ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

PROSPECTIVE WITNESS REFUSED CHILD TRAVEL EXPENSES

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, the Government claims to be very proud of its record in dealing with the plight of victims of crime, yet it is obvious that there is still a long way to go. A case brought to my attention by the Sexual Assault Support Centre in Ottawa reveals a real scandal. A woman, who is the victim of an assault charge being tried in Vancouver, has been offered her plane fare to go to Vancouver to testify in the case, but she has been refused assistance to bring her two and a half-year old child with her. How can she go to Vancouver to testify in this case if she cannot bring her child with her?

If justice requires that she be there and the provincial Government, with the assistance of a federal cost-sharing program, is prepared to bring the woman to testify, to see that justice is done in that case, it is only fair that her child should also be brought out with money from the same coffer. I condemn the Government for not having brought in a program large enough in order to prevent scandals like this from taking place.

TRADE

QUÉBEC'S ATTITUDE TO CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. Nic Leblanc (Longueuil): Mr. Speaker, we have been talking about free trade for a year and a very large majority of companies in Longueuil, such as Pratt & Whitney, Héroux, Desmarais et Frères and many others, the Chamber of Commerce of the South Shore of Montreal, the Premier of Quebec, Mr. Bourassa, and the Leader of the Opposition of Quebec, Mr. Parizeau, have all spoken in favour of free trade. Why, Mr. Speaker? Because these people believe in our ability and our know-how, unlike the Liberals and the NDP who still believe that Quebecers are drawers of water. No, Mr. Speaker, Quebecers can do it! They are strong and they want to continue to develop with the 75 million people around them. The potential is there and we will have it with the Progressive Conservative Party.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

SHELLING OF HAWAIIAN ISLAND BY CANADIAN NAVAL VESSELS

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, considerable concern has been expressed about the continued participation of Canadian naval vessels in the shelling of the Hawaiian island of Kaho'olawe as part of the annual RIMPAC naval exercise.

Kaho'olawe is of immense historical, cultural, archaeological and religious importance to the Hawaiian people. The island has been placed on the U.S. Registry of Historic Sites. Despite this fact, the Government continues to allow Canadian naval vessels to shell Kaho'olawe in defiance of local and international pressure to stop, and despite the decision by other friendly countries like Australia, New Zealand, and Japan to cease shelling Kaho'olawe.

Now the City and County Council of Honolulu have raised the stakes by passing a resolution which states that continued Canadian shelling of Kaho'olawe could adversely affect efforts by a Canadian company, Lavelin Corporation of Montreal, to secure a $1 billion contract to build the Honolulu rapid transit system. Such an outcome could have a serious impact on Canada's efforts to carve a niche for itself in the global rapid transit market.

Mr. Speaker, if the Government is not prepared to do what is morally right, I hope it will at least do what is financially smart. I call on the Government to end Canadian participation immediately in the shelling of Kaho'olawe.

REGIONAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

INITIATIVE TAKEN BY METROPOLITAN QUÉBEC CHAMBER OF COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY

Mr. Marcel R. Tremblay (Québec-Est): Mr. Speaker, among the constant, fundamental challenges that Canada must meet, one of the most urgent and complex is regional economic development. This challenge can only be met with a new synergistic relationship between all levels of government and the private sector.

In this regard, I would like to point out the important initiative that the Chambre de commerce et d'industrie du Québec métropolitain just took by setting up a venture capital corporation to support entrepreneurship and underwriting $50,000 to $500,000 of shares for the initial stage of business development.

Since our Government has just concluded agreements worth several hundreds of millions of dollars to stimulate regional economic development, we must be glad about the recent initiative of the Chambre de commerce et d'industrie du Québec métropolitain and hope that it spreads to other regions.

PROTECTION OF RIGHTS OF QUÉBECERS AND FRANCOPHONES OUTSIDE QUÉBEC

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, since Thursday, Canada and especially the House of Commons and the Conservative Government is experiencing a language crisis. We all know that the Secretary of State (Mr. Bouchard) is the Minister responsible for Official Languages. The House will recall that the new Secretary of State, the Hon. Member for Lac-Saint-Jean, said during his election campaign that he was going to Ottawa to defend the interests of Quebecers and Francophones. We all remember that. We saw it on television when this gentleman was sworn in as a Member of this House. On that occasion he again stated that his priority would be to defend Francophones.

However, Quebecers now wonder where the defender of Quebecers and Francophones is now, when the Tories are experiencing a crisis. Where is the Secretary of State? Where is the Hon. Member for Lac-Saint-Jean? Where is the man who was supposed to defend the interests of Quebecers and Francophones? We got shafted on the research contracts and we are now being shafted on official languages. Where is he, that reknowned defender of Canada's Francophones?

MULTICULTURALISM

FESTIVAL 88—UKRAINIAN CULTURE CELEBRATION

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, Festival 88 which was held in Edmonton and Vegreville, Alberta, from June 30 to July 3, was a resounding success. It was a remarkable and dynamic showcase of Ukrainian culture. Huge crowds came from across Canada to the town of Vegreville to experience the Pysanka Festival. Vegreville is renowned for its rich heritage of Ukrainian culture and hospitality.

Opening night in Edmonton featured two of Canada's finest dance groups, the Shumka and Cheremosh dancers, together with dozens of other dance groups. The finale included over 2,700 costumed young Albertans dancing to a 36-piece symphony orchestra. There was also a showcase of Ukrainian weaving, ceramics, and crafts. The greatest celebration was for the 1,000 years of Christianity of the Ukrainian people, the millennium.

Festival 88 was multiculturalism at its finest, one that other Canadians might emulate. Ukrainian culture is an integral and dynamic part of Canada. It is what makes me proud to be a Canadian of Ukrainian heritage.

BILL C-72—NATIONAL RECONCILIATION

Mr. Gilles Bernier (Beauce): Mr. Speaker, the Conservative Members from Quebec defend the interests of their province with pride and enthusiasm. They sincerely believe that the philosophy and objectives of the Conservative Party are aimed at protecting the interests of all Canadians across this country, whatever the colour of their skin or the language they speak.

Thanks to our Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and Meech Lake, Quebecers are even prouder now they are truly citizens of this country. National reconciliation has given our policies new meaning. Harmony can exist in this country, provided we are generous and tolerant. The Prime Minister and this Government had the courage to introduce Bill C-72 on official languages. During the 16 years or more they were in power, the federal Liberals never had the nerve to introduce this kind of legislation, and furthermore, a quarter of the federal Liberal Members in this House voted against Meech Lake.

National reconciliation and recognition of bilingualism in Canada was accomplished by the Conservative Government, under the leadership of a great Canadian, Brian Mulroney!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

EMPLOYMENT EQUITY

WAGE GAP BETWEEN UNIONIZED AND NON-UNIONIZED WOMEN WORKERS

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, to no one's real surprise we learned last week that the Government's ineffective pay equity measures have done nothing to eliminate wage discrimination in the Public Service. The wage gap between men and women persists and even grows wider as women continue to be denied entry into high level public service jobs. From their first entry into the paid labour force, women have had to struggle against this kind of discrimination.

Today I would like to comment on another wage gap, one equally detrimental to the aspirations and achievements of women in the labour force. I refer to the gap between the salaries of unionized women and non-unionized women. Statistics Canada data reveal that women who work under a collective agreement earn substantially more than their sisters without a contract. In the teaching profession, for example, unionized women earned $15.57 an hour while their non-unionized sisters earned $9.73 per hour. Not only must women face the barrier of wage inequities with their male colleagues but they must also face the obstacle of opposition to union certification.

The lesson is clear. The union keeps Canadian women strong.

FREE TRADE

SOCIALIST PROSPECT AND THE REALITY

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, a survey of 300 major Canadian companies carried out by the Department of Regional Industrial Expansion last week shows that those companies expect to increase their investments by 27 per cent this year. Those plans are due to the fact that Canadian businesses are preparing for free trade, which comes into effect January 1, 1989.

When the liberal-socialist coalition says that free trade will demolish Canada, it displays its colossal ignorance of what is really happening in Canada's vigorous economy.

Peter Cook, in today's Globe and Mail, states that what is happening is the exact opposite of what the socialists predicted.

Just as free trade was the catalyst for Europe's economic development in the 60's, free trade will act as a catalyst for Canadian and American businesses in the 1980-1990's.

Read Peter Cook's column today and appreciate his conclusion. He feels free trade is the best thing that could happen to Canada.

AGRICULTURE

SASKATCHEWAN STORAGE AND IRRIGATION PROJECTS—PLANNED TRANSFER OF CONTROL

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt—Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, Agriculture Canada plans to transfer 35 storage and irrigation projects in southwestern Saskatchewan from the control of the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Administration to the Saskatchewan Water Corporation.

The corporation is primarily concerned with municipal, urban and recreational use of water and only dabbles in agricultural water usage with its few mega irrigation projects.

PFRA patrons are concerned that these transfers will hurt farmers. The cattleman who was denied Sask Water Corporation's permission to water his thirsty cattle because boaters on the Duncairn Dam didn't like it will need strong reassurances from Agriculture Canada that his traditional use is guaranteed. Furthermore, there is fear that these planned transfers are part of a larger plan to privatize all of PFRA's projects.

The ghost of the Nielsen Report which recommended selling off PFRA pastures and dams still haunts prairie farmers.

AIR CANADA

CHOICE OF REPLACEMENT AIRCRAFT FOR PRESENT 727 FLEET

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, Air Canada will soon announce the replacement for its Boeing 727 fleet. There are strong indications that the Airbus A320 will be Air Canada's choice.

The A320 is made in Europe and its development and construction was heavily subsidized by the European Governments whereas the the North American aircraft industry does not receive government subsidies. I believe that the selection of the replacement aircraft must take into account the Canadian aircraft industry and its workers. Presently all major North American aircraft manufacturers have plants operating in Canada.

Boeing, which recently bought de Havilland, for example, has been instrumental in strengthening Canada's aircraft manufacturing base through increased sales and employment. Since the bids from the North American competitors and the Airbus are similar, the deciding factor then must be the benefits to Canada's aircraft workers and manufacturers who operate, develop, and manufacture their products without government money.

STATEMENTS BY PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE MEMBERS

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Government. I take it that the Minister of Justice is well informed on languages and I would like to ask it of him.

There are two tragedies in this language dossier. First, a large number of Tory back-benchers should not have been allowed to spew anti-French statements. Second, the Prime Minister has allowed this to happen over the last weeks and months. We were told yesterday by the Government to wait for the vote before any action would be taken to discipline the reactionaries. What nonsense.

• (1420)

Are Tory Members allowed to make racist comments as long as they—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member will put his question.

Mr. Gauthier: We were told yesterday "wait until the vote, you'll see who is gong to be disciplined". I am asking the Tories and the Government, is the theory that Tory Members can make racist statements as long as they don't vote on the multicultural Bill—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Speaker: I would ask the Hon. Member to put his question.

Mr. Gauthier: Are they allowed to insult women as long as they do not vote on affirmative action? When is the Government going to stop this nonsense and take action against those members of the Tory Caucus who are destroying bilingualism across Canada? Can they do that and get away with it by being silent in this House?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I am surprised at the comments coming from that Hon. Member. He was here during the 1970s, as I was, when we saw national unity torn asunder, when we saw province set against province, when we saw region set against region.

When the Right Hon. Prime Minister assumed the leadership of this Party he made it clear from the outset that his primary goal was national reconciliation. From day one, he has worked toward that goal. He has worked toward it with regard to Meech Lake, he has worked toward it with regard to the official languages policy.

When dissidents in the Hon. Member's Party voted against the Meech Lake Accord we did not get up and call them racists because we do not believe in using that kind of wording in the House of Commons. We do not believe that this should be a partisan issue.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

POLITICAL COURAGE

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, the Secretary of State and Member for Lac-Saint-Jean has said nothing in the language debate, either as a Minister or Member of Parliament or as a Quebecer or Canadian.

Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister has told the Conservative Members that they can work to destroy bilingualism throughout Canada as long as they keep quiet in the House of Commons during the vote on the Official Languages Act. That is what they are doing.

Mr. Speaker, it is like saying that a liar is only a liar if he is caught or a thief is only a thief if he is caught. What nonsense! The Government must stand up today and tell Canadians, "Enough nonsense." The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources too. Out with the Parliamentary Secretaries and Members who cannot bear the responsibility to sell a national policy.

When will the Government take its courage in hand and do what it must do?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, the Government's position on bilingualism is very clear. It is a fundamental policy for the Prime Minister and all members of the Cabinet. I repeat that the Official Languages Bill will be passed tomorrow, with no amendment affecting the fundamental principle of bilingualism in Canada. This is not a partisan issue; this is a substantive matter. And that is the Conservative Party's position.

QUERY CONCERNING COURT CHALLENGE PROGRAM

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Calgary North, with the support of the Hon. Member for Athabasca, is planning to launch a court challenge against the Minister of Energy—

Mr. Shields: Not true!

Mr. Gauthier: —and his plans to hire French-speaking Canadians in his Department.

Mr. Shields: That's a lie.

Mr. Gauthier: I want to ask the Minister of Energy, the Secretary of State, the Minister of Justice or the President of the Treasury Board—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Athabasca will withdraw.

Mr. Andre: He should be asking questions, not making speeches.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: I know that the Hon. Member for Athabasca would want to withdraw what clearly he was saying, and it was unparliamentary. I understand that there is a certain amount of agitation on this issue on both sides of the Chamber, but I think that we can all approach it in a civilized manner.

[Translation]

I will listen to the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier and hope that he will put his question in an appropriate manner.

[English]

Mr. Gauthier: I think it would be quite appropriate, and I would like him to withdraw, but I will not bother with that.

My question is directed to any responsible Minister. In the question of the court challenge against the Minister of Energy for hiring Francophones in his Department, will the Government, any responsible Minister, explain to the House how public funds could be used to attack and destroy the Government's own fundamental law? Why should Canadians pay for such a vindictive exercise? Explain that to the Canadian people.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member, I am sure, does not want to leave the impression that somehow the Government is paying for a lawsuit initiated by a Member of Parliament.

Mr. Gauthier: The Court Challenge Program.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I am not aware of the Court Challenge Program being utilized in any respect in this particular matter. There is an application obviously being made by a citizen of Canada who happens to be a Member of Parliament. That is not to say that the matter will be entertained.

With respect to any action taken, I can only say that the taxpayers' money will be used to defend the Government's policy and position in this matter which is one that—

Mr. Gauthier: Why should it, it's one of your own Members?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The fact is that we are putting forward a Bill which is fair and equitable and which has the support of the overwhelming majority of Canadians. The fact is that we will defend the legislation and the operations of the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources which have also been fair.

SITUATION OF FRANCOPHONES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, thirty Tory Members have insulted Francophones, and yesterday three more asked to be added to the anti-francophone list. The Acting Prime Minister's answer is that the Prime Minister has been an agent of reconciliation. My question for the Acting Prime Minister is this: Is it the Tory Government's definition of national reconciliation that Francophones will have to wait, and wait patiently, because your Government has accepted 52 amendments? You used a Francophone to . . .

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Malépart: . . . There are thirty Members in this group. Does national reconciliation mean that we as Francophones from Quebec and across Canada have to be patient and wait a little longer? We have waited long enough!

• (1430)

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister has provided the necessary leadership to improve some very bad conditions we had in this country when the previous Government was in power.

[English]

The Prime Minister of this country has provided the leadership on the question of reconciliation between French-speaking Canadians and English-speaking Canadians which was so badly needed in this country. Any of us who are here in this House saw that time and time again.

I would ask the Member to honour the work that is being done in this House jointly by all Parties to further the cause of official languages.

WHEREABOUTS OF SECRETARY OF STATE OF CANADA

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, Francophones will not tolerate national reconciliation on the cheap. We have waited long enough for orders to come from the Conservative Party. Do you think we are going to let thirty Conservatives insult us? We won't stand for it!

Could the Acting Prime Minister explain to the House why this morning, the Prime Minister did not throw out the two parliamentary secretaries and the Tory Joint Vice-Chairman of the Committee on Official Languages?

And, why is the Secretary of State, the defender of Quebecers, not in the House to defend official languages?

And why haven't these Members apologized to the Francophones of this country? Why do you insist on insulting Francophones still further by defending your thirty anti-Francophones?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I am not impressed by the sound and fury of the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie. As I said yesterday, there are limitations on what parliamentary secretaries may do. They know that when they take on their duties. They must abide by their obligations or take one of the options open to them. The Official Languages Bill will be voted on tomorrow, and it has the Government's unqualified support. Mr. Speaker, I want to say that each and everyone of us has a duty to act responsibly. That is the Government's position.

QUERY CONCERNING WHO SPEAKS FOR GOVERNMENT

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa-Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question to the Acting Prime Minister concerns precisely that issue; everyone must shoulder their responsibilities. Has the Prime Minister asked for the resignation of the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Veterans Affairs, in the light of his public opposition to a basic element of the Government's policy, that is to say bilingualism? If not, can the Acting Prime Minister explain how the Government is going to operate in future with regard to Ministers and Parliamentary Secretaries? Will these two groups who express Government policy be forced to express only Government policy in the future? Will the Government speak with one voice?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, let me reiterate that the Official Languages Bill will be passed tomorrow, without amendments that would affect the fundamental principle of bilingualism in Canada. That is the position of the our Government. We are united in that approach.

[English]

PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. Canadians believe that the credibility of the Government is at stake because of scandals and broken promises—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Cassidy: —and now because the Government is not speaking with one voice.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I am sure the Hon. Member would want to confine his preamble to the question he wishes to ask.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, how can Canadians in Quebec or anywhere else trust the Government when the Prime Minister is tolerating official spokesmen for the Government at the level of Parliamentary Secretary, like the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Veterans Affairs, taking public issue with the Government over an issue as fundamental as bilingualism, without any disciplinary action being taken?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, it ill behooves the Member for Ottawa Centre to stand and talk about credibility when, time and again, he has come into this House and levelled charges which he has then had to withdraw because they have been without foundation.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss MacDonald: The Prime Minister has provided leadership in a way unknown before in this House on the matter of official languages.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. de Jong: At least blush when you say that, Flora.

Miss MacDonald: I can see Members from the NDP laughing. Where were they when the Prime Minister went to Manitoba and challenged even the Government of the day on the question of bilingualism in the Province of Manitoba?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss MacDonald: I say to the Hon. Member and all Members of this House that the question of official languages in this country is not and should not be a partisan issue. This is an issue which is one of unity for the country and one of leadership for the country. I hope that this Member and all Members in the House would recognize their responsibility to carry out that leadership, individually and collectively.

QUERY CONCERNING WHO SPEAKS FOR GOVERNMENT

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa-Centre): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I recall that it was the NPD Government of Manitoba that advocated the rights of Francophones in that province. The Conservatives were the ones who opposed them.

My question is the following: How can Canadian men and women trust this Government? When a Government allows the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Veterans Affairs to take a position which differs from that of the Government on a question as fundamental as bilingualism, the credibility of that Government is at stake. How can we tolerate a situation in which Parliamentary Secretaries, Government spokespersons, are issuing different messages on behalf of the Government?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, as I have already said, there are limits to the actions and functions of Parliamentary Secretaries . . .

Mr. Malépart: In this case they have gone beyond the limits!

Miss MacDonald: That was another very strong voice, but it makes no sense.

Parliamentary Secretaries know what the situation is when they accept their position Mr. Speaker. They know their responsibilities very well. And I think that the Member will see the results when the vote is held tomorrow.

NATIONAL ENERGY BOARD

DECISION ON NATURAL GAS EXPORTS TO SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Yesterday the National Energy Board granted Pan- Alberta Gas Ltd. permission to sell over two trillion cubic feet of natural gas to southern California, even though Pan-Alberta does not have enough natural gas under contract to supply its own contractual needs.

This brings to 17 trillion cubic feet the amount of Canadian natural gas that is under contract to the United States. With the six trillion feet pending approval before the National Energy Board, one-third of all western natural gas is contracted to the United States.

How long will it be before the Government allows the United States to have all Canadian natural gas under its trade agreement with the United States? Even before the agreement comes into effect it has one-third of it.

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, it is true that yesterday, the National Energy Board approved Pan-Alberta's application, and in a matter of days or weeks, at the most, the Government will be asked to ratify the NEB's decision.

I would like to point out to Hon. Members that this procedure, both with respect to the number of years and the quantity involved, is not unusual for the NEB. Contracts of this kind have been approved many times in previous years. In fact, the twenty-five year period is part of the National Energy Board Act.

Second, section 83.4 provides that the NEB may consider discovery trends when approving contracts, so that the NEB's decision was well within the limits of this legislation. The Government will make a decision within a few days.

[English]

SECURITY OF SUPPLY FOR CANADIAN CONSUMERS

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, that is not true. Before the Government came to power the National Energy Board would never have approved a contract like that which permits the sale of natural gas that the company does not even have. What about the natural gas that is there? What will the Government do to protect the security of Canadians?

The National Energy Board is nothing more than a monitoring agency. It has no power at all. There is no protection for Canadian consumers. What will the Government do to protect Canadian consumers of natural gas? When will it put some teeth back in the National Energy Board?

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I should be glad to check whether, in years previous to 1984, the NEB granted contracts for twenty-five years, and I will advise the Hon. Member accordingly.

Second, according to this Government's philosphy, the best way to ensure security of supply for Canadians is, first of all, to provide for a market that favours investment and thus production, Mr. Speaker.

CORRECTIONAL SERVICE CANADA

FORMER COMMISSIONER'S ROLE IN AWARDING CONTRACTS

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Solicitor General. It concerns one of the Prime Minister's classmates, Mr. Rhéal Leblanc, who was appointed Commissioner of Correctional Institutions.

Mr. Crosbie: What class? Kindergarten?

Mr. Rodriguez: In light of information that was finally squeezed out of the Government concerning the behaviour of Mr. Leblanc, the former Commissioner of Corrections, and Mr. Anderson, and contracts totalling some $628,000, and in view of the fact that the Minister was informed as far back as November, 1986, why did the Minister not order an audit at that time?

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member would review the article in question carefully, he would note that in 1986 I was advised that all actions to date were quite proper and in conformity with the rules and regulations.

However, when I was first advised subsequently of this matter in the early fall, 1987, I immediately commissioned an independent audit of the commissioner's actions, which was done by the Comptroller General's office. I received that report at the end of February, 1988. An action plan was put into place, which was approved by both the Treasury Board and the Comptroller General's office. This plan will ensure that such actions will not take place again.

Oral Questions

ACCESS TO INFORMATION—MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, in November, 1987, the Member for Burnaby put on the Order Paper questions concerning the contracts, the role of Mr. Anderson and the role of Mr. Leblanc. The answer which came last Thursday, June 30, 1988, said that the information could be obtained through Access to Information.

In light of the fact that when the Conservatives were in the opposition they said that the Liberals believed that Canadians did not have a right to know, but the Conservatives believed they had every right to know, why did the Minister then engage in a cover-up in providing that information to the public? In fact, Inger Hansen had to take legal action to try to get the information from Access to Information.

Mr. Jelinek: What absolute nonsense!

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, with the greatest of respect, the Hon. Member's suggestions are utterly without foundation. They are not correct.

Mr. Rodriguez: Ask Inger Hansen.

Mr. Kelleher: When I first learned of this, I asked the Comptroller General's office to conduct an audit. I received that report at the end of February this year and we immediately took action.

Mr. Rodriguez: Why did Robinson not get it?

Mr. Kelleher: All the information has been released to Mr. Robinson and the information was released to the media which asked for it. The reasons for the delay and the deletions concerned the Privacy Act and the third party rule.

AWARDING OF UNTENDERED CONTRACTS

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Solicitor General. It also concerns the awarding of over $600,000 of untendered government contracts to CACI Canada Limited, a computer consulting firm.

As the Solicitor General knows, there was a deliberate, not inadvertent, breach of the conflict of interest guidelines and the Treasury Board guidelines. The Solicitor General knew about problems with this particular company in November, 1986, yet allowed the relationship to continue between CACI Canada Limited and Correctional Service of Canada.

Will the Solicitor General indicate to the House why he has refused to allow information about these improper practices to become public? Why did it take a Federal Court application by The Globe and Mail before the Solicitor General was prepared to release this information to the public? What was he hiding? Was it his own incompetence and negligence?

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I have already advised the other Hon. Member and again I advise this Hon. Member that when these facts came to my attention in the fall of 1987 I immediately went to the Comptroller General and commissioned an independent audit. I received the report at the end of February. An action plan was implemented. This action plan was approved both by the Comptroller General's office and the Treasury Board.

