.

The Jelly-like Amoeba Has Neither Limbs, Mouth Nor Stomach.

The amoeba, probably the simplest form of animal life, has neither limbs, mouth, nor stomach. Its whole anatomy consists of a simple cell of the jelly-like material called protoplasm. It moves with a flowing motion, just as a drop of glycerin might slide on a slightly inclined plate.

It feeds by flowing over and ingulfing and minute animal or vegetable organism that may be in its path. When it has digested its food it passes on and leaves the residue behind.

The amoeba can be found on the surface of the mud at the bottom of almost any stagnant pool and is hardly visible without a microscope. It reproduces its kind by simply dividing into two when it has reached a certain size. Occasionally two amoeba merge into one, which breaks up into many much smaller ones. In times of drought the amoeba incloses itself in a hard cyst and waits until its home is wet again.

A Purpose.

A purpose is always a companion. An earnest purpose is the closest of companions. To fulfill duties is more than to enjoy pleasures. It carries its own reward. There is no bitter loneliness for those affectionately devoted to blessing their fellow creatures. The keeper of the lighthouse when night settles around him and the tempest holds revelry and he looks out on the ghastly glare of the breakers and hears the shrieking of the storm fiend, finds good company in the thought that the friendly light he trims will warn endangered crews of their peril and perhaps save them from death. Gifted souls find solace and companionship in their works.

Mutual Lapse of Memory.

Mrs. B., who has passed the meridian of life and is ambling down its western slope, had occasion to consult her doctor. Before he diagnosed her illness he asked her age.

"Doctor," said the old lady, with some asperity, "I am just one year older than I was this time last year when you visited me professionally and asked the same question."

"How old were you then?" asked the doctor. "I have forgotten."

"So have I."

A Deadlock.

"The only way to swim," said the man who assumes to give instruction about everything, "is to have confidence."

"Yes," answered the novice, "and the only way to have confidence is to be perfectly sure you can swim."

Method In It.

Miss Gabbie—It's strange that a girl who used to wear her hair so neatly is so careless about it now. She has to keep brushing stray locks back with her hand. Miss Chellus—That's not strange. She's got an engagement ring.

THE DOCTOR SAID THAT HE MUST DIE

But Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured J. J. Perkins.

He was Unable to Work, and Becoming Destitute, Before He Used the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Tyndall, Man., Nov. 14.—(Special) Unable to work because of Kidney Disease, pronounced incurable by the doctors, and fast becoming destitute, Mr. J. J. Perkins, of this place, found new life and health in Dodd's Kidney Pills. In his gratitude he wants all the world to know of his cure, and that he owes it to Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Perkins says:

"After two years of Kidney Trouble I got so bad the doctor said I was incurable. I got still worse, and at times had such terrible pains in my back and kidneys that I thought I would die.

"I was unable to work and was becoming destitute when a friend persuaded me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Five boxes cured me completely."

WILD BILL'S FIRST FIGHT.

He Was Wounded, but Killed Six of the McKandlas Gang.

Wild Bill, whose real name was James Hickok, first came west in 1857 and drove an ox team on the plains for Majors & Russell in 1860. He subsequently engaged himself to the overland stage company as stock tender and was put in charge of a new stage station on Rock creek, near the old McKandlas station, which was generally known as Robbers' Roost. This was the headquarters for the McKandlas gang, a crowd that had held together since the Missouri-Kansas border ruffian days and generally had things their own way. A man named Ficklin, and a number one stage hand, was the superintendent. He tried to buy out the McKandlas station; but, failing in this, he built a new one near by, putting young Hickok in charge. Up to that time he had never experienced trouble with any one and was not likely to have friction, especially with the old station keeper, McKandlas, or his men.

In the winter of 1860-61 McKandlas and his nephew and four other men passed by the new station on horseback, leading an old man who was afoot. They had a rope around the old fellow's neck, and occasionally they would take a few turns around the horn of the saddle, make a run on the rope and jerk the old man down and drag him on the ground until he was nearly dead. The only spite they had against him was that he was a North Methodist preacher. If Wild Bill was anything he was an abolitionist and free soiler and loyal to the United States. The McKandlas crowd was planning to make a raid on several stations to secure the stock and go south. They told young Hickok they would take the stock. He replied that he would be there.

When they returned late in the evening two stopped at the corral, two went to the front and two to the back door of the cabin or hut. Hickok told them he would shoot the first man who took down the bars of the corral. The elder McKandlas fired at Hickok, but missed him. Hickok returned the fire with a rifle and shot McKandlas in the heart. The next shot from Hickok killed the nephew, and the two fell at the front door. Just then the two at the back door opened fire. One shot from a double barreled gun lodged seven full grown buckshot into Hickok's right side and breast, two of which entered his lungs. The two men who stopped at the corral came to the assistance of the two men at the house. Hickok was then in a hand to hand fight with four men. He killed three of them in the house and wounded the other so badly that he died on the prairie.

Lived Too Fast.

"Poor fellow, he is quite broken down, and the doctor says that his condition is due to fast living."

"Fast living?"

"Yes; you see he is a traveling man, and he was obliged to eat so many dining car meals and lose so much sleep in sleepers that his constitution gave way."

The Sermon.

"I certainly did enjoy your sermon," said the hard case, who seldom attended church.

"Indeed!" replied Rev. Mr. Tawker. "And which part did you enjoy the most?"

"I guess it was the part where I dreamed I had a million dollars."

A MOTHER'S PRECAUTION.

There is no telling when a medicine may be needed in homes where there are young children, and the failure to have a reliable medicine at hand may mean much suffering, and, perhaps, the loss of a priceless life. Every mother should always keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house. This medicine acts promptly and speedily, cures such ills as stomach and bowel troubles, teething troubles, simple fevers, colds, worms and other little ills. And the mother has a guarantee that the Tablets contain no opiate or harmful drug. One wise mother, Mrs. Geo. Hardy, Sourchu, N. S., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets and find them a blessing to children. I am not satisfied without a box in the house at all times." If your dealer does not keep these Tablets in stock send 25 cents to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and you will get a box by mail post paid.

GORGEOUS MALE ATTIRE.

Laws Against Sartorial Excesses In the Seventeenth Century.

Considering the way women are maligned in these days for their fondness for purple and fine linen, it is rather a shock to find that the sumptuary laws of the past were directed mainly against male excesses in the matter of raiment. There is, for instance, an ordinance issued by the lord mayor and common council of London in 1611 with regard to the dress of 'prentices, who were in many cases the sons of wealthy city merchants, gaining "freedom of the city" by apprenticeship. It was ordained in the proclamation, among much else, that they should wear "no hat lined, faced or tufted with velvet, silk or taffety, nor any lawn bands nor lace edged collars nor any pukadillie or other support about the collars of their doublets nor breeches or doublets of any kind of silk nor gloves garnished with silver or gold lace, velvet or silk nor girdles or garters or shoe ties of silk or ribbon nor any rose or such like toyes at all upon the shoes or garters nor sleeves held out by a framework of wire nor silk stockings nor Spanish leather shoes nor any shoes with high heels nor the hair done with any tufts or locks, but cut close in decent manner."

LINCOLN TO YOUNG MEN.

He Urged Them to Bear Their Share In Political Life.

Abraham Lincoln's belief that young men should get up and show what they can do, without waiting to be sought out by older folk, is set forth in the following letter written to William H. Herndon, then at Washington, under date of June 22, 1848:

As to young men. You must not wait to be brought forward by the older men. For instance, do you suppose that I should ever have got into notice if I had waited to be hunted up and pushed forward by older men? You young men get together and form a "Rough and Ready club" and have regular meetings and speeches.

Take in everybody you can get. Harrison Grimsley, L. A. Enos, Lee Kimball and C. W. Matheny will do to begin the thing, but as you go along gather up all the shrewd, wild boys about town, whether just of age or a little under age—Chris Logan, Reddick Ridgely, Lewis Zwizler and hundreds such. Let every one play the part he can play best, some speak, some sing and all "holler."

Your meetings will be of evenings; the older men and the women will go to hear you, so that it will not only contribute to the election of "Old Zach," but will be an interesting pastime and improving to the intellectual faculties of all engaged. Don't fail to do this.

MUSHROOMS ON TREES.

The Method by Which They Are Cultivated In Japan.

Mushrooms grown on trees form quite an important article of export from Japan to China. Shikoku island, where much camphor is produced, is the chief home of this industry. The method employed is as follows: Oak trees about thirty years old are felled in the autumn, and incisions are made with axes at intervals of three or four inches. The trees are then cut into logs four or five feet long and are left in dark, secluded parts of the forest.

After three years mushrooms make their appearance in the incised portions, and when the crop shows signs of growing thin fresh logs are provided. These mushrooms will grow at every season of the year, but in winter and spring artificial stimulus is needed, which is supplied by steeping the logs in water and striking them with mallets or axes to prepare the beds and facilitate the growth. The autumn crop is the largest. The mushrooms after being collected are dried by the sun or by artificial heat.

Picturesque Padua.

Padua, in spite of its flat surroundings, is one of the most picturesque cities of upper Italy. And the seeker after gardens will find many charming bits along the narrow canals or by the sluggish river skirting the city walls. Indeed one might almost include in a study of gardens the beautiful Prato della Valle, the public square before the Church of St. Antonio, with its encircling canal crossed by marble bridges, its range of baroque statues of "worthies" and its central expanse of turf and trees. There is no other example in Italy of a square laid out in this parklike way, and the Prato della Valle would form an admirable model for the treatment of open spaces in a modern city.—Century.

Where Sisters Dress Alike.

In Yucatan, Central America, sisters dress precisely alike, even to the tying of a bow, the turn of a button or the flower in the hair. In the tropics large families are the rule, and any day you may see in the country girls in groups of from three to a baker's dozen, who belong to the same family, as their clothes will show. It is easy thus to distinguish the members of a family anywhere, and not infrequently the sisters are called by their favorite flower or color.

What a Baby Can Do.

Friend—I don't understand why you and your husband should have separated so soon.

Mrs. Aftermath—It was all owing to the baby's temper.

"Mercy on us! How could that be?"

"We couldn't agree as to which one of us the baby took after."

THE TWO HEADED SNAKE.

A Boa Constrictor That Has a Very Deceptive Tail.

Every now and then some traveler tells of a two headed snake which exists in Egypt, and whenever the narrator hasn't seen the snake himself, he is more or less disposed to assert that there really is a snake with two heads in Egypt, because he has been told about it by many reliable persons.

Indeed, sometimes a traveler who has actually caught a glimpse of the snake is likely to declare that it truly is two headed, for the serpent certainly appears to be so when seen only by chance.

It is only when the snake is actually taken up and examined closely that the truth is revealed.

The two headed snake is not a poisonous serpent. It is only a boa constrictor, and it is fairly common. But it is so secretive that it hides away in its sandy burrows almost constantly. It is strangely formed in so far that its tail, instead of tapering off to a point as the tails of other snakes do, widens out into a bludgeon shape, thus making it look so utterly unlike a tail that it is almost impossible to think it is anything but a head when the snake is seen for only a moment.

To add to the deception, jugglers catch these boas and paint jaws and eyes on the tail. The work is so carefully done that only a trained observer can distinguish the real head from the false. Thus the story of the two headed snake has obtained wide circulation, and has even crept into the books of otherwise accurate writers.

Room For Improvement.

At a dinner given by Sir Joshua Reynolds, at which were present Garrick, Johnson, Fox and others, Dr. Bernard, the dean of Derry, had asserted that after the age of forty-five a man does not improve. "I differ with you, sir," said Johnson. "A man may improve, and you yourself have great room for improvement." The dean was confounded and for the instant silent. Recovering himself, he remarked, "On reflection I see no cause to alter my opinion, unless I were to call it improvement for a man to grow—which, I allow, he may—positive, rude and insolent and save arguments by brutality."

Folded In.

"Madge, Harry asked me to marry him last night."

"Oh, I am delighted," replied her friend. "How did it happen?"

"Well, you see, he just asked me, and I said 'Yes,' and then he stood up and folded his arms."

"Well, I never! Was he not more interested than that? Whatever did you do at such treatment?"

"What could I do? You see, I was in his arms when he folded them."

A BAS MOSQUITO!

To arms!
Away with peace and its alluring charms!
We'll forth to meet the foe!
We'll bravely go
And never turn to rest until we find
That enemy avowed of all mankind,
The fierce mosquito, who, with dastard germs,
Assaults the human race, that slaps and squirms
And strives with expletives most impolite
To shoo away these vampires of the night.
We will forget these territorial brawls,
These various diplomatic bluffs and calls.
Come, join the movement 'gainst these hosts that plague you
And massacre by means of fever and ague.
We'll kindle fires and variously smudge 'em
And see likewise if kerosene can budge 'em.
And if these fail we'll find a parasite
Soldier of fortune and bring him to fight
The common foe.
What, ho!
Let us forget all other tales of woe
And try to give the human race a show!

The Value of a Name.

Nelson, a thriving little English town, is a living instance of the value of a name. Not long after the battle of Trafalgar some tinker, tailor or other person established a tiny wayside inn and called it after the naval hero. There was nobody on the spot from whom to expect custom, but the road led to and from populous districts. Travelers stopped at the place, and presently a cottage or two began to rise, then more of them, and the name of the public house answered for the whole. That was the nucleus of the present town. Now 40,000 people live around the site which the old innkeeper chose and called after the name of his hero.

Passing Counterfeits.

Johnny—Say, papa, passing counterfeit money is unlawful, isn't it? Papa—Yes. Johnny—Well, papa, if a man was walking along the street and saw a ten dollar counterfeit bill upon the sidewalk and did not pick it up wouldn't he be guilty of passing counterfeit money and couldn't he be arrested and put in jail? Papa—More likely the lunatic asylum. Now you may go to bed, my son.

MATRON ATTACKED BY A CONVICT.

Mrs. Annie M. Welshe, matron of the state prison at Auburn, N. Y., was beaten almost to death by an infuriated female convict on day last week. The latter is a woman of great strength. Mrs. Welshe was requested by the woman to grant her an interview in the matron's office, and at once summoned the prisoner. Without a word of warning the woman picked up a chair when she entered the room and shattered it over the matron's head, felling her with the first blow. The infuriated convict then began to beat Mrs. Welshe over the head with a club. Another woman convict who acted as a servant hurried to the scene and also was knocked down. But for the timely arrival of the engineer and the gatekeeper the victims would have been killed. After a terrific struggle the two men succeeded in overcoming the frenzied convict.

THE MARKET REPORT

Thompson, Sons & Co's.

Thursda, Nov. 10, 1904.

WHEAT: Nothing special has occurred in the wheat markets during the past week except that circumstances have combined to strengthen the situation in a moderate degree. Taking the American speculative markets as exhibiting the tendency and result of trading during the week we find they show a fairly steady if moderate advance. In the closing days of last week, and in fact up to Monday of this week, very little change occurred, the markets showing steadiness and a firm undertone, with almost no change in prices from day to day, but since Monday a fair advance has been gained, and the feeling in prices in ultimate higher prices has been strengthened. The advance in prices on the week in the American markets is 1c. to 1½c. per bushel. It can scarcely be said that the American markets of themselves have brought about this advance for cash trade in the United States has been in a quieter mood, although they have had one very bullish feature in the large falling off in primary receipts as compared with a year ago. For last week these are around two million bushels less than for same week last year; a remarkable falling off, and were it not that the export of wheat and flour from North America this season is very small compared with such trade for many years back, this lessening of primary receipts would assume greater importance. The price, however, has had help this week from Liverpool, which on more than one day has made good advances, and has for the most part held them. The influence on Liverpool has principally come from reports from the Argentine crop, where too much rain and cool weather has been experienced recently, the same being detrimental to the best progress of the crop at the present stage, and if continued unduly might result in positive damage, and owing to the general situation of the world's breadstuffs' trade, serious damage to the Argentine crop would quickly result in very high prices for wheat. Hence the importance of whatever happens in the Argentine during the next two or three months. In the meantime, however, there is no scarcity of wheat for all requirements. The weekly shipments from exporting countries continue on a large scale, Russia contributing nearly half, and the world's visible stocks of breadstuffs show 19,000,000 bushels larger than same date last year. Present high prices and the expectation of higher prices later on are therefore very much the result and anticipation of scarcity in the future, and of course with economy in consumption and favorable crop prospects for next year this scarcity may after all not become acute. Prospects for the new crops in the northern hemisphere will become more interesting as the season advances. There is every indication that a fair increase in acreage is being put under winter wheat both in Europe and America, and so far reports are favorable as to the getting in of the seed and the start the new crop has got. In the southwestern part of the American winter wheat belt some complaint is being of lack of sufficient moisture, and reports of hessian fly is rife, but some allowance may be made for these reports, as they come principally through channels interested in speculative operations on the wheat markets. The visible supply increased last week 1,867,000 bushels, against an increase of 1,840,000 bushels the previous week and an increase of 2,939,000 bushels last year. The world's shipments were 13,040,000 bushels, against 10,856,000 bushels the previous week and 11,304,000 bushels last year. The world's visible supply, according to Bradstreet's, increased 6,527,000 bushels, against an increase of 3,691,000 bushels the previous week and an increase of 7,406,000 bushels last year.

Manitoba wheat has been for the most part dull and inactive, and while having a fairly good undertone has not participated in the advance recorded in the outside markets; in fact there is a sharp decline in cash prices on some grades, and in December and May wheat in the option market there is an advance of only ¼c. per bushel over closing prices of a week ago. In the cash market the only grade that shows any advance is 1 Nor., which is ¼c. higher. 2 Nor. is ½c. lower, 3 Nor. 1c. lower, No. 4 Extra and No. 4, 3c lower, No. 5, 1c. lower, and Feed 1c. The decline in No. 4 extra and No. 4 is very heavy, and shows that these grades have fallen very much in the estimation of shippers. At close of business to-day we quote prices: No. 1 Nor., 98c.; 2 Nor., 93½c.; 3 Nor., 88⅞c.; No. 4 Extra, 79½c.; No. 4, 78½c.; No. 5, 68½c., Feed, 60c.; No. 2 Feed, 50c., spot or past Winnipeg, and for future delivery Dec. closed 95⅞c., and May $1.00¼; all prices being for in store Fort William and Port Arthur.

Winnipeg, Nov. 11, 1904.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

FLOUR—The market is firm. For best Hungarian patents the prices are: $2.90 per sack of 98lbs.; seconds at $2.70 and strong bakers at $2.10 to $2.40, according to make; XXXX is worth $1.50. All prices given are subject to usual trade discount.

MILLFEED—The market is weak, quotations steady. We quote: Bran, $17 per ton in bulk, delivered to the trade; shorts, $19 per ton.

GROUND FEED—Quotations are steady, market easy. We quote: Oat chop, $25 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley chop, $20; mixed barley and oats, $23; oil cake, $27 per ton.

OATS—Market lower. We quote: 30c. per bushel for No. 2 oats today and 29c for No. 3. Feed grades are worth about 28c. These prices are all for carlots on track here.

BARLEY—Market easy. No. 3 barley is worth 37c per bushel; No. 4, 35c, and feed grade 34c on track, Winnipeg.

FLAXSEED—There has been very little movement as yet and the market is quiet.

SPELTZ—A few cars have been offered this week and have sold at 35c per bushel on track.

HAY—Baled hay is 50c easier. We quote: Baled hay, new, in carlots on track here, $7.50 to 8.00 per ton. Loose hay, farmers' loads, $8 to $9 per ton.

VEGETABLES — The scarcity of potatoes becomes more marked every day. It is thought large quantities were drowned out by the rainy season. Offerings may, however, improve when farmers get through their fall work. Meanwhile prices have advanced 5c per bushel. Cabbage are about 5c per ton firmer. Beets have advanced 5c per bushel. Onions are ½c higher. Some small celery is worth 30c per dozen. Imported lettuce is on the market at 40c. per dozen. We quote: Potatoes, farmers' loads, 60c per bushel; cabbage, $15 to $20 per ton; Swede turnips, 20c per bushel; parsley, 25c per dozen; onions, 2½c per lb.; carrots, 40c per bushel; parsnips, 1½c per lb.; beets, 50c per bushel; celery, 30 to 40c per dozen; vegetable marrows, 60 to 70c per doz.; pumpkins, 1c per lb.; hubbard squash, 1½c. per lb.; lettuce, 40c per dozen.

DRESSED MEATS—Dressed beef is slightly firmer, last week's low range being dropped. The same took place with mutton. Veal is ½c easier. We quote: Beef, 5½c per lb. for city dressed; ½c less for country veal, 6c for choice weights; mutton, 8c; spring lambs, 10c per lb.; hogs, 8c, delivered to the trade here.

POULTRY—The holiday trade is having its effect. Spring chickens have advanced 1c per lb., while turkeys are 1 to 2c higher. We quote: Fowl, 9c per lb.; spring chickens, 11c per lb.; turkeys, 13 to 14c per lb., all prices live weight f.o.b. Winnipeg, paid by local dealers.

CHEESE — Manitobas are slightly firmer, last week's low range being dropped. Local jobbing prices are: Ontario, 11½c per lb.; Manitoba, 11c per lb.

BUTTER — The market is steady. We quote, on a jobbing basis, Winnipeg, prints, 24c per lb.; assorted boxes, 22½ to 23c per lb.

BUTTER—Dairy—Business is dull, prices steady. We quote prices pail by jobbers at Winnipeg as follows: No. 1, 14c; No. 2, 10c; pound bricks, 18 1-2 to 19c. Price of round lots, Winnipeg, is 12 1-2 to 13c, and from 1 to 2c. more for special selected shipments by express.

EGGS—Prices have advanced from 1 to 2c. per dozen. We quote for imported stock on a jobbing basis, fresh, 24 to 25c; glycerined, 23 to 24c per dozen.

HIDES—Quotations unchanged but firm in sympathy with Chicago market. We quote: Abattoir hides, 7c for No. 1's; 6c for No. 2's. Country cured butchers' at 6½ to 6¾c for No. 1 grade; lambs, 30 to 40c, and shearlings, 30 to 50c.

TALLOW—The market is quiet. No. 1 tallow is worth 3¾c to 4c per lb., delivered at Winnipeg; No. 2, 3c.

SENECA ROOT—Export demand is lifeless, and quotations are 1c per lb. lower and business at that very light. Clean, dry root is worth about 55 to 56c per pound delivered Winnipeg.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—Both butchers and exporters are 25c higher, but the market is weak. Export stock is worth $2.75 to $3.25, Winnipeg, weighed at the point of shipment. We quote $3 off cars here for choice butchers' down to $2.25 for inferior grades.

SHEEP—The market is a trifle easier. Quotations steady. We quote $3.50 to $4 per cwt., Winnipeg.

HOGS—The ruling price is steady at 5½c per lb., but a further decline of ¼c lb. is spoken for next week. We quote 5½c per lb., selected weights —Winnipeg.

CHINESE SHOOTING AFFRAY IN NEW YORK.

A shooting affray, with many features resembling the Highbinder outrages of the San Francisco Chinese quarter which occurred in Chinatown in New York a few days ago, may result in the death of Mock Duck, one of the most prominent members of the reform element in the local Chinese colony of that city. Mock was waylaid as he was passing through Pell street, and one of the two bullets fired at him lodged in the abdomen, causing an extremely dangerous wound. When his antagonist, who was captured as he was running down Pell street, was being taken to the patrol box by a policeman, the couple were surrounded by three other Chinamen with revolvers, demanding the release of the prisoner. The situation was becoming serious, when a dozen police reserves arrived and found the policeman backed up in a doorway, the officer holding back the three armed Chinamen. The would-be rescuers fled when the reinforcements arrived near the scene of the shooting. The police found a revolver with a 12-inch barrel and a hunting knife with a blade eight inches long.

MOTHER'S LOVE MORE POTENT AS CURE THAN MEDICINE.

That a mother's love for her child is more efficacious as a cure than all the skill medical science knows how to employ was demonstrated at the Passaic hospital on Friday, says a New York despatch. Little Sammy Clark swallowed carbolic acid on Wednesday because his mother had discovered he told her a lie. Word came from the hospital that he would probably die in a short time, and Mrs. Clark hurried to his bedside. "O, mamma, I am so glad to see you," came from the lips, frightfully burned with the acid. "Will you forgive me?" "Yes, Sammy, I'll forgive you," said the sobbing mother. "You must get well and come home with me." Mrs. Clark took the little fellow's head in her arms as she sat on the cot, and he sank into peaceful sleep. The doctors were surprised when he awoke at the improvement in the boy's condition, and said that mother love was better than medicine. "I do not want to die now," said Sammy. "I want to be a good boy, and will tell no more stories."

LUMBER RECEIPTS INCREASE.

A despatch from Bay City, Mich., says: Lumber receipts from Canada during October totalled 15,200,000 feet, the aggregate for the season being 87,600,000 feet, somewhat less than last year. The receipts of sawlogs from northern Michigan, however, have increased greatly this season over last year, the Mackinaw division of the Michigan Central railroad bringing 150,000,000 feet this season, against 110,000,000 feet last season. Many million feet are still to come.

CANADIAN NEWS.

The Latest Happenings In The Dominion.

FATALITIES ON CANADIAN RAILROADS.

A statement on railway accidents has just been given out at Ottawa. All the fatal accidents since May 2 on the Canadian railways are reviewed, and the railway commission concludes that none of these accidents can properly be attributed to over work or lack of rest of the railway men. In the collisions the greatest loss of life occurs in the smoking and second-class cars, which are old, and comparatively weak, while there has been a great increase in the weight and strength of sleepers, first-class and baggage cars. The board is considering whether it should not, from time to time, request the provincial attorney-generals to promptly proceed with the prosecution in every instance in which negligence, carelessness or failure to observe working rules or orders, has resulted in destruction of human life. At present the railways merely dismiss guilty employees and by the time further punishment is thought of the casualty has passed out of the minds of the people. This did not tend to insure the safety of the public and increases the risk to train hands. The commission is preparing a set of standard rules for the guidance of the railway employees. The commission is negotiating with railways regarding certain matters which seem contributory to accidents and for which the companies are responsible.

IRON ORE NEAR EDMONTON.

About one hundred miles east of the city of Edmonton lies a valuable deposit of iron ore, writes a correspondent, of which little has been known of its value until the present time. A few days ago the owners, E. McAdam and A. Johnson, took with them over the property Mr. Blakemore, a well-known mining expert of British Columbia, and after a thorough inspection returned to Edmonton well pleased with their visit to the mines. Up to the present time there has been considerable work done, and the ore body has proved to be very large, with high-grade ore, averaging in assays from the surface of from 41 to 50 per cent. metallic iron. It is believed that there is a larger and better grade of ore below the surface, and future work will be done by drills and shafts to locate the ore body. The owners intend to form a company, when formed, will also acquire valuable marl and coal lands, which are known to be close to the iron deposit. The marl is valuable for making Portland cement and in the manufacture of silica brick and building blocks, which are now used almost exclusively in many parts of the United States. With the development of the mineral deposits of Northern Alberta, another source of productiveness and prosperity will surely be established.

ALEX. MATHESON DIES FROM TYPHOID.

After an illness of one week, Mr. Alexander Matheson, officer in charge of the Hudson's Bay company's Lake Superior department, died on Nov. 6 at his residence in Fort William. The deceased's ailment was typhoid fever. Born in Scotland, Mr. Matheson came to Canada at an early age, and entered the employ of the Hudson's Bay company in January, 1884, with which firm he has been engaged ever since. He was one of the most highly respected and energetic business men of the central West.

MONTREAL CHIEF RESIGNS.

Following the revelations made in the recorders' court at Montreal, Chief of Police Legault has resigned at the request of the chairman of the aldermanic police committee. Two policemen and a captain have been suspended in connection with the charges by women conducting disorderly houses, who swore they had been paying for protection and that when they had failed to meet the demands for money their places were raided. Chief Legault still denies the charges, and says he has resigned because his position is untenable.

WANTS BIG PRICE FOR HER YOUNG AFFECTIONS.

Miss Agnes Reid, of Hamilton, Ont., has started an action against George H. Martin, of the Martin Electric Supply Company of St. Catharines, to recover $5,000 damages for breach of promise. She claims to have been engaged to Martin for several years and to have 450 love letters which she received from him during their courtship. Martin is to be married to another well known Hamilton lady.

Stevens, Hepner & Co.'s safe at Port Elgin, Ont., was blown open Saturday morning and $40 stolen.

HAMILTON GETS BIG INDUSTRY.

The American Horseshoe Company has bought seven acres of land at Hamilton, Ont., and will build a big factory there.

STEAMER WENT ON ROCKS.

The Coastal steamer Portia, with 104 passengers, struck on the Penguin Islands at midnight, Nov. 4. She was refloated subsequently, but was making so much water the passengers took to the boats and proceeded to the mainland while the ship steamed for the nearest harbor, where she was beached to effect temporary repairs. The Portia is a new ship of 1,000 tons, and was only making her second voyage.

ON DUTY 32 HOURS.

Inspector DuVal, of the railway commission, has reported on the G. T. R. accident at Eastwood, Ont. He finds that the accident was caused by one of two employees, a brakeman and conductor, who were continuously on duty for thirty-two hours, and who forgot to turn the switch back after letting their train into the siding. Both were killed. There were five killed in all.

INQUIRY FOR FRANK ARTHUR.

Hugh P. Vivian, Pengegon House, Camborne, Cornwall, England, is making inquiry on behalf of John Arthur, Killigorrick, for his son, Frank Arthur, who came to Canada in April, 1903, and was last heard from in August last from British Columbia. The young man's parents fear that he may be the same Frank Arthur who was knocked off a scow at Welland, Ont., and drowned.

NEWFOUNDLAND ELECTIONS.

The latest election returns from Newfoundland increase Premier Bond's majority. Fogo returns Farle, Liberal, by a majority of over 700. In Trinity, Mr. Gushue, minister of public works, and Mr. Lloyd, both Liberals, are certainly elected, while Mr. Miller, the third Liberal candidate, is 26 votes above Mr. Watson, the first Conservative candidate. Premier Bond has every cabinet minister re-elected. His party now holds 29 seats and the Conservatives five. There are two seats yet outstanding.

INDIAN CHIEF SENTENCED.

The assizes which have been in progress for the past fortnight at Vancouver have been concluded, though not all the sentences have been pronounced. Sihivid, chief of the Nawhitt Indians, was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment for interfering with the course of justice in advising Indians to keep quiet of the murder of an Indian woman, named Kivesitt. A light sentence was given for the fact that Sihivid expressed his sorrow and made amends by disclosing the names of two Indians who are supposed to have committed the murder. Clarence Miller was sentenced to ten years for forging a postoffice order, and F. X. Gauthier to three years for stealing from his partners in the logging business.

CANADA MAY OWN WIRELESS SYSTEM.

A despatch from Ottawa says that the imperial authorities are bringing wireless telegraphy under government control, because in time of war it is manifestly desirable that wireless communications should be under the same supervision as the mails and telegraphy. A suggestion has been received from the British government that Canada should do likewise. It is understood, therefore, that measures will be taken in this country to control wireless telegraphy. There is a clause in the Marconi charter which gives the right to the government to expropriate it in the course of time, and it is understood that no additional charters will be granted. In time of war, the government could at present have sufficient control over the Marconi charter, so that it is not likely that any immediate steps will be taken to buy out the system.

WAR NEWS.

WAR BULLETINS.

The report circulated in St. Petersburg that Gen. Stoessel has been compelled to leave the citadel of Port Arthur, and that with 10,000 men, he has taken refuge in the forts along Tiger's Tail, is denied in official circles there. Piteous appeals arrive from the front asking for warm clothing and fuel.

JAPS OFFER TERMS OF SURRENDER.

A despatch from Chefoo says that the Japanese besieging Port Arthur, ignoring Lieut. Gen. Stoessel, the commander of the Russian military forces there, have offered terms of surrender to the Russian soldiers, according to advices leaving Port Dalny, Nov. 8. In the meanwhile ceaseless activity continues with picks and spades. The Japanese are gradually advancing their trenches, which spell inexorable fate to the watching Russians. A Russian prisoner captured Oct. 28 said the troops composing the garrison of Port Arthur were in want and dispirited. They saw the fruitlessness of the struggle. Hopeless of relief, with food scarce, and medicine and hospital supplies insufficient, it was admitted by the Russians that a Japanese victory was ultimately inevitable. The soldiers, according to the prisoner, see no reason to prolong the resistance which brings glory to their officers, but chiefly hardship and death to them.

ROOSEVELT ELECTED

Carried Every Doubtful State in the North.

Despatches from New York give the following account of the Presidential election: With the election returns still incomplete, the plurality of President Roosevelt in the National elections, according to all indications, will exceed 1,500,000, the greatest plurality ever given a candidate. The interest centers in Missouri and Maryland. Late returns indicate that the former state is in the Republican column so far as Presidential electors are concerned, but that James Folk, the Democratic candidate, has been elected governor. In Maryland the Presidential vote will probably be cast for Roosevelt. In the other states it is simply a question of pluralities. The "Solid South" was broken by the probable defection of Missouri, this section of the country always going Democratic. The figures at hand show but 12 states with 133 votes for Judge Parker. President Roosevelt carried all the northern states—swept them in fact—and the latest returns give him 343 electoral votes.

The banner state is Pennsylvania. Twenty-four hours after the polls closed the returns from this state indicated that Roosevelt's plurality would reach 490,000. Next came Illinois, where the President polled approximately 225,000 more votes than did Judge Parker; Ohio gave Roosevelt 200,000, and New York state 174,000. The New York city returns are still incomplete, but the amazement over the result has not subsided. Judge Parker carried Greater New York by only 41,000 votes.

In Massachusetts the legislature is Republican, and the entire Republican ticket, with the exception of Governor, was elected.

In Nebraska the definite announcement that the legislature is Republican disposes of the stories that William J. Bryan has aspirations for a United States senatorship. In this state, too, the governorship is in doubt, and it will require official returns to determine who has been elected.

There is a curious situation in Minnesota, where Roosevelt won by 125,000, but a Democratic governor was elected. The election of a Democratic governor is the second in the history of the state.

Chairman Babcock of the Republican Congressional committee, has been returned to Congress from Wisconsin, but Chairman Cowher of the Democratic Congressional committee was defeated in Missouri.

Judge Parker has given to the press an open letter addressed: "To the Democracy of the Nation," in which he thanked those in charge of his campaign work, and declared that the people will soon realize "That the tariff-fed trusts are absorbing the wealth of the nation." He said that when the time comes the people will turn to the Democratic party for relief.

Complete returns from Massachusetts show that the Republican presidential electors received a plurality of 86,279 in a total vote of 422,825. With the exception of Governor, the Republican state ticket was elected by good pluralities.

A despatch from Butte says that returns from the outlying districts of Montana will give Roosevelt a majority of about 10,000, and J. M. Toole (Democrat) for governor, 6,000.

It is claimed that Roosevelt's majority in Minnesota will run close to 125,000. An estimate made from incomplete returns indicates 109,000 majority. The Republicans elected the entire nine congressmen and the rest of the state ticket, including a state legislature, which is strongly Republican, on a joint ballot. John A. Johnson, Democrat, and Ray Jones, Republican, were elected governor and lieutenant-governor, respectively. The election of a Democratic governor is the second in the history of the state.

According to the revised returns of the vote in New York state, Roosevelt's plurality over Parker is 174,691, and that of Higgins for governor over Herrick is 76,822.

A despatch from Cripple Creek, Colo., says: Frank P. Mannix, Democratic county clerk and recorder, has disappeared, and it is reported that a committee of citizens has taken him out of town and ordered him to leave the district permanently. Sheriff Bell and a posse have gone in pursuit of the mob. Democrats are arming in expectation of further trouble. Republicans allege that the ballot boxes were being tampered with in the county clerk's office, and Mannix was run out of town on this account.

On Tuesday night, after the election returns clearly indicated the result, President Roosevelt issued the following statement: "I am deeply sensible of the honor done me by the American people in thus expressing their confidence in what I have done and have tried to do. I appreciate to the full the solemn responsibility this confidence imposes upon me, and I shall do all that in my power lies not to forfeit it. On the 4th of March next I shall have served three and a half years, and this three and a half years constitutes my first term. The wise custom which limits the President to two terms regards the substance and not the form, and under no circumstances will I be a candidate or accept another nomination."

PARKER TO ROOSEVELT.

Rosemont, Esopus, N. Y., Nov. 8. —To the President, Washington, D. C. "The people by their votes have emphatically approved your administration, and I congratulate you. (Signed) Alton B. Parker."

ROOSEVELT TO PARKER.

President Roosevelt's reply to Judge Parker's telegram was as follows:

"Alton B. Parker, 'Rosemont,' N.Y.

"I thank you for your congratulations. (Signed) Theodore Roosevelt.

THE LUMBER QUESTION

The fact that each political party is vying with the other to advocate protection for the lumber industry and to bring forward the best remedy for the existing evil should be a source of great encouragement to every anxious lumberman. The government at Ottawa, if it studies the situation from the present campaign can form no other conclusion than that the lumber question in B. C. is a vital one in which every individual of both parties is directly or indirectly concerned.

In our issue of Oct. 21st, we advocated a moderate tariff scheme by which the worst feature of the situation could be eleminated without raising any serious or justifiable objections from the consumers on the prairie. This was the imposition of a nominal duty, thus rendering the lumber importations from the U. S. subject to the operations of the "Dumping Clause". Since then we have received a letter from a well-posted and influential lumberman complimenting us on the article and stating that he had for warded a copy to the Minister of the Interior. Mr. MacDonald in his speech on Monday night intimated that the government contemplated taking some action at the next revision of the tariff which would likely be during the next session, and that the proposed plan of action would be a low tariff and the operating of the dumping clause against flooding the Canadian market with cheap American lumber. The Dominion government as was explained by Mr. MacDonald, has already done considerable towards improving the lumber situation by regulating the profits of the middlemen, and with the additional relief afforded by prohibiting the present pernicious dumping habit the Canadian lumberman has little to fear in open competition with the American lumbermen.

That the present condition of the lumber business in this Province is precarious we need no politician to tell us. Several mills in this immediate neighborhood have within the past two years gone out of business. Numerous mill owners in the district are contemplating shutting down temporarily and some indefinitely, while none are running full blast. The industry is one of the mainstays of the Province, and it demands the prompt attention of the government, which it doubtless is receiving.

NEXT TUESDAY is Polling day for the Kootenay elections. It is the duty of every elector to cast his vote for one of the three candidates. This is the first principle of responsible government and it should not be neglected. Come out next Tuesday and vote, Don't let it be said that any of the electors of Fernie took so little interest in the politics of the country as to let it go by default.

THE CURFEW bell rang at 8 o'clock on Monday night for the first time and the urchins under 15 years scampered off the streets. The advantages of this law are already making themselves felt, and the more direct and potent benefits acruing to the boys and girls themselves will keep on growing through countless ages. The friendly co-operation of the parents will greatly aid the police in the strict enforcement of this law.

THE FRANK and Blairmore mines are feeling the annual depression caused by the shortage of C. P. R. cars to handle the coal. The Blairmore Times in treating with this subject closes a lengthy editorial with :—"The only relief in sight apparently for this section and a preventive for this annual car shortage is the fact that the Great Northern railway is bound to tap these coal fields within a comparatively short time. This will not only give railway competition and a double chance to secure cars but also be the means of awakening Canada's pap fed monopoly to the fact that business not looked after may pass into the hands of a rival railway."

MR. Charles M. Hays, President of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Co. returned from England the other day and when interviewed he stated that the actual construction of the Grand Trund Pacific would begin as soon as the weather would permit next Spring The work would be pushed westward from Lake Superior, and simultaneously from various points between there and the Pacific Ocean. This is welcome news to every individual in the West, alike to Conservative and Liberal. The former party opposed this railway scheme and offered another in its place. The people decided in no uncertain manner in favor of the Grand Trunk Pacific. The question is finally settled, and all will welcome the news that the West is to have another transcontinental line at once and that the company is having no difficulty in financing the great undertaking.

Take notice that 60 days after date. I intend to apply to the Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works, to purchase the following described lands:—Commencing at a post planted on the shores of Hansen Lake near the N. We were in error last week in stating that the despatcher at Cranbrook was at fault for delaying the passing of the trains one evening. The mistake was made by the operator who failed to forward an order to the west bound train. The operator was dismissed.

A narrow escape from fire was experienced at the post office on Tuesday evening at 7. 30 while Postmaster Johnson was away to dinner. Some wood on the stove caught into a blaze. H. L. Manley and I. Poole who happened along at that time saw the blaze and gaining admittance over the box framework put the burning wood in the stove.

The judges in the Renwick-Mitchell race last week were Messrs Herb Fullerton, H. Wright and McTavish. The first declared that Mitchell won. Wright took the opposite view, and McTavish later sided with Wright. Nearly all those who had no money on the race were of the opinion that Mitchell touched the tape first. The stake money was promptly paid and Mitchell challenged Renwick to another race. This will take place at Cranbrook next Thursday for $500 stakes.

W. O. Robbins spent Sunday at Pincher Creek visiting his brother who has a well established livery and dray business at that point. Mr. Robbins reports that four flowing wells have been plugged on the Rocky Mountain Development Co's property. Three wagon loads of pipes went down from Pincher while he was there. The oil analyses 65 per cent pure kerosene.

The Eagles' smoker last Friday night was attended by 300 guests. Various speakers entertained the audience. Music was supplied by the band. A mock trial caused considerable amusement and incidentally it swelled the treasury of the order by several fines. Liquid refreshments, cigars, sandwiches, etc. were passed around with lavish prodigality.

Raffle tickets are being printed for the raffle of a four roomed house, valued at $350. The house is situated on the bench overlooking the C.P.R. depot and only five minutes walk from that point. The winning number gets the house. Two consolation prizes of $10 and $5 respectively will be given. The raffle will take place at the Roma hotel on New Years' day. The winning numbers will be published in the local papers.

The Thanksgiving New England Dinner in the Stork opera house last evening was a very successful event. An excellent dinner was served to two hundred guests. At 8.30 Mayor Stork took the chair and introduced a splendid program of musical selections and readings. All the numbers were heartily encored, and the performers responded liberally. The Ladies' Aid of Knox church realized a very tidy sum from the proceeds.

Mme Rosa D'Erina and Mr. Vontom gave their entertainment on "The Music of Many Lands" to a small audience on Tuesday evening. Mme. D'Erina possesses a good voice and her execution on the organ and piano was much appreciated. Mr. Vontom's singing was very inferior and his humorous efforts were somewhat feeble. Owing to the smallness of the attendence the Wednesday night engagement was cancelled.

MASTER and SLAVE

By... T. H. THORPE

Copyright, 1901, by T. H. Thorpe.

The listlessness of early Sunday morning was unbroken until the dust of the road began to be stirred by the faithful going to the 10 o'clock mass at the Mansura church. They were in greater numbers than on ordinary Sundays, for the desire to hear Father Grhe tell of the marvelous reappearance of Oakfell was universal. Of course, Quillebert's absence was not noticed, nor was any importance attached by those who observed it to the fact that the door of his house, opening inward, was partly ajar, though no movement or sign of life was about the place. It was only at noon, when the cavalcade of worshipers was returning from the service, that Dr. De Roux stopped to speak with him concerning the sale of the previous day. Having knocked and waited in vain for response, he pushed the door against a heavy but yielding obstruction and stepped inside. An instant later he sprang back upon the veranda with an exclamation of horror and, gesticulating wildly, summoned the passersby. A spectacle which froze the marrow met their eyes. Behind the door stretched the corpse of Constant Quillebert, the head, crushed and battered, lying in a pool of thick, drying blood. A hatchet, into the helve of which were cut the initials "C. Q.," was under the left arm. To its reddened blade short, coarse hairs were glued. The iron safe in his bedchamber stood opened. His books and loose sheets of accounts were on a table and scattered about the floor. The lid of his strong box was thrown back. The paper money paid to him by Dr. De Roux the day before was gone. His gold money was gone. His French money was gone.

Laure was gone!

Evariste was gone!

THE END.

The Sun Shrinks Nine Inches a Day.

In one of his lectures on the sun Sir Robert Ball pointed out that the sun was the source of all the heat received by this earth. Now, it was a well known fact that most things in cooling became smaller. A poker, for example, was shorter when it was cold than when it was red hot. The sun, too, must obey this fundamental law and must therefore be getting smaller. If we could measure its diameter on two successive days, we should find it had decreased by nine inches—that was to say, it was shrinking at the rate of, roughly, five feet a week, or a mile in every 20 years.

In view of this shrinkage some of the younger members of his audience might feel anxious lest the sun should not last their time. Such anxiety, however, was groundless. He was 860,000 miles in diameter, so it would take 40,000 years for him to be reduced by 2,000 miles to 858,000, and the lecturer was sure that if there were two suns in the sky, one 860,000 miles in diameter and the other 858,000, no one would be able to tell by looking at them which of the two was the smaller.

But as the sun was shrinking nine inches every day and had been doing so for ages it followed that in the past he was very much greater than he was now. But he always had the same amount of material in him and weighed no heavier than at present. Hence the inference was that he was once a huge mass of rarefied gas—a great, glowing nebula.

Obstructions In the Nose.

Very many young children have the bad habit of pushing small, hard substances, as shoe buttons, beans or peas, into the ears or nostrils. A simple way to remove an object from the nose is to compress the opposite side and make the child blow his nose violently. If he will not do this, induce a sneeze by tickling the nostrils with a feather, blade of grass or some fluffy substance. If this, too, is not successful, a little pepper or snuff should be used. A hard sneeze will probably remove the obstruction, but always keep the opposite side of the nose compressed.

If the trouble is in the ear, it is a little more serious and the object more difficult to remove. Insects, bugs, beads or small pebbles may be forced out by gently syringing the ear with warm water or by pouring in a few drops of oil or glycerin, but if the object be large and so tightly wedged in that it cannot be easily removed with the fingers do not tamper with it, but take the child to a good aurist. If the object be a pea or bean, it is better not to use a syringe, as the water will cause it to swell. An old and excellent way to remove these obstructions is to dip a camel's hair brush or small stick which has been tapered off to almost a point in some stout glue. Attach this to the offending body and allow the glue to harden, then gently draw it out. —Harper's Bazar.

Passed the Plate Too Late.

Mark Twain once declared that when a man makes an appeal for charity it is a great mistake to get everybody ready to give money and then not pass the hat.

"Some years ago in Hartford," he said, "we all went to the church on a hot, sweltering night to hear the annual report of Mr. Hawley, a city missionary who went around finding the people who needed help and didn't want to ask for it. He told of the life in the cellars where poverty resided. He gave instances of the heroism and devotion of the poor. The poor are always good to each other. When a man with millions gives, we make a great deal of noise. It's noise in the wrong place, for it's the widow's mite that counts.

"Well, Hawley worked me up to a great state. I couldn't wait for him to get through. I had $400 in my pocket. I wanted to give that and borrow more to give. You could see greenbacks in my eye. But he didn't pass the plate, and it grew hotter, and we grew sleepier. My enthusiasm went down, down, down, $100 at a time, till finally when the plate came round I stole 10 cents out of it. So you see a neglect like this may lead to crime."

Some Historical Fridays.

Friday, which is regarded as a day of ill luck by the rest of the world, ought to be considered the luckiest of all days for Americans.

Among the historic events that occurred on Friday are the discovery of America, Oct. 12, 1492, by Christopher Columbus, who had sailed Friday, Aug. 3, 1492. He returned on Friday and made the discovery of South America on Friday, June 12, 1494. John Cabot received his commission from Henry VIII on Friday, March 6, 1496, which resulted in the finding of North America. Mendez founded St. Augustine on Friday, Sept. 7, 1565. The Mayflower landed on Friday, Dec. 22, 1620. George Washington was born on Friday, Feb. 22, 1732. On Friday, June 16, 1775, Bunker Hill was seized and fortified. On Friday, Oct. 17, 1777, Burgoyne surrendered at Saratoga, and on Friday, Sept. 22, 1780, Arnold's treason was discovered. Then came the surrender of Cornwallis, also on Friday, and last, on Friday, July 7, 1776, John Adams moved in the Continental congress that the United States "are and ought to be independent."—London Express.

SHOPPING IN FEZ.

Pay Half the Price Demanded, Grab Your Goods and Go.

A white visitor to Fez, in Morocco, once went shopping in the bazaars of the city accompanied by a servant of the sultan, who told him to see to it that the shopper was not cheated by the greedy merchants. At the first shop visited the would be customer asked to be shown something that rested on a high shelf. The lazy merchant only yawned and said he would rather sell something from the floor, which he would not have to rise to get. This angered the sultan's servant, who not only made the merchant hand down the article required, but when the price was named laid down half the amount, grabbed the goods and made off.

The shopper protested, but the servant laughed and said it was the custom of the country. This was repeated at several shops without eliciting a protest. At one place, though, the merchant refused to give up his goods in that way and was rewarded by a boxed ear and an admonition not to ill treat the sultan's white friend.

Later the two visited the markets, where everything was sold at auction. The auctioneer seemed always to wear fewer clothes than any one else. His method of selling was curious. He would take a piece of goods from a nearby shopkeeper and start out to sell it on commission. Holding it as high as possible, he would call for a bid. Then he would start on the run around the market. If any one wished to examine the merchandise the auctioneer would drop it into his hands, take the bid if one was made and then resume his run around the place.

When he had made three circuits of the market he would turn the article over to the highest bidder.

"Why?"

"Because he doesn't have to worry about his bank account running low."

"Well, neither do I. I haven't got any."

HANGING PICTURES.

There are a few little things that every woman who has in her care the welfare of a home should know and remember. Take, for instance, the matter of hanging pictures. Everybody does not know how to hang a picture so as to bring out not only the best points of the picture itself, but so as to produce at the same time a harmonious ensemble that will be pleasing and restful.

In the first place, in hanging pictures there must be a general scheme to which the tone of the pictures should conform. A dark carbon, for example, must not hang near an etching drawn in delicate lines and bordered by a broad, white mat. Then, too, if oil paintings, with their bold tones, are allowed to elbow water colors, with their soft tints, the latter will be coarsened by the proximity.

Here are a few things that may be brought together on friendly terms: Etchings, photographs, drawings, azure engravings, water colors and pastels. Even here, however, a great deal of discretion should be used in bringing together these pictures, as there is still a possibility of a clash. Dark, heavily shaded pictures should not always hang in the strongest light, but in some cases should seek a sheltered position away from the glare of the windows. The pictures in fainter tints, the line drawings, the subdued water colors, whose best points need illuminating, belong near the light.

Sometimes this order may be reversed with perfect safety, when the corner farthest from the window shows a decided need of brightening by light pictures. Always, however, the gradation of tints should be borne in mind.—Exchange.

MESSAGE TO GIRLS.

The Best and Most Enduring Goods Life Has In Its Gift.

I write it down in solemn sincerity, befitting one who has a message for the girls she loves, that the woman who dies without knowing for herself the dear delights of a home where she is the sun and center, who has never held children of her very own to her heart and grown richer with each passing year for their love, who has never had the chance to set upon the coming age the stamp of her real personality, has been cheated out of the best and most enduring goods life has in its gift, says Marian Harland in the Philadelphia North American.

These are deep truths too often unsuspected until the heyday of youth is passed. It is the fashion, and a vile one it is, nowadays to sneer at the mother of half a dozen children and to belittle her sphere. "Her mind is narrowed by the four walls of her nursery," say the college mates and ardent spirits with missions. "She is asphyxiated by domestic cares."

Give her and the children time, time for the children to grow, and for her to grow with them. Nurseries have windows out of which the wise mother and eager little ones look together. Hers is the choicest of "select classes." She is teaching, and they are learning—for eternity.

TOILET TIPS.

Don't bathe the face while it is very warm or very cold.

Salt, moistened by a little lemon juice, quickly removes fruit stains from the hands.

If you wish to make your hair fluffy powder it well with talcum powder, brushing it out before combing.

For whitening the hands try two ounces each of lemon juice, glyceria and bay rum. Apply after bathing the hands and allow to dry on the skin.

For a good camphor mouth wash try the following: Take a pint of hot water and dissolve in it two drams of powdered borax. When the water cools add one dram each of spirits of camphor and tincture of myrrh.

Even the ordinary woman in these days understands that the toilet of a lady is incomplete without a touch of face powder and that it is a protection, covering the pores and preventing the dirt and dust of the streets from lodging in the skin.

Patriotic Organizations.

Eight organizations of women have grown out of the American civil war on the northern side, to say nothing of those that exist in the south. Besides the Woman's Relief corps, which is the best known of them all and is auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic, there are the Association of Army Nurses, the Ladies' Aid society, auxiliary to the Sons of Veterans; the Daughters of Veterans, composed of daughters and granddaughters of Union soldiers; the Woman's Veteran Relief union, auxiliary to the Union Veterans' union; the Woman's National association, auxiliary to the Union ex-Prisoners of War, and the Ladies' National Association of Naval Veterans.

When You Bake Pies.

Have ready a roll of strips of old cotton about an inch wide, and when you have a juicy pie to bake wet one of them in cold water and put it around the edge of the pie, pressing half the width firmly on the outside of the plate and the other half on the crust. Pull the cloth off when baked. This prevents all escape of the juices and is worth trying.

Dandruff.

The following will cure dandruff: Three ounces rose water, half an ounce tincture cantharides, half a dram liquid ammonia, a quarter of an ounce of glycerin, a quarter of a dram of oil of rosemary, a quarter of a dram of oil of thyme. Brush the scalp thoroughly once a week at least.

LIKE AN AUTUMN LEAF

LESSON ON THE SHORTNESS OF HUMAN LIFE.

WE ALL DO FADE AS THE LEAF

Like the Life of a Leaf, Man's Cradle and Grave, Are Not Very Far Apart—Most Beautiful Time in Christian's Life Is When the Autumnal Frosts of the Tomb Have Touched His Cheek.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 6.—From the autumnal frosts, the stripping of forest verdure and the woods now carpeted with the falling leaves the preacher in this sermon draws a lesson on the shortness of human life. The text is Isaiah lxiv., 6, "We all do fade as a leaf."

Is there any time in all the year more delightful for a vacation in the country than the "Indian summer?" Of course to the lover of nature the valleys and the mountains have their fascinations at all seasons. Winter—cold, bleak, growling, freezing winter—has her months of glory. Then the trees, with their long, outstretched branches, are like the vestal virgins of old, robed in spotless white. Then the stars, through the keen, biting January nights, gleam brighter than any other time of the year. Then the country roads are echoing with the merrymakings of the sleigh-bells, and the lights from the farmhouses are the beacons to signal friends to enter the home where "Welcome" is written over every door.

Springtime in the country also has her months of glory. That is the time we hear the wooings of bird mating with bird. That is the time when the winds are tossing the white blossoms every whither. That is the time of the seed plantings and of the plowings, the time when the brooks are rippled with the trouts' fins, while summer has her glory of the haymakers and the harvestings and the vineyards and the orchards in which we all have reveled year by year when off for the August vacations. But, though winter, spring and summer may come to us, each with special forms of enjoyment, the most rapturous time of all the year in which to spend a few weeks in the country is during the autumn, for then the glory of October's pride is the fading leaf. Never in artist's studio were so many gorgeous colors mixed together as God pictures on his canvases of the autumn foliage.

Here the trees look like a mighty "river of blood," as though their arteries had been opened by the Mosaic rod which incarnadined the river of Egypt. The leaves have blushed a deep crimson, as did the water at the wedding feast at Cana when, at our Lord's word, it was borne as new made wine to the governor at the feast.

Oh, the beauty of the autumnal foliage! The fading leaves of the Indian summer fascinate the eye and woo plauditory exclamations from all lips. As we go forth to-day to catalogue some of them we find that there are big leaves and small leaves, long leaves and narrow leaves, rough leaves and smooth leaves, thick leaves and thin leaves. There are leaves that are yellow, and red, and brown, and crimson, and green, and saffron. There are leaves like those which the tired travelers twist into cups and dip into the cool waters and lift to their parched lips. There are leaves like the fresh emerald ones which the picnickers use for platters when the merrymakers are banqueting in the woods and leaves like those the field laborers wet when they place them in their straw hats to cool their aching brows. There are leaves which the little children gather and press straight between the school-book pages. There are leaves which the maidens collect to fill the jars and vases and to decorate the halls, parlors and bedrooms of the home. There are leaves which the florist cuts to give an added beauty to the flowers he is clustering together for assemblages of joy and also for assemblages of sorrow. There are leaves which have hidden the nests of the birds while they were rearing their young. Leaves upon the tree branches, leaves in the flower gardens, leaves which have been tossed by the winds into the dusty road, leaves overhead, leaves under foot. There are a hundred and forty and four thousand varieties of them and thousands upon thousands. Lo, this autumn day, there is a host of falling leaves which no man can number. They have lived their short lives, they have faded beautifully and at last have fallen off and fluttered silently to the ground. The ancient Hebrew prophet, watching them as they fell, sees in them a symbol of the failing of human lives. As the leaves fall and die, so man falls and dies. "We all do fade as the leaf" is the overwhelming and incontrovertible statement of my text.

Like the fading leaf, man's cradle and grave are not very far apart. Like the life of a leaf, our earthly existence springs into budding life, has its short season of glorious maturity, and then fades and falls with a rapidity that startles us. Though we may live our three-score years, and ten, or even four-score years, how soon those years slip away. As the months of the spring quickly change themselves into the months of the summer, and the months of the summer change into the frosts of the autumn, we can see our lives slipping away. We can see them go as the sands of an hour-glass run away before your eyes. God puts upon one side of the leaf the snow-bank and upon the other side of the leaf the iceberg of another winter. He then says to the embryo of the leaf: "You must not begin to sprout before the whistling winds of March have died away. You must, on the other hand, be ready to surrender your life before the December storms have trampled all the tapestries of the forests under foot, making the bare trees look like the dismantled and ruined palaces of a king." So God says to man: "Your earthly life is to be very short. You are to spend your earthly days as the life of a leaf. Therefore, what you are to do for me and for the world you must do quickly. Hear ye not in the sighing of the autumnal winds the forthcoming summons that you must soon fade away as the leaf, as the dying autumnal leaf?"

The fading autumnal leaf, the symbol of the passing away of the human generations! Can you not see it? Can you not feel it? To me it is the most startling symbol of earth, for, as I go out in the autumn and look off upon the hillsides and see the vineyards with their dying leaves, the most overwhelming fact that forces itself upon me is the rapidity with which generations go. Aye, the members of the generation which preceded us as well as many members of our own generation seem to have disappeared as the mists at the sunrising, as the dewdrops are kissed off the lips of the leaves, as the tears on the cheek of a little child are wiped away by a sympathetic mother.

But though the span of life may be very short as a whole, yet, after all, when death comes to most of us it will come as to the leaf, gradually. Death, as a rule, does not spring out upon his victims suddenly. Like a loved friend traveling abroad, he sends message after message that he is coming. He sends notice after notice. He sends word to you just the same as the soldiers fighting in the United States army during the Civil war sent messages to their children at home. At night the mother used to read those letters to her babies. Then she would say: "Papa is coming. Yes, some day papa is going to come." Then when the surrender at Appomattox came the mother sang a new song. "Now, children," said she, "papa will soon be here." Then came the preparation for meeting the train. Then came the expected parent. Death comes to most not as a thief in the night. As a rule, death comes to us as he comes to a leaf, gradually, very gradually.

Did I say death is coming to you gradually? Oh, yes, he has sent message after message to notify you of his early arrival. The first message came to you when you were about twenty years of age. You had a fearful attack of pneumonia. For days and days they thought you could not get well. You recovered partially, but your lungs since then have never been strong. Every winter you catch a cold. Each year the cough is harder to get rid of. Or years ago when a child you had an attack of dreaded diphtheria. The nurse let you sit up too soon, and the strain was too great upon the heart. It left it weak. For years you did not mind, but now the old trouble has come back. Or the message came to you that death was on his way to your home in failing eyesight. You have to put on glasses now when you read the Bible or the evening paper. Or you can hear his footsteps in your dulled hearing. You find out that people do not talk as loud as they used to do. You keep asking them the irritating question, "Why do you not speak more distinctly than you do?" Or it came to you last week in a startling way. You had your picture taken to please the children. When the photograph came home you were shocked. Why when you placed that picture alongside of the last photograph of your father or mother you found that you looked just as old as they were when they died. Yes, like the leaf, an average man dies gradually. He begins to die first at the extremities. His hair whitens. His skin wrinkles. His hand trembles. The once steady beat of the heart becomes unsteady. The windows of his eyesight are bedimmed. He has pain at the base of the brain because the circulation is poor. God gives to almost every man thousands of warnings instead of one warning that he is fading away as the leaf, as the autumnal leaf.

Is not the figure of the leaf dying gradually the symbol of the average man's death? Of course some leaves do meet a violent and a quick death, as nearly all wild beasts in their native haunts end their lives by a sudden tragedy. A mischievous squirrel may climb a tree and jerk a leaf from its moorings and toss it to the ground. The tall antlers of the deer may be the pruning hook to lay bare a branch. The sullen blizzard, sulking behind an Arctic iceberg, may decide to make a spring journey back to the place where it had tried in vain to batter down the doors of a summer cottage during the past winter months, and in one night destroy all the sprouting leaves. A forest fire may allow the flames to feed upon the tender foliage which has been exposed by nature for a few weeks to be colored by the light of the sun. some men in their youth or in strong middle age in full health may be struck down by some accident or contagious disease as quickly as a soldier upon a battlefield may have a bullet pierce his heart and instantly drop dead. And some men may instantly exterminate their lives by the evil effects of sin.

But, after all, most leaves do not die a sudden death. They live on through the summer. They live until the cold of oncoming winter makes dormant the wonderful forces which give life to the tree. They die as gradually as the summer days slip into the fall days; as gradually as the ebbing tide, each wave of which is a little lower down the beach than the preceding wave; as gradually as the twilight slowly grows dimmer; as gradually as the echoes in the mountain ravine become softer and softer. Man dies as the leaf, gradually. It is sickness after sickness. It is fewer walks, less work, less physical energy. It is a gradual benumbment of the mental and physical faculties. You know you are not as strong as you used to be. What is the matter? We are all fading away as the leaf, as the autumnal leaf.

But this autumn day, as the leaves are everywhere falling from the trees, I know God has a purpose in their death as well as in their life. One reason why God every fall strips the trees of their leaves is that the next year the forests may be robed with another covering of green. And one reason why God makes one generation of human beings pass away from earth is that another generation might be born and live and have the opportunity to do the work which is necessary for them to do and then pass on to the eternal life beyond the grave, as past generations have done and as we must do.

Did you ever stop to consider from an earthly standpoint the blessings of death as well as the blessings of life? Every year in order to make the fruit trees and vineyards bear well the farmer with his pruning hook has to go among them and ruthlessly destroy hundreds of buds in order that the other buds might have enough nourishment to grow and do their work. In order that the human race might be strong and physically well God has to keep his pruning hook busy or else this old earth would soon be over-populated, and there would not be room for man to live by the side of man. "So great are the possibilities of growth," said the old sage, Benjamin Franklin, "that the productiveness of the vegetable and animal life is inconceivable and almost without limit."

The span of human life on earth is very short, yet like that of the leaf God does not permit man's life, short as it is, to end until his work has been fully accomplished. The Bible tells us that man's earthly "days are as grass, as the flower of the field, so he flourisheth. For the wind passeth over it and it is gone and the place thereof shall know it no more." But though the life of the grass or the leaf may be short as that of an insect, yet its life is absolutely vital to this country. Once destroy the vegetation of a land and you turn that land into a Sahara. Leaves suck in the moisture. They are reservoirs for water. They decide whether a country is to be fertile or not. Once destroy the forest with its leaves and the orchards with their leaves and you change the whole atmospheric condition of the country as parts of Spain and Portugal have been robbed of all moisture by the destruction of the leaves. Thus each generation's spiritual life is absolutely necessary to be matured and developed for the spiritual life of the generation which is to follow. Your spiritual life decides what is to be the spiritual life of your children and your children's children.

Would that our spiritual life might not only be a saving gospel for ourselves, but also for those who are to come after us. There is a beautiful story told of Ulysses, the most famous of all Homeric heroes, who won his greatest victory when he overcame the fiendish power of the sorceress by the influence of a few leaves. Circe lived in a beautiful palace upon a certain island. There as a beautiful enchantress, surrounded by her maidens, she welcomed the travelers who landed upon her shores. She banquetted and feted them. At end of the feast, however, she would arise, wave over the assemblage her magic wand, and her guests would be changed into repulsive four footed beasts, who would be driven by the attendant out to the swine troughs. After Ulysses' fellow voyagers had been thus metamorphosed the hero went to their rescue. In his hand he held the fabulous herb which was given to him by the god Hermes. Never for an instant did he let those leaves drop from his hand. By their power he was able to break the fatal spell of the destroyer and make her beg for mercy and restore to him his helpless and suffering companions.

This was a heathen poet's idea of the power of evil being overcome by the mighty and supernal power of a few leaves given to his hero by a heathen god. Cannot we use to-day our lives as the symbol of healing leaves? Cannot we feel that we by the grace of God can absorb into ourselves the healing power of the gospel? Then cannot we further believe that the healing and saving power of the gospel which we have received from Christ we can impart to those dear ones who draw their earthly life from our life? As we have been saved by the blood of Christ, cannot we offer that atoning blood to those who love us and who are dependent upon us for temporal as well as spiritual life?

And is there a time in all his earthly career when a Christian's life is so beautiful as after the autumnal frosts of the tomb have touched his cheek? Then the physical force of the life may be gone. He may not have the strength he once had, but in his eye there will come a softer look, in the touch of his hand there will come a gentler sympathy, in the sound of voice there will be a holier prayer, in the movement of his heart there will be a gentler yearning. Thus the aged Christian, like the last leaf left upon the tree branch, may seem to be alone as all the leaves of his generation have fallen, yet people will love him for his noble life, mellowed by many a stinging frost. They will love him for what he has been, for what he is, and for what he is to be. Oh, my dear friends, by the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, as a Christian, your last days on earth may become your best days. Would you not have them a foretaste of the best of all days, which shall come to all of Christ's dear ones in heaven?

Was Once In Jail.

The Hon. Hugh Mahon, Postmaster-General in the Australian Commonwealth Labor Government, is probably the only Minister of the Crown in the British Empire who has been in jail. He was imprisoned at the same time as Mr. Parnell in Kilmainham, more than twenty years ago. He has just told an anecdote of that period of his career. It was a wet day, and the incarcerated Land Leaguers were taking exercise in single file in a long corridor of the prison. Parnell was at the head of the file. There was a rickety chair in the corridor. When Parnell was pasing it for the third time he suddenly left the queue, seized the chair, lifted it over his head and dashed it to pieces on the stone floor.

GAVE LIFE FOR FRIEND.

John Kerr, aged 42 years, watchman for the Pennsylvania Sweep & Smelting Company, was killed by a robber while attempting to save a fellow workman from being murdered. David Bykle, engineer for the company, came upon two young men robbing freight cars. He attempted to catch them, when one of the robbers drew a revolver, and just as he pulled the trigger Kerr jumped between the burglar and Bykle. The ball entered Kerr's breast, killing him. The robbers escaped.

WORLD'S K. P. CHANCELLOR TO BE TRIED.

Charles E. Shiveley, of Richmond, Ind., Supreme Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias of the world, has named a military commission to investigate the charge of partiality brought against Gen. James R. Carnahan of Indianapolis, head of the uniform rank. The charges were in connection with the awards in the drill contests at the biennial convention of the order at Louisville, Ky., last August. The members of the commission are Gen. L. H. Lyon, Kansas; Charles D. Lisle, Wisconsin; Thomas P. Satterwhite, Kentucky, and Col. David A. Meyers, judge advocate of Indiana. The commission will meet at Indianapolis some time this month.

Why.—Mrs. Marryat: "No, I didn't accept my husband the first time he proposed." Miss Flyrt: "Of course not. You weren't present the first time he proposed."

MINARD'S LINIMENT Cures Dandruff.

Successful.—"I don't think Crabbe will ever succeed. He's too fond of finding fault." "Well, he's got a good job at it now." "A job at finding fault?" "Yes, he's a spotter for a railway company."

South American Rheumatic Cure Cures Rheumatism—It is safe, harmless and acts quick—gives almost instant relief and an absolute cure in from one to three days—works wonders in most acute forms of rheumatism. One man's testimony: "I spent 6 weeks in bed before commencing its use—4 bottles cured me."—63

Plenty of Advice.—"His trouble was just due to a neglected cold." "A neglected cold? I don't believe there ever was such a thing. No man ever had a cold without having at least a dozen friends attending it for him."

IT IS A LIVER PILL.—Many of the ailments that man has to contend with have their origin in a disordered liver, which is a delicate organ, peculiarly susceptible to the disturbances that come from irregular habits or lack of care in eating and drinking. This accounts for the great many liver regulators now pressed on the attention of sufferers. Of these there is none superior to Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Their operation though gentle is effective, and the most delicate can use them.

Would Work a Hardship.—The eminent investigators were about to discover the microbe of crime. "Don't do that, gentlemen, for heaven's sake!" instantly exclaimed the great army of detectives, policemen, wardens, jailers, turnkeys, and criminal lawyers. "What will we do to live?"

C. C. RICHARDS & CO.

Dear Sirs,—A few days ago I was taken with a severe pain and contraction of the cords of my leg, and had to be taken home in a rig. I could not sleep for pain, and was unable to put my foot on the floor. A friend told me of your MINARD'S LINIMENT, and one hour from the first application, I was able to walk, and the pain entirely disappeared.

You can use my name as freely as you like, as I consider it the best remedy I have ever used.

HENS BEAT PACKERS IN CORNERING EGG MARKET.

The cold storage of eggs has proven unprofitable, say wholesale dealers, according to a despatch from Pittsburg, Pa. Hence the Armours, Swifts and other Westerners are going out of the business of accumulating eggs in the summer and storing the same for advanced prices in the winter. The hens have broken every corner ever attempted in the egg market by western packers. Failing to handle the product at will, Westerners will not spend any more money in the experiment. Wholesale egg dealers allege that the packers have been shipping eggs at meat rates, which are one-half less than freight rates on eggs. The Interstate Commerce Commission was called on to stop the discrimination. Eggs may be lower in price as a result this winter.

MINARD'S LINIMENT Relieves Neuralgia.

Openings sometimes come to men and oysters when least expected.

We have no hesitation in saying that Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is without doubt the best medicine ever introduced for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera and all summer complaints, sea sickness, etc. It promptly gives relief and never fails to effect a positive cure. Mothers should never be without a bottle when their children are teething.

Unconscious Missionaries. — Some scientist tells us that a steady diet of prunes will strengthen the moral character. Thus many a good boarding house mistress is unconsciously a missionary.

MINARD'S LINIMENT for Sale Everywhere.

But It's Hard.—When a woman works two months on a tidy for her church fair, and sees it appear marked 50 cents by a committee, she must be compelled to remind herself that the Lord demands humility.

A PILL FOR GENEROUS EATERS.—There are many persons of healthy appetite and good digestion who, after a hearty meal, are subject to much suffering. The food of which they have partaken lies like lead in their stomachs. Headache, depression, a smothering feeling follow. One so afflicted is unfit for business or work of any kind. In this condition Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will bring relief. They will assist the assimilation of the ailment, and used according to direction will restore healthy digestionf

"Yes," said the giraffe, "I've got a sore throat. Can you imagine anything worse than that?" "Well," replied the centipede, "I had my feet frostbitten once."

A Cry for Help.—A pain in the back is a cry of the kidneys for help. South American Kidney Cure is the only cure that hasn't a failure written against it in cases of Bright's disease, diabetes, inflammation of the bladder, gravel and other kidney ailments. Don't neglect the apparently insignificant "signs." This powerful liquid specific prevents and cures.—70

Side Line.—"Smithers says his hotel barely pays expenses." "Then how does he manage to bank so much money every week?" "He sells theater tickets to his guests."

DIVIDE $25,000 AMONG THEIR OLD EMPLOYEES.

The Weams Steamboat Company of Baltimore, Md., has set aside $25,000 of the $1,000,000 it received for its property from the new Chesapeake steamer trust for those employees who have been in its employ for a long time. It will be a gift to them, and will be divided among them as a reward for their faithful service. At the meeting of the stockholders of the company a few days ago, when it was decided to accept the offer made by the syndicate for the stock of the company, Mrs. Henry Williams, wife of the president of the company, and Mrs. Matilda Forbes, the chief owner of the stock, suggested that there should be some recognition of the long fidelity of the employees. The suggestion was favorably received by Mr. Williams, and it was decided to divide $25,000 in cash.

At the Reception.—Ox-eye Daisy: "You don't recognize me, do you?" Chrysanthemum (nodding graciously) "Why, yes, of course; we belong to the same family. You are one of my country cousins."

Merely a Suggestion.—He: "What can I do to prove my love for you, dearest?" She: "Well, I don't know whether there is anything in it or not, but I have heard that absence makes the heart grow fonder."

BLAIR'S GOUT AND RHEUMATIC PILLS

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY.

"Newton Abbot, Devon. Dear Sirs—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effect of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

"For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout and life had lost its attraction owing to the uncertainty of health and sudden visitations of the enemy which prostrated me for months, or weeks according to the virulence of the attacks.

"Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

"For the last twenty months I have been comparatively free, as one or two attempted visitations have been immediately stamped out by the assistance of Blair's Pills.

"Truly yours (Signed) Saml. W. Baker.

TAGGING SEA SALMON FOR IDENTIFICATION.

An interesting experiment is being tried at Salmon pond, St. John, N. B. Every year some thousands of salmon caught in the harbor wires are placed in the pond, and when the spawning season comes they are stripped of their spawn and the eggs sent to hatcheries. The work for this season ended last week. It has been an open question whether or not the fish came back each year, and this year eight hundred fish were marked for identification, a copper tag with the place and date indicated being attached to the dorsal fin, and the fish being released. The catch next year will be awaited with much interest.

H.B.K. BRAND

BIG SHIRT

Made big enough for a big man to work in with comfort. Has more material in it than any other brand of shirt in Canada. Made on the H.B.K. scale it requires 39½ to 42 yards per dozen, whereas common shirts have only 32 to 33 yards.

That's the reason why the H.B.K. "Big" Shirt never chafes the armpits, is never tight at the neck or wristbands, is always loose, full and comfortable and wears well.

Each shirt bears a tiny book that tells the whole history of the "Big" Shirt, and also contains a notarial declaration that the H.B.K. "Big" Shirt contains 39½ to 42 yards of material per dozen.

Sold at all dealers but only with this brand:—

A. C. Hanville, who lives alone on his farm, eight miles north of New Richmond, Wis., in the town of Alden, shot and killed a gray eagle that measured six feet and two inches from tip to tip. He heard a great commotion among his stock, and running out, found this eagle trying to carry away a yearling bull. He tried to drive the ferocious bird away, but did not succeed. Then he ran to the house, and securing his shotgun, fired at the bird, breaking one wing. It was then dispatched after a desperate struggle.

Sunlight Soap does not harden or shrink woollens

It is injurious chemicals and adulterations in common soaps that destroy your clothes. It is adulterations that harden your woollens and the excess alkali that destroys and shrinks them.

Children Had Skin Disease

Too many children are in agony from itching, burning skin disease.

Too many mothers are worn out by anxiety and loss of sleep in watching over the little ones who are tortured by such ailments.

Dr. Chase's Ointment is a prompt and positive cure for every form of itching skin disease, and has proven its marvellous power in thousands of cases, similar to the one described below.

Mrs. Lois McKay, Tiverton, Digby County, N. S., writes: "My children were taken with an itching, burning skin disease and tore their flesh until it was sore and their shirts would sometimes be wet with blood. The doctor did not seem to know what ailed them, and could find no relief, so I began using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

"Wherever it was applied it did its work well, and has entirely cured them of this horrible disease. They suffered so they could not sleep nights, and I think if it had lasted much longer I would have gone crazy from the anxiety and loss of sleep. I cannot find words to praise Dr. Chase's Ointment enough for the good it has done my children, and hope other sufferers will try it."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

RETURNING OFFICERS APPOINTED

Returning Officer Boultbee, of Rossland has made the following appointments for deputy returning officers in the Fernie district for the election on Nov. 22nd :—

Fernie : H. H. Trites, F.J. Watson, and R. A. Kerr.
Michel : Jas. Wylie.
The Loop : W. Legge
Crow's Nest : A. Good.
Coal Creek : R. Duthie.
Hosmer : N. Lablanc
Elkmouth : R. A. McMordie.
Elko : John Mott.
Sparwood: W. Wardrop.
Morrissey : Wm. Dick.
Carbonado : E. C. Willson.
Morrissey Mines: P. Willson.

Mr. Boultbee was in the city last night delivering ballot boxes and instructing his deputies, The three Fernie polling booths will be in the Stork Opera House and the old tinshop next to it.

TO BE A DIVISIONAL POINT.

Surveys being made at Crow's Nest for many C. P. R. Improvements.

Surveyor John McLatchie, of Nelson, with a force of ten men have been busy for the past two weeks running survey lines at Crow's Nest for the C. P. R. Among the proposed improvements that the railway will put in is a round house, a new depot and additional yards to accomodate at least 600 cars. Crow's Nest, as was intimated in a previous issue, will be made a divisional point.

HURT WHILE COUPLING CARS

The other day while W. K. Thomas was switching some coal cars into a siding, he met with an unfortunate accident One car had just been switched into the siding, and as it met a car which was stationary the concussion parted them a few inches and before they swung to again Thomas tried to lift the coupling pin in order to couple them, but before he could get it up the cars met again and crushed one of his fingers very badly. Strange to say J. Fraser, who is at the weighing machine got his thumb broken in exactly the same way only a day or two after. Both men were attended to by Dr. Keith.

THREE CASES OF INSANITY.

J. Howard was taken in custody this week on suspicion that he was insane. Medical advice has since added weight to the suspicion. One of his strange freaks is that he forgets his name and gives himself a new name every day.

Constable Henderson brought to Fernie on Wednesday another insane man who also has a fancy for aliases. At Michel he went by the name of W. Jones but at Fernie he gave the name of H. Williams. These two along with the 14 year old from Coal Creek will likely be taken to New Westminister.

The Board of Trade meeting called for Monday evening did not materialize owing to the lack of a quorum. This was more largely due, we hope, to a counter attraction than to any decadence on the part of this useful body. In addition to the Flathead road other important matters were to have been discussed. One was a request from the Nelson Board for co operation to prevent forest fires.

Slater Shoes

Sold The World Over.

Here are the shoes that are known and worn in every clime in the world. In the Mother Country—in La Belle France—in The Isles of The Indies—through the forests of the Amazon—over African kopjes—in far-away Australia and New Zealand—even in China and Japan—"Slater" Shoes have won their way.

Of course, "Slaters" are the best known, the most appreciated, and the most-worn shoes, in the land of their birth—Canada.

English shoes are noted for sturdy wear—United States shoes are famous for their grace and style. But both are built for IDEAL feet—not normal.

"Slater" Shoes combine British wear—United States style and grace—with an ease and comfort that is essentially Canadian—a trinity of virtues that stands unrivalled throughout the world.

"Slater" Shoes fit feet as they actually are—not as they should be. Made without a tack or stitch inside, by the Goodyear Welt Machines.

The new styles that set the fashions in footwear for Canada, are now on sale in all "Slater" Shoe Stores.

Every pair of "Slater" Shoes has its price—as fixed by the makers—stamped on the sole and sewn on the lining.

For men, $4.00 and $5.00
For women, $3.50 and $5.00

THE CARBONADO VICTIMS.

PUBLIC FUNERAL IN FERNIE LAST SUNDAY.

An Appeal for Assistance by the Miners' Union. The Blow-out was Extraordinary in its Terrific Force

The funeral of thirteen victims of the Carbonado disaster took place in Fernie last Sunday afternoon in a drenching rain. The bodies in beautiful caskets were brought to Fernie on a special train Sunday morning. Six were taken to the Catholic church and seven to the Miners' Hall. The procession on Sunday formed at the Catholic church. The band led the large cortege of mourners, comrades and friends among whom were many women and children. The funeral services were conducted by Revs. Wilson, Stoney and Father Coccola. The body of James Greenman was recovered on Saturday but the body of John Brindac was not found until Tuesday and this funeral was held the following day at Fernie.

James Greenman came to Fernie with the first batch of Nova Scotian miners six years ago. Since the Carbonado mines have been opened he worked steadily at that colliery and no miner knew those mines better than he did. He was 30 years of age, single, and was born at Glace Bay, N. S.

Albert Johnson came from Spring Hill a year ago. He was employed as miner's helper, was single, aged 26, and was born in Gloucester, England, where his old grandmother whom he supported resides.

William Jenkins, bratticeman, was born in North Wales, he leaves a widow and eight children, six of them under twelve, to mourn his death. He was about 50 years of age. He was just on his way into the mine when the fatal blast came, and his was the first body recovered,

Patrick Boyle, born in Ireland, came here from Morgantown, Pa., after the strike there two years ago. He was single, about 35, and was employed as a mule-driver,

Peter Tenney was an American who fought through the civil war. He has lived in the Crow's Nest for years as a prospector and miner. He was single and about 55 years old.

Martin Knyzseky, miner's helper, came from Hungary two years ago, where his wife and child still reside. He was 30 years of age.

Joseph Suchy with his wife came from Hungary about a year ago. He was 30 years of age and was employed as miner's helper.

Anthony Pechnik, Bohemian, came to this country this year. He leaves a widow and three small children in destitute circumstances.

Louis Kraker, was a German who arrived in Carbonado eight months ago. He leaves a widow and two children aged 5 months and 22 months respectively. The family is destitute.

Wenzel Veverka, Bohemian, single, came to this colliery eight months ago. He had a bank account and helped to support his aged parents at home.

Anthony Brindac and John Brindac, two Bohemian brothers, had been in the Crow's Nest two years; working some time in the Frank mines. Both were married and John had one child.

William Platt, like Greenman, was one of the old timers in these collieries. He was employed as a driver, was single and 35 years old. He was born in Bury, Lancashire.

Arthur Tazzman, mule-driver, had a miraculous escape. He was on his way to work in No. 1. on the fateful morning when, not feeling well he returned to his boarding house and got P. Boyle to take his place. This is the third narrow escape he has had.

Some of the families especially those whose bread-winners have not been here any length of time are in poor circumstances financially, and the Miners' Uuion have lost no time in opening for their relief a public subscription which is meeting with gratifying success. The following appeal has been issued in connection with this work.

AN APPEAL,

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE UNITED MINE WORKERS AND OTHER TRADE UNIONS AND TO THE GENERAL PUBLIC.

Another calamity has overtaken the coal miners of the Crow's Nest Valley, 14 men having met their death by a sudden outburst of gas in No. 1 mine at Carbonado, B. C., the property of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co. L'td. The outburst took place on Nov. 18th, 1904. By this disaster seven widows and fourteen children and three dependents have been suddenly deprived of their breadwinners and left to the mercy of the world. Most of these families have lately arrived in this country and are in poor circumstances and in need of immediate help.

We therefore appeal to the charity of all people to come to the immediate assistance of these poor widows and fatherless children.

A "Relief Committee" will be appointed to administer any funds that may be donated. Donations may be sent to J. N. Howbrook, Box 341, Fernie, B. C., or to Dr. W. H. Willson, Carbonado, B. C., who will acknowledge receipt thereof.

A list of subscribers and a balance sheet will be published by the press.

FRANK H. SHERMAN, Pres. J. N. HOWBROOK, Secy-Treas. Dist. 18 U. M. W. of A.

THE INQUEST.

