CANDIDATES HER GAME

A Clever Confidence Woman From Buffalo Is Now in the Toils.

SHE WAS RUN DOWN BY THE WORLD

But the Detectives Failed to Secure the Man Who Worked With Her.

She Told Different Stories to Different Candidates in the Hope of Raising Funds—She Was Followed and Arrested—Mr. H. R. Frankland Could Not Withstand Her Piteous Appeal—How She Tried to Work Messrs. Clarke, Osler, Platt, Coatsworth and Maclean—Mr. Lount Also Describes the Schemers—Did They Play the Badger Game?—Was It Politics or Swindling Pure and Simple—She Appears In Court To-Day.

On Saturday The World unearthed what appears on its face to be a series of the cleverest and most brazen faced confidence games ever worked in Toronto. The chief parties are a man and a woman, from Buffalo, who came here about five weeks ago and apparently took advantage of the election contest to rake in what money they could. It appears that the game was put up by the man and operated by the woman. The scheme was to approach prominent men in the city, especially candidates, with the story that her alleged husband was out of work and that she was in dire need of a few dollars. Strange to say that, with the exception of Mr. John Ross Robertson, the candidates in Toronto were all approached.

The matter was brought to a head on Saturday, when the woman made a third attempt to hoodwink Mr. W. F. Maclean, her story being so fishy that she was followed, with the result that she soon found herself in the sweat-box at Police Headquarters. She admitted attempting the game on other people, with the result that the only man who succumbed to the pitiful story she told was Mr. H. R. Frankland, the defeated candidate in East York.

It appears, also, from further enquiries made by The World, that the "badger game" was also a part of the program of the couple.

The "badger game" is worked in this way: The woman calls on a gentleman and requests a private interview, if possible. If the private interview is granted, in a moment or two the woman screams loudly, whereupon her alleged husband suddenly puts in an appearance and demands hush money.

The detectives say that this game was worked effectually by this couple on a prominent man in Toronto by the woman now in the toils and her male partner, who is still at large.

A full account of the attempts at fraud and the arrest of the woman is given below, together with a series of interviews with gentlemen in Toronto upon whom the confidence game or the badger trick was attempted during the past few days.

Mr. Maclean's Story.

"On Friday afternoon," said Mr. Maclean, "I left The World office for home at 5 o'clock, a thing very unusual for me to do. Five minutes afterwards I was at my home on Bond-street, and as I approached I noticed a man and woman in front of it and looking at the upper windows. Taking no notice of them, however, I entered the gate, but I had not gone up more than two or three steps before the gate was opened and the woman came in sight and asked, 'Are you Mr. Maclean?' I said, 'Yes,' and then she began her tale about her husband being so glad that I had got the seat for East York, and that he had voted for me. She went on in a similar strain for a few seconds, and then led up to a statement that her mother had died that morning, that a telegram had come to her calling her home, that on account of the hot weather the body would not keep, and that she was most anxious to be at the funeral and would like to get $2 towards paying her expenses. To this I replied, 'The mere fact that you have mentioned about your husband being interested in the election is sufficient to prevent my doing anything for you.' The woman persisted in her tale of woe, and was again told that nothing could be done for her under the circumstances. At last, to get rid of her, I said, 'Go down to The World office and tell them what you have got to say there.' I then went into the house and was told by members of my family that the man and woman had been standing in front of the house for some time, that the woman had before that pulled the door bell, that it had not been answered and that the man sent the woman back again, saying, 'That's the house where Mr. Maclean lives; go on in.' As soon as I heard this I telephoned to the office to look out for the woman coming there to borrow $2, and try and find out who she was. She turned up at the office before 6 o'clock, telling her story again, but without avail. One of the reporters watched her get on the street cars."

The Second Call.

On Saturday morning the woman turned up at The World office shortly after 10 o'clock, and at once tackled Mr. Maclean, who was standing behind the counter. He asked what her husband's name was and she said 'Sharp'; that he had been working, and then qualified this by saying he expected to work for the Street Railway Company. She was again told she could get no money from Mr. Maclean, whereupon she departed. She was followed by one of the young men of the office, who saw her take a very devious course on King and other streets, when she was joined by a man who no doubt is the chief actor in the game.

