TORONTO, FRIDAY, AUGUST 11, 1876.

THE NEWSPAPER TRAIN.

UPON Thursday week morning the Toronto organs of the Government announced their intention of making a "big push" to stem that tide of Conservative reaction which threatens the political existence of its chief paymaster—ALEXANDER MACKENZIE. In the East the gains were up; the Ontario had given no uncertain sound, and even in Glengarry the "passing bell" had been heard. The "big push" had therefore to be made in the West, and Senator GEORGE BROWN orders the Great Western Railway Company to furnish him a special train at 5 a.m. on Monday, August 7th, to connect at Hamilton with a local train which he had furnished the Company to run between Hamilton and London, leaving the former city at 7 a.m. and reaching London at 10 a.m. Thus, thought he, the Western Peninsula would be made tributary to the Globe office in the matter of news and comment thereon. The "Globe train!" too, would be a big thing, and the advertisement of that special engine would be exactly analogous with the morning parade of Yankee BARNUM's circus through the town in which it is afterwards to be exhibited. The Globe had some hours ahead of it, and would do something to correct the Conservative proclivities of the Forest city. Grit stock, in a word, just now so terribly on the wane downwards, was to be "bulled" by the Laird of Bow Park, and the cost was to be met out of the exchequer of a maternal Government, ever lavish of pap to its favourite children. The announcement is therefore made, and the modus operandi is thus referred to:

"There seemed no way of getting the Globe to Hamilton before nine o'clock in the morning, or one inch beyond it until ten minutes past ten o'clock. One mode of doing the thing there certainly was—but that one seemed so unreasonable, imposed so heavy a burden for one establishment, that we long hesitated to undertake it and strove hard for a reduction."

So far as we know, no other establishment had been asked to join in the "big push" by the would-be and Cæsar suffoca. But the great Grit despot was not to have things all his own way. For as soon as the conductors of The Mail had learned of his "unreasonable" intentions, they had recognized the necessity of placing the Conservatives of the Western Peninsula at no disadvantage compared with their Grit fellow-citizens, and at half-past three on the Wednesday afternoon, sixteen hours before anybody read the Globe's article of Thursday, another special train was ordered at the Great Western Manager's office to carry the Toronto Mail to our friends. Well we knew that the good cause suffered nothing in Hamilton, where the enemy's game was watched with the vigilance and a thoroughness incredibly characteristic of a Spectator. Well we knew that the best extra-metropolitan paper of this Province was published in London, and devoted to the interests of the Conservative Party had reached an same of efficiency and popularity whence Senator GEORGE BROWN could not dislodge it. Still it took us not one moment to decide that the Toronto Mail was called into existence to match the Toronto Globe, and that time and place were of the essence of the implied contract which we had with the thousands of our friends who had warmly and consistently patronized us since that day in March, 1872, when our banner was unfurled to the popular breeze. If the war of competition had not strengthened our own finances, we knew the enemy's ship was no better found. And such was the state of the case on Saturday night, every member of our staff ready for the emergency, and all needed business and mechanical arrangements made for the departure of The Mail's special train for Hamilton at 5.10 a.m. on Monday.

We studiously avoided making any great editorial "splurge" over our unwelcome enterprise. We did not feel proud of it. Any edat that might attach to it was fairly our contemporary's. It was an extravagance into precipitated by an act of rash "unreasonableness" on the part of a rival trader in its commodities. No overtures were made to us, certainly none by us; but it appears that on Sunday the Great Western railway and Mr. BROWN came to an understanding, whereby the Company was saved the trouble and perhaps risk of running two specials from Toronto, and both papers were to be placed on the one train leaving the former city at 5.10 a.m. And this Sabbath pact—utterly without The Mail's knowledge or sanction—Time and space compel us to stop short with Mr. BROWN's brother Senator, but we will return with him to this "feast of "reason and flow of soul" another day. Meantime after comparing the parallels he will probably sigh with us, and with us remark on the radical changes which time with office effects even in the constitution of the Party of Purity!