I can also advise the Hon. Member that one of the first instructions I gave to the new Commissioner of Corrections was to ensure that nothing of this nature ever happens again, to refer him to the action plan, and to ensure that fiscal control was observed at all times.

PUNITIVE ACTION QUERY

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, we are not talking about an inadvertent breach of federal guidelines, we are talking about a deliberate breach. For example, in one case a contract was doubled by the commissioner to over $48,000. The contract was for $24,000 and was doubled by the commissioner after the work was completed and when no additional work was done.

The Solicitor General indicates that remedial action was taken. I and the people of Canada would like to know specifically what punitive action was taken? Can he indicate whether the RCMP were called in to investigate the propriety of these practices as conducted by the former Commissioner of Corrections?

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I will be most happy to answer the Hon. Member's question. After receiving the report, I instructed my Deputy Minister to deliver the report to Justice and ask for an opinion from them. Justice reviewed the report. I was advised by Justice that on the facts disclosed there were no criminal offences. As a result of that written opinion from Justice, no further charges were laid with respect to this matter.

IMMIGRATION

TREATMENT OF ENTREPRENEUR-CLASS IMMIGRANTS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Recently The Globe and Mail reported that many wealthy people have paid as much as $30,000 and more to get Canadian landing and citizenship through loopholes in the Government's entrepreneurial immigration law, without even having lived in or paid taxes in Canada, and that 14 members of a Toronto law firm are being investigated by the Law Society of Upper Canada in this connection.

The Minister knows how many law abiding low-income Canadians must often wait for years to bring their relatives from overseas to rejoin them in Canada. What action has the Minister taken to stop those abuses that have been reported, to close those loopholes, and to strip citizenship from any who have go it through deceit or abuse?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, clearly I cannot comment on the particular case which is being investigated at this time. When I first took over the Ministry I explained to the reporter in question, among other people, that the monitoring of our programs is very important to me. Entrepreneurs admitted are being monitored by immigration officials so that their business activities can be assessed.

I have expressed the view that I would like to see our monitoring improved. Shortly after taking over the portfolio, I asked that a special advisory committee be set up, and this group will advise us on any need for further monitoring and how it should be done.

MONITORING OF BUSINESS ACTIVITIES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, the Minister has stated that she has undertaken a review or an evaluation of the monitoring. It has been well known for several years that there is no effective follow up to find out whether these entrepreneurs actually produce the jobs they promised to produce, and for which they received their landing and sometimes their citizenship. It is further known that 70 per cent of those immigrants land and stay in the three largest cities of Canada. Therefore, they make the regional disparities worse rather than improving them, as was the intention of the program.

Will the Minister tell the House what steps she has taken to correct these failures of the program, or is the Minister going to end the program and return the immigration staff to speeding up the family reunification program?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, my Department has established a study of the program, which is nearing completion now, in terms of the follow-up as to what happened to the investors who came to Canada. At some future time I will be in a position to make a report.

As I have said, I have set up an advisory committee in terms of monitoring the program. I have also consulted with my colleague, the Secretary of State for External Affairs, to ensure that the overseas monitoring of the program is meeting its objectives.

We also have an agreement with the provinces which my predecessor, the Minister of Transport, discussed this winter whereby there will be a greater balance among the regions of Canada in terms of this program.

I want to point out to the Hon. Member one final point. Before there was an entrepreneur or business class, people like this could come to Canada as independents without any commitment to make any investment at all. I think it is a positive program that we now have them coming to make investments here.

TRADE

FREE TRADE—MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to our excellent Minister for International trade. The Department of Regional Industrial Expansion has published the results of a survey of three-hundred major businesses in Canada. With respect to free trade, these three-hundred major businesses announced they would increase their spending by 25 per cent in 1988.

Mr. Speaker, considering the scare tactics being used by the Liberal-Socialist Coalition, I think it is important for the Minister to comment on what happened in the European Common Market in 1960, when free trade became a fact for 250 million people. There was no problem. Would the Minister explain to Canadians the benefits that ensued when free trade was implemented in Europe?

[English]

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. gentleman for the first relevant, competent, and reasonable question that has been asked today. Indeed, the Department of Industry, Science and Technology has just released a paper on the effect of the Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement on the Canadian manufacturing industry. The conclusion is that Canadian industry will enjoy unparalled opportunities for growth and development as a result of the agreement.

In addition, the survey revealed a projected or planned increase of spending and investment by 300 major corporations by 27 per cent this year. It has also been confirmed by OECD that Canada is the industrialized nation where investment will grow fastest in the next few years.

Some Hon. Members: Sit down.

Mr. Crosbie: Why should I sit down when we have to listen to the rest of the slander, Mr. Speaker, when I am giving some facts about the investment opportunities as a result of the U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement?

Mr. Riis: Typical Tory respect for the Chair.

Mr. Speaker: Those last remarks will probably be a triumph of Hansard over television. The Hon. Member for Gander—Twillingate.

Oral Questions

ATLANTIC CANADA OPPORTUNITIES AGENCY

VETTING OF APPLICATIONS

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, all applications of over $1 million to the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency have to go to a board. Unfortunately the members of that board who decide on the applications over $1 million are, in some cases, the very people who are applying for the money.

Is the Government aware of this? Is the Government aware of the fact that the Minister in charge of ACOA, Senator Lowell Murray, is going about actively encouraging board members to apply to themselves for money, and then rejecting their offers to resign, and that some board members make the ultimate sacrifice and absent themselves temporarily from a board meeting while their applications are being dealt with by their seat-mates?

Is this an ethical manner in which to be distributing government funds?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, you can see the increasing difficulties of getting independent people from the private sector to act on boards or agencies as their public duty when this type of insinuation is made about them.

The Atlantic Canada Opportunities Board has adopted rules for cases of potential conflict of interest. The rule is that any member who has an actual or potential conflict of interest in respect to any matter, issue, application, or project that comes before the board shall immediately declare such conflict of interest and remove himself or herself from discussion, consideration, deliberation or review of the subject matter, issue, application, or matter.

That is what happens with the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency and the Atlantic Enterprise Board. There have been no violations of those rules, they are perfectly proper rules, and they have been carried out.

May I also point out to the House that on a region wide basis ACOA is receiving and processing ten times as many applications for aid as were handled by all its predecessors together, and has spent or committed a total of $200 million to date in the four Atlantic provinces. It is becoming the most widely used federal program ever put in place in that region, despite the opposition of the Liberal Opposition, and the Senate, which is also controlled by the Liberal Party.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT AMEND BILL

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, several ACOA board members, such as Dorothy Sutherland from Nova Scotia, Donald Deacon and Francis MacAulay of Prince Edward Island have stated that it is a conflict of interest. Ms. Sutherland stated: "It would never enter my mind to apply to myself for money". Other board members who applied for money and got it said that they did so with the encouragement of the Minister.

Is the Government aware that Mr. David Ganong, part owner of Ganong Brothers of New Brunswick, resigned last month, not because he had received a $75,000 grant for his company to modernize from ACOA, but because he had submitted a further application, to use his words, "for several millions of dollars"? Is this Minister aware that the Senator in charge then phoned him and said that it was not necessary to resign from the board of which he was a member while his application was being processed? Will the Government amend that Bill, sew up that gigantic loophole, and censure that Senator?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, there are several dozens of private citizens who are on the boards of the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency and the Atlantic Enterprise Institute. In every case they have followed and are following the conflict of interest directions and rules.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: I am not going to be shouted down, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Tobin: Utter foolishness!

Mr. Crosbie: I am asked this question. I am entitled to answer it. The reputations of these people are at stake.

Miss MacDonald: They just think it is slander.

Mr. Speaker: The Chair has allowed the Hon. Member to put a complex question, and to put it in considerable length. I think that Hon. Members ought also to give the Minister a chance to give it an appropriate reply. The Hon. Minister has the floor.

Mr. Crosbie: Mr. Speaker, with respect to the case of Mr. Ganong, he wrote a Member of the Upper House, Senator Murray, who is in charge of the agency, and told him that he had a major proposal going before ACAO for consideration and before the AEB, a large project that would involve his active and personal involvement. Under those circumstances he thought that he should submit his resignation.

The Senator wrote back to him in a letter dated April 7 regretting that he was tendering his resignation, pointing out that the rules did not require him to resign but stating that in view of the circumstances and the fact that the primary responsibility for carrying the application would fall to him as President, he thought in all the circumstances he could not disagree with his suggestion that he should resign. That is the record of this transaction, which is perfectly proper.

Might I just finally say that the Atlantic Provinces Chamber of Commerce has called for this Bill to be passed as it is, and does not want any further delay by the Liberal Senate and the Liberal Opposition who voted against it on third reading in this House. It is the most successful agency ever to crop up in Atlantic Canada from the Government of Canada. The jealousy and determination to gut it by Members opposite are resented by everyone in the region.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

IMMIGRATION

DELAY IN PROCESSING REFUGEE STATUS CLAIMS

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Some lawyers are claiming that delays in Canada's refugee process are resulting in the arrest and sometimes even the murder of relatives of individuals who are presently in Canada awaiting authorization of their claims. What can the Minister do to prevent more refugees from being hurt?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I was somewhat sorry to read about the statement that they had made in the paper, for two reasons. First, in many urgent cases we have helped people who have approached our office when we felt there was an urgent case to be made. I would encourage people to continue to do that. In fact, I think some of the people in that group have done that.

We have also said, and I think it is pretty clear from the article, that we are trying to speed up the process through Bill C-55 and Bill C-84 so that we can deal with these things more expeditiously.

Bill C-55 and Bill C-84 are linked in substance. However, we need Bill C-55, which is now in the other place, in order to resolve this sort of problem.

Let me just say finally that I met with a group of immigration lawyers last week, one of whom had signed that letter and was quoted in that article, and it was not raised with me at that time as an urgent matter, which I also find somewhat disappointing.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor. These will be the last questions in Question Period.

NATIONAL ENERGY BOARD

REQUEST THAT CABINET REVIEW DECISION ON NATURAL GAS EXPORTS

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, if it is possible to draw him back to his seat for a moment.

The Minister said in his answer with respect to Pan-Alberta Gas that this issue would come to Cabinet shortly. In view of the fact that under the trade deal there is a lock-in clause in the event of shortages for the proportion of petroleum and natural gas and other energy products which we ship to the United States, will the Minister see to it that there is a full review by Cabinet of this issue? Will he see to it that there is full security for Canadian consumers guaranteed by the decision in the review by Cabinet when it takes place?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the free trade agreement in no way obligates Canadians to sell natural gas—no one is forced to sell natural gas. Exporters are free to negotiate the best commercial terms they can get. They are free to refuse to sell if they are not satisfied.

The agreement offers assurances that Canadian gas exporters can enjoy enhanced access to the U.S. market, and that when they do they will have equitable treatment by U.S. regulatory bodies.

The only situation in which there is any obligation to continue any supply whatsoever would be in the event that an emergency is declared. That responsibility is not anywhere near as onerous as the responsibility entered into by our Liberal predecessors through the International Energy Authority agreement that applies to oil.

The free trade agreement has no connection with the application that was just approved by the NEB. Therefore, it has no consequences in connection with it.

EFFECT OF CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, that statement is simply not true.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Langdon: I put this to the Minister as a question. If there is a shortage in Canada, is it not the fact that there has to be the same proportion of exports of natural gas maintained to the United States as is the case before such shortage conditions obtain? If that is true, does that not mean higher prices for Canadians and more difficult situations of shortage?

Mr. Rodriguez: Have you read that one, John?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the short answer to it is no, it is not true. As a member of the International Energy Agency we have agreed to the IEA emergency oil sharing system, something which was undertaken by our predecessor.

Mr. Foster: At 7 per cent.

Mr. Crosbie: Just listen. That could result in Canada having to increase its exports during a period of critical oil shortage. However, the free trade agreement only calls, if there is an emergency, for proportion sharing of reductions. So it is completely untrue. It is false. It is not true. There is not an ounce of truth in it. The Hon. Member is completely misled and, what is more, does not want to listen.

Mr. Althouse: You just confirmed it; you should have listened to the question.

POINT OF ORDER

WITHDRAWAL OF COMMENT DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Mr. Jack Shields (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I have too much respect for this House and the Members sitting in this House to allow an unparliamentary remark that I made during Question Period to stay on the record. I wish to withdraw.

Having said that, I would like to point out to the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) that his accusation about me in this House during his preamble is absolutely not true. I would certainly accept his apology for that accusation.

Some Hon. Members: That is debate.

Some Hon. Members: Withdraw!

Mr. McDermid: You made an accusation that is totally wrong.

Some Hon. Members: Withdraw!

Mr. Speaker: I want to thank the Hon. Member. I also want to say to the Hon. Member for Athabasca that I took it that he had in fact withdrawn some minutes ago. I appreciate very much his comment.

Miss MacDonald: But Gauthier did not withdraw.

PETITIONS

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106(8), I have the honour to table, in both official languages, the Government's response to 21 petitions, Nos. 332-4653, 332-4655 to 332-4664 inclusive, 332-4666, 332-4667, 332-4680 to 332-4686 inclusive and 332-4692.

While I have the floor, I would move:

That this House do now proceed to Orders of the Day.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed to the motion please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that the Deputy Government House Leader had in mind presenting a motion with respect to the votes that will be taken at 5.45 p.m. and thereafter today. Has he abandoned that idea or does he intend to proceed?

Mr. Lewis: I have not abandoned the idea. I thought once the Table had called Orders of the Day and immediately prior to the ruling by the Speaker on the acceptability of the motions, I would place this motion so that everybody would know where they stood.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I would like to seek some clarification. We have received communiqués from a number of government Departments today saying that there would be a call for the production of papers during Routine Proceedings. We have been expecting to discuss that and yet it seems that the Government has decided to move directly to Orders of the Day. Will there be an opportunity to fulfil the requests of various government officials that we discuss this today?

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Hudon) contacted me prior to Question Period and advised me that papers would be produced pursuant to a motion that I have had on the Order Paper since the March 1. The Government seems to have its wires crossed.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, so that the record is clear on that point of order, we have tried for several weeks to find a Member present in the House or have somebody delegated so that we could indeed produce those papers.

An Hon. Member: That is not true.

Mr. Hawkes: I think the record will show that we have tried every Wednesday for several weeks in a row.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, we expected to get to the point where the Government indicates responses to Questions on the Order Paper. We were notified that the Government was going to provide a response to a Question on the Order Paper by the Hon. Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett). The media has already presented me with that information.

In other words, one of the national newspapers of Canada received the information that the Hon. Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam requested prior to it being tabled in the House of Commons. I was going to raise that when we got to it in the normal point in Routine Proceedings.

Since the Government decided not to have Routine Proceedings, I felt that this was the only time to raise this. It is a very serious breach of privilege in that the media apparently is being presented or given material—confidential material—prior to it being tabled in the House of Commons and prior to the Hon. Member requesting the information receiving said information. I wanted to raise that. It is a very serious point of order.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, I was apprised earlier this day that this point of order might indeed be raised. I would point out that the Government has not yet responded to the question in the House and that when Members opposite see the Government's response to the question they may choose to raise a point of order at that point or they may choose not to. It is my understanding that perhaps the press does have access to the information, but I am not sure that they have access to the answer to the question which the Member opposite asked. The information available to me says there is some difference in what the press may have. It is a draft possible answer.

Mr. Speaker: I will hear the Hon. Member for Skeena in a moment. I may not have completely understood the position of the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap. The Chair took it that what he is saying is that some information was given out which would have, in the normal course of proceedings, been given here in the Chamber, but was given out by the Government to the media. Is that the accusation, if I can put it that way?

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, that is exactly the situation. It is a very serious breach of traditions of the House when members of the media are receiving confidential information destined for a specific Member prior to it being tabled. This is the first opportunity I have had to raise this. It was in the hands of the media last night when it was supposed to be tabled in the House of Commons today.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I want to clarify what the Parliamentary Secretary seemed to be alluding to. I have been here in the House every day this week. You could check Hansard. I was in the House every day last week except for Tuesday, when I was in Hull the whole of the day with the standing committee dealing with Bill C-31 in its final report.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, the House Leader of the New Democratic Party has raised the issue of the answer to a question. I would indicate that after we are on Orders of the Day, with the unanimous consent of the House, I would be very happy to table the answer to the Member's question. Then he would have a chance to look at that and see whether or not he wants to pursue a question at a later stage.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I assume that the Deputy House Leader for the Government wanted us to force a vote on this move, to go directly to Government Orders so that we could take up time this afternoon so that the Government would not have to listen to the debates by the various back-benchers against the language legislation. Since we have agreed to go directly to Orders of the Day, we are looking forward to hearing some of these Neanderthal points of view put forward by Members of the Conservative Party.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap and the Parliamentary Secretary could assist the Chair. I take it that there was a suggestion made by the Parliamentary Secretary that if there was consent, he would produce the particular matter which has been the subject of discussion. It would seem to the Chair that that might be helpful. If it was agreed, that could be done right now and then we would just carry on as we have been. As I indicated, that would take consent.

• (1520)

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, what we are trying to achieve is to get Orders of the Day called so that report stage of Bill C-72 is called and before the House. Once that takes place we can have unanimous consent if the House wishes. It is key to us that we get on to that debate.

Mr. Speaker: I think the Chair did call Orders of the Day. My position is that we have reached Orders of the Day.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-72, an Act respecting the status and use of the official languages of Canada, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

Mr. Speaker: It may be that Hon. Members may want to return to the matter that we have been discussing a little later. In the meantime, I think it would be appropriate to proceed.

As Hon. Members will know, there have been a great many amendments proposed and presented to the Table. I think I should say that with the number of amendments proposed this has naturally created a very heavy workload for table officers and the Chair. Hon. Members will know, and I am sure will be co-operative in understanding that every effort has been made to deal with this extensive number of amendments in order to allow the Chair to make a ruling at this time which will assist us in dealing with them.

I want to say to Hon. Members, because there has been a constantly changing situation in this matter in that a number of amendments have been withdrawn, that the Chair is reading from a transcript of material prepared earlier today which has been modified by hand throughout the Question Period. It will take some time to read all of it, and I know Hon. Members will co-operate with the Chair when it is understood that changes have been made right up until a few moments ago.

This ruling is with reference to report stage of Bill C-72, an Act respecting the status and use of the official languages of Canada. As of six o'clock p.m. last night, there were 114 motions in amendment on the Notice Paper for the report stage of Bill C-72, an Act respecting the status and use of the official languages of Canada. Since last night, 23 motions in amendment have been withdrawn, but I have asked that the original numbering be left in place so as to avoid confusion. Those withdrawn since the Order Paper was printed last night—I will be setting them out, but before I do I want Hon. Members and the public who may be watching this to understand that it is not the Chair's duty nor authority to reject or accept amendments on the basis of their substance. Those rulings have to be made on a procedural basis only.

Second, when we have an extensive number of amendments and the Chair has to make this ruling, it may seem to some Hon. Members or to the public watching that just a lot of figures are being quoted. There may be a natural curiosity as to what each one of these amendments consists of, but it is important that all Hon. Members and the public watching understand that it is not the place of the Chair in this ruling to comment upon, to explain or to try to explain what the substance of these particular amendments might be. This is a procedural ruling. All Hon. Members will, of course, have access immediately, as these numbers are read out, to what those amendments are and the substance of them. It is important as much as possible that people understand what we are doing in this place at this particular time.

Those motions, or in common parlance, those amendments withdrawn since the Order Paper was printed last night are the following: 1, 4, 6, 9, 10, 13, 16A, 17, 18, 20, 20A, 31, 36—

Some Hon. Members: Hold it.

Mr. Speaker: I invite Hon. Members, if I am moving too fast, to indicate that I am, and I have that indication. I will back up a bit. I will continue with 20A, 31, 36, 38, 53, 65, 73, 102A, 109, 117, 124, 132 and 134.

May I proceed?

Some Hon. Members: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: A number of motions in amendment to Bill C-72 propose to delete clauses or parts of clauses. In other words, those amendments do not do other than ask that this House, if it gets to vote on these amendments to take parts of the Bill out. Some of these motions, if adopted, might have the effect of altering the principle of the Bill. However, it is a well established practice that such motions, notwithstanding their impact on the principle of the Bill, are allowable at this stage for this is the only method by which Members can debate these clauses.

Again I want it clearly understood by all Hon. Members and the public that I am dealing in procedural terms. I am not dealing, nor am I sitting in judgment on the substantive effect of any amendment. That is for the House to do at the appropriate time. What I am saying here is that we have had a tradition in this House where at this stage of proceedings the Chair will allow amendments that delete in the interests of allowing debate on a substantive matter at the appropriate time. That principle applies to this Bill just as much as it does to any other Bill. As your Speaker I have an obligation to ensure that that procedural principle applies to all Bills no matter what their substance may be.

Consequently, this ruling will deal with Motions Nos. 1A, 2, 2A, 2B, 5 to 8 inclusive, 11, 12, 19, 21, 22, 23, 24A, 25 to 28 inclusive, 28A 29, 30, 32, 33, 34, 35, 37, 38A, 39, 41 to 45 inclusive, 45A, 46, 47, 49, 52, 59, 60, 61, 70, 72, 74, 76, 79, 80, 84 to 93 inclusive, 95, 96, 96A, 97 to 102 inclusive, 103, 104, 106, 106A, 107 to 110 inclusive, 112, 114, 115, 115A, 120 to 123 inclusive, 125 to 131 inclusive, 133, 135 and 136.

Motions Nos. 1A, 2, 2A and 2B all deal with the purpose of the Act and will be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

Motions numbered 5 and 7, which deal with the Interpretation section of the Bill, will be grouped for debate and will be voted on separately.

[English]

Motion No. 8 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Fundy Royal (Mr. Corbett) causes the Chair concern because it is contradictory of an earlier part of Clause 3.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think that is a withdrawn motion according to the information you gave us earlier. You may not have to rule on it, because according to the first list you gave us, No. 8 was withdrawn.

Some Hon. Members: No, it wasn't.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary and I will—

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, I apologize.

Mr. Speaker: Just so that we do keep the record straight, the Parliamentary Secretary is now indicating, I think, that the ruling as I have been reading it is correct. The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) is in accord with that?

Mr. Gauthier: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: I will read this again. Motion No. 8 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Fundy—Royal causes the Chair concern because it is contradictory of an earlier part of Clause 3. Again, I say to Hon. Members and to the public watching this that we are dealing here with procedural matters. Hon. Members have in front of them all of these motions. It is not the place of the Speaker, nor could I possibly do so at this time, to try to explain what each one of these motions was or, for that matter, to read them, but they are available and are in front of Hon. Members at this time.

Citation 773(2) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition reads as follows:

> An amendment must not be inconsistent with, or contradictory to, the bill as so far agreed to by the committee, nor must it be inconsistent with a decision which the committee has given upon a former amendment.

For this reason, I must advise the Hon. Member for Fundy—Royal that the Chair has no alternative but to rule Motion No. 8 out of order.

Motion No. 11 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Simcoe South (Mr. Stewart), Motion No. 12 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington (Mr. Vankoughnet) and Motion No. 39 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Fundy—Royal cause the Chair difficulty because they go against the principle of the Bill as the Bill was adopted at second reading and as set out in the purpose clause of Bill C-72. This is contrary to citation 773(1) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition. In addition, Motion No. 39 is contrary to Clause 34 as that clause was amended in committee. For these reasons, the Chair has no choice but to rule Motions Nos. 11, 12 and 39 out of order.

[Translation]

Motion numbered 19 deals with the Administration of Justice part of the Bill. It will be debated and voted on separately.

[English]

Motion No. 21 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Fundy—Royal causes problems for the Chair in that it is beyond the scope of the Bill, contrary to citation 773(1) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition. After consideration, I have no choice but to rule Motion No. 21 out of order.

Motions Nos. 22, 23, 24A, 25, 26 and 29 which seek to amend the part of the Bill on communications with and services to the public will be grouped for debate and voted on as follows:

(a) A vote on Motion No. 22 will dispose of Motions Nos. 23 and 29;

(b) Motions Nos. 24A, 25 and 26 will be voted on separately.

Motions Nos. 27, 28, 28A, 30, 32 and 33 all deal with regulations in relation to communications with and service to the public. They will be grouped for debate and voted on as follows:

• (1540)

(a) Motion No. 27 will be voted on separately;

(b) an affirmative vote on Motion No. 28 will obviate the need for a vote on Motion No. 28A. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 28 will necessitate a vote on Motion No. 28A;

(c) Motion No. 30 will be voted on separately; and

(d) an affirmative vote on Motion No. 32 obviates the necessity of a vote on Motion No. 33. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 32 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 33.