The Clerk's Story.

An employe from The World office followed the woman to the corner of King and Yonge-streets, where she was joined by a young man of medium size, dressed in dark trousers, white double-breasted vest, straw hat, with black band, light silk coat. Together they proceeded to the Bank of Commerce, the man going inside, where he was followed a few minutes later by the woman. Almost immediately they reappeared and retraced their steps to Yonge-street. Then they proceeded down to Front-street, calling at one or two places on the way. In Atkinson's fancy store they remained for about a quarter of an hour, and apparently made some purchases, as they carried parcels in their hands. Along Front-street they went together till they arrived at the market. Here the [illegible] entered Dawson's restaurant and [illegible] after went to the Market Hotel. [illegible] they remained for fully an [illegible] the man came out and re[illegible] Dawson's restaurant. He [illegible] door and looked in. [illegible] to the Market Hotel, [illegible] he [illegible] appeared with the [illegible] again went to the [illegible] mained there 20 minutes [illegible] Dawson's they went acr[illegible] Parvis[illegible]eet, the woman going to Mr. Frankland's, sr.'s, market stall, and the [illegible] to Mr. H. R. Frankland's stall. The [illegible]man stayed talking to Mr. Frankla[illegible] for about 10 minutes. She then walked to the Market Arcade, where the man was awaiting her. Together they walked down the eastern portion of the market to Front-street, where they stood in conversation for a few minutes. Then they returned up the east side of the market, the woman again going into Mr. H. R. Frankland's office, where again she remained 10 or 15 minutes longer. The man here left her and went up Jarvis-street. After leaving Mr. Frankland's stall she proceeded across King-street into Jarvis-street, calling at a Chinese laundry on the way. She walked alone to Queen-street, where the man was awaiting her. Then they proceeded west on Queen-street till they came to McCarron's Hotel, at the corner of Victoria-street. The woman went into the hotel and the man started on the run for Yonge-street. The woman remained in McCarron's Hotel for 10 minutes. Then she reappeared alone and went west on Queen-street, and went into Braun's umbrella shop, where she was arrested.

Senate Reading Room

The Police Put on the Trail.

When Mr. Maclean heard the above story of the movements of the man and woman he informed the police of the matter, and also sent out some of The World reporters to investigate. The result of the communication with the police was that Detective Davis went to Brauns' umbrella shop, where the woman was found, and brought down to Headquarters.

At Police Headquarters she gave her name as Rosie Sharp, stating that she had come from Buffalo with "her man," whom she proclaimed as her husband, five weeks ago. She was unable to tell where she stopped on her arrival by boat, but said she remained two days at an hotel, they having registered there as Edward Sharp and wife. Then they went to furnished rooms somewhere, the place she could not tell. From there they went to Richmond and Simcoe-streets, where they stopped for one night. Then they went to Peter-street, and stopped for a while, and kept changing their address from time to time (with the apparent object of concealing their identity and avoiding suspicion). On Friday night they stopped at 40 Bond-street.

She admitted after a long series of questioning by detectives at Police Headquarters that she had received $2.00 from Mr. Frankland on what pretence she could not explain, although she says she told Frankland the same story that she told Mr. Maclean.

When questioned as to why she came to Toronto, she immediately hedged, and stated that "her man" knew all about it. She admitted going to the home of Mr. Maclean and states that "her man" had told her to call there. She pretended to be unable to tell why she went to Mr. Maclean's house to procure money from him, and couldn't tell why she, a stranger, knew so much about elections in East York, and the candidates.

When told that she would have to be held on a charge of attempting to obtain money under false pretences, she broke down and admitted to the detectives that the man accompanying her had been brought to Toronto from Buffalo to do work for the Liberals during the elections. She also told Detective Davis when he was accompanying her to Police Headquarters, that if she got into trouble, Mr. Lount would get her out of it.