Coroner Trites went to Morrissey on Friday afternoon and impanelled a jury consisting of the fellowing citizens, David Clark, (foreman), Thos. Rader, M. Miller, W. MacBean, A. Burney and R. Rogers. After viewing the bodies the inquest was adjourned until Monday, Nov. 28th.

Mine Inspector Morgan hurried to the scene of the disaster from Michel. He inspected the Carbonado Mines a day or two before the accident.

TERRIFIC FORCE.

The force of the blow-out was terrific. The initial point was probably at the face in the parallel entry, a distance of 3,000 feet from the mouth of the mine. The escaping gas rushed with awful speed along this entire distance and a dense volume of dust shot out of the mouth and across the valley blackening the rocks on the opposite side. The force dislodged a great amount of coal, the entire workings for a distance of 400 feet from the face being filled with loose coal. The outbreak was sudden for the men had run only 500 feet when overtaken. Usually in the case of blow-outs sufficient warning is given to allow the miners to escape.

POLICE COURT

Arthur Pearson, an ex-soldier and an all-round good slugger together with a 17 year old youth from the prairie faced the magistrate from the prisoners' box on Monday. Pearson had four charges read to him to all of which he pleaded guilty. He had been disturbing the peace at the depot on Saturday evening as the result of a spree. When Constable Sampson attempted to arrest him Pearson exhibited a surprising degree of pugnacity. Assistance was secured and after much trouble the prisoner was safely landed behind the strong door in the lock-up. The police with commendable patience and good nature handled Pearson much more gently than some of the by-standers thought he deserved. His Worship in sentencing the prisoner to six months hard labor at Nelson remarked that the law must protect its officers in the discharge of their duties.

Charles Scharte, travelling companion of Pearson, was accused of stealing a gold watch and chain from a German. He told what appeared to be a straightforward story, to the effect that Pearson gave him the watch and chain. Pearson's evidence contradicted this, but no doubt existed that one or other was guilty of its theft. The case was remanded until to-morrow that the boy's father who lives near Wetaskiwin, Alta., may be communicated with. Since then the father has sent a ticket for the boy who will be sent home to-morrow.

W. Yates was accused today at the police court with the theft of $15 from a house in the city. The case was remanded until tomorrow.

JOHNNY WOULDN'T SALUTE

(Chicago Record)

John Barwic, a boy of the Canadian birth and parentage, was attending a public school in Pomona, Cal., where his parents now reside. The American flag is hoisted over the school-house every morning and all scholars are expected to salute it. This was too much for Johnny's rich Canadian blood, and he refused to follow the general custom. Thereupon he was sent home by Miss Hill, the teacher, who has been sustained by the local Board of Education. The boy's parents uphold him in his refusal to raise the cap.

W. A. GALLIHER ELECTED

B. C. SENDS A SOLID PHALANX TO OTTAWA-

Duncan Ross elected in Yale-Cariboo. Vote Polled was not Large. Fernie gives a Liberal Majority of 80

Tuesday was election day in the constituencies of Kootenay and Yale Cariboo. W. A. Galliher, the former liberal member, was elected in the Kootenays by a large majority and Duncan Ross, the liberal candidate in Yale-Cariboo, by a small majority.

In Fernie the day passed quietly enough none of the parties putting forward any great effort to get out a large vote only about two-thirds of the votes were polled. The votes in the Fernie district was as follows, tho ffrst three being the three booths in the city:

	Lib.	Con.	Soc.
Napanee sample room A--H	65	32	12
Court House, P--O	35	26	8
City Hall, P--Z	61	23	10
Coal Creek	15	7	16
Michel	15	8	20
Carbonado	20	8	0
Morrissey Mines	9	6	0
Morrissey	14	5	1
Elko	2	11	0
Gateway	9	2	0
Crows Nest	2	1	0
Total	250	130	67

Owing to a mistake no polling took place at Jaffray. The box was duly sent to Jaffray but no deputy returning officer received notice to take charge. Most of the Jaffray votes were polled at Elko.

The votes in districts with a few places to hear from was as follows:

	Lib.	Con.	Soc.
Nelson	361	157	78
Rossland	242	234	56
Ymir	322	203	76
Cranbrook	366	232	20
Revelstoke	314	301	38
Kaslo	183	184	77
Columbia	223	154	4
Slocan	173	125	158
Fernie	250	130	67
	2434	1710	574

Majority for Galliher over MacIntosh 724
Baker 1860

DUNCAN ROSS ELECTED

Many polling places in the outlying districts of Yale-Cariboo have not been heard from. The total returns so far learned show that Duncan Ross, liberal, has a safe lead over Martin Burrell, conservative, and Ernest Mills, socialist. The total is given as follows:

Liberal	1,567
Conservative	1,470
Socialist	404

These two liberal victories gives B.C. a solid liberal representation at Ottawa of seven members.

THE SOCIALISTS' VIEW.

Mr. A. Lackey, president of the Nelson Socialist club expressed himself as follows in regard to the recent election:

"We are quite satisfied with the demonstration we have made. The vote polled for Mr. Baker and for Mr. Mills was a purely socialist vote. We have never appealed to the working classes in this campaign on any but socialist grounds. We have never made an appeal to other classes on any grounds. So far education in socialistic ideas and principles has not proceeded far enough nor sunk deep enough to justify us in expecting better results than we have obtained. But we don't consider our work or our money wasted, The seed sown now will bear fruit. Our final victory is certain."

THE ALBERTA OIL FIELDS.

Winnipeg Expert Pronounces the Oil Superior to any Other.

J. W. Warren, of the Winnipeg Oil Company, who for the past two weeks has been inspecting the property of the Rocky Mountain Development company, in the South Kootenay pass, in southwesteru Alberta, expressed himself as well pleased with the result of his inspection, and says he is persuaded that the oil fields will prove of the very greatest value to western Canada.

"I went west to the Kootenay country," said Mr. Warren to the Free Press, "prepared to find that the possibilities of the region have been very much overestimated, and that the reports regarding the quality of the oil and the quantities of it available, were much exaggerated. I found on examination that the actual condition was better than had been represented. I have been for many years connected with oil interests in all parts of the continent—have examined oil in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Texas, California, and in Petrolea, Canada, and I never found anywhere a crude oil which was equal to the Alberta product. I distilled and refined the oil as it came from the well, and found that it contained forty per cent of burniug properties, coal oil and gasoline, the hydrometer test showing sixty per cent. of burning properties. The oil is also free from sulphur. The Petrolea product is five per cent. sulpnur and the cost of eliminating it amounts 34 cents per barrel in addition to the labor.

The wells are located 45 miles south of Pincher Creek, in the extreme southwest corner of Alberta. The Canadian Pacific is thus within 45 miles of the wells, and the Great Northern is within 20 miles and is coming nearer every day. I talked to the superintendent of the Great Northern at Lethbridge and found that he was on his way to inspect the oil fields. There is no doubt but that the Great Northern will push its line through to the oil region in the immediate future, and the industry will be fully developed. At the present time a very large amount of American oil is used in Canada. Two-thirds of all oil used is imported, the only source of Canadian oil being the wells in Petrolea. It seems impossible to doubt that the Alberta wells will be able in the future to supply the Canadian market.

"In recent years the by-products of crude oil have become of great value. There are one hundred and fifty of these by-products, including in addition to kerosene and gasoline, all lubricating oils, vaseline, paraffin, aniline, carbolic acid, rigiline, oiltine, and very many others. Arrangements are now being made for the erection of an oil refinery, and the machinery is being bought in Pittsburg. The company have secured four thousand acres of land in the vicinity, having bought all the promising land in the neighborhood of the wells.

"Of the company, John Lineman, of Okotoks, Alberta, is president; George K. Leeson, of Calgary, is vice-president; and H. E. Hyde, of Pincher Creek, is secretary-treasurer. — Manitoba Free Press.

BODY FELL 500 FEET.

Emil Nikolm, Cage Tender, in Rossland Mine instantly killed

Nikolm's duties consisted of taking the loaded cars from the cage and putting the empty ones on. The accident occurred at 11 oclock, but no one was present, therefore just how it occurred is to a considerable extent guess work. It seems certain, however, Nikolm had taken a car containing ore from the cage and had left it a short distance from the shaft's mouth. Then he took an empty car and instead of pushing it to the track where the cage was, he propelled it along to the compartment of the shaft where there was no cage. The rules require that the gate in the compartment be closed while there is no cage to the compartment.

The gate was open. When the mouth of the empty compartment was reached the car was pushed into it and it plunged into the compartment, and in an endeavor to prevent it falling, the man was pulled into the compartment and went down to a fearful death on top of the other cage 500 feet below.

On the way down he struck repeatedly against the timbers. In the descent his brains were dashed out and nearly every bone in his body broken. The cage was caught and held in the timbers near the 300 foot level.

A SMOOTH GAME.

A commercial traveller played a smooth game in this city recently. He asked old patrons to endorse drafts on his house in the east. With the necessary signatures the drafts were duly cashed by the bank but were returned by the firm in the east "dishonored", and the endorsers became responsible. It appears that the commercial traveller had got his dismissal on the prairie and he then started out to do somebody up. Three drafts cashed in Fernie netted him $350.

WILL MEET DEC. 8TH.

Winnipeg, Nov. 25th.—The Manitoba legislature has been summoned to meet on Dec. 8th.

T[illegible]'S INVESTIGATION

INSPECTOR DICK'S PAST ACTIONS BEING LOOKED UP

Judge Spinks has Charge. Four Witnesses Examined Today. No damaging Evidence so far Gained by Crown.

Judge Spinks, of Vernon, who has been appointed by the government a sole commissioner under the Public Enquiries Act to inquire into and report upon the conduct of Mr. Archibald Dick of Nanaimo in his capacity as a Government Inspector of Mines arrived in Fernie last night. His Honor is holding the first sitting in the city hall to-day.

The charge against Mr. Dick is that he gave untruthful reports in the condition of the mines prior to the big explosion in 1902 and that he received money from the Coal Company to do so. The investigation was ordered on account of a letter published in the Clarion of Vancouver, by a miner named Dickson in which he pointedly charged Mr. Dick with these matters. The crown is represented on the case by J. A. Harvey, of Cranbrook, while G. H. Thompson, of Caanbrook if representing Mr. Dick. At this morning's sitting little was done. At the afternoon sitting four witnesses had been examined before going to press. These were D. Davies, comptroller of Coal Co.; A. Klauer, chief clerk in accountant's department; G. F. Johnson former clerk in the same department and Chas. Burrows formerly miner at Coal Creek. From these witnesses nothing of an incriminating nature has been learned. The investigation here will probably be over this evening.

CHURCH LOCALS.

Rev. A. Dunn has accepted the call of the congregation of Knox Church and the induction services will be held in the church next Tuesday evening. Rev. W. G. W. Fortune, of Cranbrook will occupy the pulpit on Sunday. Rev. G. Findley, of Fort Steele, preached last Sunday.

The Baptist S. S. will have a Christmas Tree and entertainment Tuesday, Dec. 27th, 1904.

Rev. E. H. Shanks and wife will commence a series of evangelistic services in the Baptist church in the near future. These evangelists have an international reputation and have recently held largely attended and enthusiastic meetings in Victoria and Vancouver, B. C. Mrs. Shanks is a most gifted vocalist. It has been impossible in places where they have labored to secure a building large enough to hold the crowds desiring to attend the services.

A grand banquet and jubilee will be given at the Salvation Army citadal, Fernie, B. C., on Dec. 17th. Everybody come and by "helping others help yourself."

A STEADY INCREASE

Last Saturday was pay-day at the three collieries for the month of October The amount paid totalled $132,500 distributed as follows.

Coal Creek	$61,500
Michel	$49,500
Carbonado	$21,500

This is an increase over the September pay of nearly $14,000. A steady increase may be looked for monthly in the output of these mines, especially those at Coal Creek, now that the Great Northern is about ready to carry fuel to the Montana smelters. At Coal Creek the mines never were run more steadily Only one shift (election day) has been missed this month and that was made up by working on pay-day, a very unusual occurrence.

The coke industry never was in a better condition. The ovens of the C. N. P. Coal Company manufactured more coke in October than in any previous month in the history of the company, not only this, but the coke shipments in that month exceeded all previous monthly shipments. Yet the ovens are not being run full force, largely owing at the present time to lack of cars. At Fernie 390 of the 426 ovens are burning steadily. At Michel where the battery is slightly larger than at Fernie, a larger percentage of dark ovens is found, and at no time has this percentage receded lower than twenty per cent.

House and cleared, fenced lot near the projected Great Northern depot, Fernie, for sale only $800,00. Apply to F. J. Watson.

GOOD REASONS FOR ALL HE SAYS

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cure W. N. Baskin's Pains.

Well-Known Norwood Contractor Always Has a Good Word for Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Norwood, Ont., Nov. 21.—(Special.)—Mr. W. N. Baskin, the well known lumberman and railroad contractor, here, is one of those who never fail to say a good word for Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Baskin gives the reason why as follows:

"For two years I was laid up with Lumbago and Kidney Disease. At times I would become very weak and would have to give up work. I did work on the C. P. R. and the Parry Sound R. R., and people all know how sick I was.

"Reading of wonderful cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills led me to try them, and I can say I have not had any pains since I used them. It just took three boxes to cure me completely."

BY THEIR DEEDS.

A tattered beggar in the street
Sang always some old croning hymn,
And held to those whom he might meet
His hat with ragged, greasy brim.
Two men—two mighty men—came by—
Two honored leaders of the town;
Came, too, a dame of repute high—
Each passed the beggar with a frown.

But still the beggar sang away,
With awkward music in each word;
And thru the balance of that day
The three that chanting echo heard.
They heard, and held the fading strains
As memories of things that bless,
And added to their other gains
The golden one of kindliness.

Now, by some careless prank of fate,
These four met on the Way of Death,
And journeyed to the Joyous Gate
Where but the perfect entereth.
The warder halted them, and told
How all who entered must be known
By goodly deeds—by deeds of gold—
By helpful actions all their own.

The honored men explained that they
Had given of their earthly wealth
To help their fellows on the way
To knowledge, peacefulness and health.
The woman told of visits made,
The suffering and poor to greet—
All three told how the world had laid
Its laureled tributes at their feet.

"You may go in," the warder smiled,
"Although your fame we did not know,
A cup of water to a child
Is more than all the passing show."
The beggar turned to take his way
With humbled mien and drooping head.
The warder called to him to stay,
"Come in! We've heard you sing!" he said.

POLITE BULLDOG.

Manner in Which the Old Fighting Breed Has Degenerated.

The modern bulldog is grossly libeled by his own appearance. His bloodshot eyes, flattened nose, deep chest and formidable tusks give him the appearance of ferocity, and his naturally sweet disposition is overlooked save by the few who know and love him.

Take, for example, the 80 forbidding animals in the 13th annual championship show of the London Bulldog Society, which opened recently at the Crystal Palace, London.

For all their ill-looks, they allowed themselves to be pulled about and treated disrespectfully by everyone who passed.

"Champion "Broadlea Squire," for example, came down from Manchester in a railway carriage full of children. The little ones poked their fingers in his eyes, put their hands in his mouth, pulled his tail and took unheard of liberties. The champion did not like it, but was too much of a gentleman to protest.

There was an old gentleman at Sydenham who moved about disconsolately among the exhibits seeking for something that was not there.

"There's not a fighter among them," he said. "Not one of them would stand a moment's chance against one of my old dogs." He was listened to with respect, for he was Mr. "Teddy" Morgan, aged 71, a famous trainer of the old fighting breed.

"I had an old dog named Fiddler," he said, "that killed 13 dogs in his time, but that was 40 years ago. At one great fight two dogs, 'Joe' and 'Duke,' fought for three and a half hours before 'Joe' was killed.

"There were some cruel 'dodges' in those days," continued Mr. Morgan. "One was poisoning a dog's neck so that the other animal weakened and died in the course of a fight. We used to lick their necks to see that this was not done, but 'Bill' Asford, of Birmingham, did this once, and died from the poison."

Truly Good.

"What is your idea of a truly good wife?" asked the youth.

Dangerous Scheme.

The Mother—How can I get my boy to do right? The Friend—Give him good advice. The Mother—But he always does just the contrary of what I recommend. The Friend—Then give him bad advice.

Out of the Question.

Her Husband—I suppose a woman would have to be quite a philosopher to be indifferent to her appearance. She—She'd have to be a lunatic.

A Speaking Likeness.

Mrs. Fondmar—Don't you think baby grows more like me every day? Fondmar—Yes, dear, especially so since she began to talk.

JAVA'S DEATH PLANT.

It Grows Only on the Sterile Soil of the Volcanic Regions.

Java, the land of the famous and much exaggerated Death valley, has many wonderful curiosities, the principal one being the kali mujah, or death plant. It grows only on the sterile soils of the volcanic regions of Java and the adjoining islands and is even there reckoned as a curiosity on account of its extreme scarcity. It grows from two and a half to three feet in height, with long, slender stems, well protected by stout thorns nearly an inch in length. The ground leaves are of a delicate, satinlike smoothness, heart shaped, emerald green on one side and blood red, streaked and veined with light buff, on the other.

The flowers of this death dealing beauty are even more beautiful than the plant itself, being very large and cup shaped and of a color almost deathly in its whiteness. The name of the plant is from a characteristic of these splendid flowers, which, beautiful though they are, continually drip with a deadly poison.

The poison, which is distilled in the bottom of the cup shaped blossom, has the sickening odor of chloroform intensified a dozen fold, it being powerful enough to overcome a full grown man in a few seconds, even when inhaled in open air. The perfume, if such a pungent odor can properly be so called, produces insensibility in the form of convulsions, distorting the face, especially the mouth and eyes, into a horrid, crazy looking grin. Recovery from the effects of inhaling this odor is said to be very slow.

THE TREE OF IMAGES.

Legend of a Peculiar Plant That Grows In Tibet.

There is a legend about a tree of Tibet, called the "tree of 10,000 images," which reads like this:

Far away in the dreary land of Ambo, in Tibet, is a green valley in which, in a Tartar tent, was born a wonderful boy named Tsong Kaba. From his birth he had a long white beard and flowing hair and could speak perfectly his native tongue.

His manners were majestic, and his words were full of wisdom. When he was three years old he resolved to cut off his hair and live a solitary life. So his mother shaved his head and threw his long, flowing locks upon the ground outside their tent door. From his hair sprang the wonderful tree.

Tsong Kaba lived many years, did countless good deeds and at last died. But the tree which had grown up from his hair lived, and they called it "the tree of 10,000 images." This was long before the Christian era, but it is the testimony of the French missionaries that the tree lives yet. The leaves are always green. The wood is of a reddish tint and has an aroma as of cinnamon.

The bark of the tree is marked with well known symbols in the Tibetan language. Alphabetic characters also appear in green on every leaf, some darker, some lighter than the leaf itself. The branches of the tree are described as being spread out like plumes of feathers crowning a trunk only eight feet high, but of great girth.

Two French missionaries who saw the tree were fully convinced that the marks upon it were of natural growth.

He Still Agreed.

Lord Justice Romer was a chancery judge in England for nine years before he was raised to the appeal court. Decisive in manner and no waster of words, his simple "I agree" has become famous. Lord Justice Rigby was giving an elaborate decision one day and happened to pause in that effective way he had to give emphasis to a point. In an instant came in Sir Robert Romer's sonorous "I agree," to the visible discomfiture of Sir John Rigby. "But I hadn't finished my observations," he said and thereupon continued his judgment, somewhat more exhaustively. At length he finished. "I still agree," said Lord Justice Romer. And the appeal court rang with unaccustomed laughter.

Looking Into the Future.

"I guess I might as well quit school, pa," said the boy.

"Why, my son?"

"Oh, there ain't any use going, except to be able to help my little boy when I grow up, and if they have changed the way of doing things since you were a boy so that you can't help me it's likely I'm just wasting my time getting ready to help my little boy."

He got the help he wanted, but it was a good thing he didn't hear what his father had to say about newfangled school books after he had gone to bed.

His Favorite Animals.

Sunday School Teacher—Do you love animals?

Boy—Yes'm.

"Snakes."

"Goodness! Why do you like snakes?"

"'Cause it ain't wicked to kill 'em."

Practically Admitted.

Tess—May is considerably older than Bess. Jess—Yes. May practically admitted it to me the other day. Tess—You don't say? Jess—Yes; she said, "Bess is just about my age."

Success.

Paul—Percy, what is your idea of success? Percy—My idea of success? Well, it is having people run after me who used to run away from me.

The more you speak of yourself the more you are likely to lie.—Zimmerman.

BLOTCHY SKINS.

A Trouble Due to Impure Blood Easily Remedied.

Bad blood is the one great cause of bad complexion and blotchy skins. This is why you must attack the trouble through the blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. All blotches, boils, ulcers, pimples and paleness are the direct, unmistakable result of weak blood loaded with impurities. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills conquer the poison; they drive out all the impurities; they actually make new, rich red blood; they strike right at the root of all complexion troubles; they are a positive and permanent cure for all virulent skin diseases like eczema, scrofula, pimples and erysipelas. They give you a clear, clean soft skin, free from all blemish and full of rosy health. Mr. Matthew Cook, Lamerton, N. W. T., tells how Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured him of erysipelas after other medicines had failed. He says: "My skin was inflamed; my flesh tender and sore; my head ached; my tongue was coated; I had chills and thought I was taking fever. I tried several medicines, but nothing helped me until I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and drove the trouble from my system, and I am now in the best of health. I think these pills the best medicine in the world for blood troubles."

It is an every day record of cures like this that has given Dr. Williams' Pink Pills their world-wide prominence. They cure when other medicines fail, but you must get the genuine with the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around every box. You can get these pills at all druggists, or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Seven Rests In Disease.

Mention is made by Professor Hilton in his lectures on "Rest and Pain" of the seven varieties of the former obtainable in the treatment of disease—namely, mental rest, bodily rest, a combination of those two, as in that most perfect state of rest called sleep; organic rest, as evidenced in the avoidance of exertion in cardiac disease, of talking in affections of the respiratory tract, and in limiting, so far as possible, the act of deglutition in affections of the alimentary tract by the substitution of enemata; local rest, as secured by change in the position of body or limb, the use of pillows, cushions, etc.; dietetic rest, by avoiding the too frequent use of food and drink; lastly, medicinal rest, in the relief of spasm by inhalations and the not too frequent administration of medicine to the prejudice of nutrients or stimulants. Professor Hilton lays it down as a rule that by a consideration of the manner in which these principles of rest may be best applied in each special case of disease are relief and comfort to be brought to the sufferer and diseased action arrested.—London Lancet.

Discomforts In Venice.

Venice is not a desirable place of residence in summer for the ordinary mortal. The moisture in the air, caused by the steady prevalence of the sirocco, takes the starch, so to speak, out of men's minds as much as out of their collars, and it is only the artistic, the lazy and the unemployed who can rightly enjoy the summer in Venice. The colors in air, in sky and sea are of a nature to provide perpetual delight and occupation to the eye and hand of the painter, while the abundance and variety of the fruits to be had will equally content his meaner appetite, for fruit in Venice is beautiful and almost oriental in its quality and quantity. But there are drawbacks to be set against the lotus eating kind of existence, and not the least of these is that of hot nights, when sleep is almost an unknown quantity and is driven away by one subtle foe after another, the mosquito being the fiercest and most aggressive.

Waiter Couldn't Help Them Out.

A well known Baltimore society man was once spending a few days with his wife at Atlantic City, and in connection with his visit he told the following story: When he seated himself in the dining room on the evening of his arrival he discovered that he could not read the menu, as he had left his glasses in his room, and his eyes were useless without them. When he passed it to his wife she exclaimed that she was in the same predicament. At a loss to know what to do, the gentleman called the waiter to him and, pointing to the menu, said:

"Read that to me and I will give you a dollar."

Quick as a flash the waiter replied:

"Scuse me, boss, but I ain't had much ejication maself!"

HEALTH FOR BABY

Babies that are well, sleep well, eat well, and play well. A child that is not lively, rosy-cheeked and playful, needs immediate attention, or the results may be serious. Give an unwell child Baby's Own Tablets and you will be astonished how soon he will be bright and playful. For diarrhoea, constipation, simple fever, indigestion, colic and teething irritation these tablets have absolutely no equal. They do not stupefy the child as poisonous "soothing" medicines do—they go to the seat of the trouble and cure him. Mrs. E. Bancroft, Deerwood, Man., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for stomach and bowel troubles, for simple fevers and teething and I think them the best medicine in the world." You can get these Tablets at any drug store, or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Wise mothers always keep the Tablets in the house to guard against a sudden illness of little ones.

CATS AND DOGS.

The Enmity That Exists Between Them and the Reason of It.

Why does the dog hate the cat? Scientists have been investigating the enmity between these animals, and they believe that the instinctive hatred which certain beasts feel for each other is due to inheritance from ancient times when the animals met in a wild state and preyed on each other.

The enmity between cats and dogs seems to be due more to hatred on the part of the dog than of the cat. The latter animal apparently hates dogs because dogs chase her, while the dog hates the cat because she is a cat.

A cat will feed at a place where a dog has been without betraying any signs of anger, but a dog generally becomes excited and wild if he scents the trail of a cat anywhere near his food or sleeping place.

Now this enmity is not to be explained by anything that happens between dogs and cats in domesticity or anything that ever happened between them as long ago as human history goes. In all these thousands of years dogs and cats have been kept as pets, and of all animals they are the two which should be the most friendly.

But the reverse is the case. One naturalist, Dr. Zell, seeks it in the fact that the common cat not only looks like, but smells like, the great cats of prey. And of those cats of prey there is one, much like a domestic cat in many ways, which hunts dogs by preference. This big cat is the leopard.

The domestic cat and her larger relative, the wildcat, have never harmed the race of dogs, but their great speckled cousin is and always has been the most ferocious of dog murderers, and the cat must pay for it.

Authorities agree that there is no animal that the leopard would rather eat than the dog. As a result there are many villages in the districts in which leopards are plentiful where nobody can keep a dog. The great cats will not hesitate to break into the houses to seize their favorite dish.

But, says the doubter, the modern dog certainly could not have known leopards in many thousands of years. He has been a domestic pet in regions where there have been no leopards since man first appeared.

That is true, says Dr. Zell. But he points to the fact that dogs have a habit of turning around several times before they lie down. This, he says, is due to the fact that when they were in a wild state they had to do this to press down leaves and twigs in order to prepare a bed for themselves, and as they have not overcome this habit in all their years of domesticity it is quite natural that they should still inherit fierce hatred of any creature that smells like a leopard.

Dogs and cats are not the only animals that still show inherited fear or hatred of other beasts which they have never seen themselves. Thus the rhinoceros is frantically in fear of anything white, and naturalists say that this is because once upon a time some big white animal hunted him. But that must have been long ago, for there are no big white animals now where the rhinoceros dwells.

Chickens that have never seen a fox will cackle and run in fear if they come across the place where the animal has passed or where his carcass has been dragged. If a fox has been anywhere near a cat's drinking dish the cat will not approach it.

A Spoiled Dinner.

Mme. de Mazarin certainly was eccentric and unfortunate, according to the memoirs of Marquise de Crequy. She never gave a reception without some accident happening. When she had a supper party the kitchen was certain to catch on fire. She gave a grand fete champeter and in order to make it more realistic sent for a flock of real sheep, a heifer and a shepherd's dog. The flock was to pass behind a glass screen. An unruly buck smashed the glass, and the entire flock, with the heifer and dog, rushed in upon the audience and scattered it. Some of the sheep got access to the supper table, and so there were no refreshments to speak of.

The Prince of Waterloo.

After the battle of Waterloo the Duke of Wellington was created Prince of Waterloo, and four pensions were conferred on him and his descendants. A Belgian paper states that in the great book of the Belgian public debt there are four entries every year of payments to the Prince of Waterloo. They are 80,106 francs 14 centimes, 492 francs, 35 francs 89 centimes and 3 francs 47 centimes, or a total of more than £3,000.

He Does Go Round Buttin'.

At a dinner recently given in London an American actor proposed the conundrum, "What goes round a button?" After the problem had been given up by the party he gave the answer, "A goat." There was a moment's silence.

Finally one of the women spoke up. "Why," she said in a puzzled tone, "I didn't know they ate buttons."

His Point of View.

"Do you think the world is growing better?"

"No, confound it! I dropped the nickel the conductor gave me in change this morning, and it rolled off the car."

Changed It.

Curious Ways of Crabs.

Certain species of crabs cover themselves with seaweed in order to deceive their foes. One crab was seen by the naturalist Eisig in 1878 to pluck off zoophyles, those plantlike animal colonies which grow on shells and stones, and to fix them on the spines and hairs of its shell. A still deeper romance of defensive tactics is to be found in the case of certain hermit crabs. They live in the castoff shells of whelks and crawl about, house on back. One claw is bigger than the other, and this is an adaptive feature, for when the crab retires into its house the bigger claw is tucked across the mouth of the shell to bar the way against a possible intruder. More curious still is the habit of one species which toils along with a sea anemone fixed to his shell, like Sindbad carrying the Old Man of the Sea. Great care is taken of this anemone. It is fed by the crab, and if the latter has to seek a new shell by reason of his growth he tenderly shifts his tenant off the old abode and places him on the new one.

Dean Hole's Wit.

On one occasion Dean Hole, the well known English clergyman, with Mrs. Hole, landed at Dover, much exhausted, after a rough crossing of the English channel. While waiting for the train the dean pored over the railway regulations. "Ah," he said, addressing the station inspector, "it's one consolation after such a crossing and this tiresome wait that we go back at half price." "I don't understand, sir," was the official's reply. "There is no special reduction." "Oh, yes, there is," said the dean. "I've just been reading all your notices, and you state that you take returned empties at much reduced rate." Once when the dean was playing whist for threepenny points he appeared to be very well provided with threepenny bits. "Ah," his opponent remarked, "have you the offertory with you?" "What, sir," the dean answered, "do you recognize your miserable contributions?"

The Distant Stars.

Speaking roughly, we have reason, from the data so far available, to believe that the stars of the Milky Way are situated at a distance between 100,000,000 and 200,000,000 times the distance from the sun. At distances less than this it seems likely that the stars are distributed through space with some approach to uniformity. We may state as a general conclusion indicated by several methods of making the estimate that nearly all the stars which we can see with our telescopes are contained within a sphere not likely to be much more than 200,000,000 times the distance of the sun.

Granting that all the stars we can see are contained within this limit, may there not be any number of stars without the limit which are invisible only because they are too far away to be seen?—Simon Newcomb in Harper's Magazine.

After the Quarrel.

She—There is just one little bit of millinery that I desire more. He (crossly)—You needn't say any more. I won't buy it for you. She—Don't be afraid. You'll never get the bill for it. It's a widow's bonnet.

A Sure Way.

Mabel—I wish I knew some way to make George forget me, for I can never marry him. Henry—Have you tried lending him money?

APPEALING FOR HELP.

M. Perloff, the millionaire merchant of Moscow, says a despatch from St. Petersburg, has received a pathetic letter from Madame Stoessel, wife of General Stoessel, dated Port Arthur, Oct. 24, appealing to the rich Muscovites for money to assist the helpless wounded defenders of the fortress, some of whom have lost both arms, others either an arm or a leg, some of them being blind and others suffering from wounds in the spine and who will be crippled for life. There are, she adds, very many such unfortunates.

Cucumbers and melons are "forbidden fruit" to many persons so constituted that the least indulgence is followed by attacks of cholera, dysentery, griping, etc. These persons are not aware that they can indulge to their heart's content if they have on hand a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, a medicine that will give immediate relief, and is a sure cure for all summer complaints.

In the Future.—"Who's your friend sitting there?" "He's the famous financial critic." "What makes him so excited?" "He's waiting for stocks to go twenty points higher, then he's going to predict a bull market."

Rheumatism will Succumb to South American Rheumatic Cure because it goes right to the seat of the trouble and removes the cause. Many so-called cures but deaden pain temporarily only, to have it return again with doubled violence. Not so with this great remedy. It eradicates from the system the last vestige of the disease and its cures are permanent.—74

Protection Is Needed.—New York now proposes to spend $150,000,000 in the purchase of a watershed. It will be cheap enough if Wall Street can get protection from water for that sum.

'TIS A MARVELLOUS THING.—When the cures effected by Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil are considered, the speedy and permanent relief it has brought to the suffering wherever it has been used, it must be regarded as a marvelous thing that so potent a medicine should result from the six simple ingredients which enter into its composition. A trial will convince the most skeptical of its healing virtues.

The Bogy Man.—"Isn't there any way of rousing this community?" said the discouraged spellbinder, whose meetings had been attended by beggarly audiences. "I reckon there is," said the prominent citizen. "Come into town some day when we're not expecting you, and make a noise like Lincoln Steffens."

"He's boasting that he's got a sinecure." "What does that mean?" inquired Mrs. Browne. "Oh!" replied Mrs. Malaprop, "that means he thinks everybody's lookin' at him. Didn't you never hear tell of a person bein' the sinecure of all eyes?"

Hard and soft corns cannot withstand Holloway's Corn Cure; it is effectual every time. Get a bottle at once and be happy.

CANADIAN NEWS.

The Latest Happenings In The Dominion.

LIVED UNDER SEVERAL RULERS

Mary Aird, relict of the late William Barry, died at 55 Duke street, Montreal, on Friday, aged 106 years and six months; she lived under five sovereigns. She was born when George III. was King of Great Britain and Ireland in 1798. George III., George IV., William IV. and Victoria reigned and passed away and King Edward VII. ascended the throne and still the old lady lived and enjoyed good health until a few days ago, when she became ill and gradually sank. She was born in County Derry, Ireland. When 14 years of age she emigrated to the United States and lived there three or four years, when she went to Montreal, where she had resided ever since. Her husband, the late William Barry, was gardener for Sir Hugh Allan for forty years, when he was pensioned. The pension was continued to his widow. The old lady lived in the same house during her whole lifetime in Montreal. Of her twelve children but three survive. They are James Barry, aged 75; Mrs Meeney and Mrs. Sheevers, all residents of Montreal.

BOY ACQUITTED OF FATHER'S MURDER.

At the postponed fall assizes which opened at Rosthern, N. W. T., on the 14th, before his honor Judge Prendergast, the case of Howard Stewart, an eleven-year-old boy, charged with murdering his father, Alfred Stewart, was taken up. The affair happened at Eagle Hills, west of Saskatoon, on June 20, last. The defence averred that the father had tried to kill his daughter with an axe. The wife interfered and the husband turned upon her. The boy ran into the house, secured a gun and aimed at his father's legs with the intention of wounding him only. The mother struck up the barrel to save Stewart, but when it was on a level with Stewart's neck the boy pulled the trigger, death resulting. After being out fifteen minutes the jury returned with a verdict of justifiable homicide, and the prisoner was acquitted. Crown Prosecutor Turgeon C. Smith of Saskatoon defended.

BIG FORGER BROUGHT BACK.

D. A. Hamel, ex-paymaster of Montreal, who fled to Cuba last winter after forging a $10,000 cheque on the Bank of Montreal, in the name of the city of Montreal, was brought to Montreal last week by Chief Detective Carpenter, who was absent six weeks. The formalities were numerous and the unconstitutionality of the extradition, in the absence of a treaty, was set aside by the Cuban supreme court, for the reason that an understanding had been reached between England and Cuba that if Hamel were surrendered Great Britain would reciprocate when a similar case came up. The expense of the extradition has been heavy.

SUBSTANTIAL INCREASE IN BANK CLEARINGS.

The following are some of the weekly clearings as compiled by Bradstreet's for the week ending Nov. 10, with percentages of increase and decrease as compared with the corresponding week last year: Montreal, $28,040,627, increase 11.0; Toronto, $18,844,295, increase 17.4; Winnipeg, $8,056,295, increase 10.4; Ottawa, $2,405,948, decrease 2.5; Halifax, $1,847,452, decrease 25.1; Quebec, $2,022,600, increase 5.1; Hamilton, $231,601, increase 14.8; London, Ont., $1,200,692, increase 13.5; St. John, N. B., $1,262,115, decrease 27.1; Victoria, B. C., $1,016,411, increase 26.0.

LOU SCHOLES' FATHER SHOT IN THE EYE.

Word reached Toronto one day last week that John F. Scholes, the well known proprietor of the Athletic Hotel, Toronto, had been shot while out rabbit hunting near Collingwood. Scholes was about 40 yards away from his son, John, when both fired at the same rabbit. Several shot from the latter's rifle glanced off, hitting the elder Scholes in the ball of the eye. Lou Scholes said that while his father's injury was painful, he did not think there would be any serious results.

McGILL DEGREE FOR EARL GREY.

The corporation of McGill University, Montreal, will confer the degree of LL.D. upon Earl Grey upon his succeeding Lord Minto as Governor-General of Canada. The date has not as yet been fixed, but it is expected that a special convocation will be called for the purpose, as was done upon the arrival of Lord Minto.

THIRTEEN-YEAR-OLD WONDER.

Samuel Holewitch, aged 13, is accused at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., of forging a check on the Traders' bank and was arrested. He escaped by crawling under the door of his cell, but was again arrested. The boy knows all about the bank paper, and the officers consider him a wonder.

ESSEX TOBACCO CROP.

The amount of tobacco grown in South Essex, Ont., the present year was 5,000,000 pounds, almost double last year's crop. The tobacco has been all well cured, is of finer quality than last season's, and it is expected a better price than usual will be secured.

THE McCONKEY WILL CASE.

The probate of the will of the late George S. McConkey, restauranteur, was granted at Toronto one day last week, despite the opposition of Fred McConkey, one of the sons, whose name was not mentioned. A later despatch says that Fred McConkey withdrew his objection to the will, and received $12,500, a sixth of the will.

HOSPITAL BURNED.

The Parry Sound Hospital was gutted by fire on Monday. The patients were all got out, but with difficulty.

G. T. R. SMASH AT WHITBY.

In a rear-end collision on the G. T. R., near Whitby, Monday morning, Conductor Knox, Fireman Flynn and Brakeman Powell, all of East Toronto, were injured.

TRAVELLING WITH SMALLPOX.

Two ladies from Detroit visiting near St. Thomas, Ont., developed smallpox on Saturday, and left for home. Many people in St. Thomas were exposed to the contagion.

ALLIANCE MAY APPEAR.

A despatch from Ottawa says that the Supreme Court there has decided that the Lord's Day Alliance would be entitled to appear in the Sunday observance case when it came up in February.

$10,000 VERDICT.

The court of appeal at Toronto unanimously upheld the verdict of $10,000 given by the jury at London to representatives of L. DePencier, killed in the Wanstead accident. The company failed in their contention that the verdict was excessive.

BURGLARS IN TORONTO.

Burglars visited the Gold Medal Manufacturing Co.'s factory on Van Horne street, Toronto, Sunday evening, and got away with $300 in cash and one or two cheques for large amounts. They locked the place after them.

TORONTO UNION STATION.

The new union station at Toronto is to be the finest building in Canada. Its cost will reach or exceed three million dollars. That is the figure at any rate which has been given to the architects upon which to prepare plans.

A. H. NOTMAN DEAD.

Alex. H. Notman, assistant general passenger agent of the Canadian Pacific railway, died on the way home to Toronto from Los Angeles, on the train at Albuquerque, New Mexico. He had gone to California, suffering from consumption. Mr. Notman was born in Toronto in 1870, and leaves five sons, all of whom reside in Toronto.

NURSE DIED TO SAVE HER CHARGE.

Miss Sarah Paquon, a nurse girl, whose home was at 449 Claremont avenue, Montreal, was walking with a little boy Monday afternoon, when the child ran out in the road in front of a horse driven by Fred Boullion, proprietor of the St. James Hotel. The young woman saw the horse swing around a curve in the road, and, anticipating the lad's danger, rushed to his rescue. She managed to push the youngster to one side, but she was knocked down herself and sustained a concussion from which she died shortly afterwards.

WARNING ISSUED TO INTELLECTUALLISTS.

Principal Falconer, of Halifax, addressing the Wycliffe College students at Toronto a few days ago issued a warning against intellectual Phariseeism. Intellectualism, purely and simply, could not solve the problems of the country, for the reason that an intellectualist is too narrow in his life. It was plodding men and women who made the country; those who, perhaps, had very little brain, or very moderate amount of brains; those, perhaps, whose shrewdness was dull.

BIG FACTORY GUTTED BY FIRE AT BRANDON.

Damage to the extent of $15,000 or more was done in a fire which completely gutted the Rat Portage Lumber company's sash and door factory at Brandon Tuesday evening. It is believed to be the handiwork of incendiaries. Flames were first seen in the rear of the building at 11 o'clock, and when the brigade arrived on the scene these had gained considerable headway. After a stiff fight the firemen succeeded in saving the adjoining lumber yards, but the factory was a total loss. The extent of the insurance, if any, is unknown. This was the second fire that occurred there that day. In the morning a wooden block of stores at the corner of Rosser avenue and Sixth street, was destroyed, at a loss of about $500.

BIG PLANT FOR CANADA.

A despatch from Montreal states that as a direct result of the anti-dumping clause of the tariff, introduced by Mr. Fielding, last session, the American Axe & Tool Company have announced that they will establish a large plant in Canada. Up to the present time the company have had their principal Canadian sales office in Montreal. The company, who have one of the largest plants of its kind in Glassport, Penn., have been doing a large business throughout Canada, and it is to retain the Canadian market that the company will have an entirely Canadian branch. The company have all along been competitors for the same trade as the Canadian Axe & Harvest Tool Company, who have works at Coté St. Paul, and of the Dundas works. The dumping clauses make it impossible for this company to longer compete in Canadian markets at a profit. The Canadian representative of the company said that for the last two weeks they had been looking for a suitable place to build a factory, and indications pointed to a choice between Hamilton and Toronto.

THE MARKET REPORT

Thompson, Sons & Co's.

Thursday, Nov. 17, 1904.

WHEAT: There has been a distinctly weaker situation in the wheat markets during the past week. Unusually fine weather all over the continent (except for the storm on Monday on the Atlantic coast) has permitted free movement by road and rail. No doubt the financial requirements of farmers at this time of the year, combined with the favorable weather, have resulted in free movement from first hands, and as the high prices in the American markets continue to prevent export business in anything like the scale seen in recent years, there has been to some extent an easing up in the domestic demand, and an accumulation of visible stocks which has suggested to traders generally the advisability of going slow, and perhaps of taking of going slow, and perhaps of taking a more conservative view of the situation. Perhaps the principal influence overshadowing the trade at present is the enormous exports of wheat by Russia. It has all along been recognized that Russia had a large stock of wheat to draw upon, out of the surplus of three good crops in succession, and that the exigencies of her present situation called for her exporting freely for financial reasons. But last week her wheat shipments amounted to over 7,000,000 bushels, which is such a very large quantity for one week that it has had a sobering influence on bull traders, suggesting to them, as it does, that if anything like this rate of export from Russia was to continue importing countries might have no occasion to look to America for wheat during the remainder of the crop year. In such case, recent and present prices for wheat in the American markets might prove to be higher than need be. This week, while the markets have been nervous and have on one or two days had sharp advances, they have also had sharp declines, and the latter have preponderated so that the result on the week is a decline in the American markets of 1⅜c. to 4½c. in December wheat and 1⅜c. to 2⅝c. in May wheat. The largest decline is in the Minneapolis and Duluth markets, the smallest at New York. A noticeable feature in the United States trade is the large falling off in primary receipts as compared with a year ago. This circumstance is not realized as it would be if export movement was larger. Crop news is not essentially different from a week ago. The unfavorable weather in Argentine noted in our last week's review has not been fully canfirmed, and nothing special has been heard from that country in the last few days. In the United States winter wheat belt dry weather still obtains and if continued may result unfavorably. The visible supply increased 2,940,000 bushels last week, against an increase of 1,867,000 bus. the week previous and an increase of 2,792,000 bushels last year. The world's visible supply, according to Bradstreet's, increased 6,500,000 bushels, against an increase of 6,573,000 bushels the previous week, and an increase of 3,113,000 bushels last year.

Manitoba wheat has been mostly weak and easily declined in price. Cash demand has been moderate as a rule, although at times it has been urgent according as shippers might require wheat for immediate loading. In cash trade it is noticeable that 1 Northern has held up in price much better than the other grades, and the lower grades of milling wheat has lost the most. At the close of business to-day value of 1 Northern is 97½c.; 2 Nor., 92½c.; 3 Nor., 87c.; No. 4 wheat Extra, 77½c; No. 4 wheat, 76c.; No 5 wheat, 66c. Feed wheat, 59½c.; and No. 2 feed, 50c., spot, or past Winnipeg, and on the option market November closed on Wednesday (to-day being a holiday on the option market), 95½c.; December, 94⅝c., and May, 99⅝c., all prices being for in store Fort William and Port Arthur.

Called from The Commercial.

Winnipeg, Nov. 19, 1904.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

FLOUR—Although quotations remain unchanged and there is a good demand for low grade flour, there is an easier feeling in the market for Manitoba patents. That the easiness of the wheat market and the lack of export demand at current prices are beginning to take effect on the market is shown by the state of affairs in the Eastern markets, where price cutting to a considerable extent is going on. The Oriental demand for low grade flour appears to be increasing, but this business is not as heavy as it might be, as the home demand for low grade stock is good. We quote: Best Hungarian patents, $2.90 per sack of 98 lbs.; seconds, $2.70; strong bakers, $2.10 to $2.40, according to make; XXXX, $1.50. All prices given are subject to usual trade discount.

Millfeed is steady. Local demand is weak owing to the late fall, but in British Columbia and the East the demand is good and prices firm. Millers report a particulay good demand for screening chop from the Pacific Coast and Eastern markets, as high as $14 per ton is being paid at the mill. Ground feed is steady, local demand not being very strong. Milling grades of oats are firmer owing to millers coming into the local market, and No. 2 white has advanced 1c per bushel, No. 3 white is firmer at 29 to 30c. Feed grades are slightly firmer at 28c. No. 2, Fort William basis, is worth 32c. Receipts have been rather light. The export situation as compared with local prices is still unsatisfactory to shippers, and some expect a decline shortly. Barley is steady, and not very active at 95 to 95½c per bushel, Fort William basis, and local mills are grinding, although prices are are on the high side for them. Hay is 50c. to $1 per ton easier on heavier receipts. While it is believed that the crop of hay was pretty heavy owing to the wet season, yet there is talk of considerable loss by prairie fires during the open fall. The quotations are:

MILLFEED—Bran, $17 per ton in bulk, delivered to the trade; shorts, $19 per ton.

GROUND FEED—Oat chop, $25 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley chop, $20; mixed barley and oats, $23; oil cake, $27 per ton.

OATS—No. 2 white, 31c; No. 3, 29 to 30c; feed grades, 28c per bus., in carlots on track, Winnipeg.

Flaxseed—95 to 95½c per bushel, Fort William basis.

SPELTZ—About the same as barley.

HAY—Baled hay, new, in carlots on track here, $7.50 per ton. Loose hay, farmers' loads, $7 to $8 per ton.

VEGETABLES—Potatoes are again firmer. Supplies are pretty scarce, and the local demand is strong as there is a rush to stock up before prices go any higher. Cabbage is firmer. Parsley has advanced 5c per dozen, while beets range to 15c. higher. Celery is now quoted at 40c per dozen only. Pumpkins and hubbard squashes are out of the market. We quote: Potatoes, farmers' loads, 60 to 65c per bushel; cabbage, $20 per ton; Swede turnips, 20c per bus.; parsley, 30c per doz.; onions, 2½c per lb.; carrots, 40c per bus.; parsnips, 1½c per lb.; beets, 50 to 65c per bus.; celery, 40c per doz.; vegetable marrows, 60 to 70c per doz.; lettuce, 40c per doz.

DRESSED MEATS—Quotations are steady except for hogs which are ½c lower owing to the easiness of the live market. We quote: Beef, 5½c per lb. for city dressed; ½c less for country; veal, 6c for choice weights; mutton, 8c; spring lambs, 10c per lb.; hogs, 7½c., delivered to the trade here.

POULTRY—The market is pretty well stocked up with turkeys, but prices are steady at the Thanksgiving advance of 1 to 2c per lb. We quote: Live weight, fowl, 9c per lb.; spring chickens, 11c per lb.; turkeys, 17c per lb., dressed, all prices f.o.b., Winnipeg, paid by local dealers.

CHEESE—Market steady, tone firm in sympathy with Eastern markets. Trade good. Local jobbing prices are: Ontario, 11½c per lb.; Manitoba, 11c per lb.

BUTTER—The market is steady. We quote, on a jobbing basis, Winnipeg, prints, 24c per lb.; assorted boxes, 22½ to 23c per lb.

BUTTER—Dairy—Business is pretty fair, prices steady. We quote prices, paid by jobbers at Winnipeg, as follows: No. 1, 14c; No. 2, 10c; lb.-bricks, 18½c to 19c. Price of round lots, Winnipeg, is 12½c to 13c, and from 1 to 2c more for special selected shipments by express.

EGGS—The market is firm at last week's advance. The demand is good and supplies coming forward well. We quote for imported stock on a jobbing basis, fresh, 24 to 25c; glycerined, 23 to 24c per dozen.

HIDES — Country cured stock is ½c firmer owing to firmness across the border. We quote: Abattoir hides, 7c for No. 1's; 6c for No. 2's. Country cured butchers' at 6¾c for No. 1 grade; sheep hides, 30 to 50c.

TALLOW—The market broke about ½c per lb., but in some cases 3¾c is being paid for No. 1. No. 1 tallow is worth 3½ to 3¾c per lb., delivered at Winnipeg; No. 2, 2¾c.

SENECA ROOT — Although the market is draggy, there is a little better export movement and prices have advanced 1 to 3c per lb. Clean dry root is worth about 56 to 58c per pound, delivered Winnipeg.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE—Export stock is 25c lower and butchers about 50c per cwt. Export stock is worth $2.75 to $3, Winnipeg, weighed at the point of shipment. We quote $2.50 off cars here for choice butchers' down to $2.25 for inferior grades

SHEEP — The market is steady. We quote $3.50 to $4 per cwt., Winnipeg.

HOGS—The expected ½c decline has materialized and lower prices are expected owing to increased offerings, and the easiness of outside markets. We quote 5¼c per lb. selected weight, Winnipeg.

OLD COUNTRY FOOTBALL TEAM IS COMING.

G. A. Parker, of London, England, manager of the Corinthian Association football team, which is considered the best in England, was in Montreal last week, and later went to Ottawa to try and arrange dates in that city for matches. He expects to arrange a tour in Canada for the Corinthians for next summer. The trip will cost $6,000, and Ottawa will be asked to guarantee $300. From Ottawa he will go to Toronto, and as far west as Winnipeg.

SEQUEL TO HEARTLESS HOAX.

A despatch from Hamilton says: A few days ago Harry Watson of this city received a telegram from London, Ont., stating that his brother was dead. He went to London to make preparations for the funeral, but on arrival found his brother alive. The despatch further states: The sequel to the so-called heartless hoax on Harry Watson, of Hamilton, as reported from London, was not so much of a hoax on Mr. Watson, as on J. H. Robinson, undertaker, of Hamilton. According to Mr. Robinson's story, he went to London with a casket for Watson's brother, whose remains were said by Watson to be at the Victoria hospital, and he found them not. On Robinson's return to Hamilton, he found that Watson had suddenly left his employment, and prior to leaving had secured $25 of his money on the strength of the story of his brother's death.

WAR NEWS.

WAR SUMMARY.

The Japanese army south of Mukden is reported to be concentrating on its left and centre presumably with the intention of attacking, and a renewal of fighting is expected any day. Statements given out at St. Petersburg regarding the situation at Port Arthur are more hopeful and represent that the garrison may be expected to hold out until the arrival of Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron. The report that General Stoessel had been wounded is confirmed, but it is said that his injury is not sufficient to prevent him from directing the defence of the fortress.

GENERAL KUROKI IS KILLED BY A SHELL.

A Russian war correspondent of the Associated Press, telegraphing under date of Nov. 13, from Mukden to St. Petersburg, says that the reports of the death of General Kuroki are confirmed. According to his version, the splinter of a shell struck General Kuroki, tearing out a portion of his breast and abdomen. He died on October 4 at Liao Yang, and his body was sent to Japan. A rumor is persistently circulated that a kinsman of the Mikado, Siaosanni, literally "Little Third Prince," has been appointed to succeed General Kuroki, but that the actual command of the army has been entrusted to General Nodzu, who is reviewing the operations. The loss of Major General Kuroki will be severely felt by Japan for his name has been more closely identified than that of any other commander with the conduct of the war and with the unbroken series of successes which, beginning with the battle of the Yalu, culminated with the Russian evacuation of Liao Yang and the hasty withdrawal to Mukden. Kuroki was given command of the First army at the outbreak of hostilities, and so came to direct the initial blows against the enemy's forces. His army landed at various ports along the western coast of Korea, the point of its concentration being, as usual, kept a profound secret, and not even the Russian commanders had more than a vague notion of its movements until, of a sudden, they found themselves surprised and overwhelmed on the Yalu. That seems to have been the keynote of Kuroki's strategy—careful and deliberate preparation leading up to a crushing and unexpected blow.

RUSSIA LOOKING FOR A WAY OUT.

The despatch of the Associated Press to London from Washington confirming the statement made in these despatches that Japan had indicated her willingness to entertain peace suggestions from President Roosevelt or King Edward created much interest in London. Baron Hayashi, the Japanese minister, said: "After the fall of Port Arthur Japan would, I believe, be ready to treat for peace on no higher essential basis than that Russia would evacuate Manchuria, Japan also agreeing to a similar evacuation. The two great difficulties in the way of any suggestion of peace are: First, the apparent opposition of Emperor Nicholas' present advisers to a settlement of any kind; second, the preservation of Russian prestige. When a nation's prestige, if not gone, is severely impaired, it is a difficult matter, even with the best of intentions, to preserve it." The Associated Press has learned that Queen Alexandra has been in constant communication with the Dowager Empress of Russia and Emperor Nicholas himself during the last few days. This is interpreted in London as a hopeful sign and as possibly likely to lead, though not in the immediate future, to the establishment of some modus vivendi whereby steps looking to arbitration might be initiated without offense to Russia. The reiteration of the American state department's determination not to intervene except on requests from both of the belligerents tallies with the official attitude of the British government, but it is thought that before long some method may privately be devised whereby this diplomatic barrier to action will be overcome.

AN AWFUL PICTURE.

A London Daily Telegraph correspondent sends a harrowing picture of the conditions within Port Arthur. He says that vast numbers of sick and dying soldiers, maimed, mutilated and incapacitated for further service, are lying helpless in the inner forts, the straitened circumstances of the garrison making it impossible to give them care and attention. The correspondent suggests that an effort be made to embark them on neutral ships and transfer them under the Red Cross to Chefoo and Shanghai. He offers to take some in a steamer himself for this purpose whenever the conditions allow.

THE CRY FOR PEACE.

The Odessa correspondent of the London Standard says that the cry for peace is becoming most pronounced from all classes in Southern and South-Western Asia. The students at the Universities of Odessa, Kieff and Khardoff have sent a petition to the Government deploring the useless sacrifice of life, and praying that it conclude peace.

RUSSIA OFFERS REWARD.

A despatch to the London Standard from St. Petersburg says that Russia has decided to give handsome rewards to any one furnishing information of the presence of suspicious vessels in the North Sea during the passage of the Baltic fleet or other facts bearing on the Dogger bank affair.

TORONTO MAY EXPROPRIATE STREET RAILWAY.

On suggestion of the Mayor of Toronto it has been decided that at the next meeting of the Board of Control the advisability of asking the Legislature to give power to the city to expropriate the Toronto Street Railway company shall be discussed.

NEWS IN GENERAL.

THE SEEDLESS APPLE.

The seedless apple, one of the phenomenal productions in horticulture of modern days, had its origin in the great Grand Valley in Mesa county, writes a correspondent from Grand Junction, Col. Its discovery rivals that of the celebrated naval orange and its creation is very similar. That this new character of apple will revolutionize apple-growing goes without saying. Orchardists in all parts of the world are deeply interested and are making inquiries. The ingenious person to whom this remarkable discovery is due is John F. Spencer, a pioneer resident of Grand Junction. Mr. Spencer is a devoted student in horticulture, and has thoroughly familiarized himself with fruit trees. He commenced several years ago his experiments, and diligent work eventually brought the success he so much desired. Some years ago Mr. Spencer produced five trees that bore seedless apples, and from these have been budded 2,000 trees. The increase in the number of trees is rapid and the demand is being supplied as fast as possible. In the development of the seedless tree a blossomless tree has also been produced. There is a stamen and a very small quantity of pollen, as in the ordinary apple blossom. This difference affords a protection to the apples from the frost and cold. The new tree has hard, smooth bark and is said to be capable of growing in any climate. The only thing that resembles blossoms are small green leaves which grow around the apple and protect it while growing. The seedless apple is a distinct separate apple of itself. Its taste is sour, with a peculiar honey flavor. It compares somewhat with a Geniton in looks and is about the size of the average Jonathan apple.

ANSWERED MATRIMONIAL ADVERTISEMENTS.

A despatch from Fergus Falls, Minn., says: When the criminal calendar was taken up a few days ago, John Amundson, of Mentor, pleaded guilty to the charge of using the mails for fraudulent purposes. The accused conducted a matrimonial bureau at Mentor, answering advertisements and signing his wife's name. His letter which led to his arrest was sent to a bachelor in California, who had advertised for a wife, and to whom Amundson represented himself as a handsome widow owning a large farm in the vicinity of Mentor. He said that he was tired of single life and running the farm, and wished to go to a milder climate. He asked the Los Angeles man to send him $31 to pay his fare, and the money was duly forwarded. When the trusting bachelor found that it was not even acknowledged he became suspicious and finally turned the letter over to the postoffice inspectors. When arraigned in court, Amundson admitted writing the letter, and told a pitiful story of poverty and sickness which finally drove him to resort to fraudulent means to gain a livelihood. He was sentenced to six months' jail in Crookston and to pay a fine of $50.

NEW YORK READY FOR THE GRIND.

The six-day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden, New York, this year will begin Dec. 5 and end Dec. 10. One minute after 12 o'clock on the morning of Dec. 5 the greatest aggregation of cycling racing stars that ever whizzed around the sides of the garden's cycle track, will start on the long race for glory and cash. Six days later the survivors of the week's long grind will fight out the finish. On the night of Dec. 3, the Saturday night preceding the start of the race, the short distance and paced races will take place. The next night a band concert will entertain the crowd while preparations are going on for the start of the big race. There will be an international side to the race this year, nearly a dozen countries being represented.

FOUNDS TEACHERS' HOME.

Senator Redfield Proctor, of Rutland, Vt., has announced that he will give $10,000 in cash and the house in Rutland in which he was born, valued at $10,000, for the establishment of a home for indigent and worthy public school teachers who have passed the age of usefulness. It is believed that this sum will be combined with a fund of $30,000, which was left by Lucy Ruggles of Bennington in the care of Charles H. Darling, assistant secretary of the U. S. Navy, for the same purpose, and that an additional amount will be appropriated by the State of Vermont.

AMERICA IS AFTER WICKED TURK AGAIN.

The American legation at Constantinople has addressed a note to the porte demanding reparation for the recent attack, near Aleppo, by brigands upon a caravan belonging to the American house of MacAndrews & Fobes of Smyrna. The raid resulted in the killing of six caravan camels and the taking of a big sum of money. The legation insists upon the arrest and punishment of the outlaws, the restitution of the camels and money and the adoption of efficacious measures for the prevention of a recurrence of the outrage.

FINED 10 CENTS DAILY FOR NEXT TWO YEARS.

Judge Algernon T. Sweeney, in the first criminal court at Newark, N.J., one day last week imposed upon Mrs. Buela McCarton, convicted before him of professional mendicancy, a sentence that is said to have no parallel in the annals of Jersey justice. "The sentence of the court is, Mrs. McCarton," announced the judge, "that you shall pay a fine of 10 cents daily for a period of two years, and that you shall appear in this court each day and make payment as the court directs."

The Fernie Free Press

ESTABLISHED 1898.

H. G. WATSON, Editor — J. R. WALLACE, Manager

THE FERNIE FREE PRESS, FERNIE, BRITISH COLUMBIA

FRIDAY, NOV. 25, 1904

It is up to Messrs. Stork, Mott and Eckstein to explain the Elko vote on Tuesday. The query has been put "Did they antagonize the temperance electors?"

* * *

THE fact that only two spoiled ballots were counted out at the three polling booths in Fernie on Tuesday speaks well for the intelligence of the Fernie electors. One of these had no mark of any kind on it and the other had two crosses instead of one opposite one name.

* * *

THE habit of expectorating on the floor of public buildings is so disgusting and so filthy that we hesitate to speak of it here. The manager of the Fernie Opera House has had notices posted forbidding the habit in his building but in a few instances this injunction has been deliberately disregarded. Mr. Stork intends to prosecute these if they persist in the filthy practise. A few heavy fines would have a wholesome effect in this regard.

* * *

Large as the coke industry of the C. N. P. Coal Co. has grown there is still considerable room for expansion without increasing the plants. It is difficult to realize that eighteen months ago the smelting districts in B.C. were greatly agitated about this same fuel question. they maintaining that the government should open up its coal fields to insure a sufficient supply of fuel to meet the B.C. demands. The tables are turned and the demand has not kept pace with the supply.

* * *

The Canadian Pacific is protesting against the decision of the Railway Commissioners that cedar shall be carried at the same rate as other lumber. The C. P. R. claims its rates cannot be interfered with until the profit is one per cent of construction cost. The commissioners say they may not be able to interfere with the rates, but they can prevent discrimination. This is likely to be referred to the Supreme Court.

* * *

Reports from the Coast show that a more opitimistic view of the lumber situation is being taken. R. G. Macpherson M. P. for Vancouver is working hard for a duty on American lumber, and he believes the government will send a tariff commission to B. C. to investigate for themselves the conditions surrounding the industry. Another hopeful argument in favor of better times is that the American mills have disposed of nearly all their surplus stock and that the consequent dumping of cheap American lumber on the Canadian market could not continue much longer. The lumbermen also expect a tremendous stimulation to the lumber industry to result from the Grand Trunk Pacific construction and the large influx of population which it will bring.

* * *

The first shipment over the Grea Northern to Fernie arrived yesterday morning in the shape of a carload of goods from Spokane consigned to W. J. Blundell. The car was brought up from Morrissey in the ballast train to the west bank of the Elk River and handdled from there by the Fernie Livery Co. This shipment marks the opening ot a new era for Fernie. It means that the end of the long struggle with the C. P. R. for cars to transport our products, it means the opening up of large markets for coal and coke in Montana. It reduces the travelling time between Fernie and the Coast by more than fifty per cent, and it places all transportation rates on a competitive basis. The line will be completed and trains running regularly by Christmas, truly a handsome Christmas box for Fernie.

HAND TO HAND FIGHT.

F. A. Wade's Beggar Prince Opera Company delighted large audience in the Stork Hall Opera House on Wednesday and Thursday evenings by their presentation bf "La Mascotte" and "Fra Diavolo." Mr. Wade and Jack Spalding are clever comedians and the majority of the members of the company can sing well. The plays abound in rich humor and the many musical parts were rendered in a manner to charm all lovers of good music. The singing of Messrs Taylor, Walters and Bronti was particularly well received. This is a high class Opera Company and though not strong in the numerical sense the principal parts are taken by artists who could easily appear before any metropolitan audience. The theatrical circuit is to be congratulated upon securing this splendid company.

THE SOCIAL PARASITES

REPRESENT HEARERS NOT DOERS IN THE CHURCH OF CHRIST.

PREACHER'S AROUSING CALL

"Getting Right With God" the Harder of Accomplishment But the Better Plan of Salvation—All Men Broadly Divided Into Two Classes, the Workers and the Idlers—Choose Now Which Path You Will Tread.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov., 13.—To that class of nominal Christians who are hearers, but not doers, and who pin their faith upon their religious ancestry or their favorable environment instead of "getting right with God" personally, this sermon will come as an arousing call. The text is Matthew xxv., 8, "Give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out."

All men may be broadly divided into two classes. There are some on the border line, belonging not altogether to the one class or the other, having characteristics of each, but the great mass may be separated into two groups—the workers and the idlers. The one class includes the toilers, the pullers, the diggers, the grinders, the climbers. They are striving to succeed in a noble, honest way. They do not mean to be social parasites. They want a share of the good things of life, but they do not expect to receive them as a gift, but to pay for them by honest work. They hope for promotion, and they strive to merit it by seeking to make themselves worthy of it. They study and toil to develop themselves, so that when the opportunity comes they will be ready to take advantage of it. Though they may be in obscure positions they do their work well, and when the call comes to go higher they are prepared by long years of hard work to perform the duties of the higher position.

The second class is comprised of men who want to win success by a minimum of labor. They hate drudgery; they hope to succeed by some lucky scheme. These are the men who, going on a foreign tour, expect to learn French or German in five weeks; they hope to marry a rich wife and have an easy time living on the savings of their wife's father; they prepare to conduct the business of their fathers, not by beginning as he did at the lowest rung of the ladder, but by taking a six months' course in a business college or by becoming their father's nominal private secretaries. During their easy apprenticeship they would spend three days out of every week playing golf and at least five nights out of every seven in a ballroom, at theatre party or in clubhouse dissipations. The little time they play at business is when they are not working at play. These people represent failure. For as an old writer once said, "People who never do any more work than they are paid for, never get paid for any more than they do." These people always want to succeed with a minimum of work.

Drones there are in the busy beehives of temporal life. Drones there are in the busy beehives of spiritual life. We know them well. They have existed in every age. Men who hope to enter heaven, but are not willing to deny themselves, nor to resist temptation, nor to strive to enter through the straight gate. It was to warn people of the futility of such lives that Christ spoke the parable of the ten virgins. Five of them, he said, were foolish, self-indulgent and heedless of the obligations of the spiritual life. He is not here denouncing criminals or vicious people. These virgins were nominally Christians, not the murderers and robbers who infested the lonely roads of Palestine, ready to waylay the traveler; not the openly immoral, like the Magdalene or the woman of Samaria, but the people who, as an old commentator has said, make a "profession of the gospel and act in such a manner as to give real Christians a favorable impression of them and so gain admittance into their midst." He is alluding to Christians in name only, who outwardly appear all right and yet have not the true inward consecration of heart and who expect therefore to go to heaven upon borrowed spiritual capital.

These spiritual mendicants of my text are, in the first place, the men and women indifferent to the commandments of Jesus Christ, who expect to ultimately reach heaven on account of the consecration of a Christian ancestry. They are not bad men as the world looks upon bad men. They have been rocked in Christian cradles. They have been reared in Christian nurseries and Christian Sunday schools. During their boyhood days they have knelt at Christian altars and sat in Christian pews. But as far as their own lives have been concerned they have no Christian experience and have never openly confessed Jesus Christ as their Saviour. They have never done anything to show their devotion to God as consecrated disciples of Christ. And yet if you should ask these men to-day if they expected to reach heaven they would instantly answer: "Of course, of course, of course! The home of my youth was a Christian home. I am a child of the covenant. My father was a good Christian man. My mother prayed over me from the time I was born until she died. Why should I not go where they are?"

Oh, yes, my friend, you would certainly go to heaven upon the borrowed capital of your father's and mother's lifelong consecration if they had any power to take you there. But the difficulty is that your father's and mother's spiritual power is limited. From the time you were born your parents lived entirely for you and your brothers and sisters. Every pleasure and every indulgence they had they shared with you. If they were ever given or ever bought a box of candy they never ate it alone. They always brought it home and divided it with their children. But there is one blessing your mother and father have that they cannot divide with their children. They cannot divide with you their oil of spiritual life. They could lead you to the rock of Calvary, where, in the blood of Jesus, you might see how your sins might be cleansed, but you must yourself seek an interest in his atonement. They could tell you of the Holy Spirit, whose illumination could scatter your spiritual darkness, but the oil of his divine influence you must implore for yourself. They could compel you as a child to go and sit in the church pew, but they could not compel you to receive Christ as your Saviour. That is a matter simply between you and Jesus. They could introduce Christ to you as their very best friend, but they could not force you to make their friend Jesus your friend. He will never become a part of your life unless you yourself open to him the holy of holies of your heart to let him in. Neither will Christ receive you as one of his own unless you truly come to him with the countersign of the cross.

And yet many people expect ultimately to reach heaven on account of the borrowed spiritual oil of a consecrated Christian ancestry. "Oh," said a minister's daughter to me some time ago, "I know I am not living as I ought, but I am all right. I have no fear about the future. I have made my husband promise to bury me at the foot of my father's grave. When the archangel's trumpet sounds and we all come up I am going to cling to my father's hand. I know Christ will let me in if I am by his side. I know it, because my father was such a good man. I know Christ would not refuse my father anything." She said this half in jest and half in earnest. Many of us have the same hope and say the same things, not half in jest, but in dead earnest. No, my friends, when the bridegroom cometh on that great day of resurrection your father and mother will have no spiritual oil to spare. Then we cannot follow the divine bridegroom with our parents' spiritual light. We must have our own lighted oil to become part of the wedding procession of the redeemed or forever stay out of Christ's banquet hall, enveloped by the impenetrable and crushing darkness of the eternal night.

These five foolish virgins represent another class. They represent the nominal church members. They represent the men and women who look upon church membership as a kind of fetich. Some people who are nominal church members seem to think that they can lie and steal and cheat and commit all the forbidden sins of the decalogue if they are only church members in good standing. They seem to think that the crucial essential of Christianity is a perfection of creed for the head and not absolute consecration for the heart. They seem to think that they can walk hand in hand with sin and continue to so walk if they can only repeat this sentence as they go: "I believe in Jesus. I believe in Jesus. Yes, I believe in Jesus." Now, Christ, by the parable of my text, says that a mere mental faith in him, unaccompanied by a surrender of the heart and life, is not faith at all. The faith that saves is a faith that transforms the life, a faith that takes complete control of a man. The nominal church members must have consecration of heart and pure life as well as a perfect gospel creed. I believe that Christ's fuller teachings affirm that he is more willing to forgive the sins of an out and out enemy who once blasphemed him, but repents of his sin, than he is willing to forgive a Judas, who never denied him publicly, but who in private life betrays him with a kiss.

How about Peter? DTid not Christ gladly forgive him his three denials when Peter repented after the cock crowed? The most powerful pulpit description of any Bible scene I ever read or heard was that delivered by Joseph Parker of "Peter's Three Denials." In the first place, the great preacher described the scene of Judas, hypocritical Judas, stealthily approaching Christ and planting a betraying kiss upon the Saviour's cheek. Then came the tramp of the Roman soldiers. Then the lines were formed as the prisoner is being marched back to the capital. In olden times, as now, when a man is arrested the crowds of curiosity seekers were augumented step by step Peter, when he saw the multitude, became very much frightened. Instead of walking side by side with Christ, as he ought to have done, he followed afar off. When they approached the home of Caiaphas, the high priest, Peter came into the house and sat down by a fire and began to warm himself as though he had never been with Christ or seen Christ in his life. While he sat there by the fire a young Jewish maiden came up and eyed him sharply. Then she tapped him upon the shoulder and said: "Are you not a friend of Jesus? Thou also wast with Jesus of Nazareth." But Peter merely shrugged his shoulders as he answered, "I know not what thou sayest." Peter then gets up and leaves the room and goes out upon the porch. When he has gone out another Jewish maiden touches him upon the shoulder and says, "This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth." Then old Joseph Parker shook his leonine head and let out a growl as he said, "I do not know the man." For the Bible says, "He denied him with an oath." When the people began to crowd about him Peter still more vehemently began to protest his ignorance with oaths and curses. He denied Christ. He denied him once, twice, thrice. He denied him in the meanest, the most contemptible and cowardly way. Yet when Peter repented of his sin Christ forgave him and restored him to his apostleship. Christ is magnanimous. He will save the worst sinner if he comes to him in sincere penitence, grieving for his sins and entreating pardon. But for the man who confesses him with his lips, but denies him by his life he has no word but, "Woe, woe unto you hypocrites!"

Not unto every one that calleth, "Lord, Lord, open unto us," shall the banquet hall of Christ be opened. Not unto the nominal church members shall the invitation be given to come and sup with the divine bridegroom. What became of these five foolish virgins who had no oil in their lamps? All the ten virgins had the same kind of lamps. The creed of man can aptly be symbolized in the lamp which holds the oil. They all believed in the coming of the bridegroom. They all believed in Jesus Christ. But the oil of consecration, the purity and devotion of life were lacking. If belief in Christ would suffice, Judas himself might have been saved. The belief that has no effect on the life is not faith at all and can never bring man into spiritual relation with Christ. Oh, nominal church members, you must have consecration of heart as well as perfection of creed. You must have spiritual oil for your "lamps of faith," else you can never follow the divine bridegroom into the banquet hall of the marriage of the lamb.

These spiritual mendicants of my text represent another class of spiritual beggars. They are the type of men and women who are not loafers, as we call loafers, or mere hangers on. They represent the so-called moral and up-right people who expect to go to heaven on account of the mere temporal good which they have been able to do some of their fellow men. They represent the large class of people who expect to bribe their way into the wedding banquet because they have given to some town a library or endowed some college professorship or builded some hospital or financially helped to support some church or foreign missionary. They do not claim that they have lived for the purpose of honoring Christ and consecrating their lives to his service, but they do say that on account of the good they have been able to do Christ will invite them to join the wedding procession on the night that the bridegroom cometh.

Is this true? Will Christ allow any one to join the wedding procession who comes to him merely with the "lamp of good works" in his hand? Oh, no! For if we are honest with ourselves we know "there is none that doeth good—no, not one." We know that many of the acts for which the world praises us we have done with the most selfish desires and the most corrupt motives. Some of them have been done to win popular applause, some to secure the good opinion of the church and the world. For these we have received our reward, but Christ does not reward them. We know that there is not one of us who would like the thoughts of our brain and the desires of our heart to be read by the most intimate of our friends as an open book.

I think, however, that the majority of spiritual beggars can be found and always will be found among those who expect some day to consecrate their lives to Jesus Christ, but keep putting off the acceptance week by week and day by day and hour by hour until suddenly the cry is taken up, "Behold the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him," and they will be called unprepared. I do not believe that all of these foolish virgins deliberately intended to be unprepared for the coming of the bridegroom. They intended to go and get the oil which is the symbol of the spiritual life. But they kept saying to each other, "Oh, we will go to-morrow," or "We will go next week," or "We will go next month. There is plenty of time; do not worry. We will be prepared when Christ comes." And they were called unexpectedly.

That is the figure of my parable. The duty that was always being postponed was postponed too long. The oil that those foolish virgins should have had was not there when it was needed. While the bridegroom tarried they all slumbered and slept. And at midnight there was a cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh!" That means, when the last call for repentance came, it came suddenly. The Bridegroom always comes suddenly. Then what happened? Why, the foolish virgins, who in the near future expected to have the spiritual oil prepared, were found without the necessary preparation. Those that were prepared went to the wedding. The door was shut. Those who were not prepared had to stay out. The five foolish virgins became spiritual bankrupts forever. Oh, my friends, are you and I going to make the awful mistake of putting off and putting off and putting off the day necessary for the consecration of our hearts and lives for the coming of the Divine Bridegroom?

The coming of the Bridegroom may be expected at any moment. The Bible distinctly says so. When Christ comes as the Bridegroom he will come as unexpectedly as a thief in the night at a place and at an hour when he is least expected. Rev. Dr. Wallace, late American consul to Jerusalem, once told me that nearly all the American Christian residents of the Davidic capital were living there in the belief that when Christ should first appear upon earth he would be seen standing among the Judaean hills, and therefore they were there waiting to welcome him. But Christ when he comes will appear unto us in America as well as though we were in Europe or Asia or Africa. Therefore, like old Robert McCheyne, I cry: "Prepare! Prepare! Prepare for the coming of the Redeemer, for the Son of Man cometh at an hour when ye think not!" Will you now prepare for the most momentous cry of the ages: "Behold the Bridegroom cometh! Go ye out to meet him?" Will you be prepared so that at his glorious coming he can greet you and take you into his banquet house and lift over you the banner of love?

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON IX, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, NOV. 27.

Text of the Lesson, Isa. xxviii, 1-13. Memory Verses, 3, 4—Golden Text, Isa. xxviii, 7—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1904, by American Press Association.]

It is helpful and necessary to keep in mind that, as Dr. Weston says, the Bible is the story of the conflict between Christ and Satan for man and man's dwelling place, this earth. Humility, subjection to God, faith in God, obedience to Him, these are Christlike, for among His first recorded utterances as God manifest in the flesh we have these: "I must be about my Father's business," "Suffer it to be so now." And these also are among His most significant utterances: "I came not to do mine own will," "I seek not mine own glory." And to His Father He said, "I have glorified Thee," "I have manifested Thy name" (Luke ii, 49; Matt. iii, 15; John vi, 38; viii, 50; xvii, 4, 6).

The opposite of all this, self will, self assertion, self indulgence, pride, is of the devil, and God is ever seeking to win from the devil and give them life, life eternal, abundant eternal life, those whom the devil would destroy. If they will not listen to the voice of His love, He sometimes visits them with His judgments, if perchance He may thus deliver them from the wrath to come. "Lo, all these things worketh God oftentimes with man, to bring back his soul from the pit, to be enlightened with the light of the living," for He says, "Deliver him from going down to the pit; I have found a ransom" (Job xxxiii, 29, 30, 24).

The drunkards of Ephraim in their self will and pride said, "We have made a covenant with death, and with hell are we at agreement; when the overflowing scourge shall pass through, it shall not come unto us, for we have made lies our refuge, and under falsehood have we hid ourselves" (verse 15). Inasmuch as the devil is the father of lies, this was equal to saying, We have chosen the devil instead of God, and he will take care of us.

The people, seeing the drunkenness of their teachers and leaders, seemed to think that Isaiah was no better than the rest, and so they despised him and his teaching and said, Does he think we are babes just weaned from the breasts, that he comes to us with his precept upon precept, line upon line, here a little and there a little? (Verses 9, 10.) So in their sinful pride and self indulgence and vain confidence they despised him and his message. But the Lord had prepared him for this in His commission: "Go, and tell this people. Hear ye indeed, but understand not, and see ye indeed, but perceive not" (chapter vi, 9).

So He encouraged Jeremiah when He gave him his commission, "They shall fight against thee, but they shall not prevail against thee, for I am with thee, saith the Lord, to deliver thee" (Jer. i, 19). So to Ezekiel He said, "Thou shalt speak My words unto them whether they will hear or whether they will forbear, for they are most rebellious" (Ezek. ii, 7). No true prophet or apostle or faithful messenger of God is ever promised what the world calls popularity or success. To the twelve He said, "Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves" (Matt. x, 16), and we are never taught to expect more than Paul found.

All that is not of God, however much pleasure the sinner may find in it and however he may glory in it, is as a fading flower; nothing is really enduring that is not of God, and there is a day coming that will declare it. In the last two verses of the previous chapter, in verse 5 of our lesson and in many places in Isaiah it is called "that day;" then shall the hail sweep away the refuge of lies and the waters overflow the hiding place (verse 17), and all that is not of God shall perish, and the mockers and the scornful men who would not hear the word of the Lord (verse 14) shall find their portion with the devil, whom they chose instead of God (Matt. xxv, 41).

What then is the only remedy for the drunkards of Ephraim or any other drunkards or self indulgent, self righteous people? For there are many drunken, but not with wine; many who stagger, but not because of strong drink. They are like people walking and talking in their sleep; they listen to words of men instead of the word of God, and their worship of God is with mouth and lips only, and not with the heart, for their heart is not right with God (Isa. xxix, 9-13; lvi. 10-12). There is no remedy but to "hear the word of the Lord" (verse 14), forsake all false foundations and begin to build upon the foundation which the Lord God has laid—the stone, the tried stone, the precious cornerstone, the sure foundation (verse 16).

But before we can build upon this foundation we must be cut down off our own foundation, just as truly as a board or pillar in the tabernacle, before it could be placed upon the silver or brass sockets and be a part of the tabernacle, had first to be cut down as a tree in the forest. No amount of reform or signing of pledges or resolution will accomplish anything eternal for any sinner; there must be a new heart, a new birth, which only God can give. The sinner must see his helplessness and humbly receive the Lord Jesus Christ; then shall the Lord of hosts be his crown of glory and diadem of beauty in that day, and he shall be the same to God (verse 5; chapter lxii, 3). If any sinner will not accept the rest which God has provided for him (verse 12; chapter xxx, 15) there is no other way, no other sacrifice for sin.

Day Dreams

By A. M. Davies Ogden

Copyright, 1904, by A. M. Davies Ogden

The late spring afternoon sunshine flooded gloriously into the bare, old studio, lighting the dreamy, sensitive face of the young man who stood by the piano pouring out his soul in melody. It flung a golden aureole around the head of the girl who, nearly lost in a big arm chair, sat absorbed.

"Adelaide, Adelaide," rang out the notes of Beethoven's passionate love song, and the girl's eyes filled with tears as the music swayed her young, untried nature. And how well Harry Walters looked when he sang!

Her thoughts, uncontrolled, wandered back to the day when they had first met, many months before. Newly arrived in Dresden, she and her father had driven out to Potschapel to inspect the big china factory; but, at her father's request for some one to show them about, the big German in charge flung up his hands.

"Aber, I spik no English," he began plaintively. Then, at sight of a passerby, his face brightened.

"Ach, Herr Walters," he cried, and the person addressed, turning, came back with lifted cap.

"Can I be of any service?" he asked in English. Mr. Hoffman looked relieved.

"I want somebody to show me about," he exclaimed, and the young man smiled.

"The Herr Direktor and I are old friends," he responded. "If I can be of any assistance"— The girl's eyes thanked him.

When they parted it was with a low bow and a mutual, if unspoken, wish that they might meet again, and a few nights later at a court ball, seeing the girl, Walters made haste to be duly presented in form.

"These balls are such jolly little affairs," he laughed. "Given a letter of introduction or two and they will invite even a poor musical student like myself. And how do you find Dresden? Have you 'done' the green vaults, the galleries and so forth? No? Fancy."

"Father does not care much for ordinary sightseeing," declared the girl. Walters eyed her rather doubtfully.

"If I might be permitted to take you around a bit," he suggested. "It would be a great pleasure. Oh, may I really?" As the girl nodded. "Let's start tomorrow."

Such was the beginning of their friendship, and as the days drifted into spring there were little excursions up

"MILLICENT! IS IT REALLY YOU?"

the river to be made, lingerings on the Bruehl-Terrasse listening to the band in the garden on the other bank; long hours spent in the galleries with pauses before the Sistine Madonna or some other treasure in that wonderful storehouse of art. Then suddenly one day Mr. Hoffman awoke to the fact that his daughter, although but seventeen, was no longer a child. Realizing that this prolonged companionship with an earnest young musician might prove dangerous to one, if not to both, he took passage back to America, and tonight he and his daughter were to leave for Bremen. This was goodby.

"Adelaide," sang the voice, putting into the song all that the singer dared not say, and the girl trembled responsively. With a final harmony the melody stopped. Through the door the accompanist slipped away. Mr. Hoffman turned to the window. The girl held out both hands.

"Goodby," she murmured. Walters, shaken, leaned forward.

"You will not forget?" he begged. And the girl smiled, a slow loyal smile.

"I will not forget."

As the train rolled its way through the night the girl's eyes filled again with tears, the facile tears of youth, which turn so quickly to rainbows as hope rosily spans the years. Then, clasping a little blue ring and a cluster of forgetmenots, she fell asleep.

* * * * * * *

The windows of Cliff Towers were brilliant with lights. Strains of music floated out to the watchers in the street. Mrs. Livingston was "at home," and Bellevue avenue was crowded with arriving guests and curious spectators.