Motions numbered 34 to 61 deal with the Language of Work. After careful consideration, the Chair is of the opinion that debate on proposed motions to this section of the Bill should be divided in three groups as follows:

(a) motions 34 to 47 on Rights Relating to Language of Work, Duties of the Government and Regions of Canada prescribed; and

(b) motion 49 on Minimum and additional duties in prescribed regions and motions 59, 60 and 61 on Special duties for institutions directing or providing services to others and regulations.

[English]

The Chair will now deal with group (a). Motions 34 to 47 will be grouped for debate and voted on as follows:

(a) an affirmative vote on Motion No. 34 obviates the need for a vote on Motions No. 35 and 37. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 34 necessitates a vote on Motion numbered 35;

(b) an affirmative vote on Motion No. 35 obviates the need for a vote on Motion No. 37. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 35 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 37;

(c) an affirmative vote on Motion No. 37 obviates the necessity of a vote on Motion No. 38A. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 37 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 38A;

(d) Motion No. 39 was ruled out of order earlier;

(e) an affirmative vote on Motion No. 41 obviates the necessity of a vote on Motions No. 44 and 45. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 41 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 44;

(f) an affirmative vote on Motion No. 44 obviates the necessity of a vote on Motion No. 45. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 44 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 45;

(g) Motions No;. 42, 43, 45A, 46 and 47 will be voted on separately.

The Chair will now deal with group (b).

Motions numberd 49, 52, 59, 60 and 61 will be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

Motions numbered 70, 72 and 74 all deal with the Participation of English-Speaking and French-Speaking Canadians part of the Bill. They will be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

Motions numbered 76, 79 and 80 all deal with the Advancement of English and French part of the Bill. They will be grouped for debate and voted on as follows: (a) motions numbered 76 and 79 will be voted on separately; and (b) motion numbered 80, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington (Mr. Vankoughnet), is identical to motion numbered 79 and will not, therefore, be selected and put to the House.

Motions Nos. 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 95, 96, 96A, 97, 98, 99, 100 and 101 all deal with the Commissioner of Official Languages part of the Bill. They will grouped for debate and voted on as follows:

(a) Motion No. 85 will be voted on separately;

(b) Motion No. 84, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Simcoe South (Mr. Stewart), is identical to Motion No. 85 and will not, therefore, be selected and put to the House.

(c) Motions No. 86, 87, 88, 90, 91, 92, and 93 will be voted on separately;

(d) Motion No. 89, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington, is identical to Motion No. 88 and will not, therefore, be selected and put to the House;

(e) an affirmative vote on Motion No. 95 obviates the necessity of a vote on Motion No. 96. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 95 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 96;

(f) Motion No. 96A, 97 and 100 will be voted on separately;

(g) Motion No. 98, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Simcoe South, and Motion No. 99, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington, are identical to Motion No. 97 and will not, therefore, be selected and put to the House; and

(h) Motion No. 101, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington, is identical to Motion No. 100 and will not, therefore, be selected and put to the House.

Motions No. 102, 103, 104, 106, 106A, 107 and 108 all deal with the Court Remedy part of the Bill. They will be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

Motion No. 120 deals with the Related Amendments section of the Bill. It will be debated and voted on separately.

Motion No. 121 deals with the Consequential Amendments part of the Bill. It will be debated and voted on separately.

Motion No. 122 deals with the Transitional Provisions, Repeal and Coming Into Force part of the Bill. It will be debated and voted on separately.

Motions No. 123, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134 and 136 all deal with the Preamble.

They will be grouped for debate and voted on as follows:

(a) Motions No. 123, 125, 126 and 127 will be voted on separately;

(b) An affirmative vote on Motion No. 128 obviates the necessity of a vote on Motion No. 129. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 128 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 129;

(c) Motion No. 130 will be voted on separately;

(d) An affirmative vote on Motion No. 131 obviates the necessity of a vote on Motion No. 133. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 131 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 133;

(e) Motion No. 136 will be voted on separately.

Motion No. 135, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington, causes the Chair procedural difficulty in that it is beyond the scope of the Bill, contrary to citation 773(1) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition. For this reason, the Chair has no choice but to declare the motion out of order.

Before I put the motions to the House, I want to say to Hon. Members that the Table and the officers charged with the obligations of handling a complex matter like this are very appreciative of the co-operation that was extended to all of them by all of the Hon. Members involved. I want to say from the chair that that has made it a lot easier.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: I want to emphasize again that in these deliberations in which we have taken some minutes, I am making rulings on the procedural acceptability of certain amendments and I am dealing procedurally with how they will be debated. It is not for the Chair to consider the substance of these amendments, that is for the House to do. The obligation of the Chair is to be sure that this House can deal with amendments put by Hon. Members to Bills in a proper and appropriate way.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I think I would be safe in saying that I speak for all Members of the House when I thank you for the care that you have taken with the judgment and also to the Table for their efforts in this matter.

My hon. friend, the House Leader of the Official Opposition, alluded to a motion which we had discussed earlier. I wish to put it at this time. There have been consultations among the Parties with respect to the votes this evening and I think you would find consent for the following motion:

That at 5.45 p.m., the Speaker shall interrupt any proceedings before the House and proceed to the deferred divisions relating to second reading of Bill C-130.

Immediately after the deferred divisions on Bill C-130, leave having been given, the Speaker shall put all questions necessary to dispose of the report stage of Bill C-72.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions among the Parties with respect to the tabling of the report of the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Oceans. I think you would find unanimous consent to move to Committee Reports in order to allow the committee report to be tabled now. I thank the Parties for their co-operation.

Mr. Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

FISHERIES AND OCEANS

PRESENTATION OF FOURTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Gerald Comeau (South West Nova): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the Fourth Report of the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Oceans, in both official languages.

Pursuant to Standing Order 99(2) of the House of Commons, the committee requests the Government to table a comprehensive response to this report.

A year ago all Members of the Standing Committee on Fisheries and Oceans agreed to look into the development of aquaculture in Canada. The committee decided to travel to Norway and Scotland to see recent developments made by those countries in fish farming.

On December 17, 1987, this committee presented to the House a trip report of its overseas findings. This committee then decided to visit the west coast and east coast of Canada to examine the status of the Canadian aquaculture industry. Members of the committee were pleased to learn that from a technological and scientific point of view, the aquaculture industry in Canada does not need to envy other countries.

This industry, however, needs good support in certain areas in order to be able to fully compete on the international markets. Recommendations contained in this report are tailored to make Canadians aware of the opportunities offered by this industry and to facilitate its further development.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I would first of all like to join all my colleagues in congratulating the Clerks of the House for spending a large part of their weekend studying, working and writing their recommendations on the 136 or so amendments that have been tabled.

During the Committee study, Mr. Speaker, Government Members proposed amending the purpose of the Bill and deleting from it some words that I consider very important. The purpose of my amendment is quite simply to restore the wording of the original Bill tabled in this House on June 25, 1987; that is, the purpose of the Act would read as follows:

The purpose of this Act is to extend the present laws of Canada relating to official languages to ensure respect for English and French as the official languages of Canada and ensure equality of status and equal rights and privileges as to their use in all federal institutions, in particular with respect to their use in parliamentary proceedings, in legislative and other instruments, . . .

And it goes on, Mr. Speaker.

The purpose of the Act, Mr. Speaker, is very important. In the debate in Committee, I said that it was perhaps the most important clause in the Bill because according to the preamble, it clearly establishes, both for Canadians and for those who will have to study and, more important, interpret this Act, that the purpose is part of it and is very useful in interpreting it. It adds no substantive rights, I admit. As I said in Committee it has symbolic value for me, but it is also extremely important because experience has shown that the purpose of the 1969 Act, Section 2, was used repeatedly by the courts for interpretation purposes, and we were told then that the purpose clause, as drafted in the 1969 Act was declaratory. It was an admirable declaration of intent, but the law had no teeth, no provisions for enforcement.

So I feel that the purpose of the act is to define and spell out the fact that the main objective of the exercise is to strengthen the Official Languages Act; not another act, but that one in particular. Let us be specific, let us say it plainly! To my mind, this is one way of emphasizing the importance of the Act. I also have a great deal of respect for the Interpretation Act. I am not a lawyer, Mr. Speaker, but I know that the Interpretation Act (Chap. I-23) also recognizes the importance of the purpose of an act. The text reads as follows:

"Every enactment shall be deemed remedial, and shall be given such fair, large and liberal construction and interpretation as best ensures the attainment of its objects."

To understand clearly what the Act wants to accomplish or correct, we cannot ignore its purpose, hence its importance. Thus, the interpretation value of the purpose clause clarifies and may support the other provisions of an act. That is why I have tabled a single amendment, Mr. Speaker: this one. It is because I wanted, in the short time allotted to us, to put as much strength and passion into my arguments as I could, as I wanted to see the Government's own original idea put back into the Bill, and have it state clearly and lucidly, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that the purpose of the Act was indeed to strengthen federal legislation on official languages.

There is no doubt whatsoever as far as that is concerned. It is inherently important because it has repercussions on all of the other clauses of the Bill. For instance, if there were some interpretation problem with a given section, a judge could give it a broader reading if the Act contained a purpose that warranted it. That was the case with the purpose of the Official Languages Act before the Conservatives sabotaged it. The effect of such a clause is to prevent overly restrictive interpretations such as the one that was made in the "Société des Acadiens du Nouveau-Brunswick" decision, wherein the Supreme Court of Canada ruled that the right to use one of the two official languages before the courts did not include the right to be understood by those courts. In fact, Clause 16 of the Bill we have before us today corrects that flaw by clearly imposing on judges the obligation of understanding the language of the proceedings without the assistance of an interpreter. The purpose of the Act is, then, to strengthen the Official Languages Act.

Mr. Speaker, I have here before me an interpretation method, the grammatical method, the teleological method. I will not read it because I will run out of time, but I want to refer Members to the Interpretation Act of Canada where they will see how important it is that the purpose section of an Act be clear and precise, so that the judiciary and the people are given an absolutely unequivocal statement of the intent of the legislator.

The amendment I have just moved is not revolutionary. Quite the opposite! It simply repeats the wording the Government had in its Bill for almost a year, wording that was removed—as we all know—to please a small group of Conservative Members who did not like the English translation. I am sorry, but I did not translate the text. They do not like the word "extend". My colleague from Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault) will I hope be introducing an amendment soon to correct the English text that was tabled. My intention was to restore in its entirety the wording the Government had proposed, that is to say that in English one would read:

[English]

> 2. The purpose of this Act is to extend the present laws of Canada relating to official languages . . .

That is the original wording in the Bill introduced by the Government in June, 1987. I think that it says—in French clearly that the purpose is to strengthen and

[English]

If people do not like the word "extend", and I understand that there was some confusion, because it was even translated in my own office as "reinforce". I do not think that the word "reinforce" is appropriate. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault), will move an amendment to reinstate the word "extend", which I understand is the correct English expression. Not being a specialist in those terms, Mr. Speaker, I will say nothing further.

Mr. Speaker, the tendency of Canadian jurisprudence at the present time is to use the teleological method I referred to earlier. That is why the purpose of Bill C-72 is important in the initial version and in the amendment moved by the Member for Ottawa—Vanier, myself. I and my colleagues in the Liberal party, including the Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme), want to ensure that the Official Languages Act will be given a broad interpretation by the courts, and, I repeat, a liberal one. Hence the necessity of stating that the purpose of this Act is to strengthen the legislation on Official Languages.

For instance, if someone makes a complaint pursuant to a right granted by Bill C-72, the federal institution concerned might defend itself by saying that the situation at issue is the normal institutional practice. We have always worked that way. What do you want? That is how it works. With the purpose of the bill being to strengthen the legislation, I think that the plaintiff could rightly argue that new procedures will have to be created and that we cannot be satisfied only with what exists.

With the word "reinforce" in the purpose of the Act, it will be clear that it is not the status quo, but rather a big step forward. The original version of clause 2 of Bill C-72, my amendment, represents a quantum leap, an obligation to do more, and that is what we want, Madam Speaker.

The Liberal amendment, as I just said, simply restores the Government's wording. I do not see why the Government, which was deceived by its backbenchers who said that if they were granted some amendments, they would vote for or support the Bill . . . They did not do so, Madam Speaker, and the Government was had in this deal. And I say to the Government that since that is so, since your recalcitrant caucus members do not want to play the game, let us restore the original wording of the Bill and we will vote for it.

Mr. Dan McKenzie (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Veterans Affairs): Madam Speaker, I gather that I am speaking to my amendment now.

I would like to point out and explain why so many amendments were tabled. We felt because a great number of witnesses who wished to appear before the committee, which was considerable—and they were very important witnesses from very important organizations, legal societies and individuals—were denied an opportunity to appear before that committee, we did not support the committee's decision that it would not travel.

This particular piece of legislation has caused great and serious concern right across the country. I can tell you, Madam Speaker, that it has very little support across Canada, especially western Canada. More time should have been spent hearing witnesses. It was a very serious error to deny all these responsible people a chance to appear. That was one of the main reasons why we had to table a number of amendments.

I would also like to point out that there is a theory among many Members in the House, which has been around a long time, that any time a language Bill comes up or anything to do with language, not one Member of Parliament is to question it. One cannot ask a question or make a statement about it. One cannot propose an amendment to it. If one does then immediately one is slandering. I do not mind being slandered, but I do not like my constituents being slandered, and Canadians being slandered because they ask questions about Bill C-72. I think that the comments that are being made by many Members of Parliament here daily about Canadians who would dare ask a question about official languages or any language Bill are absolutely insulting and intolerable. I will speak up for them at any time. No one will stop me with their name calling. I will try to be as constructive as I possibly can at all times.

With respect to the amendment, Motion No. 2, the clause would read:

> The purpose of this Act is to
> (a) ensure respect for English and French as the official languages of Canada and ensure equality of status and equal rights and privileges as to their use in all federal institutions, wherever it is reasonable to do so in the circumstances.

This amendment would prevent the emphasizing and the segregating of certain institutions, for example, a parliamentary proceeding. This amendment would also ensure that only where it is reasonable to do so would both languages get absolute equality of use. This amendment seeks to prevent a great deal of superfluous work that would have to be done to ensure that the strict wording of the Bill was followed.

My Motion No. 2A amends Clause 2, lines two to five. Clause 2(a) would read:

—legislative and other instruments, in the administration of justice and in communicating with or providing services to the public.

This amendment would delete from Clause 2(a) the words "and in carrying out the work of federal institutions". This amendment would allow the merit system to become intact, allowing hiring and promotion in the Public Service to be done on the basis of qualifications and experience rather than official language spoken. It would also close the floodgates on the interpretation of language of work of federal institutions. As the Bill stands, it is far too open-ended.

The reason we have to give serious consideration to the return of the merit system is because we had a recent case in Vancouver in which a civil servant was in line for a promotion. He was denied promotion because somebody here in Ottawa decided overnight to designate the senior position bilingual. This unilingual English-speaking Canadian was fully qualified for the job. The only way he could get his promotion was to hire lawyers and go to court to fight for his promotion. That is not acceptable to me or to the Canadian people. In this case the judge ruled in his favour. He said that there was no evidence presented that, overnight, this position in Vancouver had to be bilingual. He said it was inexcusable for the Government to be designating this position bilingual overnight. The man has been granted his promotion.

Another concern is that the Government has not responded to that court ruling. We do not know whether more and more unilingual Canadians are going to have to hire lawyers to go to court to get their promotions or not. If this is going to be the procedure from now on, then the Government is going to have to look to providing for compensation for individuals who are going to have to hire lawyers to get a job or to go to court for a promotion.

With my amendment, Motion No. 2B, the clause would read:

—support the development of English and French linguistic minority communities and maintain the use of the English and French languages within Canadian society;

This amendment would state that a purpose of the Act is to "maintain" the use of the English and French languages in Canadian society rather than "generally advance the equality of status and use" of these languages. Purposeful advancement of either language would result in discrimination of one of them. Maintenance of both languages would ensure that both remain a part of Canadian society, but are not waged against each other.

I think that this is an important amendment. For example, there was a recent case involving an Anglophone who was running the post office in Otter Lake for 10 months. She could handle the work in French. She could speak reasonable French but all of a sudden Canada Post decided that it would give this individual a language diagnostic analysis. It was found out that her French was not perfect. Thus she was fired.

There is a double standard here. I do not want to get into naming the other side. I have never heard of any people on the other side being fired because they cannot speak perfect English.

Even the French-Canadian community in Otter Lake took up her cause. They were out marching on the street trying to convince Canada Post to give her job back. Not everyone can reach level C French and not everyone can reach level C English.

As far as I am concerned, no one should be fired from their job in this country because they cannot speak perfect English or perfect French.

[Translation]

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Madam Speaker, a number of amendments have been proposed here. One by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), is aimed at reinforcing Bill C-72 by reinstating wording that was dropped from the Bill during consideration in committee.

The other amendments, Madam Speaker, were approved by members of the Group of Fifteen, the dinosaurs, the Tory backbenchers who objected to the principal contained in Bill C-72. I deeply regret the fact that these Members submitted these amendments, because I believe that the split in the Conservative Caucus has been very damaging, not just to the Progressive Conservative Party but also to our country.

I believe the concept of bilingualism, adopted unanimously in 1969 by all political Parties in this Parliament, is very important and deserves our support. I also think, Madam Speaker, that when a Government introduces this kind of policy, it is entitled at the very least to the support of all its Ministers and parliamentary secretaries, including the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie) who just spoke and who is Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Veterans Affairs.

Motion No. 2 and Motion No. 2A standing in the name of this Member would have the effect of weakening the Bill's statement of purpose. Unfortunately, Madam Speaker, because of time allocation, I will not have a chance to speak to the other amendments proposed by this Member and by his colleagues who are of the same persuasion. However, my point is that all these amendments are not just minor changes or adjustments. They are major changes.

I will give you an example. In the amendment he just moved, the Hon. Member wants to strike out "and in carying out the work of federal institutions".

In the present legislation, of which Bill C-72 is an extension, it is clear that the objective is to maintain or enhance or reinforce the use of both official languages, not just when the federal Government communicates with or provides services to the public but also in carrying out the work of federal institutions. That is a very important principle, and it has had the effect of giving Anglophones and Francophones equal status within the Public Service. Before 1969 that did not exist.

Madam Speaker, I am sure you remember when, for instance at CN, everything was in English, and when government cheques were in English only. All that has changed.

An Hon. Member: Oh, oh!

Mr. Cassidy: Other things still need to be changed, but we have nevertheless made a big step forward.

However, whether French or English speaking and whatever their language of work, young people are still unsure about finding a job in the government of Canada. Madam Speaker, this is a principle I cannot accept. But this is what the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine is proposing.

As I said, I deeply regret the statement made by this Hon. Member. Madam Speaker, I deplore that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) is keeping silent. He has not condemned the very negative and destructive series of amendments put forward by many of the government Members. I am sorry that the Secretary of State (Mr. Bouchard) failed to intervene, in spite of his responsibilities towards bilingualism, and that he chose to go on holidays instead of getting involved in this matter in order to give some leadership.

Mr. Cooper: Madam Speaker, on two separate occasions within the last couple of minutes the Member has made reference to the absence of Members of this House, and that is clearly against the Standing Orders. I would ask that the Chair bring that to his attention.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I am sure that the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) does know the normal way of the House, which is not to mention the presence or absence of Hon. Members, but what I have heard, in French, was not the Hon. Member mentioning the presence or absence in the House of Hon. Members. This is what I have heard. This is why I did not make any comment.

[Translation]

Mr. Cassidy: Thank you, Madam Speaker, if I have referred to a member absent from the House, I made a mistake. I wanted to refer to the silence of the Secretary of State on this matter and to the fact that the government seems to be tolerating the behaviour of some of its important members, and even some of its ministers, allowing them to take a stand against a basic policy of the government.

Madam Speaker, our time is limited, but I would also like to mention an issue which seems to be of concern to Canadians, the problems facing the language teachers who have now been on strike or locked out for a period of eight to nine months, who are being asked by the Treasury Board to work five more hours a week and who would see their capability to teach in both official languages diminished. The four amendments in front of us do not directly, but indirectly, relate to that clause. The member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) wants to know if we think the Act must ensure the strenghtening of the equal status of both languages, Madam Speaker, and that is a very important matter. On the one hand, the government says he is for the official languages principle, but, on the other hand, he does nothing to implement this principle and does not react to the concerns of the French speaking community, and of Quebeckers. But when the defender of the rights of the French-speaking Canadians, the new minister who has just joined us, keeps quiet on this issue, I think we are entitled to ask ourselves some questions and to feel concerned, Madam Speaker.

[English]

I just want to say, finally, that in the committee a substantial number of adjustments and changes were made to this Bill. They were made in an effort to try to accommodate some of the concerns that have been expressed by different Members, including some constituents in my riding of Ottawa Centre, and there was an honest effort at compromise and in finding constructive solutions to the concerns being expressed by members from the Conservative back benches and from time to time by constituents of mine in Ottawa Centre or elsewhere.

To come at the last minute with this lengthy series of amendments, which at one time or another suggested that the Armed Forces should be English only, that the National Capital Region's language of work should be English, that the basic commitment to bilingualism should be reversed or should be undermined, at a time when we know that it is fundamental to our country and fundamental to keeping the country together, is not playing fair.

I hope that Canadians who are watching this debate realize what we are talking about here. This began as an effort by the Government, I believe, to reinforce the principle of official bilingualism. Unfortunately, it has turned into a sorry and distressing and regrettable affair in which one is forced to question the commitment of the Government to the concept and principle of bilingualism because of the degree to which they have allowed two messages to go out.

When the Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie) presents himself in the election next time, will he be supporting the Government's policy of bilingualism or will he in fact be against? No matter how he votes tonight or how he votes tomorrow, a Parliamentary Secretary, without being disciplined, will have been allowed to have raised serious questions which indicate that he is not at all in sympathy with the basic tenet of government policy, and that I believe to be unacceptable.

I think I would apply the same comments to one of the Vice-Chairmen of the Standing Joint Committee on Official Languages, who is another of this group of 15 back-benchers opposed to bilingualism. I think he too, particularly since the position is that of the vice-chairmanship of the Official Languages Committee, should retire himself from those particular functions.

As far as back-benchers are concerned, Madam Speaker, I am not sure whether or not they could be disciplined without being kicked out of the caucus. I think, however, that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Secretary of State (Mr. Bouchard), who is responsible for bilingualism, should surely by now in a week have been able to stand up and say directly, not indirectly, that they did not agree and that they condemn those interventions which are so harmful to the Party, to our Parliament and to this country.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to participate in the report stage debate dealing with the amendments that have been put forward by the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) and the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie).

I find it rather ironic that after all of the rhetoric in the House over the course of the last few days the first motion we are debating is the one put forward by the Member from Ottawa—Vanier. Here is a person who sat diligently during the course of the committee proceedings, had opportunities to deal with every facet of the Bill and had co-operation. I thought he would be the last person to come forward with amendments at report stage, but that, I guess, is a commentary of what goes on in this House from time to time.

Let me simply refresh the memories of Hon. Members and Canadians generally with respect to this legislation. Bill C-72 was introduced by this Government as a follow-up to a commitment made in the Speech from the Throne, one which has been given substantial and absolute support not only by the Government of this country but by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) giving superb leadership on the official languages policy in Canada both as Prime Minister and while Leader of the Opposition. This legislation was brought forward on June 25, 1987, a year ago.

I suppose it is a piece of legislation that has received the most intensive examination of any in the course of this Parliament. It has been scrutinized and examined by Members of Parliament and by the public at large. Representations have been made. But when all is said and done, I think the response to this Bill by editorialists across the country and by people from coast to coast from Newfoundland to British Columbia to the territories can be described as fair, equitable and very much in Canada's national interest.

The Bill itself is a response to our obligation as parliamentarians to deal in a legislative way as a result of constitutional provisions. Language provisions are the most entrenched parts of our Constitution. We are a country in which there are two official languages, and it is important for us to have legislation that recognizes and puts into effect our constitutional obligations. We come from various regions of Canada with different perspectives, but we are all interested in one Canada, a united Canada and one that reflects our heritage.

When I look at this legislation I think in terms of minority groups across the country. We have to be tolerant in the official languages policy. When we are not tolerant of any minority we are intolerant of all minorities in the country.

We have this Bill which I brought before the committee. We had a substantial number of sittings covering days, afternoons, mornings and nights. We were able to discuss in some detail various ideas both from the Government and from the Opposition. As a result of those deliberations we were able to come forward with more than 50 amendments.

What are the amendments with which the committee came forward? They had the effect of clarifying and of making more precise the meaning of the legislation. They were amendments which had the effect of making sure that fairness and equity would prevail in the application of the official languages policy in Canada. After all that is what our function as parliamentarians is all about.