A "REFORM" BANQUET YESTERDAY AND TO-DAY.

Do the leaders of the "Reform" Party ever go into mourning for their sympoisa in the Music Hall with which when they were in Opposition they were wont to celebrate the opening of each session of the Ontario Legislature? We don't suppose they do: postprandial orations are always rosy subjects for sober reflection. But as it is not our duty to supply Mr. BROWN and his following with pleasant pastures, but the very opposite, we propose to take "Reform" banquet which was held in the Music Hall on the 7th December, 1870, and from the pleasant pictures, columns of his journal of the two following days. He was chairman on that occasion, and filled his position admirably. Let him now take the chair again, and listen while we recite some of the speeches and supply the text to his breath with statements of fact relative to the position of the speakers to-day:

1. "There was no lack of interesting walls which were received from Counties and Cities represented. Counties have placed on record their views in the following words: "William Irton Macdonald, Esq., M.P., Bradford." "Bailwin," "Perry," "Cornwall," and "Lafontaine."

2. Mr. Alex. Mackenzie—If there is one principle we hold more sacred than another it is that of maintaining the integrity of the Federal Parliament above all control of the executive.

3. Mr. Alex. Mackenzie—I can ask you to go to some constituencies I could name, where Conservatism has now in power were defeated the very same kind of partizan electioneering.

4. Mr. Alexander Mackenzie—There are no thirteen Ministers at Ottawa to-day. We have a year each, with as many deputies.

5. Mr. David Stirton—To carry out Reform it required Reformers, and until we had a Reform Government we would never get an economical and efficient Government. Cheers; referred to the increase of expenses in the Ottawa Government and especially in the increase in the Department.

1873	134,124
1874	134,500

6. Mr. Brown to Simpson, 1872.—Will you be one?

(b) Simpson refuses to swear that he did not become "one."

(c) Simpson asks the shareholders of his bank to vote against the Government, and then, on his accepting and having office, he is made Minister, he is sent to his constituents, which he carries, "truly the state of our affairs—Provincial and Dominion—calls loudly for Reform.

7. Mr. T. W. Anglin, the representative of the Commons, who contended that the Intermediary between the Crown, received from the Crown, the executive contract for extra. Speaking in connection with the Pacific Scandal, Cheers and laughter, and applause.

8. Ministers engaged in the very worst kind of partizan electioneering the other day. Mr. Mackenzie, in a speech, said he was in power were defeated the very same kind of partizan electioneering.

9. Mr. Alexander Mackenzie—Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Cartwright, and Mr. Blake, of Caledonia, Mr. Mackenzie, Cartwright, and Blake, the sentiment of the Reformers of this country, when under his ministry, was that the Ministers should be arraigned in New York for an offence for which he was never extradited; for an offence which is not in fact an offence, and which is not an offence recognized by international law, and which, holds the same relation to popular sentiment in Great Britain that the act of "Fenianism" does in Canada. Cheers. Bible in Canadian Counties, sent sums to the Conservative cause, and received in return a "Reform" cheque at a holiday in Toronto.

7. Comparative statement of salaries at Ottawa—

1870	$338,007
1871	387,840
1872	448,000
1873	487,534
1874	512,352
1875	112,352

8. Re (the Chairman) relied on the sound thought expression of the people's will and on the purity of the Party itself, for a change of Government. The old Government had sufficient sanctimony to carry them through the elections, if we are not to be deceived by the Government. There are but half of the people that can come down hundreds of miles, we have all done what we possibly could, and we have to ask a very few guarantees to help us. Will you be one? Hear, hear.

9. The Chairman—Mr. Alex. Mackenzie, Mr. Blake, Mr. Cartwright, Mr. Mackenzie, Mr. Blake, Mr. Cartwright, Mr. Mackenzie, Mr. Blake, Mr. Cartwright, Mr