Was Not Recognized at the Hotel.

Mr. Martin McCarron, proprietor of the McCarron House, did not remember seeing any woman answering the description in the hotel, either on Saturday or previously. It is quite possible, however, he stated, for her to have gone into the sitting room and remained there for a few minutes without being noticed by himself or his brothers.

Messrs. Thomas and Nicholas McCarron, who assist their brother in the bar, also stated that they had no recollection of seeing the woman in the hotel at all.

The Saturday Interview.

On Saturday afternoon The World's representative interviewed Mr. H. R. Frankland in the Market, who stated, in answer to a query if he had been approached by anyone for money that morning in connection with the East York election, that he certainly had not, and further, that if any person had made any such request to him he should have handed the party over to the police. On being told that there was a rumor round town that he had been so approached, Mr. Frankland most emphatically stated that such was not the case.

The same representative then interviewed Mr. Frankland, senior, who, in answer to the same query, stated quite as emphatically that he had not been approached by anyone for money in connection with his son's election.

As Told by Mr. H. R. Frankland Yesterday.

Mr. H. R. Frankland, when seen yesterday, said the woman had appeared in his store in St. Lawrence Market on Friday. "I noticed her in the morning," he said, "when she was outside the shop, waiting, apparently, for a Mr. Hunter, an old farmer, who had some business with me. It seemed to me that she went away at the same time as Mr. Hunter. After noon she returned and asked to speak to me in private. I thought that unnecessary, and told her so. She then said her name was Sharp and that he had been in that morning with her uncle, who had come to town to get his hand fixed. As Mr. Hunter had his hand tied up when he was in I believed this. Mrs. Sharp said she was sorry to hear I had been unseated. 'Who told you I was unseated?' I asked. 'A gentleman outside,' was her answer. She then said her mother was dying in Buffalo, and asked for $2 to buy a ticket, saying she would be back on Monday and would then repay it. I thought the tale a little queer, but gave her the $2 she asked for. That was the last I saw of her, but on Saturday a young man, about 5 feet 7 inches in height, with typical Irish face and a dark mustache or about 10 days' growth, came into the shop and asked me, 'Are you in the habit of assisting anyone?' 'What is it?' I asked. He produced a letter, ostensibly signed by Superintendent Gunn of the Street Railway, and another whose name I forget. The name in the letter was Sharp, and on seeing this I said, 'Why, a woman of that name was in here yesterday.' 'Oh, no,' he replied, 'it couldn't be!' Just at that moment the woman passed the door. I pointed her out, when he said, 'Why, that's my wife.' He went out and spoke to the woman, and returned in a few minutes to say, 'Well, d—n her,

THEY MADE THE MISTAKE.

Liberals Now Anxious to Get Into Shape to Vote Necessary Funds

TO PAY UP GOVERNMENT SALARIES.

The Result of Not Passing the Estimates Felt Keenly at Ottawa.

It Will Take Some Time Yet Before the New Government Can Get Down to Business—Every Cabinet Minister Who Goes Back for Re-Election Will Have to Fight for His Constituency—Tom Murray's Appeal for Senator Scott.