We wanted to make sure, when we had the legislation, we had the best possible legislation to present to the people of Canada so that they knew in this area, as in any other area, that there would be equity of application, that the rules would be fair, and that the development of those rules would be such that they would be seen to be fair, that people would be able to understand the rules and we would be able to deliver on our commitment to make sure that, where there is significant demand, all Canadians receive, at the federal level, services by the Government of Canada in the language with which they are familiar.

What could be more reasonable than to have legislation to recognize that Canada has two official languages, that the country is one where we have a system established to ensure that the services of the Government of Canada are delivered in our official languages? I think the people of Canada understand that this legislation is fair.

An editorialist in the Globe and Mail described the Bill as magnificent because it is fair and does set in place reasonable rules. It is a Bill on which we worked together with all Members of Parliament to make sure that various points of view were taken into account.

We have heard statements made concerning the commitment of this Government on official languages and particularly the commitment of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). Let me conclude my participation at this time by paying special tribute to the Prime Minister in his role on official languages in Canada. I say, and I know that this will not be seriously challenged, that the Prime Minister has been steadfast in his leadership on the official languages policy in Canada. He has demonstrated his belief in one of the fundamental principles on which he as Prime Minister and the Government operate that there be fairness in the application of the official language policy across the country.

He faced some difficult challenges as Leader of the Opposition when an attempt was made virtually to embarrass him on the day that he arrived her as the elected Member of Parliament for Central Nova. He met that challenge head on. I say to you and to all Canadians that there is no person in this country with a better sense of fairness and equity on official languages than the Prime Minister of our country. I can say that without any fear of serious challenge. He has demonstrated time and time again that he understands this country. He has a sense of the country and is prepared to give it leadership.

This Bill is legislation that will be passed by this House. Actions speak far, far louder than words. We will have this legislation which has been considered in very great detail by Members of Parliament. We have had a chance on the part of the Government to assist as much as possible in making sure that the Bill in the form in which it has come forward does reflect the considered views of Members of Parliament from all sides of the House.

It is fine for the Member from Ottawa—Vanier to come forward and try to be purer than pure concerning Bill C-72, but I commend to Members of the House of Commons that we take the legislation as it has been reported to the House by the committee with its amendments, that it go forward from report stage in that form, that we move forward tomorrow and pass it at third reading and send it to the Senate. We can then at the earliest possible date have Royal Assent and have a fair, equitable official languages law in Canada.

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Madam Speaker, I would like to deal more specifically with motion No. 1A on the Order Paper, which is being put forward by my colleague for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier). It aims at restoring the original wording of the Bill, that is to restore the concept that the purpose of the Government legislation now before the House is to extend the Official Languages Act.

Historically, what transpired is that the Bill included that extension concept, but before the House Committee to which the Bill was referred an amendment was introduced to take that concept out. If I understood correctly the committee proceedings, it is the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin), who usually acts as a champion of official languages and the French language in particular who, interestingly enough—but since I did not attend the committee, I would like him to explain why he did that.

I read in the committee proceedings that he did so in a spirit of consensus in order I suppose to try and rally the most regressive Members of his party whith whom there was difficulty in committee in support of official languages. We are seeing the results. Unmoved, the dinosaurs came back with some 136 amendments they put on the Order Paper in order to try not only to completely water down the Official Languages Act, but clearly to try and kill the legislation because as we know the session already is well-advanced. We know we have very little time left, and if each of those amendments were to have been discussed one by one, the legislation would have died on the Order Paper. This is why last week, in the Official Opposition, we challenged the Government to bring in time limitation on the Bill, in order to ensure that the Conservative dinosaurs would not succeed in killing the Official Languages Act.

But to come back to the relevant amendment, what happened in committee in my view is a serious change that significantly weakens the Official Languages Act. To answer the question put by an Hon. Member, let me repeat that it is the Hon. Member for Charlevoix who in committee, to everyone's surprise, put forward that amendment that significantly weakens the Official Languages Act since in fact it deletes from the Act, in clause 2, which is an interpretation clause, therefore a very important clause, a clause that will guide the court when it will interpret the Act, and render a legal decision. In the original wording put forward by the Government, the bill read: "The purpose of this Act is to extend the present laws of Canada relating to official languages to ensure respect . . . ". Those are the terms, "to extend the present laws of Canada relating to official languages" that were taken out by the amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for Charlevoix. Thus, the English version reads:

[English]

—the purpose of the Act is to extend the present laws of Canada relating to official languages, and so on, and to ensure the respect for both languages, blah, blah, blah. This concept, in French, "renforcer", and in English, "to extend", has been removed by the amendment, all in an attempt to try to appease the most regressive elements of the Conservative Party.

Mr. Hawkes: Not true.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Yes, read the text of the committee hearings.

Mr. Hawkes: You read the committee hearings, you'll find out it's not true.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): I have them here. I am being told it is wrong but I will quote it in French because the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin) spoke in French. He said this:—

The Member from Charlevoix says: "You can well understand that I am proposing this amendment for reasons—and if I do so, it is via conciliatory spirit." His intentions were good and I am not questioning them. However, it didn't do much good. In fact, the amendment was agreed, and the Bill is now short a very important provision for the reinforcement of the Official Languages Act, but that didn't satisfy the dinosaurs who made new attempsts.

Madam Speaker, of all the things this amendment was proposed on June 22, on the very day when the new Secretary of State was elected in Lac-Saint-Jean and was still celebrating his victory! He did not object to this amendment although he knew full well he was to be responsible for the adminstration of the Official Languages Act. He did absolutely nothing to stop the Conservative members from using their majority in committee to water down with their amendments, the basic concept of the Official Languages Act which is to reinforce not to weaken the Act.

Where is the Secretary of State at a time when we are trying to restore the Bill to its original version? Where is he? I'm not saying, Madam Speaker, that he is absent from these premises. I ask this question: Where is Lucien, the guy who is supposed to defend the people of Québec and the French language? While we are trying to reinstate the concept that the Official Languages Act must be enhanced our man is sunbathing! That is what is going on!

Madam Speaker, allow me to propose an amendment which brings the English version of the amendment put forward by my colleague from Ottawa—Vanier more in line with the French version.

Motion No. 1A proposed by my colleague from Ottawa—Vanier reads as follows: That Bill C-72 be amended in Clause 2 by striking out line 40 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor, and I quote:

"2. The purpose of this Act is to reinforce the present laws of Canada relating to official languages to . . . "

Unfortunately, the word "extend" does not appear in the English version of the amended bill, as it did in the original text introduced by the Government. Before the dinosaurs removed this clause in Committee, it was the word "extend" which appeared in the text.

In order to re-establish the original text, I suggest for the English version only, since my colleague's motion is right in French:

[English]

That Motion No. 1(a) be amended in the English text only by replacing the word "reinforced" in the fourth line of the motion by the word "extend".

I made this suggestion, with the support of my colleague the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau).

Madam Speaker, I suppose that it is with the rather clear and acknowledged purpose to demonstrate that the Liberal Party of Canada has every intention to support the principle that all the amendments to this bill should essentially reinforce the Official Languages Act.

They are not there to make small ad hoc adjustments Bill C-72 is not there to weaken the Official Languages Act but to enhance it, give it more teeth and add in an interpretative clause which is extremely important for legal purposes guarantees, so that a magistrate will readily understand that the purpose of Bill C-72 is to reinforce the current policy of the Federal Government in the area of official languages, a policy established several years ago.

Madam Speaker, such was the purpose of my intervention.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques) seconded by Mr. Garneau moves:

That Motion No. 1(a) be amended in the English text only by replacing the word "reinforced" in the fourth line of the motion by the word "extend".

Mr. Hawkes: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The committee, in its wisdom, considered the issue, and the committee's decision was to remove the lines because of the lack of equivalence between the word "extend" and the word "renforcer". We are dealing with a clause that deals with the equality of status and use of the two official languages.

In this case, this amendment was to change the English-language version to the word "extend". I think if you consult English-French dictionaries and French-English dictionaries you will find that the word is not equal to the word "renforcer". I suggest that you have a bit of a dilemma as to whether the amendment is, therefore, admissible. We are dealing with a very sensitive language issue and talking, in this particular clause, about equality.

It is clear that our Party is attempting to pass a piece of legislation which deals equally and fairly with the two language groups in this country. To admit a set of words in the Purpose clause which are different on one side of the Bill from the other would not serve the nation well. It was the committee's conclusion that it did not serve the nation well in the first instance and that is why the words were removed. We have, in the amended Bill as reported to the House, a clause which the committee, in its wisdom, considers to be equal in both languages. The Official Opposition is seeking to amend this Bill in such a way as to produce inequality in the use of language.

Mr. Gauthier: Madam Speaker, what we have just heard is, to my mind, a lot of nonsense. The Parliamentary Secretary is the expert in the domain. I am surprised he used that argument because he is more intelligent than that. He knows, I know, and everyone knows that Bill C-72 was drafted in parallel. That is, it was drafted in English with instructions given by the Cabinet, by the Ministers, to express thoughts clearly and to express objectives clearly.

Indeed, if one looks at the Bill one sees that it sometimes does not go on in French as it does in English. It is not meant to be a direct translation, as it was in the old days. The concept of translating from English to French is now passé. We now have the concept of parallel drafting, which the Parliamentary Secretary knows about. The English-speaking team and the French-speaking team are asked to draft Bills in parallel but with the same objective.

Using Clause 11 as an example, it does not make any sense to refuse—

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I think that by discussing the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques's amendment, we have now reached the point where we are almost dealing in semantics.

As your Speaker, I suggest that the House should set aside this amendment for the time being and allow the procceedings to continue; the Chair would be in a position to rule on the relevancy of this amendment in a few minutes.

[English]

Mr. Ron Stewart (Simcoe South): Madam Speaker, it is with no joy that I participate in this debate, that I refute the amendments from across the way, and that I support my colleague, the Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie). I am almost debating a question of privilege, because some of us who moved amendments to this Bill have been maligned from across the way. It has been said that we are opposed to official bilingualism. Nothing could be further from the truth. We are opposed to Bill C-72. It is unfair; it is unjust; it makes second class citizens of Anglophones, and some Francophones; and it was drafted, I might add, by six out of seven Francophones in Treasury Board.

The Speaker explained to the television audience just how important this matter is. I am a Conservative. I am a member of this Government and a strong supporter of this Government and of my Prime Minister. No government in the history of Canada has accomplished more in three and a half years. It has dealt with free trade, the western concept, the Atlantic Accord, aid to farmers, the cancelling of the drastic NEP, and the cancelling of FIRA and bringing this country back, I hope, to a free enterprise system.

I support every bit of that, but I do not support unfairness. I do not support the fact that without the amendments of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine people in my riding can be dead-ended on a supervisory position because they are not bilingual. That has nothing to do with bilingualism. Everyone applauds the educating of young people in this country in two official languages.

I am devastated and heartbroken that my English-speaking colleagues, with whom I have served here, would stand back and allow this to be perpetrated on them and their constituents.

I have been called, from across the way, a dinosaur. I would like to tell you what happens when a dinosaur crashes through the bush. It tramples sheep and mice in its way who no longer speak up for their constituents, the reason for which they were sent to these hallowed halls.

I would like to speak for a minute about what happens with the amendments of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine in relation to Bill 101 of Quebec. The Government can tell us that we must support bilingualism in Manitoba, that we must oppose bilingualism in Saskatchewan and Alberta, that those people are all wrong, but no one must dare stand in this Chamber or stand in committee and mention Bill 101.

In excess of 800,000 English-speaking people in the Province of Quebec, and in the rest of Canada some 600,000, are trampled by a Bill which prohibits them from putting up an English sign or conducting business in English. Is that fairness?

We heard the Member across the way say that he wanted an amendment on "extension". I do not have a dictionary in front of me, but I know that they spent hours and hours on frivolous amendments to this Bill. One of the things about which they argued for days and days was the word "extend". Members over there tried to say that "extend" has the same meaning as "reinforce". When you reinforce a building that is falling down, you prop it up. Reinforce means a propping up. When you extend something, you lengthen it. They want to lengthen bureaucracy and control from one end of this country to the other. It has nothing to do with bilingualism.

With regard to the fairness about which we speak, we must not even mention the fact that unless people are in "bilingual imperative" positions, which means that they must have C-level French, they cannot be promoted. A little girl from Parks Canada phoned me this morning and told me that she was fired because she could not speak French. A fellow in Mississauga was given a promotion in Revenue Canada. This is recorded in the committee reports and no one denied it. After being given the promotion he was given a language test. This was in Mississauga, Ontario, Canada. They said that with 1,300 more hours of immersion training he could not attain C-level which was required for the promotion. They said "Goodbye, Mister". I can document that. Consider the girl who lost her job in a drugstore here in Ottawa because three customers did not feel she had enough facility in French.

Bill C-101 says:

> Every inscription on a product, on its container or on its wrapping, or on a leaflet, brochure or card supplied with it, including the directions for use and the warranty certificates, must be drafted in French. This rule applies also to menus and wine lists.
> Catalogues, brochures, folders and similar publications must be drawn up in French.
> Except as provided by regulation of the Office de la langue française, it is forbidden to offer toys or games to the public which require the use of a non-French vocabulary for their operation, unless a French version of the toy or game is available on no less favourable terms on the Québec market.

Mr. Caccia: The same applies here.

• (1700)

Mr. Stewart: Like fun it does. You can sell anything you want in Saskatchewan and Ontario, you can put up any sign or do anything you want. But you will not be able to do it in Saskatchewan with Bill C-72. Everyone knows that Bill C-72 is a power struggle. It is a grab for the bureaucracy of Canada from one end to the other, to control this great nation.

Every company name that is not in French must be changed before December 31. What happened when Mr. Bourassa said that he might change Bill 101? On April 17, 25,000 marched for French in Québec. Did they say anything about bilingualism then? Is there anyone fighting for 800,000 Anglophones in the Province of Québec?

This is a Draconian Bill. It will change the face of Canada. All I can say to my English speaking colleagues who believe in their heritage and have any thought about this nation ever progressing, is, stop this Bill. Let us take bilingualism where it belongs, from the schools up. Give bilingualism to our children, do not force it down their throats.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I have reviewed the points brought out by the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary with respect to the amendment presented by the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault). I found the points to be arguments for debate but not reasons to declare the amendment unacceptable. Therefore, we will continue debate on the amendment of the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Madam Speaker, I appreciate this opportunity to say something at report stage of Bill C-72. I am particularly pleased to have an opportunity to speak to amendments which deal with both sides of the issue, designed to strengthen the Bill, and amendments designed to weaken the Bill and strike at the very constitutional principle of equality between English and French in our national life.

It is particularly important to make such comments immediately after the observations made by the Hon. Member for Simcoe South (Mr. Stewart). He has attempted to make an emotional appeal to colleagues particularly in the government caucus in order to stir up fears and appeal to rather base emotions. It is even more necessary to consider the importance of our policy of official bilingualism and discuss what happened in the legislative committee dealing with this Bill.

After the constitutional activities of the early 1980s, the passage of a Bill to consolidate the laws of Canada is something that has faced Governments since 1983. It has fallen on the present Conservative Government to take up the work.

We who served on the joint standing committee waited many months wondering whether we would receive a Bill that would effectively renew the policy of official bilingualism to which Canada committed itself in 1969. Bill C-72 was tabled in the House over a year ago. Late this winter it came to second reading debate and finally to a vote. When the question was finally put at second reading stage, there was no vote against Bill C-72. This is noteworthy considering the later activity which took place in the legislative committee and which comes to us now at report stage of the Bill. We know that the vote at second reading is the vital point at which the House of Commons indicates its acceptance of the principle of the Bill. Those who are opposed to it should stand at that time and indicate their opposition, as the opposition Parties often do. However, there was no vote against the Bill and it passed with the appearance of unanimous support in the House and sent to a legislative committee.

The committee spent many hours with Ministers and officials in various Departments considering carefully what witnesses had to say about the Bill. We then proceeded to careful consideration of the successive clauses of the Bill.

The Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie) said that witnesses were denied the opportunity to be heard. It is true that all of those persons who might have wanted to attack the basic principle of the Bill were not heard.

I know that there are western Canadians who oppose official bilingualism. I grew up in the West and taught university students there. I know their feelings very well. Some of the western Canadian representatives who could have spoken to that Bill failed to appear. When the legislative committee saw that the first ones given the opportunity were not prepared to come here and spell out their opposition and become involved in debate with committee members, the committee decided to take up clause by clause consideration in view of the support of the House at second reading.

Motion No. 1A moved by the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), is designed to reinsert in the Bill language that was there when it was given second reading. An official from the Department of Justice stated strongly that this language was essential to the Bill as an indication to the official language minorities in Canada.

The language of "extend" in English and "renforcer" in French was removed from the Bill after a proposal late on a Tuesday night that was carried through the following afternoon.

The Member for Simcoe South (Mr. Stewart) should carefully consider the fact that the official from the Department of Justice was saying that the English-speaking minority in the Province of Quebec had been given the promise by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) that the language in Bill C-72 would extend the laws of Canada relating to language. I suggest that the French-speaking minority outside Quebec had an equal interest in this assertion.

Those are the best of reasons for recognizing the politics of the matter and for respecting the importance of the amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier.

It seemed clear that this was the last attempt to get the Conservative Members of the legislative committee on side, in support of the Bill. If this language were dropped and the final compromise made, the Bill could be reported back to the House and passed. However, it is because of the failure of that attempt and the appearance of all of these amendments that we have this unusual situation now, with opposition Parties and a vast majority of the Government fully in support while suddenly the opposition, which did not exist at second reading, has come forward in the way of amendments.

Let us consider the amendments proposed by the Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine. First, there is his suggestion that the policy should be applied to institutions wherever it is reasonable to do so in the circumstances. The question of what is reasonable could, itself, be a most disputatious matter. What is reasonable to the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine would not strike many other people as being reasonable, even a majority of the country, in the way of working with a policy of official bilingualism.

Concern has been expressed about employment and advancement in the Public Service of Canada, as if it were some type of right. Little concern is expressed for the policy itself by those who are critical of the Bill or those who want to weaken or destroy it entirely. Little is said of the brute reality of the country that there are large minorities who do not know the other official language and who deserve service from the Government of Canada in that language. They also deserve the opportunity of employment in the Public Service of Canada.

I see from press reports that the Hon. Member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields), the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, in his Party caucus apparently alluded to the French-speaking minority in Quebec, and the minority on a national basis, persons who speak only French, who surely deserve service in that language and the opportunity to work in it.

I find the suggestion quite incredible, that persons in the Public Service of Canada should not have to make the effort to learn French. Here I am speaking primarily of English-speaking members of the Public Service, and the fact that they should not have the obligation to learn French and be prepared to work in French in various carefully designed and established situations, but the ordinary citizen of Canada, down to children, should be required to become bilingual because others will not use the opportunity and take training provided by the Government of Canada in order to become bilingual. That is the fundamental unfairness of opposition to official bilingualism of the type expressed by the Hon. Member for Simcoe South.

[Translation]

Mr. Charles Hamelin (Charlevoix): Madam Speaker, I am well aware of the solemnity and seriousness of the occasion as I rise today to deal with the amendments and the very principle of the Bill C-72, which in a few hours will become the new Canadian official languages legislation.

I suggest that this new legislation is one of the corner-stones of the new and richer Canada which we want to build, a Canada more receptive to its two linguistic communities.

[English]

This piece of legislation is an Act of nation-building. Building Canada is more than a world, more than an attitude. It is at first a behaviour of generosity and openness.

I suggest that to build this country will require more than words, more than wishes; it will require openness and generosity towards our two linguistic communities and our minorities generally. Such is the purpose of this bill which is vital for our national unity, that all together we may continue to believe in this great Canadian vision which we must constantly reiterate and enhance. Our two well balanced communities will have to continue respecting each other.

I can understand the concerns of my colleagues who are trying to protect and defend the interests of unilingual Canadians. I understand them perfectly and I respect them for that; moreover I acknowledge their right to rise in the House to express their views. On the other hand, I cannot accept the fact that anyone should try to limit the rights of their neighbours, because by doing so, they are limiting and restricting their own rights, as though they were cutting the tree branch on which they are sitting.

And I am proud of the part I took during four years in the development of this new legislation. Despite all the admiration I have for my colleague, the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) who, for fifteen years has been the true advocate of linguistic minorities in our country, I am sad to see him now play petty politics. I know because he has proved during fifteen years that he is capable of doing much better than that. He himself had been waiting for his own party to act; he had hoped new legislation would be brought forward which would respect minorities better and, as it is said in clause 2 of the Bill, really ensure respect and equality for the two linguistic communities, attempt to recognize and advance the development of our linguistic minorities and define the powers and obligations of federal institutions.

You know, a man called Jean-Claude, who was not from Montreal—Sainte-Marie, his full name is Jean-Claude Saint-Martin, said: I choose to do good because doing good is a quiet activity, and noise never did anyone any good. I feel my colleague, the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) and some others are making statements that foster division more than unity. And what we need . . .

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) on a point of order.

Mr. Caccia: I apologize for the interruption, Madam Speaker. It seems to me that there is a rule of relevance in the House, and the Hon. Member should speak to the amendment that we are presently debating and not on any other matter that may have happened in committee. I bring to your attention, Madam Speaker, that in my view the Hon. Member is out of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Member has spoken to the principles of the Bill. He was mentioning Clause 2 a second ago.

In the last few hours we have been debating the Bill in general, and no one has raised any objections to that. I am sure that the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin) should be given some leeway by the House, considering the limited time given to debating the Bill. The Hon. Member for Charlevoix.

Mr. Hamelin: I am rather proud that in Clause 42 it states that the Government is now committed to "enhance the vitality of the English and French linguistic minority communities in Canada . . . ". That speaks for the English minority in Quebec. I am very proud to see that the Government and Parliament will now enhance the vitality of the English community in Quebec. I know the preoccupation of this community in Quebec. We need this community in Quebec. We need a strong English community in Quebec.

[Translation]

I also need, in this Government, in this Parliament, in our country, to feel I am a full-fledged Canadian. With the new provisions of this Bill, with the approval and generosity of my colleagues, today I feel I am more a Canadian than ever, a full-fledged Canadian. As a Quebecer and a Francophone, whether from Quebec or outside Quebec, I want all people everywhere in the country to be full-fledged Canadians, without arrogance but with tolerance, with mutual respect, with respect for others' opinions. Through our caucus and our Party, we have worked extremely hard. True, we negotiated. It has been difficult. But we never lost sight of the substance of the Bill, which is the very spirit of our country, of this big dream. We never compromised on its substance. And that is true!

[English]

When we speak about fairness and equity, let me say that we really tried that within our own caucus and within our own Party. That is the mission I have for my colleagues.

• (1720)

My colleagues and myself were really committed to working together within this Party and now within this Parliament so we could understand each other better even though it's difficult, because you and I believe in this country.

[English]

Do you believe in Canada? I believe in Canada.

As long as I am respected. I do not feel superior. I want to join you all in building this great country.

I take this opportunity to thank the leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) and the leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent) for endorsing this bill. I want above all to thank my leader (Mr. Mulroney) who has inspired and supported me. I also want to thank all the linguistic communities that, in the last four years, have helped us develop a significant bill which makes this country grow. This legislation makes me feel better and I really believe in it. Otherwise, I shouldn't be here. I never intended to diminish people or their rights or shove legislation down their throats. What I wanted to accomplish with you all was to improve on the Canadian dream: a country united but respectful of its elements. And it is true that some provinces are taking certain measures. But it is in a spirit of generosity that one day we will understand each other and our first task is to start working on that goal today. I am calling on all my colleagues to unite. Despite all their reservations, we will all examine together, as we have done, this legislation and its application. And that is why our committee made some fifty amendments. The objective is not to win over anyone. It is Canada that must win.

[English]

For the sake of Canada and for the sake of its people.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Madam Speaker, I want to take part in the debate this afternoon, particularly with respect to the amendment of my colleague from Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) who is proposing that the original text concerning the application of this legislation be reintroduced in Bill C-72.

Madam, Speaker, the amendment moved by my colleague considerably strengthens the Bill, especially concerning its interpretation by the courts. This is why I draw this amendment to the attention of my colleagues in the House and I urge them to support it since all it does is restore the original text on which the House of Commons voted at second reading. This is a rather important principale and I wonder to what extent the committee could amend it without changing the basic thrust of the Bill itself and the principles which had been adopted during second reading debate.

Madam Speaker, any debate on linguistic issues invariably stirs emotions and Members have an opportunity to make speeches which convey their deepest feelings. Earlier this afternoon I listened to the Hon. Member for Simcoe South (Mr. Stewart), the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie), and the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin) when, with a certain passion, they expressed their views on Bill C-72.