The band on the lawn began to play "Wine, Women and Song," and the beautiful Miss Hoffman stepped through the long French windows upon the terrace.

The shimmer of moonlight on the water was exquisite. What did it and the music seem to recall? Ah, Dresden! The girl shivered. How long it was since she had thought of Dresden! The man beside her started apprehensively.

"Are you cold? Shall I bring you a wrap?" he asked. She assented.

She wished to be rid of him to think for a moment. Dresden! Walters' face, his happy, boyish, half boastful talk, struggled into her thoughts. "Wait until I sing in the Metropolitan," he had laughed.

And now? Should he make his debut there she would be in her box, tiara crowned. But she would throw him some flowers in memory of the little ring now crushed and broken, with a faded spray of forgetmenots, far back in a drawer of her desk. For a moment the girl's face showed hard and cynical in the moonlight.

There was a stir within the house. The prelude of a song came to her. Then a rich tenor voice broke into the refrain "Adelaide, Adelaide." A famous tenor was singing and the girl's eyes dimmed. "Adelaide!" A step sounded behind her. She turned to see Renshaw, her lace scarf in his hand. Something in his expression warned the girl that the crisis which she had so long been evading could be postponed no longer. Her decision must be made. He was young, rich, good looking. Why could she not care for him? Had she not hoped for this, tried for this? Was it not expected of her? Her breath quickened and she lifted her head. Well, he should have his answer.

* * * * * * *

The morning was clear, but cold, and on the crowded ferryboat only two people, a man and a woman, dared brave the forward deck. The woman showed lines of suffering and self reliance in her face and a great sweetness. The man, wrapped in a heavy coat, was humming to himself, "Adelaide, Adelaide." He breathed, and the woman, with a sudden start, turned. Recognition leaped to both pair of eyes.

"Millicent! Is it really you? How I have searched for a trace of you!" he cried. "But at your former home they only said that you had gone." The girl flushed under his look.

"After father died I had to leave New York," she said simply. "I have been doing typewriting, proofreading, what I could get. You know I am poor."

"You!" cried the man again. "You! Typewriting! And I! Well, I have not made the Metropolitan and probably never will now. Some of the old dreams are lost. But for the rest—what little success I have won has been due to you. Always it has been the thought of you that has spurred me on. It has always been your eyes, Millicent, do you remember the old days? Can we go back to them? Must all the dreams go, or have you forgotten?" There was a note of entreaty in his voice, and the girl's color deepened; then she smiled back at him.

"One can never go back. But perhaps one can start afresh," she answered. "And I have never forgotten."

When Barnum's Burned.

Barnum's museum, destroyed July 13, 1865, was one of the most amusing fires that ever occurred in New York city. It was in the daytime. Chief John Decker was in charge, assisted by Orr, Bates, Lamb, Cleary, Everett and Sullivan. Thousands crowded Broadway clear up to Park place as well as Park row, while the park in front was black with people. It was fun to see the boys at the outset of the fire bringing out Barnum's old stuffed images and wax figures. One fellow ran out with Henry Clay under one arm and General Winfield Scott under the other. Queen Victoria was dragged out by the hair of her head. Mary, queen of Scots, was tossed out of the second story window, followed by Hicks the pirate. Head Carpenter Walker of the theater, who was also a member of Engine No. 38, that lay in Ann street, got so excited that he fell headlong down the main entrance stairway with Napoleon in one hand and Walker, fillbuster, in the other.

The happy family that attracted so much attention in those days were determined not to leave. The cage door was thrown wide open and the birds and animals punched with sticks to drive them out, but few would accept their liberty and were burned to death. All of the 100,000 curiosities were destroyed.

Remembered the Places.

In the days of his youth, "befo' de wah," it had been the privilege of Uncle Eph Slater to attend his master as body servant upon several extended journeys. To mention the name of another town or locality was enough to start him on his reminiscences, and so jealous did he grow of his reputation as a traveler that he always declared he had visited the place in question whether he had or not.

One day an acquaintance, Deacon Thompson, met Uncle Eph on the street and told him of the arrival in the village of the new schoolma'am, whose acquirements, he had heard, were of a high order.

"H'm," said Uncle Eph, "yeh don' say; yeh don' say. I wunner, now, hez de young lady had much trabbel?"

"I dunno 'bout dat," replied the deacon, "but my Lize tells me she dun been troo butony, algerbrar 'n' Latin."

"Uh huh," said Uncle Eph reflectively and not in the least nonplused. "I riccollicks dem little places, foh sho; but it was night w'en we passed troo 'em, 'n' Marse Richard he 'lowed it wuzn't wuth while stoppin' off."—Harper's Magazine.

Editor and Proprietor of the Wetaskiwin Times.

The Canadian West. it has often been said, is the land of opportunity. This is true not only of those portions of its vast area that have been developed to a comparative extent, and where the possession of a moderate amount of capital ensures returns much greater than is possible in the older communities in the East, but also, and to an even greater extent, in the large and naturally wealthy districts being continually opened up as the march of progress and development, due to the steady inflow of population, goes on. These developments are as remarkable for their permanence as for their rapidity. One season sees the prairie grasses waving in the wind, and far as the eye can see there is no sign or vestige of human habitation. Ere a year has passed, the railway has penetrated the prairies, and the beginnings of a busy town appear. And, almost with the pioneer storekeeper comes the country publisher, sets up his Washington—or, if his capital approximates his ambition, his cylinder press—issues his first copy of a six-column folio, and starts out on that career of public-spirited publicity that makes the paper a weekly blessing to the merchants, the farmers, and every other class of the new community.

Many of the best country weekly and semi-weekly properties of the Canadian West had the humblest beginnings. But, with the unerring instinct and the deep-seated faith of the pioneer publisher, the men who risked every cent of their modest capital, and incurred obligations that in the event of non-success would permanently cripple their finances, went ahead in their enterprise, confident in the field that they had selected, and satisfied that time would vindicate their judgment. And, in the vast majority of instances, they have "won out." In many cases two or three years has seen such changes and growths in a western Canadian weekly that would surprise one not familiar with the speed at which things move in the West. It should not, however, surprise anybody who knows that the country which can raise fullfledged towns in a year can also produce full-grown and ably conducted newspapers in the same space of time.

A fine illustration of this rapidity of development is afforded by the Wetaskiwin Times. It is some three and a half years old, it having been established and first issued on March 22nd., 1901. Its beginnings were most modest. It appeared as a six-column folio. But, within the limits of its space, the Times even at that early date, was a newspaper. It gave the news. It was public-spirited, believed in its own town. It had its opinions, and expressed them. In every way it identified itself with the progress and prosperity of the district in which it was published. The Wetaskiwin people recognized that they had a live newspaper—one that could be depended on to back up the efforts of its citizens to make their town a place of importance. As a natural consequence they were a unit in supporting it. Also as a consequence, it did not take long before the two-column folio was too small for the increased importance of both the town and the paper. Soon it had to be enlarged to a seven column, and, after another interval of continuous growth, two additional pages had to be added. From two pages of six columns to six pages of seven columns, and all in the space of three and a half years! Need there be any further commentary than the mere recital of facts as to whether or not the Canadian West is the land of opportunity for the properly qualified newspaper publisher, as well as for the farmer, the rancher, the merchant, and the investor?

On the mechanical side of his training, few men are better equipped than Mr. Victor C. French, the editor and proprietor of the Wetaskiwin Times. He is not yet thirty years of age, having been born near Oshawa, Ont., in 1875. He was educated at the Exeter schools, completing his education with a term at Toronto College. Deciding to learn the printing business, he was apprenticed to John White & Son, of the Exeter Times. After completing his term he accepted the foremanship of the Mitchell Recorder, holding the position for nearly three years, when he went to Toronto and obtained employment in the well-known job office of the Monetary Times. Later he accepted a position in the office of McLean Bros., the well-known trade journalists. In 1898 he was offered the foremanship of the Clinton New Era, one of the best papers in western Ontario, and held the position till the fall of 1901, when he came west to Alberta, and after a few months of prospecting, decided to locate at Wetaskiwin, and established the Times. As may be imagined from the success of his venture, Mr. French has never had occasion to regret the call that bade him come west.

To any one who realizes and appreciates the rapid strides that all parts of the West has made within the past few years, it seems certain that the measure of success that has attended Mr. French in his newspaper venture in the past will be surpassed by its future growth. The district served by the Calgary & Edmonton line is one of the best in the West, and Wetaskiwin is evidently destined to be one of the most important centres along the line. The Times, under its present management, is amply able to keep pace with its future growth. Already it is regarded as among the most influential papers of the Territories. It is ably edited and carefully printed. Its advertising patronage is large, and as a news medium it is one of the very best in Western Canada. The present position of the Times is the best possible proof of the progressiveness and ability of its proprietor, who is generally recognized as among the most efficient of the newspaper men of the West.

JUST THE THING THAT'S WANTED.—A pill that acts upon the stomach and yet is so compounded that certain ingredients of it preserve their power to act upon the intestinal canals, so as to clear them of excreta, the retention of which cannot but be hurtful, was long looked for by the medical profession. It was found in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which are the result of much expert study, and are scientifically prepared as a laxative and an alterative in one.

Rough on Grover.—The story is told of Esther Cleveland that when she first heard her father telephone from Chicago to the White House her expression changed to wonder and then to fear. It was surely her father's voice, yet she was incredulous. After looking at the tiny opening in the receiver, Esther suddenly burst into tears. "Oh, mamma, mamma," she sobbed, "how can we ever get papa out of that little hole?"

TESTED BY TIME.—In his justly celebrated Pills Dr. Parmelee has given to the world one of the most unique medicines offered to the public in late years. Prepared to meet the want for a pill which could be taken without nausea, and that would purge without pain, it has met all requirements in that direction, and it is in general use not only because of these two qualities, but because it is known to possess alterative and curative powers which place it in the front rank of medicines.

Superfluous Hair
De Miracle

It is better than electricity, because it does not scar or produce a new growth. Better than X-ray, because it does not burn, scar or paralyze the tissues under the skin. Better than depilatories, because it is not poisonous; therefore, it will not cause blood poisoning, or produce eczema, which is so common with depilatories, and does not break off the hair, thereby increasing its growth.

Electrolysis, X-ray or depilatories are offered you on the bare word of the operators and manufacturers. DE MIRACLE is not. It is the only method which is indorsed by physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and prominent magazines.

DE MIRACLE will be mailed to any address, sealed in plain wrapper for $1. Your money back without question if it fails to do all that is claimed for it.

Our booklet — the most complete treatise on Superfluous Hair ever published—containing the testimonials of numerous physicians and surgeons and those of hundreds of others—will be sent free, in plain, sealed envelope, upon request. DESPERATE AFFRAY WITH CATTLE THIEVES.

One outlaw is dead and another is in jail seriously wounded, as the result of a desperate battle between cattle thieves and officers near Deeth, Nev., says a despatch from Salt Lake City, Utah. Sheriff Clark and the deputy of Elko county caught James McKelvy and Charles Winslow in the act of skinning a steer of the Graham brand. When called upon to surrender they dropped behind the carcass of the animal and began firing at the officers. The latter sought shelter, and for twenty minutes a duel continued. Finally McKelvy sprang to his feet and fired. The shot was returned and McKelvy dropped dead. A few minutes later Winslow surrendered and was found to be mortally wounded.

INDESCRIBABLE PAINS STONE IN BLADDER.

An Exceptionally Severe Case in Which a Helpless Sufferer Was Restored by

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Gravel or stone in bladder is about the most painful ailment that ever afflicted mankind. It is the result of deranged kidneys, the uric acid forming into hard substances, which lodge in the kidney and bladder. The horrible disease is prevented and cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. Daniel Brown, English River, Ont., writes: "For three years I suffered from urinary troubles, partaking of the nature of stone in the bladder or gravel, and the pain which I endured can scarcely be described. I was unable to do any work, and frequently discharged blood. Though I spent hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills I received no relief, and at last decided that I would never be able to work again.

"While in this condition I was advised to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and though I had no faith in them or in anything else I decided to give them a fair trial. After using one box I felt a decided change for the better, and after taking five boxes I feel like a new man. I am entirely out of pain, and have no more discharge of blood. I can honestly recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to any fellow sufferer, and will cheerfully verify this statement to anyone writing me."

Mr. W. Bowen, Postmaster and station agent at English River, Ont., writes: "I have interviewed Mr. Daniel Brown of this place in regard to his long illness and cure, and hereby certify that the testimonial as given by him is correct."

OFF FOR SUDBURY

BOARD OF TRADE MEETING

A general meeting of the Fernie Board of Trade will be held at the Fire Hall on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. The Flathead trail, Prevention of Bush fires and cooperating with other boards to send a deputation to Ottawa re a lumber duty are some of the subjects to be discussed. A full attendance of members is desired.

THE BACHELORS' BALL

The Bachelors' ball given in the Stork Opera House on Tuesday evening was a very enjoyable affair. Seldom before have so many gathered together in a public function of this kind. The large floor was at times crowded with the merry dancers. Many new andbeautiful gowns were worn by fair members of the fair sex. The music supplied by Mr. Staebler's orchestra was as usual good. Refreshments were served.

A BENEFIT CONCERT

At the close of "Fra Diavolo" last night The Beggar Prince Co. gave a 40 minute one act Opera entitled "The Marriage of the Twins" as a benefit to the widows and orphans of the Morrissey disaster of last week. The hat was passed through the hall and the very handsome sum of $92.95 was raised in this way. This little play was much appreciated by the audience as was the generous spirit which prompted the kind offer of assistance.

A wreck occurred on the Crows Nest branch near Creston on Wednesday. A refrigerator car was thrown off the track by a spreading rail and the track was torn up for about 100 feet.

Constable Sampson left on Wednesday with two people in his charge. One was Harry Annette for whom admission to the Old Man's Home at Kamloops was secured some time ago. The other was John Dickinson the Coal Creek boy who is being taken to the New Westminster Insane asylum for treatment.

The ditch for draining the wet area between Hanson and McEvoy streets was completed this week. It traverses the lane to McEvoy St. and down McEvoy to the depression leading to the river. It is an open ditch, in some places four and five feet, with culverts where the streets cross. During the wet spell this week it did very good service in carrying off a large quantity of water.

Wm. Handley the hustling manager of the Fernie Livery Co, unloaded a car load of rigs from Winnipeg on Wednesday to add to his already large equippage. Among them was a $1000 city bus of a modern pattern which this enterprising company will keep in constant use about the city. It will meet all trains and will be in readiness for special orders. The car also contained four stylish cutters. The car also gege wagons. The down town office where orders may be left is a convenience which this company recently instituted.

A sad accident happened at the ranch of Mr. John Cyr, Pincher Creek, last Thursday. During dinner time the stable caught fire from a spark from the house chimney. Mr. Cyr rushed into the stable and succeeded in saving three out of nine valuable horses. Although the fire was raging fiercely he insisted on going in again, and he never reappeared. The roof fell in and he was burned beneath the burning ruins. Mr. Cyr had but recently brought his wife up from Maine, intending to spend the remainder of his life near his children residing in the district.

ELK GAVE UP ITS DEAD.

BODY OF PETER VINCENT FOUND AFTER 18 MONTHS.

Suicide at Morrissey Recalled by a Gruesome Find on the Elk Six Miles Below Elko. The Body Identified.

The body of a man was found on the bank of the Elk River six miles below Elko last Friday by an old prospector. The police were notified and Constable Dow, of Wardner, was sent down to secure evidence for identification and to bury the body.

From the evidence gained by Mr. Dow there is little doubt the body is that of Peter Vincent who was drowned at Morrissey on June 1st, 1903. The body was entirely naked with the exception of a blue neck tie and the band of a blue shirt about his neck. Decomposition had disfigured the body beyond recognition but the tall slender frame corresponded with that of Vincent. A small patch of iron gray hair still left on the back of the head was the strongest clue for recognition.

Peter Vincent was a Frenchman who followed the trade of shoemaker. He lived in the Old Town, Fernie for three years after which he went to Morrissey Mines. He had been on a continued spree just prior to his drowning. The bridge at Morrissey had just been washed away by the high water and Vincent told the startled people who were with him on the bank of the turbulent river that he would swim across. He gave a short run and plunged in. He was never seen again though the river was patrolled for miles in the hope of finding the body.

The body was found last week high up on the bank in some drift wood, the high water of last spring evidently not reaching that place. The unfortunate man seemed to be alone in the world as no trace was ever learned of any relatives.

SCHOOL MEETING NOTES

The Board of School trustees met on Wednesday evening and dealt with various matters connected with the school. The completion of the new wing necessitated a rearrangement of the rooms. Miss Marshall with her classes will occupy the upper room of the new wing and Miss Hall the lower. There are six rooms and only five teachers, the vacant room being the lower one in the south wing. This will be used for drill and general assembling.

Connection has been made at the school with the city water works. A fire gong attachment with connection with each room is to be put in, The frosting on the windows is to be removed and the black-boards renovated with a fresh coat of paint. Each teacher is presented with a new visitors' register. The locks on all the doors have been examined and made to work properly Coal bins are to be arranged in the three cellars where the respective furnaces are situated, and the projected coal building outside has been abandoned.

The three trustees in October were elected by acclamation. The municipal act requires that the trustee receiving the largest vote should drop out at the first regular election. Lots were drawn at Wednesday's meeting to determine which should drop out with the result that J. C. Hutchison occupies the short term.

REV. A. DUNN INDUCTED.

The induction service at Knox Presbyterian church was largely attended. Rev. Wm. Reid, of Michel, preached the sermon after which Rev. W. G. W. Fortune, of Cranbrook moderator of the Presbytery proceeded with the induction. The address to the congregation was delivered by Mr. Reid, and Mr. Fortune briefly addressed Mr. Dunn. The new pastor was warmly welcomed by those present, and a pleasant social hour was spent while the ladies served refreshments.

ROAF--FRY.

Mr. J. Richardson Roaf and Miss A. L. Fry were united in marriage in Wilkesbarre, Pa., last Wednesday afternoon. The groom is the mine superintendent at the Norrissey colliery. The bride is the sister of Mrs. J. H. Tonkin. During some months that she visited in Fernie she was very popular and made many friends. The wedding took place at the home of another sister of the bride. Owing to a recont death of one of the bride's near relatives the affair was very quiet only the immediate relatives of Mr. Roaf and Miss Fry being invited. After a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Roaf will take up housekeeping at Morrissey.

NOMINATED OFFICERS

FERNIE LIBERAL ASSOCIATION ANNUAL MEETING.

R. W. Coulthard the President.—Letters of Congratulation and Thanks.

The Fernie Liberal Association met on Monday evening for the purpose of nominating officers for the ensuing year. Pres. Stork was in the chair and Secretary Bricker was also in his place.

The President read a letter from W.A. Galliher, M. P., expressing keen appreciation of the good work done by the Fernie Liberals in the late election and thanking them heartily for their loyal support. He also read a letter from J. A. MacDonald M. P. P., expressing his thanks for the splended reception and entertainment tendered him by the Fernie Liberals during his visit to this city. A. M. Johnson, secretary of the Campaign Committee, Nelson, wrote a letter of congratulation to the Fernie Liberals on the fine showing in this city on Nov. 22nd.

The nomination of officers was then proceeded with as follows :—

Honorary President :— W. A. Galliher, only nominee. Declared elected by acclamation.

President ; F. Stork was nominated but he gracefully declined to stand for renomination. He had held the position for six successive years and he believed it was some one else's turn. Robt. W. Coulthard was then nominated and as no other names were offered was declared elected by acclamation.

First Vice President ; Dr. C.P. Higgins, elected by acclamation.

Secretary-Treasurer ; nominees : F. J. Watson, F. C. Lawe, Jas. McLean, and R. A. Kerr.

Executive :—Twelve members to be elected from the following nominees, Messrs. H. H. Trites, E. Kummer, W. Campbell, R. A. McMordie, L. P. Eckstein, J. Aeillo, W. W. Leach, J. Balko, J. Hunter, A.P. Chenette, Tony Caravetto, J. Podbielancik, F. J. Watson, F. C. Lawe, Jas. McLean and R. A. Kerr.

By a vote of the meeting the secretary was instructed to write to W. A. Galliher, M. P., tendering him congratulations on his magnificient victory and to J. A. MacDonald thanking him for the valuable assistance he gave to the association.

The Association will meet in the Stork Opera House next Monday night Dec. 5, when the election of officers will be completed.

CHEMICAL ENGINE IS O. K.

Stood a Splendid Test on Wednesday. Saved a Shack From Destruction.

On Wednesday morniug at 11;45 the fire alarm was rung and in a twinkling Wm. Handley had his team attached to the chemical engine and with several firemen rushed to the scene of the fire which was a good-sized shack near the Elk River bridge. When the burning building was reached it looked like a hopeless task to extinguish the flames which were bursting from the windows and seemed to fill the house from one end to the other. The chemical fluid immediately had a deadening effect and in a few moments the building was out of danger though it took a long time to thoroughly extinguish every sign of fire. The building was occupied by Mr. Nimmo who left the stove open.

BOARD OF TRADE MEETS

FERNIE'S CLAIM TO FLATHEAD ROAD THE BEST

Strong Committee will Thoroughly investigate the Fernie route. Spokane Asked to Visit Fernie.

A representative meeting of the Fernie Board of Trade was held in the fire hall on Wednesday evening. After reading the minutes of the last meeting which occurred in June Secretary Alexander read communications which were dealt with in turn. Three were on the subject of the Flathead trail from Fernie. Mr. Clement, C. E., of Nelson, wrote favoring the Fernie route which in his estimation should be up Coal Creek to its head, down Martin Creek to the south fork of Michel Creek, up this fork to branch of McEvoy creek, down the branch to McEvoy and down McEvoy to the Flathead River.

I. N. Dalby who is thoroughly conversant with the different routes wrote replying to a letter of enquiry. The Fernie route was shorter than that from Belton, Mon., and the summits were not so high. The Nelson Board of Trade sent a courteous letter asking what was being done about getting a road into the Flathead and promising its aid in any movement the Fernie Board might favor.

D. V. Mott strongly urged that the Board of Trade should at once take steps towards having preliminary surveys made from Fernie to determine the best possible route that at the next session of the legislature the Fernie member might be supplied with full information to lay before the government. He had no doubt that a route could be got from Fernie which would easily discount all others. Other members spoke along the same lines in the lengthy discussion which followed. W. R. Ross, M. P. P., stated that government would probably pass an estimate for this road at the next session and that they were interested in securing all the data possible relative to selecting the best route. Finally a committee of seven members consisting of Messrs. Eckstein, Mott, Bleasdell, Cree, R. W. Wood, W. Tuttle and S. F. Wallace was appointed to present the matter in as strong a manner as possible before the city council that a grant might be secured to pay expenses of having the necessary surveys made. This committee is also empowered to take such other steps as they may deem necessary in futhering the proposition.

L. P. Eckstein's letter asking the Board of Trade to deal with his bill referred to that body by the city council was then taken up. The city solicitor was requested to go over the the bill with Mr. Eckstein and the city council were recomend ed to pay the amount agreed upon by this commettee.

The resolution re Prevention of Bush Fires, forwarded by the Nelson Board of Trade, was endorsed by the Fernie Board, on motion of Mr. J. A. MacLean and D. V. Mott. This resolution asks the government to appoint more fire wardens during the dangerous months, to pay them suitably and to empower them to call upon all citizens to assist in fighting forest fires.

Mr. Mott spoke in favor of an excursion from Spokane to Fernie to mark the formal opening of the G. N. Railway into Fernie. He moved that the Spokane board be communicated with to seek its cooperation in the matter. He had no doubt the G. N. R. would assist in every way possible. Dr. C. P. Higgins in seconding the motion favored holding a winter carnival in connection. The date should be fixed at not earlier than the middle of January to allow the Athletic Association ample time to prepare a program of sports. The motion was carried.

Mr. A. D. Kildahl, manager of the Elk Lumber and Manufacturing Co. asked the aid of the Board in presenting the lumbermen's cause at Ottawa. The mountain Lumber Association were sending delegates to ask the government for a duty on American rough lumber. Boards of Trade in other towns were also sending delegates and he asked that one be sent from Fernie. Several members spoke sympathetically of the cause but some doubted where the funds were to come from, there being only $59 in the treasury. The matter wrs laid over until the next meeting pending the receipt of further information from the secretary of the Mountain Association. The meeting then adjourned.

RECORD FOR COAL CREEK.

COAL COMPANY MINED 74,569 TONS IN NOVEMBER.

December Promises to be Still Better. Part of No. 1 Mine, Coal Creek, Abandoned. The Coke Business Also Flourishing.

The coal output at the three collieries of the Crows Nest Pass Coal Company for the month of November was as follows.

Coal Creek	44,867 tons.
Carbonado	7,449 "
Total	74,569 tons.

The October output was 70,153 tons The November total was only once exceeded, in January 1904, when 76,100 tons were mined, but considering the fact that Januaay contains one day more than November the latter month actually holds the record. The last month establishes a notable record for Coal Creek colliery the output being several thousand tons over the previous monthly record.

COKE IN NOVEMBER.

Fernie, 390 ovens, made	11,950 tons
Michel, 345 ovens, made	9'157 "
	21,107 tons

Operation of ovens, Dec 1st., 1904.

Carbonado,		240 out of blast.
	700 in blast,	428 out of blast.

At Coal Creek on Wednesday forty five men were laid off in No. 1 mine. A portion of this mine is being closed. The coal is very soft requiring a great amount of timbering in the mine, and the management believes there is more profit in increasing the output of the other mines. These men are being taken on in the other mines as places can be found for them.

Our coal market with the G. N. R. is becoming well established. It is used practically over the whole line from Cutbank east of the Rockies to the Coast.

TRANSFERRED DEC. 15TH.

BRANCH LINE TO BECOME PART OF M. F. & M. RY.

Taken Over as Soon as the Connecting Link With G. N. R. is Completed. Weigh-scales Being Transferred.

The C. N. P. Coal Company will take over the C. P. R. branch to Coal Creek on or about Dec 15th. Arrangements have been made to have the transfer effected as soon as the connection with the M. F. &. M. is made and this the contractors say, will be done by that date. The lease as was announced some time ago is for ten years with the option of renewing for a similar term at its expiration. The question of rolling stock is not yet determined by the Coal Company but it is understood that negotiations are on at the present time for the purchase of the C. P. R. rolling stock now in use on the branch.

The only piece of railway construction which threatens to require the full limit of time to Dec. 15th is the removal of the weigh-scales house. This is being moved off the C. P. R. tracks eastward a few feet to the M. F. & M. track which joins the C. P. R. track near that point. The large pit is now being excavated and the work may be completed by Dec. 15th. The grading east of the C. P. R. track is light and the track will be laid on this piece in a few days.

The work on the G. N. is progressing rapidly. The bridge over the Elk is practically completed as is the trestle work connecting it with the grade on this side of the river. The work of track-laying in the yards will not require much time.

Contracts for the depot, section house and various other buildings have been let. Some of the material will come over the new railway. Material for the construction of the new round house has been cleared at Gateway.

The M. F. & M. Ry, is building the signal tower at the crossing of the C.P.R. The latter company opposed the interlocking diamond crossing but the M. F. & M. were sustained by the railway commission. The maintenance of the signal tower is borne by the M. F. & M.

NEW CITY OFFICES.

The new provincial jail building was completed this week. Chief McMullin has taken up his quarters in the large new office at the front of the building. Another small office room off the larger one will be used for office purposes. It will be furnished with a bed for the accommodation of outside constables when in the city over night.

The offices in the old provincial building are now occupied by city authorities Chief Warren has the room vacated by Mr. McMullin and the city clerk's office is in the large central room. The location of these offices is more central than the fire hall and another advantage is that the clerk is always at hand to attend to his police court duties. The room thus vacated in the firehall will be occupied by the firemen.

A DAILY PASSENGER SERVICE.

Spokane will be only 12 Hours Distance from Fernie

Mr. Kennedy. assistant general superintendent of the G.N.R., who was recently in the city with the local superintendent, Mr. J. H. O'Neill, stated that a daily passenger train would be put on the G. N. branch between Fernie and Rexford. These trains would connect with the mainline service with the coast. The train would probably leave at about 8 a.m. and arrive in Fernie at about 5 p.m. This would give a 12 hour service with Spokane and a 24 hour run to Seattle.

At the present time there is a daily service between Swinton and Rexford but the train is an accommodation one, a baggage car and a passenger coach being attached to a long string of coal cars.

MORE COKE MARKETS.

Jacob Langloth the New York copper magnate, has been elected president of the Granby Mining and Smelting Co., to succeed S. H. C. Miner. Two additional furnaces will be installed at the Grand Forks smelter increasing the capacity to 2,500 tons daily.

SHE WAS IN BED FOR THREE YEARS

Pain Racked Woman Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Strong Statement by Mrs. Jas. Hughes of Morley, Ont. She's Strong and Healthy Once More.

Morley, Ont., Nov. 28.—(Special).—What Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing for the suffering women of Canada will never be fully known. It is only when some courageous woman breaks the secrecy that covers woman and her troubles that a passing glimpse of their great work is given. For this reason a statement made by Mrs. Jas. Hughes, of this place, is of more than passing interest.

"I was a great sufferer for four years," says Mrs. Hughes. "I was treated by five doctors and a specialist from the U. S. I tried nearly every medicine I could hear of but none seemed to do me any good.

"I was in bed for nearly three years. I had pains up my spinal column, in my head, over my eyes, across my back and through my left side. I took fourteen boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and now I am strong and able to do a good day's work, thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

BALTIC FLEET VICTIMS LAID TO REST.

Although the centre of interest after the outrage on the North Sea fishing fleet was quickly removed from Hull to London, and is now at Vigo, the sad ceremonies of the funeral brought about a great public demonstration, says a London cablegram. The route, which was nearly two miles in length, and passed through the populous districts of West Hull, where the fishermen reside, was crowded with spectators. Most of the shops were shut, and there were many flags at half-mast, and other tokens of sympathy. The scene in Ribble avenue, the residence of Captain George Smith of the Crane, was pathetic and impressive. Captain White, the veteran leader of the Fishermen's Mission, read prayers at the house, then the polished elm coffin, bearing the legend, "At rest," at the foot, and covered with beautiful flowers, was borne from the window to a place in the adjacent square by fishermen clad in their blue jerseys. The band of the local branches of the Order of Buffaloes was drawn up in the square and played "Lead, Kindly Light." Soon afterwards the coffin containing the body of William Leggott, the third hand on the Crane and a native of Yarmouth, arrived from a friend's house and joined the cortege. Amongst the mourners was Smith's son, who was with his father on the Crane at the time of the sad and terrible occurrence. In the vicinity of the fish docks signs of mourning were particularly noticeable, blinds being drawn and thousands of persons lined the route to the cemetery. The mayor and town clerk attended the service, and hundreds of wreaths were received. The funeral procession was over a mile in length, and included the blue-jackets from H. M. S. Hearty, a number of fishermen and representatives of all the Hull public bodies. Many pathetic scenes were witnessed at the graveside, and the fact that Leggott's mother only heard of the death of her son on Wednesday morning elicited much sympathy.

HE WAS A THRIFTY SOOTCHMAN

Robert Ross was in court at Edinburgh on a process procured by his wife charging him with desertion. The wife testified that they were married seven years ago, and the fact was kept from her mother. Ross prevailed upon her to continue with her mother, as that would save him expense. When asked if Ross had ever made her any presents, she said that he had once given her a purse, but it did not contain any money. He had also given her a scent bottle, but it contained no scent. In presenting the latter, the wife testified that Ross said her mother would be willing to purchase the scent.

CANADA IS UNEQUALLED FOR HORSE BREEDING.

Lord Strathcona presided at the annual meeting in London of the Colonial Institute. Mr. Spark read a paper on the wealth of Canada as an agricultural country, and said he was convinced that when Canadians got rid of the Percheron blood and pay less attention to trotting horses Canada will become one of the foremost horse-breeding countries in the world. He expressed surprise that the British Government had no remount depot in Canada. Lord Strathcona said that the War Office no doubt would consider this matter.

BABY'S WELFARE.

Every mother is naturally anxious that her little ones shall be bright, good natured and healthy. Every mother can keep her children in this condition if she will give them an occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets cure indigestion and stomach troubles, prevent diarrhoea, cure constipation, allay simple fevers, break up colds, destroy worms and make teething easy. And the Tablets are guaranteed to contain no opiate or harmful drug. Mrs. R. E. Long, Peachland, B. C., says:—"I have found Baby's Own Tablets unsurpassed for teething troubles, breaking up colds and reducing fever, and they make a child sleep naturally. They have done my little one so much good I would not like to be without them." Druggists everywhere sell these tablets, or you can get them by mail at 25 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ART OF RAISING CHILDREN.

Duty of Parents If They Would Have Their Offspring Honest, Truthful and Virtuous.

To sum up within a nutshell the art of raising a child, I should say to parents, "Set the child a good example."

Children are naturally imitative, and if they have before them patterns of honesty, of truthfulness and of virtue generally they, too, will strive to be honest, truthful and virtuous. And still more readily will they emulate vicious examples set before them.

The fault with most parents is that they are too lazy to be firm in dealing with their children. Rather than exercise a little patience in explaining to their child the reason why it should act thus and not otherwise, most parents will surrender to its whims and caprices and by constant indulgences render the little one self-willed and headstrong almost beyond control.

Be sure you are right in opposing the child's wishes, but then insist on having your own way to the drop of the flag.

I do not approve of punishment for children. To do good, as a rule, punishment should be administered only in such a way that the child should understand the reason for it. And to possess this degree of understanding the child must have reached an age when punishment cannot be otherwise than degrading.

To degrade a child in its own eyes necessarily deteriorates it. To whip a girl of fourteen inevitably tends to degrade and debase her.

Some of the best parents have bad children, upon whom no amount of moral suasion and no extent of good examples can have any beneficial influence. In these rare cases the fault, of course, lies with the children, and the parents have no other recourse except to punish. But in punishing there should be much good judgment exercised.

The rod should be only for the extremely vicious—only for those who display a malignant spirit, such as tormentors of other children or of animals.

In fact, in all cases I think it wisest to "make the punishment fit the crime." If, for instance, a boy throws a stone at a cat or a dog the best and quickest way to correct this tendency is by whipping him. Take a rod and give him a sound thrashing, but yet so as not to injure nor disfigure him. By making him feel pain you make him realize the monstrous wrong of wantonly inflicting pain upon others.

But if, to take a different example, a girl, in disobedience to her parents, goes to picnics, or stays out late, or associates with unfit companions, it would be manifestly improper to whip her. The way to make the punishment fit the crime in her case is to lock her up. By so doing you deprive her of the motive for doing wrong, while in the case of the malicious boy the whipping acted as a counter motive to overcome the motive supplied by the pleasure of tormenting the cat or dog.

But, as I have said, administer corporal punishment only sparingly, for at best any form of punishment is drastic and ought to be resorted to only when every other argument fails.

If a child takes pleasure in unfair dealing or lying, let the father ask himself whether he himself was not guilty of inculcating that disposition by his own example. How often will not a father come home and at the table, with his children around him, tell about his "smartness" in overreaching a fellow man!

If a child hears his father exalt lying, deceitfulness, unfairness and double dealing, how can we expect the child to grow up to be honest, truthful and honorable?—John B. McKean, Judge of Children's Court of New York City.

Garter and the Bath.

The intelligent foreigner could not understand how so prudish a nation as the English could have adopted the Garter and the Bath as the titles of its highest orders. With regard to the Bath, there is a greater puzzle. Were Knights of the Bath first created on October 13, 1399, at the coronation of Henry IV., and merely revived by George I., in 1725, after long dormancy? Or were there no Knights of the Bath before King George? The solution is probably to be found in the the origin of the title—the condition—namely, that the candidate for knighthood must take a solemn bath, being instructed and counselled, while in the bath, concerning the order and feats of chivalry by two great and ancient knights. But as this appears to have been part of the full ceremony for ordinary knight bachelors, it is possible that Henry's alleged Knights of the Bath were nothing more.

Kitten Aroused Dog's Jealousy.

A happy family there consisted of a lady, a cat, a kitten, and a Yorkshire terrier. All four were on excellent terms until the terrier took umbrage at attentions which its mistress bestowed upon the kitten.

The terrier straightaway began to dig a hole in the garden, and finished its task to its satisfaction in three days.

Then the kitten disappeared. A search was made and the terrier was seen patting down the earth over the hole which it had refilled, the soil was removed, and the kitten was found to have been buried alive.

The dog was punished, but it took the kitten to the grave again, and the following day took it to a ditch and left it there.—London Daily Express.

A Few Conundrums.

KEEP THE BLOOD PURE.

Nearly All the Common Ills of Life Are Caused by Weak, Watery and Impure Blood.

Bad blood means bad health. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills mean good health — they actually make new, rich blood. Bad blood poisons the whole system. The nerves break down, the liver goes wrong, the kidneys get clogged and inflamed, the heart flutters and jumps at the least excitement, the stomach loses its power to digest food, the lungs are unable to throw off the lingering colds, in fact the whole body gets out of order. Then you have headaches and backaches, can't sleep and can't eat and feel utterly miserable. And it all comes from bad blood, and can be cured by the rich, red blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills sends coursing to every part of the body. Mr. Daniel McKinnon, of North Pelham, Ont., suffered from bad blood, but has been made well and strong by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills after all other treatment had failed. Mr. McKinnon says: "Until last spring I had been afflicted with a weak stomach, headaches and kidney troubles. At times I was completely prostrated and my sufferings were of a most severe nature. At different times I was treated by no less than seven doctors, but from none of them did I get more than temporary relief. As time went on I became hopeless of ever being well again. Last spring a friend drew my attention to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to try this medicine. I had only taken four boxes when I found a decided improvement in my condition, and I continued using the pills until I had taken a dozen boxes, when I was a cured man, and the sufferings I had formerly endured were but a disagreeable memory. I admit being an enthusiastic admirer of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but I think I have just cause for my enthusiasm, and will always recommend them to ailing friends."

Just as surely as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured Mr. McKinnon they can cure anaemia, indigestion, headaches, backaches, kidney trouble, rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia, nervousness, general weakness and the special ailments of growing girls and women. All these ailments come from bad blood, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can cure them by filling the veins with new, rich, red blood. But you must be sure to have the genuine pills with the full name, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, on the wrapper around every box. Sold by medicine dealers everywhere, or by mail at 50c. a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WOMAN'S DREAM LEADS TO A FATAL DISASTER.

As a result of a dream Thursday night, Mrs. Lizzie Couet, of Chicago, 41 years of age, lost her life, and her husband and infant child were fatally burned in a fire which partly destroyed their home. The woman dreamed that her savings had been stolen from a hiding place in the bottom of a sugar jar in the pantry. Startled by the reality of the dream, she took a lamp in one hand and her baby under her other arm, and went to investigate. The lamp fell from the woman's hand and exploded. Her husband, aroused from sleep in an adjoining room, made a brave attempt to put the flames out, and finally succeeded with the aid of a mattress, but only after he, as well as the wife and child, had been frightfully burned. Mrs. Couet died while being taken to the hospital.

CATTLEMEN MEET.

Prominent cattlemen of Montana and North Dakota rounded up in Fargo Tuesday to discuss the proposed adoption of uniform regulations regarding the treatment of cattle for infectious diseases. The meeting was called by Dr. Ramsay, official inspector for the Dakotas and Montana, and it is planned to draft a bill for introduction in the Montana and Dakota Legislatures at their coming sessions.

SENDING CHILDREN TO CANADA

Mrs. Close, of London, has a plan of sending in May, if possible, 7,000 children in the care of guardians in England to Canada, if possible, between the ages of two and three, to be taken on farms in the vicinity of Annapolis (the Land of Evangeline), Nova Scotia, from whence they will be drafted as they grow older to the Northwest. Mrs. Close has returned from Canada with the promise of the fullest support from Laurier, Sifton and others.

CANADIAN GRAIN RATES.

Favorable Comparison With Those of U. S. Roads by an American Agricultural Paper.

The following article is reproduced from Farm, Stock & Home, one of the ablest and most careful of the agricultural papers of the United States, published at Minneapolis:—

"A few of us farmers are thinking of going to the Canadian Northwest to settle, but we are told that if we get very far from water transportation that rail rates will eat up the profits on wheat and other grains, since the rates are so much higher there than on our roads in the States. They say the Canadian Pacific having no competition can do as it pleases in charging, and it pleases to get very high rates, as compared with ours, and they are high enough, the Lord knows."—Some North Dakota Farmers.

Answer—The Canadian Pacific is no more monopolistic than our roads. Half a dozen roads may constitute a monopoly as well as one, and a monopoly is what the various lines penetrating our Northwest have ever maintained, especially as to local rates. But a few figures will answer your question.

The grain rate, per 100 pounds, from Port Arthur, the nearest lake port, including steerage charges and insurance, to Winnipeg, 431 miles, is 10 cents. A rate sheet of the Great Northern road lying before us shows that it charges that much for around a 140-mile haul. From Port Arthur to Brandon, 564 miles, the rate is 13 cents. The Great Northern charges the same from Barnesville to Minneapolis, 218 miles; and for a 523-mile haul it charges 18 cents, from Minot, your state, to Minneapolis. The Canadian Pacific from Moose Jaw, 824 miles, is 18 cents, while the Great Northern charge is 25 cents from Williston, 644 miles. The Canadian Pacific rate from Edmonton, the centre of the great wheat-growing district, is 28 cents, and the distance is 1,463 miles. Many more comparisons could be given but these are typical of all, and they apply to all our northwestern roads as well as to the Great Northern.

It requires no argument to convince one that our roads can afford to transport grain cheaper than the Canadian Pacific Railway can, because they run through more thickly settled regions, creating immensely more traffic each way.

It is not pleasant to give information of this kind, because it makes one feel it is encouraging the migration of our people to alien lands. But "the Lord knows" that this journal is not responsible for the situation, and may be it will be well in the long run for the people to see who are or what is responsible for at least one inducement to many of them to leave a country that they are supposed to rule, and become the citizens of a kingdom.

CHARGED WITH SMUGGLING.

Deputy U. S. Marshal Stout arrived in this city from Portal, having in charge J. W. Williams, who is charged with smuggling whiskey across the Canadian line, says a despatch from Minot, N. D. The accused was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Blaisdell, of Minot, and by stipulation his hearing was continued. Williams is specifically charged with smuggling five gallons of good, old Canadian booze across the line from north to south Portal. He has been suspected of the offence for some time by the collector of customs, and it is said that recently he was caught with the liquor in his possession. Williams states that he was sent after five gallons of whiskey by a young man employed in a hotel near the boundary line and that he did not know that he had passed over the line into the United States. When taken into custody by the officers, Williams, who is a big, strong fellow, cried like a child, and said that if his wife learned of his trouble it would kill her. The maximum penalty in case of conviction is one year in the penitentiary and a fine of $5,000.

"SALADA"

CEYLON TEA in Sealed Lead Packets Only. Black, Mixed or NATURAL GREEN. By all Grocers. Beware of Substitutes.

The Canadian Pacific Railway have announced their 18th Annual Excursions to the East, and tickets will be on sale from November 28th to December 31st, good to return within three months from date of sale. The C. P. R. in addition to their daily service of first-class coaches and palace sleeping cars, will also run tourist sleeping cars daily, which will allow passengers an excellent opportunity of making the trip to the East in great comfort. A pamphlet describing the tourist sleeping cars has been issued, a copy of which may be had on application to any agent of the company. The company will also run tourist sleeping cars from the East to Winnipeg, daily during March, thus ensuring passengers the same comfort on the return as on the going journey.

A SURE CURE FOR HEADACHE.—Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

Sometimes we get so interested in showing others wherein they are wrong that we fail to mention wherein we are right.

The Latest Happenings In The Dominion.

DISSOLUTION PENDING IN ONTARIO.

A despatch from Toronto says that the nomination of W. O. Widdifield as Liberal candidate for North York means the retirement of Hon. Mr. Davis as commissioner of crown lands. It was announced some time ago that he would retire on the dissolution of the Legislature and that event is now close at hand. If Mr. Stratton's successor is appointed from the Legislature another seat will be vacated and the government will be left absolutely without a majority. In a few days a reconstructed government will be ready for an appeal to the country with a reconstructed policy. The temperance Liberals will ask Premier Ross to abolish the bar and to give the municipalities power to vote for license.

FAILS IN ATTEMPT TO DODGE THE LAW.

At Montreal Monday evening Detectives Carbonneau and Vincent arrested a young man who answered the description recently received from Reading, England, of Albert Edward Pocock, who suddenly left Reading with £300 in cash, some title deeds to property and other valuable documents. The young man soon acknowledged his identity, and said that when he left England he went to Holland, thence to Scotland, thence to Liverpool, and thence to Montreal. The authorities were advised by cable that extradition proceedings were under way and an officer would be sent over for him.

MINTO SAYS HIS LAST GOOD-BYE.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier received the following telegram from Lord and Lady Minto, dated Rimouski, Nov. 10: "Cannot tell you how deeply we feel in saying good-bye to you and to so many friends and to Canada, where we have been so happy. Hope to send you Marconi from Fame Point. (Signed) Lord and Lady Minto." The marconigram which the Premier received from Fame Point is as follows: "Must avail myself of the Marconi system to express the wish that prosperity may attend both the Dominion and yourself. (Signed) Minto."

BIG CONTRACTS LET.

Messrs. Landon and Sutherland, of Kingston, have been awarded the contract for erecting the Canadian mint at Ottawa. The price is $262,000. The contract for the Royal Victoria museum, which is also to be erected in Ottawa, has been awarded to George Godwin, of Ottawa, for about $950,000. It is said that the price is about $200,000 lower than the departmental estimate. Mr. Harwood, ex-M. P., Vaudredil, has been appointed postmaster of Montreal. Anearn and Soper, of Montreal, have been awarded a contract for supplies for the Welland canal, amounting to $60,000.

ASSAULT GUARDS AND ESCAPE.

Saturday morning four convicts at the Kingston penitentiary held up the guards, got their weapons and escaped, but within an hour were recaptured. The guards held up were Doyle and Coughley, while leading a gang of twelve who were working on Union street under Guard Coughley, Elmer Biddel, Matty Duggan, Percy Jones and William Barriball made the assault and took the rifles and revolvers from their keepers and fled, but they were overtaken and empowered and disarmed, and are now in the prison dungeons to await further punishment.

$12,500 REWARD FOR TRAIN ROBBERS.

The Pinkerton National Detective agency have issued a circular regarding the recent train hold-up on the C. P. R. at Mission, B. C. The rewards offered for the capture of the robbers now aggregate $12,500, as follows: $5,000 jointly by the C. P. R. and Dominion Express Co.; $5,000 by the Dominion Government; $1,500 by the British Columbia government ($500 for each conviction) and $1,000 by the C. P. R. for reliable information that will lead to the arrest of one or more of the guilty parties.

INQUIRY FOR THOMAS JACKSON

Inquiry is made by Mrs. C. E. Clarkson (nee Jackson), 116 Red Earth road,, Darwen, Lancashire, Eng., for one Thomas Jackson, grandfather to the applicant. The inquiry states that Jackson is supposed to be living (if alive) somewhere in the vicinity of Winnipeg, where he follows the occupation of farmer on a large scale. It is stated that one of Jackson's daughters married a member of the Dominion civil service and now resides at Ottawa.

SESSION OF TEACHERS.

Some time ago the Department of Education for the Northwest Territories announced that a normal session for the training of teachers for first and second-class certificates would be held at Regina commencing January 3, 1905. It has now been decided that a class for the training of teachers for third-class certificates will be held at the same time and place. The third-class session will extend over a period of ten weeks.

ANTONIA GIACCONI SENTENCED TO HANG.

At Montreal, on Monday, after a protracted trial, Antonia Giacconi, an Italian, was found guilty in the Court of the King's Bench of the murder of Theodore Duval, on Aug. 26, and was sentenced by Judge Hall to be hanged on January 20. The jury added a strong recommendation for mercy, and the court stated that it would be forwarded to the proper quarters. The murder of Duval was the result of a barroom quarrel.

MILLION FOR GAS.

At a special meeting of the Toronto City Council a by-law was passed to devote a million dollars to the purchasing of gas stock and approved of seven hundred thousand dollars for increased fire protection. Detective Realoru, one of the oldest members of the Toronto force, has resigned.

CONCOCTED MURDER FAKE.

The Toronto World states that the boy who was found on the tracks near Harriston, Ont., with his hands tied, and told the story that he had been left there by his father and another man, is a fraud. It is alleged that the boy's name is Leo Burns, a Pittsburg runaway, and that he concocted and acted out the thrilling attempted murder fake.

HOUSE CALLED FOR JAN. 11.

At a cabinet meeting in Ottawa on Monday an order-in-council was passed calling Parliament for despatch of business on Wednesday, Jan. 11. The usual day for the opening of Parliament is Thursday, but every new parliament is called a day earlier for the purpose of electing a speaker. The speaker will be elected on Wednesday, the 11th, and on the following day Earl Grey will deliver the speech from the throne.

CONDEMNED MURDERER IS REPRIEVED.

The death sentence passed by Judge Osler at the Soo assizes on John Chartrand for the murder of Constable Irving at Webbwood, was on Monday commuted by the Cabinet to life imprisonment. Chartrand was to have been hanged on Dec. 9. He was wanted for larceny, and was pointed out to Irving at Webbwood Station, while Chartrand was travelling on the train. Irving immediately boarded the train and asked Chartrand to get off. The latter drew a revolver and fired one shot on the floor, the second shot piercing Irving's heart. At the trial Chartrand contended he only wanted to frighten the constable, and that the second and fatal shot was an accident due to the constable making a grab at him. Judge Osler took a lenient view of the case and the prisoner' saves his neck., largely on account of the judge's recommendation.

FRENCH CAPITAL COMING TO CANADA.

The rapidity with which French capital is finding its way into Canada is shown by the announcement made by Eugene Poissen, inspecting engineer of the big contracting company of Fiver, Lille & Co., of Paris, that this company is looking to invest 200,000,000 francs in the Canadian West. Mr. Poisson has been looking into the possibilities of Western Canada for his company, which is the largest one of contracting engineers in France and one of the most important in the world. Mr. Poisson, speaking of his trip, said he had made similar ones all over the world, in South and North America, but no where had he seen anything to compare with Canada. He added that his company had works all over the world, and if they could get a guarantee for their capital would come into Canada. The company, besides building railways, bridges and canals is largely interested in beet sugar factories, and would likely establish some in this country.

KILLS SEVENTY WOLVES.

Frank Cline, who lives thirty miles southwest of Miller, S. D., has killed seventy wolves since Sept. 1, four of which were of the large grey wolf species, the remaining sixry-six being the common coyotes. The wolf bounty is $2.50 for all kinds if they are full grown. Mr. Cline's plan of hunting is to take his pack of greyhounds in a covered wagon, and as he sees a wolf on the prairie he can drive close to it, especially if it is hungry. Then the hounds are quickly dropped out of the wagon and the wolf is soon captured. The dogs are again taken into the wagon and are soon ready for the next chase.

As Manitoba and the Northwest Territories are settled to a great extent by a class of people who are so busy during the summer months that a holiday during that season of the year is out of the question, therefore, the annual holiday excursions to Eastern Canada inaugurated a few years ago are becoming more and more popular every year, and one of the first questions asked is what is the best and most enjoyable way of making the trip. As a continuous railway journey through a sparsely settled country becomes tedious, the route through St. Paul and Chicago is becoming more popular every year, as the excursionist can, if desired, break the journey by remaining over at the Twin Cities or Chicago. One of the most popular railway lines between St. Paul and Chicago is the Burlington Route, usually termed the "Scenic Route," as that road follows the banks of the famous Mississippi River for a distance of three hundred miles, making a trip long to be remembered, as it affords a continuous panorama of beautiful scenery for the entire day. On arriving at Chicago the varied points of interest are so numerous that a visitor may thoroughly enjoy every hour of the time spent there. The limit of ten days on the going trip and fifteen days on the return trip allows ample time to visit any cities en route as liberal stop overs are provided for. Mr. A. L. Eidemiller, Travelling Passenger Agent of the Burlington Route, will make the Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, his headquarters during December, and will be pleased to give any information necessary to any one who is considering a trip east, if they will write him.

THE MARKET REPORT

Thompson, Sons & Co's.

Thursday, Nov. 24, 1904.

WHEAT: The wheat markets have become very depressed during the past seven days, and have shown a good deal of nervousness. The excellent weather prevailing all over the American continent has tended to free marketing and free movement of wheat, especially over the Northwestern spring wheat country, where it is just the time of year that the bulk of the crop becomes ready for moving off the farms and eastward by rail. We think full advantage is being taken of this favorable weather by farmers in delivering their wheat at the railway stations and by the railways in carrying it away, and the result is shown in a much larger movement than could have been the case in less favorable weather. As illustrating this, it may be stated that the number of cars of wheat inspected at Winnipeg during the week ending the 21st inst. was 2,402, against 1939 the previous week and only 1,402 cars same week last year. Owing to the increasing number of cars of largest capacity employed in railway rolling stock in the Canadian West, a carload may now be taken to average 1,100 bushels, as against 1,000 bushels a year ago. The increased quantity thus moving should not be taken as confirming large estimates of the crop yield because it is only the evidence of favorable conditions for movement along with attractive prices to the producer. Lower prices and wintry weather will probably give a decided check to the movement, and it is evident that if the wheat is forwarded now it will not be in the country for shipment later on. From last Thursday until Monday the American speculative markets became quite weak, and liquidation of long wheat held by weak speculators became the order of things and prices declined sharply, showing about 3c. to 5c. decline in three days. No doubt other speculators bearishly inclined helped the decline by selling short. On Tuesday and yesterday a stronger feeling asserted itself again. Wet weather was reported from the Argentine, where the crop is about ready to harvest, Liverpool was stronger, and dry weather continues in the American winter wheat belt. Armour & Co. were reported as buying in short wheat and probably taking the long side, and very naturally after the break prices had experienced some rally took place, but the markets remain nervous nevertheless, and there is no certain prospect of advancing markets in the immediate future. Consumption of breadstuffs is good enough, but movement of available supplies has been for some time and is at present larger than required for current requirements, and stocks are accumulating and prices are comparatively high. Any slackening of supplies or serious impairment of prospects for coming crops would easily advance prices, but just in the meantime the situation prompts the buying side to go slow and the selling side to be more anxious to realize, the result being lower prices. There is nothing particularly new about the world's crops this week. The thing of special interest at present is the progress of the Argentine crop, and recent reports indicate weather not quite favorable to present situation there, the crop in the early northern districts being ready to cut, but the great bulk of it is just at the filling stage. Europe this week is wrapped in wintry weather and snow, very good for the crops in the ground but putting a stop to further wheat sowing and tending to increased consumption of breadstuffs. Russia and India continue to ship largely, but shipments from the southern hemisphere are moderate. The visible supply increased last week 2,087,000 bushels, against an increase the previous week of 2,940,000 bushels, and an increase last year af 1,526,000 bushels. The world's shipments were 11,511,000 bushels, against 12,208,000 bushels the previous week and 10,512,000 bushels last year. The world's visible supply, according to Bradstreet's, increased 3,453,000 bushels, against an increase of 6,500,000 the previous week and an increase of 5,631,000 bushels last year.

Manitoba wheat has been dull and depressed the whole week. Under the influence of the American situation our prices have all the time been kept just high enough to prevent free export, the consequence is that the Manitoba trade hold more of the wheat that has moved than would be the case at this time of year under ordinary circumstances. This reduces their buying power now, and with lower markets all round our market is stagnant. The people in the east and in Europe who buy our wheat have had for the last three months the prospect held before them by our newspapers and other authorities of a large if not immense crop, and this has had apparent confirmation in recent large movement and they have hung back from buying and allowed the Manitoba trade and the Manitoba farmers, who are the best judges of what the yield of the crop is, to keep the wheat. It will all be needed, but we think they will have to come for it with higher prices. In the meantime, as we have stated, our market is stagnant, buyers are few, even for the best grades, and only in very small quantities, and the lower grades and off grade wheat such as scoured and dried, etc., are simply unsaleable at the moment. Current quotations are as follows: 1 Nor., 95½c.; 2 Nor., 90½c.; 3 Nor., 83½c.; No. 4 Extra, 73¾c.; No. 4 wheat, 72½c.; No. 5 wheat, 63½c.; Feed, 55c., and Feed No. 2, 49c., spot or past Winnipeg. Prices for future delivery are November, 93¼c.; December, 91¾c.; May, 96¾c.; July, 97¾c. All prices are for in store Fort William and Port Arthur.

Winnipeg, Nov. 26.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

Called from The Commercial.

A brisk milling demand put No. 2 white oats up 1c per bushel, No. 3 is slightly firmer at last week's top range of 30c. Feed grades are about steady, but ranging in some cases 1c higher. The milling demand was the feature of the week as the export business is rather off color. Feed is steady and the demand fairly good. Owing to the colder weather, the demand is slightly improved. Feed grades of barley are easier, a low range—2c below last week's quotation—being established, at 30 to 32c. The decline of ½c in flaxseed is due to the light local milling demand and the approach of the close of navigation. Local millers state that the eastern price basis is too high for them to do business on, and that local quotations will have to ease off somewhat before they can come into the market strong. Hay is steady. There is little local demand as dealers are all pretty well stocked up. The arrival of snow, has, it is hoped put a stop to extensive losses by fire. Very little speltz is offering. Flour quotations remain steady, although the market is admittedly easy. There is not, however, the price cutting that is going on in the eastern markets. The situation in the west is much simpler, as there are not so many large handlers of standard grades. It is evident, however, that intending purchasers are holding off in the anticipation of a drop, owing to the comparative weakness of local wheat and the easiness in the east. It is, of course, a question whether they will be forced into the market before the drop comes or not, in which case prices would probably remain steady, unless there is a decided break in export values. The demand for low grade stocks for the Orient continues, and the South African demand for No. 2 grade is reported good. We quote: Best Hungarian patents, $2.90 per sack of 98 lbs.; seconds, $2.70; strong bakers, $2.10 to $2.40, according to make; XXXX, $1.50. All prices given are subject to usual trade discounts.

MILLFEED—Bran, $17 per ton in bulk, delivered to the trade; shorts, $19 per ton.

GROUND FEED—Oat chop, $25 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley chop, $20; mixed barley and oats, $23; oil cake, $27 per ton.

OATS—No. 2 white, 32c; No. 3, 30c; feed grades, 27 to 29c per bus., in carlots on track, Winnipeg.

BARLEY—No. 3 barley, 37c per bus.; No. 4, 35c; feed grade, 30 to 32c on track, Winnipeg.

FLAXSEED—94 to 95c per bus., Fort William basis.

SPELTZ—About the same as barley.

HAY—Baled hay, new, in carlots on track here, $7.50 per ton. Loose hay, farmers' loads, $7 to $8 per ton.

VEGETABLES—Although there is no advance in potato prices to note, the market is very firm. Supplies can only be obtained by carload, and the tubers are mostly of small size. Turnips are 5c per bushel higher and celery about 10c. Beets have struck an average price of 60c per bushel. We quote: Potatoes, farmers' loads, 65c per bushel; cabbage, $20 per ton; swede turnips, 20 to 25c per bushel; parsley, 30c per doz.; onions, 2½c per lb.; beets, 60c per bus.; celery, 40 to 50c per doz.; vegetable marrows, 60 to 70c per per doz.; lettuce, 40c per dozen.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef is ¼c. per pound firmer, quotations ranging from 5¼ to 5¾c. This strength is entirely confined to good stock, which is scarce. Poor stuff is on the easy side, and veal ranges higher and lower, 1c each way. Lambs are slightly easier, while dressed hogs are ½ to ¾c per lb. lower. Beef, 5¼ to 5¾c per lb. for city dressed, ½c less for country; veal, 5 to 7c for choice weights; mutton, 8c; spring lambs, 9 to 10c per lb.; hogs, 7 to 7½c, delivered to the trade here.

POULTRY—A 1c per lb. drop in turkeys is the feature this week. We quote: Live weight, fowl, 9c per lb.; spring chickens, 11c per lb.; turkeys, 17c per lb., dressed, all prices f. o. b. Winnipeg, paid by local dealers.

CHEESE—Supplies are none too free, tone firm and Manitoba stock is ½c firmer. Trade good. Local jobbing prices are: Ontario, 11½c per lb.; Twins, 12c.

BUTTER — Quotations are somewhat firmer, prices ranging higher. We quote on a jobbing basis, Winnipeg, prints, 23 to 25c per lb.; assorted boxes, 22 to 23c per lb.

BUTTER — Dairy — The market is firm, supplies being rather limited and demand good. No. 1 is 1c higher. We quote prices, paid by jobbers at Winnipeg as follows: No. 1, 14 to 15c; No. 2, 9 to 13c; lb-bricks, 18½ to 19c. Price of round lots, Winnipeg, is 12½ to 13c, and from 1 to 2c more for special selected shipments by express.

EGGS—The market is particularly firm for glycerined stock, for storage which has advanced 1c per doz. Fresh eggs are firm. We quote for imported stock on a jobbing basis, fresh, 25c; glycerined, 25c per dozen.

HIDES—The market is firm at last week's advance for country cured stock. We quotef Abattoir hides, 7c for No. 1's; 6c for No. 2's. Country cured butchers' at 6¾c for No. 1 grade; sheep hides, 30 to 50c.

TALLOW—Quotations are steady at last week's decline. No. 1 tallow is worth 3½ to 3¾c per lb., delivered at Winnipeg; No. 2, 2¾c.

SENECA ROOT—Last week's advance has been maintained, but the market is dull. Clean dry root is worth about 55 to 58c per pound delivered Winnipeg.

LIVE STOCK.

CATTLE — While export stock is steady, butcher cattle are 25c per cwt. firmer. Export stock is worth $2.75 to $3, Winnipeg, weighed at the point of shipment. We quote $2.75 off cars here for choice butchers' down to $2.25 for inferior grades.

SHEEP—Quotations are 50c easier under the influence of heavy receipts. We quote $3.50 per cwt., Winnipeg.

HOGS — The market still holds steady, receipts from the country being large and good. We quote 5¼c per lb., selected weights, Winnipeg.

WAR NEWS.

The Japanese resumed their attacks on Port Arthur on Nov. 17, making a furious assault, says a cablegram from Shanghai, which resulted in their occupation of underground chambers in important positions.

Advices from Mukden state that another unsuccessful attack on Port Arthur was made Nov. 15.

A special from Tokio says that as a result of tunneling by the Japanese, the Erlungshan and Sanshunshan forts, the principal works of the Port Arthur defences, were blown up last Thursday at 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon. It is stated the explosion was a severe one. The extent of the damage inflicted is being investigated. The Japanese have been fighting steadily for two months to capture the forts on Erlung and Sanshun mountains. They are situated directly north of the city of Port Arthur, close to the valley through which runs the railroad. East and southeast of these two forts are the powerful forts on East, North, and South Keekwan mountains, and the five forts constitute the eastern fortified ridge which alone protects Port Arthur from being taken by direct assault.

FORMER ATTACKS FAILED.

The Japanese bombarded the five forts named from Oct. 27 to Oct. 30, and then tried to take them by storm. They were repulsed, losing in killed and wounded 2,000 men. It was then announced that the Japanese were extending tunnels beneath the forts and that the work was progressing slowly, owing to the nature of the grounds, it being a combination of quartz and conglomerate limestone.

STOESSEL REPORTS SUCCESS.

Gen. Stoessel, in a despatch to the Emperor dated Nov. 2, says: "I am happy to report to your majesty that all the assaults from Oct. 25 to Nov. 2 were repulsed by our heroic troops. The most desperate assault occurred on Oct. 30, but, thanks to the bayonets of the reserves and the bravery of the volunteer sharpshooters, the enemy was repulsed at all points. The Japanese did not return the attack the same day and left a great number of dead uninterred on the field. On Oct. 31 the enemy twice assaulted, but each time was repulsed at the point of the hand grenades. Several of our officers and men were wounded. The spirit of the troops is excellent. It is difficult to establish any distinction as regards bravery. All are heroes. The bombardment of the fortress continues without intermission." Gen. Stoessel praises the work of the ambulance and hospital corps, mentions a number of officers for distinguished bravery, and concludes: "The Japanese losses were enormous. I estimate them at 10,000."

JAPS SINK THREE SHIPS IN FIGHT.

A despatch to the London Daily Express from Nagasaki gives details of the sortie of the torpedo boat destroyers from Port Arthur on the nights of Nov. 13, 14 and 15. Only one of these destroyers reached Chefoo, the Rastoropny. Three others were sunk by the Japanese. The three boats sunk left two days before the Rastoropny and all carried duplicate despatches to Gen. Stoessel. There were also some badly wounded officers on board the boats, who preferred to risk their lives at sea rather than meet certain death in the unsanitary hospitals of Port Arthur.

BATTLE FOR HALF AN HOUR.

The Japanese cruiser sank the first destroyer after a fight lasting half an hour, in which all the Russians were shot or drowned except four, who were rescued from the sea by the boats from the Kasuga after the destroyer sank. One of the men thus rescued has since died. The cruiser Matsuhima sank the second destroyer twenty-five miles from Port Arthur, receiving itself an ineffective blow from a torpedo.

RUSSIANS FEARED CAPTURE.

Semi-official advices from Chefoo to Paris say that the officers and crew of the Russian torpedo boat destroyer Rastoropny, who have been ashore since the blowing up of their boat, assert that the commanders of the Japanese torpedo boats which entered the port threatened to take the Russians prisoners. The latter, it is added, believing the Japanese would attempt to carry out their threats by landing in spite of the neutrality of Chefoo, have sought refuge on a Chinese cruiser in the harbor, where it is said the Russians will be protected against a possible attempt to make them prisoners. The foregoing is regarded in official quarters at Paris as involving a flagrant disregard for the neutrality of Chefoo.

FIGHTING IS MORE SERIOUS.

A despatch to the Lokal Anzeiger, Berlin, under date of Nov. 21, from Mukden, says: "The reconnoissance fights have assumed a more violent character during the last few days. Particularly hot was the fighting on Poutiloff (Lone Tree Hill), where the Japanese were repulsed with the loss of over 100 killed. All signs indicate that great events are imminent. The Russians admire the clean lines, perfect order, and equipment of the Japanese. One does not see any trace of race hatred. It is a fact that the Japanese return through French intermediation all valuables found on the dead Russians. This has made a deep impression in Berlin, and is reciprocated."

FAREWELL TO EARL GREY.

Lord Strathcona presided at a farewell banquet Monday night, in London, on the eve of Earl Grey's departure to assume the Governor-Generalship of Canada. There were 200 guests, including the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Earl of Aberdeen, Mr. Broderick, Secretary for India; the Agents-General for British Columbia and Nova Scotia, the Earl of Lichfield, General Lord William Seymour, Lord Vaux Harrowden, Viscount Bury, Baron Suyjatza of Japan, Sir Percy Girouard, Sir Neville Lyttleton, Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, Major-General Baden-Powell and J. G. Colmer.

LORD ABERDEEN.

Lord Aberdeen, in proposing the toast of the Imperial Forces, drew attention to the splendid work done by Canadians in South Africa. Canadians combined their pride in the British Empire with an equal pride for the great Dominion to which they especially belonged. Sir Neville Lyttleton said that the Canadians were always ready to help the Mother Country as the South African campaign had shown.

LORD STRATHCONA.

Lord Strathcona, chairman, read a letter of regret from Lord Lansdowne, who was unable to be present owing to the death of a near relative. In his letter he said that the new Governor-General would find the inhabitants of the Dominion proud of the name of Canada, and still more proud as members of the British Empire. Canada would give Lord Grey the warmest welcome, the High Commissioner continued, and he could himself say that no worthier successor could possibly have been found to the illustrious line of Governor-Generals who had preceded him. Lord Strathcona then proposed the toast, "The Dominion of Canada and the Governor-General-elect."

EARL GREY'S REPLY.

Earl Grey, in responding, paid a tribute to the great loyalty of the Canadians, and said he looked forward with the greatest zest to five years' residence in Canada, whose population, he said, there was every reason to expect in the lifetime of our sons and perhaps even of some of us here to-night would equal that of the United Kingdom."

ANGLO-FRENCH AGREEMENT.

Earl Grey referred to the Anglo-French agreement and reminded his audience that a third of the Canadians were of French race. He himself felt grateful to Lord Lansdowne for the way he had smoothed the way. The Duke of Argyll, better known to Canadians as the Marquis of Lorne, told him that he was never so happy as when he was Governor-General of Canada himself. He was going to a country where the sky was blue and the atmosphere was like champagne, for the Canadian climate was more exhilirating than the average English summer. In vastness of wealth and variety of resources, and in the breed of men, Canada was not surpassed by any portion of the globe. He hoped to see before the conclusion of his term of office the American mails reaching England through Canadian ports instead of vice versa, and was looking forward to the time when a steamer would cross to Canada in four days. The Archbishop of Canterbury dwelt on Canada's splendid prosperity and tremendous resources. Mr. Broderick also addressed the company, as did also Vice-Admiral Sir Archibald Douglas.

MORGAN IS TRYING TO SHOOT.

J. Pierpont Morgan has taken a share in the shooting at Six Mile Bottom, a famous estate near Newmarket. The shooting, which was rented for many years by the Duke of Cambridge, has been let to Mr. Leslie for next season.

SOLDIERS KILLING WOMEN.

Grave charges are made at Berlin regarding the manner on which the the government is conducting the war against the Hereros in German Southwest Africa. It is alleged that the troops have been ordered not to take any prisoners, but shoot everybody, regardless of age or sex. It is pointed out that in official reports of engagements mention is made of the number killed, but nothing is said about the number wounded. The Berlin Verwarts has published letters from soldiers in German Southwest Africa describing the slaughter of captured Herero women. The Berlin Conservative newspaper, Reichsbote, charges that the German troops are not engaged in war, but in butchering defenseless women.

ENGLAND TO SEE KNIGHTS OF OLD.

The scheme for a great medieval tournament which was conceived by Mrs. Arthur Paget while lying on her sick bed, and which is to take place next summer in aid of King Edward's hospital fund, is now well developed. There does not seem any intention of copying the historical Englinton tournament. In fact, it is to be run on quite different lines by the college of heralds, who will see that the whole tournament and jousting will be carried out in absolutely a correct manner. With regard to those taking part in it, gentlemen by blood—that is to say, of four descents—alone will be eligible. It is expected that some wonderful old armor will be seen, though doubt is expressed whether the owners of valuable old armor would lend their choicest specimens to be knocked about, as they are bound to be in contests of such character. Outside the lists will be the heraldic trees of cherry, which will be painted white, apple in the centre painted white and red, and a pear tree all red. On these trees will be hung the shields of the various competing knights, according to heraldic precedence.

THE FERNIE FREE PRESS, FERNIE, BRITISH COLUMBIA

FRIDAY, DEC. 2, 1904

THE climate of Fernie is about all right if its altitude is nearly four thousand feet above the sea level. To-day on the second day of December, pansies, daisies and other flowers are blooming in numerous gardens in the city, wholly exposed to the elements.

* * *

ATTENTION is called to the notice in another column re the new municipal voters list. It behooves all voters whose names will not be taken from the city assessor's book to make the necessary application and register their names.

* * *

The many advantages to the city of a road into the Flathead from Fernie are unquestioned, and many who know some thing of the different B. C. routes are of the opinion that the one from Fernie has advantages over all others. It is this which the committee appointed by the Board of Trade will attempt to prove. Apart from the question of a close economy in cost and distance it must be conceded that Fernie is the natural outfitting point for the Flathead country.

* * *

AN inspection of the building that was partly consumed by fire on Wednesday will convince the most skeptical minded of the efficiency of the McRobie chemical engine when used under proper conditions. The whole inside of the building is burned, proving that the fire had not only got well under pay but had had time to spread over almost the entire interior before the arrival of the engine. This was by far the fairest test chemical has had. To have it working at its best it is necessary that the fire be more or less confined that the carbonic fumes may grapple at close quarters with the flames. The chemical is useless to battle against a large fire where free access is gained to the outside air, but Wednesday's fire amply proved that its prompt use may readily prevent a big fire. Its use in the modern fire-proof buildings of Fernie should therefore be particularly effective. The fire-brigade showed that they understood their business on Wednesday. They acted quickly and everyone worked in unison,

PLAINTIFFS HAVE APPEALED.

The plaintiffs in the four test damage actions against the Crows Nest Pass Coal Company, resulting from the explosion at Coal Creek in 1902 have determined to appeal from the finding of Mr. Justice Martin, to the full court. Notice of appeal was filed and served on Monday. In June Mr. Justice Martin decided these cases in favor of the Coal Company with costs.

Notice!

SIXTY DAYS after the first publication of this notice I intend to apply to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council for permission to clear out and remove obstructions from the source of Rock Creek to where the Crow's Nest Southern Railway crosses it, and build dams and slides thereon and to make other improvements for the purpose of making said creek navigable for logs :—

The rate of toll proposed to be charged to be according to decision of the County Court Judge.

MR. FERNAU COMING.

C. Fernau the zinc smelting man is expected in Fernie this evening. He is coming this time to finally determine upon the location of the smelter. Reports have been current for some time that the smelter will be located at Frank but these reports are only the result of conjectures. A special committee of the Board of Trade will meet Mr. Fernau as will also a committee of the City Fathers.

COMMITTEE IS ACTIVE

The special committee of the Board of Trade to investigate the merits of the Ferme route into the Flathead met in Mr. Mott's office last evening. They determined upon a line of action which will result in a full report upon this subject by competent engineers.

J. G. Cummings, civil engineer and provincial land surveyor, will have charge of the party who will make the examination. I. N. Dally has been summoned by letter to join the party and Mr. Miller, a prospector, who also thoroughly knows the Flathead and the various trails has been engaged. It is estimated that these surveys will cost in the neighborhood of $300. The committee also took up the matter of the zinc smelter with a view to impressing upon Mr. Fernau the superior advantages of this city for smelting purposes. The committee met again today at 4 p.m

BRIGHT SIDE OF SHIELD

TIMES BETTER NOW THAN IN THE "GOOD OLD DAYS."

REPLY TO THE PESSIMISTS

Fault Finders Have An Ancestral Record As Old As the Human Race—What the People Have to Be Thankful For On the Thanksgiving Day of 1904—A Sunlit Picture of Modern Days.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 20.—In reply to the pessimists, the preacher in this sermon turns the brighter side of the picture of our national life and shows us that we ought to be thankful that we are living in times that have undergone vast improvement since the "good old days" of our grandfathers. The text is Psalm iv., 6, "There be many that say, Who will show us any good?"

The depreciators, the carpers, the fault finders, the calamity howlers, the pessimists, who like the blind fish of Kentucky's Mammoth cave, cannot see the light of day, have an ancestral record as old as the human race. They belong especially to no one century or generation. Their family connections are not limited to the Caucasian race, or to the Ethiopian, or to the Malay, or to the red-skinned American Indian, or to the Mongolian, or to the jaundice-faced Chinamen. They are found alike in the poor man's hut and the rich man's palace, among the sailors on shipboard and the citizens on land. Like the Eskimos, they live among the Arctic icebergs. They thrive well in the temperate zone. They bask in the boiling heat of the tropics. They are found among all social classes of all nations of all times.

Mythology placed a representative of the class among the Greek gods on Mount Olympus. His name was Momus, the god of fault finding and mockery. He took pleasure in finding fault with men. He found fault with the gods themselves. He criticized Vulcan because after he had made man he did not place a window in his breast, so that man's thoughts could be seen by the passersby. He denounced Minerva after she had built a house because she did not make the house movable. He found fault with Neptune because he did not place the horns of the beast he had created farther forward in his forehead, so that he could fight better. He kept on finding fault with everybody and everything until at last the gods became disgusted and drove Momus out of heaven, because, said they, "heaven can be no heaven with a chronic fault finder around."

What the Grecian mythological gods said in reference to heaven with a Momus in it is literally true. No society on earth can be happy or contented with a chronic grumbler around. And yet, coming up to the glorious celebration of our autumnal Thanksgiving day of 1904, we find our pessimistic Momuses everywhere. This is the time when we ought to be making an inventory of all our blessings, instead of which these modern calamity howlers are making a false collection of misanthropic statements. They are also making their pessimistic prophecies. Not only are they saying that the world is going to the dogs, but they furthermore assert that it has already gone to the dogs. "Why," they say, "we have nothing to be thankful for this Thanksgiving day. 'Tis true there is more money in the world, more than ever before, but we do not have it. Our social, civic and spiritual conditions for the great mass of folks were never at as low ebb as they are to-day. Who will show us any good?" they cry, as the calamity howlers of my text cried in David's time, thousands of years ago.

Some of these modern fault finders are trying to make our times out to be much worse than were the ancient times. I will pick up their challenge. They ask, "Who will show us any good?" I answer, "I will." And I will show that the church of Jesus Christ is better to-day spiritually than the ancient church. I will show that modern Governments are better and the homes are better and people in the mass are higher toned morally and better. The fact that a lot of chronic croakers at this Thanksgiving time are going around finding fault with things does not in the least prove that most people are poorly clad, poorly fed, poorly housed and under the merciless heels of despotic tyrants. As a rule, you will find that those people who grumble the most have the least to grumble about.

The Momus of political life declares that there is nothing in our national life to warrant thanksgiving. He says: "Modern rulers and legislators are selfish oppressors. They do not govern by God's Golden Rule, but by force. The code of civilized nations is immoral, merciless and unjust. It connives at the crimes of government and condones the theft of a province. Strong governments trample upon the rights of the weaker governments. Within these governments one social class places the yoke of tyranny upon the other social class. Within those governments laws are not equitable and just. We find that the poor man who steals a loaf of bread to avert starvation is hustled off to jail, as Jean Valjean was sent to the galleys with a twenty years' sentence for stealing two loaves of bread to feed the gaunt and haggard and starving children of his widowed sister. On the other hand, a man like James Fisk, if he is a big enough scoundrel to steal a railroad, can defy justice, while a millionaire, like Edward Stokes, who shoots a James Fisk, has no more to fear from the gallows than a leopard has who slays a helpless fawn." "No," say the living pessimists, "our modern governments and their internal laws are all corrupt. There are none that doeth good—no, not one, not one."

'Tis true, O carping critic and calamity howler against rulers and national laws, that modern governments are not all that they ought to be. This is not the age of perfection even in legislative hall or Presidential Cabinet or Privy Council of the king. Perhaps England did not do right in her dealings with the African Boers. Possibly the United States Government did not do right in compelling Mexico at the point of the bayonet to cede to her all of Texas, all of New Mexico, one-half of the present State of Colorado, all of Arizona, all of Nevada, all of Utah and the whole of California. We know that Russia, trying to steal Manchuria, and Turkey, in her massacre of the Armenians, have been outrageously wicked. We know that Spain, in her cruelties toward Cuba and the Philippines, and the United States Government, in its cruel treatment of the North American Indians, have done wrong. But though modern governments in some of their dealings with the weaker nations and with their own weaker subjects may have been sinfully culpable the present governments are as far ahead of the ancient governments in righteousness and justice as the brightness of mid-noon is ahead of the darkness of midnight.

Compare the conquests of our day with the conquests of ancient times. Like the eagles of ancient Rome, the British standard has been unfurled in every clime. It waves over an Empire greater than Rome ever dominated. What does England do when she conquers a country? Study her treatment of India. She immediately stamped out in India the horrors of infanticide and suttee. She immediately made the home safe and compelled man to respect the liberties of man. She gives to her subjects of every land she rules civil and religious liberty. She makes it possible for every man to worship God in his own way. What England has done for India and her other colonies the United States Government is doing for Alaska and the Philippines and Porto Rico. What did ancient Rome do when she conquered a country? Did she consider her conquered colonies a sacred trust? Did she care for their rights as carefully as she would care for her own people's rights? Oh, no. In ancient times the law of conquest implied the right to enslave and oppress the conquered foe. When Scipio Aemilianus returned from his celebrated Carthaginian wars what did he do? He brought back with him 60,000 of his late foes whom he had not slain upon the field of battle and sold them in the common slave markets to be the chattels of the Romans. These men who fought for their country's liberties now had to moan and wince and beg for mercy under the slave master's lash. When Caius Marius made his triumphal entry in Rome he handed over 140,000 Cimbri as spoils for the slave markets. Aemilius Paulus' conquest over the Greeks glutted the Roman slave markets with 150,000 captives of war, while the conquests of Pompeius and Caesar gave to Rome at least 1,000,000 new slaves. I ask you, are not our modern governments in their treatment of fallen foes more merciful and just than were the ancient governments?

The Governments are better and continually growing better. The churches are also purer in thought. They have higher ideals of spirituality and morality than they ever had before. It is easy enough for men and women to sit down and criticise the pew, and criticise the pulpit, and criticise the ways of raising church money, and criticise the choir loft, but I want to tell you that the church of the Lord Jesus Christ is not only purer in thought, but that the leaders of the churches as well as the common people are purer in their spiritual lives.

There is more tolerance and humanity in the modern church. In ancient times no mercy was shown by the leaders of the church to heretics. When they heard of men who differed from the doctrines of the church they immediately got together their thumbscrews and instruments of torture. They started forth with sword and spear and battleax. They said, "If you will not believe as we believe we will cut out your tongue and blind your eyes and cripple your feet and burn your homes and slay your sons and daughters." Read the history of the covenanters. Read the story of the massacre of St. Bartholomew at Paris. Read the history of the dark ages. Look at Charlemagne trying to convert his kingdom by having the priests drive the masses into the water like herds of cattle and there baptize them by the wholesale. Christianity became a matter of political allegiance. Individual conviction, spiritual purity, devotion to Christ, counted for little in those times. Men did not read or think. They accepted without question the dogmas of the leaders of church and state, some of whom were men without principle, openly immoral of life. Let us thank God that we did not live in those times. There is still much to be desired. We are still far from Christ's ideal, but as we read of those times of spiritual and moral darkness we realize how far the church has advanced.

So lax were the ideas of the Christian church a hundred years ago that after a presbytery meeting it was the usual custom for the presbytery to adjourn to a nearby tavern, and all the ministers would there openly drink their intoxicating liquor the same as the majority of the sports of a race track would now drink. The assistant pastor of my Chicago church told me when he entered the ministry every minister of the presbytery which ordained him, with the exception of one, publicly drank intoxicating liquors. Yet, he furthermore stated, that within a few years he lived to see all the ministers of his presbytery total abstainers and out and out temperance advocates, with but one exception. Among the records of a presbytery in the western part of Pennsylvania I have been told that one church elected one of its members an elder because that man on the day of the laying of a cornerstone of the church furnished a barrel of whiskey, so that all who came to the cornerstone laying could drink as much as they would.

Then, too, there is improvement in our creature comforts. The private homes of the present day have better wardrobes, better food, healthier and warmer living rooms, better pictured walls, better musical instruments, better carpeted floors, better libraries, better furniture, than they have ever had before. The common laborers of this day live far better than the common people of any other age have ever lived, while, on the other hand, the middle classes, to which most of us belong, live far better than the princes and princesses of old lived. It is about time for some of us to stop praising the "castled walls" of chivalric times. A Cinderella's slipper might change a peasant girl into a queen, but the average queen of the olden times did not have as many luxuries as many merchants' wives have at the present day.