Ottawa, July 5.—(Special.)—The Cabinet had a lengthy session yesterday afternoon and is called to meet again to-morrow morning. According to reliable authority Mr. Laurier is greatly worried over the political situation. He recognizes that the Government is not exceeding its constitutional prerogative in taking time to wind up business, but the sooner Sir Charles Tupper and his Ministers get out the better pleased will be the Liberal leader. Not that Mr. Laurier is impatient for the cares and responsibilities of office, but he recognizes the inconvenience and hardship to which thousands of well-deserving citizens all over the country are likely to be put through Liberal blundering last session, and desires to make amends therefor at as early a date as possible. Every Liberal now realizes what a mistake was made in not voting three months' supplies last session. The Liberals were distinctly warned what would happen, and were told that it would be as fair to them as to the Conservatives to allow a portion of the estimates to pass. Their excuse in refusing was that if the supply bill went through the Government would hold on longer and the elections be deferred. That contingency could, however, have been avoided by a mutual agreement, to which his Excellency might have been a party. But no, the Liberals were stubborn, and to-day as a consequence find themselves hoist with their own petard. If Parliament were to get down to business on July 16 little inconvenience to the public service would result through the non-voting of supplies last session, as within a week temporary provision could be made. But there is no likelihood of Parliament being able to transact business then, even supposing Mr. Laurier and his Cabinet are installed by next Saturday or five days from the day for which Parliament is summoned. Those members of the Commons who are Ministers will have to go back to their constituents for re-election, which means a delay of two weeks at the very least. The writer is in a position to state that the seats of the new Ministers will be contested as keenly as the Conservatives know how. Possibly Mr. Laurier himself, as a matter of courtesy, may be re-elected by acclamation, but his colleagues will have to fight. The prospects are therefore that Parliament cannot get down to business before August 1. It is little wonder then that Mr. Laurier is worried over the situation and instructs his faithful henchmen here to keep him posted respecting every turn of the political wheel.

Another Cause of Trouble.

There is another matter which will cause Mr. Laurier trouble before he is fairly installed in office, and that is Irish Catholic representation in his Cabinet. Charlie Devlin of Wright and Mr. Fitzpatrick of Quebec are each pulling wires for themselves, but there is now another Richmond in the field in the person of James Conmee. Jim thinks he is the stuff, and is vain enough to believe that he can successfully run up against Mr. Klock's majority of 1200 in Nipissing district. Mr. Conmee, however, may just as well hie himself back to Port Arthur, as he certainly is not in it, that is, neither in the Liberal Cabinet nor electoral district of Nipissing.

Much sympathy is felt in this connection for Hon. R. W. Scott. After toiling in the Senate for twenty years it looks as if he is to be dumped.

Murray's Advice to Laurier.

Tom Murray, ex-M.P., writes a somewhat cheeky letter to the Grit Free Press, but there is a good deal of truth in it. Mr. Murray says: "In the matter of the formation of Mr. Laurier's Cabinet, doubtless the question of having one of his Ministers as a representative of English-speaking Catholics will be considered. Whilst I think I have the strongest claim of any other public man in Ontario for that honor, and believe I would have been welcomed by Mr. Laurier could I have remained in the field and carried the election, which was a foregone conclusion, owing to my brother's ill-health, I was obliged to retire. However, in the meantime, what I conceive would be to the best interests of the party is for Mr. Laurier to take in Hon. R. W. Scott, who, I think, is a most suitable man, and best qualified to fill the position. I have written Hon. Mr. Laurier and also Sir Oliver Mowat to that effect, so I trust that you will agree with me that that will be a move in the right direction, and that you will through your valuable paper urge the advisability of his appointment. (Signed) Thomas Murray."

Editorially, The Free Press says: What Mr. Murray says will commend itself to the consideration of the Liberal party, as it comes from one who has done such yeoman service for his party and its cause. He in no way overestimates his own claims to be regarded as a typical representative himself, but, as he is ineligible owing to the unfortunate circumstances he refers to he suggests that the veteran statesman Senator Scott should be appointed to a Cabinet position. That Mr. Scott would be, as Mr. Murray says, a most suitable man, and best qualified to fill that position, cannot be contradicted. His long services in Parliament are well known, and being an ex-Minister of Mr. Mackenzie's Cabinet it seems only natural that he should be in the new Government, the cause of which he has for many years so well championed as leader of the Opposition in the Senate, and now witnesses the victory so long and earnestly fought for. Mr. Murray's letter is timely and forcible.

TO ROB A BANK.

The Bold Attempt of Burglars to Get at the Bank of Commerce Vaults in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., July 5.—(Special.)—The Winnipeg police have discovered and frustrated a bold attempt to rob the Bank of Commerce here. Working quite safe from observation in the cellar of an adjoining building, the burglars had removed the brickwork of the wall of the vault, and in another night's work would have been in the vault. The discovery of the plot leaking out prevented the capture of the burglars, of whom there is no clue.