Naturally, Madam Speaker, given the attitude of some Members of the House we may be strongly tempted to politicize the debate but, as it happens, they all belong to the same political Party.

But I do not think our country will be any richer if Canadians start bashing each other on the head. Mistakes do occur now and then, of course, but Bill C-72 now before the House is the result of a long process which began late in the last century by the election of a French-speaking Prime Minister and which was marked by a series of debates on linguistic issues. It should be noted as well that major steps were taken under several Canadian Liberal Prime Ministers.

I should like to pay special tribute to Lester B. Pearson who, during the 1960s, acknowledged the significance of the linguistic issue in this country by appointing the Laurendeau-Dunton Commission and introducing a number of legislative measures which were the clear and specific expression of the desire of the Liberal Party and of the Government then headed by Mr. Pearson to promote fairness in this country towards one of the important minorities, the French minority which was one of our two founding peoples.

In subsequent years, Madam Speaker, the Trudeau Government did a lot to make the system more equitable, to bring more justice between Canada's two main linguistic communities.

I was listening earlier to the Hon. Member for Simcoe South (Mr. Stewart) talking about injustice and individual cases of people who couldn't get a promotion in the Public Service because they weren't bilingual. I am not going to start this lengthy debate again and make emotional pleas. I simply want to point out that for generations that was the plight of Francophones in this country. However, they didn't complain about promotions. They couldn't get jobs, not because they weren't bilingual but because they didn't speak English. This happened not only in the Public Service but also in the private sector. And today, I hear people saying: Let time take its course. Let our secondary schools teach French, and eventually, people across Canada will be bilingual.

Madam Speaker, that's fine. But meanwhile, what is going to happen to the Francophone communities across this country who will have to wait years and years before they get services in their own language? And what is the Public Service's raison d'être? It is to provide services to the public! People do not have a God-given right to work in the Public Service. They have the possibility of doing so, but the purpose of the Public Service is to provide services to a clientèle. And if according to this country's Charter of Rights and Freedoms, that clientèle is entitled to receive services in the language of its choice, in English or French, our two official languages, will that right be paramount or will it be outweighed by the promotion of an employee who, all things considered, does not have to work in the Public Service and could find a job elsewhere?

The arguments put forward by the Hon. Member for Simcoe South would seem to be totally unacceptable, at least to someone who belongs to my particular group, and I refer here to the community of French-speaking Canadians.

Madam Speaker, as I was saying, Bill C-72 is the result of a lengthy process that was mostly initiated by the Bill introduced by the Liberal Government under Mr. Trudeau in 1969, and which the Leader of our Party had the privilege of helping to defend in the House and across the country.

So this Bill followed naturally upon that Act, which was implemented and put to the test, but Bill C-72 was made necessary especially by the patriation of the Canadian Constitution and the entrenchment in it of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, in particular sections 16 to 20 inclusive of that Charter, which recognize the fundamental character of the linguistic rights of both the Francophone and the Anglophone communities.

The main section, section 16, states that: English and French are the official languages of Canada and have equality of status and equal rights and privileges as to their use in all institutions of the Parliament and government of Canada.

Thus the Official Languages Act had to be adapted to reflect these rights that were entrenched into the Constitution of our country and were approved by Parliament in 1982, after a very lengthy debate.

Bill C-72 constitutes an important additional step that we should take to integrate new realities into our legislation, particularly those which derive from the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms and from sections 16 to 20 inclusive.

I would like to point out that if we could amend the Bill according to the proposal made by my colleague the Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), we would get even closer to achieving the stated objective. The objective pursued was to give Canadians in practice the rights, and the exercise of the rights, recognized by the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

How can these rights be applied? Through legislation that will have to be interpreted by the courts, and we believe that the motion of my colleague from Ottawa—Vanier would give the Official Languages Act, Bill C-72, the scope that it really should have.

I do not believe that it is by cutting corners to please so-and-so that we will have greater justice and as I see it, the Government's original intention with this Bill was to fully enforce this law. I deplore the removal of this introduction to clause 2, which could have been very useful to the courts in interpreting this legislation in future, both for English-language and French-language minority communities. Because English- and French-speaking minorities must be treated equally.

Madam Speaker, I would have liked to have much more time to answer the arguments of the Hon. Member for Simcoe South (Mr. Stewart) regarding comparisons between the rights of anglophones in Quebec and francophones elsewhere in the country.

Madam Speaker, one must have never really lived in Quebec to make the comparison the Hon. Member for Simcoe South made. We see a province where the schools at all levels, elementary, secondary and university, are publicly funded. A province with 800,000 or 600,000 English-speakers has three English-language universities totally financed by the Government as are the French-language universities in the same province. We see that the Government, not out of generosity, but as a matter of right, provides all social services in both official languages from public funds . . . This was the result of legislation.

Madam Speaker, I see that my time is up. Before sitting down, I would like to thank my colleague from Ottawa—Vanier, on behalf of the whole Official Opposition team, for his tremendous work and the cooperation he has given the Government. From the outset, the Leader of our Party stated our intention to support this Bill and the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier was the one mainly responsible for studying the Bill. I wish to thank him for that and congratulate him for the terrific job he has done.

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Madam Speaker, I am pleased to take part today in the debate on Bill C-72, especially after my colleague the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) and also the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin). I think that all Members in this House will recognize the tremendous work done by that man over a little more than a year on Bill C-72. Thanks to him the legislation came through as it now stands and as it looks acceptable to us of course, without the amendments moved.

The matter could be dealt with under various angles, Madam Speaker. We could look for various reasons to take heart, point to various aspects showing that the Bill is a tremendous step forward in the recognition of our Canadian language duality, not only for Francophones but also for Anglophones and all Canadians in this country.

I think the essential feature or one of the essential features of the Canadian reality is its bilingual and multicultural nature. And when dealing with Bill C-72, it is fitting in my view that we remember all those who before us, often in the face of great difficulty, and the last time having been in 1969, worked for the official recognition of both languages. It is my view that the country they built, Madam Speaker, holds a very special place in the world thanks to its features, especially its language features.

It is my personal view that courage and determination are needed to build a country, develop it and to give it a greater degree of security and prosperity than we ourselves enjoyed. But more is needed—generosity and also, today especially, Madam Speaker, tolerance. Nothing durable survived in this country unless it was two-dimensional, with the co-operation and above all the respect of both communities.

[English]

There is not and there cannot be in Canada only one language or only one culture. There cannot be only one way of doing things, of saying or thinking things in Canada. I could say more. But there must always be only one objective for all Canadians: the unity and the prosperity of this country. The official linguistic minorities in Canada are well aware that the battle for justice and equity is a long one and that it is not over yet. It will not be won by any glorious action, nor will it be won by a long constitutional or political battle.

The battle will be long because it deals with issues that are emotional for all Canadians. We can all say to each other here that by voting for Bill C-72 we will have progressed in the cause for linguistic justice in Canada.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker, it is important to state here, as I feel I have a duty to do so, in what context we have to deal with amendments to Bill C-72, and my wish is to do so with the least possible degree of frustration and emotion. But it is extremely difficult for a French-speaking Member of this House, whose forebears for 350 years fought for the recognition of one's language, to try and understand why someone might wish through a series of amendments to weaken, slow down and even paralyze in certain circumstances the development of a bilingual Canada.

I think that attempt can only be understood by referring to attitudes and concepts that were more in use in this country some 20 years ago, but no longer appear to reflect Canadian realities. In my opinion, this shows that by updating this legislation which dates back to 1969, this Conservative Government has the courage and the will to make the defense of linguistic rights and cultural minorities priority in its approach to the future.

Madam Speaker, I suggest it is very important . . . I feel I am a richer man today for having had the opportunity over the past four years to learn another language. I must admit it was not always easy.

[English]

English has been the key that has permitted me to discover a new country, a new Canada. I have many good friends in places that I did not know existed not too long ago.

I am trying to say that we must not see bilingualism as the only means by which we will give justice to our official linguistic minorities, important as that may be. I think the younger generations of Canadians today all over the country—which is the wonderful part of the new Canada— have shown us something. I had the experience as the Secretary of State of travelling back and forth across the nation two years ago and saw how our young Canadians have taught us that bilingualism is, in fact, an opportunity for our personal and collective development.

There is not a more obvious proof of this new spirit and tolerance than the Meech Lake Accord concluded between all the Canadian provinces and the federal Government. I recognize that Québec constitutes a distinct society within Canada and the linguistic duality is a fundamental distinction that we must protect. This Accord did not happen overnight. This Accord exists because it was inspired by realism, because it took into consideration the real nature of Québec and of Canada.

[Translation]

In any case, Madam Speaker, we must accept Canada for what it is today and what it will be tomorrow. We no longer want a Canada is a constant state of strife ans which is not representative of the reality of today. If Canada is a more dynamic, prosperous and self-confident country, it is because Canadian men and women have become aware that they have more reasons to be united than divided, especially when it comes to languages. In this connection, I am proud to pay tribute to a man who, five years ago, took over the leadership of the Party to which, I belong, a man who rose for the first time in this House to indicate his unqualified support for a resolution of the House upholding the rights of the Francophone minority in Manitoba. He felt that the Government had the absolute obligation to give our linguistic minorities in Canada the justice to which they are entitled.

[English]

And so he left for Winnipeg, under particularly difficult circumstances, to repeat his commitment in favour of linguistic justice. I believe that at that time five years ago the urgent need to modernize the law on official languages was not on our Party's national caucus weekly agenda.

However, from Cape Breton to British Columbia, Canadian men and women have heard the same message: "a right is a right, always and everywhere", and it should be preserved everywhere in this country. Today, the man who made these remarks is the Prime Minister of Canada.

To conclude, Madam Speaker, I should leave the House this very important message: Both as a Canadian and Francophone Canadian, not on behalf of my Quebec colleagues but together with them, I feel like saying: I should not be here today if I had not been convinced by the leadership of Brian Mulroney that justice is not an abstract ideal, but a means by which great Parties should be guided and great countries governed.

Madam Speaker, we no longer want an intolerant Canada. Countries are built on differences such as languages. Whether we speak French or English, that is a basic difference, not unique to Quebec, but proper to all the provinces of our nation. Canada's horizons are broad, Canada is managed by the courage of its people and the challenges they face. Madam Speaker, can Canada be anything else but the simple recognition of both its official languages which are flourishing thanks to its language policies. Madam Speaker, finally, for the dignity of all Canadians, I would like in the future the people to respect my French origins, along with the reality of the English-speaking Canadians, the two nations which built this country. As a French Canadian, I am proud of my origin, and pleased to share them with all my English-speaking colleagues who wish to do so.

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE IMPLEMENTATION ACT

MESURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Monday, July 5, consideration of the motion of Mr. Crosbie that Bill C-130, an Act to implement the Free Trade Agreement between Canada and the United States of America, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee, and the amendment of Mr. Axworthy (p. 16661) and of Mr. Young (p. 17089).

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It being 6:45, pursuant to the Order adopted earlier today, this House will now proceed with the defferred recorded division on the motion of the Hon. Member from Beaches (Mr. Young) concerning the subamendment to Bill C-130.

Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Young), which was negatived on the following division:

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES ACT

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-72, an Act respecting the status and use of the official languages of Canada, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to order made Monday, July 4, 1988, it is my duty to put forthwith every question necessary to dispose of the report stage of this Bill.

Mr. Gauthier, seconded by Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques) moved that Bill C-72, an Act respecting the status and use of the official languages of Canada, be amended in Clause 2 by striking out line 40 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

• (1830)

[English]

"2. The purpose of this Act is to reinforce the present laws of Canada relating to official languages to"

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques), seconded by Mr. Garneau, moved the following amendment:

That Motion No. 1A be amended in the English version by striking out the word "reinforce" and substituting the word "extend" therefor.

[English]

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the amendment?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the amendment will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the amendment stands deferred. The putting of the question on the motion shall also stand deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 2 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 2A standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie).

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 2B standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie).

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 5—

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. We are now through the first grouping, all of those motions having been moved at the time of the debate when the debate commenced. I believe that from now on it would be in order to call for the motion to be put to the House.

Mr. Speaker: I appreciate that the Hon. Minister is trying to assist the Chair. However, I think that the position we are in is that each of these motions will have to be put to the House. I will carry on in so doing.

The next question is on Motion No. 5.

Mr. Ron Stewart (Simcoe South) moved:

That Bill C-72 be amended in Clause 3

"Act of Parliament but it does not include or extend to any court, tribunal or other body established by or pursuant to an Act of a Province of by any other authority."

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

Mr. Gauthier: On division.

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

Motion No. 5 negatived.

Mr. Speaker: The next question is Motion No. 7.

Mr. Bill Vankoughnet (Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington) moved:

That Bill C-72 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 3 to 8 at page 4.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Bill Vankoughnet (Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington) moved:

That Bill C-72 be amended in the Preamble by adding immediately after line 33 at page 2 the following:

"AND WHEREAS the Government of Canada recognizes the potential divisiveness of the creation and maintenance of two official languages in Canada and is committed to reducing and eliminating such divisiveness;".

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11) the recorded division on the motion stands deferred.

The House will now proceed to the taking of the deferred divisions at report stage of the Bill now before the House. Shall I dispense with the ringing of the bells?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: The first question is on the amendment of Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques) to Motion No. 1A.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier) moved:

Motion No. 1A

That Bill C-72, an Act respecting the status and use of the official languages of Canada, be amended in Clause 2 by striking out line 40 at page 2 and substituting the folowing therefor:

"2. The purpose of this Act is to reinforce the present laws of Canada relating to official languages to:"

Mr. Speaker: The question is on the amendment of Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques):

That Motion No. 1A be amended in the English version by striking out the word "reinforce" and substituting the word "extend" therefor.

The House divided on the amendment of Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques), which was negatived on the following division:

● (1930)

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I propose, with the consent of the House, that the vote we have just taken be applied to the remaining motions, provided that the names of those voting and the way they vote will be separately recorded for each motion.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the suggestion. Is there agreement?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think that that is a very good suggestion, with the exception that perhaps some Members who did not vote may like to have their names added or subtracted to the lists.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the suggestion. I take it that there is agreement?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: I therefore declare the motion—

Mr. Corbett: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There are several of these motions with respect to which I have varying opinions. I would not give my concurrence to the vote being recorded just as the previous one has been taken.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There has only been one individual who has indicated that he may not be in agreement with the suggestion. It does follow my hon. colleague's suggestion that not all Members may be in the same position on all votes. Perhaps I can suggest that we move on and the Hon. Member in question, since he seems to be the only one, could consult afterward with the Table Officers and indicate just where he stands.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Minister of State has made, I think, a helpful suggestion. There seems to be agreement. Is the Hon. Member for Fundy—Royal in agreement with that?

Mr. Corbett: Yes, Mr. Speaker, that is agreeable.

Mr. Cochrane: Mr. Speaker, I am in agreement with that, except with respect to one motion that is going to be voted on which I would like to vote in favour of.

Mr. Speaker: I think the Hon. Member could see the Clerk and that would be arranged.

Is it agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Domm: Mr. Speaker, I give indication to the Chair that there is one of the motions that I would wish to vote in favour of.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member can then partake himself of the same procedure.

Are there other Hon. Members? The Hon. Member for Bow River.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, I definitely want to support Motion No. 2B.

Mr. Speaker: Are there any other Members who want to make any variation in this, by arrangement?

Mr. Graham: Mr. Speaker, I would like to partake in that option by speaking to the Table Officers afterward, if that is all right.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: I apologize to the Hon. Member who just rose, but I am not at all sure just exactly what he is proposing. Perhaps he could clarify it.

Mr. Graham: I abstained on some of the motions thus far. However, there are others that I would like to vote on in the affirmative or in the negative.

Some Hon. Members: Name them!

Mr. Speaker: Would the Hon. Member agree to make the same arrangement as other Hon. Members have indicated to the Chair?

Mr. Graham: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I want to make it clear so that all of us understand what is going to happen. Some of us vote publicly and openly. If I understand the process now—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Gauthier: —some others will vote secretly. I do not agree with that.

An Hon. Member: No, it is recorded.

Mr. Speaker: I think perhaps the Chair can assist Hon. Members. First, everybody's vote will be recorded. It will be seen exactly how each Hon. Member had voted.

Second, we are proceeding now because there was an agreement in the House. I think that that stands.

The next question is on Motion No. 2B.

The House divided on Motion No. 2B, which was negatived on the following division:

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved that Bill C-72, an Act respecting the status and use of the official languages of Canada, be read the third time and passed.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I would like to preface my remarks on this important occasion by recalling to the House what was said here at another time:

> This Bill is placed before the House to strengthen rather than weaken Canadian unity. It is put forward for the purpose of making Canadians, whether they speak English or French, feel at home in this country to the extent that this is practical, and making federal government services available in the two languages.

Those are the words of the Hon. Robert Stanfield in the debate on the first official languages Bill to be considered by this House. It was exactly 19 years ago this week, on July 7, 1969, that the Official Languages Act was read a third time and passed by all Parties in this House. The Hon. Leader of the Opposition, as he then was, made the following points in his statement:

> The purpose of this Bill is not to compel English-speaking Canadians to learn French, and vice versa. This Bill is aimed at providing French-speaking or English-speaking minorities with all federal government services in the language of their choice, as far as it is practical. If the purpose of this Bill were to impose bilingualism, I would oppose it, as I believe virtually every Member of this House would.

He went on further to say:

> If this Bill is not administered fairly and sensibly it can very easily create more disunity than unity . . . The emphasis ought to be placed on the bilingual nature of the service rather than on the bilingual nature of the servant to the fullest extent possible and also to the extent that it is fully consistent with French and English Canadians being able to pursue careers in the Public Service . . . If we are to create a feeling of greater unity we have to think in terms of enlarging rights and opportunities, and not of restricting rights and opportunities.

That is the basis of this Bill, Mr. Speaker. That is the essence of this Bill. That is the statement of this Party over the years which has been carried out, developed and evolved by this Government under the leadership of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to the legislation that we are now considering on third reading.

I want to quote some of the words of the Right Hon. Prime Minister when he was Leader of the Opposition, during the debate on the House of Commons resolution on French-language rights in Manitoba on October 6, 1983. He said:

> Years ago, this House approved the principle of official bilingualism for Canada . . . It is a noble principle, one which is capable of enriching the life of this nation. By our stand today, we reaffirm our commitment and that of our Party given earlier in this same House of Commons by outstanding and distinguished Canadians such as the Hon. Robert Stanfield and the Right Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark).
> Bilingualism is a valued principle and an indispensable dimension of our national life. The program, however, must be implemented with fairness and with equity. It is diminished if it comes to be perceived by large numbers of Canadians as an instrument of division or an instrument of unfairness . . . We must seek to understand these differences between Canadians and consider them not as obstacles but as guides to the elaboration of sensible and realistic policies which will enhance rather than lessen the attractiveness of such programs in the minds of all Canadians. Sensitivity to people and the presumption of good faith should be the hallmarks of implementation. They will ensure for bilingualism a more durable character and more pervasive acceptance . . .

The consistency of the position of this Party, of this Government, is evident from the comments I have just read.

We have approached the matter of official languages in this same spirit of fairness and equity from the very beginning. When we took office in the autumn of 1984, we stated clearly that one of the Government's aims would be to broaden and strengthen the national consensus on language policy. In the Throne Speech delivered on November 5, 1984, this commitment was expressed in these solemn words: "National unity also demands that the two levels of government co-operate in supporting official language minorities and in fostering the rich multicultural character of Canada. My Government is committed to ensuring that the equality of the two official languages—so vital to our national character and identity—is respected in fact as it is in law. My Ministers acknowledge the need for ongoing improvements and for vigilance in this indispensable area of our national life."

[English]

In 1985, the Prime Minister took note of the recommendations of the Commissioner of Official Languages in his annual report as well as the recommendations of the Standing Joint Committee on Official Languages in its second report. He asked three Ministers primarily responsible for language matters, the Minister of Justice, the President of the Treasury Board and the Secretary of State, to undertake a comprehensive assessment of the Government's over-all policy in this field and to seek ways of improving it. Ministers were seconded in their efforts by a special senior committee of Deputy Ministers which was designated by the Prime Minister to co-ordinate the renewal.

The Official Languages Act was already under study by the Department of Justice in the context of Charter conformity review. That study was broadened to ensure that, as the Prime Minister stated, that vital piece of legislation was strengthened, enhanced and adapted to new conditions and requirements.

The Throne Speech of October 1986 further underlined this commitment in the following terms:

> Official bilingualism is an indispensable feature of our national character. Seventeen years after its enactment, Canada's Official Languages Act now needs to be revised. Appropriate legislation will be introduced in this Session to ensure, as well, that this Act conforms with the Canadian Charter of Rights.

Shortly after I accepted the responsibilities of Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada in 1986, I stated to the Canadian Bar Association that the re-enactment of the Official Languages Act to ensure conformity with both the letter and the spirit of the Constitution and the implementation of the rights of accused persons to be tried in their own official language under the Criminal Code would be matters of particular importance to me as Minister of Justice, and important elements in the advancement of the Government's policies of social justice and national reconciliation.

It took much of the next year for my colleagues, the President of the Treasury Board, the Secretary of State and I to complete the review and develop renewed policies and programs respecting the use of official languages not only within federal institutions but also within the larger Canadian society. This endeavour required us to review, study and consult in order to ensure that the reforms the Government would be proposing would be balanced ones, reforms which would move official languages policy forward but which would be fair and just for all Canadians and which could be implemented in a reasonable, effective and practical manner.

This painstaking process of consultation and consensus-building did not end with the introduction of Bill C-72 in June of 1987. Despite the very positive reaction the Bill received from the opposition Parties, representatives of the official language minority communities, the Commissioner of Official Languages and major media across the nation, there were further consultations with the Commissioner, minority language organizations and Members of Parliament to pursue any further concerns that may have come up during the general reaction following the introduction of the Bill.

Information sessions were held with various bodies such as the Canadian Judicial Council and the Conference of Canadian Court Administrators. Much correspondence took place with members of the public and with officials of some provincial Governments as well as with a number of provincial Attorneys General.

Such consultations led to the coming into force of the language of trial provisions of the Criminal Code in Saskatchewan and with regard to summary conviction offences in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. Discussions with the two territorial Governments continued and this resulted in the signing of the recent Canada-Yukon language agreement.

As I had stated before in this House, ours is a Government that believes in communication, consultation and co-operation. These virtues, I believe, are essential to foster understanding, acceptance and development of official languages policy in Canada.

Obviously we do have a complex Bill before us, but concerns and questions arise in any legislative initiative, and it has been our duty as legislators to address these and to resolve them. The principles of the Bill were approved by this House on second reading and it has been the firm resolve of the Government not to deviate from these principles. However, as I remarked on March 22 of this year during the opening statement to the legislative committee studying Bill C-72, we remained as a Government ready and willing to consider appropriate proposals for clarification and improvement.

During the next two months, a wide range of witnesses were heard and views were expressed and we heard the comments and questions of committee members. On May 25, having followed the committee's proceedings very closely, I indicated the type of amendments which commended themselves to the Government. The amendment proposals I presented to the legislative committee on behalf of the Government were, I believe, a fair and balanced package that maintained our clear commitment to the underlying philosophy and principles of this legislation.

Several further amendments and adjustments put forward by committee members and the Commissioner of Official Languages were also accepted by the Government as part of our continued willingness to consider reasonable suggestions to clarify specific points without in any way deviating from the true character of this Bill.

Through the useful work of the legislative committee the consensus of understanding and support for this important measure has been broadened. As amended and reported by the committee, Bill C-72 has been improved and enhanced in a number of major respects, and I commend members of the committee for their hard work and patience. It was a very effective co-operative effort and a great credit to Members on both sides.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: At this point I would like to briefly review the major provisions of this important initiative. The Bill commences with a preamble that recalls the fundamental constitutional and policy principles which have guided development of this legislation.

The Bill begins by recognizing that the Constitution of Canada provides for equality of status and equal rights and privileges for the two official languages as to their use in all federal institutions, a principle which is entrenched in our Constitution in Section 16 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. This includes their use as languages of work in those institutions.

The Constitution also provides, in Sections 17, 18 and 19 of the Charter and in Section 133 of the Constitution Act, 1867, as interpreted by the Supreme Court, for full and equal access to Parliament, to the laws and to the courts of Canada as established by Parliament, in English and in French. Section 20 of the Charter guarantees the right of members of the public to communicate with and to receive available services from federal institutions.