I would sooner live in my present modest home than in the damp rooms where Mary, Queen of Scots, had to dwell. And as for the habitations of my grandfathers and grandmothers, they were places no living man would now put up with for a moment. We sentimentally talk about the andirons of the old fashioned fire hearth. Did you ever try the luxury of one? Most of the rooms of the old farmhouses had to be closed in winter, because they could never be kept warm. In the bedrooms the ice would freeze in the pitchers. In the kitchens our grandfathers would be hugging the fires and burning their coat tails on one side of them while they were having a whole carnival of chills playing hide and seek on the other side of their physical anatomies. Then our grandfathers, for the most part, had the pleasure of dressing without any woollen underwear next to their skins. They had the luxury of malarial fever, scarlet fever and diphtheria, which used to ravage almost every house on account of poor water and drainage. They had the luxury of sitting up in the house at night and using a small tallow candle light to read by when they were not too dead tired to read.

But, oh, if the well people, physically and mentally, are better off from a temporal standpoint in this day than they were in our grandfathers' and grandmothers' times, how much more ought the sick to be thankful unto him who is the Giver of all good gifts! Think of the merciful institutions which have been erected for the invalids, called hospitals! Think of all the marvelous wonders which have been discovered or invented by means of which pain can be driven away at the point of the surgeon's knife or cured by the physician's prescription! Think of the merciful angel "anaesthesia," who comes to the side of the operating table and lays the soothing hand of benumbment upon the twitching nerves and the agonizing brain! Tell me, O sick man, that this is not a better time to live in than those times in which our grandfathers lived!

Then to-day make a big inventory of the blessings of the modern public school system of America. In olden times it was the exception for the son or a daughter of a home to have what is called a liberal education. But though a hundred or even fifty years ago the man who had a liberal education was the exception, the man of the generation which is to come after us who is an uneducated man will be the exception. Oh, carping pessimist, do you not see any blessing to-day in the fact that you can educate your mind so that you can daily be the associate of the master minds of the centuries? Do you not see a blessing in the fact that Shakespeare and Burns and Scott and Irving and Motley and Prescott and Gladstone and Webster and Edison and Millet and Raphael and Angelo and Beethoven and Wagner and Thorvaldsen can all be invited to your study desk any night you will, to paint, or sing, or chisel, or preach, or teach for you? Education is not a mere affectation. Education is the wings of inspiration which lift a man up so that his horizon takes in all lands, all seas, all worlds and all ages.

Is not the opportunity of developing the mind and heart and the life of man by education a great advancement over the educational opportunities which were offered to the generations that are past and gone?

Thus at this glorious Thanksgiving time I find the world is not only growing better, but it is better than it has even been before. I find we have a better Government, a better church, better homes, better physical and mental men and women and better children to take our places after we are gone. Let us thank God on this coming harvest festival for what he has done for us. May we pray to him to give us strength to go on doing the work he has given us to do, and may the time come when our future work may yield even far greater harvests, mental, physical and spiritual, than the work of the past and the present have yielded. In thanking God for the blessings of the Thanksgiving Day of 1904 let us also thank him that as this Thanksgiving is better than any Thanksgiving in which our ancestors lived, so we may employ all our talents and energies to make this world even a better world in the future than it is at the present time.

German Puns.

The Germans are given to punning after a ponderous sort, and their language is well adapted to it. The eastern war gives them plenty of opportunities. At Berlin the newest name for the commander of the Russian armies in Manchuria is General "Kuroki-packten," meaning thereby that he has been "collared" (gepacht) by Kuroki.

At the time of the Dreyfus "affaire," too, the Berlin wits asked, "Wie tief ist Frankreich gesunken?" ("How far has France sunk?") "Drey-fuss," was the answer—"three feet."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON X, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, DEC. 4.

Text of the Lesson, II Chron. xxix, 18-31—Memory Verses, 28-30—Golden Text, I Sam. ii, 30—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1904, by American Press Association.]

The lesson today tells of the cleansing of the temple and the re-establishment of the worship of God in the reign of Hezekiah, for his father, Ahaz, did not right in the sight of the Lord, but worshiped Baal and the gods of the kings of Syria and put altars to idols in every corner of Jerusalem and in the cities of Judah and destroyed the vessels of the house of God and shut up the doors of the house of the Lord, so that the Lord brought Judah low because of Ahaz, king of Israel. He was not king of the ten tribes, but of the two, yet he is called the king of Israel (chapter xxviii, 2, 19, 23, 24) perhaps because Israel is always one nation before God.

When King Hezekiah kept his great passover, although he was not king of all Israel, yet he sent to all Israel and Judah to come to Jerusalem to keep the passover, and, while some only laughed and mocked, there were many of Asher and Manasseh and Zebulun who humbled themselves and came to Jerusalem (chapter xxx, 1, 10, 11). When Hezekiah began to reign he began at once to do right in the sight of the Lord by opening the doors of the house of the Lord and repairing them in the very first month of his reign (verse 3), and, calling the Levites, he said, "Hear me, ye Levites; sanctify now yourselves and sanctify the house of the Lord God of your fathers and carry forth the filthiness out of the holy place" (verse 5). They were obedient to the word of the king and began at once, but they were eight days cleansing the temple proper and eight more before they finished the work (verses 16, 17).

At least ten times in this chapter we have the expression "the house of the Lord," once "the habitation of the Lord" and once "the temple of the Lord," making twelve in all, so that we see at once the heart of the chapter, and the great work in hand is the cleansing and sanctifying of the house. The practical suggestion comes to each believer, Am I clean before God as His temple? If not, how shall I, as His temple, be clean and fit for His service?

The last verses of the previous chapter show us the condition of things which is all too common today—conformity to this present world, notwithstanding the commands here plainly given—and that in Rom. xii, 1, 2, "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed (transfigured) by the renewing of your mind that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." By the precious blood of Christ the sinner receiving Him is cleansed and made fit for the presence of God (Col. i, 12-14; Eph. i, 6, 7), but, then, there is a daily cleansing needed to fit us for His daily service, for it is as true of us as it was of the Levites, "The Lord hath chosen you to stand before Him, to serve Him, and that ye should minister unto Him and offer sacrifice" (verse 11, margin), the last clause having an explanation in Heb. xiii, 15, 16. This necessary cleansing reminds us of the request in our Lord's prayer, "Sanctify them through Thy truth; Thy word is truth" (John xvii, 17), and of Eph. v, 26, "That He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word."

When the Levites reported the cleansing completed, the king rose early and gathered the rulers and went to the house of the Lord and offered sin offerings and burnt offerings for all Israel (verse 24). If we had the spirit of Hezekiah, we would not think so much of our church or denomination as of the church, the body of Christ, of which we form a part if we are true believers and which we are here to hasten to its completion, for the church will be completed and presented to Himself a glorious church, holy and without blemish. Then all Israel shall be saved and after that the whole earth filled with His glory.

The sin offering speaks of Christ made sin for us, and the burnt offering points to Christ wholly for God (II Cor. v, 21; Heb. x, 6, 7). We must see Him as our sin offering before we can have fellowship with Him as the burnt offering. In connection with the burnt offering the singers sang and the trumpeters sounded until the burnt offering was finished (verses 27 and 28), for the Lord requires joyful service on the part of His people. Our Lord Jesus could say, "I delight to do Thy will, O my God." Even Paul could say by the grace of God, "I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses, for Christ's sake" (II Cor. xii, 10), and since He could take pleasure in these things that the power of Christ might rest upon him all believers should be able at least to "serve the Lord with gladness" (Ps. c, 2). They used the words of David and of Asaph and sang praises with gladness (verse 30).

Then Hezekiah said, "Now ye have consecrated yourselves unto the Lord come near and bring sacrifices and thank offerings into the house of the Lord" (verse 31). So the service of the house of the Lord was set in order, and the king and all the people rejoiced that the Lord had so prepared their hearts (verses 35 and 36). It is the Lord's pleasure that His joy should be fulfilled in us (John xvii, 13); that His joy should be our strength (Neh. viii, 10); that we should rejoice in the Lord always (Phil. iv, 4), but this cannot be so long as we tolerate any filthiness of the flesh or spirit.

Let us be whole heartedly His, and He will fill us with His joy and peace (Rom. xv, 13).

WHEN BESSIE CHURNED

By BLANCHE SEYMOUR

Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure

Bessie Martin was the only daughter, and only child for that matter, of Farmer Martin and his wife. She had come home from the academy on her summer vacation, and at nineteen years old she was handsome enough and cute enough to turn the heads of a dozen young men between daylight and dark.

Ever since her sixteenth birthday she had been "somewhat engaged," as she expressed it, to Will Burt, son of the village merchant, and previous to her going to school he had driven out to the farm once or twice every week. Farmer Martin and his wife had looked upon it as a case of "calf love" and had neither encouraged nor discouraged, but when three years had passed in the same fashion things had begun to look more serious. The engagement was announced, with the consent of the parents on both sides.

Love did not run smoothly, however. Bessie wanted to put in one more term and graduate, and Will insisted on marriage in the fall. Both being quick tempered and impulsive, they had had many a small quarrel before, but on this occasion it threatened to degenerate into something serious.

Will had driven out to the farm in the forenoon to urge the matter from his standpoint, and as Bessie had that day been chased by a cow, stung by a bumble bee and fallen down the back steps she was in no mood for gentle argument. It wasn't long before the pair were at loggerheads, and when the young man left the house to jump into his buggy and drive furiously away it was with the understanding that if he never returned no hearts would be broken.

"La me, but how silly!" exclaimed the mother as she came in from the kitchen and found Bessie kneeling on the floor, with her head buried in her lounge and sobs choking her utterance.

"Do—do—you—you suppose I'm going to let Will Burt boss me around as if I were a child!" exclaimed the girl as she sprang to her feet and dashed the tears away.

"I don't think he wants to boss."

"He does. He not only wants to boss, but he's selfish. I told him I'd almost been hooked by a cow, was stung by a bumblebee and had a fall, but did he sit down and hold my hand and pity me? Not a pity! He just went on to tell me that he could buy a house, and all that, and that we'd be married in October. He talked as if I had no voice in the matter."

"Oh, come now."

"It isn't as if I couldn't have forty other beaus if I wanted 'em. I don't like his saying that he's going to do this and he's going to do that, just as if he ran the earth. He knew I'd cry when he was gone, but did he even turn to look at the house when he drove away? He knows how it hurts to be stung by a bumblebee, but when I showed him the swelling on my left arm did he say it was too bad and kiss it?"

"He probably forgot," soothed the mother as she handed over her gingham apron as a tear wiper. "I know one time when your father was courtin' me I fell off a fence and"—

"But I'm not talking about you and pa," interrupted Bessie as a fresh assortment of sobs threatened to stick in her throat. "Will Burt finds me a sufferer, and what does he do to cheer me up? Nothing. On the contrary, he makes me miserable and drives me into saying that I could marry some one better than him before sundown. I know I could, too, but I—I"—

"Well, now, you go and lie down awhile until that bee sting gets better and you git over bein' nervous. Will will probably be out here tomorrow to beg your pardon and tell you that he is awfully sorry. I'll wet a rag in camphor and put it on your forehead, and if you can sleep for an hour or two you'll be all right. Your father and I had fifty different spats afore we were married, but never a one since. Come, daughter."

The girl slept not only for an hour, but for three. She was then awakened by her mother, who explained that she and the father had to drive to town to see about some legal business and that Bessie must mind the house for the afternoon. A quarter of an hour later they were off, and, after taking a little walk in the garden and reading a story, Bessie happened to remember that the cream was in the churn ready to be beaten into butter that evening, so she decided to go ahead with it. The churn was placed near the open kitchen door, and when she first sat down she had a book in her left hand. Thoughts of Will Burt were uppermost, however, and gradually the book sank down to her lap, and she worked the dasher and reflected at the same time:

"If I hadn't been chased by a cow, and stung by a bumblebee, and fallen down the steps and rolled over among the weeds, and was feeling all broken up it wouldn't have mattered, but he never pitied me, and he didn't ask to see the sting, and he wanted everything his way, and when he knew I was getting mad—and I say I won't stand it—I won't—I won't—I won't! If Will Burt doesn't come back and say he's sorry he can just go to pot, and I'll—yes, I'll marry some one else."

"Good for you, gal!" exclaimed a rough voice at the door, and she sprang away from the churn with a scream to find herself facing the toughest looking tramp she had ever seen.

"No call to git skeert, gal," he said as he entered the room and closed the door. "I was lyin' under the hedge when the old folks drove away, and I know you are alone in the house. I ain't half bad unless I'm riled. When I'm riled, then look out. Now, then, don't make any mistakes. Firstly, put some wittles on the table. Do as I say and you shan't be harmed. Do some other way and I pity you from the bottom of my heart."

The girl placed a meal on the table, and after ordering her to sit opposite to him the tramp fell to and satisfied his appetite. When he shoved back from the table he said:

"Now, then, I'm goin' through the crib. I might ask you to go along and p'int out where the valuables are kept, but I shan't take any chances. I see that there are wooden bars outside the pantry window, and in there you go till the old folks come home."

Bessie entered the big pantry without a word, glad to be out of the presence of the man. He fastened the door on her and then went on a prowl through the house. There was another door, however, which he had closed, but not bolted, the outside kitchen door. He was taking his time to make up a bundle of plunder when the door was softly opened by a sturdy young man.

Will Burt had gone away angry, as many a lover has done before, but he hadn't driven a mile before he wished himself back. Out of sheer pride he drove on to the village and tried to make himself believe he didn't care, but an hour after noon he was returning over the same road. He would not call, he said, but just drive by the farm and give Bessie a chance to call him in. He had driven up and down three or four times when the silence of the house began to mystify him and he forgot his dignity and hitched his horse. As he opened the kitchen door he saw that the pantry door opposite was fastened. Crossing the room, he pulled the stick from over the catch and was rewarded by a voice saying:

"Oh, Will, but I'm so glad—so glad!"

"I—I meant to kiss that bee sting," he replied, "and I was a brute not to. In fact, my dear, I was all to blame, and I beg forgiveness, and"—

"And there's a tramp in the house!"

* * * * * * *

"Waal, I should say!" exclaimed the mother as she entered the house an hour later. "Two fond hearts have been reunited, and here's an old tramp bound hand and foot and ready to be carted to jail and leave nuthin' but happiness in this family!"

Rock Caves as Homes.

A large number of the natives of Tenerife dwell in rock caves at the present time, while those who have made more progress inhabit huts that resemble the caves.

The dwellings of these islanders are simply large boxes, often built, if such a term can be used, on the rock. They have three completed sides without openings of any kind; the roof is practically flat, except that in the center it "dips" a little in order to catch the rain water.

The front of the hut has a door, which forms the only ventilation, and often the only means by which light can enter. This door is generally open, and the family sits either inside the hut quite close to the door or outside in the open. They usually have a kind of cellar, which is a natural or artificial excavation in the rock foundation, and in this cellar they keep a pig. Sanitation is decidedly primitive.

Arts of the Etruscans.

In the Etruscan museum at Rome in the Villa Papa Giulia, among the objects found at Falerii belonging to the sixth century before Christ, is a skull which has the gold mounting of several false teeth fixed in its upper jaw, very similar to the mountings used by dentists of our own day. Cremation is as old as the days of Romulus and Remus. If Romulus did not cremate Remus his contemporaries certainly cremated their dead, as is shown by the graves of this epoch recently discovered in the Roman forum. Historians have been accustomed to regard the Etruscans as belonging to a primitive era of civilization, but in some of their utensils they were astonishingly modern. Their bronze tripods for holding saucepans over lamps might have been copied from the kettle stands of the modern breakfast table except for the beauty of their workmanship.

Mr. Walpole Murdoch.

MR. WALPOLE MURDOCH.
Editor and Proprietor of the Hartney Star.

The proprietor and editor of the Hartney Star is a newspaper man of two decades of western experience. He was but a lad when he started the Birtle Observer—the parent of the present Eyewitness. This was in 1884, when the northwestern town confidently anticipated that it would be on the main line of the C. P. R., and be a centre second in importance to but few in the province. For years Mr. Murdoch stayed at the pretty little town on the banks of the Bird Tail. But the Observer did not observe much progress made by the ambitious and once hopeful little burg. The population of the town decreased instead of growing, and its importance as a trade centre grew less instead of greater. All that a newspaper could do to stem the falling fortunes of the place the Observer did. Issue after issue it pointed out the wealth of the rich agricultural section of which Birtle is the centre, and enlarged on the success that awaited those who properly tilled its fertile soil. But it was of but small avail. The number of settlers steadily decreased, as it did in many other parts of the West at the time. This is in no sense remarkable when the conditions are known. The original settlers of the district came in with little or no means. As soon as they had performed their homestead duties and secured their patents a majority of them mortgaged their farms, and abandoned them to the mortgage companies. With the money thus raised they moved to a newer district, took up a second homestead, as they were then enabled to do under the law, and with much larger capital were able to make a fresh start on a larger and more successful scale. While the individual settler so doing was benefited by this, it is obvious that the district must suffer thereby, and in fact the country around Birtle was, for some years dotted with idle farms owned by mortgage companies.

The Observer, as conducted by Mr. Murdoch, was in many respects a model local paper. None of the country papers of those early days were mechanically faultless. The conditions under which they were produced prevented that. But few, if any, could compare in point of typographical neatness with the one of which Mr. Murdoch was editor. Conscientiousness and thoroughness are the keynotes of Mr. Murdoch's character. No detail is too trivial for his attention, if that detail is necessary for the completion of what he has in hand. Typographical excellence is gained only by careful attention to numerous trifles, and that this attention was given by Mr. Murdoch the files of the Observer bear witness.

In due course Mr. Murdoch determined to change his location. He disposed of the Observer plant, and moved to Pilot Mound, where he established the Sentinel. This paper he made a conspicuous success, and one of the most looked-for among the growing list of provincial exchanges. Four years ago Mr. Murdoch disposed of the Sentinel, and acquired the Hartney Star, of which he is today the editor and proprietor.

The Star is housed in one of the best offices of any country weekly in the West. Its equipment is one of the most modern in the province, and in the range of its job type, and the taste displayed in its selection, it has perhaps no rival in any town of similar size in the West. Like all Mr. Murdoch's newspaper ventures, particular care is given to the typographical appearance and display, and the neatness of the Star's advertisements have almost passed into a proverb among the craft.

Mr. Murdoch's personal equipment for conducting a country paper is widely recognized by his fellow newspaper men. He has a fine mental poise. His temperament is calm and judicial. Partizanship or extremeness of belief are naturally foreign to his disposition. He is a practically believer and example of the old Oriental proverb, which says that there is no stick so short or so crooked but that it has two ends. Mr. Murdoch always wants to see all sides of a question before coming to conclusions. Naturally, therefore, he seldom makes up his mind as to policies hurriedly. As is equally natural, too, his mind once made up, he seldom has occasion to change his opinion. It is this finality and fairness in his arguments and reasonings that make his published opinions so weighty. Few editorial expressions carry so far as those of the Hartney Star, and the reason is to be found in the thoughtful personality whose ideas they reflect.

While all Mr. Murdoch's newspapers have been remarkable for this sanity and fairmindedness, there is another characteristic they have all shared in common to which reference ought here to be made—their keen observance of the world of nature. With Mr. Murdoch natural history amounts almost to a passion—not a bird or a beast or a flower of the prairie to which he is not a friend, and of whose habits of life he is not a storehouse of knowledge. His little articles on natural history are widely read and much quoted. In these days of the hurly burly of federal, provincial or municipal politics, and of the goings and comings of people, the reporting of whose movements constitutes too often the bulk of the news of a local paper, it is a refreshment to pick up the Star, and read therein some little article on the coming of the wild goose, the habits of the muskrat, the blooming of the anemone, or a description of some rare and beautiful mirage. Few among the busy workers in the West take the necessary time to familiarize themselves with nature. The fact that one of the western editors gives frequently the results of his own communion with the various forms of nature is, therefore, all the more appreciated. Many of his subscribers would doubtless notice the omission of some item of local news, but among those who from week to week look for the Hartney Star as one of the few exchanges for whose arrival they look with eagerness, the little nature talks that from time to time appear are always the first things sought for. Whatever modifications may from time to time be made in the Star, they hope this will remain a permanent feature.

Mr. Walpole Murdoch stands for and represents much of the very best in western journalism. His high personal principle in both private and public life, his keen observation, his fairness in discussion, his breadth of view and judicial temperament, together with his industry and progressiveness, make him a man of mark in his profession. The ranks of newspaper men in the West would be bettered if more men of Mr. Murdoch's type were found therein.

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY.

"Newton Abbot, Devon. Dear Sirs—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effect of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

"For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout and life had lost its attraction owing to the uncertainty of health and sudden visitations of the enemy which prostrated me for months, or weeks according to the virulence of the attacks.

"Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

"For the last twenty months I have been comparatively free, as one or two attempted visitations have been immediately stamped out by the assistance of Blair's Pills.

"Truly yours (Signed) Saml. W. Baker.

Washing Proves

There's only one real test of unshrinkable underwear—the wash tub. Two or three hard rubbings will soon shorten the usual so-called "unshrinkable" underwear. That's why the directions for washing are so elaborate—why there are so many "ifs" and "don'ts."

Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear

is absolutely unshrinkable. The wash tub proves it. Your dealer guarantees this to you—and we back up that guarantee to him. We know it won't shrink because it can't shrink. Our special process takes out the shrink before the garments are cut. Even then, each one is tested by washing.

BUYING CANADIAN WHEAT.

A despatch from Detroit says that scarcity of wheat in that part of the country is emphasized by two purchases made by the Commercial Milling Company, which has bought fifty thousand bushels of Manitoba wheat that will go to Detroit in bond and in the port of Detroit pay a duty of 20 cents a bushel. The wheat is of very fine quality, being better for flour making purposes than No. 1 northern. Another company has bought a smaller quantity of Pacific coast wheat to go to Detroit by rail at a freight rate of about the same per bushel as the duty on Canadian wheat. This expensive wheat is taken across the border because of the failure of the Michigan crop. This year's crop figured about 5,000,000 bushels, but probably not more than three million bushels is a good milling grain raise. Elevator stocks in Detroit at present consist almost entirely of northwest wheat.

"My Kindeys are all Wrong!

How shall I insure best results in the shortest time?" It stands to reason that a liquid specific of the unquestionable merit of South American Kidney Cure will go more directly and quickly to the seat of the trouble than the "pill form" treatment, and when it strikes the spot there's healing in an instant.—78

H.B.K. BRAND

BIG SHIRT

Made big enough for a big man to work in with comfort. Has more material in it than any other brand of shirt in Canada. Made on the H.B.K. scale it requires 39½ to 42 yards per dozen, whereas common shirts have only 32 to 33 yards.

That's the reason why the H.B.K. "Big" Shirt never chafes the armpits, is never tight at the neck or wristbands, is always loose, full and comfortable and wears well.

Each shirt bears a tiny book that tells the whole history of the "Big" Shirt, and also contains a notarial declaration that the H.B.K. "Big" Shirt contains 39½ to 42 yards of material per dozen.

Weakness from Poor Blood.

Causes Feeble Action of the Bodily Organs.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Entirely Overcomes Weakness of Every Form.

It may be weakness of the muscles or weakness of the nerves, weak action of the heart or feebleness of the organs of digestion, weakness of the liver, kidneys and bowels or weakness and irregularities of the organs peculiarly feminine.

WHEREVER LOCATED WEAKNESS IS DUE TO POOR, WEAK BLOOD AND CAN BE OVERCOME BY THE USE OF DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

Because digestion is impaired or the heart action irregular you have no reason to suppose these organs are diseased in themselves. They merely lack the nerve force which is in reality the motive power of the body and its organs.

A few weeks' treatment with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will convince you of its exceptional blood-forming and nerve-invigorating power, and by noting your increase in weight while using it you can prove that new, firm flesh and tissue is being added to the body.

Mrs. J. B. Tardiff, Mariapolis, Man., writesj "When I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food my health was in a terribly bad condition. My doctor told me that I was going into consumption, and for nearly three years my bowels were so loose and watery that I was continually kept weak and run down. In spite of the many remedies used I gradually grew worse and worse. I could scarcely get about the house and suffered a great deal from backache, stomach and kidney troubles.

"Dr. Chase's Nerve Food proved to be exactly what I needed and by keeping up this treatment for a time I got so strong and well that I did my own housework, and sometimes worked in the fields without feeling any the worse for it. It is a pleasure as well as a duty for me to recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

If you would be well and live in the full enjoyment of health, restore your vitality by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

THE COUNCIL MEETING.

EARLY CLOSING AND SUNDAY CLOSING BY-LAWS.

Medical Health Officer Appointed. Pound Keeper Dismissed. Another Violation Of the Fire-limit By-Law.

The council met on Friday last, with all the members present, Alderman Trites present. After the reading of the minutes several petitions and communications occupied the council for some time.

J. L. Gates asked that a small ditch be opened at the corner of Victoria Ave. and Hansen St. to connect with the ditch terminating at the ally on Jaffray St. This was referred to the works and property committee.

H. J. Johnson and Jas. Falconer wrote asking permission to put a drain across Victoria Ave near Hansen St. to connect with cess-pool. Petition granted on motion of Ald. Maclean and Liphardt.

A communication from L. P. Eckstein was read re the settlement of his bill in the matter of the incorporation of the city. The letter was laid on the table for consideration at the next meeting.

Dr. Bonnell wrote accepting the position of medical health officer of the city. Liphardt—Cree. That Dr. Bonnell be appointed medical health officer at a salary of $25 per month and that he in conjunction with the council draft a by-law to govern the sanitary conditions of the city and the duty of the officers.—Carried.

J. S. T. Alexander asked for the payment of the interest on the purchase price of the fire-hall lot. He was willing to allow the principal to run on for the present. On motion of Ald. Cree and Lundie the finance committee was instructed to pay this amount.

A petition largely signed, was presented asking for the closing of stores at 6 o'clock on all nights except Saturdays. It was pointed out that the majority of those on the petition were not qualified to sign it as only the merchants themselves had the right to petition for early closing. It was also pointed out that before a petition of this kind could be acted upon it was neccessary that at least 75 per cent of the merchants in each line of business express their approval.

The council took the matter up on their own initiative. Several of the members thought some restriction should be made and that a uniform closing hour should be observed. Finally upon a motion by Ald. Liphardt and Cree the city solicitor was instructed to draft an early closing by-law. In this by-law the hour will be fixed at 7 o'clock for every evening but Saturday.

The following finance report was passed.

Macleod & Brown, re Westlake	$10.00
Clarke Bros., & Co., books and rubber stamps	19.69
Coal Company, coal for fire hall.	3 50
N. E. Suddaby, stationery. etc.	18.25
J. D. Quail, desk, police office.	32.00
Elk Lumber Co.	1.80
Wm. Handley, drayage	3.75
R. Hammond, electric fixture	22.75
J. Barnsley & Co., handcuffs	21.00
Sundries, postage, telegrams	2.00
Taking prisoner to Nelson	25.35
	$160.09

The Sunday closing by-law, known as By-law No. 6 then came before the council. It was read a first time after which the council went into a committee of the whole with Ald. Liphardt as chairman to consider it clause by clause. It was then read a second and third time and passed. At the next meeting it will be finally reconsidered. The by-law makes it compulsory that all places of business, other than drug stores, and including barber-shops, be closed from 12 o'clock Saturday night until 1 o'clock Monday morning.

Wm. Eschwig's new frame structure at the rear of the Waldorf occupied the attention of the council. He had been warned by the fire wardens through the city clerk not to proceed with its construction. A resolution was passed instructing the chief of police to notify Mr. Eschwig to remove said building within one week.

The clerk referred to the crossing at the school corner and the chief of police was instructed to warn Mr. Cody to have the crossing replaced within a week.

On motion by Ald. Beck the Clerk was authorized to sign the vouchers for month of October for jail account of B. C. government. The city pays the government $15 a month for the use of the government building and the government pays the city 40 cents a day for keeping prisoners. In October the city had a balance of $4.55 coming from the government.

Complaints were made that the new pound keeper wasn't performing his duties satisfactorily and on motion of Ald. Lundie and Cree he was dismissed. The city clerk was authorized to advertise for a new pound keeper

The meeting then adjourned until Dec. 5th.

INQUEST AT CARBONADO.

Jury Exonorates the Coal Co. and all its Officials

The inquest into the Carbonado blow-out disaster was held on Monday before Coroner H. H. Trites. The government was represented by J. A. Harvey and H. W. Herchimer looked after the interests of the Company. W. F, Robertson Provincial Mineralogist of Victoria was present to make a report to the government.

The jury found that the deceased men came to their death from suffocation caused by a blow-out of gas and that "we are unable to find that any blame is attached to the Crows Nest Pass Coal Company or to any of its officials."

H. B. Wright, chief engineer, presented a map of the mine showing the different working places and where each body was found.

C. Simister, mine superintendent, was examined at great length. He described the duties of each man in the mine and gave a detailed description of the mine and the recovery of the bodies.

J. Darcy, the miner who had the thrilling escape threw little light on the subject. About a minute after Jenkins left him he felt a heavy wind coming from within the mine. A second later his lamp went out. At this time he heard a noise like that made by cars off the track.

Norman Fraser, overman, testified that the mine was apparently in its usual condition when he examined it on the morning of the blow-out. He found not the slightest trace of gas that morning. Jas. Darbyshire, fire-boss, was examined briefly. Inspector Morgan testified to the safe condition of the mine a few days previous when he examined it. No. 1 mine was the softest seam of coal he had ever seen. The various witnesses were all asked if they knew of any way to prevent blow-outs of gas and they each answered in the negative.

In the course of evidence it came out that the coal company had known of the gaseous condition of the drift in which the outburst occurred. There had been two previous outbursts. In consequence the drift was pushed very slowly, only one shift being worked in the 24 hours and only 200 feet have been gained consequently in the course of the past year. The idea was to permit of the gas to escape slowly. A previous outburst was the record of the world in gas outbursts, 1500 ton of coal having been blown out, but the present blow out is beyond all precedent.

Since the date of the blow-out 800 tons of loose coal had been removed. Estimates placed the entire amount of coal moved by this blow-out at 4000 tons.

THE COUNCIL MEETING

LIBERAL GRANT TO LOCATE FLATHEAD ROUTE

Stores and Barber Shops Closed on Sunday. A Heavy Finance Report passed J. G. Cummings Appointed City Engineer.

The city council met for the first time in their new quarters on Monday evening. Aldermen McLean and Trites were absent. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. The Special Committee of the Board of Trade wrote asking assistance towards putting through a preliminary survey of a road from Fernie to the Flathead. D. V. Mott, president of the committee and L. P. Eckstein, secretary, were present to urge the claim. Mr. Mott explained that a favorable report had already been made to the government of that part of the Fernie route south of where the proposed route joined the Michel creek. The most important thing therefore was to obtain a favorable report of the route from Fernie to that point. He presented to the council a letter received by him from J. G. Cummings, C. E.; P. L. S In this letter Mr. Cummings replied to questions as to probable cost. He stated that it was a difficult matter to make a close estimate but he believed that the undertaking would cost between four and five hundred dollars. In view of a possible arrangement with the city council to be appointed city engineer he would be willing to work at half the usual charge. The elements of cost would therefore be, per diem, surveyor $7.50, 3 men $7.50, food $2.00 pack-horses $2.00, incidentals $1.00 or a total of $20 per day. He believed the work would require about three weeks. Mr. Eckstein urged the necessity for prompt action in securing this information that the member might be in possession of all the facts before the next session met. Ald. Cree who was also a member of the committee spoke strongly in its favor. Each of the other aldermen and the mayor took the same ground. Ald. Beck raised the point as to whether the council had the power to vote money for purposes outside the city which accounts for the rider in the following resolution.

Cree—Liphardt. That the sum of four hundred dollars be appropriated from the city funds to assist to defray the cost of a survey to locate the best route for a road from Fernie to the junction of the Fraser River and the Flathead River. The above to be subject to the opinion of the city solicitor as to its validity. Carried.

Cree—Liphardt. That Mr. J. G. Cummings be offered the appointment of city engineer at a salary of $7.50 per day whilst engaged at city work. Carried.

Lee Yeng, through his solicitors Messrs. Eckstein and Lawe, wrote asking permission to build a wooden structure on which to dry clothes, the lower part to be used as a wood shed. If necessary he would be willing to tin it over. On motion of Ald. Lundie and Cree the request was refused. Ald. Beck though favoring the motion drew attention to the fact that the P. Burns & Co. had erected such a tin-covered building within the fire-limit.

Wm. Eschwig through his solicitors Ross & Alexander, asked that his outbuilding be allowed to remain on condition that he cover it with tin. The application was refused on motion by Ald. Beck and Liphardt.

Two applications, from A.T. Milne and and J. F. Bingham, for the position of pound-keeper were read. The former was accepted.

E. Von Der Osten engineer and surveyor of Toronto, asked for employment on the proposed sewer and water system of the city. Letter filed.

A petition from the merchants of Fernie was presented asking that the hour of closing the stores be six o'clock on all evenings except Saturdays and all evenings preceding holidays when the hour be ten o'clock, pay-nights excepted. The matter was referred to the city solicitor who stated that the council had not the power to legislate for a six o'clock closing The municipal act fixed the earliest limit at six o'clock coast time which was seven o'clock Fernie time. The other points of the petition were left for a subsequent meeting

The clerk notified the council that the insurance on the fire hall expired on the 3rd. He was instructed to have it renewed.

The following finance report was passed.

Ald. Cree of the Finance Committee explained why Messrs. Bell & Farquharson's account was not accepted. The account presented simply stated the amount for work and the amount the material cost. The committee wanted the account itemized and passed by the Works and Property Committee. The council upheld the Finance committee and also instructed the Works and Property committee to have all material used in all work done by day labor charged direct to the city council.

Mr. Alexander reported that he had gone over Mr. Eckstein's bill at the request of the Board of Trade and that he had cut it down to $150. After considerable discussion this amount was finally passed. Ald. Beck took strong exception to the account. He favored its payment only because of the recommendation from the Board of Trade. Ald, Cree and Liphardt spoke to the same effect.

Ald. Lundie presented a complaint from W. R. McDougall that he was unable to unload coal in his coal shed owing to the ditch recently dug in the lane behind his lot. An order was given to have a box drain put in at this place.

By-law No. 6, known as the Sunday Closing By-Law was then taken up for reconsideration. No changes were made and the By-law was finally passed and became law.

The city clerk was granted permission to purchase the necessary chemicals for the engine and to charge the same to the city.

Meeting adjourned until Dec. 15th.

ELECTION OF EXAMINERS.

The election of the miners' representatives on the Board of Examiners for the different collieries takes place to morrow. The candidates are;—Coal Creek, Thos. Addison, and Thos. Biggs; Michel, Harry Wakes and James Wylie; Carbonado. W. R. Robertson and Thos. Warriet. The government representatives were gazetted last week as follows; Coal Creek, John McCliment; Michel, Evan Evans; Carbonado, J. K. Miller.

DOUBLING ITS CAPACITY.

Granby Smelter Will Treat 5,000 Tons Daily.

Says the Grand Forks Gazette of Dec. 3rd.

"Last Wednesday morning work was commenced on three new furnaces at the Granby smelter, each of which will have a capacity equal to two of the furnaces now in use. It is expected that the furnaces now under construction will be completed by February, when it is unofficially announced that another three will be commenced, making in all twelve furnaces, with a combined daily capacity of something near 5,000 tons or over 2,000,000 tons a year. It is estimated that at least one new stack will be built and possibly two. In addition to these still greater improvements are contemplated by the Granby management in the near future.

OFFICERS INSTALLED.

OFF FOR THE FLATHEAD.

WILL PROVE FEASIBILITY OF FERNIE ROUTE.

J. G. Cummings and Party Left Yesterday To Make Preliminary Surveys From Coal Creek.

J. G. Cummings accompanied by Messrs. Randall, Miller and Sloan left yesterday on the survey expedition to the Flathead country. The party took three pack horses with them and ample supplies to last three weeks. The first consideration is the location of headquarters so that should deep snow come they will be independent of the pack animals. The headquarters will be beyond the first summit after leaving Coal Creek.

Mr. Cummings has supplemented his own knowledge of the proposed route with that of several others who have been over the trail and he has a fairly well defined idea of what he is about to do. Mr. Cummings intends to avoid several heavy grades reported by the government engineer, by following the side hills from Coal Creek summit to Michel Creek summit. After the latter place is reached the course is comparatively easy. The grade from Coal Creek to the first summit will be kept under 6 per cent. which is probably the heaviest grade on the whole route. The work is in good hands and the government may rely upon the accurate report which will be made.

THE FERNIE DANCING CLUB.

A meeting was held on Monday evening for the purpose of organizing a quadrille club. A large attendance was present and the meeting was successful in every way. The name of the new organization is "The Fernie Dancing Club." The officers are as follows,—President, Sherwood Herchmer; Vice-President, J. L. Gates; Secretary-Treasurer, A. N. Wilmot; Committee, Messrs. T. H. Whelan, Milton Kastner, A. H. Cree, G. H. Boulton and F. C. Lawe. Dances will be held fortnightly throughout the winter in the Stork Opera House, the first being on the 16th inst. Invitations will be issued by the management and gentlemen will be charged one dollar admission. Arrangements are being made with the Italian band for music.

OFFICERS WERE ELECTED.

Fernie Liberal Association Completed its Election of Officers on Monday.

The Fernie Liberal Association met in the Stork Opera House on Monday evening to complete the election of officers for the ensuing year. At the meeting last week W. A. Galliher was elected honorary president, W. A. Coulthard, president, and C. P. Higgins and W. Tuttle 1st and 2nd vice pres. respectively, by acclamation. The other offices were balloted on Monday with the following results, Secretary, F. J. Watson; Treasurer, F. C. Lawe; Executive Committee, Messrs. H. H. Trites, F. Stork, Jos. Aeillo, John Podbielancik, John Balko, R. Kerr. W. Campbell, Jas. McLean, E. A. Kummer, W. W. Leach, John Hunter, and J. A. MacLean.

CHASING DEER WITH DOGS.

Constable Dow, of Wardner, came to Fernie on Tuesday and reported that the Kootenai Indians were hunting deer with dogs south of Elko. He had gone out to stop them and had shot two of their dogs in the act of chasing the deer. This had aroused the anger of the Indians but they had refused to desist from their sport. Constable Walker accompanied Mr. Dow back on the same day to arrest the Indians.

NEW MANAGER ARRIVES

Mr. O. P. Boynton, of Washburn, Wisconsin, has been appointed general manager of the Elk Lumber and Manufacturing Company. Mr. Boynton arrived on Wednesday to take charge. He is a man of wide experience in all the departments of the lumber manufacturing business. There will be little change in the present management of the company, the heads of the various departments remaining as before.

The erection of the Company's large new mill is proceeding rapidly. The foundation of solid piling is completed and the frame work of the first storey, 18 feet in height is rapidly going up. To get an idea of the size of the new mill it is only necessary to look at some of the immense timbers. "Tooth-picks" fifty nine feet in length and fourteen inches square are going into the structure.

The frame will be covered as rapidly as possible that the inside work may be done during the inclement weather. The building will be completed by the end of April.

A great amount of work will be done by the company in making a suitable log-way. The natural slough will be dug deeper and wider and a new dam has to be constructed.

Another important work under consideration by this enterprising company is the erection of fifty cottages for the use of its employees. The company possesses plenty of lots in West Fernie for the purpose and when the mill plant is completed it is more than probable that the cottages will be built.

URGE A LUMBER DUTY.

Coast Lumbermen meet Several British Columbia Members at Vancouver.

An important conference took place at Vancouver on Monday between British Columbia lumbermen and Senator Templeman and Messrs. Ralph Smith, W. Sloan and Duncan Ross, M. P.'s elect, regarding the question of the imposition of a duty of $2 per thousand on rough lumber, thereby shutting out American lumber from Manitoba and the Northwest territories' market.

It was pointed out that while in 1903, imports of American lumber were 60,000,000 feet in 1904 they reached 140,000,000 feet.

As a result of this unfair competition many British Columbia mills were closed down and the industry would be ruined, it was claimed. It was further asserted that the imposition of a duty would not cause an advance in the price of lumber in the northwest. Farmers there enjoyed protection on their products and it was only fair that British Columbia lumbermen should be accorded protection.

Several of the lumbermen expressed themselves as agreeable to reciprocity in lumber with the United States which would increase their market.

Duncan Ross announced himself as in favor of the millmen's petition. Senator Templeman in reply, promised to lay the matter before his dominion cabinet colleagues and advised that a deputation be sent to Ottawa by the millmen in support of the petition.

COVERT--DAVIS.

Mr. I. J. Covert and Miss Norah Davis two of Fernie's popular young people were married at the home of Mrs Pruden, Cranbrook, by Rev. S. J. Thompson on Wednesday afternoon. The groom was supported by Mr. Wing, of Frank, while Miss E. Johnson, of Cranbrook, acted as bridesmaid. The happy couple returned to Fernie on the evening train and were taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell where a splendid wedding supper was spread for about thirty guests. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents. Mr. and Mrs. Covert have taken up their residence in their pretty cottage on Pellatt Ave, We join their many friends in extending heartiest congratulations.

THE G. N. R. INTO FERNIE.

CROSSED DIAMOND OVER C. P. R. THIS WEEK

Depot and Watertank Being Erected, Track Laying Completed Tomorrow. Ready for Through Traffic in a Week.

The steel on the M. F. & M. branch reached the C. P. R. track on Sunday. The diamond crossing was put in and on Monday the steel was continued parallel with the C. P. R. ynrds. The foundation for the new scales which contains 350 sacks of cement will be sufficiently hardened in a few days for the placing of the scales. The yardmaster's office has been moved and the junction with the C. P. R. track will be completed in a week.

Mr. B. F. Shanley contractor for the Great Northern buildings started this week on the new depot. The frame will be completed by to-morrow night. The building will be 30x76. This includes the baggage room. The depot is located on McEvoy St. The building will be completed by Dec. 31st. Mr. Shanley has the contract for four other buildings, including a section house and the engineer's offices.

The foundation for the new water tank has been commenced. The tank for fire protection purposes will be built at a considerable elevation and it will be one of the largest on the system. The round house at Swinton will be moved to Fernie and enlarged from three stalls to five.

The steel will all be laid by to-morrow night. Four tracks are down in the yard, and the gang is now busy laying the steel on the Y north west of the yards. The G. N. R. will be running scheduled trains to Fernie by Jan. 1st.

NEW YORK CAPITAL INTERESTED

The annual meeting of the Perry Creek Gold Dredging Co., was held in Fernie yesterday. A deal was put through by which the controlling interest passes into the hands of New York capitalists. These parties became interested in this rich placer property through Mr. A. Banks during his last visit to the east. By their aid it is understood that the company is placed in a solid financial standing to continue its costly operations on Perry Creek. The following officers were elected.

President, Arthur A. Brownlee; Secretary, Jas. R. Blake; Directors, Messrs. H. S. Fairchild, Chas. W. Abbot, Rougier Thorne, Emil Banks, and Albert Banks. The first five named gentlemen live in New York.

The headqnarters of the company are to be located at Fernie and Mr. A. Banks continues his work as managing Director.

THE K. C. R. SURVEY.

(Fort Steele Prospector.)

The Kootenay Central survey party in charge of T. S. Armstrong, were camped at Wasa this week. The survey has been completed from Windermere to Wasa.

The party are now engaged in running a line on the west bank of the Kootenay river to a point near Fort Steele Junction. As soon is this line is located, a line will be run from Wasa to Fort Steele, on the east bank of the Kootenay, thence south to a point on the Crow line near Jaffray. It is reported that if sufficient west bound freight is secured the line on the west side will be built. The main line of the Kootenay Central will be located and constructed on the east side of the Kootenay from a point about four miles north of Wasa to a point on the Crow line near Jaffray.

The survey party will move their camp to the vicinity of Fort Steele some time during the coming week.

BORN

DAVIS—At Fernie, on Dec. 8th, the wife of Mr. Davis, of a son, (stillborn).

A special meeting of the city license board will be held this evening to consider two applications for new licenses. These are William Mills, the Waldorf, and Antonio Caravetta, the Calabia Hotel. The regular meeting takes place on Dec. 14th but as Mr. Broley one of the commissioners, is leaving the city to-morrow it was thought best to have the applications for new licenses considered by the whole board.

A MOMENTOUS MISSION

EVIDENCE OF THE UNSEEN ONLY BASIS OF MUCH KNOWLEDGE.

THE GREAT MODERN BATTLE

Claims of Infidelity and Christianity Considered in a Manner Which the Unbiased Searcher After Truth Will Gladly Welcome—Mass of Evidence, Direct and Collateral, Overwhelmingly in Favor of the Latter.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 27.—In the great battle that is being waged between infidelity and Christianity this sermon introduces a mass of evidence, direct and collateral, which the unbiased searcher after truth will gladly welcome. The text is Hebrews xi, 1, "Faith is the evidence of things not seen."

What is evidence? Testimony, proof, demonstration. It is a statement of facts made in court by a witness, by which a juror is led to believe something that his eyes have not seen nor his ears heard. It is the alibi by which a man proves that he could not have been on the scene of a crime. It is the proof which a wrongly evicted owner produces of his right and title to an inheritance. It is an argument from admitted and existing facts to prove the operation of causes remote in time. It is the means by which truth defends itself against the onslaught of error and the weapon with which it overthrows the fortresses of superstition and false doctrine.

Evidence of the unseen has a momentous mission. For the greater number of us it is the only basis we have for our knowledge. If we were to believe in nothing that we have not ourselves seen we should have to give up our belief in facts and events innumerable. "It is not necessary for me to go and see London before I believe that there exists such a city as London," once wrote a great Bible commentator, in reference to my text. I know that such a place as St. Petersburg exists, although I have not seen it. Why? I am convinced by the testimony of those who have seen it. The "evidence of things not seen" has proved to me that it exists. I have read books written about the city of St. Petersburg. I have seen pictures of the great buildings of that Russian capital, its cathedrals, its royal palaces, its memorial halls on its magnificent boulevards. I have heard my friends, who have traveled among the Muscovites, describe its bridges and its citadels. Why should I then doubt St. Petersburg exists, although my eyes have never seen it?

For days and weeks the old North American Indians could follow their foes by the tracks left upon the ground by the enemy. They could tell by those tracks how many men, how many women, how many children, how many horses and how many wagons and cattle composed the party ahead. They could unerringly read all these facts by the "evidence of things not seen." In the same way in which the Indian warriors of old followed their enemies by visible signs we may find the "footprints of the Man of Galilee" not only in Palestine, but also in all sacred history. We may prove by the same process that Jesus is not a mere vision and that our gospel faith is not merely a poetic dream. They are far more than these. Our faith is rational. It is founded upon the conclusive "evidence of things not seen."

First, our faith is rational. Its geographical foundation stones are strong and true and well anchored. I not only find "the footprints of the Man of Galilee" visible all through Palestine, but, as Dr. Thomson once wrote, I find the land and the book are one. I find, by going among the holy hills, that Jesus was not a mythical character, living among mythical people in a mythical age. Christ was God; Christ was also a man. He lived, he breathed, he walked, he slept, he ate, among those Hebrew people of the east as one of themselves. We find the place of his birth. We can find the places where he passed his boyhood, where he went as a man, where he died, where he was resurrected and the hill from which he ascended.

The land and the book are one. The personality of Jesus Christ, in the first place, has a true, a vitally true, geographical setting. No Bible student ever walked the Judaean Hills with eyes truly opened to the divine trutn that he did not have his belief in Jesus Christ irrevocably sealed and infinitely strengthened by the conformation of eastern customs and geographical facts with the recorded biographies of Christ's life. Henry A. Harper, the great archaeologist, the author of that marvelous book entitled "The Bible and Modern Discoveries," presses home this statement upon his readers in a powerful way. I might go on and quote scores of testimonies just like Dr. Harper's in reference to the harmonies of the Christ life with the geographical facts and the Hebrew customs of the Palestine hills.

Studying to-day the "evidence of the things not seen" in reference to Jesus Christ, is there nothing rational, nothing overwhelming, to you in the harmony between the opened leaves of eastern rocks and the biographies of the four gospels? Is there nothing marvelous to you in the fact that there is not a detail in all Christ's earthly life which cannot be verified by the rocks of the Palestine hills and valleys, which are absolutely in accord with one another? The men who wrote the Bible were not historical novelists like the author of the "Tower of London" or of "Kenilworth" or of "Romola" or of "The Crisis." They did not accept historical facts when they wanted to use them for the benefit of their plots and reject those facts when it did not suit their convenience to use them. They did not put Christ in imaginary places at impossible times and put fictitious and impossible statements in the mouth. Almost every detail of Christ's earthly life can be verified by geographical position and eastern custom.

Jesus was not a mythological character. "Before you can obliterate the story of Jesus Christ from this the story of Jesus Christ from this earth, on which he so sublimely lived, you will have to grind out of sight and forever erase the sacred hills of Palestine," once wrote David Gregg in a book for which authorship he was elected an honorary member of the Royal Geographical Society of London. "You will forever have to grind out of sight the sacred hills of Palestine, where Christ was tempted, and where he preached his wonderful sermon, and where he was transfigured, and where he died, and where he ascended. God be praised for the gospel according to geography! God be praised for the Holy Land, with its Jordan and Bethlehem and Hermon and Zion and Calvary and Olivet! These are all indestructible pages of the divine and indestructible book. These are all witnesses that Christ has spoken to men and lived among men and wrought out salvation for man." Christ was a God. Yes, Christ was a man! By the evidence of the pages of rock I know it!

But we find Christ as the "evidence of things not seen" in another way. By the fulfillment of Scripture prophecies in reference to his birth, his life, his death and his resurrection we know that the prophecies of his second coming will be fulfilled as well as was his first coming. We know there will come a time when, upon the white horse of victory, Christ shall ride down the blue hillsides of heaven. He shall come to put all his enemies under his feet. He shall come to claim his own. For then his name shall be written, "Kings of kings and Lord of Lords." We know by the words of his own lips that as he has gone to heaven for a little while to prepare a place for his children, so he will come again and receive them unto himself, that where he is there they may be also.

The prophetic studies of the Bible are among the most instructive and fascinating of all the Scriptures. But in order to limit our studies let us confine our thoughts for but a brief moment to the wonderful birth and life and death of Jesus Christ. No rational man can read the fulfilled prophecies in reference to the birth of Jesus and not declare that his nativity was divine. Supposing I should come to you some day and say: "Mrs. So-and-so, that little child of yours is going to have a wonderful history. When he gets to be eighteen years of age he is going to the Far East and will settle in one of the Pacific islands. Then he is going to be elected ruler over that island, and the people are going to obey him as their ruler and their king. Then he is going to marry and have children, and his children will have children. His descendants are going to reign in that island for hundreds of years. Then one of his descendants hundreds of years from now is going to visit London, and while there he is going to have a child born in the outskirts of London, in the suburb of Chelsea. Then that child is to stay in England and grow up and become a leader of the people until at last the King of England will become jealous of him, and he will be hanged in the Tower of London."

Suppose I should ramble on in a long rigmarole like that in reference to your baby, what would you say? Why, you would look at me askance and then say: "You are crazy! No uninspired man can look into the future and tell what is going to happen to my descendants thousands of years from now. A crank or a fool might happen for once to declare aright, that it will snow in Canada in July—as one weather prophet did a few years ago. But to declare what is to happen a thousand years from now, that is beyond all range of human possibilities." Yet the astounding statement that I made a few moments ago in reference to a little child is not nearly as wonderful and seemingly absurd from a human standpoint as those Messianic prophecies which were not made by one, but by many writers of the Old Testament in reference to the birth, the life, the death and the resurrection of Jesus Christ. When the wise men came to Jerusalem to find the newborn King, who was yet to be "King of kings and Lord of Lords," what answer was given to the Oriental strangers by those learned in the Hebrew law? They promptly answered, "In Bethlehem," and gave for their authority the words of the prophet Micah, who lived and wrote 700 years before Christ was born. Yet, when the wise men went to Bethlehem, they found there the infant Christ, as Micah had foretold. Is not this fulfilled prophecy a startling evidence that Jesus was born a man, yet that he was the Being whose divine attributes were foreseen by the prophets?

But the divinity of Jesus Christ is found in the testimony of Christ's contemporaries as well as in the prophecies of those inspired men who lived hundreds of years before Christ was born. It is not only found in the gospel biographers of Jesus, who knew Christ personally, but also in the testimony of such mighty personalities as that of Paul, who was martyred in Rome about 67 A. D., and Ignatius, who was martyred in 100 A.D., and Polycarp, who lived to be nearly ninety years old and was martyred in 155 A.D. These men did not live hundreds of years after Christ was born. By direct touch with events they were able to prove with their own eyes and ears if Christ was a fraud or whether Jesus truly placed the stamp of his divinity upon his life's work by the miracles he wrought.

Explain away the prophecies? Oh, that is impossible! And yet it would be no less difficult to explain away the testimonies of the contemporaries of Jesus Christ, who declare that Christ was divine. Why? Because, as I read those testimonies, I find, with but one exception or possibly two, they were all sealed with the life-blood of martyrdom. Here is the honor roll: Matthew was slain with a sword in Ethiopia; Mark was dragged through the streets of Alexandria until his brains were dashed out and the matted hair stuck to the walls and the rocks; Luke's mode of death is not known positively, but tradition says he was slain for Christ; John, the only apostle who died a natural death, was not only exiled, but also cast into a caldron of boiling oil; James the Great was beheaded in Jerusalem; James the Less was hurled from the top of the temple to the ground and there beaten to death with a club; Stephen was stoned to death; Philip was hanged; St. Bartholomew was flayed alive—that means his skin was peeled off from his quivering flesh while he was yet conscious, the bystanders standing about the sufferer at the time and mocking him; Andrew preached from the cross while the people scoffed at his dying agonies; Thomas was pierced by a lance; Simon Zelotes was killed in Persia; Mattahias was murdered; Paul, Polycarp, Ignatius and scores of others were all, as I said before, martyred. Is it rational to suppose that those men who lived in Christ's time, who were able to verify his miracles, would have been willing to endure hardship and persecution and finally to lay down their lives for Christ if they knew him to be an impostor? Why, the supposition is absurd!

But not only do we find the "footprints of the Man of Galilee" marked side by side with the footprints of his disciples who lived 1,800 years ago, but also with his disciples who are living by our side at the present day. And, wonderful to state, Christ's footprints are best revealed when he has been walking with the vilest of modern sinners and outcasts, as they were when he walked by the side of Mary Magdalene and talked with the women at the well of Samaria and followed Zaccheus to a despised publican's house, built by the stolen moneys of a Roman tax collector.

Oh, Christ worked some wonderful miracles when he was upon earth among the publicans and the sinners! But I do not believe a greater example of his power over sin and disease was ever more convincingly manifested than when he alleviated the sufferings of those unhappy maniacs whom the writers of that time describe as being possessed by devils. That was a vivid picture that Christmas Evans drew of the return to his home of that man whose home was among the tombs, where he dwelt like a wild beast, a misery to himself and a terror to others. No sooner was he delivered by the mighty word of Christ than he started off to hunt up his wife and children. No sooner did the wife see him coming than she was struck dumb with fear. Then she cried: "Run, children! Run to the house and bar the doors! Your father is coming! Run or he may kill us!" The family hastened into the house, while the older boy started off to the neighbors for help. They barred and barricaded the windows and the doors of the house. But, strange to say, as the trembling wife and children saw the father and husband come nearer, instead of seeing him foaming at the mouth and flashing his eyes and of hearing him rave with his cursing lips, they saw him with a loving smile upon his happy face. He kept calling to his wife: "Mary, open the door! Do not be afraid. It is I, your husband, freed from all my devils. Mary, open! Jesus has saved me! Jesus has saved me!"

Oh, I know Christ can. I know Christ will if we will only let the "evidence of things not seen" do their work. The great trouble with most men who do not believe in Christ is not that they reject him. They do not do that only by the sins of omission, but they do not accept Christ because they will not study the "evidence of things not seen" as evidence. If a man will only study the facts about Christ all his thoughts and feelings will be different.

This studying of the gospel evidence as evidence has won the allegiance of many of our greatest lawyers to Christ as well as laymen. This fact was true of the conversion of Salmon P. Chase, the great Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. Many years ago, after Senator Chase had been in the active practice of the law for some time, he one day unemotionally made up his mind to this one action. He said to himself practically this: "Now, Chase, the Bible is the great religious book of my country. Jesus Christ is the incarnate God who is here worshiped. As an educated gentleman as well as lawyer I should know what that Bible contains and whether or not I should give that Christ my allegiance or contempt." Thus as a lawyer he went to work. With all the power of one of the most brilliant judicial minds this country ever produced Salmon P. Chase tried to find out whether "the statutes of the Lord are right." He weighed calmly and deliberately all the evidence made in Christ's favor. Then, after he had weighed and compared both sides, he rendered his verdict. Salmon P. Chase, in the quiet of his law study, said this: "The Bible is true. Jesus is divine. He died to save me. I accept that sacrifice for my atonement of sin. I here and now promise to serve him all the rest of my earthly life that I may dwell with him in glory." Like Chief Justice Chase, are you and I ready to-day to accept Christ's promises of love by the gospel power of the "evidence of things not seen?" Will it win you, O sinner, to-day for Christ?

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON XI, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, DEC. 11.

Text of the Lesson, II Kings xvii, 6-18—Memory Verses, 16-18—Golden Text, I Pet. iii, 12—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1904, by American Press Association.]

The first verse of our lesson and the opening verses of the chapter state the fact that Shalmaneser, king of Assyria, carried the ten tribes of Israel into captivity. He first subdued them and made them tributary to him, but when he found that Hoshea, their king, was secretly treating with the king of Egypt and failing to pay tribute to Assyria, then he made him a prisoner and carried Israel away. Verses 7 to 12 give the reason why God permitted this. The ten tribes had persistently sinned against Him, doing just like the heathen whom He had cast out before them, walking in their statutes and serving their idols, whereof the Lord had said unto them, "Ye shall not do this thing" (verse 12). In chapter xviii, 10-12, the summary is that in the sixth year of Hezekiah, king of Judah, which was the ninth year of Hoshea, king of Israel, Samaria was taken, after a three years' siege, and Israel was carried away into Assyria, because they obeyed not the voice of the Lord their God, but transgressed His covenant and all that Moses, the servant of the Lord, commanded, and would not hear them nor do them.

Hosea, the prophet, had warned them that because of their rebellion against God Samaria would be desolate and her people fall by the sword (Hos. xiii, 16). In the very beginning of their history He had warned them by His servant Moses that if they would walk contrary to Him and persist in it He would bring their land into desolation and scatter them among the heathen (Lev. xxvi, 32, 33; Deut. xxviii, 36, 64; xxix, 27, 28). Because He is slow to anger and plenteous in mercy He bore long with them. From Jeroboam, son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, to Hoshea's ninth year was about 260 years, and during all that time there was not one ruler who taught them to do right in the sight of the Lord. All walked in the steps of Jeroboam, Omri and Ahab being two of the worst. Because judgment was not promptly meted out to them they probably thought that it would never come—that God did not see or did not care.

It was and is ever true that "because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil" (Eccl. viii, 11). The scoffers of the last days are in our midst. They walk after their own lusts and say, "Where is the promise of His coming? for since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation" (II Pet. iii, 3, 4).

There were scoffers in the days of Noah (Job xxii, 15-18), in the days of Lot (Gen. xix, 14) and in the days of Enoch (Jude 14-16), but the deluge came and the fire from heaven, and all the ungodly perished. And so it will be again, for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it, "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with His mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of His power when He shall come to be glorified in His saints and to be admired in all them that believe in that day" (II Thess. i, 7-10).

These and similar sayings seem hard, and many will not receive them, but they are from God, who is love and who is not willing that any should perish, and He has in love warned people of the result of despising His love. He loves all people, but He cannot love sin. Concerning Israel He said, "I have given the dearly beloved of My soul into the hand of her enemies" (Jer. xii, 7); "O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself, but in Me is thine help;" "O Israel, return unto the Lord thy God" (Hos. xiii, 9; xiv, 1). By all the prophets He testified against Israel and against Judah, saying, "Turn ye from your evil ways and keep My commandments and My statutes," but they would not hear Him. They did not believe in the Lord their God. Therefore the Lord was very angry with Israel and removed them out of His sight. There was none left but the tribe of Judah only (verses 13-18).

For a little while longer He bore with Judah, but they also mocked the messengers of God and despised His words and misused His prophets until the wrath of the Lord arose against His people, till there was no remedy (II Chron. xxxvi, 16). In due time, long after their return from captivity, God sent to them His Son, but Him they also despised and rejected and crucified, and among His last words to them are these: "How often would I have gathered you and ye would not. Behold, your house is left unto you desolate, for I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth till ye shall say, Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord" (Matt. xxiii, 37-39).

In this age, the age of Israel's rejection, we are now living, and the risen Christ at God's right hand is gathering out from all the nations by His spirit and His word, His body, the church which shall reign with Him when He shall return for the restoration of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began (Acts iii, 20, 21). Like the true prophets of God, we are to be His faithful witnesses whether men will hear or forbear, and rejoice that we are unto God a sweet savor of Christ in them that are saved and in them that perish (II Cor. ii, 15), and that in spite of all obstacles His purpose shall be accomplished.

FAMOUS NEGRO COLONY

FORMED BY FUGITIVE SLAVES, HAS BECOME A "DEAD VILLAGE."

Village of Buxton, in the County of Kent—Has Played a Curious Part in the Emancipation of the Black Man—Problem of the Failure of Its High Promise Still Puzzles the Sociologists—Abel Coxfield, Negro Scholar.

Ontario's model negro colony, a relic of the turbulent scenes incident to the flight of fugitive slaves via the "underground railroad" from the Southern States, has played a curious part in the great tragedy surrounding the emancipation of the black man.

Any story of the great American drama is scarcely complete without reference to this northern terminus of the mysterious system for the moving of human freight commonly designated as the "underground railroad." Born of the privation of the runaway negro just tasting the fruits of his dearly earned liberty, the village became a factor in the tremendous results of the Civil War, says The New York Herald.

This is the same model village to which President Abraham Lincoln sent the committee headed by Secretary Seward and eminent humanitarians to inquire into the manner in which these former slaves were progressing in the arts and industries as freemen. But it is apparently in accord with the fitness of things that the colony held up to the attention of the civilized world as a municipal model of the nineteenth century, though inhabited by negroes who were but a few years removed from a condition of slavery, has degenerated, with nothing to suggest the successful experiment in political economy that Buxton was proclaimed at the breaking out of the Civil War.

ABEL COXFIELD,

As the followers of John Brown and William Lloyd Garrison pointed to Buxton in 1860 as a splendid example of what the human chattels of the South might accomplish under the beneficent influence of freedom, the opponents of the theory may today refer to Buxton, Ont., as one of the melancholy failures of the negro to flourish commercially and industrially when granted absolute political liberty.

More than twelve hundred fugitive slaves were settled at Buxton when the Civil War broke out. As many more frightened bondmen made their way to this city of refuge before the great conflict ended. The trade energy of the place was marvellous and attracted attention from all parts of the world. The negroes entered upon the enjoyment of full political rights equal to those of the regular British subjects.

Gradually the industrial conditions changed. The negroes sold their lands or lost them through indifferent business capacity. Many moved back to the very section from which they had fled, others going to Kansas and still others to Liberia, until to-day little remains to denote the site of the model black man's town but a few aged former slaves and their children, occupying rented farms and residences owned by their white neighbors.

Here is a lesson in political economy that exhibits the colored man in a curious light. To what is the failure of the model city due? Canadians don't seem very clear as to the forces that contributed to present conditions. All they know or seem to care is that Buxton, once famous as the seat of culture and trade energy of the negro fugitives from the Republic, scarcely has a place on the maps of British North America.

It was a picturesque scheme with which the Rev. William King, the English minister, startled the people of Ontario and the States adjacent to the South in the years just prior to the civil war. Youngstown, N.J.,

BUXTON POSTOFFICE.

and Detroit, Mich., were the Northern termini of the mystrious line of flight sought by the slaves in escaping from the Ohio River into Canada. Dr. King called upon the Rev. Charles Royce, of Youngstown, that sturdy old Methodist minister who had for years busied himself in receiving and forwarding the traffic of the "underground road" to freedom from that point. They visited Detroit, where the Rev. Myron Foster of Boston, the friend of John Brown of Lincoln, was doing the same service for the new route to freedom at that edge of the line. These three went down to Toledo, Ohio, where the road branched coming from the South.

Considering that the war between the States could not long be delayed and that some provision must be made for the influx of fugitive slaves into Canada, the Dominion Government made a crown grant to Dr. King of ten miles square in the western peninsula of Ontario to be devoted to the settlement of negroes.

The model village was located in the centre of his land in what now is Kent county. Each negro was given one hundred acres at $1 per acre, to be paid for in three years, and the means to clear a part for agricultural purposes was supplied from English sources. This land was heavily timbered and the revenue from this source was enormous. Two of the first fugitives to arrive from the South after the town of Buxton was laid out were Martha Parks, a young colored woman, and Harrison Webb, a black giant. It is a curious fact that these two pioneers still reside on the land then allotted to them, the only examples of persistence and settled purpose among these people of Buxton who remain in a prosperous condition today.

Six years ago Dr. King died and was buried in the churchyard of the village he established, among his negro friends. It is said by many white settlers in and around Buxton that the negroes were imposed upon by the shrewder whites with whom they came in contact. From mortgaging their lands they gradually sold them and drifted away. Detroit received many of the younger generation. Some drifted to Windsor and to-day along the western branches of the Wabash, Michigan Central and Grand Trunk railroads in Western Ontario may be found many of the descendants of these fugitive slaves, but slightly improved intellectually over their slave ancestors, improvident, happy and indifferent to their political obligations—the characteristics that have caused so much bitter dispute in Dixie Land.

The stores of Buxton are conducted by whites, though their only patrons are negroes. The college, that at one time had 160 negro students, has been closed, and less than a hundred dilapidated houses stand to mark the site of a once thriving town with some manufacturing prestige. This is the curious story of the degeneration of the black men who fought so hard to reach a land where they could taste the sweets of freedom.

The village postmistress is a negress and she has held the office for sixteen years. She declares the negroes are "trifling" and divides her care of the postal service with her nine children, while her husband works on a rented farm near by. Abel Coxfield is the ablest negro left in the settlement—a fine type of the pure blood Ethiopian, well educated and a school teacher by profession.

MR. EDWARD GURNEY.

Edward Gurney is the only son of the late Edward Gurney, native of Holland Patent, N.Y., who, in company with his brother Charles, laid the foundation in Hamilton in 1842 of the well-known foundry business of E. & C. Gurney. He was born in Hamilton in August, 1845. After receiving a general education at the local schools of that city, he entered his father's workshops, where he was given a thorough training as a moulder and made familiar with all the other departments of the trade. In 1869, on being admitted to the firm, he removed to Toronto, where he was placed in charge of a branch of the business then being opened up. From a comparatively small beginning the works at Toronto have been gradually enlarged and the business extended until to-day both are easily the largest of their class in the Dominion, and take rank with the largest concerns of the United States. In 1891 the firm become an incorporated company under the name of The Gurney Foundry Co., Ltd., with Mr. Gurney as President. A second branch of the business was established in Boston in 1887.

Mr. Gurney has always taken a keen interest in public affairs and has filled from time to time a number of important offices. He was President of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association in 1879-80, and of the Toronto Board of Trade in 1897. More recently he was elected to the Presidency of the Crown Bank. He is also a member of the Temiskaming Railway Commission.

Those who have been associated with Mr. Gurney in office have found him a most delightful man to work with. His cheerful optimism and wonderful determination are a constant source of encouragement, while his shrewd judgment in matters of business makes him a tower of strength to any committee fortunate enough to have him for a member. He is a clear thinker and a polished speaker, and never fails to captivate his audience by the undercurrent of quiet humor which pervades nearly all of his remarks.—Industrial Canada.

MR. FRANK LUSH.

Editor and Proprietor of the Deloraine Advertiser.

To those unfamiliar with the circumstances which condition newspaper work in the Canadian West, few things are more remarkable than the way that two, or even three, successful newspaper ventures are carried on in towns so small that in the East there would not have been one local paper—and successful papers, too, are issued from places that have populations of less than two hundred people, and dozens of places could be cited as having populations of less than a thousand from which two good papers are issued each week. In part, this is due to the larger territory these papers serve, in comparison with similar papers published in the East. The more congested population in that part of Canada, and the greater nearness of the towns to each other, and, principally, the rapidity with which the train services allow the big dailies of Toronto and other cities to come to almost every one of the villages and small towns. But in the West the circumstances are different. This is a country of magnificent distances. News takes long in travelling, when the means of communication is a bi—or tri-daily mail service, and the impatient go-a-head-itiveness of the average Westerner will not tolerate any such delay. But there is another important factor that has a bearing on the western newspaper business. The citizens of almost every village regard their chosen location as destined to become one of the important centres of the West. They survey it, not in the light of actual accomplishment, but by the eye of faith. In their minds' eye the primitive shack and the temporary store are replaced by the handsome brick or stone block and the commodious office suite. With true progressiveness they recognize that if their dream of civic and commercial growth is to come true, the widest possible publicity must be given to the advantages offered by their town. And, since they know that there are dozens of other towns competing against their own for pre-eminence, they seek to have established at as early a date as possible in their town's history a town newspaper. If the publisher arises to the level of his opportunity—if his paper worthily reflects, not alone the news, but the hopes and ambitions of the place from whence it is issued, he will have no reason to complain of any lack of support. The western paper that is loyal to its home town will in every case find the town a loyal supporter, and the intensity of its support is in many cases in inverse ratio to the town's size.

The Deloraine Advertiser is an illustration of the truth of the foregoing remarks. Deloraine is not a big town. If it were in Ontario instead of Manitoba it would not be remarkable if it had no local paper at all. But, being in Manitoba, where a local paper is considered almost as much a matter of course as a postoffice, it has two. Furthermore, both are successful. The appetite for reading of all kinds grows by what it feeds on, and a community that has one good paper will very probably support another, provided the second is conducted with equal or greater ability. The instinct of fair play, inherent in Canadians, will make many want to understand both sides of an argument, and hence subscribe to papers presenting opposite political views. Perhaps this fact had somewhat to do with the success of the Deloraine Advertiser. Its competitor, the Deloraine Times, was an old established and reliable supporter of the Liberal policy. It presented its case, generally with moderation, and often with skill. But it was published in a district the political complexion of which was preponderatingly Conservative, and hence, when Mr. Frank Lush, decided that he would locate in Deloraine, and publish a local paper of Conservative tendencies, he found a clientele to which he could cater, and encouraging prospects for success. This was more than five years ago, and events have abundantly justified his judgment.

Mr. Lush had come west in May, 1898, and up to the time of his locating in Deloraine he had had an uphill fight against fortune. He had come out from Ontario at the invitation of some citizens of Napinka, who wanted that place to have its own local paper. Whether or not they misrepresented to Mr. Lush the size of their town, and overstated the measure of support they were prepared to accord the venture, or whether, with characteristic western optimism, they depicted the business prospects of a local newspaper in the light of their own roseate visions of the town's future, cannot now be said. But it is certain that Mr. Lush, who had packed up and brought West his printing plant from Peterboro, Ont., to Napinka, was not favorably impressed with the outlook. To one accustomed to the larger centres at which papers are published in the East the idea of starting a paper at so small a place seemed doubtless preposterous. Nevertheless, Mr. Lush gave the proposition a fair trial. The Napinka Gazette made its appearance in due course, and for eleven months it struggled against adverse fortune. It was an eight-page paper, four of which were printed at home. But, after some months of experiment, Mr. Lush found that the proposition would not go, and he was forced to seek fresh fields and pastures new. Encouraging offers had been made by some prominent citizens of Deloraine, and thither Mr. Lush moved his plant and, with new hopes, issued in March, 1899, the first number of the Deloraine Advertiser.

Against the keen competition of the long established Times, the Advertiser won its way slowly. But with each succeeding season its success was more pronounced, and to-day it is acknowledged as one of the best representatives of the local press of the province. Typographically it is one of the best looking sheets of the West, for Mr. Lush's long service in the mechanical branch of "the art preservative" has made him critical and exacting on that score. Its local news is covered adequately, the matter being written with brightness and vim. As before stated, the Advertiser gives an independent support to the Conservative party, and its editorial utterances have had their share in moulding public opinion in the section through which it circulates. In point of advertising patronage, the Advertiser is now almost, if not quite, on a par with its much older competitor. Altogether, the Advertiser is a tribute to the energy and the pluck of its founder, as much as to his ability as a printer and editor. In addition, it is a tribute to the enterprise of the Deloraine people, who have given it such hearty and consistent support.

Mr. Lush is an Englishman by birth, but knows nothing of the land of his nativity, for he was brought out to Canada at the age of three. The family home was at Shaftsbury—the seat of the late earl of that name—in Dorsetshire, and from this home two of his uncles had previously emigrated to Canada. They had located at Peterboro, Ont., and thither the Lush family moved on coming to the Dominion. At this town young Lush received his education, and after a course at the business college, at the age of eighteen, entered the job department of the Peterboro Examiner, of which the Hon. J. R. Stratton is proprietor. After spending five years in this office, he went into business for himself, buying out the print shop of Harper & Co. He had been so engaged for a year when the before mentioned offer of Napinka citizens determined him to come west.

Mr. Lush is yet a young man, being less than thirty years old. He seems destined to succeed in other enterprises in addition to his chosen business of newspaper work, for he has recently gone into other lines of activity, and with excellent prospects. Among his townsmen he is respected and desrvedly popular, and his career, alike as a journalist, a business man and a representative citizen, seems full of promise.

The Great Specific for Liver and Kidney Diseases.

It is the liver that is largely responsible for indigestion and constipation—derangements that are a constant source of trouble.

The bile, which, when left in the blood, is a poison to the system, causing biliousness, headache and muddy complexion, becomes of priceless value when passed into the intestines to aid digestion and ensure regular action of the bowels.

The healthy liver separates bile from the blood and sends it into the intestines.

IF YOU FIND YOUR LIVER SLUGGISH AND TORPID IN ACTION DR. CHASES'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS WILL BRING RELIEF AND CURE MORE PROMPTLY THAN ANY TREATMENT YOU COULD FIND.

By enlivening the action of the liver they remove the cause of biliousness, headache, indigestion, constipation and other accompanying symptoms.

The specific action of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills on the liver is what makes them of so great worth as a famly medicine and ensures them a resting place in the home.

Mis Julia Langlois, Manor, Assa., writes: "For a long time I suffered from liver complaint and biliousness, and could find nothing to help me until I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I have recommended these pills to many of my friends, and they have all been well satisfied with the results. You can use this letter for the benefit of women who are suffering as I did."

One pill a dose at bedtime and Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will ensure healthful, regular action of the kidneys, liver and bowels; 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

That the municipal elections will be on in five weeks is a fact which the citizens of Fernie should keep well in view. The work cut out for the next council is heavy. Several momentous questions face the city and it is of the utmost importance that a strong council be elected to grapple with them. These same arguments were urged at the last election and a good council was elected, but its work has not been as important as was anticipated. Considerable time was needed to get down to business, tedious by-laws had to be passed and the big questions had to be put off, until now the four brief months have all but flitted away. Now the municipal machinery ismoving smoothly the new council will be in a position upon taking their seats in January to devote their attention to such questions as water and sewer systems extensive improvements to sidewalks and roads, etc., involving the expenditure of large sums of money if proceeded with. It is essential to the city's best interest therefore that sound, progressive, shrewd men occupy the seats at the council board next year.

The present council has met and overcome many difficulties which few people understand. The first, and its greatest difficulty was to finance and get into running shape a municipality without any money. Numerous improvements were demanded from various parts of the city, the schools were thrown upon its hands and the council had no power to levy taxes or to borrow money. Yet with the rebate of taxes, police court fines and trades license the council has met the most urgent demands for improvements and has paid its way. Another difficulty was the haste with which its by-laws had to be passed. In the light of maturer judgement probably it will not be impossible to find little flaws in some of these enactments. The work of Fernie's first council has been hard and tedious and its members have exhibited a commendable spirit of self-sacrifice and patience.

Who will be on the next council? The present mayor has filled the position in a highly satisfactory manner and if he consents to stand for renomination there is not the slightest doubt but that he will be easily returned. The majority of the present aldermen could also be re-elected. Unfortunately one of the best of them, Alderman Liphardt has already emphatically declared his intention of withdrawing at the end of the term, and it is rumored that one or two others are adverse to serving another year. Among those mentioned on the street as being possible candidates are J. D. Quail, W. W. Tuttle and A. W. Bleasdell.

ONE feature of the new Assessment Act passed at the last session which appears to be very unfair is that a merchant pays taxes on the money he owes for goods purchased. Such taxation renders the rate on the actual investment very heavy and it has a tendency to discourage legitimate business speculation.

HALF a hundred powerful incandescent electric lamps placed judiciously on the streets of Fernie would vastly improve the city's appearance at night as well as to add greatly to the convenience of its citizens. At the present time the street lighting is limited to the few private lamps on the main street and the sympathetic glow from the coke ovens.

Public safety demands that constables be stationed at Coal Creek and Elko. That the former is probably as law abiding a mining camp as can be found anywhere in the province will readily be granted when it is considered that it has a population of about a thousand people with no officer of the law in its midst. Elko, the first junction of the two transcontinental lines always contains a certain amount of riff-raff, and it is a important observation point at which to catch escaping crimnals.

EAGLES ELECT OFFICERS.

At the regular meeting on Wednesday evening the Fernie Aerie of Eagles elected its officers for the next year as follows;

John Mahr was struck by the west bound local on Tuesday near Hosmer. It appears that he was lying on the track in an intoxicated condition. He miraculously escaped death but was thrown from the track and received serious bruises on one of his legs. He was brought to Fernie and taken to the lock-up.

George Cody who has the contract for the government bridge over the Elk at Morrissey was obliged to discontinue the work owing to the bad condition of the road between the bridge and the Morrissey Lumber Co's mill, where he is getting the lumber. The work will be continued as soon as the road freezes sufficiently hard.

The C. P. R. has decided to adopt the Pyle electric headlight on their western lines. These lights are admitted by railway men to be the finest invented in recent years, and the strength and intensity of the beam they throw illuminates the track for such a distance that the engineer has a much better opportunity of seeing any obstructions on the line ahead. Then again there is one beam of light thrown on the sky at a long angle so that while the engine itself may be out of sight, this beam may be seen for a distance of many miles and this way do away with the danger of headon collisions. Several of these lights were in operation during the past summer as an experiment and were found very satisfactory. They are built on the principle of an electric search-light, and throw a very intense light.

To Let—Cottage, furnished, on south side C. P. R. track. Apply R. Reading.

DRUGS AND THE EYES.

Certain Poisons That Have a Most Injurious Effect.

Certain poisons possess the property of acting in a decided manner on the eye. Atropine enlarges the pupil and for this purpose has become indispensable in ophthalmology. Santonin causes one to see yellow. Disturbances of vision have furthermore been observed as secondary effects of certain medicines; for instance, after the use of quinine, iodoform and naphthalin, which, in a case of intestinal catarrh, caused a cataract. The worm disease in the district of the Ruhr in Germany has furnished an opportunity for the observation that the popular fern root, much employed as a remedy, may give rise to serious ocular injury. The use of this remedy in the case of two miners led to incurable blindness.

In the trades there are also poisons which act especially upon the eye. Very dangerous, above all, is lead, which produces inflammation and atrophy of the optic nerve. "Workmen in mustard factories," says a German medical journal, "often suffer from inflammation of the cornea in consequence of the action of the mustard vapors upon the eye." Latterly serious visual disturbances have been produced by chloric oxide and chloric dioxide, poisonous vapors generated by the use of magnesium flashlight powders for photographic purposes.—Jewelers' Circular Weekly.

Sea Gulls.

If a convoy of sea gulls flies seaward early in the morning sailors and fishermen know the day will be fine and the wind fair, but if the birds keep inland, though there be no haze hanging out toward the sea to denote unpleasant weather, interested folk know that the elements will be unfavorable.

Starvation In London.

Deaths from starvation take place in London at the rate of between thirty and forty every year.

Original Rough Riders.

The original rough riders antedated the pony express by several years. The rifle rangers themselves were rough riders, and Mayne Reid was a captain, leading in person many a gallant charge against the "greasers," Apaches, Comanches and Sioux.

Japanese Tobacco Law.

The Japanese strictly enforce a law which prohibits the use of tobacco by boys under twenty years of age.

Jailed In His Home.

Sentenced to eight days' confinement at Shanghai recently for slandering a policeman, an Austrian citizen was allowed to work out the sentence at his own home because of the state of his health.

Russian Wolves.

The wolves of Russia devour about 200 people every year.

Old Life In Maryland.

Scharf, in his "History of Maryland," says that in the eighteenth century "the mechanics, fishermen, bay sailors and petty tradesmen took a turn in the tobacco fields at planting time or helped in the wheat harvest or in pulling or husking corn."

A Great Harbor.

The harbor of Rio de Janeiro is one of the finest on the globe. It has fifty miles of anchorage, sufficient to float the navies of the world.

THE DANGER OF ANAEMIA

Its Victims Are Defenseless When Disease Strikes—The Blood Should Be Kept Rich and Pure.

Anaemic people—people with watery blood—are without defense when disease threatens. The strongest weapon against disease is a plentiful supply of rich, red blood. A robust person may catch cold, but quickly throws it off. But a cold lingers with the anaemic one, goes to the chest and the first signs of consumption appear. It is the anaemic one who suffers from headache and dizziness, who cannot climb a stair without resting, whose heart flutters and palpitates wildly at the least exertion. Such people can only be be saved by a supply of new, rich, red blood, and Dr. Williams Pink Pills is the only medicine that actually makes rich, red blood with every dose. Ordinary medicines only touch the symptoms of disease—Dr. Williams Pink Pills go right straight to the root of the trouble and drive it out. That is why these pills have a larger sale than any other medicine in the world, and that is why thousands and thousands of people praise them so highly. Miss Florence G. Marryett, Chester, N. S., says: "I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for several months, and I am happy to say they have restored me to health after all other means had failed. I was suffering from anaemia in its most severe form. The least exertion would leave me breathless and worn out. I had no appetite and suffered greatly with nervous headaches; I was pale and seemed to be going into decline. I had medical attendance, but it did me no good. Then a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and in a few weeks I found they were helping me. I continued their use for several months, and am again enjoying good health. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will make every weak and ailing girl strong and healthy."

You can get these pills from any dealer in medicine, but you should be careful to see that the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is on the wrapper around each box. If in doubt write the Dr Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be sent at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50.

THE STORY OF A SUCCESSFUL MAN

HE FOUND HIS LOST HEALTH IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Leading Business Man of Welland Gives His Experience with the Great Canadian Kidney Cure.

Welland, Ont., Dec. 5.—(Special).—There is no better known or more highly respected man in Welland than Mr. J. J. Yokom. Born and brought up in the neighboring township of Crowland, by his own industry and sterling honesty he has grown to be one of Welland's leading merchants. Consequently when Mr. Yokom comes out with a statement that he was cured of a serious illness by Dodd's Kidney Pills, everybody knows it must be so.

"For a year or more I had Kidney Trouble in all its worst symptoms," says Mr. Yokom. "My head was bad, I had no appetite and I lost weight fast. At times I was entirely incapacitated. I doctored with a physician of vast experience but got no good results.

"I became despondent of ever being well again, when by good luck I chanced to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and from the first day they seemed to suit my case. Five boxes cured me completely."

THE WORD "CHIC."

Probably Derived From a German Word Meaning Clever.

The word "chic," which comes to us through the French, but is probably derived from the German geschickt, clever, smart, has no exact equivalent in our language. Murray, in his standard work, suggests as another possible derivation that it may be an abbreviation of chicane, in the sense of a deft twist or turn.