A VERY SAD AFFAIR.

William McCammon of Kingston Drowned at Round Island—His Fiancee Accompanies the Body Home.

Kingston, Ont., July 5.—A very sad drowning accident occurred at Clayton, N.Y., last night, in which William McCammon, youngest son of late ex-Mayor McCammon of this city, lost his life. He was electrician on the steamer Empire State, and after laying up for the night, went to take his skiff to cross over to Round Island, and in doing so stumbled or walked over the dock into the water. As the night was very dark, it is supposed he struck something in falling, and was stunned. He had on a waterproof coat and rubber boots, and also a valise strapped across his shoulders. He was shortly afterwards brought to the surface by some of the boat's crew, and every effort was put forward by the doctors in attendance to resuscitate him, but to no avail. His remains arrived in Kingston, accompanied by Miss Edna Wilson, daughter of T. C. Wilson of this city, who has been staying at Round Island. The deceased was engaged to be married to this young lady shortly. He was a fine athelete, being a member of Queen's College football club for several seasons, and one of its strongest wing men. His funeral takes place on Wednesday afternoon.

BRITISH COLUMBIA FLOODS

The Fraser River Nearly Three Feet Above the Floods of 1894.

C.P.R. TRAIN THROWN INTO THE RIVER

Tracks Were Undermined Between Agassiz and Hope Stations.

Brakeman Deering Killed and Fireman and Engineer Injured—Freight Struck the Weak Spot Without Any Warning—Hot Weather Bringing Snow Water From the Mountains—Steamers Taking People and Cattle to High Places—The Fishermen's Strike.

Vancouver, B.C., July 5.—High water in the Fraser River undermined the track between Agassiz and Hope station, on the Canadian Pacific on Friday night. When the eastbound freight, without warning, struck the weak spot the train, consisting of eight cars, loaded with tea and one with coal, was thrown into the river. Brakeman Deering was killed and Fireman Coughlin and Engineer Gray injured.

The Fraser on a Rampage.

Reports from Fraser River points state that the river is steadily rising. At Chilliwack considerable damage has been done to crops on low-lying lands, and the steamer Gladys has been busily engaged for the past few days in removing cattle and settlers' effects to high ground. Nicomen Island is also suffering from high water, and all down the river, on both sides, wherever low levels are not fully protected by high dykes, much damage is being done. Mission City town site will probably be under water in many parts if the hot weather continues. The opinion is expressed that, even if the waters recede very soon, the aggregate loss will be considerable.

Word has just been received from New Westminster that the water at high tide was two feet eight inches below the mark reached during the floods of 1894. The steamer Gladys brings word that Sumas is flooded and the water is up to the banks at Chilliwack. A large portion of Dewys is also under water. At Langley the water is level with the landing, and at several other places it is over the wharves.

The Strike of Fishermen.

The latest advices regarding the strike of fishermen at Rivers Inlet are to the effect that the strikers will probably soon give way, as the canners have a sufficient number of men at work to keep the canneries working. Strikers have attempted to intimidate the Indians, but several special policemen have been sent up by the Provincial Government to preserve order.

BLAZE AT THE GROUNDS.

Destructive Fire at the Exhibition Buildings Early This Morning—Three Horse Stables Burned—General Alarm.

The fire brigade had a run at 2.15 this morning.

The fire was found to be at the Exhibition buildings. The flames were first seen issuing from one of the new horse stables built two years ago. The inflammable nature of the buildings helped the fire to spread rapidly, and, notwithstanding that the brigade was soon on the spot, three of the stables were totally destroyed and a fourth so badly damaged that it will have to be rebuilt.

The first alarm was a still one, sent by Patrol Sergeant Mulhall from the Toronto Radiator Works, and the firemen drove hurriedly in the direction of that establishment. Then P.C. Clifton pulled the box at the corner of Queen and Crawford-streets, and an alarm was also sent from the King and Cowan avenue box.