The Charter contains other constitutional provisions of importance to this legislation: protection of the educational rights of the English and French linguistic minorities; advancement of the status and use of both official languages, recognition of the rights associated with the preservation and enhancement of other languages. "I would suggest that it might be possible to devise a preamble to the Bill which would have that effect". That was a statement made by the Hon. Robert Stanfield in 1969. All of these principles and more are recognized by the preamble.

Moreover, the new legislation contains a purpose clause which states that the aim of the Act is to ensure respect for the equality of status enjoyed by the two languages in all federal institutions; to support the development of the English and French linguistic minority communities, which the preamble recognizes as being "an integral part" of our two official language communities, and advance both languages generally in Canadian society, and to set out the roles and responsibilities of federal institutions in official languages matters.

Parts 1 to 111 of the Bill flow from Section 133 of the Constitution Act, 1867. These parts deal with proceedings in Parliament, legislative and other government documents, and the administration of justice in federal tribunals. They are inspired by the principle that all Canadians must have full and equal access in both our official languages to Parliament, in its legislative and other proceedings, and to the federal courts, in the administration of justice.

If there is one part of the Bill that most clearly reflects the Government's desire to make substantive, effective improvements in the existing mechanisms, it is the part that concerns the administration of justice. Sections 14 to 20 guarantee unrestricted use of French and English in Canada's courts.

This means that any Canadian will have the right to speak his own language in any federal court of law or administrative tribunal. Is it too much to ask that, for the sake of equity, these federal institutions render justice to Canadians in their own language? To ask the question is to answer it. I do not think it is too much to ask of them, especially since we have ascertained that it is feasible right now. We will not have to interfere in any way with the internal management of the courts to have them implement this policy.

Under the new Act, federal courts composed of unilingual anglophone and francophone judges and bilingual judges will have no trouble administering their affairs. We have taken care to ensure due respect for a democratic value we consider paramount—the independence of the justice system.

As Minister responsible for Bill C-72, I am proud to put such measures before the Canadian people on behalf of the Government, and it is my personal conviction that no one will ever criticize us for having worked for greater equity in the administration of justice in Canada.

[English]

Part 1V deals with the constitutional right of any member of the public to communicate with and receive services from federal institutions in either official language. As under the 1969 Act, the new legislation creates duties on federal institutions to ensure that the right is respected at the head or central offices of those institutions, and at their offices in the National Capital Region. The 1969 Act further provided for the creation of federal bilingual districts where the minority numbered 10 per cent of the population. It stipulated that outside the proposed bilingual districts, services to the public would also be provided in both languages, to the extent feasible, in other locations where there was a significant demand. Bilingual districts were never proclaimed because the concept proved unworkable. For example, certain regional offices would serve minority language populations where located outside the bilingual districts themselves.

With the advent of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, the bilingual districts notion was dropped. We believe that such a geographical constraint on the language rights of Canadians is constitutionally suspect. Such a fixed criterion is inherently arbitrary and incompatible with the administrative flexibility that is necessary to make the constitutional language rights a practical, workable and living reality in the relationships between Canadians and the federal institutions that exist to serve them. Amendments to the Bill that would restore this geographical and numerical flexibility are equally dubious, as a matter of constitutional conformity.

Indeed, Section 20 of the Charter guarantees the right of members of the public to services in either language from federal offices where there is a significant demand for communications with and services from that office in such language, or where due to the nature of that office itself, it is reasonable that communications and services from that office be available in both English and French. These criteria epitomize the need for flexibility, and I would like to review them in somewhat more detail to lay to rest misconceptions and misrepresentations about this part of the Bill.

The "demand" test of Section 20 of the Charter is first and foremost a quantitative one, while the "nature of the office" component is essentially a qualitative one, going to the intrinsic qualities of the office, irrespective of demand. However, this is not to say that there can be no qualitative aspects to the significance of the demand, or that the quantitative aspect is strictly numerical. If the drafters of the Charter wanted to cast the demand criterion of Section 20 exclusively in numerical terms, they could have easily done so in the language of Section 23, which provides for minority language education "where numbers warrant".

Indeed, the original October 1980 version of Section 20 provided for services in both languages from federal offices located in areas in which it would be determined that a substantial number of persons within the population used that language, but this formulation was criticized at the time and replaced by the notion of "significant demand".

In any event, even a "where numbers warrant" test cannot be met, the courts have told us, by the strict imposition of an immutable or geographical limitation in legislation. There must be some flexibility of application. To fix, without any justification, an arbitrary figure would, as I have indicated, demonstrably risk violating the provisions of the Charter.

In Bill C-72 we have outlined a variety of quantitative factors, including numerical ones, that the Governor in Council may have regard to in prescribing by regulation circumstances in which there is significant demand. I want to bring these to the attention of the House. They include the number of persons in the English or French linguistic minority population in the area served by the office, the proportion of the minority population to the total population of the areas served by the office, and the volume of communications or services between the office and members of the public using each language.

We have also insured that the Governor in Council will have the flexibility to take into account any other factors that the Governor in Council considers appropriate as well as the particular characteristics of the linguistic minority population.

This latter qualitative factor implies that in some cases the special needs and conditions of a minority language community may result in the demand being considered significant enough to justify the provision of bilingual services even where a purely numerical criteria might suggest otherwise. This is consonant with our commitment to supporting the development of vital minority communities expressed elsewhere in this legislation, and with our commitment to Canada's linguistic duality in the Meech Lake Constitutional Accord.

I would like to turn now to the important area of language of work. Section 16 of the Charter guarantees that the official languages have "equality of status and equal rights and privileges as to their use in all institutions of the Parliament and Government of Canada". These constitutional rights are stated very broadly. There is no doubt, in my view, that they include equal status, rights, and privileges in respect of the use of these languages in the work environments of federal institutions. The entitlements flowing from Section 16 are not qualified by Section 20's tests of "significant demand" at federal offices or the nature of the office.

It was thus incumbent on the Government to develop a legislative scheme which would respect the principle of equality of status of the two languages in federal institutions in a way that would reflect the reality of the country and which would be implemented without enormous administrative difficulty.

The guarantees of the Charter are subject, by virtue of Section 1, only to such reasonable limits prescribed by law as can be demonstrably justified in a free and democratic society. If the language-of-work entitlement were expressed exclusively as an individual right, major problems in implementation would have resulted. Consequently, the right is shaped and conditioned in a reasonable, workable and, above all, fair manner by the corresponding duties which are imposed on federal institutions by Part V of the Bill.

Part V recognizes, in Clause 34, that "English and French are the languages of work in all federal institutions, and officers and employees . . . have the right to use either official language in accordance with this Part". Clause 35 then provides that in the National Capital Region and other prescribed regions work environments of federal institutions are to be "conducive to the effective use of both official languages and accommodate the use of either official language by its officers and employees".

Clause 35 goes on to provide that in those regions of Canada which are not so prescribed the treatment of both languages in the work environments of the institutions in regions where one official language predominates is reasonably comparable to the treatment of both languages in regions where the other official language predominates.

The prescribed language-of-work regions are those which have been recognized for the purposes by Treasury Board policy since 1977. In these regions federal institutions must ensure that personnel and central services and regularly and widely used work instruments and, after 1991, newly acquired data processing systems, are available to employees in both languages; that where it is appropriate or necessary in order to create a work environment conducive to the use of both official languages supervisors are able to communicate with their employees in both official languages; and that corporate management groups have a functionally bilingual capacity.

These are institutional duties, not individual obligations. It is not, I emphasize, an individual requirement imposed on each supervisory position in the Public Service of Canada, as has been erroneously suggested by some.

Outside the prescribed language-of-work regions the right to use either official language will be more limited because the obligations on federal institutions are less onerous, but this does not mean that there will be no opportunities to use the other language or that there will be no services to government employees or work instruments, for example, that will be made available through the system in both languages. The Governor in Council may make regulations in this regard and may prescribe the manner in which any of the duties of this Part are carried out.

If fairness and flexibility in the application of the language-of-work and services to the public duties are to be maintained, regulations will be necessary. However, the Government has been sensitive and responsive to the concerns of Members of this House by ensuring that the Bill provides appropriate mechanisms for parliamentary oversight and review. One defect in the 1969 official languages legislation raised by the Hon. Robert Stanfield was that it provides inadequate opportunities for Parliament to examine and criticize the manner in which the Bill is administered and the practices adopted under it.

Up until now Treasury Board has had responsibility for the development and administration of government policy in this area with very little direct accountability to Parliament. Henceforth, under the new legislation, Treasury Board's powers and responsibilities are clearly set out. The President of the Treasury Board will make an annual report to Parliament on the programs relating to official languages in respect of which it has responsibility.

The Commissioner of Official Languages may initiate a review of any regulations or directives on official languages and make a report to Parliament. Consultations with minorities and the members of the public will be held on proposed regulations, and all regulations made under the Bill will now be made by the Governor in Council and not by Treasury Board.

A draft of proposed regulations must be tabled in the House at least 30 sitting days before prepublication. Regulations shall be prepublished in the Canada Gazette at least 30 days before coming into force, and a reasonable opportunity will be given to interested persons to make representations to the President of the Treasury Board.

Where a regulation is proposed that would add to or delete from the list of prescribed language-of-work regions, it must be laid before each House of Parliament and a motion to disapprove the proposed regulation may be put forward by Members of Parliament.

Finally, the administration of the Act, any regulations or directives made thereunder, and the reports of the Commissioner, the President of the Treasury Board, and the Secretary of State shall be reviewed on a permanent basis by the parliamentary committee.

These measures are consistent with the reform of the regulatory process undertaken by this Government and our philosophy of openness, accessibility and accountability. This was the result of the work of the committee. It was this accountability to Members of Parliament and the co-operation demonstrated through the committee that allowed us to make these amendments to enhance, strengthen and make more open the whole process, which I think is a distinct improvement to the legislation. Again, I commend members of the committee for their help.

The Bill restates a goal that has long been part of the Government's official languages policy: full participation in federal institutions by all Canadians, be they English-speaking or French-speaking, regardless of mother tongue or ethnic origin. It is a goal, not an executory duty.

We made a commitment that federal institutions would be staffed with anglophones and francophones in the same proportions as the national population, with due regard for the nature of each institution.

Far from making irrational commitments, we opted for a policy that was acceptable in that it provided equal employment opportunities for all Canadians, without discriminating against English-speaking Canadians or in favour of French-speaking Canadians, that is, in a completely equitable manner.

[English]

If we consider that 88 per cent of all bilingual federal Public Service positions are held within the National Capital area and the Province of Québec and that 96 per cent of all unilingual French positions are held in Québec, Hon. Members will quickly realize that there is no basis to the rumours that Francophones are somehow taking over the federal Public Service. In the Province of British Columbia, for example, 99 per cent of the positions are unilingual English, in Alberta it is 98 per cent, in Saskatchewan 97 per cent, in Manitoba 94 per cent and in Ontario 92 per cent. There is no reason to believe that these figures would change unless the make-up of the population in these regions changed substantially.

These statistics clearly demonstrate how realistic this policy is. Never has the Government supported the imposition of quotas which negatively impact on either Francophones or Anglophones. We have never supported the implementation of language programs which discriminate. The reality is quite the contrary. The official languages policy outlined in this Bill has always promoted and defended the concept of merit. This is a concept that will continue.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the Charter provides that anyone whose linguistic rights have been infringed may apply to a court to obtain such remedy as the court considers just in the circumstances. For the Official Languages Act to be effective, we had to give it executory force. That does not mean that every language dispute will henceforth be referred automatically to a court. Rather, the new Act provides a mediation mechanism with which the Commissioner of Official Languages will be associated by virtue of this role as an ombudsman and the expertise he has acquired over the years.

For that reason, the bill requires that persons intending to file a complaint approach the Commissioner first. He will be responsible for investigating complaints.

It is only as a last resort that the person goes to court. We have thus rectified the shortcomings of the 1969 Act for cases where Canadians have a legitimate grievance. The Commissioner of Official Languages will shift out the frivolous suits from the serious ones. His participation will be the pledge that suits will be based on the principles of law. Of course, the Commissioner will have to act in accordance with the Law, and if he exceeds his competence and finds himself outside the limits of his jurisdiction, he could be the subject of the usual administrative proceedings, on the grounds that he had infringed the rules of fundamental justice.

[English]

In closing, let me say a few words about Part VII of the Bill on the advancement of English and French. I am pleased that my colleague, the Secretary of State (Mr. Bouchard) is here. I hope he will be in a position to participate in the debate and expand on this matter.

The Supreme Court has stated that this constitutional principle of progress in language matters is particularly suited to advancement through the legislative process. Surely all Canadians can see the wisdom of supporting, through encouragement and co-operation, not coersion, the development of our official language minority communities and the recognition and use of both official languages in Canadian society as a whole. Surely all Canadians want their federal Government to encourage and support the learning of English and French, and to foster the acceptance and appreciation of our two official languages within the Canadian public. The recent language agreements between the federal Government and the Governments of Saskatchewan, the Yukon and Prince Edward Island are witness to this consensus.

The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court put it eloquently in the Societé des Acadiens case, repeated most recently by a majority of the court in the seminal Mercure decision. He stated:

> Linguistic duality has been a longstanding concern in our nation. Canada is a country with both French and English solidly embedded in its history. The constitutional language protections reflect continued and renewed efforts in the direction of bilingualism. In my view, we must take special care to be faithful to the spirit and purpose of the guarantee of language rights enshrined in the Charter.

On this occasion the Government is coming forward with legislation that is fair, equitable and which guarantees fairness to all parts of our country and all members of Canadian society. It is legislation that recognizes that equity and fairness are the cornerstone of this Government's approach to official languages. With the leadership of the Prime Minister on this very sensitive and important issue, Canada will develop as the progressive nation for which it is totally capable. We look forward to this legislation taking us into the next century. I urge the support of all Members.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the Minister took the high road today. Indeed, it is an historic day and, for many of us, an important day because after several years of hard work and great experiences, we are coming to a moment when the House of Commons of this country is to approve a new law concerning official languages. It is a new law of this land designed to achieve national unity and unite Canada on the basis of the constitutional goal we set for ourselves, and to have a country where duality is respected and seen as a unifying objective rather than a divisive one.

I am particularly happy that we are dealing with this legislation at this time because I do not believe we have a linguistic crisis in Canada at this time.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, when my leader, the Right Honourable Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner), spoke during the debate in this House last February 9 on Bill C-72—and he was the only Party Leader who spoke in that debate, and I thank him for it—he said, and I quote,

> One of the reasons why this Bill is acceptable to us and to a substantial majority of Canadians is that it is in our Party's tradition, which includes the 1969 Act, the experience we acquired from 1969 to 1984, the Parliamentary Resolution of 1973, the 1982 Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, the proceedings of the Joint Committee on Official Languages.

Mr. Speaker, it is true that this Bill is the fruit of the labours of many Canadians, under both this Government and previous Governments: civil servants, Commissioners of Official Languages, members of the language communities in this country, who almost always inspire us, give us ideas, and sometimes even push the politicians to act.

[English]

The coexistence of our two linguistic communities symbolizes our Canadian distinctiveness, this society of freedom and tolerance, justice and compassion that we all seek to build. The majority of Canadians accept our nation's duality and this brings greater respect for the rights of all other minorities. Two official languages, therefore, far from being divisive, are a guarantee of tolerance and understanding, because an open mind on language cannot but nurture generosity of understanding and support for other cultural and linguistic groups.

We have had here for several years—at least since I have been here, since 1972— a policy of multiculturalism. I have said it before, if people cannot accept two official languages in this country, they can hardly understand and accept the multicultural nature of Canada and the important policies that have been adopted to support and strengthen and promote our cultural diversity.

Here again we are faced with our large geographic expanse, a large territory, and our regional differences and, admittedly, our differing perspectives. I am confident that we in this country, are beginning to see the importance of looking beyond our local and regional boundaries, to look for the differences; not to criticize them, not to destroy them, not to eliminate them, but to support them, to promote them and thus enrich each other and make this a better country for all of us.

It is the Liberal Party's position that this is a good Bill. It is the Liberal Party's position that we will support and defend across this country the principles of this Bill. We pray for understanding across the country and for the Bill's implementation in a generous, open and, hopefully, quick way.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Gauthier: I say that because the regulations that will flow from this Bill will be subject to parliamentary review, in the committee on regulatory review, and it is very important that the Bill be applied in a generous, open manner.

[Translation]

We must not be mean about this, we must not be petty, the regulations and the whole application must be generous. Otherwise, Mr. Speaker, it will be a beautiful Charter but it will have neither teeth nor impact.

The problem is quite simple: how do we ensure equality between anglophones and francophones despite their unequal distribution on Canadian territory? That is a question our predecessors in government and our forebears have alerady tried to answer, beginning with the Fathers of Confederation in 1867. Since then every generation has had to adopt, modernize, modify and let us say reinforce where necessary the laws and regulations regarding official languages, in order to adapt them to a sociological reality that itself is constantly changing.

In this search for legislative perfection, perhaps impossible to achieve but still a valid goal, there are two dimensions: the national dimension—Canada as a whole; and the regional dimension—our cities and towns, our communities, our regions and provinces. At the national level, legislation and regulations must be brought in that ensure members of the two main language communities equivalent rights, neither more nor less, so that they can feel at home in their country, at least at the institutional level. That is the role that the federal government must try to play, that is the goal of Bill C-72: to create an atmosphere of generosity toward all Canadians who need to deal with federal institutions for service and communication in the language of their choice and not in the language of the institution, which as we know can vary from region to region.

At the regional and local level, what is at stake is not quite the same. Naturally, that equality of rights and privileges that have been granted remains constant no matter what the region. But a new dimension must be added, that of minorities, individuals situated in a cultural and social environment dominated by the other group. Whether it is the anglophones in Quebec among the francophone majority, or the francophones outside Quebec who live among or in surrondings that are largely anglophone, they experience situations that are, if not the same, at least comparable. The result is that at the national level we have to pay particular attention to the unique situations in our cities and towns and in the provinces. We have always done so in the past, and we will continue to do so. It is one of the characteristic things about Canada, and I for one am proud of it.

It was in fact partly because of our geography, and the distribution of our population over so vast a territory, that we opted for a federal system in the first place. It follows that we must endow ourselves with the necessary constitutional provisions that will unite all the different pieces into one mosaic.

That is the origin of the interplay of the national and regional dimensions to which I referred earlier. The broad goals are set at the national level. But each province has specific responsibilities through which the national goals are achieved—health services, education, social services, domestic trade, the administration of justice, the obligation to make rules for the professions and for municipal and regional governments. All those sectors are, according to the Constitution, matters for provincial jurisdiction. In all those sectors, the federal government has no jurisdiction, and in none of them will Bill C-72 have any direct effect. And yet, the provinces have an important role. It is the provinces that will have to establish within their borders the language régime best suited both to national objectives and to the particular needs of their provincial populations. That is why Canada's linguistic mosaic is so diverse.

Quebec has its own language legislation, which reflects its unique linguistic and cultural situation. Alberta and Saskatchewan have also adopted language legislation, more or less forceful, more or less acceptable, but which reflects their realities; so have Ontario, my own province, and New Brunswick, the only officially bilingual province in Canada, a status enshrined in the Constitution. In each case, Mr. Speaker, we see different solutions, all possible answers to the question I asked at the start of my speech. What is Canada?

Today, Mr. Speaker, we are preparing to give Canada a new bench-mark, a new milestone in the area of language legislation. This afternoon the House of Commons is going to adopt Bill C-72, an Act respecting the status and use of the official languages of Canada. It is a proud day for me. I worked on this Bill, with the Hon. Member from Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin), and I hail it. I am perhaps not 100 per cent satisfied with it, neither is my colleague, but I think it represents an enhancement, if I can put it like that. We tried to keep as much as possible the heart of the Bill, and I think that in general . . . I will return, later on in my remarks, to the improvements I would like to see in this legislation, which will probably be the subject of Private Members' Bills.

Mr. Speaker, the issue of official languages is not new. It is as old as Canada. It goes back to the British North America Act, notably section 133. That section stipulates that either English or French may be used before the courts of Canada and Quebec but that both languages shall be used in the "respective Records and Journals" of the Houses of Parliament. There was something that responded to a requirement of the time. So linguistic duality goes back to the birth of this country. And even if they were not recognized as "official" languages, both English and French could rightfully be used in Parliament and before the federal courts, from the very beginning.

The protection, or regulation, of the status of French and English was ensured by a series of Acts and administrative measures both federally and provincially. This continued right up to 1963, when the federal Government created the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism, with a view, as the Commission's mandate put it so well, and I quote: "To recommend what steps should be taken to develop the Canadian Confederation on the basis of an equal partnership between the two founding races, taking into account the contribution made by the other ethnic groups to the cultural enrichment of Canada."

Mr. Speaker, I don't need to tell you that André Laurendeau and Davidson Dunton were two very brave men in their day and generation. They toured the country with their team to hear Canadians' complaints, comments and recommendations, and in a preliminary report from the B and B Commission appears this sentence of Mr. Laurendeau's about the Commissioners, and I quote: "[They have been forced to conclude that] Canada, without being fully conscious of the fact, is passing through the greatest crisis in its history." That was in 1963. Something had to be done. And Mr. Pearson, the Liberal Prime Minister of the day, did it. It was a turning point for official languages, which was to lead us to the proclamation of the Official Languages Act in 1969, then to the constitutional recognition of official languages in the Constitution Act, 1982, and the Charter of Rights and Freedoms that went with it, and finally to the Meech-Langevin Accord, which recognized our linguistic duality as one of Canada's fundamental characteristics. So we have a process, a series of important and historic events.

I would like to point out to the Hon. Members, Mr. Speaker, that the impetus given to the cause of official languages in 1962-63 and after, right up to 1984, was given by Canadians, Liberals, Mr. Pearson and Mr. Trudeau, and I take off my hat to them, because they did what had to be done at the time with courage and with great personal satisfaction.

Mr. Gauthier: Moreover it was the Pearson government, Mr Speaker, in 1964, that authorized the Civil Service Commission, as it was known then, to set up a language bureau and to offer, for the first time, language training; and it was Mr Pearson himself who called for the Laurendeau-Dunton Commission, and saw that this generous and open new approach to official languages was implemented. In response to the B and B Commission's recommendations in 1969, the federal Government, with all-Party support, passed the Official Languages Act, which gave English and French equal rights and privileges as languages of Parliament and languages of Canada. The culmination came in 1982, when the official status of English and French was made part of the Constitution, and language rights enshrined in sections 16 to 20 of the Charter of Rights, as we all know. There is also section 23, the right to minority-language education, which is also a very important provision but which is not what we are looking at today.

Starting from the moment when sections 16 to 20 were added to the Constitution, language rights were protected by laws and regulations passed by both the federal Parliament and the provincial legislatures, and it could then be said that Canada had a true language charter.

Mr. Speaker, if I have begun with a look back at our history, it is because I think it is essential to have a historical perspective on the problems relating to official languages if we really want to understand what is at stake. As we have just seen, the Constitution takes priority over ordinary laws and the 1982 Charter represents an invaluable asset, because it puts language rights out of the reach of the political arm. That was one of the things that brought me into politics. I wanted language rights to be in the Constitution, to be safe from the interference of politicians, who change from time to time—a merciful dispensation of Providence, perhaps—and who ought to be bound, by an important document called a Constitution, to respect the will of the people.

The question of official languages needs more than political will, as history shows us. It also requires that dynamic administrative measures be put in place to ensure that the political will is translated into action. Nevertheless, a strong political will is essential, because it must be there to generate the dynamism, to inspire the renewal. It was in that spirit that in 1979 a political will created the Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons on Official Languages.

Since 1979, the Joint Committee has met many times to consider both the Act and the regulations, and to oversee the implementation of the Act and report on it to Parliament at regular intervals. That is what we have done.

The Committee has tabled a number of reports, and they have been taken seriously by this assembly and by the various governments. I am happy to say that I have been a member of the Committee since it was created, and I even chaired it for several years with Senator Lowell Murray, whom everyone knows, and who is, I should add, a Minister in the present Government. We worked hard and I want to take this opportunity to thank and congratulate all those who collaborated and worked with us, not only the MPs and Senators but also the research staff and the Clerks in particular.

Mr. Speaker, it was political will to change and revitalize that also led to the creation in 1982 of a Special Committee of Deputy Ministers and experts. The Prime Minister at that time, the Right Honourable Pierre Elliot Trudeau, after reading the Joint Committee's reports and realizing that the Official Languages Act had to be updated and made to reflect the new Charter of Rights passed by Parliament in 1982, decided to create a Special Committee of Deputy Ministers and experts in this field, who toiled away under the aegis of the Privy Council on the task of renewing, strengthening and updating the Act. They studied the issue for some years, and when the present Government came to power in 1984, they had a thoroughly well-documented file that only needed to be recast as a piece of legislation. This the Government has done, and I congratulate it.