"Chic," used either as a substantive or as an adjective, implies such style and clever finish as gives an air of distinction to a person or thing and marks some excellence of fashion or taste. Applied to the fine arts it denotes the faculty of producing effective work with ease and skill, and from this its society application to correct grace and elegance and smartness follows very naturally.

Lever, in "The Martins of Cromarty," says: "The French have invented a slang word, and by 'chic' have designated a certain property by which objects assert their undoubted superiority over all their counterfeits."

Some have connected the word with the Spanish chico, or chica, a diminutive expressive of approval.—London Standard.

RENOUNCED THE VIOLIN.

Wellington Never Touched It After He Became a Field Officer.

The Duke of Wellington played the violin as a subaltern, but gave it up when he became a field officer. The reason for this renunciation is supplied by the following extract from a letter written by Mrs. Stuart Mackenzie to the Duke of Sutherland in 1852: "Every one knows that to the last the duke was fond and a fine judge of music. In youth he was a performer on the violin, that, giving up a great deal of time to it, he began to fear lest the hereditary taste should get the better of him, and in one day he broke the spell, laid aside his violin and never afterward touched it. This circumstance occurred during the time of his early attachment to my dear friend the duchess, who has often repeated it to me with pride as an omen of what was to be expected from his great self command and firmness of decision."

It may be added that the Duke of Wellington inherited his love of music from his father, Lord Mornington, who was a doctor of music and a composer of no small merit.—Pearson's.

Costly Fishes.

The most beautiful and costly fishes in the world come from China, and the rarest of all is the brush tail goldfish. Specimens of these have sold for as high as £140 each, and in Europe the prices range from £50 to £100. The brush tail goldfish is so small that a half crown piece will cover it, and probably there is no living thing of its size and weight that is worth so much money.—London Mail.

Comparing Notes.

Mrs. Apollo—Your cook seems to have a very refined appearance. Mrs. Brooks—She says she is a Vassar girl. Mrs. Cunningham—She worked for me once and then said she was a Wellesley girl. Mrs. Devine—She told me she had been a cook at both colleges.

The Exact Amount.

"Yes," said the man who had been generous with his friends, "I've lost faith in humankind to some extent."

"To what extent?"

"Well, to the extent of about $1,000 in blocks of $5 and $10 at a time."

The Difficulty.

The Wife—I fully realize that I ought to economize, Jack, but— The Husband—But what? Don't you know where to begin? The Wife—Oh, yes; but I can't decide on the time.

Doing Well Without It.

"Have you had brain fag yet?" young Furbish asked the rising author.

"No," replied the latter. "Just at present I don't need the advertising."

Retired.

Patience—Is her husband in trade? Patrice—No; he was sold out by the sheriff last week.—Yonkers Statesman.

LINCOLN AND LONDON.

Tower Dedicated to Our President In an English Church.

"With charity for all and malice toward none"—these well known words of the great, brave, sagacious Lincoln—appear in large lettering in the creed of Christ church, Westminster road. It is fitting, then, that the imposing tower of this superb structure, costing over £62,000 ($310,000), should be dedicated to the liberator of a race. Rowland Hill, whose name is linked with the world's great preachers, founded Surrey chapel eighteen years before the close of the eighteenth century. Newman Hall was one of his successors, and under his leadership the church secured this splendid temple and center of Christian service. When the building was still in the hands of the architects Dr. Hall conceived the idea of dedicating the tower to Abraham Lincoln, the martyred president of the United States, and today within the tower you may read the following inscription:

LINCOLN TOWER.
Inaugurated 4th July, A. D. 1876, by Sir Thomas Fowell Buxton Bart.
The memorial stone was laid 9th July 1874, By the American Minister to this country.
The cost (£7,000) was defrayed equally by English and American contributions obtained by the Rev. Newman Hall, LL.B.
It was built in commemoration of the abolition of slavery effected in 1865 by PRESIDENT LINCOLN;
And as a token of international brotherhood.
GLORY TO GOD IN THE HIGHEST.
—St. Nicholas.

THE JAPANESE BABY.

Showered With Gifts Before It Even Makes Its Appearance.

A hundred gifts in various shapes are offered to the baby before its appearance—toys, big ones, of course; pieces of cotton, silk or crepe, invariably with a happy omen in their design, are a joy to the mother. The housemaids will be busy with the baby's dress under the supervision of the grandmother. It will be no slight affair if the baby is a boy—yes, especially if it be the first son.

Parties coming with their congratulations will begin to stream into the house the very next morning after the announcement. They will bring dried fish or a box of eggs to express their good wishes, which will be returned in some form of present when the baby is two weeks old.

On the seventh day after the birth comes the christening, and rice cooked with red beans—doesn't red mean happiness?—will be sent among the friends. Matsu (pine) is a favorite name, since it signifies bravery, keeping green even under winter's frost. Isn't Mume (plume) better, since it is the harbinger of spring, breathing out the most divine odor in the world? Mi amairi (going to temple) will take place on the thirtieth day. The boy will be dressed in a kimono. It must be silk, with the family's coat of arms on it. He will be put under the immediate protection of the deity. His fortune will be secured.—Good Housekeeping.

Stature and Illness.

According to a paper read by Dr. Shrubsall before the British association, sufferers from tonsilitis, rheumatism and heart disease are of a higher stature, and sufferers from tuberculosis, nervous and malignant diseases of a lower stature than healthy individuals.

It appears that blond sufferers from pulmonary tuberculosis respond to treatment better than brunettes, while in diseases of the heart the positions are reversed. It is believed that in successive generations of city life stature shows a progressive diminution and that there is an increase in brunette traits with each generation passing from rural to urban life. With increasing length of residence there is an increase of morbidity among the different classes of Londoners.

Changed His Mind.

A man of notoriously bad character, residing in a village, wished to emigrate. To obtain assistance from the emigration commissioners one must have a character, and the man accordingly asked one from his neighbors. Everybody was anxious he should go, any everybody therefore testified to his excellent reputation. No one was more astonished at this result than the man himself, and after looking at his certificate, with its long list of signatures, "Well," said he, "I had no idea I was so much esteemed in the neighborhood. I think I shall stay."—London Tit-Bits.

When tomatoes and milk are to be put together, as in cream soup, have the tomato juice and milk of the same temperature, then beat vigorously as the tomato is added little by little.

A lady writes: "I was enabled to remove the corns, root and branch by the use of Holloway's Corn Cure." Others who have tried it have the same experience.

Mildew is one of the most difficult stains to remove. Rub well with brown soap, then apply a paste of chalk and water, put the article in the sun. After two or three applications the mildew will be bleached out.

To clean the coffee pot fill it with water, put in a pinch of borax and a piece of hard soap and set on the stove, letting it boil for half an hour. It will be as bright as new, and should be submitted to this treatment frequently.

A woman can board a train without a ticket, do a little crying and go wherever she pleases.

Along about this time of year there are only a few votes between a hero and the other kind of a man.

THE FLAGGING ENERGIES REVIVED.—Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be no relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. These come from stomachic troubles. The want of exercise brings on nervous irregularities and the stomach ceases to assimilate food properly. In this condition Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a recuperative of rare power, restoring the organs to healthful action, dispelling depression, and reviving the flaging energies.

A man is always willing to admit that he married the best woman on earth—on the day after his marriage.

After a young man has blown in all his money on a girl she often shows her gratitude by marrying some other fellow.

Where the cat tail is intended for decorations it should be gathered while still rather green. As it grows older and begins to "fuzz" the down will be found a standard remedy for burns if mixed with enough lard or butter to hold it together.

Royal Russian Rule.

If any member of the imperial family lives out of Russia for more than one-fourth of the year his or her income is considerably reduced.

Hops and Beer.

The Roman soldiers in Britain, when they first saw the Kentish hop vines, thought they had found the nearest thing to the grape the savage northland produced. In their efforts to make wine from hops they produced the first beer made in England.

German For Welsh.

A country gentleman in Wales sent a letter to every member of the British house of commons written in Welsh. One of the recipients made a neat retort by replying in German.

First Bomb Outrage.

The first bomb outrage was committed on Christmas eve, 1800, by Saint-Nejant, who wished to remove Napoleon, then first consul, in the interest of the royalists. Napoleon escaped, but among his escort and the bystanders there were about 130 casualties.

Fresh Air.

Plenty of fresh air in our living rooms, in our public conveyances, in our bedchambers, our schools and our churches would insure us longer lives and more joy in living.

Human Skin Leather.

It is said that in the precincts of Westminster abbey the finger plate of a door is covered with leather made from human skin, but the story is not based on anything firmer than tradition. Books do exist, however, bound in human skin.

Dandelion Seeds.

It is calculated that 1,000,000 dandelion seeds weigh a pound.

Pianos In Great Britain.

The statistical maniac calculates there is one piano for every seven houses in the United Kingdom, and as each instrument costs on an average $100 the enormous aggregate is $100,000,000.

At 40 Cents Per Pound.

"SALADA"

CEYLON TEA. Black, Mixed or NATURAL GREEN.

No firm, no company, no corporation in the world has the courage or facilities to offer like "Quality" or "Value."

REMEMBER: Sealed Lead Packets Only. By All Grocers.

To heat gasoline for cleaning small articles place the corked bottle of this dangerous stuff in a bucket of hot water "out of doors," adding boiling water as the water cools. Hot gasoline will clean laces speedily and thoroughly.

MESSRS. C. C. RICHARDS & CO.

Gentlemen,—I suffered for years with bronchial catarrh. I commenced in January last (as an experiment) to use MINARD'S LINIMENT which gave almost instant relief. And two bottles made a complete cure and I have had no symptoms of a return of the trouble since March.

Gratefully Yours,
MARK BURNS.
Yankleek Hill, Ont., Oct. 31, '01.

If a man can get into a bank after banking hours he considers himself a prominent citizen.

MINARD'S LINIMENT Cures Dandruff.

Sorrow may be essential to the song of the universe.

People who have culture are never conscious of it.

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthhy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, andthere will be another witness to their excellence.

It is necessary to place huge granite monuments over some good men in order to keep them down.

MINARD'S LINIMENT Relieves Neuralgia.

It is sometimes the custom in Russia for each lady at a big dinner to smoke a tiny cigarette after each course. This is supposed to assist digestion, besides removing the flavor of the previous course from the palate.

Superfluous Hair

Removed by the New Principle

De Miracle

It is better than electricity, because it does not scar or produce a new growth. Better than X-ray, because it does not burn, scar or paralyze the tissues under the skin. Better than depilatories, because it is not poisonous; therefore, it will not cause blood poisoning, or produce eczema, which is so common with depilatories, and does not break off the hair, thereby increasing its growth.

Electrolysis, X-ray or depilatories are offered you on the bare word of the operators and manufacturers. DE MIRACLE is not. It is the only method which is indorsed by physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and prominent magazines.

DE MIRACLE will be mailed to any address, sealed in plain wrapper for $1. Your money back without question if it fails to do all that is claimed for it.

THE MARKET REPORT

Thompson, Sons & Co's.

Thursday, Dec. 1, 1904.

WHEAT: The week in the wheat markets has developed nothing new in the situation. There was a steady though moderate decline in prices from Friday till Tuesday succeeded by a rally on Wednesday and a steady and quietly firm market today. In the American markets prices show a decline of around 1c. on the December delivery, unchanged on May and ¼c. or so higher on July. The action of the markets the last two daysssuggests theprobability that the recent decline (which amounts to from 4 to 7c from the 16th of November to date), may have run its course. Under favorable conditions during the last two months wheat has moved freely from first hands, and has been accumulating at centres of supply where it comes into visible stocks. The American visible supply, which on the 1st of October was 2,000,000 bushels less than at the coresponding date in 1903, hasat this date swelled to 5,500,000 bushels larger than on Dec. 1st last year, or an increase in the two months of 7,500,000 bushels as compared with a year ago. The quantity on ocean passage also shows at this date an increase fo14,-500,000 bushels over quantity at corresponding date last year, and there is an increase in European visible stocks on Dec. 1, 1903. These increases in visible stocks aggregate 30,000,000 bushels, and the recognition of their gradual accumulation has resulted in a slackening in the demand for wheat for immediate delivery, with consequent easing off in prices. Now that winter weather envelopes the greater part of America and Canada, and especially the Northwestern part, receipts from farmers have dropped off, and in a few days the movement by rail will become very small, and not many weeks will pass before the American visible begins to decrease Owing to the closing of the Russian ports by ice it is expected the exports from that country will assume small proportions from about this date. Perhaps the principal influence on themarket the last few days has been the reported unfavorable weather in the Argentine. For several weeks now, reports have come every day or two of unsettled weather in that country, and it would seem that the weather has been more or less showery and ungenial and unfavorable for the maturing and harvesting of the crop. It some depreciation on that crop has some depreciation on that crop has seems reasonable to conclude that taken place already, and should inclement weather continue it might prove a more or less serious matter. In the early northern districts some wheat has been cut and thrashed, and it is reported that it only weighs 57½ pounds to the bushel, which denotes inferior quality. Further south the grain isat the filling stage. Another special influence onthe markets is the prolonged dry weather over the American winter wheat belt. The want of rain is beginning to cause some apprehension regarding the future of the crop, and if rain is withheld very much longer the prospect may become serious . The Australian crop is good but not nearly so large as last year. European crops are generally doing well. The principal exception is Spain, where rain is needed. There was a short crop in this country the past season owing to drought, and it is reported that the Spanish Government proposes to lower the duty on wheat 50 per cent. The visible supply increased last week 2,-196,000 bushels, against an increase of 2,097,000 bushels the previous week and an increase of 668,000 bushels last year. The world's shipments were 11,880,000 bushels, against 11,511000 bushels the previous week and 10'-328,000 bushels last year. The world's visible supply, according to Bradstreet's, increased 4,688,000 bus., against an increase of 3,458,000 bus. the previous week and an increase of 1,644,000 bus. last year. In our local market the trade in Manitoba wheat has for the most part been quiet and dull. In every season previous to this there has been an urgent demand at the closing of navigation for spot wheat at Fort William and Port Arthur in order to fill all available vessel space and get as much wheat as possible away eastward by the cheaper water route before the lake ports were frozen up. This year, however, there is nothing of this kind. In the first place export business has been so inactive that shippers have been half idle ever since crop movement began, and in the second place the favorable weather in the West during the past two months and the better equipment of the railways for carrying out the wheat has resulted in huge stocks being available at lake ports for vessels if the price was made high enough to tempt holders to sell . The close of navigation, therefore, which taes place definitely on December 5, sees the lake ports with the largest quantity of wheat on record in store at this date. Trade is now down to the basis of December delivery, and what wheat at lake ports or arriving there now has to be handled on the basis of remaining in store there all winter or being shipped eastward all rail at considerably higher freight than by lake route. higher freight than by lake route. has set in over the western country and already the movement has fallen off sharply. Our prices for spot or cash wheat have of course declined to meet the difference in freight conditions caused by the closing of navigation, but prices for future delivery hold up, and the last two days show some advance over previous quotations, and trading in May wheat has been fairly active with more buyers htan sellers. To-day's quotations are as follows, viz.: Northern, 93¼c.; 2 Nor., 88½c.; 3 Nor., 81¼c.; No. 4 Extra, 70½c.; No. 4 wheat, 69½c.; No. 5 wheat, 57½c.; Feed, 47¼c., spot or December delivery, and in the option market December wheat closed 91½c.; May, 97½c.; July, 98½c.; all prices being on the basis of in store Fort William and Port Arthur.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE.
Called from The Commercial.

Winnipeg, Dec. 3,

The demand for mill stuffs is brisk and prices firm. It is thought that large numbers of cattle will be fed during the winter and prepared for market, in which case millstuffs may be expected to hold firm. Oats are easier this week, No. 2 white declining 3c. Receipts have been fair and mills are pretty well filled up. The quality of stuff received as feed grades is really very poor, and most of it goes as rejected. Barley declined 2c. per bushel Owing to the state of the roads hay is 50c. to $1 per ton firmer, the greater advance being in the price of loose hay.

FLOUR. — The demand for top grades is good. Business in lower grades eased off during the week, as the local market appears to be pretty well supplied. No decline of these grades is anticipated by millers, however, and the foreign demand continues active. Quotations are unchanged We quote: Best Hungarian patents, $2 per sack of 98 lbs.; seconds, $2.70; strong bakers, $2.10 to $2.40, according to make; XXXX, $1.50. All prices are subject to usual trade discounts.

MILLFEED—Bran, $17 per ton in bulk, delivered to the trade; shorts, $10 per ton.

GROUND FEED—Oat chop, $25 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley chop, $20; mixed barley and oats, $23 and oil cake, $27 per ton.

OATS—No. 2 white, 30c; No. 3, 29c; feed grades, 28c per bushel, in carlots on track, Winnipeg.

FLAXSEED—94 to 95c per bushel, Fort William basis.

VEGETABLES—Business has been rather slack. People are pretty well stocked up and the sharp turn in the weather has had a deterrent effect. We qoute: Potatoes, farmers' loads, 65c per bushel; cabbage, $25 per ton; Swede turnips, 20 to 25c per bushel; parsley, 30c per dozen; onions, 2¾c per lb.; carrots, 40c per bushel; parsnips, 1½c per lb.; beets, 60c per bus; celery, 40 to 50c per doz; vegetable marrows, 60 to 70c per doz; lettuce, 40c per doz; pumpkins, 2c per lb.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef is steady and lamb firmer, while veal is 1c. lower. Lambs are slightly easier, while dressed hogs are ¼ to ½c per lb. lower. Beef, 5¼ to 5¾c per lb. for city dressed; ½c less for country; veal, 6c for choice weights; mutton, 8c; spring lambs, 10c per lb.; hogs, 7¼c, delivered to the trade here.

POULTRY—Market is steady. We quote: Live weight, fowl, 9c per lb.; spring chickens, 11c per lb. turkeys, 17c per lb. dressed, all prices f. o. b., Winnipeg, paid py local dealers.

CHEESE—Manitoba cheese is ½c easier. The market has a pretty firm tone, however, and the demand is good. Local jobbing prices are: Ontario, 11½c per lb.; Manitoba, 11c per lb.; Twins, 11½ to 12 c.

BUTTER—Prices have advanced about 2c perlb. We quote on jobbing basis, Winnipeg: Prints, 25 to 27c per lb.; assorted boxes, 24 to 26c lb.

BUTTER—Dairy—There is a good demand for good tub butter, of which supplies are limited. Quotations have advanced 1 to 2c—the latter amount on round lots. We quote prices paid by jobbers at Wnnipeg as follows: No. 1, 15 to 16c; No. 2, 10 to 14c; lb.-bricks, 18½ to 19c.Price of round lots, Winnipeg, is 13 to 15c, and from 1 to 2c more for special selected shipments by express.

EGGS—Fresh eggs are 1c higher at 26c, glycerined are easy.We quote for imported stock on a jobbing basis; Fresh, 26c glycerined, 24 to 25c per dozen.

HIDES—Quotations are ¼c higher. The market is fairly strong, although latest advices from Chicago state that quality is deterioriating during the heavy kill. Sheepskins range 10c higher. We quote Abattoir hides, 7¼c for No. 1's; 6¼c for No. 2's. Country cured butchers' at 6 to 7c for No. 1 grade; sheep skins, 30 to 60c.

TALLOW—Quotations are steady. No. 1 tallow is worth 3½ to 3¾c per lb., delivered at Winnipeg; No. 2, 2¾.

SENECA ROOT — There is little moving. Country stocks are considered to be pretty well cleaned up. Quotations are 2c lower. Clean dry root is worth 55 to 56c per pound, delivered Winnipeg.

Live Stock.

CATTLE — Quotatinos are steady. Export trade dull, but butchers active. Export stock is worth $2.75 to $3, Winnipeg, weighed at point of shipment. We quote $2.75 off cars here for choice butchers down to $2.25 for inferior grades.

SHEEP—Quotations are steady at last week's decline. We quote $3.50 per cwt., Winnipeg.

HOGS — The market still holds steady, receipts from the country being large and trade good. We quote 5¼c per lb. selected weights, Winnipeg.

New Guinea Cannibals.

The Papuan cannibal of New Guinea regards all deaths as having a violent cause. Whenever a native dies from sickness it is believed that the sickness resulted from some plot. In order to detect the murderer, therefore, parts of the dead person are distributed among the members of the household and after a time examined by a certain official in the community, who might be said to correspond to an American coroner, district attorney, judge and jury all combined. If any part of these uncanny relics has changed to an unnatural color its possessor is immediately executed and eaten by the other relatives.

Deduction.

Singleton—How do you know her age? Doubleton—By her pleased expression when I told her women were their loveliest at thirty-five.

Helped Him Out.

Belle—Did you have to help him out when he proposed? May—No; papa did.—Town Topics.

WAR NEWS.

Port Arthur Probably Captured. ..

War.. .... MHT MHT MHT

A cablegram from Tokio says: The Imperial army headquarters announces that the Japanese troops besieging Port Arthur are in possession of 203 Metre Hill. The following despatch has been given out: "The army commenced a bombardment again 203 Metre Hill at dawn, November 30, and made several charges before 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Owing to the enemy's stubborn resistance the charges failed. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon our force advanced against the southeastern portion of the hill, made a fierce charge and reached within 30 metres of the summit. At 7 o'clock, with reinforcements, we charged to the top, which was occupied by our forces. Against the northeast part of the hill we also charged, and at 8 o'clock the entire fort on the summit fell into our hands. The Russians left heaps of dead bodies on the eastern side of the hill, but we have had no time to investigate further."

Revives Hope of Capture.

The following despatch, dated at noon on Dec 1 from Tokio contains the following: General Nogi's telegram, announcing the storming and capture of 203 Metre Hill was received with cheers by the Japanese people it revives the hope of an early capture of Port Arthur proper. The people have never despaired of the success of the besiegers, but the fortitude of the defenders, and the prolongation of the siege, which exceeds by months the most liberal preliminary estimate of the time required to accomplish the reduction of this stronghold, has been a source of deep regret, combined with the loss of life and disappointment over the fact that the siege has occupied such a large force of men, decreasing Field Marshal Oyama's strength at a time when he needed every available man.

DROWNED IN REED RIVER.

News has been received at Sprague Man., of a sad tragedy which occurred in the sparsely settled country between Sprague and Buffalo Bay, Lake of the Woods. A. W. Cook, constable from Rainy River, and J. Hayford, of Badger, on the C. N. R., started from Badger or Reed River to arrest an Indian for stealing butter. Constable Cook returned to Sprague without Hayford, who was drowned in Reed river. In their search in the bush for several days without nothing to eat except rabits and partridges. Hayford took sick and the men could not make more than two miles per day. They reached Reed River and started to walk along the ice. Hayford broke through the thin crust and was drowned. He was carrying with him the only gun they had, and tried to save his companion and was nearly drowned in his atempts. His hands were badly cut by the ice and he is in a very weak state. He walked twety miles to reach Sprague, and was without food for nearly four days. There are no white settlers in the district where the tragedy occured, the nearest inhabitants being the Indians at Buffalo Point, Lake of the Woods. The provincial authorities have been notified.

CANADA'S POSSIBILITIES ARE EVER INCREASING.

A cable from London says: The Saturday Review, referring to the Canada Club dinner, says that Canada's agricultural possibilities become more obvious with every mile of railway extension, and this suggests which Earl Grey cannot discuss, whether these possibilities are or are not to be utilized for the joint benefit of the members of the Empire. The occasion was not improved by the Archbishop of Canterbury. It may be possible to avoid a certain cheapness in the gloryings of these congratulatory meetings, but an archbishop's plan should be in a higher strain than merely an exhaltation of ourselves by inaccurate comparison with other countries. The Outlook says that if Earl Grey lives up to the terms of his speech, the Dominion will have little cause to regret even the best of its Governors-General; Canada wi,l find him as Nationalist as Laurier himself is. Major G. F. Parke, Oxfordshire Light Infantry, goes to Canada as comptroller of the household of the Governor-General.

SUBSTANTIAL INCREASE IN BANK CLEARINGS.

The following are some of the weekly clearings as compiled by Bradstreet's for the week ending November 24, with percentage of increase and decrease, as compared with the corresponding week last year:: Montreal, $29,432,804; increase 40.6. Toronto, $24,246,551; increase, 70.4 . Winnipeg, $9,665,-265; increase, 28.0. Ottawa, $2,-814,437; increase 24.5. Halifax, $1,-914,863, increase 19.3. Vancouver, $1,721,300; increase 27.9. Hamilton, Ont., $1,361,203; increase 22.5. London, Ont., $1,068,821; increase 44.2. St. John, N. B., $1,185,157; increase 23.6. Victoria, B. C., $470,-095; decrease 16.3.

RATE WAR ENDS.

At a conference between representatives of the Cunard, White Star and other steamship lines, held at Liverpool, the dispute over passenger rates was virtually settled. Circulars announcing a general advance in the rates for passengers westward bound probably will be issued forthwith.

CANADIAN NEWS.

TWELVE MANITOBA SMUGGLERS

At the present time twelve residents of southern Manitoba are under heavy bonds in United States courts charged with smuggling wheat into United States territory. Cyrille Deledeke and Allidore Amcel, Belgians who live in Manitoba, were arrested at Bottineau by Deputy Marshall Btout, charged with bringing loads of wheat to an elevator at Bottineau. The men gave a bond of $1,000 each and were allowed to depart. In all cases, so far, says the Grand Forks Herald, the Government has seized not only the wheat brought to this country, but the wagon and horses used in transporting the grain. Usually the arrests are made before the wheat is unloaded, and in such cases the elevator man is required to shovel the grain back in the wagon, when the Government officials take the whole outfit. If the wagons have been emptied before the arrest is made they are driven back to the elevator and an equal amount of wheat is loaded into the wagon as was unloaded, and the man charged with smuggling is allowed to go upon furnishing a suitable bond, but his entire outfit, including his wheat, is left in charge of the Government authorities. The Government in cases of smuggling is required to show an intent to defraud, but it is understood that all of the men accused of smuggling will fight the cases in court, to a man, claiming that they had no intention of defrauding the Government, but they one and all intended to report to the customs official as soon as they found out at the elevators exactly how much wheat they had, and pay over to that official the duty prescribed, 25 cents per bushel. The Government may have some difficulty in proving that the men did not really intend to do this, and while numerous arrests have been made within the past two weeks, the practice continues and hundreds of bushels of good Canadian wheat daily finds its way to elevators on this side of the line. There is a difference of 50 cents a bushel in the prices offered in some parts of Manitoba and those which prevail across the line in the states.

MANY MILITIA APPOINTMENTS.

The following is gazetted in the Military Gazette: Col. the Right Hon. Matthew Lord Aylmer, is appointed inspector-general of the Canadian forces with rank of brigadier-general. Brigadier-General P. H. Nf Lake, C. B., chief staff officer of the southern command, Great Britain, is appointed (temporarily) chief of the general staff, with rank of brigadier-general in the Canadian forces while so employed in such rank. Lieutenant-Colonel and Brevet-Colonel B. H. Vigal is appointed adjutant-general to the Canadian forces with the substantive rank of colonel. Col. D. A. MacDonald, I. S. O. D. G. of O., to be quartermaster-general. Col. N. H. Cotton, Q. M. G., to be quartermaster-general of ordnance under the provisions of section 35 of the militia act of 1904. 12th Manitoba dragoons, to be captain, Lieut. N. Bannister, from September, 1904. A militia order recently issued says that promotion, subject to the necessary qualifications, will take place as follows: After one year's service as lieutenant to be captain; after four years' service as captain to be major; after ten years' service as major regimental medical officers may be given the rank of honorary lieutenant-colonel and their period of service extended or they may be transferred to the reserve of medical officers, or the retired list as the case may be. Lord Dundonald's infantry and cavalry books have been discarhed by the militia department. The boaks to be adopted for the future training of the militia will be those in use for the different branches of His Majesty's army.

PATROL BOAT FOR N. W. M. P.

An Ottawa despatch says that Major Perry, commissioner of the Northwest Mounted Police, is now in San Francisco for the purpose of purchasing a whaling boat, which can be used by the police in patrolling the Beaufort Sea between the mouth of the Mackenzie river and Herschell Island, where the American whalers operate. The police have now great difficulty in getting from Fort MacPherson to the mouth of the Mackenzie and the boat which they used on the open sea last year was wrecked. The Mounted Police have just receiv?d a report from Sergeant Fitzgerald, who with one one policeman, will winter at Fort MacPherson. Sergt. Fitzgerald says that the American whalers expressed their desire not to trade liquor with the natives. The captain of one of the American boats put a sailor in irons because he went on board one of the boats.

BIG ADVANCE IN IMMIGRATION.

There is an increase in immigration to Canada for the four months of the fiscal year of 2,088 aver the same period last year. The total from ocean ports was 29,954 and from the United States 10,926, making a total of 40,880. For the corresponding period last year the arrivals from the United States were 13,827 and from ocean ports 24,965, making a total of 38,792. So that while there has been an increase in the total immigration there was a decrease from the United States of 2,901 souls.

HAMEL SENTENCED.

Alphonse Hamel, the ex-paymaster of Montreal, who absconed after he forged a cheque on the city for $10,-000 and was brought back from Cuba, was sentenced by Judge Choquet to seven years in St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary. Hamel pleaded for mercy on behalf of his wife and family. Judge Choquet told him that now, after he had fought extradition and lost, it was too late to plead for mercy.

FIGHT WITH WOLVES.

Recent Experience of a St. Catharines Man in Manitoba.

William Chestney, a young man belonging to St. Catharines, had a terrible experience several weeks ago from which he was fortunate to escape with his life. Chestney, in August last, went to Manitoba on one of the harvesters' excursions. From word received here, it seems that several weeks ago, as he was ploughing with four horses in a field on the farm in Manitoba where he is employed, he was set upon by two large prairie wolves, which attacked Chestney with great ferocity. The horses, terrified by the howls of the wolves, galloped away, dragging the plough after them. Chestney seized a stick of wood, which happened to be lying near by, and endeavored to defend himself from the brutes, finally succeeding in killing one of them. The other wolf, however, continued the attack. Chestney's strength was almost exhausted, when the wolf jumped on his shoulder. Fortunately for Mr. Chestney, another man came along just then, and, seeing Chestney's desperate position, ran to his assistance. The wolf, upon seeing his new antagonist, decamped. Chestney was taken home. He has some terrible bites on his arm and shoulder.

Marie Corelli Wins Out.

A special meeting of the trustees of the Shakespeare Birthplace Trust was held at Stratford-on-Avan recently to decide the fate of the cottages in Henley street, which abut upon the poet's garden and are said to be associated with the life and time of Shakespeare and of members of his family. The Mayor presided. Sir Henry Irving, who is a trustee but was unable to attend, wrote that he was in favor of the retention of the cottages if their presence would not endanger the safety of the birthplace. Sir Theodore Martin said Mr. Carnegie had given the cottages, but they were in no way associated with Shavespeare, and if the trustees spent trust money on them they would be called to book. Mr. Sydney Lee pointed out that these cottages were at one time owned by Thomas Nash, who married Shakespeare's granddaughter, and they possessed some interesting 15th century timber work, roof and walls. Shakespeare's father signed the conveyance deed.

The motion to pull the cottages down was eventually defeated by two votes. It will be remembered that when it was first proposed to demolish these cottages, which were bought and presented to the trustees by Mr. Carnegie, their preservation was urged with great energy and strong feeling by Miss Marie Corelli.

What Finger-Tips Tell.

It is said broad finger nails denote a gentle-natured person inclined to be modest and unassuming.

Narrow nails denote a studious but not very gentle nature, with a desire for scientific knowledge.

Small nails denote a very obstinate nature.

Round nails denote a desire for knowledge in general; a person apt to take great pride in his own accomplishments, rather hasty, yet fairly good-natured and forgiving.

Long nails denote caution, lacking confidence in human nature, decided in opinions.

White nails denote a fondness for society of the opposite sex, not overstrong constitution, and one subject to fevers.

Fleshy nails denote an idler who has a good appetite and loves sleep.

Pale nails denote one inclined to melancholy and to higher branches of knowledge.

A Practical Farmer.

Some years ago, before the bicycle was in such favor as it is now, a farmer went into an ironmonger's shop to buy a scythe. After serving him, the shopman asked if he would buy a bicycle.

"What might the price of them be?" asked the customer.

"Fifteen pounds."

"I'd rather spend £15 on a cow."

"But what an idiot you would look riding about the town on the back of a cow."

"Perhaps so," replied the farmer, "but not half such an idiot as I'd look trying to milk a bicycle."—London Times.

Fine Question.

The Germans are a very philosophical and somewhat argumentative race. Two workmen in the great Krupp cannon manufactory were overheard discussing an important question.

"In your opinion, Johann," said one, "which is the more important part of a cannon—the hole or the steel?"

"The hole of course, Heinrich," said the other. "Because, what use in the world would a cannon be without any hole in it?"

"You are wrong, Johann. It's the steel that's most important; for how many men could you kill with a hole with nothing around it?"

A Voice From the Ranks.

One Sunday morning a local preacher was on his way to Birtley, and as he passed a corner he heard several men swearing. Turning, he rebuked them, saying: "Divvent ye knaw ye shouldn't swear? The devil gans about like a roarin' lion seekin' whom he may devour." "Well," said one of the men, "Aw thowt he was chained." "Yes," said the preacher, "but his chain reaches all over the world." "Wey," said the swearer, "he might as weel be lowse."

The Corpse Awoke.

A medical journal vouches for the following story: A woman, who was seriously ill, awoke one night to find the nurse sitting at the foot of her bed smoking a cigarette and reading a novel. Greatly startled, the patient raised herself up in her bed and cried out, "What in the world are you doing, nurse?" To which the nurse replied: "Good gracious; I thought you were dead!"

COURAGE AND HIGHWAYMEN.

A Crook Tells Why They Are So Many Successful Robberies.

A "holdup man" or highwayman in giving the public his opinion about the methods of his kind and the ways of victims when assailed may be taken at his word when he says that want of courage on the part of the average citizen is the cause of so many successful robberies. It is true that robbers and other crooks are physical cowards as a rule. Their mode of life is not of a kind to make heroes of them. They are ever on their guard and ever more or less nervous. What gives them courage in the first place is the fact that they expect an easy triumph, since the victim is to be surprised and taken unawares. The robber's mask and his gun are depended upon to frighten, and the work is done so quickly that the victim has no time to summon courage. The confessing robber is surely boasting when he says that with a mask and a gun he could make a roomful of men, as they average, stand on their heads if he told them to do so. There will almost always be some cool head in a crowd, for company gives courage. If a robber be met at the outset with the firmness which should characterize a man who is being outraged upon the public highway the chances are that he will lose the little nerve he possesses. He will be the one taken unawares and, being in the wrong and an outlaw, cannot fall back upon a reserve of manhood and make a good fight. An easy public breeds the crook. He does not want to work hard for his plunder or he wouldn't be a crook.

Sir Lowthian Bell, Bart.

Sir Lowthian Bell, Bart., the newly-elected President of the Institution of Mining Engineers, was born at Newcastle-on-Tyne in 1816. He obtained his primary education at the leading school in his native town, and subsequently on the continent, where he acquired an intimate knowledge of German and Danish. On returning to England he was enrolled as a student at the Edinburgh University, where his studies were mainly of a scientific nature. Upon the conclusion of his university training he went to France to prosecute further studies at the Sorbonne, Paris. Sir Lowthian has traveled extensively. In the years 1839-40 he covered a distance over 12,000 miles, examining en route the most important seats of iron manufacture in France, Belgium, Germany, Poland and Austria. On attaining his twentieth year he was placed at the iron and chemical works at Walker-on-Tyne, but the actual commencement of his business career may be dated from 1850, when he joined the chemical works at Washington, Durham, which firm was then under the control of his father-in-law, the late Mr. H. L. Pattison, F.R.S. Two years later, in partnership with his two brothers, he founded the Clarence Iron Works, now one of the foremost establishments on the Tees. A Baronetcy was conferred upon him in 1885 in recognition of his distinguished services to science and industry.

The Queen As a Camera Fiend.

Queen Alexandra is very expert with the camera, and is often to be seen "snapshotting" the crowds outside the gates of Buckingham Palace on public occasions, while it is needless to say that her little grandchildren are very often involuntary "subjects." During her visit to Denmark the Queen and Princess Victoria took their kodaks with them everywhere, and took many snapshots.

On one occasion the Victoria and Albert anchored off the most northerly point of Denmark, Skagen, or the Skaw, as we were taught in our geography books, and to the great delight of the fisher inhabitants, the royal visitors landed to pay a visit to the great Danish artist, Professor Tuxen, who was spending a holiday there.

During their visit Queen Alexandra and the Princess snapshotted their host and his family in their garden before returning to the yacht. Just as the yacht was leaving the shore Princess Victoria caught sight of two little fisher laddies who had paddled out as far as they could to catch a last glimpse of the royal party, and thus afforded a splendid opportunity for a last snapshot.

Care for Your Fences.

On every farm there should be a careful inspection of fences at stated periods. As in everything else that requires doing, system is better than a lack of it. If a particular date is set apart for this purpose it will not be neglected. It may be that all the fences are in good shape, but it is worth something to know the fact, and therefore it should be known. Fences are not the only things that need systematic or careful attention. But in all reforms there must be a starting point, and fences are as good a starting point as any.

Sharps and Flats.

This life may be for our passage, but it is not our port.

There is nothing pleasant about the savor of a dead piety.

The only doubts to be ashamed of are those you are proud of.

The men for public trust are the men who can be trusted in private.

Praise on the tombstone does not scratch out harsh words in life.

The materialist fills his eyes with mud, and then says there is nothing else.—Ram's Horn.

Better Work Lately.

A very homely man in Chicago has a very pretty daughter. One day she was sitting on his knee right before a looking glass. She contemplated the reflection of their two faces and then asked, "Papa, did God make me?"

"Yes, dear," he replied.

"And did he make you?"

"Yes."

Looking again in the mirror, she drew a long breath and rejoined, "He must be turning out better work lately, isn't he?"

COAL CREEK NEWS.

Mr. E. Coglan, of Coal Creek, and Miss Mary McDonald, of Nanaimo, were married at the latter place last week. Mr. Coglan returned with his bride on Wednesday to make his home at Coal Creek.

Mr. Claxton, brother of Mr. A. T. Claxton arrived here from Collingwood last Saturday to take a position with the Trites-Wood Co.

Mrs. F. King, of Cranbrook, is the guest of Mrs. (Dr.) Keith.

A social dance will be held here on Monday or Tuesday evening in the new store addition of Trites-Wood Co.

The new addition to the Trites-Wood Co. store is completed and will be occupied next week. It will give much room for the handling of their large business.

Mr. Randall outfitted the Flathead survey party here yesterday. Coal Creek's importance as a town will be greatly increased if a road is built through this way to the Flathead.

Mr. James Reid and Miss Emily Greenway were united in marriage at Coal Crrek on Tuesday evening. The knot was tied by Rev. John Robson, B. A. Mr. Reid is an electrician in the employ of the Coal Company.

COMMUNICATION

Editor Fernie Free Press

The government wagon road between Morrissey Junction and Fernie is now impassable owing to a portion of the said wagon road sliding down to the C. P. R. track, a mile and a half from Morrissey Junction, and I understand no steps are being taken to repair the road. This is an unfortunate state of affairs. If it is put off until Spring the usefulness of the road during the winter will be reduced to nil. The road is essentially a winter road,—the best for sleighihg purposes in the whole Elk valley.

HOCKEY LEAGUE FORMED.

FIVE TEAMS COMPETING IN THE CROW'S NEST

Officers Elected for next Year. Twenty Games Scheduled for January and February

The annual meeting of the Crow's Nest Pass Hockey Association was held at the Arlington Hotel, Pincher Creek, on Dec. 14th, 1904. The representatives present were President Schofield and Secretary W A. Ross; J. E. Sheppard, Fernie; R. Ormond, Pincher Creek; W. Steadman, Macleod W, H. Buchanan, Turtle Club; and W. H. Buchanan, (proxy) Coleman.

Coleman asked for admission into the league on condition that its first game be scheduled for a date after Jan. 15th. On a vote of the meeting Coleman aad Macleod were taken in as members of the association. The minutes of last meeting were adopted and the financial report showing a surplus on hand was read.

The colors were selected as follows: Fernie, white and blue; Macleod, red, white and blue; Pincher Creek, red and white; Turtle, grey and white: (Coleman left open).

OFFICERS.

The officers for the ensuing year were then elected as follows.

Patrons.—G. G. S. Lindsey, General Manager of the C. N. P. Coal Co., Fernie: Mr. Justice Harvey, Macleod; J. H. Farmer, Frank; H. N. Galer, Coleman; M. Morden, Pincher Creek.

Honorary President,—A. C. Liphardt, Fernie.

Honorary Vice-President.—John Henderson, Pincher Creek.

President.—J. H. Schofield, Pincher Creek.

Secretary-Treasurer—W. A. Ross, Pincher Creek.

1st Vice-president—M. A. Kastner, Fernie.

2nd Vice presidant—W. H. Buchanan, Frank.

4th vice-president—Mr. Tinning, Macleod

5th Vice-president—Mr. Tripp, Coleman.

Rule 15 of the constitution was altered. A player must live in a place 15 days before he can be registered as a member of a club and he must be registered 15 days before he can play in a league game.

The season's league games were then scheduled as follows:

Jan. 2nd, Pincher Creek at MacLeod.
" " Fernie vs. Turtle at Blairmore
" 9th, MacLeod at Fernie.
" " Turtle at Pincher Creek.
" 11th, McLeod vs. Tuttle at Blairmore.

" 30th, Macleod at Pincher Creek
" 31st, Macleod at Coleman.
Feb. 6th, Pincher Creek at Fernie.
" 6th, Turtle vs. Macleod at Macleod.
" 8th, Coleman vs Turtle at Blairmore
" 14th, Coleman at Macleod.
" 14th, Pincher Creek vs Turtle at Blairmore.
Feb. 17th, Fernie at Coleman.
" 22nd, Coleman at Fernie.
" 27th, Coleman at Pincher Creek.

Fernie last year won the two trophies of the association and no doubt the clubs at the eastern end of the Crow will make a supreme effort this year to wrest them from her. The Fernie club is getting into shape to give all comers a royal battle. The personnel of the local team will not contain more than one or two of the old senior players but some of the new men in sight have played excellent hockey in other places and Fernie can be relied upon to put up a good exhibition of the King of Winter Sports.

SKULL FRACTURED BY HAMMER.

A row took place in a C. P. R. boarding car in the Fernie yard early yesterday morning between Chas. Sanford and J. Scott. The latter struck Sanford on the head with a hammer, fracturing the skull in two places. The injured man was removed to the hospital, where he lies in a precarious condition.

Scott was placed under arrest and his preliminary trial commenced this morning There were several eye witnesseu of the affair and two of them were examined. The evidence so far shows that the injured man bears a quarrelsome reputation. Scott, on the other hand, is a quiet, inoffensive man. Before the row began Sanford used foul and abusive language to Scott. The latter resented it and knocked him down three times, Sanford coming at him after each of the first two attacks. The hammer it is alleged was used in the third attack. The case was adjourned till Monday.

THE P. BURNS COMPANY

As usual the P. Burns & Co. are making a big display for the Christmas season. Special lines of goods are already arriving and by the middle of next week their store will present a very attractive appearance. Specially dressed Christmas beef, pork and mutton, several thousand pounds of choice Eastern turkeys as well as ducks geese and chickens are coming in. Shrimps, Olympia and eastern aysters and excellent mince meat are side attractions. The decorations now under way will surpass all previous efforts. The prices are right at this meat market, the goods are unsurpassed anywhere and customers receive the most courteous treatment from the attentive clerks. These are a few reasons why this company is forging steadily ahead. Its enterprise at this season is only indicative of its progressiveness and enterprise and during the whole year.

SELLING ITS REALTY PROPERTY.

The fine bank property of the Bank of Commerce in this city has passed into the hands of the Dominion Realty Company. It is understood that this banking institution is disposing of all its real e tate property. The Fernie property was purchased for $15,000, the two 30 foot lots bringing $5,000 and the new building $10,000. The bank will occupy the property under lease.

SCHOOL WANTED AT SPARWOOD.

Sparwood is Now a Lively Lumber Camp. The Wardrop Mill Will Soon Employ Over 100 Men.

W. W. Wardrop, the energetic millman from Sparwood, was in the city this week. Mr. Wardrop has a first-class tie making plant in full operation and turning out ten car-loads of ties per day as well as two car-loads of slabs and edging. Mr. Wardrop has a three year contract with the C. P. R. which will aggregate 800,000. He has in his employ 83 men and this number will be increased by 25 more in a few weeks. Mr. Wardrop has his mill on the east side of the river where he holds a lease from the Coal Company for a section of timber land. The logs are cut on the opposite side of the river and floated across by the aid of a boom. The river is open at Sparwood all the winter through because of the strong current. The C. P. R. has promised to put in an agent at Sparwood at the beginning of the new year.

Mr. Wardrop's only grievance now is the lack of a school at Sparwood, and he intends to make application to the government through Mr. McMullin to have an assisted school instituted at that place. Mr. Wardrop will put up a school house if the government will pay the teacher's salary. At the present time there are sufficient children at Sparwood to form a school and Mr. Wardrop has numerous applications for work from married men, with children of school age but who refused to go there without some guarantee that a school would be started. Mr. Wardrop has no doubt that the government will grant the request of the people of Sparwood when the matter is properly presented.

A SPECIAL COUNCIL MEETING.

A special meeting of the council was called for Tuesday evening to prepare to meet the Great Northern officials who were expected in the city on Thursday. It was resolved that the council should form a committee of the whole to meet the visiting officials.

The council expressed its satisfaction at the ready manner in which the Great Northern had gone to work to grade Thompson St. at its own expense. They decided that they would put in a side walk connecting the new depot with the city side walks and all the members favored the placing of street lamps at intervals along this street. The mayor was appointed a committee to ascertain the Coal Company's rates for street lamps.

1ST G.N.R. TRAIN INTO FERNIE

Yesterday a special train bearing Chief Engineer Hoaglan and chief contractor Sims of the Great Northern and several minor officials arrived in Fernie over the new road. They were met by the city council and a committee comprising J. D. Quail, R. W. Wood and D. V. Mott of the Board of Trade. It was expected that General Supt. Ward and L. Hill would have been in but they were unexpectedly called to St. Paul.

Mr. Sims stated that the road was practically completed. The gumbo cut near Morrissey was nearing completion and the road was all ballasted. In the spring additional ballasting would be necessary. He stated that he understood the G. N. would put on a regular passenger service between Fernie and Rexford at once.

32 HOURS FROM PORTHAND.

J. R. Pollock, American consul, on his way home from Portland, Ore., joined the party at Rexfood and came in with them. He made the entire trip in 32 hours.

AN OPEN LETTER.

TO THE CITIZENS OF FERNIE:

At the meeting of the city council held on Sept. 12th the application of Messrs Mott and Hammond & Turner, applying for a telephone franchise, were considered. Both parties agreed to install a first class system and maintain a continuous service during the whole 24 hours of every day, charging $3.00 per month for business phones and $2.00 per month for private houses. Both parties also offered good concessions in regard to the installation of a fire alarm system. Messrs Mott were given the preference by reason of their proposition being for a ten-year period, which is shorter by five years than the offer of Hammond & Turner.

This week a representative of the B. C. Telephone Co., headquarters at Vancouver, came to the city and looked over the situation. He is soliciting subscriptions for his company, whom he claims intend erecting a phone system in Fernie. He is exhibiting a letter from Mr. D. V. Mott stating that Mr. Mott has withdrawn from the field and will not go ahead with his system.

The proposition the B. C. company are seeking business on is for a system that will operate only from 8 a. m. to 10 p. m., rates $4.00 per month for business houses, $3.00 per month for private houses. My opinion is that our own local applicants have submitted a much better proposition than the outsiders, in that the terms of our local men are better by $12.00 per annum and moreover they offer a 24-hour service against a 14-hour service by the B. C. company. It would be as well for all intending subscribers to withhold their signatures to any contract until the matter is finally dealt with by the city council.

FRED STORK.

THREE LICENSE MEETINGS.

A special meeting of the city licence commissioners took place at the city hall last Friday evening when the three commissioners consisting of Mayor Stork Ald. Lundie and Jas. A. Broley were present. W. Mills application for the Waldorf was granted. Mr. Broley opposed it on the ground that Mr. Eschwig who owned the building also owned the Northern across the street. He was willing to grant a transfer. The Mayor stated that the commissioners should have been approached before the building was commenced.

T. Caravetta's application for the Calabia Hotel was left over to be discussed at the next regular meeting.

The regular city license meeting was held at the city hall on Wednesday. All the applications for renewal were granted. The application for a new license from T. Caravetta was laid over till the next meeting as his petition was not properly signed.

The district license board held its annual meeting last evening at the court house. All the applications for renewals were granted. The C. P. R. put in an objection to the Jaffray hotel.

The S. A. banquet to-morrow evening promises to be a successful event. A good program of music by local talent is being provided.

C. Richards is fully prepared for Christmas. His grocery department is replete with all the delicacies that are associated with the Christmas season. His gents' furnishing department is now in full swing. It is a pleasure to deal with this firm. The bright new store is kept in excellent order, the goods are all fresh and customers receive the best of attention.

BID WAS TOO LOW.

Property of Fernie Manufacturing Co. Failed to Bring the Upset Price at Auction Sale.

The property of the Fernie Manufacturing Company was put up for sale by auction on Saturday by order of G. G. Moffatt the assignee. The Union Bank of Macleod, one of the heaviest creditors, bid through D. V. Mott and the old company also took a hand in the bidding through H. Oldland. The highest bid was $15,000 by Mr. Mott. The sale was declared off pending an order from the county court judge. The upset price, to cover all indebtedness was about $30,000. The assignee has advised for an order to sell the property for whatever it will fetch, and it is probably that another sale will soon be called. The bid already made holds good at such sale.

This property is a snap for anyone who is looking for a safe investment. The timber limits included in the property alone are worth the amount bid and the building and plant cost $40,000 and is as good as new.

THE "PRETTY POLLY" COMPANY.

Miss Ada Palmer Walker, the dainty comedienne in "Pretty Polly", was for a long time the leading star in Whitney's "Dolly Varden". Pretty Polly is one constant stream of ludicrous though rational situations, splendid musical numbers, good acting and gorgeous costumes. Miss Palmer is supported by Geo. H. Hubert the comedian who formerly starred with the "Bostonians", and he is an evening's entertainment in himself. Miss Frost, dancing instructor to Pretty Polly, is a general favorite. The other members are Messrs. Himes, Payette and Smith and Miss Francis.

WILY INDIANS USE DOGS.

Provincial Police Have Difficulty in Preventing the Indians From Hunting Deer With Dogs.

Provincial police Walker and Dow who went after the Indians last week for hunting deer with dogs were unable to entrap the wily red men although the police were satisfied in their own minds that the Indians had grossly violated the law. They found four encampments between Elko and Wardner. At each camp were about five dogs all securely tied and looking very innocent. It is believed that the Indians, alive to the situation, had spies out and passed the word along ahead of the police and had the dogs tied at the camps.

The four camps had at least 100 horses many of them pack animals and by the Indians' own admissions they were killing many deer. The wild, scared condition of the scattered deer on the mountains as found by the white hunters also bear out the theory that the Indians have been chasing them with dogs. The police were unable to secure any incriminating evidence on this point nor on that of selling the slain deer.

TO DELIVER ITS OWN FREIGHT

The G. N. R. will Contract for the Cartage of all Freight to and from its Freight Depot at Fernie.

The Great Northern Railway Company intend to make a big bid for the freight business in this city and one proposal it is making, will if carried out, go far toward putting it in the lead. This Railway Company is contemplating delivering all freight to the doors of all customers and of carrying all out going freight from the shipper to the depot. G. H. Williams the G. N. R. freight agent was in the city this week and his business was largely on this matter. He stated that as Fernie was the terminal point this system could be adopted without any difficulty. The contract for all the drayage would be given to one firm and the cartage charged would be added to the freight bill. The benefits in small shipments were particularly obvious. Where draymen might easily charge 25 cents for the delivery of small individual shipments the railway company, by its contract with the dray firm could have it done for a few cents. Again under this system goods would be delivered promptly. It is understood that if the system is introduced the Fernie Cartage Co. will receive the contract.

HAVE TAKEN THE LINE OVER.

The branch line to Coal Creek was taken over by the Coal Company yesterday. Superintendent Erickson, of Cranbrook, was here to make the transfer.

An arrangement has been made by which the Coal Company uses the C.P.R. rolling stock and men until the end of the month, when it is expected permanent arrangements will have been made. The Coal Company held a conference with the staff of men this morning to engage them permanently.

A WONDERFUL STORE.

Though situated a block from Main street and occupying temporary premises the Trites-Wood Co. store is, as in past years, the Mecca of many Christmas shoppers. Their 120-foot store is crammed from cellar to garret with the best of all lines of goods, and though the store lacks display space the obliging staff of clerks never weary of showing their goods to the entire satisfaction of the most fastidious purchaser.

The store is tastefully decorated and everything possible has been done to display something of every line of Christmas goods. Of toys an endless stock has been purchased and the toy counter is replenished as the customers clear it off.

The china department is a strong Christmas feature of the Trites-Wood Co. this year. A large quantity of painted china imported from France, Germany, Austria, Japan and China is on sale at low prices.

The dry goods department, under Mr. Clode's management, is bristling with many Christmas bargains. In ladies' neckwear alone this store can make a better display than any other house between Winnepeg and the coast. Silk blouses of dazzling beauty and rich dress materials captivate the eyes of the ladies.

To enumerate a few of the beautiful Christmas gifts, to suit all purses, that can be found in this great departmental store would be an endless task. A fair idea may be gleaned from their full page advt. in this issue, but the best way to learn of the capabilities of this store and the wondrous bargains offered is to personally inspect it. Everybody is treated well whether they purchase or not.

A CHAPTER OF ACCIDENTS.

A man named McIver, employed by the Elk Lumber company, received a fall on Wednesday and broke his leg. A fellow employee got his leg caught between a log and a tree the day previous and received a compound fracture of the bone.

Hector McDonald got his leg badly crushed at Coal Creek mines last evening while on his way out of the mine on a car. He was removed to the Fernie hospital where it was found that his leg had received a very severe compound fracture.

J. C. Hutchison is putting another storey on his tailor shop.

The Fernie Dairy company has built up a large feed business in the city.

F. J. Mitchell is carrying on his semi-ready clothing business at his home, Pellatt Ave.

Wedding bells will jingle merrily with the christmas bells this season. W. O. Robbins says he furnished four homes this week for brides-to-be before christmas. He also says he has three more in sight for next week.

The schools closed to day for the christmas holidays. Yesterday the scholars were treated to candies by the trustees. This afternoon a public exhibition of the school work was held.

FARMER TELLS OF A BAD TWO YEARS

THEN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS DROVE AWAY ALL HIS PAINS.

Was Bent Over With Pain and Hardly Able to Work Till He Used the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Consecon, Ont., Dec. 12.—(Special).—Mr. David Rowe, a well-known and highly respected farmer, living about three miles from here, is telling his friends of his remarkable recovery from a long period of suffering by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I had very severe pains in my back more or less upwards of two years," Mr. Rowe says. "These pains seemed to concentrate their full force in the small of my back, and the pain was almost unbearable. It made me go bent over and I could not straighten up to save my life.

"When I went to urinate it gave me great pain, and you may imagine I was not able to do much work. I consulted a doctor, but his prescription did me no good.

"Then I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and I felt better by the time I had used the first box. Ten boxes cured me completely."

HUDSON BAY.

Mr. A. P. Lowe Says He Could Have Made the Northwest Passage.

Mr. A. P. Lowe, who was in charge of the expedition to Hudson's Bay, is once more back in Ottawa, after an absence of about one year and three months. He says that from his observations Hudson's Strait is navigable for about four months each year. He and his party wintered at Fullerton Inlet, the extreme northwest point of Hudson's Bay, and in July last came out by Hudson's Strait to Port Burwell, where the Neptune met the Eric, and received supplies of coal and provisions. The arrangements for the meeting between the two steamers were so perfect that they arrived within an hour of each other. After leaving Port Burwell the Neptune proceeded along the Greenland Coast to Smith Sound, and Mr. Lowe went as far north as Cape Sabine, where he saw Peary's winter headquarters. This was about the middle of August. He did not intend to go any farther north, but could not do so if he had wanted, owing to the accumulation of ice.

Relics of Franklin.

The Neptune afterwards passed through Lancaster Sound to Beechy Island, where Franklin spent his last winter. This island was the headquarters of the Franklin relief expeditions, and the remains of the old house are still to be seen there. At this point Mr. Lowe obtained a record left by the Swedish Magnetic Polar expedition. It revealed that the party were all right in August, 1903, and intended going down the Peel Sound in order to get as near the pole as they could. The Neptune crossed over to Leopold Harbor, on the south side of Lancaster Sound, and there saw the remains of a launch belonging to the Franklin Expedition and a quantity of provisions left by the Windward, a Dundee whaler, for the Swedish Expedition. At Pond's Inlet Mr. Lowe saw three boats of the Dundee whaling fleet. They had no whales on board. From there the Neptune went south to Cumberland Gulf, where the ice was very heavy, and afterwards passed through Hudson's Strait under steam to Fullerton Bay, where they wintered. Two policemen were left at Fullerton and two were invalided home. The Neptune was then relieved by the Arctic. Mr. Lowe states that he could have made the northwest passage if he had so desired.

Royalty in Inches.

King Edward represents fully the average height in British stature, which is 5 feet 7¾ inches, his actual height in his boots being 5 feet 8½ inches. The Emperor William falls slightly below his Royal uncle's, but not below the average German height. Of the elected rulers President Loubet represents the French average, which is 5 feet 6 inches. On the other hand, we find the Emperor of Japan to be far above the national standard of height. His Majesty is a tall man for a Japanese, 5 feet 6 inches. The tallest Royal personage is King Leopold, 6 feet 6 inches, which places him next to Peter the Great, who measured 6 feet 8½ inches.

LOVE.

Love is kindly and deceitless.—Yeats.

Love can sun the realms of night.—Schiller.

Love's a thing that's never out of season.—Barry Cornwall.

He that shuts out love in turn shall be shut out by love.—Tennyson.

Love is master of the wisest; it is only fools that defy him.—Thackeray.

Love never dies of starvation, but often of indigestion.—Ninonde l'Enclos.

The magic of first love is the ignorance that it can ever end.—Beaconsfield.

It is impossible to love a second time when we have once really ceased to love.—La Rochefoucauld.

An Odd Revenge.

To avenge his defeat in the municipal elections for the provincial council at Tra los Montes the Marquis de Xanos cornered the entire stock of butchers and poulterers of the town. The inhabitants had to subsist without meat for a week.

The Brazilian flower known as the running antelope is so called because its white petals have a series of well defined, dark colored lines and dots in which the imagination can readily trace the form of an antelope, with its limbs outstretched and head thrown back, seemingly fleeing for its life. In the "caricature plant" one species has the imitative form on the petals, and another has it outlined in the ribs and shading of the leaves.

The last mentioned curiosity bears a remarkably well executed likeness of the Duke of Wellington and has on that account been named "Arthur and His Nose." Among the orchids the imitative form is entirely different in character, being exhibited in the shape of the flower itself. Some are exact counterfeits of bees, butterflies, moths, etc., while others take upon themselves the form of worms and beetles. Naturalists believe that in the first instance it is nature's trap to lure other bees, moths and butterflies, but in the case of the worm and the beetle, orchids or those that are the exact counterparts of toads, lizards and huge spiders, they do not attempt to explain.

SLEEPLESS BABIES.

Well babies sleep soundl and wake up brightly. When babies are restless and sleepless it is the surest possible sign of illness—in all probability due to the derangement of the stomach and bowels, or teething troubles. Baby's Own Tablets are the only proper remedy. They remove the trouble and in this way give the little one sound, refreshing sleep, and it wakes up healthy and happy. Guaranteed to contain no harmful drug or opiate. Mrs. Thos. Cain Loring, Ont., says: "My baby suffered from stomach trouble and teething, and was quite cross. I got Bab's Own Tablets and the seemed to work almost like a charm. I think nothing can equal the Tablets for children's ailments." You can find them at druggists or get them potpaid at 25 cents a box, by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

An Old Shoe.

A young couple recently started on their wedding tour. A shower of rice and old shoes followed them as they entered the railroad coach. After the train pulled out the bridegroom saw an old shoe lying in the aisle. Supposing it was one that had been thrown at him, he picked it up and dropped it out of the window. An old man across the aisle wakened a few minutes later and began looking for that particular shoe. The bridegroom had to buy him a new pair.

Serious.

"My dear," said Mrs. Henpeck, "I'm positive that our George is thinking seriously of matrimony."

"Well, I only hope so," returned Henpeck, with unusual spirit. "I wouldn't want any boy of mine to be so unfortunate as to regard it as a joke."

Hitting Himself.

Father—Now, Maud, in selecting a husband look, before all things, for intelligence and integrity. Your mother, I am sorry to say, looked only for money.

ACHING KIDNEYS.

The kidneys filter every drop of your blood. The purity of the blood depend upon the kidneys—and the health of the kidneys depends upon the blood. If your blood is weak the kidneys have not strength for their work and leave the blood unfiltered and foul. If your blood is bad the kidneys get clogged with painful, poisonous impurities. That is what causes your backache with the dull pains or sharp stabs of sick kidneys. And kidney disease is one of the most deadly and hopeless things that can attack you. The only hope is to strike without delay at the root of the trouble in the blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They actually make new blood. They flush the kidneys clean, heal their inflammation, and give them strength for their work. Common kidney pills only touch the symptoms—Dr. Williams Pink Pills cure the cause. That is why they cure for good and the same time improve the health in every way.

Mr. Geo. Johnson, of the village of Ohio, N. S., gives strong proof of the truth of the above statements. He says: "My son, now nineteen years old, suffered greatly with kidney trouble. He was constantly troubled with severe pains in the back, and often passed sleepless nights. His appetite failed, he grew weak, and could hardly do the usual work that falls to the lot of a boy on a farm. We tried several kidney medicines, but they did not help him any. Then a friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and this was the first medicine that reached the cause of the trouble. He used the pills for a couple of months, and I am thankful to say is now as strong and healthy as any six boxes for $2.50.

Well babies sleep soundly and wake blood that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will not cure, simply because they make new, rich, red blood that expels disease from every part of the body. That is why they cure the worst cases of anaemia, indigestion, neuralgia, rheumatism, headache, and backaches, and the special ailments from which women alone suffer. But only the genuine pills can do this, and you should see that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and was quite cross. I get Baby's Own Tablets and they seemed to work all medicine dealers, or direct by mail from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., at 50 cents a box, or sixboxes for $2.50.

THE GREATER CANADA.

Lord Minto Says the Future of the Dominion Passes Imagination—The Old Order Passing.

At the farewell banquet given to Lord and Lady Minto, the retiring Governor-General said:

"I can assure Your Worship that if during my term of office I have been fortunate enough in the fulfilment of my duties to earn for myself the appreciation of the people of the Dominion, I ask for no greater reward and now I may say the same for Lady Minto. Her interests have always centred largely in the welfare of this country and the happiness of its everyday life, and it will always be a delight to her to hear of the further success of work which she has very much at heart.

"But to-night, Your Worship, there is a 'rift' in the lute. I now have come to say good-bye. I have run my race in Canada, the awkward fences and the nasty turns are things of the past, and I cannot ride it over again. It is not for me to say whether the course has been easy or difficult, but it has certainly been full of interest, and, after all, gentlemen, it has only been the first heat in the great Imperial stakes which it rests with the people of the United Kingdom and the people of Canada to win or lose.

"I hope Your Worship will absolve me from any intention of trespassing in the domain of politics, but perhaps it may not be out of place for me to glance very lightly at the history of the past six years that have gone by since, as Governor-General, I set foot in the Dominion. They have been years of marvelous prosperity, of great advancement in commercial wealth, of great development of the magnificent resources of this wonderful country, but greater influences in the history of Canada than any of these have come into existence.

Problems of the Future.

"A great man has raised considerations as to the Imperial responsibility of the King's subjects beyond the seas, and a great statesman is aiming at directing into one common channel the interests of the Motherland, and her self-governing dependencies. We are in a transition state, the old order of things is passing away, colonies are becoming nations, with a national sentiment of their own, but—I say it as strongly as I can—with no diminution of affection to the Motherland from which they sprang. We are face to face with a problem full of difficulties, no doubt. Conditions are changing, and we cannot afford to stand still. Now that I am leaving you, I will only say, work out the problem with all deference for the traditional doctrine of the Old World, with full regard for the hopes of your rising nationality, with all respect for racial traditions, but remember always that what is good for the Empire is good for Canada, and what is good for Canada is good for the Empire.

Canada's Splendid Provinces.

"Your Worship, I have traveled much throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion, and, proud as Canadians are of their country, I believe they can hardly exaggerate its future possibilities. I have just returned from the Northwest. The Territories are, as you know, not new to me, but as the other day I rode through the Saskatchewan Valley, beautiful beyond description in all the brilliant coloring of the fall, across prairies still strewn with the skeletons of extinct buffalo herds, past Indian battlefields of only a few years ago, and as I found settlements growing into villages, villages into prosperous towns, and immigrants pouring into the land, I realized that we are at the commencement of a new era. Your Worship, I can at any rate bear witness to the splendid promise of Canada's future. I can go home to tell the people of the Motherland that their kinsmen here beyond the seas are, by their own energy, day by day developing Imperial resources and Imperial wealth, the vastness of which is as yet but little known. I hope I may always share in the aspirations of the Canadian people, and, Your Worship, I can assure you Lady Minto and I will take home with us the warmest recollections of our life here, and will never forget the farewell we have received from the citizens of Montreal."

Uselessness of War.

At the recent meeting of the Women's National Council in Toronto, Mrs. Byles drew attention to the population of Canada—five or six millions—and said that there was that number of men in the European Continental armies in time of peace. They earned nothing and did nothing, but their fellow countrymen had to pay for their support while they practiced the art of killing.

In dozens of recent wars there had been only loss for both winner and loser. The soldier was promoted and the contractor got rich, but the nation lost. England had once a war to keep the Bourbons from the Spanish throne. They had another to put a Bourbon on the throne of France. No Bourbon would ever reign in France as long as the world lasted.

The United States had a war and got the Phillipines. Now they were guessing what to do with the new territory. Britain had a war. She gained the Transvaal and achieved her point. But things were never worse in South Africa. Men were coming away from the country. Chinamen were working the mines.

Till recently the plea had been that there were no international courts. Now there was a court at The Hague, with 65 judges on the rota, prepared to arbitrate any case. Carnegie would give it a home. Men would get justice, which was never gained in a war where the strong party won.

Sure Proof.

Paterfamilias—And could you support my daughter, sir? Lover—I have two strong arms. Paterfamilias—But can they support her? Lover—They often have.—Melbourne Weekly Times.

God never gives His power to feed our pride.

"There it goes again," said the trolley conductor as he rang the bell to let off a passenger who had only ridden for a square.

"You'd be astonished," continued the knight of the bell strap, "to know how many people try to beat the trolley for a free ride when they want to make a call a square or two away from home.

"They hop on the car, wait till it has started and then want to know if the car doesn't go to some place which they know it doesn't come within a mile of. In this way they get their ride for nothing and go on their way in the belief that they have fooled the conductor."

Discretion a Failure.

"I was at the husking bee one day. Great fun."

"Find a red ear?"

"Yes."

"Kiss the prettiest girl?"

"Nope. Didn't dare. All the pretty girls were engaged to husky farmers."

"What did you do?"

"Kissed the homeliest girl."

"Did that give satisfaction?"

"Not a bit of it. Each of the husky farmers felt that I had personally snubbed his best girl."

More Likely to Get It.

Hardupp—What do you want it for?

"Oh, I've got a sure thing in the fifth race tomorrow."

"You don't want money; you want to borrow trouble."

"Say, pa!"

"Well, what?"

"Why does that man in the band run the trombone down his throat?"

"I suppose it is because he has a taste for music."

An Incubator Without Cash

Until October, 1905

There is big money to be made in raising chickens with an Incubator.

Canada exports annually millions of chickens to the United States and Great Britain.

The consumption of poultry in Canada is increasing rapidly and the poultry dealers complain that they cannot get enough poultry to fill their orders.

One woman bought a No. 2 Chatham Incubator the first of March—she had five hatches by July first and had four hundred plump, sturdy chicks. In six months her Incubator had paid her $100.00, several times its cost. A Chatham Incubator should pay for itself each hatch.

We have perfected an Incubator and brooder. We believe it is now absolutely the best in the world. We have sufficient capital behind us, and we are out for the entire business in incubators. We know that there is no other incubator that can approach the

Chatham Incubator

This is our proposition: To demonstrate our absolute confidence in the Chatham Incubator we will send one to you, freight prepaid, and you make your first payment in October, 1905.

The fact that we sell our Incubators in this manner guarantees them to the fullest extent. Thirty days' trial is a delusion and a snare. If you have good luck you may get off one hatch in that time, and even then you are uncertain, and if you reject the machine you will have to pay the freight both ways. But with us you send in your order and we ship the machine prepaid. When it arrives, if it seems all right, start your hatch, and we will give you until October, 1905, before you have to pay a cent in cash. We positively guarantee that the machine is a good hatcher. Every machine should sell a dozen, and we will, on no account, allow a machine that is defective to remain in any neighborhood.

WHAT SIX CHATHAM INCUBATOR USERS HAVE TO SAY:

The Incubator sent me is working exceedingly well. It is very easily operated, and so far has required attention for only a few minutes per day. The first lot of eggs, 110, on examination I found that 53 were not fertile, two others were broken accidentally, and I had 51 chicks or about 90 per cent. of the fertile eggs. The second trial of 110 gave me 93 living chickens. The brooder gives equally good satisfaction. The young broods are doing well. Yours truly, J. E. JOHNSTON, Editor Leamington Post, Leamington, Ont.

I have used your No. 2 Incubator for three hatches, and am so well pleased with it that I ordered a No.3 which your agent, Mr. Tumbull, brought to-day. My third hatch came off yesterday with 112 chicks out of 119 eggs. We have also a Chatham Fanning Mill which gives good satisfaction. I will not lose an opportunity of recommending the Chatham machines to my friends. Yours respectfully, MRS. SIDNEY SMITH, Scotland, Ont.

The No. 3 incubator you sent me is all right, we hatched out of 109 fertile eggs, 105 good strong chicks, and the brooder saved them all. We had in the incubator at the same time, in the other tray, 44 duck eggs and 34 goose eggs, from which we got 39 ducks and 32 geese; total, 71 from 78 eggs, also hatched 6 turkeys at the same time that the hen eggs were in. We recommend the Chatham Incubator and Brooder to be the best and surest to hatch, under all circumstances, of any other make. We have handled four other makes, in our poultry business which we run on a large scale at Birtle, keeping Barred Plymouth Rocks, Pekin Ducks, Toulon Geese and Mammoth Bronze Turkeys. Yours truly, D. A. ADAMS, Birtle, Man.

The No. 2 Incubator I bought from you is all you recommended it to be. I put in 101 eggs, and after testing out the infertile ones, I have 72 chicks. I find the machine first class in every particular and easy to run, if directions are followed carefully. Yours respectfully, MRS. HENRY CHASE, Warren, Ont.

I wish to let you know of my success with your Incubator. Out of 124 eggs I got 74 chicks, and out of my second hatch I got 94 from 108 eggs. I find the machine a pure success if run according to directions. The brooder is a wonder, and I have not lost a chick as yet, and they are almost feathered. Yours truly, JOHN H. McKINNON, Collingwood, Ont.

Your No. 2 Chatham Incubator has given very good returns the first hatch. Out of 59 eggs, I had 42 chicks. I was rather afraid of wasting the eggs, and so did not fill the machine, but when the chicks came, I was sorry I had not filled it. Will recommend your Incubator to my neighbors. Yours sincerely, MRS. MARGARET McINTOSH, Whitewood, Assa.

Chatham Incubators and Brooders have every new improvement worth while in an incubator or brooder. The incubators are made with two walls case within case, of dry material that has been thoroughly seasoned in our lumber yards. They are finished in antique oak, are built solid as a rock and will stand any amount of usage for years. They are fitted with a perfect steel and brass regulator that insures a successful hatch. There has never before been such an offer as this made in the whole world. The sooner you take advantage of this offer, the more time you will have before October, 1905, to make first payment. Cut off the coupon and send it in to-day for our booklet on the way to raise chickens, what it costs and your profit. You will obtain all information regarding the Chatham Incubator.

ANECDOTES OF WOMEN.

Some Bright Stories Captured and Compiled by Lloyd's Weekly News—Railway King's Wife's Mistake.

Many very funny stories have been told of Mrs. Hudson, wife of the "Railway King." A gentleman who was showing her over the South Kensington Museum pointed to a statue and said, "That is Marcus Aurelius."

"Lor! how like the late Markiss!" exclaimed Mrs. Hudson, who prided herself on knowing all the British aristocracy!

Another Puppy.

A certain lady had a custom of saying to a favorite little poodle dog when out walking, "Come along, sir!"

A would-be witty gentleman stepped up to her one day when she said this and asked, "Did you call me, madam?"

"Oh, no, sir," she replied, with perfect composure; "it was another puppy I spoke to."

Soon Gone.

Fanny Murray, a beauty of Walpole's time, was complaining of money, when Sir Robert Atkins gave her a £20 note!

Simply saying, "D—— your £20 what does it signify?" she clapped it between two pieces of bread and butter and ate it!

Smart Retort.

According to Walpole, after the execution of eighteen malefactors in 1787, a female was bawling an account of them, but called them nineteen.

A gentleman said to her, "Why do you say nineteen? There were but eighteen hanged."

"Sir," replied the woman, "I did not know you had been reprieved!"

High Thought.

A woman in humble life, when one day on her way back from church, was asked whether she had understood the sermon, a strange and learned divine having preached.

"Wud I hae the presumption!" was her simple and contented answer.

School Birches.

Lord Lytton, when Viceroy of India, was seated one day at dinner next to a lady whose name was Birch, and who was certainly not over-intelligent.

"Are you acquainted with any of the Birches?" she said to His Excellency.

"Oh, yes," replied Lord Lytton. "I knew several of them most intimately while at Harrow—indeed, more intimately than I cared to."

"My lord," exclaimed the lady, "you forget the Birches are relatives of mine."

"And yet they cut me," said the Viceroy; "but," and he smiled pleasantly, "I have never felt more inclined to kiss the rod than I do now!"

Mrs. Birch did not see the point, however, and told her husband His Excellency had insulted her.

Sailor's Wife.

When the famous Lord Dundonald was serving in South America with the Chilians, he was accompanied by his wife, who shared his dangers and soothed his anxieties. One night, while in command of the Chilian fleet his ship got becalmed under an enemy's battery, from which it was assailed with red hot shot. His men were seized with a panic and deserted the guns. At this critical juncture, Dundonald went down to the cabin and asked his wife to come on deck, saying, "If a woman sets them the example they may be shamed out of their fears; it is our only chance."

Lady Dundonald immediately followed him on deck. The first object that met her eye was the battery with its flaming furnaces, round which dark figures were moving, looking more like incarnate demons than men. A glance at her husband's impressive features, and his calmness, reassured her. She took the match and fired a gun, which he had pointed. The effect on the crew was electrical. They returned to their posts with a shout, and the battery was speedily silenced.

Doctor's Criticism.

When conversation in a company in which the famous Dr. Johnson was present had fallen upon rather a delicate topic, one of the ladies, with an expression of great displeasure, rose and left the room.

"That woman," said the doctor, "is the most immodest of all the company."

Fall of Orleans.

Lady Harriet D'Orsay was residing at a stall at a bazaar held in aid of the funds of some asylum, when there came up the young Duke of Orleans, son and heir of King Louis Philippe. The duke, after some polite small talk, began to extol the beauty of her hair; and, indeed, her Henrietta Maria coiffure had never looked glossier and softer than it did that day.

"Oh!" exclaimed His Royal Highness, "if I could only possess one of those entrancing ringlets!"

"How much would monseigneur give for one? Five thousand francs?"

"A mere bagatelle!"

"Six thousand francs?"

"Anything so charming a lady chose to ask."

"I will not be extortionate," said Lady Harriet. "We will say five thousand."

Then she very composedly produced a dainty little pair of scissors, snipped off the adorable ringlet, wrapped it in silver paper, and handed it, with a smile and a curtsey full of graceful dignity, to the duke. His Royal Highness looked very straight down his nose, and, returning Lady Harriet's salute, stalked somewhat gloomily away, feeling that he had got the worst of it, doubtless. But his privy purse duly forwarded the money the next day.

Top Dressing Sandy Land.

Top dressing of sandy land with potash fertilizers gave good results with rye in some German tests, although the yields were not as satisfactory as when the potash was applied before seeding.

THE SOLDIERS' FRIEND.

Miss Violet Brooke-Hunt, the Angel of the South African War.

Miss Violet Brooke-Hunt is one of those charming whole-hearted English girls such as make delightful the healthy pages of Anthony Trollope and Henry Kingsley, and her strong, womanly qualities and compassionate nature have been disciplined and inspired under the influence of the nineteenth century heroine, Florence Nightingale.

"I have known her all my life," said Miss Brooke-Hunt shortly after her arrival in Toronto on Saturday evening, 15th October. "She is my great friend, and it was she who urged me to go to South Africa."

One of the sunlight rifts in the storm of the Boer war is the story of Miss Brooke-Hunt's work among the soldiers. Many a fevered brow was soothed by this ministering angel of the South African struggle, and among the colonial troops there were none who did not know her, and "to know her was to love her." She wears the trophies of their affection, a ring from Natal, another from New Zealand, a third from Penang, a bracelet from Australia—

"And I can only wear the jewelry, you see. The Canadians—the dear fellows—gave me a great silver bowl and four silver candlesticks."

Miss Brooke-Hunt's work in the war is well known, but after the return of the contingents she also interested herself in the work done for the colonial contigents at the coronation. The Colonial Troops' Club, an idea of Mr. Chamberlain, was aided by her, and in the convenient house obtained off Piccadilly during the twelve weeks it was occupied, 32,000 visitors were entertained and 5,000 men slumbered under the hospitable roof.

"I am very, very Imperial," said Miss Brooke-Hunt earnestly. "After the war I intended to visit all the colonies, but last year I could not do much, and this year I began with Canada as the nearest. People have no idea of what a wonderful country this is," she said, speaking of her tour in the Northwest, where the Mounted Police and she became mutually enamored, and of her visit to Winnipeg.

Her visit to Toronto has been partly arranged for by Col. Otter, who suggested the lecture which she gave on the 18th inst. on "A Woman's Memories of the War." She spoke out of a full experience upon this subject, as the war office authorities recognized in granting her the war medals, and the special military coronation medal which the colonial troops declared they did not care to receive unless she were included in the decoration, to which the authorities agreed. Miss Brooke-Hunt is also the recipient of the order of Our Lady of Grace of St. John of Jerusalem.

A Vegetable With a Pedigree.

Of all the plants used for food there is none which has been so long known or has had, so to say, so distinguished a lineage as asparagus. Its record, in fact, reaches back to almost the commencement of authentic history, as it is mentioned by the comic poet Cratinus, who died about 425 B. C., and was a contemporary of though slightly older than Aristophanes.

Among the Romans also the tasty vegetable was held in high esteem. Cato the elder—not the gentleman who was of opinion that Plato reasoned well, but his great-grandfather, who insisted upon the destruction of Carthage and who was born 243 B. C.—wrote a work, which is still extant, "De Re Rustica," and in it he treats at length of the virtues and proper cultivation of asparagus. Pliny also in his "Natural History" (about 60 A. D.) has much to say on the subject. "Of all the productions of your garden," he feelingly observes, "your chief care will be your asparagus," and he devotes several chapters and parts of chapters to its many beneficent qualities and the best modes of raising it.

JINGLES AND JESTS.

Ma's Advantage.

Wisht I wuz an ignerent body like ma;
She's never a-scairt o' the dark;
She don't know a lion is under the bed
And ogres are standin' jest—hark!
Jest there in the shadder, and bogies may come
And ghosts riz right out o' the grave!
Gee whiz, when you don't know what's settin' around
It's easy enough to be brave!

But He Meant Well.

The good man was comforting the stricken widow.

"Do not grieve, sister," said he. "Think how much better off he is."

And the good man wondered why she refused to be longer comforted by him.

HOLIDAY EXCURSIONS.

The extremely low rates granted by the railway companies for Holiday Excursions during the month of December makes it possible for residents of the Northweest to spend the winter in the east at a comparatively small expense. The new fast trains from Winnipeg to St. Paul makes the route via St. Paul and Chicago more popular than ever. The Burlington Route which runs along the banks of the Mississippi river for three hundred miles is one of the most popular lines, as it gives passengers an all day ride through the famous Mississippi River Valley, the most picturesque and delightful in America. The route is through a prosperous and well settled country all the way, towns and cities are numerous, and every mile presents something of interest to the traveller. The Burlington Route have issued a very attractive and interesting descriptive folder which gives the time of trains, and a map via all routes from the Northwest to Eastern Canada, a copy of which will be sent on application to A. L. Eidemiller, Travelling Passenger Agent Burlington Route, who will make the Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, his headquarters during December.

SECURES NEW FIRE INSURANCE AGENCY.

Messrs. Christie and Heubach Get the City Agency of the Manitoba Assurance Company.

Quite recently it was announced that the Liverpool & London & Globe insurance Company had secured the control and business of the Manitoba Assurance Company.

This new arrangement regarding the Manitoba places it in the front rank amongst the fire insurance companies of Canada, worked as it is now under a Dominion charter, the policies being guaranteed by the Liverpool, London and Globe, whose availably assets are over sixty millions of dollars, is a feature that will certainly commend itself to the business men of our community.

The city agency under the new arrangement regarding the Manitoba has been secured by the well known firm of Christie & Heubach, who intend devoting special attention to this department of their business. The arrangement should be a good one for the Manitoba, as the firm of Christie & Heubach s closely identified with many of the leading financial institutions in the city and is well known to the business men of Winnipeg, a connection which should be of material assistance to them in securing valuable insurance patronage.

W. J. Christie has been long identified with real estate interests in Winnipeg, having for the past fifteen years been well known in these circles. His opinion upon matters in connection with real estate is highly valued, his knowledge enabling him to speak with authority.

F. W. Heubach is also one of the best known men around town, and his activity and ability were never more displayed than in connection with the recent Dominion exhibition. Since the formation of the partnership of Christie & Heubach, his large and varied general knowledge has stood him in good stead, and it is safe to say that there is no real estate or financial firm in the city which more merits the confidence of the investing public than that of Christe & Heubach, who are being congratulated upon the latest addition to their business operations.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY IN GALT.

The cottage of Mrs. James Barber, on Spruce street, was broken into at 9 o'clock last night by Chief German, says a despatch from Galt, Ont., on the 4th, and he made a ghastly discovery. In the only bed in the house the aged woman lay dead, with her head drawn under her body. On the floor and partly under the bed was George Cathrae, her son, rigid in death. Mrs. Barber was dressed in her night clothes, her son had on an undershirt and a pair of drawers. He lay flat on his back with his arms extended and his hands clenched. In the living room adjoing the bedroom their clothing was strewn about on the floor, chairs and table. It is believed they were suffocated by escaping coal gas.

C. P. R. PREPARES TO FIGHT G. T. P. RAILWAY.

Will Try to Offset Continental by Building Eastern Branches.