A moment later a general alarm was sent out.

The brigade worked with a will, but despite their exertions the flames spread from one stable to another until four had been reduced to ashes. By the time the fifth stable was reached the steamer had got to work and the fire was checked.

There were nine stables in the series, and it was at one time thought all of them would be burned, as the timber was very dry. However, the firemen succeeded in staying the progress of the blaze.

The loss is calculated at from $7000 to $8000, fully insured under the corporation insurance schedule.

Cause of fire unknown, but believed to be of incendiary origin.

LATER.

The first alarm came from the corner of Queen and Claremont-streets, and the firemen lost some time in going to that point. More time was lost because of repairs going on at Strachan-avenue bridge, making it necessary for the firemen to drive a considerable distance out of their way.

Nightwatchman Jackson of the Radiator works, Queen and Dufferin-streets, also sent in a still alarm, and was the first, he claims, to have seen the fire. This was at 1.55 a.m.

The premises about the Exhibition lack police patrol, a matter that has given apprehension for many years.

ARE THE MEN ALIVE?

Rescuers Working in the Twin Shaft Signal the Entombed Men by Rapping and Get an Answer.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., July 5.—There is just a possibility that some of the men entombed in the Twin Shaft at Pittston may be taken out alive. The rescuing party who were at work from 10 o'clock last night until 4 this morning on coming to the surface reported to Mine Foreman O'Brien that they heard rapping on the rails of the gangway road which may have been caused by some of the entombed men. The rappings were clear and distinct as if some one had struck the rail with a hard substance. The supposed signal was answered by the rescuers in the same manner. After a short silence the answer came clear and distinct. The sound seemed to come from a point some 300 feet from where the rescuers were at work. When this news reached the surface there were only a few persons at the head of the shaft, but in a short time it was spread throughout the city of Pittston and at daybreak an immense crowd gathered, among them relatives and friends of the victims in whose hearts hope had awakened. Further news from the pit was watched for up to 5 o'clock this evening, but beyond the fact that the rappings were heard there were no further developments.

At 7 o'clock to-night the rescuers report that in their opinion they are within 400 feet of the entombed men. The shifts have been increased from 20 men to 35, who are relieved every half hour. They are still cutting through the rock and progressing more rapidly than at any time heretofore since the work commenced.

THE EAST YORK VICTORY

To be Celebrated by the Conservatives on Wednesday.

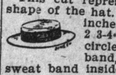
The Conservatives of East York feel so jubilant after the narrow escape they had in the recent election that they have decided to celebrate Mr. Maclean's return by a demonstration at Little York on Wednesday night. There will be a procession of carriages and young men on horseback, a band, torches, etc. The proceedings will start about 8 o'clock in the evening. Large delegations are expected form all over York, Markham and Scarboro, besides from St. Matthew's and St. Paul's Wards. The street cars will take the city visitors to the place of meeting. There will also be a large turnout of the railway men of East Toronto village. After the procession there will be short speeches. The Wexford tally-ho, with six horses in front, will be there. If you have a rig or horse and wish to celebrate the event be in line Wednesday night.

STRAW HATS FROM JAPAN.

Very Light Goods and Suitable For Wear on Hot July Days.

To have a light hat for hot days may be a luxury, but when you can get a real Yeddo or Japanese straw hat for fifty cents, to say the least, the luxury is an inexpensive one.

This cut represents very fairly the shape of the hat. The crown is three inches high and the rim 2 3-4 inches wide. It is encircled with a broad silk band, and has a leather sweat band inside. It is the lightest straw hat to be obtained anywhere at any figure.