So there we had the political will, and by a joint effort of various committees and other people who took a hand, Bill C-72 was born. Bill C-72 thus follows up the Accord, the constitutional commitment, and acknowledges the formal commitments of the Meech Lake Constitutional Accord. It goes a little further than the Accord, because we were able to get the word "promotion" into the text, the wording of the Bill, which as you know we were, alas, not able to do in the case of the Accord.

Bill C-72 is thus in the same vein as the constitutional commitments. It defines federal objectives within the framework of a revitalized and modernized Act. It seems to us—to us Liberals, at any rate—that it was imperative to give the Bill (which was tabled in the House on June 25, 1987) prompt and serious consideration.

We had been waiting for the Bill for a long time, since it had been announced in two Throne Speeches, but the Government dawdled, the Bill didn't appear. I was obliged to raise the matter in the House on 27 separate occasions, in an attempt to encourage, to stir up interest—I may have overdone it a little, sometimes, but my goal was always to get the Government to take action, to keep its promises and bring a Bill before the House.

Finally, as I said, the Bill saw the light of day. It took nine months, and in February of this year, after a very long delay, we got to second reading. We drew the media's attention to the Bill and then things began to get interesting, because then people began to realize that this Bill was a significant Bill, which went much further than the 1969 Act.

Bill C-72 was supported by three Ministers, the Minister for the Treasury Board, the Minister of Justice, and the former Secretary of State, who gave a press conference where no words got minced. It was a fantastic moment, June 25, to see the government so enthusiastic. But it didn't last long. We had to keep up the pressure and encourage a hesitant government. We wondered why. And then we found out: there was a war going on. There was a war going on between certain Conservative Members. There was a group of about 30 of them, the dinosaur club I called them, which some people didn't like, but I thought it was an appropriate name.

They were carrying on an internal guerilla war against the Bill, in an effort to make people believe there was a crisis in the country. Well, there wasn't any crisis. Not a hint of one. And when my Leader, the Right Honorable John Turner, spoke on February 8, 1988, he said,

• (1210)

[English]

"The time is right, the subject is right, the content is right. In other words, why do we have to wait for a crisis, Mr. Speaker, let us act now".

And he was right. There was no crisis. There were some people trying to create one. The Government had to be encouraged to resist the preposterous pressure being put on it by some of its own MPs.

In committee, finally, after three days of debate in the House, there was a succesion of MPs playing at musical chairs. That went on for three months. They replaced one another almost like clockwork, the Tories, one saying his little piece and then the next day another one. We bore with them. One even suggested we hear from 130 witnesses, and 130 witnesses, Mr. Chairman, would have meant the Committee would have had to sit for the whole year, probably, and into next year. We said no. It was time for action. And at the end of three months—and I must say it took patience, you have to be patient in the game of politics—

An Hon. Member: Always!

Mr. Gauthier: . . . and we came out with a report that was tabled in the House. At that point, we realized that the Government was beginning to show a little courage. Suggestions had to be made to the Government, of course, but that can happen. Last Thursday, my colleague from St-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault) rose in the House and proposed that since certain people wanted to create a crisis where there was none, the Government should use Standing Order 115 and move forward. We did not tell the Government to make it one day, one short day, and two hours; we simply told the Government we would support it if it decided to use Standing Order 115 to limit debate. The Government subsequently decided to put a very tight rein on the debate, but that was not our decision. We merely tried to get the Government to act.

Yesterday evening, Mr. Speaker, this House approved the Committee report as tabled in the House. It contained 136 amendements, but even though I personally might have been willing to spend all night here, some of my colleagues did not relish the prospect, and we voted. We decided not only to act responsibly but also to consider all the staff of the House who had to wait. It was chiefly for their sake that I suggested to my House leader that we could apply the result of one vote to the other votes and dispense with the recorded votes. It took time, but it was worth it, Mr. Speaker. After 20 years of waiting, getting concurrence in the report stage of a new Act was important, at least for me. However, for some Conservative Members who, as I say, still had doubts about the principle of linguistic duality it may not have been a very pleasant experience. For us, it was the fruit of years of unremitting hard work.

Mr. Speaker, I will not go on at length about the amendments considered yesterday. They might receive more recognition than they deserve. Happily, I think we have passed that difficult stage, and we can put them aside. Nevertheless, we have seldom seen a Government forced to gag its own Members . . .

An Hon. Member: No, I think it is the first time.

Mr. Gauthier: . . . on one of its own bills. It is a historic event.

On the one hand, the Government refuses to disavow the dishonorable actions of its language reactionaries. On the other hand, it limits debate to prevent them from speaking. That is a form of disapproval. Mr. Speaker telling us, as the Government did, to wait for the vote today to find out whether they would disavow the "dinosaurs" is, to me, unacceptable. As I said yesterday, it is like telling us a thief is only guilty if caught; it is like telling us a liar is guilty only if caught. It makes no logical sense. At the end of the day, though, we will see whether these reactionaries will be called to account for their decision.

Mr. Speaker, if one does not agree with another's statements, one must say so. Why wait! And if Conservative Members make unacceptable statements, they should be told as much. And they must accept their responsibilities. In any case, the main thing is that the Bill is now at third reading stage and will be passed. Even though the Government is not unanimously for it, the official Opposition at least will be. That is not how we Liberals work. We work as a team, and we make progress as a team.

Mr. Speaker, Bill C-72 is appreciably different from the 1969 Act. I would like to make a few comments on the Bill. The new Act contains a 10-point preamble that clearly establishes the link between what is enshrined in the Constitution and the spirit of generosity and reform on which interpretation of the Act must be based. Under the Interpretation Act, the preamble is a part of the Act intended to assist in explaining its purport and object. The preamble to Bill C-72 mentions sections 16 to 20 of the Charter and the federal Government's commitment to protect and promote bilingualism and official language minorities. In this respect, the Act goes further than the Constitutional Accord of 1987, which recognizes only the federal Government's duty to preserve the linguistic duality.

It is stated that Canadians have the right of access, under the Constitution, to the institution of Parliament and the Government. Bill C-72 contains the necessary provisions to ensure that this constitutional right is respected. It is stated that the Government will support the development of minority groups, enhance the bilingual character of the National Capital, encourage the business community to promote the official languages. All of this is repeated in Bill C-72, and I know, Mr. Speaker, because we will be watching very closely, it will help strengthen the linguistic situation.

With regard to other legislation, I should point out that the Bill contains some important legal rights. In particular, Section 82 provides for the primacy of the Act. As you will recall, that was the subject of a number of recommendations by the Joint Commitee on Official Languages, since it had been recognized as a weakness of the 1969 Act. I myself introduced a number of Bills between 1979 and 1986 in an attempt to give the Act primacy over all other legislation.

Clearly then, this is not a new idea, and this Government did not invent it. Nevertheless, it is important to recognize what has been accomplished, and since the primacy of the Act is assured, I have achieved my goal and I am satisfied.

Mr. Speaker, Part II of the Bill deals with legislative and other instruments such as federal-provincial agreements. The Government decided to take up one of my amendments to this Part and incorporate it into the Bill. It is a new section, specifically section 8, which deals with the tabling of documents in the House. It will force the Government to table its documents in the House in both official languages, which it did not have to do before today.

With regard to federal statutes, there is nothing new. For many years, they have been enacted by Parliament in both official languages and both versions have equal weight and force of law.

Mr. Speaker, while we approve of this Part as a whole, we have a few concerns. Under Section 10, it is theoretically possible for the Government to avoid signing its federal-provincial agreements in both official languages. I understand the arguments the Minister made before the Committee—that some agreements concern only one individual and that small amounts of money are involved. That is true in the case of grants awarded to university researchers, for example. It is therefore difficult to oblige the Government to sign all federal-provincial agreements in both official languages because it is not always necessary. On the other hand, Mr. Speaker, five or six amendments that I introduced in committee and that were defeated concerned some very important issues. I cannot go into detail on those issues today, but as I said earlier, there will certainly be Private Members' Bills in the future on those issues, which include the Supreme Court of Canada and such important matters as the tabling of federal-provincial agreements in both official languages.

Nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, I remain somewhat concerned, as there will be a need for vigilance to ensure that agreements that may be important to minorities are actually signed in both official languages, whether the language of the province is French or English. It is a simple precaution I am proposing, Mr. Speaker, but in my experience both as a parliamentarian and as a member of a minority in my province, it is an important one. Without it, minorities will again have to fight and beg to have their rights respected.

I want to pay special tribute to three Canadians who have occupied the position of the Official Languages Commissioner, Mr. Speaker. I am speaking of Mr. Keith Spicer, Mr. Maxwell Yalden and Mr. D'Iberville Fortier. Their work and dedication, their professional advice to the Parliament of Canada in their annual reports and in their appearances before the committee speak highly of their excellent stewardship of this important national policy.

I would like to pay tribute also to my colleague, the Hon. Member for Notre Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East (Mr. Allmand), who has travelled with me on the road to language equality from our respective provinces and from our different perspectives with regard to official language minorities. I want to thank all my colleagues on this side of the House who have helped and supported me and who have many times come to the committee to assist me in the work of doing the best we can to improve the language obligation.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) and the Liberal Members who often attend Committee meetings to reinforce the Liberal presence and help to take stock . . .

[English]

The importance of language rights to many of us is grounded in our belief that Canada is a better and stronger nation if we care about each other's aspirations in dignity and respect. Languages can bridge the gap between communities and regions in this country, as I said at the beginning of my remarks.

The official language minorities throughout Canada are the cement of national unity. Canada is strengthened and enriched by them.

Mr. Speaker, it is with great joy that I say to the Government: Thank you, well done, Minister; we have found in you someone who, I think, understands the official languages problem! I encourage you to stay on the right path. I encourage you to ensure that all your colleagues support you in your proposals and I hope we can continue to work together to improve Canada and make it a respectful, generous country and, above all, the Canada that must be ours, a Canada that will be respectful and generous to all Canadians.

[English]

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to rise on behalf of my colleagues in the New Democratic caucus to speak in third reading debate on Bill C-72, the official languages Bill.

The day is a happy and an historic one. It is a day that I sometimes wondered about our achieving, given the lengthy committee hearings and the many witnesses who came before us. There was as well extended consideration of amendments to the Bill that were put forward in committee. It was very important for that process to have been worked through carefully to ensure that Bill C-72 is a good measure for this Parliament to pass.

I want to say immediately that Bill C-72 impressed many people at the outset in June, 1987 as being well drawn over-all. There were individual points of concern. I felt one or two of those at the time and expressed them, but the approbation which the Bill received at the outset from persons concerned about the policy of official bilingualism which was reflected by members of all three Parties and people concerned with the policy of official bilingualism is something worth saying at the outset. This was well expressed at second reading debate when the Bill was given approval in principle. No voices were raised against it. It appeared that the Bill had unanimous support in this House at the time, but more recently it has become clear that was not the full reality of the situation. There is across the country still some opposition to the policy of official bilingualism.

I am constrained in the time that I have to speak and envy my friend, the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) for the time he had to address the matter. I would like to speak particularly to some of the concerns that exist across Canada about the process, the Bill and the policy in order to try to set at rest those minds which still feel concern about the policy of official bilingualism dating back to 1969 and the first Official Languages Act. For those who are concerned about the implications of this Bill for Canada, it is worth looking at some of those concerns.

I think I would be justified in saying that if some Members felt it took courage yesterday to be opposed to various clauses of the Bill and to bring amendments forward, I was equally impressed as far as courage is concerned and far more impressed in terms of vision by those Members of all three Parties who supported the Bill. One is tempted to looked at individuals in terms of the areas from which they come. I of course speak as someone who grew up in Manitoba, who taught for the better part of a decade in the Province of British Columbia and who now lives in northwestern Ontario. I think I have some sense of the feeling in western Canada on the matter of official bilingualism. I became particularly aware of it as a professor in the history department teaching Canadian history. I could single out persons and say to myself, here was courage, here was a vision of the country being expressed, when Hon. Members of opposition Parties and almost all Hon. Members of the Conservative Party gave their support to the Bill.

I think it is worth recognizing that amendments that come forward in the House at report stage are not likely to get very serious consideration by the House. I say that with a good deal of regret and rue as a member of the Opposition. Of course, we may well put amendments forward for political purposes, but the fact is that the job has been largely done in the legislative committee and it is expected that it will be so done there.

The Government appointed as its members of the legislative committee persons almost entirely from an official language majority. Even my good friend, the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin), is in a provincial sense a member of the majority community. In fact, the only exception to this in any kind of ongoing way would be the Hon. Member for Lachine (Mr. Layton) who could speak for the English speaking minority of Québec. The French speaking minority in the rest of the country was never represented in committee, certainly not as far as I recall.

A large opportunity was given to representatives of the English-speaking majority in Canada. As we watched them in operation, we knew that there were skeptics if not critics and outright opponents of the legislation present with opportunity to put their views forward. To his credit, the Hon. Member for Swift Current—Maple Creek (Mr. Wilson) was dogged in his persistence in some of these concerns. At times, this frustrated some of us who were watching him, but I suppose it played its part in leading the Government to put forward those provisions on regulations that represent an interesting addition to the Bill from the view of Government over-all. Perhaps it represented a very significant development for the Government of Canada. Those provisions for publicity to be given to regulations before they are finally declared so that Members of Parliament have an opportunity to comment on them were the result of the process in the legislative committee.

I can say quite advisedly, I think, as a member of the New Democratic opposition, that when amendments are put forward in the House at report stage, they are generally put forward in order to make certain important points. They are put forward to try to make changes in the Bill but also to make certain points, and from that perspective, in addressing the feelings across Canada and the opposition that I know exists among some people, I want to consider two of the amendments that were put forward. These amendments are very revealing of the kinds of attitudes that exist.

Motion No. 2B put by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine (Mr. McKenzie), for example, applied to Clause 2 of the Bill and specifically to subclause (b) which declares the Act to be in support of the development of English and French linguistic minority communities and generally advance the equality of status and use of the English and French languages within Canadian society. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Assiniboine wanted to strike out the words relating to equality of status. He was prepared to allow this Bill, when finally passed and proclaimed, to support the use of English and French but equality of status stuck in his craw.

Amendment No. 28A put by the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) was put forward quite late in the process at report stage. It was even more revealing because it dealt with the very important matter of when the Government of Canada might respond to the existence of minority official language communities, whether the English-speaking minority in Québec or the French-speaking minority in other parts of Canada. The proposal put forward by the Hon. Member for Bow River was that an area in which there is significant demand may be established if the number of persons in the area in respect of an official language spoken as a mother tongue is at least 51 per cent of the total number of persons residing in the area. That has to be about the most incredible amendment that could be put forward. The Government would respond, under this proposal, only if the official language minority happens to be the majority in the area. I do not know from where this idea came, but it is a splendid example of the kind of proposal which might have come forward at the legislative committee, been given short shrift and then set aside.

I am not meaning to ridicule a particular proposal or the Member who put it forward so much as I mean to indicate that in these two motions, we see the kind of feeling that exists in some parts of the country among persons who have not yet accepted the necessity of the policy of official bilingualism to which all three Parties, the Parliament of Canada and the Government of Canada have been committed since 1969. What I find particularly distressing about the failure to accept that is the way in which those who oppose the policy make demands on ordinary Canadians because they do not want to see the Government of Canada establish expectations for itself and for the persons who work in the Public Service.

If the Hon. Member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields) has been reported correctly in the press, and this was of course one of those leaks from the Conservative caucus, as it happens, he recognized as a result of a drive through rural Québec in which he needed help and discovered people who did not speak English, that there are persons who do not know the language which prevails in an area and surely the Government of Canada has an obligation to serve those persons in the language that they do know.

It seems to me ultimately outrageous that we will not use the facilities of the Government, we might not on the view of these persons make language training available or hire persons who are not fluent in both languages in order to serve these people but we will instead—and I speak now for the English-speaking majority who take this particular view—demand that all of those persons become bilingual themselves through whatever means possible at whatever difficulty, if they are to deal with the Government of Canada. That seems to me so monstrously unfair that I cannot believe that any Canadian with whatever view of this country could really persist in a rejection of the policy and say that the Government of Canada should not make that effort, take that extra step to ensure that the official language minority in an area is able to obtain services in its own language.

The reality, of course, is that the Government of Canada has since 1969 been committed to the policy and has generally acted on it. I want to suggest, however, that in ensuring that the Public Service is capable of serving the minority, there are some very real concerns, and one of them deserves to be stated here this afternoon. While committed to the policy, and the Bill we have been considering represents a significant renewal of the policy of official bilingualism, there are still some very grave shortcomings in the teaching of the language to members of the Public Service and in the provision of interpretation services.

The government's commitment has not really been reflected in practice. There has been a reduction in the number of interpretors and an increase in their workload. There has been privatization of a substantial part of the translation service in order to reduce costs, in spite of concern about the effect this will have on the quality of translations.

Language teachers in the public service have been forced to work for almost two years without a new collective agreement. Faced with demands for an increase in the amount of teaching that they do every week, they will of course have to reduce their preparation time. An increase from 20 to 25 hours a week represents a very significant change in the working conditions of these teachers.

I think this is a matter of considerable concern because speaking for, if you will, the English speaking majority of the country who are concerned about what will happen in the public service, they want the assurance that they will be able to obtain the kind of language instruction that they need in order to provide the kind of service to the French speaking minorities of the country that our policy envisions. If they are not able to obtain the kind of instruction that hones their skills and targets well the kind of service they are required to provide, then the policy to which we are committed in principle is not being fully achieved in practice. Although that may in a sense be in parenthesis in our general consideration of the Bill, it is a concern that I want to underscore for the Secretary of State (Mr. Bouchard), who is in the House this afternoon, and for others concerned, the President of the Treasury Board (Miss Carney) and so on.

As I have already indicated, in the years since 1969 we have seen an acceptance of the policy of official bilingualism. It is tempting to review how that happened, to refer to the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism, the Act of 1969, and recognize, as the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier and the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) did, the policy of multiculturalism stated in 1971 in this chamber and its acceptance by all Parties, and to recognize the movement toward recognition of aboriginal self-government. All of those are aspects of the building of a new Canada on which we have been embarked since the 1960s. It is that voyage that is of such crucial importance to this policy and this Bill.

The fact that there are still some Members in this House who speak for another view and wear the dinosaur button proudly is an indication that they speak for a dying view, I suppose I am not sure there were dinosaurs around when the sheep and mice wanted to enjoy the earth, but without elaborating on that, I think there is a growing number of people in this country who accept the policy and want it to flourish. I want to say to them and to all of us here that it is imperative that this Bill receive passage here and in the other place and be proclaimed. It is necessary in order to renew official bilingualism and establish the policy across the country. It is necessary for various reasons. It is necessary in order to have a footing on which to stand if one wants to express concern, as someone said yesterday, about the rights of the English-speaking minority in Québec and the impact of Bill 101.

It is surely to be profoundly regretted that the Conservative Government of Bill Davis in Ontario never took the step of making the province officially bilingual back in the 1970s. Who knows, it might have changed the history of Québec in additional creative ways. It is surely to be regretted that the Conservative opposition in Manitoba fought the attempt of the Manitoba NDP Government to implement what eventually became the declaration of the Supreme Court of Canada. It is surely to be regretted that Conservative Governments in Saskatchewan and Alberta have finally recognized that there is an official bilingual reality in their provinces, only to then largely do away with it.

Those realities across the country we can do very little about. However, as Members of Parliament we can ensure that Bill C-72 becomes the law of the land. We can ensure that the policy is renewed and strengthened and extended, whatever happens to Clause 2 of the Bill. As we strengthen official bilingualism and reassure the majority in Québec, perhaps we will see a day, sooner rather than later, when restrictions on English in the Province of Québec will seem less necessary to the majority; when French flourishes there and in so many other parts of Canada far beyond the National Capital Region in a community in which we are truly committed.

Let me say in conclusion, with respect to the concern about employment and the public service expressed by so many of those who are still opposed to the policy and the Bill, that this is surely addressed under a very simple rubric. We now have in the marginal note not the fact of law but the reality that the Government practices a commitment to equitable participation. When the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Masse) seeks to have a quarter of his staff be francophone, that reflects proportions. The reality of employment equity for the target groups that the Government has declared, in which the ethnocultural diversity of the country is to be recognized, is the context within which equitable participation by the official language communities will occur. In Clause 39 of Bill C-72, we have an assurance that proportionality will be maintained.

With those concluding reassurances to the English-speaking people of this country whom I particularly address because of my background and experience and the concerns I know are out there, I want to urge all to join me in giving firm support to Bill C-72.

Mr. Speaker: Questions or comments.

Mr. McCain: Mr. Speaker, my comment will be brief. I wish to state unequivocally to every Member of this House and every citizen of this nation that I have been a supporter of bilingualism. That position has cost me in my constituency. It nearly cost me my seat on one occasion. Therefore, I think my dedication to bilingualism has been proven by my vote, my behaviour, and I cannot be seen as opposing bilingualism in practice in the Government of Canada. Let that be clearly understood by all concerned.

I want to compliment those whose principles required they stand in contradiction of my stand, such as the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin) and his confreres. I compliment them on the principles they espouse. It is only appropriate that one should recognize the principles of others. My difficulty has not been with bilingualism but with its heavy-handed administration to the prejudice of unilingual Canadians of whatever language. Let there be no misunderstanding about that. I do not rise to confront my Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) or my Party. I rise in support of the principle which I believe transcends some of the obligations one has as a member of a Party. This Government has been a good government, perhaps the best in the last 25 years, so let there be no misunderstanding about my loyalty to bilingualism.

However, I want to see unilingual Canadians able to use federal premises in the language of their choice, whether it be in Chicoutimi or St. Stephen. I want to see unilingual Canadians able to tender on the Government of Canada in their own language. I want to see bilingual competence in federal offices. However, I do not want to see it to the prejudice of the talent of unilingual Canadians who may seek education which this Bill does not offer.

I want to compliment the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) for his very fine and reassuring speech. He has given Canadians the reassurance that this may be applied in an even-handed way. My objection is that scientists and experts, in whatever sphere, find themselves barred from occupations as federal civil servants because of lack of language.

I, Sir, have had more difficulty with learning language than any other subject, and I sympathize with those who are dead-ended because they have neither been offered training nor are capable of accepting it.

The assurance I would like is that there will be unilingual opportunity in Canada in every sphere. My position in no way qualifies my support of my colleague or my Prime Minister.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): I must say I do not doubt the sincerity of the Hon. Member who has just finished speaking, although I believe many of them do not fully understand the purpose of this Bill. I know there are many anglophones in English Canada. I said it, and I will say it, without trying to anger anyone. In Canada, especially English Canada, there are many people who say: We love you French Canadians . . .

[English]

As I said, I am a Canadien français, and there is no translation for that.

There are English-speaking Canadians who love French Canadians, but, as I have said before, in subservience if possible! But that cannot be. It is impossible, and we will not accept it. That must be understood. That is what the people who are outside now, as we speak, do not understand. We want to be at home. We want to be ourselves. We are not taking anything away from others who also have the right to be themselves. That is what must be understood, and that is the purpose of this Bill, the continuation of everything we have known. Lastly, I would like to thank someone who has always cared about us. I think we ought to pay tribute to him, our colleague who has always . . .

Mr. Speaker: Order. I am sorry to have to interrupt the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme), but his time has elapsed. Consequently, unless there is unanimous consent that the debate continue, it is my duty, since it is now 12:42 p.m., pursuant to the Order passed on Monday, July 4, 1988, to interrupt the proceedings and put forthwith every question necessary to dispose of the third reading stage of this bill.

[English]

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

Call in the Members.

Mr. Speaker: I should advise the House that according to the rules the bell will ring for 15 minutes.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Hnatyshyn), which was agreed to on the following division:

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

Bill read the third time and passed.

Mr. Speaker: Is the Hon. Minister for Employment and Immigration rising on a point of order?

Mrs. McDougall: Mr. Speaker, I apologize for my tardiness. Had I been here, I proudly would have voted for the motion.

[Translation]

Mrs. Vézina: Mr. Speaker, I too am sorry for being late. I missed the beginning of the vote, and I wanted to assure the House that I would have voted in favour in the vote just taken.

Some Hon. Members: Bravo!

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

LAKE MICHIGAN—PROPOSED DIVERSION OF WATER IN UNITED STATES

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, there is disturbing news from south of the border. Governor Thompson of Illinois has urged the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to divert billions of gallons of Lake Michigan into the midwest river system. The Governor of Illinois described the situation as "a navigation emergency" and requested the Corps to divert Great Lakes water at Chicago to get river traffic flowing again.