The C. P. R. directors at Montreal are credited with the design of carrying war into Africa and meeting the Grand Trunk Railway's transcontinental project by so increasing their branches in Ontaro that htey wil be able to reach every important centre by their own lines. Among lines said to be projected are one from London to Sarnia, another from Scarboro along the Lake Ontario shore to Cobourg, Belleville and other points east,and one through Niagara peninsula. At present C. P. R. trains reach Buffalo by running over right-of-way acquired by from the G. T R. between Toronto and Hamilton and thence over the T. H. & B., in which the C. P. R. are heavily interested.

$40 TO EASTERN CANADA.

Tickets will be on sale November 28th to December 31st at rate of $40 as far east as Montreal; proportionately higher rates beyond, and will be good for return three months from date of sale. Special arrangements will be made to make travelling a pleasure on any of the four trains departing from Minneapolis and St. Paul every day. The finest of high back seat coaches, free reclinig chair cars and sleepers make these trains most popular with travelers to Eastern Canada. Special pamphlet giving time of trains, etc., or any other information will be gladly furnished upon addressing Geo. A. Lee, Travelling Agent Northwestern Line, 339 Main street, Winnipeg.

PALICE PATROL FOR YUKON.

Something About the System of Protection Arranged on the Trails.

The Northwest Mounted Police are preparing the most extensive system of patrols for the Yukon territory the coming winter that ever have been maintained in the North. A patrol will be made from Dawson to Fort McPherson, at the mouth of the Mackenzie river, by way of a pass in the Rocky mountains west of Dawson, and the patrols maintained regularly all winter between Dawson and Duncan, Dawson and White Horse, Dawson and Fortymile, Fortymile and Glacier Creek, White Horse and other places.

Between Dawson and White Horse a patrol will be maintained in such fashion that the entire length of the trail will be covered one way each week. The rounds will be made with sleighs drawn by horses, and the police will maintain a light express and mail service for their own convenence as well as to cover the country for the protection of the people along the route.

On the Yukon river a patrol will be given each week between Dawson and Selkirk. Above Selkirk to Minto the overland trail patrol will cover the river, and beyond Minto the trail runs so close to the Yukon that it is not considered necessary to have a winter patrol in the Yukon.

Between Selkrk and Dawson the same posts will be open along the river in winter as were maintained in summer, and on the winter trail posts will be maintained at Grand Forks, Wounded Moose, Stewart Crossing, Grand Valley, Selkirk and Minto.

The patrol for Fort McPherson will leave Dawson n January, make a trip to McPherson and return before spring. Only one trip will be made during the winter. The patrol will cover perhaps 500 miles actual travelling distance. An Idian guide will accompany the police. Two or three police will be detailed from Dawson on the trip. The greatest difficulty on the trip will be carrying sufficient food for the dogs.

The Canadan Pacific Railway have announced excursion rates from Manitoba and the Northwest Territories to Vancouver, Victoria, Kamloops, Vernon, Peachland and Summerland. Tickets will be issued December 1st and 2nd, 15th and 16th, and January 5th and 6th, good to return within three months. The rate for the round trip will be single first-class fare.

CANADA'S CONTRIBUTION TO IMPERIAL NAVY.

Government Proposals Will Provide Permanent Force.

An Ottawa despatch says that Mr. Prefontaine's scheme for the creation of a naval reserve is said to include the acqusition of three training vessels from the British Government, one to be located on the Atlantic coast, the second on the Great Lakes and the third in British Columbian waters. There will be eight instructors to each vessel, obtained presumably from the Royal navy. The naval militia will be trained for three seasons and then go into the reserve. At the end of about eight years it is expected to have a reserve of 10,000 trained men. The permanent naval militia will number 800, of whom 300 will be on the Atlantic coast, 200 on the Lakes, and 300 on the British Columbia coast.

Chewing of the Cud in Live Stock

It has been commonly observed by people having anything to do with live stock that sheep, goats and cattle chew their food (or cud, as it is commonly termed) a second time, while pigs and horses do not.

Chewing of the cud is technically termed rumination, and animals performing that digestive act are classed as ruminants, a term which includes goats, sheep, cattle, deer, antelope, and camels.

Ruminants are built on a somewhat different plan from other live stock, in that they are possessed of four stomachs in place of one.

Strictly speaking, it is only in one of these stomachs the digestive process goes on; the others may be considered as enlargements of the gullet and places in which food is prepared for the fourth (true) stomach. These four stomachs have received names: the first one, the largest., with a capacity in mature cattle of 45 to 60 gallons, is termed the paunch, or rumen; the second the honeycomb, or reticulum; the third the manyplies, or omasum; while the fourth, or true stomach, is spoken of as the rennet, or abomasum. The reason for animals ruminating is that when in the wild state, and when liable to be preyed upon by stronger members of the animal world, such as lions, tigers, etc., by this method food could be taken in rapidly and chewed at leisure in a place of safety. An important thing for live stock breeders to know is that fright, harshness, or the presence of strangers, causes stoppage of this re-chewing for a time; hence, as far as possible, all such contingencies should be avoided. Food when taken in by a ruminant is partially masticated and mixed with the saliva in the mouth, then is passed on down the gullet to the paunch and the honeycomb, the fluid and finer portion going on to the manyplies. After a certain time has elapsed, this food, which has been churned up in the paunch by reason of the movements of that organ, is returned again to the mouth, where the bulk of it is finally fitted for the true digestive process in the fourth stomach. It has been estimated that about seven hours are needed for rumination to be completed, hence it will be seen that the practice of the cattleman in bedding down the stock and allowing them a period of quietness and rest after feeding is based on sound principles and observation of facts.

Odessa.

Odessa is one of the finest cities in Russia. Foundations for the present city were made in 1794, and it is built upon territory ceded to Russia by Turkey in 1792. It has a population of 600,000, nearly a quarter of whom are really the Americans of Russia, enterprising, progressive and peaceful.

Recreations of Cabinet Ministers.

It is probable that the recreations of of the cabinet ministers of the present time when on vacation are, however frivolous, slightly dissimilar from those of their eighteenth century predecessors. Fox, for instance, spent a morning in Bond street counting cats against the Prince of Wales, and as he chose the sunny side of the street he saw thirteen to the Prince's one and won the game. Lord Oxford, too, riding in his coach with Swift, used to count poultry with him all the way up to town, and whoever counted thirty-one first or saw a cat or an old woman was the winner. Lord Bolingbroke, joining them one day for the purpose of discussing European affairs, was at once interrupted by Oxford's saying, "Swift, I'm up; there's a cat!" and left them in disgust. As Swift wrote, "Such tattle often entertains my lord and me as far as Staines."—London Chronicle.

THE LAND OF MAKE-BELIEVE.

It is well to wander sometimes in theLand of Make-believe,
Through its eversmiling gardens, where the heart may cease to grieve,
Where the beds are gay with roses and the paths are paved with gold,
And our hopes, like soaring songsters, their mercurial wings unfold.
Let us all be little children for a while and make our way
Through the sweet and sunny meadow land of Make-believe to-day.

There's a queen within an arbor, where she rules in high renown,
With a lily for a sceptre and a rose wreath for a crown,
And her laws are love and laughter, for they know not sorrow there—
Never hate or pain or money enters in her Kingdom fair,
So we sing the songs the children sing, and play the games they play
As we wander in the golden Land of Make-believe to-day.

CUPID CONQUERS THE CLOISTER.

Love laughs at locksmiths, they say, and the happy culmination of a romance in Port Arthur, Ont., shows that even the solemn vows made to Mother Church will wither away to nothingness before unspoken vows that bind the makers in the court of Cupid.

Several years ago Miss Mary Carroll became a novice in the convent at Port Arthur, where her lovely voice, her sweet disposition and attractive personality made her a universal favorite, although many of her friends regretted that her singular beauty should be hidden beneath the veil, and the qualities that combined to fit her for any position in the world should be buried in the convent.

Especially did her gifts and beauty appeal to William Guerard, himself a musician of no mean order, whose talent as a violinist was even then beginning to attract attention. With him it was a case of love at first sight, and, try as he might to tear from his heart the image of the fair young girl who was destined to "become the Bride of Christ," the shadowy terrors of the Catholic Church could not avail to drive from his heart the growing passion for the beautiful novice. But the eyes of the guardians of the convent were keen, and, although as yet no spoken word had passed between the two, the attachment, which was mutual, did not escape their vigilance, and Mary Carroll was hastily removed to Montreal, where she took the full vows of a nun, and spent three years in seclusion of the most rigid description.

But her vows, her duties, and the long separation could not efface the memory of the handsome young violinist in the west, and Sister Cecilia, under which name the novice had taken her final vows, resolved upon a desperate step. She contrived to leave the nunery and made her way to Chicago, where she found a friend in an old priest, whose contact with the outer world had given him tender human sympathies. Into his ears Sister Cecilia poured her story, and he determined to help her. First he placed himself in communication with William Guerard, for unless he had kept as faithful to the unspoken vows of love as the maiden, her journey would have been made in vain, and only the cloister would remain, as an alternative for her.

The answer was immediate. Following upon a telegram the joyful lover traveled post-haste to Chicago, and the sympathetic priest, unwilling to brave the wrath of the Church by assuming all responsibility, sent a petition to the Pope himself, asking for a dispensation releasing the nun from the vows which had become so burdensome. The prayer was granted, and the news that the dispensation was on the way reached the impatient lovers.

To those in love delays seem intolerable, and, secure in the certainty of the coming release, they went together to their friend the priest, who consented to cement the happiness which he had been so instrumental in bringing about, by giving the blessing of the Church to the union. As if to give the last dramatic touch to the romance that had clung to their long wooing, the dispensation from Rome reached the bride as she and her husband were on their knees before the altar, just before the priest pronounced the final blessing.

A few days ago their Port Arthur friends had the pleasure of welcoming home from their bridal tour Mr. and Mrs. William Guerard, around whom, in the eyes of their intimates, still clings the aroma of a romance such as is rare in the prosaic days of the twentieth century.

Sneeze Sayings.

In nearly every language in the world there is an equivalent for "God bless you" when any one sneezes, for the same superstition in regard to it holds good in every country. To this salutation in France there is added sometimes the phrase, "and preserve you from the fate of Tycho Brahe," who is believed to have escaped a death of cold by a single sneeze—which killed him. In England a regular formula is, "Once for a wish, twice for a kiss, three times for a letter and four times for a disappointment." In Italy the regular salutation is simply "Felicita," or "May you be fortunate." In India when one sneezes it is the custom to say, "May you live," and the reply runs, "Long life to you." In ancient times the Romans, holding the idea that sneezing between nnon and midnight was a good omen, believed that between midnight and noon was a bad omen, and if they should chance to sneeze while getting up in the morning they would at once get into bed again. The Germans say "Good health" because they maintain that sneezing is a warning of approaching catarrh and also marks the moment when a charm, a wish or a suggestion may drive it away.

It takes a brave man to retreat from temptation.

UNION OF THE EMPIRE.

Senator Wark Suggests Imperial Parliament in Which All Portions of the Empire Would Be Represented.

Hon. David Wark, New Brunswick's veteran Senator, who on February 19 last entered his one hundredth year, has drafted a plan for the federation of the Empire, which is thus summed up:

"That all the provinces owing allegiance to our sovereign be gathered into his Empire, and have conferred on their inhabitants the same privileges of every kind enjoyed by their fellow subjects in the United Kingdom.

"That a new Imperial Parliament be formed in which all the provinces would be represented.

"That a new Imperial Government, when formed, might have members called to it from any part of the Empire, and that it should assume the debts of all provinces, and along with the debts the sole right of raising a revenue to pay interest on the whole public debt, including that of the provinces, with the support of the navy, the regular army, militia, judiciary, civil service and all other charges at present borne by the Imperial Government.

"That the policy of free trade should be introduced throughout the whole Empire, as free as it exists in the great republic south of us, every producer selling what he produces where he can get the best price, and every consumer supplying his wants where he can do it cheapest. That is a policy which adds to the wealth of both parties.

"Each province will have its own private Legislature to manage its own affairs. When it grows too large and requires to be divided, then the chief magistrate of the Old Province might be a Governor-General with some additional duties to perform in assisting His Majesty.

"There will probably be some complaints as to inconvenience in attending Parliament on account of the great distance. This will be overcome by fast railways and fast steamers. Let complainers look back to the Roman Empire and note the distance its extremities were from the seat of Government, and they can see in the account of Paul's journey from Judea to Rome the time that it must have taken to go from the extremities of that Empire to its centre. Yet there must have been much traffic for there were no less than 276 persons in the ship on which he was wrecked.

"I believe that God, in His good Providence, has placed within our reach one of the easiest, safest and surest means of settling this important question, and I would not have been surprised to see some of our provinces and large cities petitioning His Majesty to call the Commission, but perhaps it has been thought best to leave the matter in his hands, as the sooner its work is done the easier it will be. If there are any parties opposed to the policy that may be recommended they can be told they were fairly represented at the Commission, where the objections should have been stated, and they have the new Parliament to appeal to.

"If the Commission is called, I would ask Christians of all denominations, and especially Christian ministers, to aid it by their prayers and and in every other way they can in coming to right decisions. God commenced and carried out some great works through His Empire last century and I believe He has greater work to do in the present century, and largely through the same means, and all who assist are sure to prove successful, while if any try to obstruct they are sure to fail."

David Wark.

AMENITIES OF PUBLIC LIFE.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. R. L. Borden Masters in Decent Arts.

At a recent banquet Sir Wilfrid Laurier said: "We have, as the chairman has said, some guests whose presence adds to the interest of the occasion. We have Sir Howard Vincent (cheers), who comes from the heart of the Empire, who has given a great deal of thought to the relations which ought to exist between the Mother Country and the colonies, and whose views we shall listen to with the greatest possible interest. I do not know that we shall share all his views. Sir Howard Vincent has come from a free country and comes into a freer country still. We are accustomed here to liberty of speech, but whether we agree or disagree—and in a large measure I am sure we shall agree—all will welcome his words. (Cheers.) We have also the Hon. Mr. McCarthy from Trinidad, who brings to us an expression of sympathy of the West Indies."

Speaking at Brampton recently Mr. R. L. Borden, the Conservative leader, said that he would rather see any young man ally himself with the Liberal party and do what he could to improve it than to sit silent, inactive, and take no share or interest in the public life of the country.

"The way to improve public affairs," he added, "is by associating at once with that political party which best commends itself to your judgment."

The Union Jack Club.

Miss Violet Brooke-Hunt, the soldiers' friend, who has been visiting in Canada, is much interested in the Union Jack Club. She recently said:

"It is not my idea, but I am working all I can for it, and exceedingly anxious to make it a success. The foundation stone has been laid, and Sir Edward Ward is chairman of the committee. It will be near the Waterloo Station, and it is meant for any soldier or sailor wearing the King's uniform. There will be billiard-rooms and battes, reading-rooms and every comfort, and we will have 250 bedrooms where a bed can be had for ten cents a night. The rooms cost us £100 each, that is $500, is it not, and every regiment is giving a room. A plate with a suitable inscription will be placed on the wall, and appropriate pictures and memorials of the regiment or locality contributing the room will be placed in it, so that the visitors may feel at home among familiar associations."

The Macleod Gazette says there will be ten new bank buildings constructed in Alberta during 1905. This is a conclusive evidence of the growth of that fertile territory.

* * *

THE number of men who die intestate in this part of the country is astonishing. Of probably ninety per cent of those who are cut off by sudden death no evidence is found of any will by which the deceased's property can be disposed of without the appointment of an adminstrator and the necessary legal expenses which are heavy. Of course this sort of thing is good for the lawyers, the news papers, and the government; but it shows a sad lack of foresight and good business judgement on the part of those who neglect to have wills made that their friends may be benefitted as much as possible by their property. The chief reason for this neglect doubtless is that people are more engrossed with the thought of living than of dying and so the will-making impulse which is generally associated with the latter is deferred until a more convenient time.

* * *

If the splendid game reserves of South East Kootenay, which today are the pride of its citizens and the delight of tourists, are allowed to be depleted by Indians slaughtering the game with the aid of dogs and other illegal means the time will soon come when game will be scarce and exacting laws will be necessary to protect certain kinds against extinction. It is the duty of the provincial police to see that no infringements are made against the present game laws but in outlying parts of the district it is often very difficult to catch the offenders and then only at considerable cost to the government. Last week the St. Eugene mission Indians started out to hunt deer with twenty dogs at their heels, whether the dogs were used to chase the game is a matter of conjecture, but why were the dogs taken otherwise? Why could the dogs not have been left at the mission? An Indian Agent lives at Fort Steele near the mission, for the express purpose of looking after these Indians. Why could he not have insisted upon these dogs being left at home? Had this simple restriction been made perhaps less deer might have been killed and certainly the Province would have been ahead the cost of sending police to look them up.

GALLIHER MINISTER OF MINES.

Local Liberal Association urges Government to Create a Mining Department with W. A. Galliher as Minister

The Fernie Liberal Association met in the Stork Opera House on Monday evening, when various matters of importance were discussed. Probably the most important was a resolution forwarded from the Revelstoke Association for endorsement. This resolution strongly urged the Dominion Government to establish a Department of Mines, and recommended that W. A. Galliher. M.P. be appointed Minister of the new Department. The resolution received the enthusiastic endorsement of the meeting and a comittee comprising the President, the Secretary and L. P. Eckstein was appointed to draft a suitable petition to be sent to Ottawa. The members present took the view that the mining industry of Canada, had advanced to such a stage that a special department to superintend its continued progress was deemed most desirable. Kootenay was the banner mining district of the whole Dominion and W. A. Galliher, its representative, was eminently qualified to fill the important office of Minister of Mines.

The executive reported favoring the enlargement of the executive from twelve to fifteen members. The meeting adopted the suggestion and proceeded to elect the three additional members for the executive. Messrs D. V. Mott, L. P. Eckstein, J. L. Gates, A. J. Farquharson and T. Caravetta were nominated and upon a ballot being taken the first three were elected.

FOR SWEET CHARITY'S SAKE

Annual Meeting of The Ladies Benevolent Society held last Friday

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Benevolent Society was held on Friday, Dec. 9th at the home of Mrs. J. A. Rennie. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows,—

President	Mrs. A. B. Trites	re-elected
1st Vice Pres.	Mrs. Davies	re-elected
2nd Vice Pres.	Mrs. W. Tuttle	re-elected
Secretary	Mrs. John Robson
Treasurer	Mrs F. J. Watson

The position of Secretary-Treasurer was held last year by Mrs. Stork who declined to accept tt for another year. The duties were divided and an officer was appointed for each part to make them less arduous.

The Treasurer's report showed that the finances were in a very satisfactory condition. During the year the society had assisted fourteen cases and had expended $323.85 in charity. The society still had a sum of money on hand. The books showed an enrollment of twenty-two members.

The Ladies Benevolent Society is doing a good work and the members and officers fully realize its wide scope for greater usefulness. They cordially invite all the ladies of the city, not yet members, to join the society, for which ths fee is only a nominal sum. The society meets on the first Saturday afternoon of every month at the home of a member determined upon at the previous meeting and due notice of each meeting is given in this paper.

POLICE COURT

Last Friday Geo. Maxwell smashed a window in the jail, with the evident purpose of getting his sentence prolonged in jail and a fellow prisoner heard him mutter that he guessed he would get six months for it. He will serve three months instead of two.

A lengthy assault case was tried before Police Magistrate Whimster on Friday and Saturday. The accused was J. A. Sloan, and Mrs A. Taylor at whose boarding house the accused stayed was the party who laid the charge. Sloan used threatening language towards Mrs. Taylor and assaulted her while he was under the influence of drink. He was fined $10 and costs.

Several drunks were disposed of with the usual five dollars and costs. W Johnson and Henry Stewart paid the fine. John Stose could not pay the fine and he is serving a term of ten days.

The Bio-Tableaux entertainment which will be given in Fernie ou Tuesday evening is by far the finest ot its kind that has ever travelled through Western Canada. The scenes are the most sensational and realistic productions yet shown. There will be both pathetic and sensational sketches, laughable episodes and a large number of beautifully colored views from real life, "Man the Life Boat," "a balloon tragedy in mid air," a ride on top the Imperial Limited" and a few views from the Russo-Japanese war are alone easily worth the price of admission.

W. J. Blundell is moving his grocery business into the larger store of the J. & F. block.

The aged father of Messrs. Smith brothers, contractors of this city, died suddenly at Coleman last week. The old gentleman with his wife were on their way from the east to visit their sons. Mr. Smith was not enjoying good health aud he rapidly grew worse on the journey. At Coleman where two other sons reside they disembarked but the old gentleman died an hour afterwards. It is believed that the high altitude affected his heart. The sorrowing widow a few days later came to Fernie and is now living with her sons.

TO RENT—A few nice large rooms Suitable for offices.

The London Bioscope Company appear at the Stork Opera House on Tuesday evening with an entertainment which should prove a strong attraction. This company has a high priced cinematograph which depicts moving scenes with startling accuracy and without the slightest irratiting tremor. Under the title of "Living Canada" many views, all new and of peculiar interest to Canadians will be presented. This entertainment has given immense satisfaction to large audiences in Montreal, Toronto and other eastern cities. At the Stork Opera House, Tuesday Dec. 20th. Seats 75 50, and 25c on sale at Bleasdell's Drug Store.

Mrs, Raney has sold her house and lot to S. F. Wallace.

Pretty Polly, the musical comedy which appears in Fernie Wednesday next, has met with great success. The Nelson News of Tuesday has the following comment:

"Pretty Polly" drew a large crowd at the opera house last evening, and all seemed to enjoy the performance. The play is light comedy without very much plot, and permits of the introduction of the musical specialties for which the company is famous. Miss Ada Palmer Captured the audience on her first appearance. Her support was excellent; the singing and acting being quite up to the light comedy standard. The trio, quartette and quintette were particularly well rendered and heartily encored.

THE NOTE OF JUBILANCE

CHEERFULNESS SHOULD CHARACTERIZE CHRISTMASTIDE.

ON THE DUTIES OF THE TIME

Kindness and Beneficence to the Poor and the Distressed Inculcated—The New Song Which Is to Be the Sweetest and the Most Inspiring Yet Composed—'Twill Yet Be Sung in the Heavenly Land.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 4.—In this sermon there is the jubilant note of the approaching Christmas festivities, which, the preacher contends, should be characterized by cheerfulness, kindness and beneficence to the poor and the distressed. The text is Psalm xcvi, "Oh, sing unto the Lord a new song!"

The finest of pictures is yet to be painted; the most perfect sculpture is yet to be chiseled; the best of poems is yet to be penned; the sweetest and the most inspiring of songs is yet to be composed. We speak of the master poets, artists, sculptors and musicians as though the poetical and artistic deeds of the past could never be excelled. This, however, is not true. Homer and Virgil and Scott and Wordsworth and Burns and Tennyson and Longfellow and Lowell and Poe are master poets to us merely because their poems excel in beauty of expression or delicacy of rhythm or depth of thought the productions of all other poets who have yet appeared. Raphael and Michael Angelo and Murillo and Leonardo da Vinci and Turner are master artists to us merely because no artists have yet appeared who could approach them in perfection of form and glory of color. Beethoven and Handel and Bach and Gluck and Haydn and Mozart and Chopin and Mendelssohn and Wagner are master musicians to us because they surpass all other musicians in perfection of harmony and grandeur of conception. No composers before them and none since have attained the mastery that they reach in their sublime art.

But, though these old master musicians are masters to us, they were not masters to themselves. They struggled continually to give expression to higher and nobler conceptions that they were never able to write. Even in their minds there were harmonies far better than those that they have given us. Their masterpieces fell far short of their ideals. In their rhapsodies and dream lives they were continually exploring whole realms of perfect sound harmonies which were continually crying to them: "Set me to music. Play me up the piano or the harp. Sing me in solo and oratorio." The result was these old masters were continually trying to make more perfect combinations of sound, to echo to mortal ears the strange, weird, transcendent voices that were calling to them out of the "musical worlds of perfection."

David, the psalmist, was a great musical composer. He always strove to originate new musical themes. If he could not compose new ones, then he wanted to hear what some one else had composed. The first time Mozart heard one of Bach's hymns played he cried out in ecstasy, "Thank God, I learn something absolutely new!" So David again and again in his psalms cries out for something new in musical praise. We not only find the words of my text, "Sing unto the Lord a new song," in the Ninety-sixth Psalm, but we find them in the Ninety-eighth and in the One Hundredth and Forty-ninth, and we also find the same words in the book of Isaiah. The song they longed to hear will yet be sung in the heavenly land.

Our holiday song, in the first place, should be a cheerful song. It should not be sung in a minor key; it should not be a dirge or requiem, a lament or a dead march in "Saul"; it should not be an antiphony for the matins of the dead; it should be joy on the wing; it should be the chorus of "Laughing Waters"; it should be a Hosanna, a halleluiah, a paean, a doxology and a praise. Tears and sobs have no place in the new song which we should sing during our coming holiday season. What said David in reference to this new song—make a sad song unto the Lord? No. In seven distinct places in the Psalms the great singer of Israel cries, "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord." The first great essential of our coming Christmas song should be cheerfulness. We should hear it in every sound that is uttered; we should hear it in the loud notes; we should hear it in the soft notes as well.

The new song of Moses and the Lamb should be a cheerful song. And yet the strange fact is that many people, when they try to sing their gospel songs, have the chargers which they harness to their musical chariots walk with leaden feet instead of flying with the wings of the song birds. No minister of the Lord Jesus Christ, no Sunday school teacher, no Christian teacher, will ever make the new songs for Christ truly tuned songs when they start them in the minor key. "The great success of your father's ministry," said Dr. Reed, the president of Dickinson College, to me some months ago, "was his unbounded cheerfulness." Then Dr. Reed said, in a kind of a soliloquy, "Oh, that all gospel messengers could make their sermons a cheerful message for tired men and women!"

Yes, the new song we sing ought to have the keynote of cheerfulness. That is the first great essential. Why should it not be cheerful? If we believe in God, if we believe in what Christ has done for us, have not we a belief which should uplift every heart into the highest realms of Christian joy? Suppose I am an artist. Suppose I send one of my pictures to the World's Fair at St. Louis or to the Salon of Paris. Suppose I to-day receive a letter from the authorities of that art exhibit something like this:

"Dear Sir—We are glad to inform you that your picture has received the first prize in the class of portrait painting. You will not only receive a medal for the same, but also a check for $5,000, which is to go to the winner of that prize. We congratulate you on your success, and we are glad that your state will hereafter be known as the home of one of the greatest artists of this generation."

What would I do if I received such a letter as that? Would I put that letter away and say nothing? Would I walk around with sepulchral countenance and dolorous voice, saying, "I have won a $5,000 prize and international fame?" No; my eyes would flash, my cheeks would flush, my nerves would tingle with glorious excitement. I would go home at once to my wife and children and say: "Loved ones, my artistic position is now assured. I will be able to earn for us all the money we need." If the news that we have won an earthly prize makes us so happy, how ought we to feel when we realize that a heavenly and eternal blessing has been conferred upon us? Shall we not sing a cheerful song when we realize all that Christ has done for us and ours?

Our coming holiday song should sing the joy of our salvation. It must do more than that. It should sing about the happiness of some one else. Therefore our new song should be a helpful song. Jenny Lind the great "Swedish nightingale," regarded her voice as a gift from God, bestowed that she might help her fellow man. May we look upon our new song to be sung to God as a song to help those who are in physical, mental or spiritual distress.

Oh, that we in our coming holiday song could have the beautiful purpose which "the human thrush," Jenny Lind, had in her gentle, consecrated Christian heart! She was always doing some kindness to others. Lablache, the great Italian basso, when he first heard her, said, "Her voice is so true that each note is like a perfect pearl." Jenny Lind heard what her great Italian contemporary had said. When she met him at their first rehearsal she smilingly stepped to his side and took his hat; then, placing her lips to its edge, she sang a beautiful French romance. Then she gave him back his hat, saying, "There, M. Lablache, is your hat, filled with my pearls of song." That was a beautiful compliment by one great artist to another. But Jenny Lind did more than sing handfuls of musical pearls into Lablache's hat; she sang thousands of dollars out of the world's pocketbooks. Then she scattered thousanhs and hundreds of thousands of dollars everywhere. She gave away 30,000 florins when she made her triumphant musical tour through Germany. She gave to England's poor over $300,000 when this queen of song sang in the kingdom of her great sister, Queen Victoria. She gave $50,000 to America's poor when she traveled through our states. As Jenny Lind sang to her fellow men and women a helpful song, so should we make our new song of the holiday season a helpful song.

When we sing our new song shall we bring spiritual blessings to others also? The great hosts which shall enter heaven may be augmented if we sing our new song as we ought to sing it. Charles H. Spurgeon, the famous London preacher, once had a wonderful dream. He saw a great throng passing through the gates of the new Jerusalem. "Who are these, and whence came they?" he asked. "These," said his guide, "are the apostles and martyrs. These are they who have laid down their lives for Christ." "But," answered Spurgeon, "I never was an apostle or a martyr. I cannot walk with that throng." Soon, however, he saw another multitude, greater than the first, crowding through the same celestial gates. "Who are these and whence came they?" he again asked. "These are the sinners. These are the Zacchaeuses and the Mary Magdalenes and the women of Samaria, who came from the lowest depths of sin." "Ah," said Mr. Spurgeon, "if those are the great sinners, then I can go in among them." As you and I begin to join the redeemed multitudes are we going with our friends? Shall not our new song of gospel love first be sung by some invalid's bed to bring that sick man to Christ? Shall it not be sung among the spiritual outcasts who never have bowed the knee at the crass? Yes, my friends, our new song should be a cheerful song on account of our salvation. It should also be a helpful song, which will lead people to surrender their lives to the work of the Divine Master.

"Well," says one, "how can I sing a song of cheerfulness and of gospel hope for myself or for others when everything seems to be going wrong in my own life? I feel just as did the writer of the One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Psalm. Then all was sadness and gloom to him. He seems to see the Jews huddled together in captivity. There he seems to gather them together, as the Jews to-day are gathered at the foot of Mount Moriah, at the "wailing place" under the walls of the old temple. Their captors come to them and cry: "Sing, sing! Sing as you used to sing in Jerusalem!" But they answer, "How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?" Then you say to me: "This coming Christmas will find me in a strange land. Why," you say, "everything in my life is so different from what it used to be. So many of my loved ones are gone. My daughter was here last Christmas; she is gone now forever. Is it a mother's vacant chair, or a father's or a wife's or a husband's? Yes, I have been a good giver to the grave, and that grave has taken the best I have. It is not the time for me to sing; it is the time for sobs. Then I cannot give financially as I used to give. I have had many financial reverses during the past few months. Then I cannot do as I used to do for others. My own health is gradually breaking. How can I sing a new song? I am like Rubini and Bordoni and Cuzzoni and Pasta and Malibran. After their voices went they were gone forever." Ah, my friends, you can sing the new song of hope and salvation if you will. The great trouble of your life is not that you have had great troubles, but that you have not waded way down knee deep, hip deep, shoulder deep, lip deep, into God's promises and comforts to get a suitable inspiration for your new song.

The great trouble with you is that when trouble comes, instead of throwing yourselves more and more upon the divine strength, you have let go of God's strong hand and only depended on your own strength. After Jenny Lind's name had become famous as a singer her voice began to fail. "Oh," said she to herself, "if I could only go and see Garcia, I know he would help me." Manuel Garcia was at that time the greatest musical developer of prima donnas. She left Stockholm and went to Paris. As soon as she entered his studio and sang Garcia said, "My good girl, you have no voice, or, rather, I should say you had a voice, but you are now on the verge of losing it. Your organ is strained and worn out. The only advice I can offer is to recommend you not to sing a note for three months. At the end of that time come to me and I will see what I can do for you." That was good advice for Manuel Garcia to give to Jenny Lind, but it is not good advice for a Christian teacher to give you in reference to your learning how to sing the new song of Christ. What you need is not rest not retirement, not seclusion; you need to practice your gospel throat. You need to learn how to sing the new song by delving deep in the promises of God, and then by singing God's promises to your own life and to the lives of all around you. Sing! Sing! Keep on singing! Sing forth the promises of God! Sing what he has done for others. Sing about what he has done and will continue to do for you!

But lastly I assert that our new song for the coming holidays should be a triumphant song. In it we should hear the ring of the coming conquest of the world for Christ; in it we should know not only that man as an individual will be saved, but that there shall come a time when nations and peoples of all climes shall worship our Christ as their master and king. Here and there temporarily one of God's disciples may seem to be driven back; but, after all, the great march of the Christian army is forward. We are all marching to a millennial day when Christ as the leader of the great army of victory shall have his standards above every land, waving over every nation and over every sea. Our new song should be a triumphant song.

Would to-day I might convince you of the sureness of Christ's conquest over all the nations of the world as vividly as that great dramatic preacher William Dawson brought it before his London hearers nearly a century ago. He was a man of most remarkable personality. He had an imagination all aglow and on fire. With the power of a mighty word painter he was describing the conquest of the world. He portrayed a grand procession marching before Christ, the Prophet, Priest and King, in a coronation pageant. First came the prophets, the priests and the apostles, then the martyrs, row after row, line after line, army after army. Then, after all the redeemed dead had marched past, there came the living. First came the earthly princes and princesses and nobles. Then there marched forth millions upon millions of the human race. Then, after he had wheeled into line all generations of all times and all principalities and powers, the great Methodist preacher suddenly stopped. Then in stentorian tones he commenced to sing that grand old hymn of Edward Perronet:

All hail the power of Jesus' name,
Let angels prostrate fall,
Bring forth the royal diadem
And crown him Lord of all.

So powerful was the effect, so overwhelming was the impression of the coming conquest of Christ over the world, that the great audience sprang to its feet and took up the refrain and sang it louder and louder and louder until the very heavens seemed to shake. Oh, my friends, cannot you feel that our new song for the coming Christmas holidays should be a triumphant one? Shall it not have the same triumphant ring in it as had Martin Luther's mighty hymn when the soldiers of Gustavus Adolphus sang it before the battle of Leipsic, and also sang it again before the battle of Lutzen, where their noble leader laid down his life? Ah, yes, man may live and may die, but God's workers always fill in the break and the work goes on. Our new song must be a song of triumph. God can and will conquer this world and rule the nations of the earth as his own.

When the musical leader in the old village choir loft, before the organ and the piano had forced their way into the church edifices, wanted to start the hymn, he would strike his tuning fork and lift it to his ear. For the new song of the coming Christmas holidays I would strike the tuning fork of hope and life and eternal conquest through Christ. May the same angel which sang over the Christmas manger sing for us to-day over that rifled tomb a new song of salvation for a dying world and a conquest for Christ of all peoples, both in this world as well as in that which we are to enter hereafter.

Where the Chestnut Thrives.

The chestnut tree will thrive on almost any soil not too wet, but its favorite location is on a light, well drained, gravelly loam. It does not succeed so well on heavy clay as on low land. It does very well on the rocky, hilly soil, in locations where few other valuable trees can be grown to perfection.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON XII, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, DEC. 18.

Text of the Lesson, a Comprehensive Quarterly Review—Golden Text, Luke iv, 8—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1904, by American Press Association.]

LESSON I.—Elisha succeeds Elijah (II Kings ii, 12-22). Golden Text, II Kings ii, 9, "Let a double portion of Thy spirit be upon me." The whole hearted perseverance of Elisha is rewarded by his heart's desire being granted, and by a symbolic act he shows that his former life is now disposed of, and he will henceforth live wholly for the Lord God of Elijah. His first acts are waters divided and waters healed, suggesting the work of the second day in Gen. i, 6-8, and the healing of the waters in Ezek. xlvii, 8, 9.

LESSON II.—The widow's oil increased (II Kings iv, 1-7). Golden Text, Ps. xxxvii, 3, "Trust in the Lord and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed." God loves to deliver, to bless, to fill. While He does not need us nor anything that we have, yet He is graciously pleased to use us and to take such as we have, and bless and use it as He did the lad's loaves and fishes.

LESSON III.—Elisha and the Shunammite (II Kings iv, 25-37). Golden Text, Rom. vi, 23, "The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." This lesson tells of life given and life restored. It is written of our Lord, "In Him was life, and the life was the light of men," and He Himself said, "I am the resurrection and the life," and again, "I am come that they might have life, and might have it more abundantly" (John i, 4; xi, 25; x, 10.

LESSON IV.—Elisha and Naaman (II Kings v, 1-14). Golden Text, Jer. xvii, 14, "Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved." Not only can He give life and restore life from the dead, but He is always able to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease. He has all power in heaven and on earth. He is the same yesterday, today and forever.

LESSON V.—Elisha at Dothan (II Kings vi, 8-23). Golden Text, Ps. xxxiv, 7, "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear Him and delivereth them." A true believer ought to be one to whom the unseen is more real than things visible to the natural eye. We look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen (II Cor. iv, 18). Moses endured as seeing Him who is invisible (Heb. xi, 27), and so may we.

LESSON VI.—Joash, the boy king (II Kings xi, 1-16). Golden Text, Prov. xxix, 2, "When the righteous are in authority the people rejoice." To the wicked God saith, "Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further" (Job xxxviii, 11). He who sets the sand as a bound for the sea (Jer. v, 22) can as easily stay all the proud waves of iniquity; nothing can ever be beyond His control. He had purposed to have a son of David on David's throne, and in spite of the cruel and ungodly Athaliah He did it, for every purpose of His shall be performed.

LESSON VII.—Joash repairs the temple (II Kings xii, 4-15). Golden Text, Neh. x, 39, "We will not forsake the house of our God." The house of the Lord is one of the most prominent of Bible topics. The tabernacle, the temple, the Lord Jesus, the church, the individual believer, all come under this topic, and the great truth is that He wants the temple undefiled and all for Himself (Ps. iv, 3). If it is defiled He can cleanse it. The only way to carry on His work is by the willing offerings of His people voluntarily brought to Him, not begged from any one.

LESSON VIII.—Isaiah's message to Judah (Isa. i, 1-9, 16-20). Golden Text, Isa. i, 16, 17, "Cease to do evil; learn to do well." The word of God and the true servant of God always tells the whole truth, then reveals grace. The Lord Jesus was and is the truth, but He was full of grace and truth (John i, 14, 17), the Spirit through which Isaiah tells the whole truth about Israel, then reveals the grace of God showing how the sins, though as scarlet, may be washed clean away. The great love of God and the awful sin of man are two of the most prominent topics in Scripture.

LESSON IX.—World's temperance Sunday (Isa. xxviii, 1-13). Golden Text, Isa. xxviii, 7, "They also have erred through wine, and through strong drink are out of the way." The world, the flesh and the devil are all the enemies of God, despising and hating Him and His word and insisting on their own sinful, selfish, self indulgent way, even defying Him and His word, but they shall be broken to pieces (Isa. viii, 9, 10), and only that which is of God shall stand.

LESSON X.—Hezekiah reopens the temple (II Chron. xxix, 18-31). Golden Text, I Sam. ii, 30, "Them that honor Me I will honor." This is the story of a defiled temple cleansed and consecrated and leads us to ask: "Do I know the significance of the sin offering and the burnt offering? Do I know Christ as my sin bearer, and has His love constrained me to present my body a living sacrifice to be cleansed and kept all for Himself?"

LESSON XI.—Captivity of the ten tribes (II Kings xvii, 6-18). Golden Text, I Pet. iii, 12, "The face of the Lord is against them that do evil." There is such a thing as the wrath of God, and while He willeth not the death of any sinner and judgment is His strange work, "He that being often reproved, hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy" (Prov. xxix, 1). "Because there is wrath, beware lest He take thee away with His stroke; then a great ransom cannot deliver thee" (Job xxxvi, 18).

The Second Violin

By OTHO B. SENGA

Copyright, 1904, by Otho B. Senga

The girl with the violin, standing before the great box of orchids, sighed heavily.

"Oh, dear, why is everything in life so unsatisfactory?"

"My dear Kara," said the woman who read stories, "I hope you don't consider those magnificent orchids 'unsatisfactory?'"

"No, no; they are beautiful, but"—

"Perhaps it is the giver," suggestively.

"No, Mr. Coleridge is all that a man might, could, would or should be—except—only"—

"Don't tell me unless you wish, Kara," said the other kindly, "I have no desire to pry into your affairs."

"But I do wish!" cried Kara desperately. "Oh, Miss Fairlie, you think I care for nothing but my violin, but there was some one—in Switzerland—I thought he cared—but he never said so."

"But he writes to you?"

"Not now. I have not heard for nearly a year. He was hardly more than a boy, and he may have forgotten. If I only knew"—

"Do you mean," Miss Fairlie said gently, "that if you knew he did not care you could be glad of the orchids—and Mr. Coleridge?"

"I'm not sure of that, but I cannot be happy in even accepting the orchids when I think of Ulrich. Ulrich would bring me snow flowers, with the breath of the cold and the light of the stars upon them. These—they oppress me—they seem to speak of heat and of—money."

"They mean money," said Miss Fairlie gravely, "but they probably mean much more than that to the giver. If they mean only that to you"— And a little icy note unconsciously hardened her voice.

The other did not notice.

"I am grateful to him for these and for all his kindnesses. He has offered his carriage for tonight. Mrs. Gray is to chaperon me, you know."

"Oh, yes, tonight is the Bardner concert. I hope it will be a great triumph for you, Kara. And perhaps, dear little girl, perhaps some of your doubts may be settled for you tonight."

"I wish you and Kathleen were going," wistfully.

"My dear," and a slight trace of bitterness crept into the even tones, "when you are Mrs. James Coleridge you will likely be invited to many affairs that are entirely out of my life. You are going to play something of your own tonight, aren't you, Kara?"

"Yes; that one for two violins. The Ranz des Vaches comes in from the distance, you remember."

"Yes, I remember. It is beautiful."

"It is not entirely my own composition, Miss Fairlie. Ulrich wrote the solo for the first violin, and he used to play first in that when we were studying together. I play first now, of course, and Signor Alboni will take second."

"I prophesy a most gratifying success, and, Kara, I am deeply impressed with the feeling that much more than success—happiness—will come to you tonight. Go now and dress before your carriage comes."

"She is just what he ought to have," mused Miss Fairlie when the girl had gone, "beautiful, gifted. How proud he will be of her. See, the unappreciative child has forgotten the orchids!"

The exclusives at the Bardner concert softly tapped their gloved fingers in delight. The Bardner affairs were always so charmingly unique!

"She has some foreign nobleman here tonight," whispered one beringed dame to another. "Italian, I think. He has consented to play here, a wonderful violinist."

The nobleman was introduced with many flourishes—the Baron Jomini, who had consented to honor, etc.

He played magnificently. Mr. Coleridge watched the girl with the violin. She seemed as unawed as if she were at home, and he sighed relievedly.

"She is a thoroughbred," he whispered to Mrs. Gray.

"She is a thoroughly good girl," returned that lady somewhat sharply. She fancied Coleridge's expression rather "horsy" and hardly approved.

The great Mrs. Bardner swelled with pride at the sensation created by her handsome young player.

"An importation, if I may so express it, of my own," she announced quite audibly to the satellites circled about her.

"At the last moment, Miss Venn, that wretched Alboni sends me word he is ill. So very annoying on his part! In order to give you an opportunity to play I will ask Baron Jomini to play with you, but of course you must give him the first part. I could not ask so great a musician to play second to any one."

"But, Mrs. Bardner, I could not permit any one else to play first violin in this composition under any circumstances," Kara protested firmly.

Mrs. Bardner stared at her, coldly incredulous.

"You evidently do not understand. If I can prevail upon Baron Jomini to play first violin your composition will have a chance to be heard—otherwise"— And a scornful shrug of the shoulders completed the sentence.

The great violinist listened to Mrs. Bardner and went at once to Kara's side.

"I am pleased to play with you," madame," he said with simple courtesy and took the music from her shaking fingers. "Which part, madame?"

"You are kind to play at all," she responded earnestly, "and of course I must give you the first"—

"But you would like to play that yourself?" smiling down on her.

"I would," she answered quietly. "You cannot understand it, of course, but that part belongs to—to some one else, in a way that I cannot bear to have a stranger"—

"Enough, madame; you are first violin. Begin."

It was indeed a triumph for Kara. The velvety applause pattered on and on, and the two violinists were begged to play again.

"Can you remember 'Loved One, Ever Near?'" he whispered.

She turned a white, startled face toward him. That was Ulrich Gesner's own. How could this Baron Somebody—

"Quick, madame—the—audience"—

"I remember," slowly, half frightened.

"Play, then. I will take second."

And this time the exclusives fairly rose in their chairs to express their enthusiasm.

"Miss Venn is exceedingly fortunate," said Mrs. Bardner, "and Baron Jomini"—

"Miss Venn, madame? Did you say Miss Venn?" interrupted the baron eagerly.

"I did," returned his hostess coldly. "I would introduce you, but"—

"We need no introduction," quickly. "We are old friends."

He turned abruptly toward Kara, who was standing with Coleridge and Mrs. Gray.

"You remember the Constantia, Kara? Do you not remember Ulrich? It is but five years"—

She put her hand in his hesitatingly.

"But they said Baron"—

"The title has come to me through my great-uncle. It means nothing—to you. I hope I am still Ulrich Gesner to you."

She turned and introduced him to her friends.

"It is so strange to me to find her Miss Venn," the younger man said, holding out his hand and looking appealingly into Coleridge's honest eyes. "I was told a year ago that she was—married."

The firm white hand held his an instant longer than was conventionally necessary.

"If you and Miss Venn will relieve us of the carriage, Mr. Gesner, Mrs. Gray and I wish to walk a little way"—

Kara looked at him with misty eyes. How sincere and cordial he was, and how friendly of him to say Mr. Gesner instead of that strange Baron Jomini. She put out both hands impulsively.

"You are so good, Mr. Coleridge"—

He put her carriage wrap over her shoulders. "Go, little girl," he whispered, "and let nothing bar your way to happiness."

When Coleridge and Mrs. Gray reached the Octagon it was Miss Fairlie who let them in. She lingered for a moment in the vestibule after he had said good night and Mrs. Gray had turned away to remove her wraps.

"I am so very, very sorry"— she said earnestly.

He smiled with instant comprehension.

"I thank you for your sympathy. You have been my good friend. But you do not understand—it is quite misplaced. Good night."

As she passed the parlor door she heard Kara's voice, tremulous with excitement. "Not for forty great barons would I allow a stranger to play the music of my Ulrich!"

And the stranger's soothing voice replied, "The great baron, my dearest, was very glad to play second violin to Kara Venn."

Horse and Donkey.

Several municipal councilors of a large Swabian town had been indulging their humorous faculties at the expense of an honest fellow burgess who was noted for his rough and ready manners, and it seemed as though they intended at all hazards to make him the butt of their wit and ridicule for the rest of the evening. This was more than our worthy citizen could stand. He therefore emptied his glass and took his departure, not, however, without giving the councilors a riddle to solve.

"Well, now, gentlemen, as you make yourselves out to be the cleverest people in the world, just tell me the difference between a horse and a donkey."

The city fathers thought the matter over at considerable length. One replied:

"A horse has short ears, a donkey long ones."

Other answers followed from the rest.

"All wrong," said the problem maker. When pressed for the correct answer he replied:

"A horse has never yet found its way into the council chamber, but—good night, gentlemen!"

So saying, he left the company of his abashed tormentors.—Lokalanzeiger.

A Gimbleton Revival.

"I can remember when the name of Gimbleton was a power in the land."

"So can I. Why should you recall him?"

"Because he will soon be more famous than ever."

"Impossible!"

"No, indeed. His son is to be the fullback on his college football team."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WESTERN CANADIAN EDITORS

No. 13.

E. A. BAILEY.

E. A. BAILEY,
Editor and Proprietor of the Estevan Mercury.

Of all the newspaper men of the Canadian West, few are more widely known than E. A. Bailey, of the Estevan Mercury. To begin with, he is an oldtimer. Since he came to Canada in 1869 he has been almost continuously engaged in journalism, if not always with success, at all times with vigor. Among the fraternity Mr. Bailey will always be known as having started more papers perhaps than any man in the Canadian West, and this distinction alone will entitle him to a place in this series of life sketches. But, apart from this fact, Mr. Bailey has other and stronger reasons for professional notice. He is a man of advanced views, and is fearless and forcible in their expression. While he has given a general support to Liberalism in his numerous journalistic ventures, Mr. Bailey is regarded with something akin to suspicion by many of the staid rank and file of that party, and to many Conservatives he and his political creeds are anathema maranatha. He believes in government of, by, and for the people, and not in the perfunctory manner in which that famous political dogma is usually held, but in all its implications, corollaries and consequences. No bugaboos can scare Brother Bailey. To say that a thing is visionary or impractical is no argument with him. He has read much and thought much on questions of public government, and has reached conclusions there anent, and from week to week he goes ahead, proclaiming with no uncertain sound those conclusions, and showing the flaws and imperfections of existing conditions, and the coincidence of his views with those of any political party being apparently a matter of supreme indifference to him. His is a voice crying in the journalistic wilderness. His is the temperament that delights in leading a forlorn hope in the realm of thought. He is the editorial knight errant of the Canadian West.

A dread of that inconsistency which is the bete noir of the average public man has no part or lot in the makeup of Brother Bailey. In his time he has strongly advocated things he formerly strenuously opposed, and vice versa. He believes to the full in the old Arab proverb, that only the foolish and the dead never change their opinions. He does not believe that conversion is a monopoly of the realm of morals, but that it should extend to all matters in which experience is throwing new light and time affords more information. One thing he believes thoroughly—that after opinions are honestly formed they should be fearlessly advocated. Hence, he hews to the line, and lets the chips fall where they may.

Brother Bailey has prejudices, and some of them he keeps well oiled and available for instant use. He has a profound distrust of any form of autocracy. He believes in the distribution rather than the centralization of all forms of power. He keeps a wary eye on corporations and "vested interests," and flies to arms instantly whenever they attempt any invasion of popular rights. He is the champion of the many against the few, of the classes against the masses. In short he is a democrat to the hilt, with his sympathies irrevocably linked with those of the common people. In his long years of public service he may for a season have gone after strange gods—have called those he led to follow the unrealizable, the visionary, and the Utopian, but none can accuse him of lack of devotion to the general good, nor of courage in advocating the views he held.

Prior to his entering newspaper work, Mr. Bailey had an interesting career. He is of Lancashire birth, having been born at Preston in December 1838. He came to Canada at the age of sixteen, in 1854. He started in to learn the printing business, learning the case, and setting type at Simcoe and Guelph. After five years he joined the 100th (Prince of Wales) Royal Canadian Regiment, raised for the suppression of the Indian mutiny, but the mutiny being quelled before the regiment's arrival at India, did service in London, Gibraltar and Malta. Mr. Bailey served in all these places, and was promoted to the rank of sergeant, for three years holding positions on the garrison and regimental staffs. He bought his discharge while the regiment was at Malta, married (in '64) and spent three years in England. He joined and was on the staff of the 1st Manchester Royal Volunteers, and was drillmaster of the Industrial School at Swinton

During his military career Mr. Bailey had by no means forgotten his craft. While in Gibraltar he was mechanical superintendent of the Gibraltar Chronicle, a small daily published by the officers of the garrison.

In the fall of 1869 Mr. Bailey returned to Canada, and at once secured a position as foreman of the St. Mary's Argus and Kincardine Review. A little later he was proofreader for the job department of the Toronto Globe, and for nearly four years contributed articles to several Toronto papers. After leaving the Globe he acquired the Oakville Express, which he published for seven years, selling out that paper to take the general management of the Woodstock Times. Next we find Mr. Bailey mechanical manager of the Sarnia Observer. From thence he went across to Kalamazoo, Mich., and over twenty years ago came to the Canadian West. He became the editor and manager of The Mountaneer, a long forgotten paper published at the long deceased town of Nelson, Man. In those days the Mountaineer was a power in the land, its editor, Mr. Galbrith, being one of the most able newspaper men of the pioneer west. It was owing to Mr. Galbraith's ill-health and his being ordered to British Columbia, that Mr. Bailey became his locum tenens. On Mr Galbraith's return Mr. Bailey came to Winnipeg, and took over the publication of the C. P. R. Register. A little later he removed to Brandon, and continued the publication of the Register, changing its name to the Northwest Vindicator. After a few months the Vindicator again pitched its moving tent, locating finally at Rapid City. Being appointed county clerk, Mr. Bailey sold the paper to H. C. Clay, its name being again changed to the Rapid City Reporter, of which Mr. Clay is still the proprietor.

In 1893 Mr. Bailey resigned his county court clerkship, went to Morden and there started the Herald, which he subsequently sold to Messrs. Borthwick and Fox. His next journalistic venture was the Wawanesa Enterprise, which was a failure from lack of support. He moved the plant to Emerson, where he started the Journal. This, too, he sold to Messrs. Ballantyne and Hartley. MacGregor was the scene of Mr. Bailey's next enterprise. At this point he started the MacGregor Herald, which, after seven years' successful operation, he sold to the Rev. A. Chisholm. His final migration was to Estevan, where he started the Mercury, which he is now publishing, in partnership with his sons.

In the pioneer days of the province Mr. Bailey took an active part in the organization of the Farmers' Union movement, and did much to promote its success, until it was wrecked by the attempt to run politics and the wheat trade in the same groove. Mr. Bailey was C. P. R. emigration commissioner in Ontario in 1885, and managed the exhibition car, travelling through the whole of that province on the most successful tour it ever made.

As may be judged by the foregoing Mr. Bailey is a pronounced optimist. He has a boundless belief in both the present and the future of the Canadian Northwest, and has certainly sacrificed much in contributing to its development—developments which he has done much to promote by his pen and on the platform. He is one of the most familiar figures at press conventions. His pugnacity and pertinacity in debate being only equalled by his unfailing good humor.

India Sewing Man.

Sewing is a masculine occupation in India, and the derzie, or sewing man, is a past master in his art up to a certain point. He is possessed of little initiative, but is a wonderful imitator, besides being an exquisite needleman, and from a riding habit to a pretty blouse or frock he can copy almost anything in reason, rising to the high water mark of triumphant achievement in such garments as require minute stitchery and clever broderie.

Badly Expressed.

The orator of the corner store was giving forth his views of a popular congressman whose death had been chronicled in the evening paper. "I tell you," he said gloomily, "he's going to be a loss to all that have known him or known of him. He has died, as he has lived, unanimously regretted."

H.B.K. BRAND

BIG SHIRT

Made big enough for a big man to work in with comfort. Has more material in it than any other brand of shirt in Canada. Made on the H.B.K. scale it requires 39½ to 42 yards per dozen, whereas common shirts have only 32 to 33 yards.

That's the reason why the H.B.K. "Big" Shirt never chafes the armpits, is never tight at the neck or wristbands, is always loose, full and comfortable and wears well.

Each shirt bears a tiny book that tells the whole history of the "Big" Shirt, and also contains a notarial declaration that the H.B.K. "Big" Shirt contains 39½ to 42 yards of material per dozen.

Sold at all dealers but only with this brand:—

BE READY FOR CROUP

and protect your children by keeping in the house

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Terpentine

The Thoroughly Tested and Reliable Family Medicine.

To overcome croup you must act quickly.

There is usually no time allowed for sending for doctors or medicine.

The hollow, croupy cough at midnight may be your first warning, and this will strike terror to your heart if you are not prepared to fight this disease.

It may be of little use to know that Dr Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is a positive cure for croup if it is not to be obtained at the critical time

Most persons who have tested this treatment for croup keep a bottle at hand, so that by prompt action they can prevent the disease from reaching a serious stage.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is composed of simple ingredients of unquestioned curative power, is pleasant to the taste, well liked by children and can be used with perfect safety by old and young, so long as directions are followed.

MRS. GEORGE BROWN, 71 Harbord street, Toronto, writes:

"Our children have been very subject to croup, and we have found that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has always brought quick relief. By using it at the first sign of trouble the disease is checked at once. We always keep this remedy in the house, and, in fact, feel that we could not do without it. We also use it for coughs and colds with excellent results, and recommend it to our friends."

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle; family size, three times as much, 60 cents, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY.

"Newton Abbot, Devon. Dear Sirs—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effect of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

"For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout and life had lost its attraction owing to the uncertainty of health and sudden visitations of the enemy which prostrated me for months, or weeks according to the virulence of the attacks.

"Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

"For the last twenty months I have been comparatively free, as one or two attempted visitations have been immediately stamped out by the assistance of Blair's Pills.

"Truly yours (Signed) Saml. W. Baker.

SIXTY DAYS after the first publication of this notice, we intend to apply to the Lieutenant Governor in Council for permission to clear out and remove obstructions from the following Creeks in East Kootenay, and build dams and slides thereon and to make other improvements for the purpose of making said creeks navigable for logs —

1. Little Sank Creek, from the small lake at a point about six miles North East of the Crow's Nest Pass Railway on Block Number 4590 to said Crow's Nest R. R. about three miles East of Jaffray.

2. McBayne Creek, from McBayne Lake to a point where said Creek joins little Sand Creek, a distance of about one and one-half miles.

The only lands affected by these improvements are John Anderson's Pre-emption and said lot 4590.

The only water affected by said improvements are said Little Sand and McBayne Creeks.

The rate of toll proposed to be charged is $1.00 per thousand feet board measure.

Dated this 20th day of October, A. D. 1904.

CITY COUNCIL PREFER LOCAL COMPANY'S TERMS.

Messrs. Hammond and Turner Still Willing to Put in System.—A Busy Meeting of the City Council on Monday Evening.

The city council met on Monday evening. The Mayor and Ald. Cree, Beck and Lundie were present at the beginning and afterwards Ald. Liphardt took his seat.

W. H. Whimster, police magistrate, wrote asking that the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council be recommended to fix his salary at $75 per month. Mr. Whimster pointed out that the fines since he took office amounted to $925 and that he had received no salary. The matter was referred to the government to ascertain if another recommendation be required from the council.

On recommendation from the police commissioners it was decided to have the basement of the jail floored and the jailor's bed-room lathed and plastered

The government analyst at Ottawa reported that the sample of water sent was insufficient. He recommended an analyst at Winnipeg for this work. Some of the Aldermen and the Mayor thought the local analyist might now do it for the city.

J. G. Cummings, C. E. wrote accepting the position of city engineer. Letter filed.

G. C. Hodge, Dist. Supt. of the B. C. Telephone Co., wrote stating his company intended to install a telephone system in Fernie and asking the council to inform him what distance out from the lot lines for placing the poles were the city's regulations.

W. R. Ross appeared for the B. C. Telephone Co. He explained that this company had for two years planned to install a plant at Fernie but on account of various reasons they had been delayed. He presented a letter from Messrs. Mott, Son & Co., per D. V. Mott, addressed to whom it might concern, stating that as the B. C. Telephone Co., intended installing a system his company had withdrawn from the field.

Ald. Cree spoke strongly against this telephone company and was opposed to giving any rights which the council had the power to withhold. The terms offered by the outside company were much inferior to those offered by the local applicants. Messrs. Mott, Son & Co. had withdrawn but Messrs. Hammond & Turner wished their former application to be reconsidered and he for one was in favor of giving them the franchise.

Mr. Ross arose to correct an evident misunderstanding. The B. C. Telephone Co. were not opposed to a local franchise being granted. All they wanted was information re placing of poles.

Ald. Beck was opposed to the outside company's terms and hours of service, etc., and favored a local company. Ald. Liphardt took the same ground. He wanted to know if the B. C. Telephone Co., had the right to enter the city against the will of the council. The city solicitor was not in a position to give expert advice but he was inclined to think that by the amendment to their charter last year they had this right.

The Mayor spoke strongly against the company. He briefly reviewed the history of the telephone proposition in Fernie. Messrs. Mott, Son & Co. had secured a promise for a charter and had afterwards dropped it without notifying the council. The council thinking that their offer held good had lost considerable time during which the B. C. Telephone Co. had attempted to gain a foothold by exhibiting Mr. Mott's letter in soliciting subscribers. He believed the right to instal a system should be given to local applicants.

Finally on motion of Ald. Cree and Beck a resolution was passed instructing the city clerk to reply to Mr. Hodge's letter stating that at the present the city council was not prepared to instruct the B C. Telephone Co. where telephone poles were to be erected.

Messrs. Hammond and Turner wrote asking the council to reconsider their former application for a telephone charter. They stated that they were still willing to live up to any agreements made. This was laid over until the next meeting.

A letter was read from L. P. Eckstein offering legal assistance re telephone franchise, and it was moved by Aldermen Cree and Beck "That we thank Mr. Eckstein for his letter and that the matter therein will receive the due deliberation of the council".—Carried.

A. Beck wrote offering to haul gravel from an excavation to the city streets desired at 25 cents per load or free, the city would pay team hire. Ald. Lundie and Beck favored the offer and the other three members of the council spoke against it on account of the season of the year. A motion was passed thanking Mr. Beck for his offer but stating that the council could no accept it until spring.

The residents of Gemill St. petitioned the council to lay a six foot sidewalk from S. Graham's butcher shop to Mr. Mott's corner. Owing to the lateness of the season it was decided to lay the matter over until spring.

A resolution was then passed governing the next civic elections, as follows:

1. That the nominations for Mayor, Aldermen and School Trustees be held at the court house in Fernie on the day appointed by the Municipal Elections Act, namely Jan. 9th, '05.

2. That J. A. Rennie be returning officer.

3. That in the event of a poll being necessary that the same be held in the court house on Jan. 12th, '05.

4. That W. H. Whimster be appointed deputy returning officer to assist the returning officer if the same be necessary

The clerk reported that the Finance committee had been unable to meet and asked for authority to pay the accounts of Phillip Carosella and Bell and Farquharson. On motion of Ald. Liphardt and Lundie these accounts were ordered to be paid after they had been passed bp the Finance committee.

The Mayor reported that the Coal Company charged $1.50 per 32 candle power lamp per month for street lighting.

The police commissioners through the Mayor reported that at a recent meeting they had decided to recommend a raise of $6 per month for each of the city police in consideration of which the police must provide uniforms for themselves. Overcoats and helmets, they recommended, should be provided by the council. The council favored the suggestions of the commissioners and a resolution adopting them was passed.

The council adjourned to meet Dec. 29th.

SCHOOL NOTES.

On Friday afternoon last a number of parents and others visited the Fernie school and viewed with interest the various exhibits of the children's work in the different departments. The exhibits showed much evidence of ability on the part of the youthful performers and of the true teacher's patient art on the part of the staff of instructors. Fernie can justly boast of its very efficient staff of school teachers who are developing their work to a high state of perfection. Perhaps one of the most striking exhibits was a sample of drawing and writing from a little Chinese boy, How Foon's son, in Miss Ramsay's room. The work is excellent, equalling that often seen in higher grades. No promotions were announced on Friday but when school reassembles for the new term some changes will be made. These changes will be made not so much for the purpose of promoting as to equallizing the work of the different teachers. Several from Miss Ramsay's room, which is crowded, will be transferred to Miss Hall's division.

The teachers and pupils are now enjoying their Christmas holidays, which will continue until Tuesday, Jan. 3rd. Several of the teachers are visiting in other places. Miss Marshall is at Michel, Miss Ramsay has gone to Creston and Miss Moody to Calgary and Macleod. Mr. Pedlar has had Mr A. Holland, of Fort Steele as his guest and later he probably will go back with Mr. Holland to Steele.

BURGLARS AT COAL CREEK.

SEVERAL HOUSES BARINGLY ENTERED.

$350.00 Belonging to J. Dobie Stolen. The Burglars Entered two other Houses but got Little. Resident Constable at Coal Creek Needed.

Three burglaries occurred recently at Coal Creek. The people of that town feel that the government is not treating them fairly in not appointing a resident constable.

On Sunday night $350. mysteriously disappeared from the house of H. Nelson. The money belonged to J. Dobie, fire-boss who occupied a room at Nelson's along with a companion. The latter was arrested on suspicion but absolutely no evidence could be secured against him and he was released. Dobie had been in the habit of carrying the money on his person and it was taken from his clothes while he was in bed.

On the same night the house of C. Johnson was entered by one or more burglars but they were unsuccessful in their search for valuables that they could conveniently carry off

On the night previous, Saturday night, the house of Wm. Alder was entered while the occupants were out for a few moments and the house was ransacked. Drawers were pulled out and contents scattered but the burglars secured nothing that they were searching for. There was $160.00 securely hidden in the house.

SMELTER GOES TO FRANK

The zinc smelter site which has hung fire for many months has at last gone to Frank. C. Fernau, the promoter, was at Frank this week and finally wired his decision to Nelson on Monday. The smelter, it is stated, will be erected at once.

Considerable surprise has been expressed that Frank should have got this industry as the superior advantages of Fernie are known to all and have been admitted by Mr. Fernau himself. The coal here is vastly superior for coking purposes, the haulage to Frank is sixty miles longer with a climb of nearly a thousand feet over the Divide. Fernie has the advantage of a second great railway and better water for smelting purposes. Moreover it is well known that the C. N. P. Coal Co. has offered every legitimate inducement to get the enterprise anchored here.

One of the reasons given for the Frank selection is that some of the Directors of the Frank mines are also interested in the smelter. Another is that the Frank property is on the market and that liberal inducements were made to get the smelter as it is regarded as a valuable acquisition to assist in the sale. The site was given free and the slack coal was offered at a very low figure.

BETTER QUALITY, HIGHER PRICE.

Wm. Handley Appointed Local Agent for the C. N. P. Coal Company's Coal.

William Handley has received the agency for Fernie for the Crows Nest Pass Coal company's coal. The coal company claims that it has been losing money on the local trade and so has determined to give up this branch of its business. Mr. Handley takes over the coal trade on January 2nd. The price of coal to the general consumer will be advanced from $3.50 to $4.00 per ton. The employees of the coal company will have their coal delivered to them at the old rate of $2.75 per ton, according to the old agreement.

Mr. Handley upon being asked about the raise in price, stated the Coal Co. guaranteed him the best coal mined at Coal Creek, well screened and free from rock and slack. For this he was obliged to pay a big advance on the price of the run-of-mine article. He bought the coal at Coal Creek and paid the freight charges over the M. F. & M. railway. These charges were considerably advanced over those formerly paid by the coal company. "I do not think the people will object to the increased price", continued Mr. Handley, "when they see the difference in the coal now sold and that which I am putting on the market. The coal company has promised me the best article turned out at Coal Creek. They have also agreed to screen it more carefully. The company is anxious to meet the local demands as well as they possibly can, and for this purpose it was considered necessary to improve the quality, which in turn means a higher price. Coal bunkers for storing coal will be built for me with short shutes by which the coal may be loaded without breaking. My coal will be much better value at $4 per ton than that now sold at $3.50 per ton".

All local orders after January 1st must be taken to Mr. Handley's office opposite the postoffice block. His rule will be "cash with order". Coal company employees will present orders from the accountant's office, Coal Creek, or from Jas. McLean, superintendent of the coke ovens.

WILDMAN—BECKET.

On Wednesday evening at 8:30 a pretty wedding ceremony took place at the home of Mr. Bert Wildman, the groom's brother, when Mr. Frederick C. Wildman and Miss Eva Beatrice Becket were made man and wife. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Alex. Dunn, B. D., in the presence of thirty guests. The bride looked very charming, dressed in pure white. Miss Snow, the bridesmaid, was also dressed in white and both carried boquets of white narcissus. Mr. Neil McKellar supported the groom. The wedding march was played by Mr. Stabler. The guests sat down to a sumptuous repast, after which several hours were spent in dancing. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents. The groom is a well known contractor of the city and the bride is the daughter of Thos. Becket, of this city, and she formerly lived at Norwood, Ont. Mr. and Mrs. Wildman have taken up their residence in the Lundie block. The FREE PRESS extends heartiest good wishes.

BROLEY—DUNLAP.

On Wednesday evening at 7.30 a quiet but pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Dunlap, when their only daughter Christina, was united in marriage to William J. Broley. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. Dunn, B D., in the presence of a few intimate friends. The bride looked very pretty in a handsome gown of green voile Miss Belle Elliott, becomingly gowned in brown crepe de chene, acted as bridesmaid and W. F. Martin was groomsman. Later in the evening the guests sat down to a wedding dinner. The popularity of the bride was attested to by the many presents she received. The groom is one of the best known contractors in the city. Mr. and Mrs. Broley have taken up their residence in Mr. Pollock's cottage, Riverside Ave. The Free Press wishes them success and happiness.

WILL THROW FIVE IN ONE HOUR.

Billy Burrows and Jack Overdorff will box 15 rounds in the Stork opera house on Saturday evening. We are in receipt of a letter from D. A. McMillan, of Spokane, trainer and manager of Overdorff, stating that he will agree to throw any five men in Fernie or neighborhood catch as catch can style, in one hour, as a preliminary for the boxing event. McMillan claims the all-around championship of the world at all styles of wrestling.

IMPROVEMENTS AT COAL CREEK.

An enthusiastic meeting was held at Coal Creek last week to select a deptutation to wait upon the Coal Company regarding lighting of the streets and other improvement to the same. It was asserted that several accidents had occurred during the past few weeks on this account, and hopes were expressed that these matters should receive immediate attention. The deputation appointed consisted of Messrs. Betridge, Thornson, Hunt and Lightly.

TO-DAY'S DESPATCHES

CLEVELAND—Dr. Chadwick, as well as his wife, was indicted to-day on a charge of having forged Andrew Carnegie's name to a $500,000 note. Dr. Chadwick is expected to arrive in New York from Paris on Wednesday, when he will be arrested. It is understood that it was on the evidence of President Beckwith that Dr. Chadwick was indicted.

ST. PETERSBURG—It is believed here that in the Spring Japan will cause a rising in China for the purpose of securing the intervention of the powers.

Tokio, Admiral Togo reports that from observation he is convinced that the Russian battleship Sebastapool has been completely disabled.

NEW YORK—At eleven o'clock the jury in the case of Nan Patterson, not having reached a verdict was locked up for the night.

F. J. Mitchell has full dress suits, silk lined throughout, cut and made by experts, prices range from $35 up.

TRAINS NOW RUNNING.

TRAFFIC OVER THE C. N. S. IS NOW REGULAR.

J. S. Thompson, formerly Agent at Swinton, has been Appointed Fernie Agent. Contractors Leaving.

On Saturday last the first coal shipments over the C. N. S. from Fernie were made, since which date regular daily trains have been run. The train leaves about 7 o'clock in the morning and arrives in the evening. As the law requires that a 30-day notice be given before a schedule be altered the trains cannot be run to Fernie yet on a schedule.

J. S. Thompson, former agent at Swinton, has been reinstated by the company and has been appointed agent at Fernie. Mr. Thompson arrived today to take charge. Owing to the deep snow work on the depot has been somewhat delayed. For this reason, also, it is doubtful if the round house will be moved from Swinton until spring.

Several of the contractors have left the district, their work being completed. They have been instructed to store their outfits at Fernie and the inference is that the line will be extended to Michel next year. Porter Bros. have gone over to Grand Forks with their outfit to complete that branch. Several trainmen of the C. N. S. have moved their families from Swinton to Fernie.

Supt. O'Neill, of the Whitefish division of the G. N. R., to which division the C. N. S. branch belongs, was in the city twice this week on business connected with the opening up of traffic to Fernie.

POLICE COURT

John Gibbs, of Coal Creek, a man of about fifty years of age, was arrested on Tuesday on the serious charge of having committed rape upon a 13 year old girl at Coal Creek. The case came up for preliminary trial on Wednesday but was remanded until 26th inst. to give both sides an opportunity to secure evidence. Mr. Eckstein is defending the accused.

Two professional gamblers were brought before Police Magistrate Whimster last Friday. Thomas Beggs pleaded guilty and was fined $25. Harry Nash pleaded guilty and was fined $35 with the option of 2 months in jail. On Wednesday two more gamblers contributed heavily towards the city finances. William Morgan was fined $30 and A. B. Barbour $35. His Worship in dealing with Nash and Barbour pointed out tha this was their third conviction and that the next time they would get six months without the option of a fine.

Thomas Rabit for carrying firearms had his gun confiscated. He was allowed to go on condition that he leave the cilp, to do which he seemed particularly anxious. The accused to a singular tale which indicated an unsound mind. He had been followed by certain individuals even from far Michigan, and he had been scandalized. He was arrested at the opera house where he claimed that the the Bioscope Company were scandalizing him. He carried the gun for self protection against the people who followed him.

Gus Anderson on the charge of drunkenness paid a fine of $5 on Wednesday.

DECEMBER'S PAY DAY

The sum of $126,842.55 paid on Saturday Mines Delayed this week.

Coal Creek	$73,271.80
Michel	38,054.85
Carbonado	15,515.90
Total	126,842.55

This pay was somewhat lower than last month on account of the closing down of considerable outside work on the advent of the winter.

The mines are not up to their usual output this month and the orders are getting somewhat behind. Strangely enough this is not on account of a shortage of cars. This week has been a particularly poor week. On Monday less than half the men turned up and booze after pay-day is the laconic explanation. Then yesterday a shift was lost by a couple of cars running off the track in a very bad place. They blocked the traffic and the mines had to shut down. However with no serious drawbacks for the remainder of the month the output at Coal Creek will equal that of November while Michel will fall a little short.

THE FINAL INSULT.

One Thing She Would Not Let Go by Unnoticed.

"He is furious with you," said the girl with the red pompadour.

The girl with the retrousse nose only smiled as she turned to the mirror and caught up a stray lock of hair with a gilt hairpin.

"He said," went on the girl with the red pompadour, "that you were utterly devoid of principle and intensely vain and horribly selfish."

"Did he?" giggled the girl with the retrousse nose, craning her neck to see if her collar was quite straight at the back.

"Yes, and he is telling it about that your father is not half as rich as people fancy and that your family came originally from Kansas, where your grandfather ran a—a—I forget what they call it, where they sell beer and things, and that there is a discrepancy in your coat of arms and that he taught you all you know about art and that you never read anything but paper covered novels and didn't know an ism from an ology until he met you and"—

"Oh, well," interrupted the girl with the retrousse nose, taking a bundle of pins out of her mouth and serenely pulling in the lacings of her girdle, "he feels terribly cut up, poor boy, since I—since we—ceased to—well, since it has been all off. You can't blame him for saying some spiteful things, and everybody knows they aren't true."

"Of course," agreed the girl with the red pompadour, "and that is what I told Edwin. There isn't a single word of truth in what he has said, even that you wear No. 7 boots and have your frocks cut long to hide them and"—

"Did he say that?" gasped the girl with the retrousse nose, dropping the powder puff in the midst of powdering her nose and turning wrathfully upon her companion.

"Why, yes," replied the girl with the red pompadour hastily. "But you surely don't blame him. You know you did treat him rather shabbily, Madeline, and"—

"I said," cried the irate girl with the retrousse nose, bringing the hairbrush emphatically down upon the corner of the dressing table, "that I didn't blame him or at least could forgive him for attacking my character and my veracity and my education and my common sense and my ancestry and my father and grandfather, but when he maligns my feet—my feet— Stella Carter, it's more than any woman could bear. I'm going to punish him!"

No Johnny In It.

Mrs. C. was visiting a neighbor who had a bright boy of four years. When she was ready to go home she asked the little fellow to accompany her and stay to tea.

"And we will have johnnycake," added Mrs. C. to clinch the argument.

The child had never heard corn cake called by this name, and he expected something very fine, but was disappointed as he watched her make it just as his mother made corn cake. When it was ready to go in the oven Mrs. C. said:

"Artie, as soon as it bakes we will have our tea."

But the little fellow thought there must be a great mistake, and he caught hold of Mrs. C.'s dress and, with eyes and mouth opened wide, gasped out:

"Oh, Mrs. C., you've forgot to put the Johnny in!"

An Unfortunate Omission.

Hicks—There is one thing that these schools of elocution ought to teach and don't.

Wicks—What's that?"

Hicks—They don't teach their pupils when they ought to decline positively to give a recitation.

Better Late Than Never.

"Did you know your husband long before you married him?" asked the casual female acquaintance.

"No," answered the bride whose honeymoon was on the toboggan, "but I'm beginning to find him out now—after midnight."

Just Like Human Beings.

The animals of the jungle were giving a play.

When the monkey comedian cut his capers the lions roared, but a woodpecker began to knock and several snakes were heard hissing.

With the Bugs.

Mr. Bug—My, my! Isn't the thunder awful? Why, it didn't look like rain when I came in!

A Diphthongal Difference.

"Colonel Carver and Judge Shortrange have just had a heated dispute by telephone over 'either' and 'eyether.' The judge called the colonel a liar."

"Are they looking for each other?"

"Yes. All is over but the shooting."—Judge.

WISDOM.

"The water placed in goblet, bowl or cup
Changes its form to its receptacle;
And so our plastic souls take various shapes
And characters of good or ill, to fit
The good or evil in the friends we choose.
Therefore be ever careful in your choice of friends,
And let your special love be given to those Whose strength of character may prove the whip,
That drives you ever to fair Wisdom's goal.

BACK TO KNEE BREECHES.

Silk Stockings and Silver Buckles in Vogue in London—Paardeburg Battle Ground.

Male dress reformers in London are now busy urging a return of the wearing of knee breeches. A society of young swells has been formed pledged to wear them at theatres and other evening entertainments. Already black silk breeches, silk stockings and silver buckles have made their appearance and the habit promises to spread. The reformers are filling the columns of the press with the arguments to the effect that all the laws of economy, health and beauty favor the abolition of the stove-pipe trouser as worn to-day.

Lord Roberts at Paardeburg.

Of interest to Canadians is Lord Roberts' recent visit to the South African battle-fields, says a recent despatch, Lord Roberts re-fought the battle of Paardeberg, but his advance upon Cronje's laager was made in a motor-car instead of with three divisions of infantry.

The Commander-in-Chief was keenly interested in the famous battleground, although greatly surprised at its altered appearance. There was even some trouble at first, in locating several well-remembered incidents. Herds of springbok have invaded the Paardeberg drift, and its battle scars are well hidden.

Lord Roberts found, after some difficulty, the site of his headquarters on that eventful February morning when General Cronje surrendered himself after stubborn resistance. He related the incidents of the surrender to the members of his party. Lord Roberts also traced the advance made by General Smith-Dorrien's division on February 26th, and the subsequent night attack in which the Canadians lost heavily.

Half buried in the veldt Lord Roberts discovered a number of rusty meat tins, souvenirs of the "alarm signals" devised by the Boers. These tins had been strung on wire some distance in front of the trenches, and the enemy were thus warned of night attacks.

Many other relics of the battle were discovered—fragments of shells, human bones, and cartridges; while in one of the trenches a Boer boy unearthed and proudly brought to Lord Roberts a rust-covered bayonet.

Lord Roberts spent two hours on the battlefield, and eventually walked around the inner trenches.

His visit created great curiosity among the Boers. Some of Cronje's old men who had fought the British at Paardeberg followed the party at a respectful distance.

On the journey to and from Kimberley there were many expressions of good-will on the part of the residents. Several of the Boer farmers displayed Union Jacks, and invited the Commander-in-Chief to visit them.

Why He Failed.

He was an elder of a chapel in a little Glamorganshire town. He was also a tradesman, and he fell upon evil days. His creditors pressed him, and he was forced to file his petition in bankruptcy.

His failure was the talk of the town. He felt his position acutely, and kept as much as possible within doors.

Then the brethren decided to hold a meeting, and the unworthy elder was summoned to attend. The pastor spoke first. He urged his people to be considerate and tender.

He was followed by a man who made an eloquent speech on honesty in trade, and concluded by moving that the elder be suspended from office for a period to give him time to purge himself of his heinousness. A seconder and supporter spoke to the same effect.

The brethren looked severe, their countenances were set with the sternness of a righteous wrath, a deep silence pervaded the room.

Slowly and humbly the elder arose. "I want," he murmured meekly, "to say a few things based on my ledger. The mover of the resolution owes me £16. I offered him three weeks ago to settle it for £12, to save myself from my present position. The seconder owes me £13. I told him I would accept £10 to prevent this exposure. The supporter of the resolution is indebted to me to the amount of £9."

A brief pause. "And now, with your permission"—turning to the pastor—"I will read out the sums the others present owe me."

He read them out, calmly and deliberately, but long ere he had finished the brethren had fled.

Eccentric Nobleman.

That rather eccentric young nobleman, Lord Howard de Walden, is about to start for East Africa on a big-game hunting expedition. He has acquired a large territory near the Victoria Nyanza, where he proposes to establish a stud farm for breeding zebras. He is probably the richest young man in England. The property he inherited from his grandmother, the late Dowager Lady Howard de Walden, was worth some £200,000 a year, and consists entirely of London houses. This estate was formerly the property of the Dukes of Portland, but the late Duke dying without leaving a male heir, this estate, which came into the family through an heiress (Lady Margaret, daughter of the Earl of Orford), fell to the Duke's surviving sister.

Occult Assistance.

Mack—What on earth did you go to that clairvoyant woman for?

Kate—I wanted to find out why I never can get any shirt waists made to fit.

WAS SENT HOME AS INCURABLE

THEN JOSEPH BOONE FOUND HEALTH IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

He Was Unable to Work for Seven Years Before He Used the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Cottel's Cove, Nfld., Dec. 19.—(Special).—The days of miracles are past, but the cure of Joseph Boone of this place almost ranks with the sensational cures of the earlier ages.

Mr. Boone has been ailing for eight years, seven of which he was unable to work from the effects of Backache and Kidney Complaint. He was all aches and pains.

He was treated by several doctors, and after seven months in the hospital was sent home as incurable. It was there that reading of cures in the newspapers led him to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. It took twenty-one boxes to cure him, but to-day he is strong and well and hard at work lobster fishing.

People here have learned that if the disease is of the Kidneys or from the Kidneys Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it.

The Imp Hoax.

This brazen imposture on the credulity of the English public was the result of a wager between the Duke of Montague and another nobleman in 1749. In discussing the amazing gullibility of the English people the former declared that if one were to advertise it well that he would jump into a quart bottle all London would go to see him do it. The wager being made, an advertisement was inserted in all of the leading papers promising that the feat would be performed on a certain date at the Haymarket theater. On the appointed day the theater was packed from pit to dome, and many hundreds were turned from the doors. The supposed magician appeared on the stage and had the temerity to state that if the audience would pay double the price he would enter a pint bottle, shown on the stage table, instead of the quart flask, as furnished. He then hurriedly escaped by the stage door. A riot resulted, in which the theater was badly wrecked, and the duke and his companion had to leave town until the excitement was well over.

The Original Cradle.

There is, if one comes to think of it, says the London Queen, more connection than is at first apparent between the "tree top" and the cradle of the old refrain, with which generation after generation of babies has been crooned to sleep. The cradles of the ninth and tenth centuries were formed of a section of the trunk of a tree, scooped out, with small holes bored at the sides through which to pass the cords back and forth to prevent the child from falling out. The natural convexity of the wood on the outside enabled the nurse to rock the infant.

The enormous antiquity of the now obsolete cradle is startling when one remembers the wicker cradle or basket of the time of Moses, and later it is known on excellent authority that the Roman babies slept in cradles. These were the predecessors of the elaborately carved cradles which formed so important a part of the bedroom furniture until within the last fifty years.

The Strength of Jefferson.

Jefferson was that one nearest to genius who has lived in the White House. He was a philosopher, a statesman, a scholar, a linguist, an artist and a scientist. He drew plans as an architect, invented the first furrow turning plow, and last, though not best, played on the fiddle. He sent rice from Italy, sneaking it out of Milan in his coat pockets, contra formam statuti, and made the savannas of Carolina and Georgia a source of food supply. He did many notable things. Among others, he lifted 1,000 pounds with his bare hands and gained the title of "the strong man of Albomarle" in a region where men were strong.—A. H. Lewis in Metropolitan Magazine.

The Child That Wasn't Very Pretty.