Dineens' have 200 dozen of them to dispose of this week at 50 cents each. The usual price is one dollar anywhere. These hats are ventilated at the crown or plain to suit the buyer, and are in all sizes from 6 1-2 to 7 1-4. They are so light that their weight would not be felt on the hottest day. A lot of them are on view in the King-street window of the store, where they will be shown until all are sold, which probably will only be a few days. The hat is a fashionable and popular one, and this opportunity to purchase it at so easy a figure will no doubt be highly appreciated by the public. There are only 200 dozen of them and they will soon go. Look in at the store—Dineens', corner King and Yonge-streets, and ask to see the Yeddo.

IS THERE A COMPROMISE?

Alleged Understanding Between Mr. Laurier and Mr. Greenway

TO SETTLE THE SCHOOL QUESTION

On the Lines of the System as It Has Been Adopted in Nova Scotia.

It Was Made, the Story Goes, Contingent on the Success of the Liberals at the Polls—No Protest Against Hugh John Macdonald's Election In Winnipeg—Mr. Laurier Elected For Saskatchewan By 43 Votes.

Winnipeg, July 5.—(Special.)—There is a story in circulation here which is given for what it is worth. It is that Premier Greenway and his Cabinet have finally decided to compromise the school question on the lines of the Nova Scotia system. That is: Maintenance of parochial schools without official recognition of them in the school act. This is said to be in accordance with an understanding arrived at between Mr. Laurier and Mr. Greenway some months ago, contingent on the success of the Liberals, which has come to pass. Of course this would make plain sailing for Mr. Laurier, but if it is so, Mr. Greenway is certainly taking his political life in his hands. Most likely it is not so, but the report is much discussed.

It does not now look as if anything was to be done regarding a protest in Winnipeg. Mr. Martin's friends, who have now had plenty of time, have made no move in the direction, at least as far as known. There can be no doubt that Mr. Martin's friends, if not himself, are much discouraged by the fact that in not a single instance has his name been mentioned on the Cabinet slates. During the election it was freely stated that Winnipeg was to have the Minister of the Interior, no matter how the city contest resulted, or which party obtained power, but the will of the people has blocked Hugh John, and the will of Mr. Laurier is blocking "Fighting Joe," and Winnipeg has not got its Minister.

The full returns from Saskatchewan give Mr. Laurier 43 majority. Craig, the second Conservative candidate who lost his deposit, receiving only 200 votes, is responsible for defeating the nominee of the party.

MR. LAURIER'S CABINET.

How His Slate Looks as Seen by Certain Friends at Montreal—Nova Scotia's Premier.

Montreal, July 5.—(Special.) — Hon. Wilfrid Laurier arrived here to-day, and it is now announced that Hon. Mr. Fielding has consented to accept office, although he will not be Finance Minister, as reported yesterday. Dr. Haley, M.P. for Hants, is to be promised a seat in the Senate, and will gave place to Mr. Fielding in that county.

Mr. Fraser of Guysboro, it is stated, will be Minister, and that Mr. Borden of King's will be a member without portfolio.

Hon. A. G. Blair will be New Brunswick's one minister, yet Col. Domville will be the thorn in his side.

Hon. Louis Davies will be Minister of Railways and Canals and Mr. Tarte Secretary of State.

Hon. F. Langelier will be the other French minister from Quebec, although Mr. Geoffrion will be in without portfolio.

It is further said that Hon. George Murray will be Premier of Nova Scotia.

A Chance for Mr. Lount.

Hitherto the large body of messengers, sessional writers, doorkeepers and attendants employed at the House of Commons at Ottawa have come from the neighborhood of the Ottawa River, and principally from the Province of Quebec. Mr. Lount, M.P., as distributor of the patronage in this section, has now a chance to remedy this, and if he speaks up for his province and his town he will have no difficulty in getting quite a number of messengers, sessional writers, doorkeepers and attendants appointed at $2 a day, Sundays included, at the forthcoming meeting of Parliament. While the hours are somewhat long the work is very agreeable, and The World is assured that there are a number of Liberals in Toronto and hereabout who are in need of the position, and who, if it were given to them, would discharge the duties to the satisfaction of their Queen and country. Those who would like these positions should file their applications early with Mr. Lount, as when it is known that he has them in his gift there will be quite a rush for them.