Two Germantown women were recently calling on a new neighbor, and while awaiting her appearance a little girl came into the room, evidently bent upon the rescue of a doll recently abandoned there. Naturally she was viewed with some curiosity, and one of the callers, secure in the child's obviously tender age, spelled a low voiced comment:

"Not very p-r-e-t-t-y."

To her horror, the small maiden paused on the threshold and, fixing a contemptuous eye upon the culprit, remarked, with lofty composure:

To have a respect for ourselves guides our morals, and to have a deference for others governs our manners. —Sterne.

PROPER WAY TO WALK.

A Physical Instructor Gives Advice on the Subject.

The way to walk straight is not to think of the shoulders at all, says a physical instructor. Hang your arms loosely at your sides and hold yourself erect by moderate tension of the back and abdominal muscles and the muscles of the neck. Then your shoulders will have to hang right.

Don't "throw out" your chest. The chest that is inflated properly by deep breathing is bound to be thrown out, and thrown out not like that of a stuffed figure, but naturally, because it can't help it.

Don't walk with a stiff neck. Hold your head erect the way an animal does. Watch a deer. Its neck is always in motion, yet it is always held beautifully. Your head poised on a stiffly held neck is no good for either balancing or looking around you. Poised confidently on strong but pliant neck muscles, it becomes what a head should be.

Many classes of men who do much walking, such as Indians, guides and trappers, walk with their bodies inclined forward a little bit. But they don't round their shoulders or stoop their heads. They incline forward from the hips. This throws their weight a little ahead and gives the leg muscles the chance to exert all their power in the best directions. But the upper body is never bent by these men. It simply is held forward from the hips at a very slight, barely perceptible, angle.

Even if correct poise in walking had nothing to do with other forms of athletics it would be invaluable in itself. The man who walks right is going to keep his organs—heart, kidneys, liver and lungs—in splendid form. But, besides all this, it helps wonderfully in all outdoor sports.

PAPUAN CANNIBALS.

They Must Murder and Taste Human Blood to Attain Manhood.

The cannibal instinct of the Papuan of New Guinea is not hard to explain. In all the 313,000 square miles of New Guinea there is not a tribe which does not regard murder as a knightly accomplishment. Until a man has taken a human life and has sipped human blood he is an object of ridicule. He is not permitted to tattoo himself, and with a skin thus unadorned he is shunned by Papuan society.

Immediately after killing some one, however, the murderer must undergo six days of "purification," which are marked by various uncanny rites. He first washes himself and his weapon and seats himself upon a stage in the sight of the whole town, but nevertheless unnoticed by all. During this time he must eat nothing except roasted bananas, the pulp of which he bites out and the rest he throws away. On the third day he has so far purified himself that his friends entertain him at a feast, and on the fourth day he decks himself with all the ornaments of his home and parades up and down the village. After being thoroughly admired he walks down to a river, and, standing with feet wide apart, he lets all the boys who want to become great men swim through his legs. On the next day at dawn he jumps from bed and yells out of the window at the top of his lungs. His shout is supposed to scare away the ghost of his victim. On the following day he returns to his wife, who has spurned him up to this time, and is once more installed as the respected lord of his household.

Snakes In the Water.

All reptiles swim. Almost all snakes move through the water with as much ease and rapidity as on land. Rattlesnakes, for example, are much given to swimming in placid water if it is not too cold. In the everglade lakes of Florida they may be often seen. It is well to know that to attack from a boat a poisonous snake in the water is a much more dangerous proceeding than to attack the snake on land. The reason is that the reptile will immediately make for the boat, since it must have a solid base from which to strike. It half leaps and half climbs into the craft, and there is a fight at uncomfortably close quarters.—Success.

A Wedding Warning.

The Breton peasant does not believe in any such new fangled doctrine as that of the equality of the sexes, and he makes that clear when he takes unto himself a wife. Then, according to ancient custom, directly the fatal knot is tied the bridegroom gives the bride a smart box on the ear, saying, "This is how it feels when you displease me." After this ungallant proceeding he draws her tenderly toward him and kisses her, saying, "And this is how it feels when you treat me well."

Effectual Way.

"I thought Smeargle was a friend of yours."

"He was until lately. I had to drop him. He was always wanting to borrow money."

"Refused him sharply, did you?"

"No; I lent him some."

Do you want to add $320 to your income?

It will only require a few minutes of your time every day to earn $320 a year. You can earn it with a Chatham Incubator. A No. 2 Chatham Incubator will hold from 100 to 120 eggs—according to size of eggs. Eighty chickens is a low average hatch—users of Chatham Incubators will tell you so. Chickens are always in demand and the supply is always short, so fifty cents is the average price secured. If you only take off eight hatches in a year, that gives you an income of $320.00. Wouldn't that extra amount be useful to you? ¶ Best of all, you can buy a

Chatham Incubator without one cent of cash until October, 1905

The machine pays for itself many times over before that time. There couldn't be a fairer offer than this. We ship a Chatham Incubator to you at once, freight prepaid by us, and your first payment is not due until October, 1905. Write us to-day for full particulars. The Chatham Incubators and Brooders have every new improvement worth while in an incubator or brooder. The incubators are made with two walls, case within case, of dry material that has been seasoned in our lumber yards. They are built solid as a rock and will stand any amount of usage for years. The sooner you accept our offer the sooner will the Chatham Incubator be earning profits for you.

CANADIAN NEWS.

TREE PLANTING ON THE PRAIRIES.

A notice has been issued by the Forestry Branch of the Department of the interior in forming the public that all applications for forest tree planting should be forwarded to Ottawa between now and March 1 next, in order that the farms of applicants may be inspected in the summer. For the information of the public it may be well to state why and under what conditions the Government is aiding the settlers on the plains in the growing of windbreaks, shelter belts and forest plantations on their homesteads.

Various attempts have been made by the Governments both of the United States and Canada to encourage the prairie settler to grow trees. The most ambitious of these was by granting a quarter section of land for the growing of a certain number of trees. This plan was tried but proved so complete a failure that it was soon abandoned in both countries.

Soon after the organization of the Forestry Branch by the Dominion Government a plan was adopted and put in force which is both educative and practical in character, and which is now in operation. The plan adopted was one of co-operation between the Department and the settler; the Department furnishing inspection and expert advice and also plant material, and the settler planting the trees in accordance with instructions, protecting them against destruction by animals by fencing or otherwise, and against fire, by fire guards, and also keeping them properly cultivated till they attained sufficient size to shade the ground, when further cultivation would be unnecessary.

The plantation belongs to the settler, but he agrees not to cut down or allow the trees to be destroyed without the consent of the Department. In a word, the object is to assist the settler in obtaining a belt of forest trees on his farm which will afford shelter and also incidentally in time a certain amount of timber for his use.

It was evident that it would be unwise to furnish trees without knowing anything of the preparation of the soil or the character of the land on which they were to be planted, or what varieties would be best adapted for it. On the other hand, the scheme would undoubtedly fail if after inspecting the farmer's land and suggesting the varieties best suited for it, he were left to supply himself with the stock as best he could. As it is, the trees are grown under the most favorable conditions at the Government nurseries.

They are taken up and carefully packed and shipped by express; all those for each express office at the same time. Notice is sent to each applicant a week ahead, stating when the trees will arrive, so that he will be prepared to send to the station for them, it may at a later date be necessary to make a charge for the seeding trees, but at present, in the initial stage object lessons in tree planting are being furnished here and there all over the plains region, by which examples are given, close at hand, of the proper methods to be followed, and no charge is made for either seed, seedling trees or cuttings.

There is one question that is frequently asked and that should be answered, namely, as to why it is necessary for a settler to apply before March next who is not to plant till the following spring, 1906, or why he cannot be supplied this coming spring. A moment's consideration will satisfy the enquirer. There would be no time for inspection, and it would be impossible for the Department to know without it whether the land was properly prepared and as to what varieties were best adapted to the particular location.

There is really no time lost, for while the inspection is being made and the land being prepared the trees are being grown in the nurseries. The inspectors start their work about the first of May and the applications have to be all received by March 1st in order that they may be tabulated and plans arranged for the use of the inspectors. Any applications received after the latter date will have to be held over till the following year. During the past season 1,800,000 trees have been furnished to 1,030 settlers, or an average of 1,750 trees to each settler.—[Free Press, Winnipeg.

Assiniboia Farmer Killed.

A. L. Thompson, a settler on the Souris river, while driving home from North Portal on the night of the 6th, was upset out of his sleigh on a rough place on the hill and instantly killed. His horses failed to reach home, and his son went in search of his father next morning, when he discovered his father lying where he had fallen out. His wife had started for Minnesota the same night on a visit to their former home. "Dad' as he was usually called, was well and favorably known, and his sudden death has cast a gloom over the neighborhood of North Portal.

A Cigarette By-Law.

At the last meeting of the St. Thomas (Ont.) City Council the by-law to impose a license fee of $100 after Jan. 1 on all vendors of cigarettes was read a first and second time and finally passed after some discussion. It was pointed out that the Council had no power to prevent hotels from selling cigarettes or tobacconists from selling cigarette papers, so that any one could manufacture their own cigarettes. It was also pointed out that the law as regards the sale of tobacco was not enforced.

Canada to Mexico Line.

A despatch says that it is reported in Mexico that the contract for the British steamship line between British Columbia and Mexico has been awarded to Andrew Weir & Co., of Glasgow, Scotland. The agreement calls for first-class steamers capable of carying 4,000 tons of freight each, 50 first-class passengers, and from 300 to 400 steerage passengers. The line will be subsidized and will receive $50,000 each from the Canadian and Mexican Governments.

Supposed N. W. T. Man Aspyxiated.

A despatch from Toronto, dated the 11th, says: D. J. McIntyre, who arrived on the North Bay train late on Saturday night, was found dead in his room at the Daly house to-day, with the gas jet on. He is not known in Toronto. In McIntyre's effects was found a ticket for Dutton, via St. Thomas, so that it is probable he was returning from the Northwest to visit his relatives in Elgin county.

Woman's Sudden Deoth.

Mrs. John Morrison, 42 years of age, and living four miles south of Gilbert Plains, Man., died very suddenly on the 8th. She had just returned from town with her husband, and along with him and one of her daughters, was in the granary filling up a load of wheat, when she sat down suddenly, and her husband going to her side, found her dead. The husband and seven children are left to mourn their sad loss.

Montreal Police Investigation.

The striking feature at the police investigation here, says a despatch from Montreal, was the evidence of the Rev. Arthur French, of the Church of St. John the Evangelist. Rev. Mr. French's work has been largely among what might be called the vicious classes in Montreal, and his evidence was in the nature of expert evidence. He suggested the treatment of the social evil as health authorities deal with contagious diseases. There was a district in Montreal where this form of vice was especially prevalent. Let the police confine it there. Let them see that it was resolutely suppressed in every other part of the city. Then, having it within certain limits, it could be controlled and eventually suppressed. He denounced those who, while professing respectability, aided vice by renting their property, in defiance of the law, to known disorderly characters. He also pointed out the serious nature of the crime committed by those who rent rooms for immoral purposes, and he said that the court should deal most severely with the many parties who made a practice of driving people to haunts of vice. In this latter way many lives had been ruined.

EARL GREY SPEAKS OF CANADA.

New Governor-General Refers in the Highest Terms to Dominion's Opportunities and National Characteristics.

A despatch from Ottawa, dated the 13th, says: The mayor and aldermen of Ottawa this afternoon presented to Earl Grey an address of welcome. His excellency, in replying, said that His Majesty the King remembers with pleasure his visit to Canada in 1860, when he laid the foundation stone of the Parliament buildings, which are the admiration of every visitor.

"It will be," said Earl Grey, "my proud duty to inform His Majesty the King that you are able to give your testimony to the glad and hopeful fact that racial and religious prejudices no longer exist in your broad Dominion, and that the energies and aspirations of your people are being directed in the path of moral, social and intellectual progress. It will, I am certain, be a source of the greatest satisfaction to our sovereign to know that his French-Canadian and other subjects in the Dominion are in hearty co-operation, working out together the magnificent destiny which awaits this country.

"The eventful and picturesque story of your past, your present position, and the boundless possibilities of your great future, combine to make a most inspiring and entrancing theme. The blood is stirred and the imagination warmed by the ideas conveyed to their mind by the contemplation of your vast territories, of the mysterious and fascinating silence of the undeveloped north, of the varied richness of your boundless resources, of the unsurpassed charm and splendor of the scenery and the invigorating magnificence of your unrivalled climate.

"But there is one asset which you possess, even more important than these to which I have referred, namely, that which is represented by your natural character. If you do not zealously guard the sacred fire of that asset the others to which I have referred will be as dross and as the crumbling clay If on the other hand you keep as your address informs me you will keep, the character of your people high, strenuous, virile, imaginative, heroical and imperial, no one can venture to set a limit to the degree of the influence which will be exercised on the future of mankind by the great Canadian nation, composed as it is of all that is best in England, Scotland, Ireland and France, and privileged as it is to be a factor of ever increasing inmportance in the British empire."

In conclusion he said there was no reason why Canada should not exercise an all-powerful and in time to come perhaps a controlling influence in the development of the majesty and destiny of the empire, whose standard was righteousness and whose path was duty.

THE MARKET REPORT

Furnished by Thompson, Sons & Co.
Thursday, December 15.

WHEAT—During the seven days that have passed since the date of our last weekly review of the wheat cial importance has transpirel affecting the markets or the trade generally. Trade has been sluggish as if traders were taking a breathing spell, and awaiting further developments before making any attempt at increasing the activity of the trade. In the meantime while prices as exhibited by quotations on the American markets are generally 1c or so lower than a week ago, we consider the situation is becoming stronger. Last week the world's shipments were under ten million bushels for the first time since the last week in September and it is reasonable to expect further decrease during the next several weeks. The American visible supply increased only 248,000 bushels for the week, against an increase of 2,382,000 bushels last year. The quantity on ocean passage decreased over 600,000 bushels, and the world's visible supply, according to Bradstreet's, decreased 2,371,000 bushels, against an increase of 1,586,000 last year. The foregoing figures are significant, and if weekly statistics continue to show in the same direction for a time, it will result in increased strength on the markets. The situation in the United States is at present of much interest, for Manitoba wheat is for the first time being imported into that country for domestic use. The quantity taken for this purpose is on a moderate scale so far, probably not over 250,000 bushels, as it has to pay a duty of 25 cents per bushel, but the fact of its being taken at all, is an event calculated to turn people's thoughts to the great changes in the wheat and flour trade which will ensue in the developing of the Canadian Northwest. Besides the small quantity of Manitoba wheat going over the line for domestic consumption, a larger quantitity has been shipped or is being shipped to be milled in bond for export. We venture to say that at least 5,000,000 bushels of this season's Manitoba crop will pass through the United States mills during the current twelve months. This, of course, is comparatively not a large quantity, but it will mean just that much less for direct export from Manitoba to Europe, and suggests a turning of trade into new channels to some extent. Not much has been heard from Argentine this week, but latest reports tell of improved weather for harvesting. Nevertheless, owing to the character of weather in that country during the last two months, we consider the crop must have suffered a good deal in quality and yield. Needed rain and snow has fallen to some extent over the American winter wheat belt, but the delay in its coming has been very detrimental to the crop, so much so, that the Government crop report for December, issued on Saturday, puts the condition at only 82.9 against 86.9 same date last year. Besides this, there is an estimated reduction in the acreage seeded of over 1,500,000 acres compared with last year. There is nothing new regarding European crops. Australian exports from crop being harvested are not expected to be over half the quantity shipped away last year. Crop prospects in India continue favorable and she continues to make large weekly shipments to Europe. The visible supply increased 248,000 bushels last week, against an increase of 1,260,000 bushels the previous week and an increase of 2,382,000 bushels last year. The world's shipments were 9,288,000 bushels, against 10,592,000 bushels the previous week, and 9,592,000 bushels last year. The world's visible supply, according to Bradstreet's, decreased 2,371,000 bushels, against a decrease of 2,624,000 bus. the previous week, and an increase of 1,586,000 bushels la t year.

In our local market Manitoba wheat has been firm, sometimes fairly active, and never positively dull. A confident feeling has come into the trade during the week, and although American prices are somewhat lower on the week our prices show an improvement of 1¼ to 1¾c. Neither buyers nor sellers have been aggressive, but have been willing to meet each other, and without any particular show of activity a good deal of wheat has been changing hands. The lower grades have, if anything, been dull, the best selling wheat having been 1 and 2 Northern. Navigation has been closed at lake ports during the week, so that further shipments eastward must be all rail for the present. Notwithstanding this, with its high freight rate, cash wheat has been seling at ⅛c. to ¼c. over the December option, which is a good omen. Receipts at most country points are now very small, and the movement by rail is falling off. The Manitoba Government have today issued an estimate of the crop of the province for the year. The yield of wheat is put at 39,162,000 bushels, or an average of 16½ bushels per acre. Allowing that the crop in the Northwest Territories makes the same average yield, it would give 17,325,000 bushels, or an aggregate of 56,487,000 bushels. Prices to-day are as follows: 1 Northern, 94¾c; 2 Nor., 91¾c; 3 Nor., 82¾c; No. 4 Extra, 73c; No. 4 wheat, 71¼c; No. 5 wheat, 61c; Feed wheat, 53c; No. 2 Feed, 50c., spot or December delivery. On the option market wheat for future delivery closed: December, 94½c; May, $1.00¼; July, $1.01½. All prices for in store Fort William and Port Arthur.

PRODUCE AND LIVE STOCK.

Winnipeg, Dec. 16.

Bran and shorts have declined $2 per ton, being now quoted at $15 to $17 respectively. The local demand is weak. Ground feed is alone easier, declines of $1 per ton occurring in oat chop, barley chop, mixed barley and oats. Quotations at $24, $19 and $22 per ton respectively. Although the oat market is dull, No. 2 white, owing to scarcity of good stock is firmer, ranging from 30 to 31c per bushel. Other grades remain about steady. Retail business has been rather slack as bad roads have deterred farmers from coming in. Barley and flax are about steady. Baled hay is easier, ranging as low as $6.50, although last week's quotation at $7.50 holds good in a few cases. Several cars were received during the week, and this coupled with reports of a large quantity at various points ready to ship, depressed the market. Loose hay on the street holds steady.

Quotations.

Millfeed—Bran, $15 per ton, in bulk, delivered to the trade; shorts, $17 per ton.

Ground Feed—Oat chop, $25 per ton, delivered to the trade; barley chop, $19; mixed barley and oats, $22; oil cake, $27 per ton.

Oats—No. 2 white, 30 to 31c; No. 3, 29c; feed grades, 28c per bushel, in carlots on track, Winnipeg.

Barley—No. 3 barley, 35c per bus; No. 4, 33c; feed grade, 30c on track, Winnipeg.

Flaxseed—95c per bushel, Fort William basis.

Speltz—About the same as barley.

Hay—Baled hay, new, in carlots on track, $6.50 to $7.50; loose hay, farmers' loads, $7 to $8 per ton.

Vegetables—An advance of 5c per bushel in potatoes is the only price change this week. Business is good, but supplies are not very plentiful as the roads are not yet in good shape. It is thought some pits will be opened about the first of the year.

We quote: Potatoes, farmers' loads, 70c per bushel; cabbage, $30 per ton; Swede turnips, 25c per bushel; parsley, 40c per dozen; onions, 3c per lb.; carrots, 50c per bushel; parsnips, 2c per lb.; beets, 65c per bus.; celery, 40 to 60c per doz.; lettuce, 40c per doz.; pumkins, 2c per lb.; sauerkraut, 3 to 3½c per lb.

Cheese—The market is steady. The demand is fair, and easiness in eastern markets does not seem to have affected the local situation. Local jobbing prices are: Ontario, 11½c per Manitoba, 11c per lb.; Twins, 11½ to 12c.

Butter — Creamery — Things are rather quiet. Local jobbing prices are 25c per lb. for solids, and 28 to 30c per lb. for bricks.

Butter—There is not much offering. The demand is slack and the market weak. Retailers appear to be pretty well stocked up. We quote prices paid by jobbers at Winnipeg as follows: No. 1, 16c; No. 2, 10 to 14c; round bricks, 18½ to 19c. Price of round lots, Winnipeg, is 12½ to 13c, and from 1 to 2c more for special selected shipments by express.

Eggs—emand fair, prices steady. We quote for imported stock on a jobbing basis: Fresh, 26; glycerined, 24 to 25c per dozen.

Dressed Meats — Although prices are not materially firmer the demand for special quality for holiday trade in beef, ranging ¼c higher and lower. Veal is 2c firmer for choicest weights at 8c per lb., and ranging as low as 4½c for heavy, rough calves. Beef, 5 to 6c per lb. for city dressed; ½c less for country; veal, 8c for chicest weights; mutton, 8c; spring lambs, 9 to 10c per lb.; hogs, 7¼c, delivered to the trade here.

Poultry—Receipts of local stock are practically nil. Considerable quantities of imported poultry are on the market. Jobbing prices are: Turkeys, 18c per lb.; spring chickens 15c per lb.; fowl, 12½c per lb.; ducks, 15c per lb.; geese, 14c per lb.

Hides—The market is steady. Frozen hides are arriving in considerable quantities, and are in considerable demand. Dealers are paying 6½ to 6¾c per lb. We quote: Abattoir hides, 7¼c for No. 1's; 6¼c for No. 2's; country cured buthchers at 6½c to 7c for No. 1 grade; frozen butchers, 6½ to 6¾c per lb.; sheepskins, 50 to 60c.

Tallow—Quotations are steady but the market is weak. No. 1 tallow is worth 3½ to 3¾c per lb., delivered at Winnipeg; No. 2, 2¾c.

Seneca Root—There is leittle moving; country stocks are considered to be pretty well cleaned up. Quotations are practically steady. Clean, dry root is worth 55 to 57c nominally per pound, delivered Winnipeg.

Live Ssock.

Cattle—The season for export business is over. Butchers' are steady, although as high as $3 has been paid for exceptional quality. A considerable quantity of stuff has arrived and the demand is light We quote: $2.75 off cars here for butchers down to $2.25 for inferior grades.

Sheep—The market is about steady at last week's advance. We quote: $3.75 per cwt., Winnipeg.

Hogs — Offerings have been very heavy and the anticipated decline of ¼c has taken place. We quote: 5c. per lb. selected weights, Winnipeg.

Canada Captures Sheep Prizes.

Canadian exhibitors had a walkaway in the sheep department of the live stock show at Chicago, winning in nearly every class. The first prizes for wethers went as follows: Sharpshears, John Campbell, Woodville, Ont; Southdowns, Sir George Drummond, Beaconsfield, Que.; Lincolns, J. T. Gibson, Benfield, Ont.; Hampshires, Telfer Bros., Paris, Ont

AN INTERESTING TRIP.

A large number of people are taking advantage of the present low excursion rates to the East, and more than ever are going through the States on account of the superior train service and interesting points enroute. This is especially true of the Burlington route between St Paul and Chicago, which runs for three hundred miles along the banks of the Mississippi River, and is one of the most picturesque routes in America. They have published an attractive folder with map and complete time tables, a copy of which, and any other information concerning the trip can be obtained by addressing Mr. A. L. Eidemiller, Travelling Pasenger Agent, who will make the Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, his headquarters during December.

WAR NEWS.

SEVASTOPOL HAS BEEN TORPEDOED.

The Last Russian Warship in Port Arthur Reported Blown up.

It is reported that the Japanese have successfully torpedoed the Russian battleship Sevastopol. The following despatch from the headquarters of the third Japanese army says: The Russian battleship Sevastopol, the only Russian ship that escaped destruction, being docked when the other vessels were sunk after the Japanese captured 203 Metre hill, escaped from the dock and harbor on Wednesday night, and is now anchored under a protecting mountain. Some torpedo craft are also outside of the harbor. The tremendous price in life paid by the Japanese for the capture of 203 Metre hill has been redeemed by the utter destruction of the Russian fleet. The Japanese fleet will now go into dock.

Demolishing Port Arthur.

Another despatch says that every part of the city and harbor of Port Arthur is visible from 203 Metre hill. The streets of the city are deserted and but few soldiers are doing patrol duty. Many buildings have been burned and others shattered. The shelters of the harbor present a strange appearance with the turrets, masts and funnels of the warships showing just above the water. There is not a vessel afloat in the harbor. The docks and buildings on the water front are torn and burned, and the Japanese shells reach every part of the city and harbor. The Japanese are working their advance on the shores of Pigeon Bay on comparatively level ground against the Tai Yan Kow, Idzeschan and Antzeshan forts. The approaches to the forts are easy, but the forts are enormously strong and the near approch will be all the more difficult as the saping of trenches will have to be done through frozen ground. The naval guns mounted on 203 Metre hill will be able to cover the advance of infantry against any of the western guns.

Terrible Carnage in the Trenches.

A correspondent who is with the third Japanese army, before Port Arthur, sends the following, via Fusan, dated Dec. 14: The work of removing the dead from the slopes and crests of 203 Metre hill has been completed on the north side. The south slopes are still covered with the bodies buried under the debris of trenches and bomb proofs. The long lines of Japanese dead laid out on the top of the hill and the slopes previous to interment presented an awful appearance. The effect of dynamite used as an offensive weapon in the form of hand grenades is instanced in an appaling manner by the condition of the dead bodies which are torn and in an almost unrecognizable mass of flesh and bones. Fragments of hundreds of killed unearthed from the filled in Russian trenches presented a scene of awful horror. The heavy timbers and steel plates of the bomb proofs were torn to splinters by shells and dynamite.

Hot Attacks on Fleet.

The Japanese legation at Washington has received the following cablegram from Tokio: "The commander of the naval artillery reports that the bombardment on the 13th was principally aimed at the arsenal and the torpedo depot at Tiger's Tail and at steamboats in the vicinity. The torpedo depots were ablaze in one hour. Three ships were destroyed and one was sunk, besides the bialdings being greatly damaged. Indirect bombardment upon the Sevastopol staying outside the harbor was suspended owing to the bad weather, which prevented observation.

Togo reports that the torpedo boat flotilla attacked the Sevastopol twice on the night of the 12th and three times on the night of the 13th. The result is uncertain. Each time they met the enemy's fierce fire and one of our torpedo boats was disabled, but towed back, while three received one shot each. Our toatl casualities was only three men wounded.

Warship Led a Restless Life.

The report of Admiral Togo was received Tuesday night. It was as follows:

"Commander Kasama, commanding the torpedo boat flotilla, on Monday night at midnight attacked the Russian battleship Sevastopol lying outside Port Arthur. The result of this attack has not been ascertained. Subsequently two torpedo boats under command of Masado attempted several attacks, fearing the enemy's vigorous fire. Next day the Sevastopol remained in the same position. None of our vessels were damaged. On Tuesday at 2 a. m. another torpedo flotilla under Commander Arakawa attacked the Sevastopol, but the result of the attack was not learned. In this attack a shell from the enemy struck the engine room, disabling the vessel, and she lost her freedom of motion. There were no casualities.

"Again at 6 a. m. of the same day a torpedo flotilla under Commander Seki attempted an attack, but was exposed by the enemy's searchlights, and being subjected to a heavy fire, was unable to accomplish its purpose. Simultaneously Lieut. Adachi, commanding two torpedo boats, approached the enemy's ship and discharged torpedoes, which were seen to explode, but with what effect is not known. These attackers were also exposed to a heavy fire. Both were hit once and three men were injured."

More Taking Red Sea Passage.

A cablegram from Canea, Island of Crete, Dec. 14, says: Three cruisers of the Russian Pacific squadron, on the voyage to the far east, have arrived at Aden. The vessels of the squadron which preceded these cruisers are still at Jibutil awaiting the arrival of the latter.

Nearing the Cape.

A cable from Swakomund, South Africa, Dec.14, says that part of the warships of the Russian second Pacific second squadron arrived at Angra Paquena on December 12 and began coaling from colliers. Angra Paquena is outside of Walfish bay, which belongs to Great Britain, the only port of importance in German Southwest Africa. Thus the larger ships which started around Africa are still about one thousand miles from the Cape of Good Hope.

SAMPLES OF CHOICE GRAIN FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF SEED.

By instruction of the Hon. Minister of Agriculture another distribution will be made this season of samples of the most productive sorts of grain to Canadian farmers for the improvement of seed. The stock for distribution is of the very best and has been secured mainly from the excellent crops recently had at the branch Experimental Farm at Indian Head in the Northwest Territories. The distribution this spring will consist of samples of oats, spring wheat, barley, Indian corn and potatoes. The quantity of oats to be sent this year will be 4 lbs., and of wheat or barley, 5 lbs., sufficient in each case to sow one-twentieth of an acre. The samples of Indian corn and potatoes will weigh 3 lbs., as heretofore. A quantity of each of the following varieties has been secured for this distribution:—

Oats — Banner, Wide-Awake, Improved Ligorvo, Waverley Goldfinder, Abundance and Thousand Dollar.

Wheat—Preston, Red Fife, Percy, Stanley, Huron, Laurel, and White Fife.

Barley (six-rowed). — Mensury, Odessa, Mansfield, Claude and Royal, Two-rowed — Sidney, Invincible, Standwell and Canadian Thorpe.

Potatoes—Carman No. 1, Early White Prize, Candian Beauty, Uncle Sam, American Wonder, Bovee, Early Andes and Late Puritan.

Every farmer may apply, but only one sample can be sent to each applicant, hence if an individual receives a sample of oats he cannot also receive one of wheat, barley or potatoes, and applications for more than one sample for one household can not be entertained. These samples will be sent free of charge through the mail.

Applications should be addressed to the Director of Experimental farms, Otawa, and may be sent in any time before the 1st of March, after which the lists will be closed, so that all the samples asked for may be sent out in good time for sowing. Parties writing should mention the sort of variety they prefer, with a second sort as an alternative, and should the available stock of both these varieties be exhausted, some other good sort will be sent instead. Those applying for Indian corn or potatoes, will please bear in mind that the corn is not available for distribution until March or April, and that potatoes cannot be mailed from here until danger from frost in transit is over.

WM. SAUNDERS,
Director Experimental Farms.

WILL FIGHT FOR EARLDOM.

Kansas City and British Claimants in Opposition.

Robert Barclay Allardice, whose claim to the dormant earldoms of Strathern, Monteith and Airth, in the peerage of Scotland, will be heard at next session of the House of Lords, and will be opposed by George Marshall Graham, of Kansas City, whose interests in Great Britain are represented by his cousin, W. M. Graham, of Easton. Graham, who was born in Edinburgh on Nov. 15, 1852, is the eldest surviving son of the late James Graham of Leitchtown, Monteith and Perthshire. The earldom of Strathern dates from 1371, and the earldoms of Airth and Monteih from 1633 and 1427, respectively.

OPPOSITION TO BISHOPS COSTS CHURCH $200,000.

The Roman Catholic Church in Scotland has lost $100,0000 by a case disposed of in the Court of Sessions at Edinburgh. The late Marquis of Bute left $100,000 to each of the Roman Catholic dioceses of Argyll and Galloway for the erection of churches at Abon and Whithorn. Attached to the bequests were certain conditions which were opposed by the bishops. in particular they said that the money bequeathed was insufficient to make provision for the maintenance of the churches. The trustees under the will expressed a willingness to prepare a plan to give effect to the wishes of the bishops, but the present marquis took the position that as the bishops could not accept the conditions the bequests lapsed. The court sustained the claim of the Marquis.

Discussing Preferential Resolutions.

In resuming the discussion of Denkin's preferential resolutions in the Australian federal house, Premier Reid, of New South Wales, said he foresaw the difficulty of extending their exchanges with the motherland, and at the same time protecting their own productions. British statesmen at one time taught that the welfare of the empire lay in the restriction of colonial trade. Yet in spite of the great liberty given the self-governing colonies, a feeling of loyalty, worth many great armies, had grown up. He did not wonder that Balfour and the labor members showed horror at the idea of taxing food. Referring to the increased cost of imperial defence, he said: "We are bound to look the responsibilities of the empire in the face, and must not forget that the only thing between us and the invasion is the British fleet. We should not, however, mix such a feeling with the desire of making a bargain. The question is, What are we prepared to give in exchange with the British market? If nothing we are face to face with a spectacle which does not command admiration." He moved to authorize the government to offer preference for preference, but thought this was impossible in the present state of politics. Great Britain favored Balfour's idea of conference. If the British favor prefernce his objection would go if preferential tariff were to be avoided in favor of making an Australian tariff, as nearly as possible a revenue tariff against the motherland."

The Minneapolis fire loss amounted to $2,700,000

CHRISTMAS---1904.

Ring out the old, ring in the new,
Ring happy bells across the snow:
The year is going, let him go,
Ring out the false; ring in the true.

Ring out the grief that saps the mind,
For those that here we see no more;
Ring out the feud of rich and poor,
Ring in redress to all mankind.

Ring out a slowly dying cause,
And ancient forms of party strife;
Ring in the nobler modes of life,
With sweeter manners, purer laws.

Ring out false pride in place and blood,
The civic slander and the spite;
Ring in the love of truth and right,
Ring in the common love of good.

Ring out old shapes of foul disease,
Ring out the narrowing lust of gold;
Ring out the thousand wars of old,
Ring in the thousand years of peace.

Ring in the valiant man and free,
The larger heart, the kindlier hand;
Ring out the darkness of the land,
Ring in the Christ that is to be.

When Alfred Tennyson penned his immortal poem "In Memoriam" just seventy-one years ago with true prophetic instinct he laid his finger on the sores of humanity and peering into the future he caught a glimpse of that roseate vision when sin and evil would afflict no more and the world would respond to the influence of "the Christ that is to be." Christmastide revives in every breast a yearning for the fulfilment of the Laureate's dream, and Christmastide furnishes the only "In Memorian" which could justify the expectation. It is still to the "Babe of Bethlehem" that a waiting world turns. It is still the star seen by wise men in the east that is the beacon light of civilization, it is still the message of "peace and good will" that falls like balm upon the listening ears of mankind, and now as seventy years ago it is still the hope of "the Christ that is to be" that must furnish the fitting climax to all our aspirations.

It may seem to us as it seemed to Tennyson when he wrote Locksley Hall sixty years after "the Wheels of God grind exceedingly slow," and like many a believer of latter days he became pessimistic, and the first fair vision of earlier days became dimmed, and in the sadness of his heart he sobbed out "how long Oh Lord, how long!" Still he held to the foundations of his belief and so must we. If not yet has the false given place to the true: if still we have to mourn for those who are "not lost but gone before;" if the feud of rich and poor still rages; if the ills of mankind still cry out for redress and if ancient forms of party strife still survive; if the nobler and simpler forms of life for which the wisest of men have always pined are still held in the womb of the future; if false pride still usurps a place it is not entitled to; if civic slander and spite though quelled are not extinct; if the common love of good is far from universal; if the love of gold is unabated; and if wars still devastate the world and decimate the race we have the star of Bethlehem and the message of peace, and for its fulfilment can each do something to hasten "the chariot wheels that so long delay" and to usher in "the Christ that is to be."

"Man's inhumanity for man Makes countless thousands mourn";

Without this hope we should all be pessimists. Let us therefore renew it this Christmastide with "larger heart and kindlier hand,"—remembering that still remaineth these three "faith, hope and love, but the greatest of these is love."

At the present time considerably under two hundred names have been entered on the city voters list which closes on Dec, 31st. The list when completed ought to number between three and four hundred names, and as most of these names now on the list were placed there by the clerk from the assessment book it is apparent that very little interest is being taken by many to have their names enrolled. All house-holders living in rented property and all holders of licenses are entitled to vote but they must apply to the city clerk for that purpose, and make a statutory declaration. Those who have not registered their names should make a point to do so at once. The election is on January 12th and there is sufficient time between the closing of the list and election day to work up a lively campaign which should be decided by the entire electorate.

THE executive of the Liberal Association at a meeting last night took up the question of a daily mail service over the Crows Nest Southern from Rexford. They will make strong representations to the government through W. A. Galliher, M P, to have this affected as soon as possible. This is one of the most important matters now confronting the city and district and the Liberal association should have the co-operation of all other local influential bodies in working toward this end. A mail service on this line means much te Fernie, in fact it is fully as important as the passenger service.

F. J. Mitchell has the required full dress suit that is used so often this time of the year in Fernie. Prices right.

sight. In the evening a program of music, reading etc. was rendered.

The new schoolhouse is completed and ready for occupation at the beginning of the new term.

The new Church of England building is in the course of construction and will be ready for occupancy in about six weeks.

Rev. W. Reid has recently been placed in this mission field by the Presbyterian church. He conducts service in the hotel hall every alternate Sunday at 8 p.m. On the alternate Sundays he is at Morrissey.

Wm. Rogers, boss carpenter for the coal company at Michel, left this week for Nanaimo, accompanied by a number of his men. They have received employment with the Western Fuel association.

MORRISSEY ITEMS.

On Sunday night the swing foot-bridge over the Elk at this place was blown down by the heavy wind. Fortunately no one was on the bridge at the time. D. MacKay, the government road foreman arrived on Tuesday to repair the bridge. The proposed wagon bridge at this place has not taken definite shape, nothing having yet been done beyond hauling some timbers and rocks. This bridge is greatly needed and the feeling is strong that it ought to be built without delay.

D. MacKay, government road foreman, has a gang of four men repairing the damage done to the Fernie-Morrissey road near the latter place by a land slide.

The Morrissey Lumber and Shingle Company is working steadily with a force of 30 men.

It is reported that the Great Northern will build a snow shed near Swinton to protect the road where the big slide occurred last winter.

Messrs. J. Illingsworth and Carlson were business visitors to Fernie on Tuesday,

The Great Northern will do considerable riprap work along the Elk River between Fernie and Morrissey to protect the railway line from the encroachments of the turbulent river during the high water season. Most of this work will be done near Foss and Macdonnell's camp.

G. G. S. Lindsey has remembered the office employees of the Coal Company very generously. Married men each got a good fat turkey and the single men each got a box of fragrant cigars as Christmas remembrances.

There will be special Xmas services a the Baptist church next Sunday. At the evening service special Xmas music will be rendered by the Sunday school. Sermons appropriate to the occasion will be delivered by Pastor C. R. G. Poole.

The well known druggist, A.W. Bleasdell has been appointed special agent for the sale of Dr. Agnew's Heart Cure, Catarrhal Powder, Ointment and Pills as well as South American Rheumatic Cure, Nervine, Kidney Cure and English Spavin Liniment. x52-301

The London Bioscope Company was greeted by a very small but very appreciative audience on Tuesday evening. The cinematograph views were extremely good and the subjects were new and well-chosen. The company on its return to Fernie in February deserves a full house.

On Sunday evening the electric lights were very dim, and at about 9 o'clock they went out and left the town in darkness. Kerosene lamps were hastily secured, and those with keen observation powers say that the bar-rooms of some of the hotels were among the first to show a glimmer through the upper glass.

VALUE OF A CHARACTER

FAR REACHING IMPORTANCE OF A CHRISTIAN LIFE.

PREACHER'S UNUSUAL THEME

Society At Large Influenced By the Consistency and Conscientiousness of the Individual On His Daily Walk and Conversation — Unconscious Influence Exerted By the Character and Life of Even the Lowliest of Men.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by William Baily, of Toronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 11.—In this sermon the preacher treats of an unusual theme and shows the value and far reaching importance to society at large of individual character and a consistent, conscientious, Christian life. The text is Acts v, 15, "That at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them."

The struggle of the chronic invalid after health is woefully, heartrendingly and overwhelmingly pathetic. To see a child born to a life of inevitable physical pain and torture; to see a young man in the grip of cancer or with bones and joints twisted out of shape by that fiend of inquisitarial torturers, inflammatory rheumatism; to see a young woman slowly fading away with consumption, going from place to place for a change of climate, trying first this doctor and that doctor, and then, finally, as a drowning man grasps at a straw, going to the "sure patent medicine cures" and trying the nostrums of quack doctors—ah, these, to me, are among the saddest of all the sad sights of human life.

Yet we may see these pathetic tragedies everywhere. "I cannot lie here and die without making an effort to be cured," said a once great lawyer to me in the city of Brooklyn. "There was a time when I had a large income and many friends. But now that I am old and without money and dying with a cancer nearly all my friends have left me alone. The doctors come and say, 'Judge, how do you feel to-day?' Then they propose to cut me with a knife, saying: 'The cancer is growing judge; the cancer is growing. It must be cut out.' Then when I say, 'Doctor, if I submit to the knife will I get well?' they simply shake their heads and answer, 'Judge, you must die.' It does not seem strange that when a man is fatally ill he will go anywhere and to anybody who promises to make him well."

Poor Robert Louis Stevenson! The doctors said he had to die. But Stevenson said, "If I can only go to a warmer climate I shall get well." So he went. He traveled south. He traveled west. He lived here and there. He was traveling, not for pleasure, but for health. He tried to flee his fatal illness, but sickness kept on his track. It crossed the seas with him. It dwelt with him in boat, in hut, in tent. At last, in faroff Samoa, it climbed the mountains with him, and among those tropical woods Death said, "Come, Robert, come." It was a hemorrhage, a little gasp, and poor Robert Louis Stevenson was no more.

The health, what a treasure it is! When it is once lost, how men strive to regain it! In every age the medical profession has been honored and its members held in high esteem. I suppose there was as much disease in Judaea in apostolic times as we have in our day; perhaps more, for diseases which our physicians can cure were then pronounced incurable. We can imagine what a sensation there would be in those times, in every home, where there was a lame child or a cripple or a father or mother suffering from disease, when it was told that Peter, who had cured the lame man of the temple gate, was curing all who came to him. No wonder that sick people sought him and that those who could not leave their beds begged their friends to carry them to him, for we read that "they were healed, every one."

These crowds of chronic sufferers instead of decreasing kept growing larger all the time. At last the numbers of the sick became so great that they could not get near to or have an audience with the famous apostle. They were too many. Then the friends of the sick said among themselves, "If sufferers are cured when Peter lays his hands on them perhaps they may be cured when his shadow passes over them." So the Bible says these believers "brought forth the sick into the streets and laid them on beds and couches that at least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them. There came also a multitude out of the cities round about into Jerusalem, bringing sick folks and them which were vexed with unclean spirits, and they were healed, every one."

The Bible does not distinctly state whether the sick were healed by Peter's shadow; but, reading between the lines of these two verses, it implies it. We know that under the power of the Holy Spirit it would be no greater miracle for Peter's shadow to heal the sick than it would for the handkerchiefs and the clothes which had once touched the living body of Paul to heal the sick. We read about this miracle in the nineteenth chapter of Acts and of the miracle of Peter's shadow in the fifth chapter of the same book. I think that cures must have been wrought in this way. Perhaps Peter himself was unconscious of it and did not know what his shadow was the means of doing until he was told of the cures afterward. As he passed through the streets touching this one and that and rejoicing that through his touch healing was given his influence reached farther than he knew. We know it is so with our lives. The Christian does not know how far his influence does reach. There are some whom he strives to help, but farther off there may be some with whom he never comes in contact who are affected by his very shadow, by the unconscious influence of his Christian life.

Examine first the direct results of a Christian's work. Every man, if he is a true man, has consecrated his mental and physical and spiritual energies to some great purpose. The Christian man, as a minister, is trying to build up a church; as a lawyer, to build up a courtroom or an office practice; as a physician, to have a large number of families as patients; as a merchant, to have a big store. That pulpit or office or store is to the man his chief thought. He works for it by day, he dreams of it by night. If he goes off on a summer vacation his mind and heart are still anchored to that workshop, even as a ship out in harbor tugs at its chains, though it is unable to break away from its moorings. But though a Christian man may work night and day for his professional or mercantile purpose in life do you for an instant suppose he is able to see the infinite spiritual results that may come from that life's work? Do you suppose that physician has any conception of the amount of misery and family trouble he saved when he persuaded that young wife and mother to go to a warmer climate and saved her physical life, predisposed to consumption—saved it for her husband and her children? Do you suppose that lawyer, when he drew up the will and last testament, had any conception of the amount of family trouble he averted by making that last testament so strong and true that it could not be broken in the courts? Do you suppose that a minister has any true conception of the vast amount of good a simple sermon may do when he arises to preach? Of course some people after a single sermon may praise it to his ears, as some parishioners are almost sure to do, but the greater work of a sermon, as with an author's pen, is never seen or heard by the preacher or writer. Like Peter with his shadow, most of the spiritual results of a sermon appear when a minister has gone back to his home, his bed or his study.

The direct results of a Christian's professional work can never be fully estimated by the agent of a gospel miracle. Let me illustrate my thought from my own experience. I remember some years ago when preaching in Pittsburg there came up one Sunday a terrific storm. The wind blew and shrieked through those city streets. The snowflakes were piling themselves up so that traffic was impeded. I came out from my study that afternoon and said to a member of my family: "It does seem absurd to preach to-night. No one will be there. If I do preach, I have half a mind to save that sermon I have been so busily writing for the past six days. It does seem a shame for me to practically throw it away." "No," answered my wife; "you had better preach it. You have always made it a rule to give your people the best you had. If any one comes out to-night he deserves your best. Besides that, God has always most blessed your work on stormy nights." I said: "Yes, that is true. I will give them the best I have. I will preach the sermon." That night the audience was very small. But while the few people were gathering I saw one woman enter the church and come down the aisle to the left of the pulpit. She seemed to be intensely interested in the sermon. When it was finished and the benediction pronounced she came to the pulpit and said, "I will send you a letter soon." Then she passed quietly out.

I went home feeling that the night was wasted. But some time afterward I heard of the result of that sermon. That woman that night was deciding whether or no she should desert her home. Her tempter even then was by her side, urging her to a life of sin. That one sermon on that stormy night, under the power of the Holy Spirit, turned the tide. She wrote to thank me for what I had said. That letter was one of the most impressive lessons I ever had, for it taught me that no Christian man's work is unimportant, even under the most unsatisfactory and discouraging conditions. Our unsuspected and unreported influences are so great for good that only God's recording angel has a ledger big enough to keep the records. Never, oh, minister, lawyer, physician, neglect your work because of its seeming insignificance. As with Peter's shadow, it may, all unknown to you, reach some whose sin sick soul may be healed by the Holy Spirit's power working through it.

The public man has his shadow. The private man has his unconscious influence also. The Christian lawyer, doctor, merchant, minister, have their direct influence when they are doing their public work. They also have their unconscious influence when they are walking through the streets, and sitting in the elevated trains, and eating in their home dining room or in public restaurants, when they think no stranger's eye is watching them and no stranger's ear is overhearing what they say. They have their unconscious influence when, unknown to them, people are weighing them in the balances as they are standing before a jury or prescribing in the sick room or preaching in the pulpit. They have their unconscious influence even when they are "out of harness" and think they can do as they please and that no one will ever know what they do.

Oh, the unconscious influences of every Christian's private life! Like the snowflakes, they bank themselves up into great drifts. Like the grains of sand, they lift themselves into the mighty mountains. Like the little drops of water, they slake the thirst of many valleys and meadow lands. These little influences of private life are despised by some so-called Christian workers, but in the end they result in mighty avalanches for good, in mighty tidal waves of blessings, in mighty east winds that dam back the Red Seas which, as impassable barriers, keep the children of Israel from fleeing the Pharaoh hosts and marching on to the brightness of God's promised land.

But I find the Christian's shadows or unconscious influences not only in a man's own gospel seed planting, but also in the Christian example he sets for those who are trying to raise the same kind of gospel harvest. I find a minister's influence, like Peter's shadow, within the four walls of his church. I also find a minister's unconscious influence over ministers who are working in adjacent churches. I not only find a physician's unconscious influence over his patients, but also a doctor's influence over doctors, and a lawyer's over lawyers, and a mother's over mothers, as well as her unconscious influence over her children. I find here that a public school teacher has her unconscious influence over her fellow teachers as well as over the scholars in her own class room.

A Christian man always, to more or less extent, makes or mars the success of men of his own ilk. When I wander among the hallways of history I do not find there the picture of a great soldier which differs in every way from all other soldiers of his day and generation. I do not find in a country's history a great lawyer or poet as a mountain peak lifting itself solitary and alone from the centre of a vast level prairie. But, like the stars in the heavens, I find that one great lawyer is always in juxtaposition with other great lawyers. One great physician means other great physicians. Great poets, authors, statesmen, reformers, scientists, move through the firmament of the historical heaven in galaxies, in constellations, like the stars in clusters. When I mention the names of scientists I find that there is a scientific Pleiades, with a Darwin, a Tyndall, a Huxley and a Herbert Spencer, all existing at the same time. When I mention the name of William Shakespeare I find that a Bacon, a Raleigh, a Ben Jonson, a Sydney, a Spenser, a Beaumont, a Fletcher, a Longueville, all belong to the Elizabethan era. When I mention the greatest warrior of the ages, Napoleon, I find that the French Emperor was a maker of great marshals as well as great armies. I find flanking the "Little Corporal" a Ney, a Bertrand, a McDonald, a Lannes, a Marmont. Napoleon Bonaparte also was the mighty obstacle which developed a Wellington and a Blucher. Great soldiers have an unconscious influence over men of their ilk as well as over those who have not brains of the same calibre as themselves.

The unconscious influence of a Christian man over the people of his day and generation is very great, no matter how humble the position he occupies. But if the unconscious influence of a living man upon his contemporaries is great infinitely greater must that influence be upon thousands and tens of thousands of men and women and children after he is dead. How multiplied must be the echoing sounds of his voice long after the speaker's lips themselves have been sealed in the unbroken silence of the tomb!

There is a beautiful Indian legend about the "Land of the Shadows," which relates how the living are influencing those who struggle and fight on this side of the beautiful "river of death." A young warrior was about to be married, but just before the wedding his bride to be passed away. Her lover was almost insane with grief. He would not be and could not be comforted. As he was grieving his life slowly away he heard by the camp-fires of his tribe that there was a path leading to the south which if followed would bring a traveler to the land of spirits. No sooner did the young chief hear this than he decided to go and seek his lost love. He journeyed on and on until he left the snow covered mountains of the far north. He journeyed on and on until all the trees of the forests were full of singing birds and all the fields were fragrant with the incense swinging flowers.

In that southland instead of the elk and the moose and the grizzly bear the fawns came out of the woods to lick his hand. He journeyed on and on, until he came to a great gulf of still water. There he found a shining white canoe, into which he stepped and began to paddle out into the deep. No sooner did his canoe leave the shore than another white canoe just like his own came alongside, in which was she whom he loved. They paddled on and on toward a beautiful island, where there was a palace in which dwelt his departed bride. As he came toward the island and was about to land an angel stepped forth and said: "Nay, nay! Thou canst not come as yet. She whom thou lovest will here wait for thee. Go back to the land from whence thou camest. There thou must live and rule over thy people for many years. Live as she would have thee live; then, when thy work is done, and well done, thou mayest return to thy loved one, who here will wait for thee." As in the Indian legend, so it must be with us. If we are bereaved, as was the Indian warrior, let us live as our departed ones would have us live. If we are taken away, as was the Indian maiden to the "Land of the Shadows," then those whom we have left behind will be living out the teachings and the examples of our earthly lives. A redeemed immortal's earthly unconscious influence never dies. May Christ help us all to do the work he has given us.

An Episcopal Optimist.

The Bishop of London is an optimist who always has a good word to say for everybody, even if the person under discussion may seem to have no admirable qualities. One day, when he had been standing up for a particularly disreputable specimen of humanity, a friend said to him:

"How is it that you always can think of something pleasant to say about everybody under the sun?"

The bishop laughed.

"Well, you see," he said, "there is so much good in the worst of us and so much bad in the best of us it does not become any of us to speak ill of the rest of us."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON XIII, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, DEC. 25.

Text of the Lesson, Isa. ix, 1-7—Memory Verses, 6-7—Golden Text, Isa. ix, 6—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1904, by American Press Association.]

The memory verses give us the heart of the lesson and of the whole Bible story. Not only at Christmas, but at all times, it is a most appropriate study, for we cannot understand our Bibles unless we keep before us the plan and purpose of God as revealed therein. The seed of the woman of Gen. iii, 15, is the Son of Abraham, the Son of David of Matt. i, 1; the Son of Mary of Luke i, 30-33, who is to have the throne of His father, David, and reign over the house of Jacob forever and of whose kingdom there is to be no end. He is the lion of Judah and the root of David of Rev. v, 5; the root and offspring of David and the bright and morning star of Rev. xxii, 16; the King of kings and Lord of lords of Rev. xvii, 14; xix, 16. He is the Creator and possessor and controller of all things, the Redeemer of Israel, the only Saviour of sinners, the Judge of all mankind.

At the so called Christmas time the children and all who attend the Sunday school are apt to hear a good deal about the Babe in Bethlehem, but they are not apt to hear that the child Jesus was born and was crucified as the King of the Jews (Matt. ii, 2; xxvii, 37). Even though our lesson today is from the prophecy of Isaiah, whose message was primarily to Judah and Jerusalem (chapters i, 1; ii, 1), it is probable that very little may be said about Judah or Jerusalem, yet the throne of David at Jerusalem is the central place in the lesson.

Verses 1 and 2 take us on to their fulfillment, or partial fulfillment, recorded in Matt. iv, 14, 16, and as to a practical application of them to our own daily life I am reminded of a request that came to me from a missionary in Africa asking for prayer that while learning the language of the people they (walking in darkness) might see in him a great light, even Christ made manifest in him. Would it not be a good prayer for each of us that Christ might so live in us that all about us who are still in darkness might see the light of His life in us and be drawn to Him.

Verses 3 to 5 tell of the joy of the people when their Great Deliverer shall have broken the yoke of every oppressor. The first part of verse 3 should be, "Thou hast multiplied the nation, and Thou hast increased the joy." See revised version. It will be by an overthrow of their enemies, for it will be the day of vengeance upon their enemies, but of redemption for Israel (Isa. xxxiv, 8; xxxv, 4; lxiii, 4). There is no abiding joy to a nation or individual apart from that which only He can give. The Spirit loves to tell of Israel's future glory: "The ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads. They shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away" (Isa. xxxv, 10; li, 11). "The Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended" (Isa. lx, 19, 20).

"Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given," had its fulfillment, or at least the first clause had, when the angel said to the shepherds on Bethlehem's plains, "Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord" (Luke ii, 11). Let us not fail to notice the words "unto you" or in our lesson "unto us." It is Israel first and then all people. The Sixty-seventh Psalm is almost without significance unless the oft repeated "us" of verses 1 and 7 is seen to refer to Israel.

"The government shall be upon His shoulder," "Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end upon the throne of David," etc. This must be taken as literally as "Unto us a child is born." There is no other honest way to treat it. All other interpretations are perversions and wrongs done to the word of God, from all which the Lord deliver us! Let the Lord's own message to David and the message of Gabriel to Mary stand in all their sublime simplicity and grandeur (II Sam. vii, 12-16; Luke i, 30-33), and do not hesitate to believe that it shall be just as God says. Rejoice to say, "I believe God that it shall be even as it was told me" (Acts xxvii, 25).

"A king shall reign in righteousness, * * * and the work of righteousness shall be peace and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance forever" (Isa. xxxii, 1, 17). He shall be seen to be "wonderful in counsel and excellent in working," "Great in counsel and mighty in work" (Isa. xxviii, 29; Jer xxxii, 19). He is the mighty God and the everlasting Father, and He is saying to us even now, "Call unto Me, and I will answer thee and shew thee great and mighty things which thou knowest not" (Jer. xxxiii, 3), and it becomes us to say, "Ah, Lord God, behold Thou hast made the heaven and the earth by Thy great power and stretched out arm."

He is the Prince of Peace, the God of Peace, the Peace of God. Happy those who can truly say, "He is our peace," "He is my peace" (Eph. ii, 14), and happier still all who have learned to "let the peace of God rule in their hearts" (Col. iii, 15). Whether men may accept God's purpose for Israel or not, the zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform it (verse 7). Let us dwell between His shoulders (Deut. xxxiii, 12) and allow Him to carry us and all our burdens, too, sure that when He gets the lost sheep on His shoulders He will not fail to bring it home with rejoicing (Luke xv, 5, 6) and tell the children that He carries the lambs in His bosom (Isa. xl, 11) and that He is just the same as when on earth He took little children up in His arms and blessed them.

THE COAL MAN.

The summer swiftly slipped away,
And autumn is on deck;
That's why the coal man's feeling gay
And reaching for our neck.

When it was ninety in the shade
And higher still at night,
We'd meet the coal man on parade
And hardly be polite.

Of course we couldn't make a fuss
Or street disorder plan,
But when he'd try to speak to us
We'd say, "Who is the man?"

But now the tables have been turned,
For when we pass him by
And try our best to be concerned
We get the glassy eye.

When summer rules the pleasant land
The coal man makes no hit,
But, oh, when winter is at hand
He's surely all of "It!"

For then he holds the cards to win
As much as he can count;
For six months we have saving been
To swell his bank account.

Money In Chickens.

Did you ever know a man who did not think he could make a fortune raising chickens except the one who had tried it?

Any man with pencil and paper and a slight knowledge of arithmetic can sit down and figure himself on Easy street in a few minutes with a start of a dozen hens and a red headed rooster.

A man whose only knowledge of the business is a hazy idea that fried chicken does not grow on bushes has it firmly fixed in his mind that all he has to do is to rent a half acre of ground, build a few primitive henhouses and sit down and wait for people to bring money to him.

Half of the men you meet in a busy city have a disappointed look on their faces because they have tried the chicken business and fell down, but that does not for a moment discourage the man who has never gone hard against the game.

Rapid Work.

I often wonder as I sit
And listen to their chatter
How women ever manage it,
Amid the clang and clatter,
To ever know a word that's passed,
For each one talks so hard and fast.

One woman says she heard a song
That simply is divine;
Another nods and comes along
With some new place to dine,
While two or three just talk away
As if it were their busy day.

They talk of fashions, clubs and plays,
Their children and their husbands, too,
And brag about the little ways
They have of getting something new.
Each woman chatters at her will
And by no chance is ever still.

It doesn't seem that one can know
A word another woman said,
Because such streams of language flow
From each enthusiastic head.
To hear them makes one stand aghast.
How do they learn to talk so fast?

A Modest Fee.

"He sued the company for $10,000 and got a cent damages."

"That was hardly worth while. I suppose the lawyer took all of it for his pay."

Her Ideal.

"Is Gertrude going to marry Arthur?"

"Yes, she expects to be wedded to her Art."

Should Fill the Bill.

"His artistic ideals are high."

"Can't he get a job painting church steeples?"

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

It is all of the difference in the world whether a merchant or a cattle thief takes stock.

Few men or women have their consciences educated up to a point where they will not ride on a scalper's ticket.

A man can do almost everything but think by machine, but he is generally able to find some politician to do his thinking for him.

One thing the man with the hoe has that some people who pity him are shy on, and that is good health.

It takes a lot of culture in savagery to make one really enjoy a football game.

A man may successfully dodge automobiles and freight trains and still be overtaken by the grip germ.

Now poor man has to go in training for an all winter catch-as-catch-can bout with the furnace.

The man who is out of debt does not begin to have as much attention paid to him as the fellow who owes bills right and left.

FAMOUS PATHOLOGIST SAYS

The Soul, Not the Brain, Is the Thinking Principle.

The soul is the thinking principle, and at death it moves out of the corporate body, and then the finest brain ceases to think, because it never was the organ of thought. I have willed my brain to Dr. Spitzka when I get through with it. I expect to use it about ten years longer. Dr. Spitzka said he would like to have it as soon as possible, but that he did not want it until I have no further use for it.

The brain is a heat producer. The thermometer shows that it is hotter than the blood; hence the largest brains of men are found in cold climates, where more heat is required to sustain life. The brain also secretes a cerebro spinal fluid which gives life to the body, passing through every nerve in the body, even into the skin.

Doctors have been teaching that the brain is the seat of the mind because they were taught that way. It is not true.—Dr Joseph Simms.

Irish Challenge to a Duel.

A scene reminiscent of the duelling days of Charles O'Malley took place at the Trim Quarter Session in Co. Meath recently.

Two well-known horse-breeders, named Dyas and Parr, were engaged in litigation, and some statements made by Mr. Parr were flatly contradicted by Mr. Dyas.

"I have sworn to the facts," said Mr. Parr. "I'll shoot you!" responded Mr. Dyas, excitedly.

"What is that you said, sir?" asked Judge Curran, sharply.

"He threatened to shoot him," said a solicitor.

"Take him into custody at once," replied the judge.

Mr. Dyas was arrested and placed in the dock. "Now you must apologize," said the judge. "If you don't I will deal severely with you."

"I don't care!" shouted Mr. Dyas. "I am prepared to meet him in France in the morning where we can fight. I can meet him at thirty paces. France is a country with better laws."

The judge upon this promptly adjourned the court, and said if Mr. Dyas in the meantime could not find two solvent bails of £50 each to keep the peace he would sentence him to six months' imprisonment.

Tasmania's New Governor.

Tasmania is fortunate in its new Governor, Sir Gerald Strickland, says The Sketch, for he has shown that he is admirably suited for such a position. Sir Gerald is a Maltese Count as well as an English gentleman. He comes from one of the oldest of our Roman Catholic families, and he very early joined that branch of the diplomatic service which concerns itself with Greater Britain. His first apprenticeship as a public servant took place in Malta, where he was first Assistant Secretary, and then Chief Secretary, and as Chairman of the Malta Cholera Committee he did yeoman service for both Maltese and British. Lady Adeline Strickland is the eldest of Lord De La Warr's sisters. She is a keen sportswoman and made herself very much liked in the West Indies, where her husband lately completed his term of two years' Governorship of the Leeward Islands. Sir Gerald and Lady Adeline have a beautiful place in Westmoreland.

Lord Durham on Sir W. Harcourt.

The Earl of Durham, president of the Newcastle Liberal Club, told a story at the annual luncheon about the late Sir William Harcourt. He remembered that Sir William was his guest at Lambton on the occasion of his visit to Newcastle, as their president. He wrote to Sir William, saying that, although they differed in politics, he could see no reason why he should not pay him a visit at Lambton Castle. Sir William wrote back: "I shall be very pleased to come, but I must make one stipulation if I do come—that you do not send me in your carriage to Newcastle." When his guest arrived, he (Lord Durham) asked him why he made this stipulation. Sir William replied. "Well, there it is. You and I are on different sides in politics now, and I desire to give no impression whatever that you are helping me or trying to further my views in Newcastle. I will not be seen seated behind your livery going into Newcastle." (Laughter.)

Golf Links in the Desert.

Golf links are to be found in many out of the way corners of the globe. At Bagdad there has been a golf club for nearly ten years. The eighteen hole course, which is laid out in the desert three miles from the city, is said to be of "a decidedly sporting character," which means, according to some, that one loses an immoderate number of balls there. Golf may be played at Zanzibar, Bein ("the city of blood," it will be remembered), Crete, Bangkok, Honolulu, Perak and also at Weihaiwei.

The Canny Scot.

The commercial was calling on the grocer, who was of the canny kind, and, it being about the New Year, he presented a box of cigars. "Na, na," protested the other, "I never tak' presents." "But it's a New Year's gift, you know; and if you don't care to take it for nothing give me something in exchange—a nominal sum, say a shilling." The Scot inspected the cigars, and then turned again to the traveler. "Vera weel," he said, producing a couple of shillings, "I'll tak' twa."—Ally Sloper's Half-Holiday.

WESTERN CANADIAN EDITORS

A Series of Articles Describing their Lives, their Aims and Their Influence.

No. 14.

C. D. McPHERSON,

C. D. McPHERSON,
Editor and Proprietor of the Graphic, Portage La Prairie.

Of all the newspaper men of the Canadian west, few have made a more rapid and conspicuous success than Mr. C. D. McPherson, editor, publisher and proprietor of the two leading publications of Central Manitoba, the Portage Daily Graphic and the Weekly Manitoba Liberal. Mr. McPherson is, like many another western editor, a young man. It is only ten years ago that he went, as a boy, to "devil" and learn the case at the Forest Free Press, pulished at his birthplace, in Lambton county, Ontario. Less than eight years ago he came west, without capital and with hardly any experience, started in, a boy of eighteen, to stick type for one of the papers he now owns. In that interval of eight years Mr. McPherson has proved himself a newspaper worker and a business man of ability and industry. From setting type he was promoted to foreman, manager and finally proprietor. All this took place in less than five years. Could there be any more striking example of the opportunities offered in Western Canada to the newspaper worker with the necessary equipment? Nor was this the full measure of Mr. McPherson's success. No sooner had he consolidated and strengthened his new purchase than he set to work to absorb his most dangerous competitor. And in two years he had accomplished this also. To-day he owns a daily and weekly paper in the town of third importance in Manitoba, and in addition to his labors as editor and manager, continues to find time to look after several important subsidiary enterprises in which he is interested.

The man who can accomplish so much at such an early age, even allowing that circumstances have in some sort favored him, is no common man. The successful maintenance of the position he has acquired in newspaperdom demands also qualities, both mental and businesslike, not found everywhere. These qualities Mr. McPherson possesses, but they are not always apparent on careless observation. Of medium height, slight figure, and almost boyish carriage, he would not at first sight impress one for all that he is. His quiet humor, frankness and modesty are the qualities that most impress a casual acquaintance. These in no wise diminish on fuller knowledge, but to those who know him intimately these more noticeable qualities are subordinate to his unflagging industry and his ever-watchful shrewdness. He possesses a skill in connecting and linking up into a co-ordinate case facts apparently unrelated, and a faculty of presenting intricate questions to his readers with clearness and perspicuity. He tests all public issues with the touchstone of a few fundamental truths, and his conclusions are arrived at by processes that anyone capable of reading plain type can follow. Mr. McPherson is no casuist, no hairsplitter, no finespun theorist, but his lucid, practical, thoughtful talks on public matters are of the kind that plain men appreciate and model their judgments upon.

Among the men who know him, Mr. McPherson's persistence and activity have passed into proverbs. He talks little, but his performances are in inverse ratio to his loquacity. His pertinacity and ability to ferret out the true inwardness of things have enabled him to secure many "scoops" on matters of provincial and general interest, even against the competition of the better equipped city press. As a writer he has perhaps no such claims to brilliancy as are possessed by some others among Western journalists, but his work, whether editorial or reportorial, has always been marked, if not by distinction, by clearness and vigor.

The energy that Mr. McPherson puts into newsgathering he likewise puts into the business end of his papers. He hustles as much for advertisng as he does for copy, and with equal succcess. The columns of his papers contain the business announcements of almost every man doing business in Portage, and many from adjacent points. The advertisements are well displayed, the practical knowledge Mr. McPherson has of all the mechanical departments of newspaper work making him critical on that score.

As before stated, Mr. McPherson is a native of Forest, Ontario, where he received his education. His entry into the printing business was under the auspices of H. J. Pettypiece, on the Forest Free Press. In the fall of 1896 the proprietor of the Portage daily came west, and engaged on the Semi-Weekly Liberal. Later he went to Neepawa on the Press, edited by Mr. A. Dunlop, and in 1898 returned to Portage as foreman. The Liberal was then owned by a company, with D. J. G. Rutherford, M. P., as president, and was conducted by Mr. James Hooper, the present King's printer for Manitoba. The following year Mr. Hooper was appointed manager of the Winnipeg Telegram, and Mr. McPherson succeeded him as editor and manager. After the general elections of 1900, Dr. Rutherford was appointed chief veterinary inspector, and removed to Ottawa, and Mr. McPherson purchased the Semi-Weekly Liberal and conducted it till the spring of 1903, when he purchased the Daily and Weekly Graphic, and merged the two concerns, conducting the Daily Graphic and the Weekly Manitoba Liberal. At the time of the purchase he had as partner Mr. J. J. McCullough, but last June he bought out Mr. McCollough's interest, and is now sole proprietor.

In addition to these properties, Mr. McPherson is largely interested in real estate, having purchased largely in the Saskatoon, Last Mountain and Loon Creek districts.

Mr. McPherson is the Portage and general correspondent of the Manitoba Free Press, and was one of the few newspaper men who accompanied the Duke of York on his shooting trip to Lake Manitoba. Mr. McPherson is unmarried—a fact which more than one very handsome lady deeply regrets. He is actively interested in politics, being secretary-treasurer of the Portage and Lakeside Liberal Associations, and a member of the excursion committee of the Western Canada Press Association.

Pope So Dominates King Edward in Audience with Connaught.

A cable from Rome says: The audience which the Duke of Conaught had with the Pope was most cordial. The Pontiff, who spoke in Italian, said he was exceedingly gratified at the duke of Connaught's visit, and was most pleased to see him, and added that it was a pity he stopped such a short time in Rome. The Pope also said he had great esteem and veneration for King Edward, "who is not only King of England, but of the whole world, as the sun never sets on his dominions."

Pope Pius said he knew Great Britain thoroughly enjoyed liberty, and well understood its meaning. The missionaries coming to Rome from all parts of the British empire spoke of the great degree of liberty enjoyed in the colonies. The duke was received at the Vatican with great ceremony. The audience lasted ten minutes. He returned directly to the quirinal from the Vatican.

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

CURES SUCH ILLS PERMANENTLY BY STRENGTHENING THE NERVES AND MUSCLES.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food stands high in the women's favor because it is especially successful in overcoming ills peculiar to their sex.

When, on account of a run-down condition of the system, the muscles and nerves fail to control the action of the feminine organism there is bound to come much suffering

Headaches, pains in the back and limbs, indigestion, feelings of discouragement and despondency, weakness and irregularity rob life of the joys which would otherwise be possible.

Stimulating medicines cannot possibly be of more than slight temporary relief. To be of lasting benefit the nerves and muscles must be fully restored by such treatment as is afforded by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Not only is the action and vigor of the bodily organs fully restored, but new, firm flesh is added, the form is rounded out, the weight is increased, and pallor gives way to that healthful glow of complexion which tells of the full enjoyment of health

Mrs. George Fuller, Lakeland, Man., writes:

"I am very glad to be able to state that I have received great benefit from the use of Dr Chase's Nerve Food. It has cured me of nervous headache from which I used to be a great sufferer, and I am no longer troubled with twitching of the nerves in the arms and legs that I used to have as soon as I went to bed. I am grateful for this cure and shall always recommend Dr Chase's Nerve Food to anyone suffering as I have."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author are on every box.

"Pinto" Shell Cordovan

Used in H.B.K. Mitts, Gloves and Moccasins—tough as whalebone, flexible, soft, pliable, scorch-proof, wind-proof, boil-proof, crack-proof, tear-proof, rip-proof, cold-proof, almost wear-proof—certainly the greatest leather ever used in mitts and gloves.

Like buckskin it is tanned without oil, unlike buckskin it is not porous, it is wind-proof—will outwear three buckskins.

"Pinto" Mitts and Gloves never crack or harden, never get sodden, are always warm, pliable, soft and comfortable.

The Best Bread and Pastry making is Impossible Otherwise.

Are you following the recipes?

Are you making bread, cakes, pies, pastry, according to "Royal Household" recipes?

If not, you cannot be sure of good results.

"Why not?" you may reasonably ask.

"Are not my own recipes, which do good baking, good enough?

"Why should I adopt new recipes?"

Simply because "Royal Household" is a new flour requiring new treatment.

This Flour is Different from Other Flours

It is different from other flour.

It is better than any flour you have ever used.

It is the only flour that is equally good for bread and pastry.

It makes the best of both.

Being different, it must be differently mixed, kneeded and baked.

Much Quicker and Easier Baking

By following our recipes you can bake easier, quicker, better than ever before.

All your own skill and knowledge of good baking will be made doubly effective, and as a good housewife you will quickly see why these recipes are so good.

The words of a lady of St. John, N.B., whose letter we have just opened: "bread made with it is lighter, flakier, better than any I have ever seen" are words echoed by thousands of the best judges of good cooking throughout Canada who are writing us constantly to say that they have found the flour just as represented, and the recipes the best they have ever tried.

Grocers tell us that the homes where the flour and the recipes are both used are the homes where the greatest success is attained in baking.

We wish everyone who uses "Royal Household" flour to have these recipes.

So send for them.

Send now, and we will not only send you the recipes, but place you on our literature list, and mail you whatever we issue for users of flour.

No woman who values the reputation of her baking—the success of her bread, cakes, pies and pastry—the health of her family, (depending as it does on good cooking) will use anything except "Royal Household" flour and in the "Royal Household" way.

The best baking requires the best flour and the best recipes.

We have both.

We send the recipes free.

Write for the recipes to-day.

Every really good grocer has the flour.

Rocks vs. Sand.

Edyth—I am surprised to hear of your engagement to old Bullvon. Was he the only man with sand enough to propose?

Mayme—Oh, no; but he was the only one with rocks enough to interest me.

PREVENT DISORDER. — At the first symptoms of internal disorder, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills should be resorted to immediately. Two or three of these salutary pellets, taken before going to bed, followed by doses of one or two pills for two or three nights in succession, will serve as a preventive of attacks of dyspepsia and all the discomforts which follow in the train of that fell disorder. The means is simple when the way is known.

Nothing Serious.

"I saw Enpeck going into a doctor's office this morning," said Stringer. "He had an awful cut on his head that his wife was responsible for."

"You don't say," exclaimed Nibbles. "What did she hit him with?"

"Oh, she didn't hit him at all," explained Stringer. "It was merely a hair-cut she had given him as a matter of economy."

DEVELOPMENT.

At Coal Creek No. 9 mine was opened during the year and is now yielding about 5,000 tons per month. This mine promises te be one of the best producers at Coal Creek. No. 5 mine at Coal Creek was mostly developed during the year and is now producing about 6,000 tons per month. At Michel, No. 6 mine was opened this year and is giving very satisfactory results. At Carbonado no additional openings were made this year.

At Michel a new picking table and screening plant has been installed, increasing the shipping facilities by at least 50 per cent.

FIRE PROTECTION.

Over $10,000,00 was expended during the year in improving its fire protection system. At Michel was installed a new steam fire engine of the Silsby Rotary pattern capable of throwing four 2½ inch streams of water simultaneously over the highest building in the town. At all the collieries hose and hydrants sufficient to protect all exposed places have been furnished. Roof sprinklers have been provided on the tipples and on the general office building, Fernie, so that in case of fire the building may be deluged with water by turning on a tap.

SHIPPING FACILITIES.

The Crows Nest Southern railway has been extended from Morrissey to Fernie during the past summer and traffic over the new road is now open. This, and the completion of the Boundary Falls cut-off on the Great Northern, offers increased shipping facilities to the coal company and opens up the large Montana markets for our coke and coal. For the want of markets, and often for the lack of cars, the collieries of the C. N. P. Coal company were seldom run at full force during the year. But these difficulties are seemingly removed, and the year 1905 will doubtless see a much heavier output at all the collieries.

ADDITIONS TO PLANTS.

At Coal Creek a stone lamp house and an addition to the wash house have been built. Five new Mumford boilers, built at Amherst, N. S., have been installed. The new haulage plant for No. 2 mine has been completed and is giving satisfactory results, enabling the devolopment of parts of the mine not hitherto available.

At Michel a new fan was put in at No. 8 mine, increasing the current to 250,000 cubic feet per minute. Twenty-five new cottages were built at that place and a large wash house is now under construction. The new hotel at Michel was built by the Coal company this year at a cost of $20,000. It is an up-to-date structure with all modern conveniences.

$250,000 SPENT.

The year has been one of steady and satisfactory progress rather than of large expenditure on capital account as in the earlier stages of the Company's history. However the charges to actual improvement work were considerably more than a quarter of a million dollars, and this amount while small as compared with former years, is probably greater than the expenditure on like work by any other company in British Columbia. The mines have now reached the stage where they can meet in addition to all the demands of the B. C. markets any demands that may be made from outside sources both in the matter of production of coal and manufacture of coke.

THE C. N. P. ELECTRIC LIGHT AND POWER COMPANY.

This Company has electric light and water plants at Fernie, Micnel and Carbonado. The plant at Michel has been put in operation this year and is working satisfactorily. The power plant at Coal Creek furnishes light to the colliery and the city of Fernie.

THE FERNIE CARTAGE COMPANY

Have Secured sole Agency for Galt Coal in East Kootenay, also Local Agency of Bain Wagon Co.

The Fernie Cartage Co. has received the sole agency for the Lethbridge coal and they are now prepared to put it on the Fernie market at $6 per ton, delivered. Owen Ross of the Fernie Cartage Company was down to Lethbridge last week and completed arrangements by which his Company take over the agency. Mr. Tierney of Nelson who had the agency for the province has relinquished East Kootenay and The Fernie Cartage Company deals direct with the Galt Mining Co.

In conversation with Mr. Ross we learned some of the plans of his energetic company. "Yes we are selling the Galt coal for $6 per ton" said Mr. Ross, "and we expect to work up a large trade Owing to the close price no order will be taken unless accompanied by the cash. We are commencing this week the erection of a large coal house, 20x40, on a piece of ground near the C. P. R. coaling bunks, which we have leased from the railway company. This will hold several carloads and will also contain a compartment for Banff anthracite coal, for which we expect to get the agency. Our first Galt coal has already arrived."

BAIN WAGON COMPANY.

The Fernie Cartage Co. has also received the agency for the Bain wagon company, one of the best known and most reputable manufacturers of vehicles in America. They expect a carload of these goods in the city in a few days, and a warehouse 18x40 has been erected near their feed storehouse on Victoria ave. The car will contain 22 wagons, three freight lorries and four dump carts. Parties in need of any kind of rigs will do well to call around at their office opposite the C. P. R. freight shed.

HAVE FOUND A GOOD ROUTE.

J. G. Cummings Will Report Favorably on a Route into the Flathead From Fernie.

J. G. Cummings Provincial Land Surveyor, has completed his preliminary survey of the Fernie road into the Flathead Valley. Mr. Cummings is preparing a minute report of his investigations which in due time will be laid before the Board of Trade.

Mr. Cummings naturally wishes to withhold the particulars of his investigation until his report has been made but in a conversation with that gentleman the following general facts were gleaned. The party after several attempts gave up the proposed route via Martin Creek to Michel south fork and to McEvoy Creek. This route though previously recommended by Mr. Clements presented serious difficulties which portended a heavy cost. Finally they looked for an entirely new route and in Mr. Cummings opinion they were most successful. They followed Coal Creek's south fork to its head waters and after crossing the divide they found the headwaters of the McEvoy Creek within the distance of a mile. This they followed to its juncture with the Flathead, through a comparatively level valley where road construction will prove to be quite inexpensive. The totel distance from Fernie to the Flathead River by this route will be about 22 miles, and the total cost approximately will be about $15,000.

The survey party was out nineteen days. They found the snow about four feet deep, too deep for the pack horses, and the men had to pack the supplies to the last camp themselves.

C. M. Henretta and wife arrived in the city this morning from Banff.

Miss Muriel R. Whimster is home from Nelson spending her vacation.

Government Agent Armstrong and Provincial Assessor Nelson are holding a court of revision at the court house today.

The new bowling alley and shooting gallery in the basement of Mr. Beck's block will be open for business for the first time tomorrow evening. Mr. Wm. Bauldrey will have charge.

BUILDINGS ERECTED IN 1904.

ESTIMATED COST TOTALS OVER $200,000.

Larger Building Operations Than of Any Previous Year.—Big Fire Responsible For 80 Per Cent —Better Class Of Buildings.

The building operations in Fernie in 1904 have been heavier than in any previous year of its history. The fire on April 29th which wiped out the business centre of the town has been responsible for at least 80 per cent. of the new structures. Many more private residences were planned to be built this year but owing to the unexpected disaster and the consequent heavy drain in rebuilding the business blocks many of these plans were laid over for next year. The following is an approximate estimate of the cost of the new buildings erected inside the city limits during the year 1904.

A STRIKE THREATENED.

Coleman Miners Demand Recognition of Union and Establishment of Wage Schedule.

F. H. Sherman, President of the District Union went down to Coleman on Wednesday on account of threatened labor troubles at that camp. Mr. Sherman before leaving Fernie explained the situation up to that time.

At the conclusion of the trouble at Coleman in January last a promise was made by General Manager Reynolds that as soon as the tipple was completed he would be prepared to put the miners on contract under schedules similar to those in operation at the other camps along the Crow. The Coleman Union recently presented a schedule of wages and a working agreement but the management refused to recognize the U. M. W. of A. in anyway and would not enter into any contract with them. The manager declared he would pay what wages and impose what labor conditions he chose. A few days ago twelve of the oldest employees of the International Company were discharged without any reason and other men taken on. This is taken as a challenge to the U. M. W. of A., and the Coleman miners, should they decide to strike, will be well supported financially. The union is at all times desirious of arbitrating the matters in dispute. They seek to establish nothing but what the miners elsewhere enjoy and they will fight if necessary to obtain those terms. Mr. Sherman stated that he was going to Coleman to make another attempt to settle the dispute amicably.

Word was received from Coleman yesterday that the Union had failed again in its demand for recognition and that a strike was very imminent.

ROGERS---PRATER.

On Monday evening at seven o'clock a quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. Frederick Dunné, Jaffray street, when his step-daughter, Miss Bessie Prater was united in marriage to Mr. James E. Rogers, the popular and successful tobacconist and fruiter in the FREE PRESS block. Rev. A. Dunn, B. D., tied the knot in the presence of a few intimate friends. Miss Ethel Prater, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and Mr. Wm. Gott, groomsman. Mr. and Mrs Rogers have taken up house-keeping in Mr. Hunter's cottage on Pellatt Ave. The FREE PRESS wishes them prosperity and happiness.

RAILWAY INTO FORDING VALLEY.

The Fording Valley Railway Company Will Apply for Provincial Charter at Next Session.

An application will be made to the B. C. Legislature at its next session to incorporate the Fording Valley Railway Company. This company asks for a charter empowering it to build and operate a standard guage railway iuto the Fording River Valley, beginning at the B. C. Southern Railway near where the Michel creek empties into the Elk. The railway thence runs up Elk river to its junction with Fording river, thence up Fording river to Henretta creek and up Henretta creek to the Alberta boundary. This railroad will open up the coal properties of the Imperial Coal company in the Fording valley and it will also tap the coal areas of the C. P. R. to the west and north of the Imperial Coal company's properties.

TOM MARKS AND HIS COMPANY.

Tom Marks is not unknown in Fernie though this is his first trip west. The majority of the people of Fernie have run across Tom Marks somewhere in the east and all of these have a good word to say of him and his company. The press of the west where the company has already appeared speak very highly of the company.

"Tom Marks, he of the big diamonds and silk hat, will close his engagement Saturday night. The week's work of the company has been one of the features of the Calgary amusement season. The company with its entertaining specialities and nightly change of bill, has afforded the best programme put on since the Lyric was opened.

Tom Marks is one of the successful dramatic promoters Canada has given to the stage. From the Atlantic to the Pacific he is known in big and little towns. His company is more like a big family. They have a fine repertoire and carry special scenery and special people for numerous changes.—Calgary Herald.

"Tom Marks' company opened their Brandon engagement Saturday night to a crowded house and to say everyone was delighted is putting it in a mild way. The play was "The Irish Boarder," which showed the company up to advantage. Tom Marks as Dennis Donavan was a whole show in himself. The specialties were the best we have ever had here. Every one a head liner. Mr. Marks is assured of capacity houses during his stay in Brandon. To-night "The Wife's Devotion will be the bill with a Wednesday matinee."—Brandon Sun.

The railroad instruction car of the Scranton International Correspondence School was in Fernie this week and was visited by the local railway men. Interesting lectures were delivered by W. T. Hill the manager in charge, This school has thoroughly proved its worth in every department and it deserves the the wide patronage it enjoys.

LANDS DEEDED TO COAL COMPANY.

C. P. R. AND COAL CO. SETTLE ALL DIFFERENCES.

All the Land From Summit to Morrissey To Be Placed On the Market. Mr. McEvoy Appointed Land Commissioner.

The Crows Nest Pass Coal company and the Canadian Pacific Railway company have settled all their differences regarding the lands and rights of way out of the original blocks of land allotted to tha British Columbia Southern railway, aud the government has selected its 50,000 acres; the railway's rights have been protected and the company's conveyance of the remainder was signed in Montreal early this month.

This will enable an effort to be made by the Coal company to lease and dispose of surface rights between the Summit and Morrissey creek, and, that the best results may be obtained in this way, the management of the land department has been handed over to Mr. James McEvoy, who will be the land commissioner of the company from the first of January.

The addition to the townsite, now that the lands which the Great Northern railway requires have been delimited, will be gone on with. Lands will be opened for settlement throughout the entire valley, which should have the effect of bringing most of it under the plow for agricultural and market garden purposes. This ought materially to reduce the price of farm produce and garden truck in Fernie.

With this notice applicants for farms or market gardens might do well to see Mr. McEvoy at an early date.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that an application will be made to the Legislative Assembly of British Columbia at its next session for an act to incorporate the Fording Valley Railway Co., with power to build, construct, maintain and operate a line of railway of standard guage to be operated by steam, electricity, or any othea power, for the carrying of freight, passengers and express; commencing at a point on the British Columbia Southern Railway near the confluence of Elk river and Michel creek; thence following the east side of Elk river to a convenient turning point north of the mouth of Fording river; thence turning to the northeastover a low divide to the Fording River valley, thence following Fording river on either side to a point opposite Grace creek; thence along the eastern side of Fording river past Ewin creek, Smith creek and Lewis creek to a convenient turning point on the north side of Henretta creek; thence in a northeasterly direction along Henretta creek to the Alberta boundary, at the north limit of the Imperial Coal and Coke Company's property; with authority to construct branch lines up Grace, Ewin, Smith and Henretta creeks, and other branch lines not exceeding thirty miles each in length; also to establish permanent side tracks for collecting and distributing yards on said line or on any of its main lines; to connect with and enter into running arrangements with the Canadian Pacific railway or any other railway situate near said proposed railway or any part thereof, and to construct terminal sidings at any such connections; to receive from any government, person or body corporate grants of land; money or other assets in aid of construction of such undertaking, with power to construct and operate telegraph and telephone lines for the purpose of its bnsiness and for the public; with power to own, use and operate water powers convenient to the road for railway and other purposes, and with such other powers and privileges as are usually given to railway companies.

YOUR CHOICE OF BOOKS

TIMELY ADVICE WHEN OF THEIR MAKING THERE IS NO END.

ANCIENT AND MODERN BOOKS

Vivid Contrast Between the Bangings and the Crashings of the Twentieth Century Printing Press and the Scratchings of the Scribes' Pens in Solomon's Time—But Both So Busy That Text Applies.

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 18.—In this bookmaking age, and particularly at the season when presses are turning out the largest of the year's literary output, the preacher in this sermon gives some timely advice as to the choice of books. The text is Ecclesiastes xii., 12, "Of making many books there is no end."

Wendell Phillips for may years went up and down the land delivering a lecture entitled "The Lost Arts." That lecture was in most respects a glorification of the past. If, however, we should halo the present and deliver a new lecture entitled "The Found Arts," almost without exception most of us would catalogue the art of bookmaking as among the greatest of all modern accomplishments. In our egotistic self-complacency many of us have long supposed that the ancients knew but little about books. We look upon the great English and American and French and German and Russian libraries as modern developments which would be just as incomprehensible to our ancestors if they should suddenly come to life as would be the telephone or the telegraph or the electric car or the modern steam engine. Thus, when some of us to-day hear the words of my text we are amazed. We say to each other, "What did King Solomon mean when he said, 'Of making many books there is no end, and much study is a weariness to the flesh.' Were there many books in King Solomon's time, or was he in prophetic vision hearing the bangings and the crashings of the modern twentieth century printing press?"

No. King Solomon was not hearing the bangings and crashings of the modern printing press. He was listening, however, to the scratchings of the scribes' pens. The bookmakers were then very busy everywhere. They must have been busy at that time. Homer, the greatest of all poets both living and dead, certainly lived and wrote not more than a few years after Solomon died. Thucydides, Aristophanes, Demosthenes, Herodotus and Solon, whose writings are placed among the classics of the ages, wrote their thoughts only a few hundred years after King Solomon lived. Five hundred years before Solomon was born the Lord said to Moses, "Write this for a memorial in a book." That Moses was well qualified for the task we have abundant proof. Long before his day men had written books, cumbrous productions in baked clay, that as a boy in Egypt he had laboriously conned. The practice of writing books was continued, and the ancient authors had become so prolific that the author of Ecclesiastes felt as most of us do in trying to dig our way out from amid the avalanche of the literature of the present day. "Of making many books there is no end," the wisest of all men cried 3,000 years ago. "Of making many books there is no end," we cry in the beginning of this twentieth century.

Myriads of books surround us. Books, books, books, books, books everywhere—books in different forms as newspapers, books as magazines, books recording the history of nations, books as biographies, books in fictitious story or in novel form, books in rhythmic metre or as poetry, books in sermonic and theological dissertation, books as essays! There are millions and millions of them—good books and bad books. Now comes the practical question, What shall we do with these books? They come to us to assist or retard, to reinforce or to enervate us in the struggle of life. How shall we use them? How shall we decide which are helpful and which are injurious?

A man's library, in the first place, should be like the sanctuary of his heart, into which he admits only his best friends. It should have room for only a very few and a carefully chosen collection of books. These should be read and re-read and read again. Like our dearest friends, they should enter into the very warp and woof of our being. Their thoughts should become our thoughts, and their teaching should be translated into the actions of our lives. They should not be mere personalities with whom we have only a speaking acquaintance. They should not be those half strangers to whom we have to be re-introduced every time we meet them away from our homes. They should become integral parts of our mental, moral and spiritual being. We should be so sure of their wisdom that we can accept them as our guides, to inspire us to right thinking, right speaking and right acting. Rare indeed are such books! When they have been found they should be treasured as more precious than gold, but let us not expect to find many of them.

"A library to have only room for a few books? What do you mean by that assertion?" Some one says. "Why, I always thought the more books a man reads the better he is educated, taking for granted, of course, that the books he reads are good books. My parents educated me along these lines. When I was growing up my mother used to give me 10 cents for every book I would read. The result was I could read a whole book through in a couple of days. Thus in my time I have read all of the popular novelists. In the same way, by my rapidity of reading, I am able to some extent to keep abreast of the literature of this day. Oh, no; you are wrong. The more books a man reads the more he knows. The less a man reads the less he will know. 'Reading,' said Lord Bacon, 'makes a full man.'"

Am I wrong? I believe to-day that one of the curses of this age is too much reading and too little thinking. Men and women cram themselves with a lot of mentally undigested literature in the same way that many people become gormands at a dining table. It is not the amount of food you put into your stomach that makes you a strong man; it is the amount of food you digest. We should think a man very silly who said: "I want to make myself a physical giant. I am therefore going to eat enough food for ten men. At breakfast I will have the cook bring to me three pounds of beefsteak and a dozen eggs and half a bushel of mashed potatoes, and I sit there and try to eat them all. When dinner comes round I will try to eat a whole leg of mutton, and when supper comes a great big roast of beef." What would happen? His digestive organs would revolt. His body would be racked with pain. perhaps peritonitis would set in, and death would be the result of his folly.

Now, as some gormands abuse their stomachs with too much eating, so some gormands for mental food abuse their brains with too much reading. They stuff their minds with whole piles of indigestible literary food. They read and they read and they read. They keep on reading and never think or care about what they are reading. They read until at last their brains absolutely refuse to do any independent thinking. Their brains become like a great sponge filled with water, sodden and heavy and inactive, of no earthly use to anybody or anything. What you ought to do is not to see how many books you can skim through, but how many books you can master.

"Look out," says the old adage, "for the man who is master of one book." Look out, say I, for the master of a few great books. Too much reading truly becomes a weariness to the flesh. But the foolishness of buying a library of books for the shelf so that you can look upon their handsome bindings is not to be compared in its evil effects to the sin against the brain by too much promiscuous reading. I protest against the "cramming" processes we have in our colleges. I protest against the "cramming" processes we have in our colleges. I protest against the lightning rapidity with which men and women gallop through their books in an evening's reading. Buy fewer books. Master those books. Read them over and over again and make them integral parts of yourselves. The discordant voices around the tower of Babel could not have been more helpless to do good than are the babbling tongues of many books which have been hastily read. Better, far better, master a few great books than have a mere speaking acquaintance with a thousand different books.

Myriads of books are coming forth with outstretched hands, claiming our welcome. We can only afford to take a few to our hearts. How important, therefore, it is for us not to invite into our sancturay a bad book! How important it is for us not to let our children read any bad books! And above all, how important it is not to have any bad books at all upon our library shelves or our sitting-room table! But, though all of us are very careful never to have a bottle of arsenic or strychnine or laudanum or carbolic acid in our medicine closet unless it is conspicuously and clearly labeled "Poison," yet many will allow the most deadly of all mental, moral and spiritual poisons to come into our homes in the shape of a bad book, unlabeled with any danger signal. We will suffer the evil virus of that poisonous book not only to be inoculated into our own hearts, but also into the hearts of our loved ones.

How many men have been ruined for time and eternity by the influence of one bad book! Am I describing the experience of any of you when I imagine a scene of demoniac siege and conquest? For many years Satan was trying to batter down the doors of your father's Christian home. Again and again he had charged upon that carefully guarded stronghold to capture your heart, but again and again he had failed. Satan would come up to that front door and he would hear the family singing at evening and morning prayers, and he could not get in. He tried to entice you away from the straight path of virtue, but your Christian parents had surrounded you with so many pious influences that it was almost an impossibility to break them down.

At last Satan became completely discouraged. He called a council of war of all his fiends to plan for your destruction. Plot after plot was gone over and pushed aside as useless. But just as the Satanic demons were about to scatter in utter dismay an arch fiend spoke up and said: "Let me try a flank movement on that home. Instead of sending any more of our stalwart emissaries of flesh and blood to that Christian household let me write a bad book and slip it in through the crack of the open door into that young man's hands. In that bad book I will open that young man's eyes to the pleasures of sin. I will excite all his evil passions. Before that young man's eyes I will halo sin in as fascinating language as Lord Byron ever did in his autobiography of Don Juan. In that book through a garden of fragrant roses I will lead that young man up to the very gates of hell. I will make him think he is approaching the gates of heaven. Then, just at the right moment, when that tempting book is working its charms, we will give that young man a shove and push him into the flames of the bottomless pit." "Aha!" cried the demons exultingly. "Aha! We will capture that young man through the influence of a bad book." O man, am I going beyond the truth when I state that your eyes were first opened to the sins of this world through the influence of a bad book? And am I going beyond my right when I state that one of the reasons, and the chief one, that you are not what you ought to be in Christian character is because every little while you allow yourself to revel in scenes of wickedness and riot conjured up by the imagination of some licentious author? There you associate with characters of that writer's creation so vile that you would shrink from contact with them if you were introduced to them in the flesh, but you are fascinated by the galmour with which they are clothed in his pages.

I do not mean by this that the books we admit to our hearts and homes must be limited to distinctively religious books. We must read for instruction and for entertainment. Because a book is not distinctly a religious book that is no reason why necessarily it should be debarred from coming to our reading chairs. Some books we should select because they are books of travel, some because they are the biographies of men and women who were the great leaders and makers of the world's history. The higher the mountain peak upon which you stand the wider the range of your horizon. We should select some books because they teach us the geographical and geological or astronomical or atmospheric or biological construction of the animal, vegetable or mineral kingdom, whether these studies be inside of the world or above the world ot upon the surface of the world. "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth, the sea and all that in them is." It is our duty to learn as much as possible about God's creations if we can do so without curtailing the work for which God created us. But though we should select books of travel and of fiction, if the right kind of fiction, we should also select certain books as lifetime companions because first and last and intrinsically they were written to teach us the duties of the spiritual life. We should read them because they were written to teach us how to love the Lord our God with all our heart and soul and mind and strength, and our neighbor as ourselves.

"Limit my reading to books written for spiritual edification." Says some one: "That is unreasonable. You would not turn the home sitting room at night into the class room of a theological professor. You would not tell the whole human race to study theology as if they were young men studying for the ministry. Why should a layman read such books as Cotton Mather's 'Essay on Doing Good,' or Law's 'Serious Call to a Devout and Holy Life,' or Bunyan's 'Pilgrim's Progress,' or Thomas a Kempis' 'Meditations,' or Richard Baxter's 'Saint's Everlasting Rest?' The only rest I could get from reading such books as those would be to go sound asleep over them. I might, perhaps, stay awake for a little while in reading some of the light religious books, like Elizabeth Stewart Phelps' 'Gates Ajar' or Elizabeth Payson's 'Stepping Heavenwood,' but it would not be for long. No, I never did like religious books. When I read, I read for fun and for mental improvement. You must not expect laymen, and especially young people, to read the same books as do the ministers."

But, if it is necessary for us to read spiritual books for mental food, how much more necessary is it that we as Christian students should read and love that greatest of all books which God has given to us to be our guide! We have read how the great masters of literature loved their books. Dr. Geikie tells us that "when Henry Thomas Buckle, the distinguished historian, was dying his last words on earth were, 'My poor books; my poor books!'" When Leibnitz died he died with one of his precious books in his hand. When death came to call Robert Southey he found him an old, white haired man, kissing and stroking the books he was too weak to open and too blind to read. Cicero's greatest desire on earth was expressed in the words, "Oh, take all that I have, but leave me my books!" Could there be a better picture than that which Cunningham Geikle drew of the love which these masters in literature bore their books? Should that love be greater than the love Christians ought to bear the book of books which God gave to us to show us the way of life? If spiritual books are essential for our mental food, should we not feed upon this book, which is wholly divine?

I want you to class books among the best of friends and the worst of enemies. As Loyola the wounded soldier of fortune became Loyola the soldier of Christ by reading "The Lives of the Saints," so I want the good books to lift you and purify you and make you a gospel messenger among men. As bad books are the worst enemies of mankind, I want to enlist your help in fighting them at every step. "If ever the devil had an agent on earth, I have been one," spake the dying author of a pernicious book. "Oh, that I could destroy that book!" I want you to fight these evil books wherever you go. I want you to see that your library shelves are cleared of the "lepers." I want you to see that your children never are allowed to touch a bad book. And furthermore I want you, by the help of God, to scatter forth the copies of that one book which shall yet trample over all evil books, because it is the "sword of the Spirit," which shall never fail.

May God teach us one and all to pillow our heads upon the promises and live as Christ would have us live, because we love the "old book."

Mr. Gladstone Failed to Tip.

Mr. Gladstone's hatred of tipping, writes a correspondent, was not only shown in his avoidance of the custom whenever possible, but also in the smallness of the gift when he found custom too strong for him.

At a private hotel in Brighton where Mr. Gladstone had stayed for the week end one of the dining-room waiters who had served Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone gives as one of his reasons for voting against Liberal candidates at local elections the fact that "Gladstone only gave me a shilling." For this "insult" the Liberal party lost one vote.—London Chronicle.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON I, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 1.

Text of the Lesson, John 1, 1-18. Memory Verses, 1-4—Golden Text, John 1, 4—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1904, by American Press Association.]

Beginning the study of this, in some respects, most marvelous of all the gospels, and on this first day of a new year, let me quote some words from Dr. Andrew Murray applicable to the whole Bible, and, of course, to this portion of it: "The central thought of this book is God; its one object is to reveal God, His glory, His will, His love. In reading it our chief desire should be to know God. May our life and heart be as full of God as this book is." It is only in Christ that we can see and know God (verse 18), for He also said, "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father" (chapter xiv, 9), and this gospel was written that we might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and believing have life through His Name (xx, 31). One has said that here John reveals Him as "not of this world" (xvii, 16) for the contemplation of those who, like Him, by His grace, are not of this world.

In the first three verses we are carried back to Gen. i, 1, and we see Him as God, the Creator of all things. Compare Col. i, 16, 17, and consider Him as the all wise and all powerful Creator until your heart can gladly say Jer. xxxii, 17, and find the comfort and the result that the apostles did in Acts iv, 24-31. May our hearts and lives ever proclaim that to us Jesus is God, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace (Isa. ix, 6, 7).

In Him are life and light, and nowhere else, for all else is darkness, and darkness cannot comprehend light. "He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son hath not life" (I John v, 12). His first recorded utterance in Scripture is, "Let there be light" (Gen. i, 3), and it is recorded of Him, "God is light, and in Him is no darkness at all" (I John i, 5). He said of Himself, "I am the light of the world," and again, "I am the way and the truth and the life" (chapters viii, 12; xiv, 6).

In verses 6 to 9 John the Baptist is spoken of as a witness sent from God to bear witness of the light, and this also is in a sense the calling of every believer, for He said, "Ye shall receive the power of the Holy Ghost coming upon you, and ye shall be witnesses unto me" (Acts i, 8, margin). We are to walk as He walked (I John ii, 6), and as with Him so with us the life is the light, and our lives are either telling for Him or against Him always. When once the light has shined in our hearts we are to die continually to self that the life of Jesus may be manifest in us (II Cor. iv, 10, 11).

Unknown in the world which He had made, despised and rejected by the nation to whom He specially came, esteemed as a root out of a dry ground, as one having neither form nor comeliness; oppressed and afflicted and persecuted, and finally crucified as an evildoer, such was His treatment from those whom He came to bless. He said to them, "How often would I have gathered you, and ye would not."

Verse 12 is to me one of the best in the book; it is to my mind the simplest possible definition of believing and must be borne in mind wherever afterward we find the word "believe" in this gospel. It tells me how to become a child of God, begotten of God. It is not hereditary, nor can it be accomplished by any will or power of man, but every sinner who having heard of Jesus Christ as the Saviour of sinners can truly say, "I do receive Him as my personal Saviour," is hereby assured that thus receiving Him he is entitled to all the privileges of a child of God. Compare Rom. iii, 24; iv, 5; vi, 23; x, 4; Tit. iii, 5. We are also taught here that not all people are children of God, as some would have us believe, but only such as truly receive the Lord Jesus Christ as their life and light, believing Him to be God manifest in the flesh, the only revealer of the Father, the one who as God appeared to man in all the Old Testament story from Gen. ii onward, who in due time became man, made of a woman, made under the law to redeem them that were under the law—Christ, who redeems us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us (Gal. iv, 4; iii, 13). John the Baptist says, "He was before me" (verse 15); our Lord Himself said, "Before Abraham was, I am," and again in His prayer to His Father He said, "O Father, glorify thou me with Thine own self, with the glory which I had with Thee before the world was" (John viii, 58; xvii, 5).

The law, holy and just and good, setting forth the only righteousness which could satisfy God, could not give life, for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily, righteousness should have been by the law (Gal. iii, 21), but the law can only prove men guilty that they may be justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, who is the end of the law for righteousness to all who believe (Rom. iii, 19-24; x, 4). Not only did grace and truth come by Him, but He was full of grace and truth. He is the truth, God is the God of truth, the Spirit is the Spirit of truth, in Him we see the truth as to what God desires man to be, in man's treatment of Him we see the truth as to what man's heart is toward God, and then His loving and saving such as we are show forth the exceeding abundant grace of God (I Tim. i, 14). If we understood it more fully now we would magnify the grace of God always and be willing to be emptied of self for His sake who became poor for us.

Stronger Than Hate

"Halt!"

The command rang out sharply, and the figure skulking through the rice field hesitated, then turned and came slowly toward the sentinel. It was clad in the uniform of a common soldier.

The sergeant of the guard was near, and to him the man was transferred and taken directly to the tent of the commanding officer.

"A deserter, your distinguished highness," the sergeant reported, saluting.

The officer looked up from a chessboard on which he had been maneuvering men in lines of battle. He was a strong, handsome fellow, with a hard face. As his eyes fell upon the prisoner he started slightly.

"You, Kurino?" he exclaimed.

The prisoner smiled satirically.

"Even I, Shithiro," he answered, "though I suppose I ought to add 'noble and distinguished highness' now that you are an officer."

The other waved his hand impatiently.

"You may go," he said to the sergeant. "I wish to speak with the prisoner alone a few minutes." Then as the sergeant withdrew, "You understand what this involves?"

"Of course," coldly. "Deserting is death."

"Yes, death," grimly. "And I will see that the penalty is paid tomorrow morning at sunrise. But, greater than death, you have the disgrace of deserting. That will go with you into the grave and out to darken the thoughts of all your friends."

"That is a lie, Shithiro," he said, "and you know it. I am not a deserter. I am not even a part of your miserable command. I am a Korean and was seized and forced into your company unlawfully. I have taken no oath and made no promise, and it is not deserting for me to get away if I can."

Shithiro's hard face did not change.

"Tomorrow morning at sunrise," he repeated. "In cases of desertion the army has no time for sentiment. It would not be safe. There are too many dissatisfied soldiers who are ready to follow a bad example. You were seized on Japanese soil among other men whose duty it was to be in the army. Your name is on the roll, and you have tried to desert. That is enough."

"So it seems. But you know why I was on Japanese soil."

"To see the daughter of Laio," slipped involuntarily from the officer. He bit his lips.

"Yes," boldly, "to see Nuyama, the daughter of Laio, the great merchant of Miyaz. It was with her father's consent, and we were to be married in a month. It lacks but four days now. That is why I tried to get away, for you have prevented my sending any word." He was silent a moment, then went on contemptuously: "You could not harm me in my own country, Shithiro, for I am more powerful there than you are here. So you took this way. You thought I could be removed from your path in battle. But my trying to leave makes it easier. Now you can kill me at sunrise and have it appear a duty, and you will try to advance your interests by what you call my disgrace. But it will be all feathers in a gale," his voice commenced to ring. "I know Laio, and I know Nuyama, and they will not change. Nuyama has said she loves me, and she will continue to love me in spite of all that you and the world may do, for that is a woman's way.

"You will seek to win her father; seek to win her without her father, perhaps, as you have already tried, but it will be useless. And if you try to win her through what you call my disgrace she will hate you, hate you, Shithiro. I know. Yes," at the sudden whitening of the officer's face, "and you know too. Nuyama is a goddess among women, and I would rather die with her love than live with her hate. You may do your worst."

Shithiro's hand trembled visibly as he raised it to his eyes to shade them for a moment from the other's gaze.

"You are mistaken, Kurino," he said at length in a low voice. "I did not have you seized, as you think. I did not even know you were in my company until a few days ago.

"When I discovered you were here, though, I admit I was glad. It put you out of my path temporarily, and there was the chance of your being killed. And now this mistake of yours has solved that part of the problem permanently. I am not having you pay the penalty because you are in my path, mind, but because you are a deserter. Any man in the army would suffer the same. But in this case," frankly, "I am glad, though," a note of doubt coming into his face, "perhaps I shall not speak of your disgrace to Nuyama and her father. I may concede you that mercy."

"Malu!" he called harshly.

The sergeant entered.

"Take this prisoner to the guardhouse and watch him closely. Have everything ready for the execution at sunrise."

In the guardhouse, with the curious, unfriendly eyes no longer watching him, Kurino's scornful composure vanished. He squatted upon the earthen floor, with his eyes fixed drearily upon the little square hole through which fell a shaft of light. The hole was too small for him to squeeze through, and there was a double guard outside the door. This was to be the end not only of his political advancement in Korea, but of that sweeter possibility which he had won and must now lose.

The hours dragged by until from the shifting light he knew that it was after midnight. Then the door opened and some one came in. He did not even turn. It was a guard solicitous of his safety or perhaps come to mock him.

"Kurino!" a voice called.

Kurino sprang to his feet, wondering, for in the voice was the same dreary hopelessness that he had been feeling.

"Shithiro!" he exclaimed.

"Yes. I—I have been thinking it over, and it is as you say. Nuyama would hate me. Here," thrusting a paper into Kurino's hand. "It is an honorable discharge from the army. It will pass you through the lines. Now go!"

"What!" incredulously. "You let me go free?"

"Yes, yes," more harshly. "But it is not for you. It is for Nuyama. I—I love her too. I would rather die than for her to think ill of me. Now go! Go! Go!"

At the door Kurino looked back involuntarily. Shithiro was squatted upon the earthen floor, gazing hopelessly at the little square hole through which the light dropped.

A Long Time Between.

When Thomas B. Reed was in California on one occasion he visited the Lick observatory on Mount Hamilton. It was a wonderful November day, full of gold and the bloom of flowers. Mr. Reed looked down at the gorgeous landscape 4,000 feet below, and, turning to one of his hosts, he said:

"Colonel, this looks too much like a special display got up in honor of the occasion. Tell me what a typical winter day in California is really like."

The Californian thought at once of a day in February so warm that after a morning bath he had lain in a hammock outdoors, smelled the roses on the trellis and listened to the trill of the meadow lark among the almond blooms.

He began to describe it eloquently. "Thirteen years ago, on Feb. 22, I took a bath"—

He paused to arrange his account of the roses and the meadow lark. Mr. Reed broke the pause.

"Well, colonel," he said in admiration, "you do know something about cleanliness out here, don't you?"

Marked by Their Occupation.

"A man's occupation," said a magistrate, "marks him so unmistakably that I can tell at a glance what he does for a living.

"There is, for instance, the violinist. You can tell a violinist from the fact that he carries his head on one side. The groom and the cavalryman have bow legs, and when they stand still they hold their legs wide apart, as though there was a horse between them.

"The painter may be detected by the mark of the palette hole on his thumb. The pianist's enormous hands identify him. From constant practice they become abnormal. Weber, you know, could stretch two octaves.

"Men that work amid the vapors of mercury, copper and arsenic have a green mucous membrane and greenish hair and skin. The players of flutes and clarinets have thick, distended cheeks and tough, leathery lips.

"The scrubbers of floors have swollen knees, and often, afflicted with the disease called housemaid's knee, they limp."—New York Press.

The Return.

"Oh, Clarence, darling, so you are home at last?"

"Yes, my precious wife. And how deliciously sweet it is to be here!"

"What ages it has been!"

"Yes, dearest, hasn't it? I thought the time would never pass!"

"I thought so, too, darling. Clarence, I don't believe you've changed a mite since you went away. It is marvelous!"

"And you, dear one, look quite as familiar as ever. I declare I should have recognized you anywhere."

"And the house—does it look familiar too?"

"I declare it does, though it seems a long, long dream since I saw it last."

"Clarence!"

"Ethel!"

Cataclysm.

Then this young pair spent the rest of the evening renewing acquaintance with everything, for it was the first day he had gone back to the office after the wedding trip.—Virginia Niles Leeds in Life.

NO. 15.

CHARLES A. BARBER.

MR. CHARLES A. BARBER,
Editor of the Pilot Mound Sentinel.

It has long passed into a truism that in the New World men "arrive" much sooner than in the Old. On this continent ability outranks experience, whereas in Europe, experience being proven, ability is assured. On the other side of the Atlantic youth is to some extent a handicap—a disadvantage that time alone can cure. On this side we believe with Shakespeare, that "youth will be served," and, other conditions being equal, the younger and more energetic men are given preference. Hence young men—mere striplings they would be considered in older lands—are to be found in all parts of Canada and the States filling positions of the greatest responsibility, planning and directing industries of colossal magnitude and governing enterprises of national importance.

It is therefore only natural that, the younger the state or province, the younger is the average of the men prominent therein. The New England States and the Maritime Provinces and Ontario do not offer to young ambition the same opportunity as the West. Conservatism creeps into all communities, and the sympathies of the old settlements of the New World have much in common with the older civilizations. But the parties and the Pacific slope yet remain, the undisputed heritage of youth and ability, and there is to be found the true land of opportunity for him who fears not to put his fortune and his manhood to the test.

Journalism the world over is in a peculiar sense the profession of young men, but nowhere are editors younger than in some towns in Western Canada, which has been remarkable as much for the youth as for the ability of many of the men of the "fifth estate." A case in point is that of Mr. Charles A. Barber, editor of the Pilot Mound Sentinel. At an age when most newspaper men are reporting, and most printers' ambitions would be realized by a foremanship, he is a newspaper proprietor. To have achieved thus much after seven years of work is a record of which any one might well be proud. It is an accomplishment that speaks much for Mr. Barber's energy and ability, and also much for the country that offers to a young man of the required characteristics such opportunities for self-advancement. It is a record that many another young man in the West has duplicated in journalistic and other fields, and one of which any Western Canadian can point with pardonable enthusiasm.

Mr. Barber is a British Columbian by birth, having been born in the beautiful village of Chilliwack in September 1879. When four years old his parents removed east, locating at Wingham, Ont., at the public school of whch place he received his education.

School days over, Mr. Barber spent four years in finding his aptitudes. He did "whatever came along." Gradually his mind became bent toward newspaper work, in which he saw a wide field for originality, brightness and success.

It was in the Wingham Advance that Mr. Barber commenced his career as a newspaper man. For three years he remained there, at first under Mr. Cornyn, and later under the present proprietor, Mr. Hall. In 1900 he took a positon in the job office of C. P. Heel & Co., London. He had not been long in London when he was offered and accepted the foremanship of the Lucknow Sentinel, and for three years he broadened his field of observation and trained himself in the technique of newspaper work under Mr. James Bryan, the able editor of that paper. Mr. Barber's three years' work n Lucknow were largely instrumental in developing the qunlities that will determine his career. He himself is a firm believer in the fact that not ability alone, but character and ability, are necessary for a successful editor, and the young foreman of the Sentinel displayed while in Lucknow those qualities of manliness, earnestness and conscientious thoroughness that gained him the confidence and respect of the office and its customers and the community.

In 1903 the West, where he had been born, beckoned Mr. Barber again toward the setting sun. He pulled up stakes and struck out for Winnipeg. For three months he worked on the Free Press, Canada's biggest daily, and after this preliminary western canter he started a career for himself by purchasing the Pilot Mound Sentinel and its accessory business fourteen months ago.

In that space of time Mr. Barber has made his mark on the Sentiinel, and his influence felt throughout the field of its circulation. His arrival at Pilot Mound coincided with the town's awakening from the torpor and lethargy of years, and the desire of its citizens for civic unity and progress. In ths renaissance none was as helpful as the new editor. In the paper itself he made many changes. The makeup was rearranged and its typographical appearance improved. Indeed, as far as mechanical care and printing-taste is concerned, few papers in the West are superior to that published at Pilot Mound, and Mr. Barber's intenton is to still further improve it, as developing business gives him additional means, and demands additional facilities. And the mechanical improvement of the Sentinel has been kept pace with by its news columns. The local happenings are recorded with brightness and interest, as to make the Sentinel a welcome weekly visitor in the homes of the prosperous farming community among which it circulates. Politically the Sentinel has not allied itself to any party, for the reason that there is but one paper in "the Mound," and on matters political the policy of the paper is to remain neutral, and hold the balance even. Mr. Barber believes that the field of the local paper is not the discussion of provincial and federal issues, but the recording of local news, and fair comment on local and general matters.

Turning from the editor to the man, a word might be said. In all respects Mr Barber is a fine citzen, and the representative of a type of which no country can have too many. He is a "sport" of the proper kind. He handles a lacrosse stick in great shape, and is captain of the town lacrosse team, while at football he "handles his feet" with equal keenness and skill. By rligion he is a Methodist, and is president of the Epworth League in Pilot Mound. He has none of the "manly vices," for he neither smokes nor swears, and is a total abstainer. As yet he is unmarried,—but that, it is asserted, is not the fault of the young lades of the Mound.

It will thus be seen that Mr. Barber is a many-phased and respect-worthy man, taking an active interest in social, athletic, public and religious affairs. He is a good printer, a good editor and a good citizen, and his early success may be regarded as but the earnest of the measure time will accord him as the years pass by.

Monuments of Ears.

Throughout Korea a number of monuments are still standing which date from the war of 1592, when Japan invaded Korea with 30,000 men. These "monuments of ears," as they are called, mark the burial places of 10,000 ears which were cut from the heads of the Koreans as trophies of victory. There are many of these monuments in Japan also, for some of these grewsome relics were taken home by the conquering army.

BIG SHIRT

Made big enough for a big man to work in with comfort. Has more material in it than any other brand of shirt in Canada. Made on the H.B.K. scale it requires 39½ to 42 yards per dozen, whereas common shirts have only 32 to 33 yards.

That's the reason why the H.B.K. "Big" Shirt never chafes the armpits, is never tight at the neck or wristbands, is always loose, full and comfortable and wears well.

Each shirt bears a tiny book that tells the whole history of the "Big" Shirt, and also contains a notarial declaration that the H.B.K. "Big" Shirt contains 39½ to 42 yards of material per dozen.

Still the city's new voters' list does not total 200 names, which means that 50 per cent. of those qualified to vote have not thought it of sufficient imporance to have their names registered. This is truly an unfortunate state of affairs. It denotes absolute indifference on the part of many voters, and portends a listless and uninteresting campaign. The list will be finally closed tomorrow night, Dec. 31st, and it is the duty of every person qualified to vote to see that his name is duly registered.

THE Board of Trade and the city council will soon be in possession of facts which prove beyond a doubt that the Fernie route to the Flathead has many advantages over all other, and when this is proved the rest should be easy. Then apart from the respective merits of the different routes there are important reasons why the road should be built from Fernie. This city is the metropolis of the Crows Nest Pass. It is the natural distributing point of the great coal areas of which the Flathead forms a part and it is well equipped in a commercial sense to handle all the outfitting contracts which the opening of the Flathead country will necessitate.

THE lumber deputation which goes to Ottawa next week to lay their case before the Government will carry with them the earnest good wishes of all true hearted British Columbians. What the lumber industry is to B. C. is only beginning to be realized as mill after mill is forced to close down, while others are curtailing their expenses to the last possible limit. The deputation has many strong arguments to present to the Government in support of their contention that a duty should be imposed on American rough lumber. Indeed, an honest survey of the industry, as it appears in this Province today, should be sufficient to convince even the prairie members of the House of Commons that the duty is urgently needed. The action of the Calgary Board of Trade last week should have great weight in backing up the deputation. This board unanimously adopted a resolution favoring the demands of the deputation. The Government has had its hands tied with respect to this question by strong representations from the Prairie urging that a lumber duty woulp raise the price of lumber. In vain the millmen assured the Government that they did not seek higher prices: that all they wished was a protective tariff to preserve the Canadian Northwestorn market, and as a mark of their good faith the millmen withdrew from the Retailers' association, that the consumer might deal directly with the producer. Calgary buys more lumber than any other city in the Northwest and this act on the part of its board of trade is the best assurance that the people of Calgary do not anticipate higher prices to follow the imposition of a duty on American rough lumber: that they recognize the interdependent relationship existing between this forest province and the Canadian prairies, a relationship which to be fair must admit of equitable protection to all industries, not only of the prairie but also of the mountains. Calgary has acted wisely, not suicidally, an inspiration to its sister towns and an unanswerable argument for the millmen.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

The new school term opens next Tuesday.

The midnight mass on Christmas Eve at the Catholic church was largely attended.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Wood left on Sunday evening for Toronto, where they will spend a few weeks.

The Fernie Dancing Club give a New Year's ball this evening in the Stork Opera House.

A Christmas tree entertainment was given in the Michel Methodist church on Saturday night.

The first cold spell of the season arrived on Christmas morning and lasted two days. The mercury fell as low as 15 below zero.

Miss Moody teacher of the second division, was presented with a handsome clock by her scholars before the school closed last term.

The charge of assault against J. Scott was withdrawn yesterday and the man was released. Sanford has so far recovered as to be able to leave the hospital.

A fine Christmas box came to the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. C. Hammond yesterday in the shape of a bouncing 12 pound boy.

D. J. Johnson, contractor, left on Monday for a visit to his old home at Sydney, Cape Breton, after an absence of six years.

Miss Laura Walker, of Toronto, arrived on Saturday to accept a position as stenographer in the Coal company's office.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyons, of Sandon, spent Christmas with their daughter, Mrs. J. Gusty. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. J. Crawford.

One of the Kfloury Brothers on Tuesday was fined $20 for peddling without a license. One license was thought to be sufficient for several brothers.

The Morrissey Shingle and Lumber Company was tied up on Tuesday by order of the Sheriff. Instructions were given through a Cranbrook law firm.

A general meeting of the Fernie Hockey Club will be held in Mr Grimes' school room, next door to the Methodist church, tomorrow evening at eight o'clock. A full attendance is desired.

W. O. Robbins is making extensive improvements in the interior of his store building. The main store room will be considerably enlarged and a room will be fitted up for the carpet and linoleum departments.

Dr. A. D. Morgan and wife left this week for Carbonado, where the doctor succeeds Dr. Willson as physician at the Morrissey mines. During their brief residence in Cranbrook Mr. and Mrs. Morgan made many friend who wish them every prosperity in their new home.—Cranbrook Herald.

Ald. Trites received a telegram on Monday from San Francisco containing regrettable information that Mrs. Trites was more seriously ill than was at first supposed. Mr. Trites while making preparations to go to Frisco received a second message with brighter news and he did not go.

The next monthly tea held by the Ladies of the Methodist Church will be given by Mrs. Geddes at her home on Victoria Avenue, near the Park, on Tuesday, Jan. 3rd, 1905, afternoon and evening. Ladies and gentlemen who wish to spend a social evening please accept this invitation. A very cordial invitation is extended to all.

Mike Davis an employee of the Fernie Lumber Company had his leg broken while at work yesterday in the woods. Davis is a young man of twenty years of age who had been with the company only a week. At the time of the accident he was standing with his leg between two logs. The chain caught one of them and swung it against his leg causing the fracture.

The Cranbrook Herald of last week is responsible for a statement to the effect that the C. P. R. has made arrangements for the building of a $12 000 depot at Fernie. Mr. Reading, the local agent, who was seen in reference to the item, stated that he was not aware of any appropriation having been made for this purpose, but that it might, nevertheless, be true. Supt. Jamieson was recently to Winnipeg putting in estimates for his division, when a grant for the Fernie depot may have been asked for.

J. D. Quail's new store is plastered with ivory wood fibre plaster manufactured near Minneapolis. This new material is rapidly taking the place of sand and lime plaster. It sets with a cement-like hold, it never Cracks and it is fireproof. It is made from fibre and the rock from which plaster of paris is made. It costs but little more than common plaster and is infinitely better in every respect. Parties interested in this material should see Mr. Quail who is the local agent for it

Mr. and Mrs. Roaf, of Carbonado, spent Saturday in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Wood left on Sunday evening for Toronto where they will spend a few weeks.

S. P. Dawson left on Tuesday for Sarnia, Ont., on a holiday of two months' duration.

The Cranbrook Herald has got out an excellent Christmas number which gives a complete write-up of the town and district for the year.

The first car-load of goods shipped direct from Spokane to Fernie was unloaded last week by the Fernie Cartage Co. It was a carload of Schlitz beer consigned to the Pollock Wine Co.

Mason & Risch will take your old piano or organ as part payment on a new instrument and the balance in easy installments. Apply to H. L. Staebler, agent, at Fernie.

Wm. Handley has everything in first class shape for handling the Fernie coal, the agency for which he takes over on Monday next. Orders should be left at the offic opposite the postoffice block.

Only Mayor Stork and Aldermen Lundie and Beck turned out last night to attend the council meeting and a sitting could not be held for lack of a quorum. The next meeting is called for Jan. 3rd.

The Christmas rifle shooting match on Monday under the management of Messrs. Minton and Wilde was well patronized. Prizes were won by the following, J. Reade, C. D. Warring, A. Weaver and C. Minton. The chief event of the day was won by T. L. Smith.

The town of Frank is now agitating for a road into the Flathead from that place and a public meeting was held last week to discuss ways and means of furthering the scheme. Frank is thoroughly alive to its interests, and in this respect shows a worthy example to larger places with probably stronger claims for the Flathead road.

W. H. Whimster, police magistrate' will hold a court of revision for the city's new voters list on Jan. 7th at 2 p.m. Copies of the list will be posted in ten conspicuous places and those who have objections to any names on the list may ask to have them struck off.

On Saturday night the 15 round glove contest between Bill Burrows and Jack Overdorff was ended in the 4th when the former was knocked out. A match was then made between Jim Burrows and Overdorff for $100 a side for Monday evening. "Jim" lost on a foul in the 5th. W. W. Tuttle refereed both contests. On Jan. 24th these two will meet again for a similar purse in a 20 round bout.

When History Repeated Itself

By INA WRIGHT HANSON

Copyright, 1904, by Ina Wright Hanson

Miss Eugenie Barnett looked discontentedly across the veranda at her blond cousin in the cushion piled hammock.

"You've no business to be so pretty, Julia Knox, and to look so absurdly young. You are just as old as I am, and that is twenty-s"—

"Hush!" The little widow sat up quickly. "You mustn't, Eugenie. If we think we are young and never acknowledge that we are not young we'll fool the people into thinking"—

"'A pocket edition of blue and gold,'" continued Eugenie morosely. "That's what Dr. Hunt called you, and it suits you too. I tell you, Julia, it's little short of tragedy to worship beauty as I do and be homely as a hedge fence myself!"

"The cypress hedge fence at the foot of my garden is beautiful, I think," said the widow, lying back among her cushions again. "Find another simile, Eugenie."

The girl turned away impatiently with smarting eyes. She was so tired of the continually booming breakers and drearily whistling buoy. She wished she hadn't come to California to visit Julia Knox. If Julia weren't a widow or if Dr. Hunt weren't spending his vacation here or if Julia weren't so pretty and she so plain or if"—

"Eugenie, dear"—Mrs. Knox looked out of half shut, baby blue eyes—"do you think it was prearranged for you and Frankie Hunt and me to play together as children and meet again at Santa Cruz as grownups? Don't you think that Dr. Hunt"—

"Who filches my good name?"

When a tall young man came around the porch corner he saw only Mrs. Knox. Her cousin had disappeared.

As Eugenie entered her room her cousin's clear tones floated through the open window.

"She is having one of her spells again because she isn't a Helen of Troy, and it reminds me of our school days. Do you remember when she cut off her hair in a rage because it was brown and straight instead of yellow and curly like mine?"

"Now, I call that mean of Julia," Eugenie thought, her face growing crimson as she heard them laugh. If she had not shut the window just then she might have heard the doctor's answer.

"No one but Eugenie thinks her face isn't good to look at."

By and by Julia ascended the stairs and tapped at her cousin's door.

"Dr. Hunt has his auto here and wishes us to ride with him. Get your hat and come on."

"Thanks. I have another engagement."

"All right," answered the widow sweetly. "I'll try to make up for your absence."

"I don't doubt it," observed Eugenie.

Mrs. Knox went down five steps and paused. She wrinkled her white brow unbecomingly, sighed and went back.

"Honey," she called softly, her pretty lips at the keyhole, "did no one ever tell you that along with the Barnett nose you inherited the Barnett trick of making folks like you?"

Her mind trailed back into the past. She was a little, dark faced girl again, playing with Frankie Hunt, her sworn champion until her cousin, Julia Epps, came to school. Personified daintiness was Julia Epps, from the blue bow on her yellow curls to the black bows on her tiny slippers.

One miserable, lonely noon hour Eugenie peered around the beech tree where she and he had always played together and saw something the memory of which even after a dozen years made a green flame leap into the woman Eugenie's eyes. Frankie Hunt was putting on Julia Epps' finger the ring which he had been digging out of a black button for her, Eugenie Barnett.

Another day she and Julia sat on Julia's mother's porch eating cookies. With her free hand Julia smoothed her ruffled white apron complacently.

"He says he loves me the best of anybody," she announced coquettishly.

"Tomorrow is the last day of school," answered her cousin, "and my mamma says I may wear my lovely new dress. Then you'll see whom he likes best."

The fair Julia tossed her golden curls and answered grandly, "I think dresses won't make any difference in his love."

"You'll see," Eugenie replied darkly.

That night Eugenie braided her somewhat curtailed tresses into numerous tight little braids. Next day, arrayed in the new dress—how well she remembered the gay plaids—with fluttering ribbons, kinky locks and the mien of a conqueror, she entered the schoolroom after the other children were seated.

With cleverly assumed carelessness she glanced in Julia's direction. That young lady was wearing the same dress she had worn several times before, and, glory, that same old white apron! Eugenie wore no apron. She had been forced to start with one, but it was lying ingloriously under a stone in a fence corner. Retribution lay within its crumpled folds, but retribution could wait.

Just before recess she looked at Frankie Hunt. His eyes had been fixed upon her all the morning, and now he smiled encouragingly. Eugenie modestly lowered her eyes. At recess she stayed in her seat, being very busy with her geography. Frankie Hunt was tying a refractory shoe string. When the teacher was out of sight he jumped over four intervening desks to Eugenie's seat.

"You look awful nice, Genie. Will you be my girl?" he said.

And Eugenie answered solemnly, "If you'll cross your heart and hope to die you'll always love me better'n Julia Epps."

The woman Eugenie laughed and came back to the present.

"History sometimes repeats itself, she remarked. "I don't see now why Julia Knox"—

A half mile from Mrs. Knox's cottage the red auto, puffing back, came upon a surprising sight. A young woman, looking at once defiant and apologetic, her white dress mud spattered and blood stained, her brown hair blown about by a saucy sea breeze, stood by the roadside holding in her arms a dilapidated yellow mongrel, one leg swathed stiff in plaid silk bandages.

"Eugenie, where in the world are you going with that dirty dog?" shrilled the widow.

"Home," answered Eugenie laconically, turning toward a short cut across the hill.

"What's this?" and Dr. Hunt stepped out of the auto. "Broken leg, eh? Well, old fellow, you are in luck to get a capable surgeon in your hour of calamity. Silk bandages, too. I wonder if the splints are gold or ivory."

"I had forgotten my handkerchief, so I had to use my neck ribbon," she explained, starting to go.

"Get in here, Genie!" He used the pet name as in the old days. "This is better than walking."

"Oh, don't!" shrieked Julia Knox. "Don't get in here with that awful dog! I can't bear the sight of blood!" She closed her eyes shudderingly.

The little dog whined softly and tried to lick Eugenie's face. Her pulse leaped as she met the doctor's eyes.

"You did it scientifically, and you aren't a bit pale. Shouldn't you like to be a doctor?"

"Or a doctor's wife?" suggested Julia Knok, a trifle maliciously.

"Will you, dear?" he asked eagerly, watching the color flood her dark cheek. "Will you be this doctor's wife?"

"Well!" said the pretty widow explosively, "I guess I'm not needed here. Eugenie, if you can guarantee that little beast not to bite I suppose I can take him home for you."

"I can't," said Eugenie happily, starting for the third time across the hill.

"But," interposed the doctor, "you haven't answered my question. Will you be my girl, Genie?"

She looked back at him with radiant eyes and answered with mock solemnity:

"If you'll cross your heart and hope to die that you'll always love me better'n Julia Knox."

She Had Her Way.

The late Counselor E., chairman of the quarter sessions for Dublin, was so remarkable for his leniency to female culprits that a woman was seldom convicted when he presided.

On one occasion when this humane barrister was in the chair a prim looking woman was put to the bar of the commission court, at which presided the equally humane though perhaps not so gallant Baron S.

She was indicted for uttering forged bank notes. According to usual forms of law, the clerk of the crown asked the prisoner if she was ready to take her trial.

With becoming disdain she answered "No!" She was told by the clerk she must give her reasons why.

As if scorning to hold conversation with the official, she thus addressed his lordship: "My lord, I won't be tried here at all. I'll be tried by my Lord E."

The simplicity of the woman, coupled with the well known character of E., caused a roar of laughter in the court which even the bench could not resist.

Baron S., with his usual mildness, was about to explain the impossibility of her being tried by the popular judge and said, "He can't try you," when the woman stopped him short and, with an inimitable sneer, exclaimed:

"Can't try me? I beg your pardon, my lord; he tried me twice before."

She was tried, however, and for the third time acquitted.

Where Time Is Nothing.

Miss Mary E. Dunham in her book of travels through the Balkan states says she found that the idea of women traveling without a male escort in those countries struck the people whom she met as most singular. A Montenegrin was also astonished at an expenditure of money upon travel which seemed to him without an adequate purpose.

The English, he had been told, wanted to see and know everything. They traveled everywhere. It must be a very expensive habit. It had perhaps cost me £8, he suggested, to come this distance. I admitted that it had, and he expressed great astonishment at the lavish expenditure.

"And it takes not only money, but time," said my companion.

He laughed merrily. "Time! What is time? Time is nothing. You live, and then you die." The idea of reckoning "time" amused him vastly.

"Time," said a Hungarian who was of the party, in order to show his superior knowledge, "is thought very much of by the English. I have been told that they have a proverb which says, 'Time is money.'"

We corroborated this report, to the astonishment of both men, for even the Hungarian thought this was going rather far. The Montenegrin thought it one of the wildest statements he had ever met with and shook his puzzled head.

THE KIDNEYS are DELICATE

EASILY AFFECTED BY CHANGES OF TEMPERATURE.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Not even are the lungs more susceptible to the effect of cold drafts, of overheating, of dampness or cold than the kidneys.

This accounts for workingmen so frequently becoming victims of painful and deadly kidney diseases.

Pains in the back are usually the first note of warning. Then there is frequent and painful or smarting urination, headache and derangements of the digestive system and bowels.

..IF YOU WOULD PREVENT BRIGHT'S DISEASE AND OTHER DEADLY FORMS OF KIDNEY DISEASE YOU MUST ACT QUICKLY.

To be certain of immediately arresting disease and bringing about a thorough cure, you must use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which have so many times proven their superiority as a treatment for the most serious diseases of the kidneys.

By acting on the liver and bowels, as well as on the kidneys, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills effect a thorough cleansing of the whole filtering and excretory systems and entirely rid the body of all poisonous waste matter.

..MR. JAMES J. JENSON, Olds, Alta., N. W. T., writes:

"I have been troubled considerably with lame back, which I suppose came from derangements of the kidneys, and I have never been able to find a treatment that was so prompt and effective in curing this ailment as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. At two different times in my life this preparation has entirely cured me of this trouble, and of late years I have found it unnecessary to use any medicine whatever. I feel it my duty to add this statement to the many others which I see in recommendation of this excellent medicine."

Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills are so thorough and far-reaching in their influence on the kidneys as to thoroughly eradicate the most serious disease. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

A LOOK AT OUR PROGRESS.

We will soon be closing another year, and again as we, the citizens of Assiniboia, the farmers of the West, balance our books for another season we can look around us and see and feel prosperity; we know that we are better off than we were a year ago, and those of us who have been in the West since its youth know that its growth and progress are substantial.

The pioneers who came to the wheat belt of Western Canada made a choice of two propositions when they decided to farm; to select the highly advertised lands of the Dakotas and Minnesota, or come to the less advertised territory of Manitoba and Assiniboia. Were they wise in their selection? Let us look at results.

The Blue Book for the ten years '91-'01 gives the average yield per acre of 12.07 bus. in N. Dakota and 10.04 bus. in S. Dakota, with an average of all Western States of 12 bushels. The Canadian Blue Book is authority for the figures that cover the same period of years (91-'01) in the Canadian West the average yield was 17.07 bushels. These quotations give us a feeling of satisfaction when we look backward for a decade and realize that we are about 40 per cent wealthier each year than our cousins across the line. Even this year, which has made so much dissatisfaction owing to the disparity in prices caused by the crop failure in the United States with the rust blight, our returns per acre are more than if we were farming in Uncle Sam's land. Our average of 17½ bushels at 80 cents would be $14 per acre; Northern States average of 12 bus. at 96 cents would be $11.52 per acre. The amount is not very large, only $250 on a 150-acre crop, but it is a nice nest egg, and though our prices have to be governed by British markets, and the scarcity of milling wheat across the border makes a local market which can call flour at $3.45 per hundred, while we buy our flour for $2.20.

We have our drawbacks in this country, but we also have substantial advantages. Let us then be loyal to our country. Push it along in every way that is going to benefit those who reside here and the prosperity will continue.—[Gainsborough Post.

He'll Get the Cream.

"I'm engaged in the dairy business now," said the lawyer.

"You don't say," exclaimed his friend, the doctor.

"Fact," rejoined the legal light. "I'm milking an estate."

THE LAST BUFFALO HUNT ON THE SOURIS PLAINS

(Walpole Murdoch, Hartney, in Winnipeg Free Press.)

The last great buffalo hunt enjoyed in the west took place forty years ago and nearly all the half breed population then in Manitoba engaged in the chase. Some of those who took part in that wild raid on the buffalo are now residing in Alberta and delight to recall the remembrance of the great hunt with the various adventures connected with the occasion. In the fall of 1864 the buffaloes had congregated in immense numbers, south of the Turtle mountains on the great plains east of the Souris river. The hunting party was large and consisted of men, women and children, with nearly a thousand carts and hundreds of Indian ponies. As the hostile Sioux were abroad the party had to keep well together while outriders were stationed at different points for the purpose of watching the movements of the buffalo herds and to give notice if danger should appear.

The buffalo hunter of the plains possessed a peculiar character; he was a skilful rider, a good shot, hardy, strong and watchful and courageous. He usually rode a horse possessed of speed, strength and wind. Like his master, the horse enjoyed the excitement of the chase and would strain every nerve to bring his master alongside of the buffalo. In those days the buffalo hunter was usually armed with a smooth bore muzzle loading gun. His supply of powder was contained in a horn that hung from the shoulders by a strap. The hunter kept several bullets in his mouth for the sake of expedition in loading. When a drove of buffalo were to be approached the advance was made by hunters in the greatest of silence, the leader of the party a little in advance, his chief duty was that of restraining the impetuosity of the more impatient hunters and get his band as near the buffaloes as possible. At length when the buffaloes commenced to move, the uneasiness would increase and the herd started, the leader would shout and then every horse would spring forward. All had to start, for no horse could be restrained; bridles were let go, guns were brought into position and the wild cavalry bore down on the flying herd. After the first shots had been delivered, the hunter loaded his gun while his horse was at full speed and in firing care was taken not to raise the breach higher than the muzzle lest the ball should roll out, but, as the rider was generally only a few feet from the animal that he wished to shoot there was no such need to raise the gun to the shoulder. Sometimes a single hunter would shoot four or five buffaloes during the chase made on a good herd. The larger the drove the better chance there was for the hunter as the animals in advance retarded the progress of those in the rear where the attack was taking place. Cows and young bulls were not killed unless by accident or when game was scarce. On the occasion of the great hunt the carts were loaded with pemmican, tongues and skins of buffaloes. When a hunter had dropped a buffalo at some distance from his companions, or from camp, the horse was tied to the head of the animal while its master was engaged in skinning the beast that had been captured. During the continuance of the great hunt on the Souris plains which lasted for many weeks, the food of the hunters was meat and nothing else. The next season the buffalo herds had moved far to the west and never again returned in great numbers so near the Red river.

PRIMITIVE BOOKS.

How They Were Made by the Ancient Battaks of Sumatra.

A near approach to the form of a modern book was made by an obscure people called the Battaks, who in olden days inhabited the island of Sumatra. They invented, or adopted from some unknown source, a form of book consisting of a long strip of bark five or six inches wide and closely resembling a piece of Egyptian papyrus.

They seem to have taken a distinct step forward in the bookmaking art, for instead of rolling their strips of bark in Egyptian fashion they folded them into accordion plaits, so that they took exactly the form of modern books with uncut leaves.

Wooden covers were then put on either side, and the whole was sometimes bound together with a piece of snakeskin. Had the Battak scribe gone one step further by cutting the leaves and writing on both sides the result would have been an exact prototype of a modern book.

The Hindoos used a palm leaf two or three inches wide, cut in sections and dried. Each section may be compared with the leaf of a book, and they were piled up in sequence or perforated and strung together like a venetian blind.

WHERE UNCLES RULE.

Peculiar Custom That Prevails In Northern Australia.

Uncles rule among the native tribes bordering Torres strait, where the relationship between maternal uncle and nephew is regarded as being closer than that between father and son. There a man is bound to stop fighting when ordered to do so by his mother's brother, and the uncle is entitled to bid his sister's husband cease any hostilities in which he may be engaged. Moreover, the quelled combatant is required to make a present to the uncle or brother-in-law, as the case may be, who stops him.

When a man marries in these parts his father provides the wherewithal to purchase the bride, but it is the maternal uncle who makes the actual payment and who acquires the credit attached thereto.

A man in those parts may not utter the names of his wife's relations, and when he speaks to his father or mother-in-law he must lower his voice and speak humbly, the underlying idea being probably a pretense that he has carried his spouse away forcibly from her home and must sue for peace.

ANCIENT STENOGRAPHY.

Shorthand Was In Use as Early as the Third Century.

Shorthand was known to the ancients, though it is impossible to trace the system to its source.

Ennius, the Roman poet, is said to have improved upon an already existing system. He was a friend of Scipio and was born 239 B. C. Seneca also made it a hobby.

Origen, the Greek father and mystic, who was born about 186 and was a voluminous writer, says, in the course of his commentary on St. John, "The absence of my shorthand writers prevents me from dictating my meditations." We are told, too, that he allowed shorthand writers to take down his extempore homilies.

In the tenth century Greek and Roman stenography gradually died out, and the art did not revive until the beginning of the seventeenth century. During this long interval several systems of quick writing were evolved, such as that of Dr. Timothy Bright in 1588, who had a separate sign for every word, and some of these almost rivaled shorthand in rapidity.

The Kicker's Trademark.

In the English hunting field it is the custom to mark kicking horses by tying a piece of red ribbon around their tails. Experienced hunters are on the careful lookout for all such animals, and should it happen that the steeds are running close to one another the equine with the ribbon bedecked tail is given a wide berth, as it is more than probable that it will lash out with its hind legs to the serious disadvantage of its neighbors. In the excitement of the chase horses almost lose their heads, and an animal that naturally is not in any way vicious or inclined to be bad tempered will do the most unexpected things in the way of kicking, rearing and biting.—London Telegraph.

The Coy Widow.

"I think," declared the little daughter of the widow to the millionaire who was calling, "that you are a charming and delightful man."

"How nice! What makes you say so?"

"Mamma told me to."

Faith.

Speaking of a man who fell in love with his mother-in-law and finally eloped with her, Brother Dickey said, "Well, suh, dat man had de faith dat would advertise fer a lost umbreller!"

He Echoes a Statement Made by Thousands of the People of the Prairies.

Giroux, Man., Dec. 26.—(Special.)—Mr. Philias Normandeau, a well known resident of this place, is one of thousands of Manitobans who have found relief from the pains and aches of Kidney Disease in Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Normandeau is always ready to say a good word for the remedy that brought back his health.

"Yes, I can tell you Dodd's Kidney Pills made a cure of me," he says, "I had Kidney Disease for three years. At times I got so bad I could hardly attend to my work. I took just five boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and my pains and aches are all gone, and I can work as well as anybody. To anybody who has trouble with their Kidneys all I can say is "use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure sick Kidneys. With well Kidneys you can't have Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Rheumatism, Dropsy or any of those other fearful and fatal diseases that spring from sick Kidneys.

The Oldest Living Twins.

Scotland claims to have the oldest living twins in the world. It had been reported that the brothers Benham of Bridgeport, Conn., who are eighty-seven years old, were entitled to that distinction. Scotland's aged pair are Thomas A. and George Hill Melville of Fife. They are in their ninety-fifth year. George is the frailer of the two and has been totally blind for the last seven years. A year or two ago, too, he was unfortunate enough to break his leg, and he is permanently confined to bed.

GOOD DOMESTIC COAL.

The best domestic coal mined in B. C. today is being taken out of No. 4 mine, Carbonado. This coal is a semi-anthracite and contains 80 per cent. pure carbon. The Coal company is giving particular attention to this seam with the intention of working up a large domestic trade with it. The coal from this mine is all hand picked and it is giving the best of satisfaction for domestic purposes It is better domestic coal than any yet found at Coal Creek, and no doubt it will soon find its way to the Fernie market.

SENT UP FOR TRIAL:

John Gibbs, who was arrested last week on the charge of rape, was tried on Tuesday and Wednesday before Stipendiary Magistrate Whimster. Mr. Hechmer appeared for the prosecution and Mrr. Eckstein for the accused. The chief evidence was supplied by the 13-year-old girl who laid the charge. Her evidence was clear and simple. The defence called no witnesses, and the accused, when asked if he had anything to say, replied that he was innocent but would say nothing more for the present The magistrate committed the accused for trial at Nelson. The case was heard behind closed doors.

HUMOR

JUST LIKE A WOMAN.

A Short Story of How Some Ladies Are Robbed.

"Half the thefts that women charge to pickpockets," said the reformed burglar, "are not thefts at all, but simply cases of loss from their own carelessness. Don't tell them that I said so, though, for I've had enough blame to bear in my day, but that's the truth. If a woman goes home and makes a hullabaloo about being robbed she gets more sympathy, but let her say she lost her money and she has to shoulder the whole responsibility and be found fault with into the bargain."

"But what becomes of the pocketbooks and purses? They are not going off of themselves."

"Their owners lose them without knowing it. They lay them down or drop them and they are picked up by somebody who doesn't run round looking for the person they belong to. Here is a case in point: A woman seated herself before a bargain counter piled with remnants of silk. After turning over a few pieces she felt something fall into her lap and picked up a fat leather pocketbook.

"'Hello,' she says. 'Here's a purse. It looks as if it had a lot of money in it.' And she handed it to the clerk, who laid it on a shelf back of him and said he would send it to the lost and found department.

"When that woman had found the goods she wanted and went to take her pocketbook out of her reticule it wasn't there, and you ought to have heard her squeal. She declared she had it when she sat down to the counter. But it was gone sure enough.

"A store detective was sent for, and he asked her a few questions. He was a friend of mine and told me the story. Then he asked to see the purse she had found, and it turned out to be her own. She had laid it down the first thing, and when it fell into her lap she was so surprised she didn't recognize it.

"And I really think that she hated to admit that she hadn't been robbed."

A Marine Memory.

I shipped an awful bad crew one time, although they tried hard to do their work and was very well behaved. Thinks I to myself, these chaps ain't sailors; they've chosen the wrong road in life. Mebbe there is among 'em them that could 'a' been great—as, for instance, writers. I had bought four new novels to read durin' the v'age. I read 'em. Then, thinks I, the fellers that I ought to got to sail my ship are them that wrote these books, whether the men I have got to sail it are the men that ought to wrote these books or not.—Judge.

His Only Comment.

"According to this paper," remarked Mrs. Gabbleton, "the average person's vocabulary is only 2,500 words."

"Considering the number of times you use your entire vocabulary daily," rejoined Mr. Gabbleton, "I'm surprised that you haven't worn it out long ago."

So Delicate.

"That's Mrs. Marrimuch, the society leader," explained the man who knew.

"My, you don't say!" replied the plebeian. "She's in half mourning, isn't she?"

"Yes. You see, three of her six husbands are dead."

The Professor.

The professor was watching a man who was cleaning the brass globe of the flagstaff on top of a skyscraper.

"Well," he observed, "if I were as near heaven as that I should feel dangerously near the other place."

On to the Horse.

"Pop."

"Yes, my son."

"Who was Centaur?"

"Centaur, my son, was a man who never got stuck on a horse trade; he was on to the horse."

A Frank Tribute.

"She is beautiful," said the studious girl, "but she is not accomplished."

"My dear," answered Miss Cayenne, "there is no accomplishment more difficult than being beautiful."

'Twould Be a Shame.

"Sir, I t'anks yer kindly fer yer generosity."

"But I haven't given you anything."

"Well, yer ain't goin' ter let me gratitude go ter waste, is yer?"

Cause For Gloom.

"He made a lot of money in that deal and yet he looks glum."

"Yes, his wife found out in some way just how much he made."—Philadelphia Press.

UNLUCKY SHIPS' NAMES.

Those of the Snake Family Seem to Be Unfortunate.

If one should be so bold as to characterize the superstitious sailor as silly he would at once declare that there is sufficient reason for his belief and would proceed to prove that war vessels named after stinging and venomous things have been unlucky and that the country should not be so indifferent to the men who follow "a life on the ocean wave" as to organize a mosquito fleet

That Snake is regarded as an unfortunate name for a vessel is shown by the fact that two of that name have been lost, one in 1781 and the other in 1847, but no vessel bearing that name is now known to exist. Serpent, which is only a substitute name for snake, is an unlucky one also, for the one wrecked in 1892 was the fourth British war vessel of that name to meet the same fate. Viper has been an unlucky name in the British Navy. The first one was wrecked in 1780, but the Admiralty would not swerve, and so kept the name on the list, each vessel meeting its doom, and the fourth was lost only recently The French Navy has also been unlucky with vessels so named. The Viper, used in the British service after she became a prize from the French was lost in 1793. The second was lost a year later, the third in 1797 and the fourth was recently lost in a collision off Guernsey.

The Cobra, another British war vessel, was lost recently at the same time as the Viper. Among other vessels similarly named and which met fates other than in battle are the Rattlesnake, in 1781; the Alligator, in 1782; the Crocodile, in 1784; the Adder in 1846; three Lizards, two Dragons and one Basilisk. All of these were of the British Navy. The list could be made larger by citing the records of other navies.

Literature in Life.

Mrs. Cutter's address on the influence of literature in life before the Toronto Round Table Club was a noble effort, as may be judged by the following short excerpt:

"Truth is within ourselves. It takes no rise from outer things, whate'er you may believe." In the life of the flesh it must either be enthralled or enthroned. When the material consciousness held sway the inner voice was unheard. In the life of the flesh cheap whiskey or terrapin and champagne equally silenced the spiritual voice and dulled the senses of finer enjoyments. Nothing was so practical as the spirit, the solvent of all that was false, the fusing of all that was true.

It was as reminders of this inner life that the outer world was of value. The function of great literature was to keep us in remembrance, and Mrs. Browning had called the poets the only truth-tellers left to God. The mission of art was to quicken the spiritual life by indication; in art, the literary form was most easily comprehended. Reverential association with a few great writers tended to cultivate the spiritual nature and was a means of spiritual exercise and nourishment. Such cultivation did not depend on the scholar's knowledge. All sincere fancy moved in true relation to the real.

The Psychology of Vanity.

A French scientist, M. Camille Melinard, discusses in La Revue (Paris) the psychological aspects of vanity, which, he declares, is the desire for praise become all powerful. Vanity in the beginning, he declares, is more a caprice than a vice, but vices may arise out of it. He discusses vanity of dress, of manners and of intellect. To prevent the development of vanity, he says, we should begin very early with the child. In fact it is we who make the child vain by the misuse of praise, comparisons with companions, too much admiration; also by raillery, which may cause the child much suffering and teach him to fear criticism, There is too much appeal to amour propre, and there are too many competitions and prizes which may stimulate energy, but require very prudent use. It would be better to compare the scholar with himself. To work to be the first need not be bad, but to work for the joy of working and learning is much better and less exciting. Finally, let us remember that the advantages we boast of have little value in themselves; all depends on the use we make of them. The only quality of which we can never be vain is justice.

POPE AIDS WAR ON DIVORCE.

A cablegram from Rome says that Pope Pius counsels all Catholic journals to adopt a sympathetic attitude toward the new movement in the Anglican Church to restrict the obtaining of divorces. His holiness urges that the general effect of convincing mankind of the necessity for a law maintaining the indissolubility of the marriage tie would be greatly to promote the happiness of the human race.

CANADIAN NEWS

Canadian Wheat Makes Trouble.

A despatch from Washington, D. C., says: Secretary of the United States Treasury Shaw, a few days ago, conferred with representatives of leading flour milling interests regarding the proposed regulations allowing a drawback on exported flour made in part from imported wheat. Afterward the secretary stated that the only proposition over which any controversy has arisen relates to the manufacture of flour composed in part of Canadian and in part of home grown wheat. This has not yet been passed on. The legal phase involves the same question, however, as has been passed on in a number of other manufactures. For instance, a drawback has been allowed on steel rails manufactured of American ore, and imported manganese. A drawback also has been allowed on paper manufactured in part from Canadian pulp and in part from American pulp as well as on similar manufactures composed in part of imported, and in part of domestic material.

"If the application for a drawback on flour from mixed wheat is allowed," the secretary says, "regulations will be so drawn as to insure the payment of duty on every bushel of Canadian wheat that comes in, and the drawback will be allowed only on flour actually exported.

"The importance of the subject will be appreciated when it is known that during October, 1903, 1,000,000 barrels of American made flour were exported, and in October, 1904, less than 800,000 barrels. In other words, the exportation of American made flour has fallen during the present season more than one-half Two mills are being built in London, each with a capacity of four thousand barrels a day. Similar mills are being built at Belfast and other places.

"Canadian mills regularly sell flour for export in the New York city market, and it is then sent through the United States in bond, and exported from New York. It might as well be ground at Minneapolis as elsewhere in the United States, thereby holding the trade until conditions change. If the trade passes from the American mill to the European mill, the injury to the farmer of the Northwest will be past calculation. To-day the price of American wheat is about 16 cents above that of Canada. The millers are only asking what the law permits, and the law question has been submitted to the Attorney-General.

Petroleum in Edmonton County.

There is considerable excitement in real estate in the vicinity of Egg Lake, north of Morinville. Mr. Williams is securing options on all farms in the vicinity at an average price of $2,000 per quarter section, which is considerably above present value for farming purposes. He pays small amounts down and has an arrangement about the balance. The object of the purchase is given out as the establishment of a large ranch, but residents are of the opinion that the reason is the presence of petroleum indications in the vicinity. These indications have been known for many years, and some attempt at development have been made without success. On strength of these old indications the C. P. R. have reserved several sections of their land in the vicinity for sale, and so far as the public are aware it is reserved still. The indications are that streaks of mineral tar are showing at the surface. This tar was analyzed by the Government analyst at Ottawa and pronounced to be an evidence of the presence of petroleum.

Good Market in Mexico for Canada.

A report has been received at the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa from Lucien J. Jerome, British Consul for Mexico, with reference to the trade requirements of that country. He is of the opinion that there is a good market in Mexico for Canadian products, such as agricultural machinery, lumber, dairy produce and canned fish. "Drummers visiting Mexico," says the consul, "must not be deterred by modest exteriors and the absence of fixtures to the mercantile offices of this country, some of the most important houses keeping up old Spanish traditions of simplicity and studied avoidance of display."

Pulp Mills Short of Raw Material.

A serious condition of affairs confronts this and other parts of Canada, says a despatch from Ottawa. The early melting of the snows last spring, causing such a rapid rush of water, brought all the big saw logs down in pretty good shape, but the water in the streams and creeks fell so rapidly that hundreds of thousands of pulp logs were left high and dry. The owners of the pulp mills have been making every effort to get these out, but the recent severe cold snap quickly froze up the shallow streams, and it is just a question whether many of the mills may not have to close down for the winter.

Canadian Engines Do Best Work.

Cornelius Birmingham, managing director of the Kingston Locomotive Works, returned to Kingston from Montreal on Saturday, with an order for ten mogul engines for the Canadian Pacific Railway company. The engines will be completed during the next ten months. Mr. Birmingham could have had the order doubled, but could not turn out the finished article as soon as desired. The company said its Kingston-made engines were doing better work and giving better satisfaction than their American competitors.

The burning to death of their three-year-old daughter and 22-months old infant, and the nine-year-old son so badly that he can hardly pass the day, is the awful tragedy of a fire which levelled the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Plante at Montmorency Falls, Que. The boy and infant were saved from the burning building, the latter dying after suffering indescribable agony. The remains of the daughter were taken from the mass of ruins in a charred state and unrecognizable.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS IN BRIEF.

Col. Lord Aylmer has been appointed Inspector-General of the Canadian forces.

Walter Jones was arrested at Berlin, Ont., on Monday, on suspicion of arson, three fires having occurred there since Thursday.

The vote was taken at Iroquois, Ont., on Saturday on the local option bylaw, which was defeated by five votes, the vote standing 126 against to 121 for.

At Toronto, a few days ago, T. W. Gibson reports that the silver mines at Haileybury are beginning to give good returns. One car of cobalt ore realized $37,500, or an average of $1 per pound of ore.

The new club house of the Western Ontario Commercial Travellers' Club was opened Saturday night at London, Ont. The club house is on Richmond street, and the interior is very handsome.

Mrs. John Campbell, widow of late Prof. Campbell, of Montreal Presbyterian College, has been appointed superintendent of women's residence in connection with Toronto University. Mrs. Wm. MacKenzie will furnish the dining room.

A gang of desperate men, operating in Cape Breton, have committed a number of burglaries, says a despatch from Sydney, N.S. A holdup took place Saturday night at Broughton, when two armed men secured all the cash in Simon Landry's store.

Canada and the United States have decided upon an International Commission to investigate and report upon all waterways adjacent to the international boundary, so as to settle all disputes as to commercial shipping and avoid international disputes.

Miss Campbell, of Galt, who was knocked down by a runaway team at Toronto Friday night, died a few hours after being taken to the general hospital.

Jacob Obenesser, proprietor of the Albion hotel, London, was fined $250 and bound over in the sum of $4,000 to keep the peace for one year. He was given the potion of six months' imprisonment, but the money was paid on the spot. Obernesser's offense was an assault upon W. F. A. Best.

The amalgamation of the four leading cotton companies in Canada has been announced with a capital of $10,000,000. The companies affected are: the Dominion Cotton Company, the Merchants Cotton Company and the Colonial Bleaching Company. The object of the amalgamation is the reduction of expenses and the stopping of the cutting of rates.

Accidental Shot Kills Brandon Boy.

Willie Winteringham, the 17-year-old son of V. Winteringham, a prominent farmer of the Poplar Hill district, says a despatch from Brandon, was fatally shot on Wednesday evening by the accidental discharge of his rifle, while out rabbit hunting. The victim, along with a companion, was driving in a buggy, the rifle being placed with the butt against the dashboard, and the muzzle pointing toward young Winteringham. By some unaccountable reason the weapon was discharged, the bullet entering Winteringham's right side, coming out on the left side just above the hip. The unfortunate young man was taken to the hospital at Brandon, where he died late that night.

WAR NEWS

JAPANESE PREPARE ATTACK ON UNEQUALLED SCALE.

Besiegers Will Either Succeed or Suffer Heavy Disaster

The correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph at Chefoo telegraphs as follows: The Japanese are making strong forts daily around Port Arthur. An attack is now preparing that will be on a hitherto unequalled scale, and it will mean either success or terrible disaster to the besiegers.

The Daily Telegraph correspondent adds that the steamer Lady Mitchell with supplies, ammunition and dynamite, reached Port Arthur in a snow storm four nights ago.

The Japanese are said to have evacuated Etz Mountain fort, owing to a flanking movement from the other forts and the explosion of Russian mines, from which they lost heavily.

Sunken Squadron.

A cablegram from St. Petersburg states that, while declining to give details, the admiralty admits that Russian advices from Port Arthur, sent by General Stoessel, substantially confirmed the Japanese advices of the partial wrecking of the Russian ships in the harbor, and the censor has been instructed to permit the publication of the dispatches. It is claimed that several of the larger ships and a respectable number of torpedo-boat destroyers are still seaworthy, but that they are not considered as a factor in the coming fight between Admiral Togo's ships and the Russian second Pacific squadron.

Raise the Ships

If the fortress is relieved it is believed that most of the ships will be raised and saved. The reports that a Japanese squadron of forty vessels has already sailed to meet the second Pacific squadron is regarded at the admiralty headquarters at St. Petersburg as being incorrect and circulated for a purpose.

Trophies of Victory

TOKIO, Dec. 21.—Port Arthur army headquarters reports our trophies at the battle of the north fort of East Keekewan mountain were four quick firers, two of which are usable; four machine guns, all usable; and five field guns which are under examination, besides rifles, shells, ammunition, grenades, etc.

THE HUMOR OF JAPAN

JOKES THAT AMUSE THE NATIVES OF DAI NIPPON.

Some Samples of Their Characteristic Funny Stories—The Doctor Who Didn't Fear Burglars—The Writing Critic Who Couldn't Write.

In a review of a collection of funny stories called "Kokkei Hyaku Showa" by Mr. Kubo Tendzui the Japan Weekly Mail quotes the following as being peculiarly characteristic of Japanese humor:

A certain government official who in olden times used to be called a "daikwan," but now is known as a "guncho" (head of a district), having been recently appointed to a certain district, was engaged in a tour of inspection when his notice was attracted by the approach of an old man who was too tipsy to walk straight.

Wondering who the intoxicated man could be, the district officer accosted him and after much difficulty ascertained that he was the head of the village which he had come to inspect. Thinking it to be his duty to make use of the occasion for obtaining reliable information, the district officer asked the toper how many houses and how many people there were in the village. "There are 100 houses and, males and females included, 60 persons in the village," replied the man. Puzzled, the officer asked, "How can that be?" "There is nothing wrong about that," replied the head of the village. "Besides these sixty there are any amount of people in the village, but since they are creatures who know not what it is to drink they are not, I take it, worthy of being mentioned."

Once upon a time it happened that five or six burglars, armed with swords and shouting like men attacking an enemy on the battlefield, came bouncing into the house of a certain doctor. The whole household, with the exception of the master, were paralyzed. They felt as though iron chains had been placed around them, and not one of them moved hand or foot. They watched in terror to see what would happen, when, lo and behold, the robbers took their departure without stealing a thing. Though they could not tell what was the meaning of this strange proceeding, certain it was that the family was safe. But where was the head of the house? After searching through the rooms they found him in his dispensary. There he stood in the midst of the drugs, medicine spoon in hand, looking fierce and triumphant. "What are you doing here?" inquired one of the members of his household. Smiling, he replied: "Those robbers were perhaps as noted as Kumasaka Chohan, but they may thank their stars that they have got off with their lives! Had they pushed matters a little further and entered this dispensary not one of them would have left it alive." Amused by this remark, one of the members of the family rejoined: "Without a sword or a pistol how could you have killed these robbers? Can you kill robbers with a spoon?" Whereupon the doctor, with fine self assurance, replied: "How many thousands of lives have I taken by means of this spoon! What to me are the lives of five or six robbers? Lucky chaps to get off as they did!"

The son of an extremely illiterate peasant was in the habit of bringing his copies home day after day, his hands and face covered with the ink that should have gone on his copy. Thinking it well to exercise his paternal authority over the lad even in regard to his school lessons, the father one day commanded the boy to show him his writing. Looking it over with the air of an expert penman, he criticised various strokes: "This stroke is too long; this one too short. These two strokes are too far apart," observed the father.

"But," said the boy, "the writing master tells us to write them as I have done." "Show me the copy," jerked out the father. The boy produced the copy, which his father began to examine closely upside down. "Why, you are holding it upside down!" exclaimed the lad. Not to be beaten, the father replied: "Don't be so conceited! I am holding it for you to look at, of course. You could not read it were it turned the other way. Listen to what is said to you and don't fancy you know everything."

The above reminds us of a story that concerns Taira Kiyomori. It is related that in the time of the Heiji rebellion the rebels attacked Kiyomori's camp very suddenly one day. Losing his presence of mind, Kiyomori put on his armor in a great hurry, the back part front. Some persons near pointed out the mistake he had made. "You have put your armor on the wrong way," they exclaimed. "It is not so," calmly answered Kiyomori. "As the emperor is coming behind I have put on the armor so as to have the front part facing him. It would be impolite to have the back part of one's armor facing an emperor." Without altering it he went out to battle.

The term "yabu" is applied to doctors who prescribe wrong medicines. Now, it happened once that a quack having been the means of killing the only son of a certain house, the parents determined to have their revenge on him. So they sued him at a court of law. The affair was eventually patched up by the worthy quack giving the bereaved parents his own son in return for the one he had killed. Not long after this event the said quack heard a loud knocking at his door one night. On going to the door he was informed that one of his neighbor's wives was dangerously ill and that his presence was required at once. Turning to his wife, he said: "This requires consideration, my dear. There is no knowing but that it may end in our taking you from me."

FEATHERED MIMICS.

Ostriches Roar Like Lions and Jays Are Great Imitators.

"The roar of the ostrich resembles the roar of the lion because the ostrich stole from the lion this sound, even as one playwright steals from another a plot."

An ornithologist made that odd assertion in a taxidermist's shop. He went on to elaborate it as follows:

"Birds from the ostrich down are imitative. The ostrich where he lives alone is silent, but in a country where lions abound he roars. Why? Because for centuries, admiring the majesty and grandeur of the lion's roar, he gradually learned to roar himself. Believe me, it is fine to see an ostrich throw back his little head and emit a roar like thunder.

"Buntings imitate pipits, and greenfinches imitate yellowhammers. They seek their food in the winter together, and they gradually steal each other's call.

"The jay is an insatiable imitator. Some jays will include in their repertory not only the whoo-oo of the kite, the scream of the buzzard and the hoot of the owl, but also the bleat of the lamb and the neigh of a horse.

"Even the nightingale imitates. In a nightingale's perfect song I have often heard the tip-sip-sisisis of the wood warbler and the bub-ub-ubble of the nuthatch."

PROPER BREATHING.

Use the Nostrils, Not the Mouth, and Take Deep Inhalations.

Did you ever observe whether you breathe through the mouth or nostrils? It makes a wonderful difference. When we talk we are forced to breathe through the mouth, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. When not speaking the lips should be well closed, and the breathing should be entirely by the nostrils, but this is not all. The habit of slow, measured, deep breathing that covers the entire lung surface is of more value and importance than you will ever believe until you have tried it, and when you have established the habit of breathing in this manner you will say some remarkable things in its favor. It will reach all points of your physical system. All the benefits that occur from a healthy condition of the blood will in a greater or less degree be yours, for the manner and completeness with which the inhaled air comes in contact with the blood in the lungs are of the utmost importance to every vital process. The lungs are a kind of furnace, in which the oxygen of the air is consumed and combined with other elements, a process necessary to life, the perfection of which depends upon the purity of the air and the manner of inhaling it.

CANDLE AUCTIONS.

The Way Public Sales Were Formerly Conducted In England.

Candle auction was a well known method of procedure in England in the early days of the East India company. Public notices of such sales were first put up at the royal exchange. When the day came a candle exactly an inch long was placed on the auctioneer's desk. Directly the sale began the candle was lighted. So long as it continued to burn bidding went on merrily, but the instant the flame died away the goods were knocked down to the last bidder.

In this manner immense consignments of silks, indigo, spices and so forth were disposed of, thousands of pounds changing hands during the burning of the inch of candle.

Before the auction began a list was read over of the names of persons not permitted "to bid at the candle." This contained the names of those who had failed to pay their debts or had in any way wronged the company, who "blacklisted" them in consequence.

Wakwak Were Birds of Paradise.

Readers of "The Thousand and One Nights" will remember the islands of Wakwak and the marvelous adventures of Hassan of Balsora and the princess with the dress of feathers. Dr. Alfred Russel Wallace suggests that the islands were real and that they can be identified with the Aru islands, the home of the great bird of paradise.

The name "Wakwak," he thinks, may be an imitation of the call of the birds, and the story of Hassan's visit to the islands of Wakwak may be based on the actual adventures of some traveler who discovered the haunts of the birds of paradise.—Youth's Companion.

Two of a Kind.

"Yes," said the young drug clerk who had been trotting in double harness for nearly two weeks, "I've got a boss wife."

"Well, you have my sympathy," rejoined the man who had come in to buy a bottle of hair restorer. "I've got that kind of a wife too."

Kept Him Guessing.

"Suppose I were to tell you you must not go to the matinee today," said Mr. Naggit. "How would you like that?"

"Oh," ambiguously replied his young wife, with a steely glitter in her eye, "I wouldn't mind."

He Wanted Action.

Investment Broker—What you want, I presume, is something that pays large dividends. Prospective Investor—No, I don't care about the size of the dividends just so I get 'em often enough. I'm no hog.