This is the thin edge of the wedge. Today's emergency will become tomorrow's routine. The Government of Canada should make strong representations in Washington and make it absolutely clear that Governor Thompson's proposal is unacceptable today, tomorrow, and one hundred years from now.

When will the Government wake up to the fact that water is included in the trade agreement, whether or not it acknowledges it? Americans say that water is included, according to the July 1 issue of Inside U.S. Trade. If the Government does not wake up, Canadians will have a strong message at the next election.

CANADA DAY

QUÉBEC-EST CONSTITUENCY—CONGRATULATIONS ON INITIATIVES OF LIMOILOU ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

Mr. Marcel R. Tremblay (Québec-Est): Mr. Speaker, July 1 was a day of joyous celebration for all Canadian men and women, whatever part of Canada they hail from, and whatever their language or origin.

Canada Day is an event that rekindles the feelings of pride and belonging that are natural to any nation with a strong identity and strong roots.

Once again this year, thanks to the brilliant initiative of the Limoilou Economic Development Corporation, people in my riding of Québec-Est celebrated the arrival of their ancestors with a lively performance by gifted actors in period costumes.

All of those who participated in this day of rejoicing in beautiful Cartier-Bréboeuf Park will remember that in our area, people take things in hand, know how to organize and bring their projects to fruition.

Thanks again to the Limoilou Economic Development Corporation, to the thousands of young people who participated, and to the people of Québec-Est!

CONJUGAL VIOLENCE

IMPORTANCE OF SENSITIZATION TO PROBLEM

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate Quebec film maker Jean-Claude Lauzon, whose public service announcement on violence in the home was awarded a prize at the International Publicity Film Festival at Cannes.

Of the 216 entries from numerous countries, only the Quebec Government film dared to deal with the problem of violence against women.

I want to take this opportunity to congratulate the Minister of Justice, the Minister of Health and Social Services, as well as the Solicitor General of the Province of Quebec for their publicity campaign against family violence.

The federal Government should follow their example and plan a similar campaign in order to sensitize all Canadians to the problem of family violence.

Each year, more than a million women are battered in Canada. It is the federal Government's duty to try to curtail violence against women by encouraging victims to come out of their isolation and by urging relatives, friends and neighbours to intervene when necessary. The Government must accept its responsibility and break the silence which surrounds the problem of family violence.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

REQUEST THAT NAGORNO—KABARACH REGION BE ANNEXED TO ARMENIA

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, I have spoken in this House several times this year to draw the attention of Hon. Members and the public to the aspirations of the Armenian community living in the Soviet Union. This winter, I asked the top Soviet leaders to deal with the demands of the Armenian people who want the autonomous region of Nagorno-Karaback, with its Armenian majority, to be annexed to the Republic of Armenia.

[English]

Today we learned from the newspapers that more demonstrations have taken place during this week in the Armenian capital, Yerevan, and that there has been a call for a general strike, which seems to have been respected.

It is reported that during these demonstrations, five Armenian demonstrators were killed by the forces of the Soviet Department of the Interior and about thirty more were injured.

My office reached the Soviet Embassy this morning, but it refused to confirm or comment on these events, although Soviet television itself, picked up by Agence France Presse, reports bloody demonstrations in the Armenian Republic.

[English]

I wish to press the Government of the Soviet Union to bring more comprehension to dealing with what seems to me to be the legitimate grievances of the Armenian people. I offer my sympathy to the Armenian community on the suffering it is undergoing.

THE ENVIRONMENT

POLLUTION OF ST. LAWRENCE RIVER

Mr. Nic Leblanc (Longueuil): Mr. Speaker, the federal Government will spend $110 million to clean up the St. Lawrence River. This is the most important federal environmental initiative in Quebec.

Our Government recognizes the priceless value of the St. Lawrence River, this living heritage. Most Quebecers have had the pleasure to live by its shores, to admire it and to swim in it.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of all Quebecers, I thank the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and his Environment Minister (Mr. McMillan) for this timely initiative to revive the magnificent St. Lawrence River.

NATIVE PEOPLES

JOB TRAINING PROGRAM—DELAY IN FUNDING

Ms. Audrey McLaughlin (Yukon): Mr. Speaker, the on-the-job training of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development has provided an excellent program for facilitating the entry of aboriginal people into the workforce. The Government states that it wishes to support the self-sufficiency of aboriginal people. Nowhere is this more important than providing people with the skills to enter the workforce.

Despite these fine sentiments there is a situation in the Yukon, brought to my attention by a number of constituents, both employers and potential trainees, that this program has not yet received funding for the 1988-89 fiscal year. This means that potential trainees in business, mining, government services, and band offices sit waiting for positions. Last year the program had over 100 trainees with a 95 per cent success in job placement rate. At the present time 45 trainees could be placed, but three and a half months after the start of the year there is still no money.

Where is the commitment of the federal Government? Is it more interested in ramming through legislation in a vain attempt to impress voters than seeing ordinary Canadians get jobs?

DISASTERS

EDMONTON TORNADO DAMAGE—FEDERAL COMPENSATION PAYMENTS

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, on July 31, 1987, a vicious tornado devastated areas of Edmonton. The cost in lives and property damage was enormous. In disasters of this magnitude the federal Government has always rushed to provide emergency aid in many forms.

The morning after July 1, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark), the Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada (Mr. Mazankowski), and CMHC officials and I flew in an Armed Forces helicopter to assess the degree of damage.

Last month the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Beatty) presented a cheque for $22 million to the Alberta Government as partial compensation for those damages.

The previous year the federal Government allocated $16 million as its contribution to the Edmonton flood disaster of 1986.

BILL C-72

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, if we consider today's vote on the Official Languages Bill, during which nine government Members voted against the advancement of official languages and other Members either stayed away or abstained, the demonstration on Parliament Hill by Canadians who are opposed to the advancement of official languages and the speeches made by certain Members here in the House on the amendments, especially by the Hon. Member for Simcoe South (Mr. Stewart), all this goes to show that once again, part of the population of Canada and especially part of its Parliamentarians have no understanding of Quebec and Canada, no understanding of our history. I think that the purpose of the official languages legislation is to protect francophones, and I hope that sanctions will be taken against certain individuals, because to us francophones, despite today's vote, the insult remains. No apologies were made to the francophones in this country.

TAX REFORM

BENEFITS OF REFORM

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, critics of the tax reform proposals of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) have lost face once again, since as a result of this reform, the vast majority of wage earners and pensioners will pay less income tax. Eighty-five per cent of Canadians will pay less income tax as of July 1, and they will notice the positive impact of this reform when they realize they are getting a bigger paycheck that will put more money in their pockets.

From now on, there will be only three taxation levels instead of ten, which will make the system easier to understand. The tax rate will be set at 17 per cent for taxable incomes below $27,500, at 26 per cent for incomes from $27,500 to $55,000, and at 29 per cent for incomes over $55,000. Many tax concessions have been eliminated to make up for the drop in tax rates and to spread the tax burden more equitably. Income tax credits will take the place of a number of exemptions and deductions. Furthermore, the maximum credit per eligible child has been increased to $559 for 1988.

Mr. Speaker, since the Conservative Government came to power, more and more people are working, we have managed to reduce the deficit, and 850,000 Canadians on low incomes will no longer pay income tax. We can say that with this Minister of Finance, consumers are getting their money's worth, Mr. Speaker!

PRIVATIZATION

ELDORADO NUCLEAR—WORKERS' PENSIONS AND BENEFITS

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, when the Government announced that it would be privatizing Eldorado Nuclear the Minister then in charge of privatization said in a press release that "existing pension and benefit plans will be adopted by the new company". In a statement and a letter sent to employees she repeated that promise. The company itself repeated that promise before a committee of the House of Commons.

Now in a proposal made public to the workers yesterday it becomes apparent for existing workers who continue to work for this firm that they will lose the protection of their present pension plans. The protection will only exist for those people who have already retired.

I call upon the Government to reaffirm the promise it made to the workers. I call upon the company to reaffirm the promise it made to the workers.

I can tell the Government at this time that any work it wants done on that legislation this afternoon is in jeopardy if this broken promise is not rectified by the Government.

WESTERN DROUGHT—FEDERAL ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

Mr. Felix Holtmann (Selkirk—Interlake): Mr. Speaker, on June 30 the Government of Canada announced its drought relief program for livestock producers. The federal Government will spend $76 million, and share assistance with all three prairie provinces.

This is just another example of the kind of leadership western Canadians have come to expect from the Conservative Government. This Government never has to wait for the squeaky calls of the lonely drugstore cowboy Grits in the West or, worse yet, a drought wish list by the Leader of the NDP (Mr. Broadbent) and a Mr. Nobody from Saskatchewan called Romanov or Romanow or something.

No western Canadians can see any leadership qualities in the Hon. Member for Oshawa. Apparently the NDP drought policy will be issued during the next federal election campaign. By next spring, if they waited for New Democrats to take action or form policies, farmers in Saskatchewan will be spitting pure dust and dead cows will be pushing up daisies.

MEMBER FOR CHARLEVOIX—PLEA ON BEHALF OF ANGLOPHONES

Hon. Bob Layton (Lachine): Mr. Speaker, yesterday afternoon the walls of this great House of Commons were vibrating. They were vibrating with the passionate call of my colleague and friend, the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin), for support of Bill C-72. A great worker for Québec, he wanted that support and I quote:

—for the sake of Canada and for the sake of its people.

Speaking, I believe, for the vast majority of French Québecers, the Member of Parliament from Charlevoix pronounced clearly and precisely the message that is needed for a strong and united Canada. He said:

> I need you English Québecers. I need a strong English community in Québec.

These words, Mr. Speaker, were music to my ears, and I know my hon. friend was direct and sincere in his delivery. We the anglophone minority of Québec have contributed much to our Belle Province and must continue to play an active role in our distinct society.

Yes, we are a fundamental part of this distinct society, and good will, demonstrated in concrete terms by our Québec and Canadian Governments, will go a long way to reassuring my community that we are, in fact, needed. Our federal Government and the Government of Québec must respond to this call. They must recognize the special needs of the minorities across Québec and Canada.

Improved access to services in one's language, increased opportunities in jobs and careers in one or both languages, and support for the special needs of the minority communities are prescribed in laws like Bill C-72.

But the good will, the trust, the confidence, and the generosity called for by the Member from Charlevoix must come from all our leaders. Canadians deserve nothing less.

ST. LAWRENCE RIVER—CONSERVATION AND ELIMINATION OF POLLUTION

Mr. Gilles Bernier (Beauce): Mr. Speaker, as you know, the Conservative Government has decided to spend $110 million on cleaning up the St. Lawrence River.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I hope the applause will not be counted as part of my speaking time.

This amount includes $20 million for the protection of endangered species and environmentally sensitive areas. There are plans for upgrading existing wildlife reserves along the St. Lawrence and for creating a national wildlife reserve between Montreal and Sorel.

Survival plans will be implemented for the most endangered species like the peregrine falcon and the beluga whale, and the Government has announced funding of $6 million for an action plan for the whales. Finally, negotiations will start with the Province of Quebec on creating a marine park at the mouth of the Saguenay, at a cost of $75 million.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, you will know that we often deal with very important and global matters in this House, but I have a small item that was brought to my attention by a constituent that I thought deserved the attention of this House.

Do you know, Mr. Speaker, that it is not possible in the city of Winnipeg at the main post office to buy a stamp with the Queen's picture on it? This may not be a national disaster, but it certainly is an inconvenience and it is a public relations disaster for the Post Office.

My friend, who writes to many people in many countries, likes to use the stamp with the Queen's picture on it. Why can't we buy a stamp for 37 cents to mail a letter in the city of Winnipeg with a picture of the Queen on it?

Let's take care of the little things and the big things will take care of themselves.

WATER RESOURCES POLICY—INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION URGED

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, many Canadians who strongly support the Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement just as strongly object to the large-scale export of Canadian water to the United States.

The Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) has stated quite clearly that nothing in the trade agreement requires Canada to export water and that it is government policy not to allow any large-scale export of Canadian water. That being the case, there is no reason that the Government should not introduce its own legislation to turn its policy into the law of our land.

DROUGHT IN SOUTHWESTERN ONTARIO

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Agriculture but in his absence I will address it to the Minister of State for Grains and Oilseeds.

Southwestern Ontario is facing the worst drought in some 50 years. For example, corn producers have already lost 20 per cent of their crop worth over $200 million. Every day the drought continues it amounts to some $20 million of additional loss to farmers. By the end of this month if the drought continues it is estimated that the losses will approach $800 million. Losses are similar in other field and fruit and vegetable crops. I wonder what action the Government is taking in the face of this worst drought for farmers in southwestern Ontario in a generation.

Hon. Charles Mayer (Minister of State (Grains and Oilseeds)): Mr. Speaker, we are well aware of the situation. The Hon. Member did not mention that there was a frost in parts of Ontario as recently as about 10 days ago that has also caused problems. We have been monitoring the weather situation, and particularly moisture, going back to the beginning of February. We are doing the same thing in Ontario as we are doing on the Prairies.

We have meetings planned with the respective farm organizations regionally for the end of this month or the beginning of next month so that we can get a good assessment of the situation. I think the Hon. Member would know, as an agriculture critic, that some of the crops are not beyond help yet as far as rain is concerned, and the reason we have scheduled the meetings with the farmers and farm groups in about a month's time is because we think that at that time we will be in a much better position to assess exactly what the situation is, and on that basis be able to determine what kind of assistance will be needed.

If the Hon. Member wants to be fair about this, he will recognize that this Government has been very responsive when dealing with farmers' problems, whether they be weather related, market related or whatever. We have been very much on top of it and have been very willing to provide assistance to farmers. We will do the same thing in this case.

CROP INSURANCE REVIEW COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, over a year ago the Canada-Ontario Crop Insurance Review Committee reported to the Minister of Agriculture recommending, for instance, that benefits be increased from 80 per cent to 90 per cent. Corn producers have asked that the compensation level be increased by 50 per cent this year. The Ontario Government has offered to put in place a tripartite system which would provide additional benefits. The Minister of Agriculture has apparently told the Ontario Government, "We will take your cash but we won't increase the benefits".

I wonder why the Government has failed to act on those recommendations made over a year ago in a booklet entitled Looking Ahead Toward 1988. In fact, those recommendations which were made by that federal-provincial review committee were designed for exactly the kind of disaster we face today. Yet no action has been taken. The Government has been sitting on the report and has done nothing for over a year.

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Blais (Minister of State (Agriculture)): Mr. Speaker, I think that the Member for Algoma should know that our Government has done everything in its power to assist Canadian farmers and that we are at the present time reviewing all of our programs with regard to grain throughout Canada. My colleague the Minister responsible for grains, the Minister of Agriculture and myself will be holding consultations in all regions of the country in the course of the next few weeks. We will meet with all interested parties to see how the present structure in the grain sector could be modified to advantage. We have stood up for Canadian farmers, and invested more in their well-being that any previous Government. I have no doubt that we shall continue to do so and we will ensure that grain sector programs in Ontario and the rest of Canada match the needs of producers as closely as possible.

[English]

CROP INSURANCE—REQUEST FOR EXTENSION OF APPLICATION DEADLINE

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, we know that the Government was able to come up with $164 million for what was almost a political disaster in Lac-Saint-Jean last month, while a natural disaster in western Canada got only $76 million.

Since the Government has failed to act for a year to put in place better crop insurance programs, and thus the participation rate has been very low because the present program is simply no good, and since the Government did not act on the recommendations of the committee, will the Government extend the deadline so that farmers can apply for crop insurance up until at least the end of August? This will provide some assistance from the Government to help them face the worst natural disaster they have faced in over 50 years.

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre Blais (Minister of State (Agriculture)): Mr. Speaker, just a few days ago we announced that the Government would allot $153 million to aid western producers. We clearly indicated that we were monitoring the situation very closely in Ontario and in Quebec, and indeed everywhere in Canada. We are currently in touch with Mr. Riddell who toured Southern Ontario to gain first-hand knowledge of the drought situation in that area and we hope that if we have to intervene the Government of Ontario will be as receptive as were the Governments of Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba, who provided us with exceptional co-operation in the application of a program in the prairie provinces. And we hope that in this case the Government of Ontario will co-operate closely with us in the application of a program to meet . . .

As for crop insurance, Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Agriculture and myself will be meeting with our provincial counterparts on Monday for the annual federal-provincial conference, and the question of crop insurance is on the agenda.

LAKE MICHIGAN—PROPOSED DIVERSION OF WATER IN UNITED STATES

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Secretary of State for External Affairs, my question is directed to the appropriate Minister. In light of disturbing reports from Illinois where Governor Thompson is proposing to triple the flow of Great Lakes waters from Lake Michigan into the mid-West river system because of navigation problems, why is the Government of Canada not making strong representations in Washington to the effect that this proposition is totally unacceptable because of its effect on Canadian waters in the Great Lakes?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the thrust of the Hon. Member's question is a charge that the Government of Canada is not making a sufficiently vigorous representation to Washington. I do not know why he would make such a statement. I do not think he is privy to the inner workings of the Government of Canada or to any diplomatic notes that may be sent by us to the U.S. Government.

In any event, I assure the Hon. Member that the Government of Canada is taking the issue very seriously. The Hon. Member must know that there is enormous pressure from within the United States to resist what Governor Thompson is seeking, the diversion of water from Lake Michigan at the Chicago diversion point. Ohio, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, for example, have already made their opposition clear, as has the Government of Canada.

The U.S. Government has given us its assurance that we will be fully consulted at every stage of the U.S. Government's deliberations on the matter. For our part, we are making our concern known to the U.S. administration in the strongest possible terms.

CANADIAN POSITION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, there is a big difference between being consulted and making Canada's position clearly and effectively known. The Minister does not seem to be informed on his own Government's inner workings, judging from his answer. He did not answer my question.

Why is the Government of Canada not making strong representations in Washington on this matter? When will the Government of Canada wake up to the reality that, as far as Washington is concerned, the trade agreement includes water? Having included water, the federal water policy of the Minister of the Environment becomes a mockery because of the fact that water will then be part of the American interpretation of the agreement. Why is Canada not making strong representations in Washington on the proposal of Governor Thompson of Illinois?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member must have water on his brain. The proposal of Governor Thompson is to have the U.S. administration, through the Supreme Court, as a matter of fact, approve and arrange for the diversion of American water from Lake Michigan, which is totally within U.S. boundaries, to elsewhere within the United States. It has nothing to do with diversion of Canadian water, or inter-basin diversions, or water exports.

In any event, we take the matter seriously. We are concerned about the effect on Canada of possible American action on American water for American domestic purposes. In that respect, we are making the most vigorous representations that could possibly be made to the U.S. administration.

RIGHT OF UNITED STATES TO DIVERT WATER—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I would like to follow up on this very serious problem. Diversions which in fact take place from Lake Michigan, as the Minister knows, would have serious and damaging effects on downstream Great Lakes communities. Does the Government accept that the United States has the right to undertake such diversions from Lake Michigan unilaterally?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, there is a long tradition of joint management of the Great Lakes by Canada and the United States. Some decisions do require joint decision-making or some recourse, for example, to the International Joint Commission. This particular question happens to be within the jurisdiction of the U.S. However, given the spirit of co-operation over many years, in fact over many decades, in the management of the Great Lakes in general, it is expected by both parties that any decision by one affecting the other would involve the utmost in consultation. Certainly that principle applies in spades here.

In any event, it has nothing to do with free trade, federal water policy, or inter-basin diversions within Canada affecting the U.S. It has everything to do with a proposal from one State Governor, in connection with which there is great opposition in the U.S., for diverting American water from Lake Michigan to somewhere else, in this case to the Mississippi. We oppose it for good domestic reasons, and in that connection you can be assured that the Government of Canada will continue to be very categorical in its representations to the U.S.

CANADIAN POLICY

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, surely the Minister recognizes that a diversion from Lake Michigan would have a serious impact on water levels in Lake Huron, Lake Erie and Lake St. Clair, and would affect all the communities along the Canadian side of those lakes.

The Government of Canada, in a statement tabled at public meetings held by the IJC in 1983, stated its "longstanding opposition to unilateral increases in diversions from the Great Lakes system", and its view that "such proposals should be considered only after consultation and agreement between Canada and the U.S." Therefore, is the Minister saying that his Government has changed that policy and we are no longer taking the position that we must agree to any water diversion from Lake Michigan?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, there is no change in policy. Canada has not been approached formally by the U.S. administration about any decision the U.S. Government has taken or is even contemplating taking on this question. All we have is an idea or proposal from one state Governor, that being Governor Thompson of Illinois, who is trying to do the very thing which has been proposed by all kinds of different state Governors over the years in connection with one water situation or another. In almost every case there has been as much resistance within the U.S. to what was proposed as there has been in Canada.

In any event, we expect to be consulted. We expect to be informed. Ultimately, if there were to be any diversion, which we do not expect, we would expect our concurrence to be granted before the project could be proceeded with. However, the matter is totally academic. It is only a proposal and no decision has been made, much less it is likely to happen.

REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT ASSURANCE ON POSSIBLE DIVERSION OF WATER

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, it may be academic for the Minister; it is not academic for the hundreds of communities along the Great Lakes that will be affected by this kind of diversion.

I put it to the Minister as straightforwardly as I can, that he said previously that there was not a Canadian role in this as far as agreement was concerned. It was an American decision with respect to American water. Is he now prepared to stand up and very clearly tell this House that we will insist, as we have in the past, that there be Canadian agreement before any diversion takes place?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, as far as any diversion is concerned the answer is yes. I am saying as clearly as I can that any such diversion from Lake Michigan within the U.S. would have profound implications for Canada. It would have profound implications for navigation, for recreation, and for commercial interests. We oppose it in the strongest possible terms. However, it is only a proposal. It has to go through a labyrinth of complex legal obstacles in the U.S.

As long as we are making our views known, and as long as we have a commitment from the U.S. Government to consult us at every stage along the way, and ultimately we are in a position to oppose the diversion if the Americans were ever stupid enough to proceed with it, I think the Hon. Member should not be so exercised.

DECISION ON NATURAL GAS EXPORTS TO UNITED STATES

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. Yesterday the Minister of Energy was asked what the Government was going to do to ensure that some of Canada's natural gas was reserved for use by Canadians when the Americans already have one-third of our total reserves under long-term contract. We learned the answer when listening to the speech of the President of the Treasury Board yesterday in Calgary. She said in effect it really does not matter if the Conservatives lose the next election because we cannot make any change to our energy policy anyway, it is enshrined in stone under the free trade agreement. It is really under the jurisdiction of Washington to make decisions as to whether any changes are going to be made.

Why does Washington now control our energy policy? Why did the Government feel it necessary to have Washington make these decisions on Canadian energy policy?

Mr. Jack Shields (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the National Energy Board decision on the Pan-Alberta application was and is based on procedures developed and announced prior to completion of the Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement. There is no direct link between that agreement and the NEB decision. It is clear, however, that as U.S. buyers are becoming more confident in stability of supply in the Canada-U.S. energy environment, we are going to have more sales to the U.S.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, there is a significant impact involved in the decision of the NEB on the Pan-Alberta Gas proposal. That impact is that under the free trade agreement the NEB has had its powers almost completely stripped away. It is nothing more than a monitoring agency. It cannot turn down those requests. More and more of our natural gas is to be destined for delivery to the U.S. and Canadians will not have access to it. I take great exception to the President of the Treasury Board saying it does not matter who you vote for, you cannot change energy policy—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member will put his question, please.

Mr. MacLellan: I want the Government to know that galls me and other people on this side and I want to know why it does not gall the Government.

Mr. Jack Shields (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I have never heard anything so silly in all of my life in this House. That Member knows full well that the NEB operates under a set of guidelines and those guidelines are clear. They have public reviews where every consumer and consumer organization in this country has an opportunity to appear and make a complaint. There was virtually no complaint submitted to the NEB on this ruling. He knows that, and he is just trying to make political points on something he knows full well is not true.

SASKATCHEWAN STORAGE RESERVOIRS AND IRRIGATION PROJECTS—TRANSFER OF CONTROL

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Grains and Oilseeds. Agriculture Canada is in the process of transferring storage reservoirs and irrigation projects in southwestern Saskatchewan in particular from the PFRA to the Saskatchewan Water Corporation.

Given that this provincial body is primarily concerned with municipal, urban, and recreational use of water, can the Minister assure the farmers of the Swift Current—Maple Creek area that agriculture will be given the same priority as it was under the PFRA and that the traditional responsibility of the PFRA is not going to be abandoned?

Hon. Charles Mayer (Minister of State (Grains and Oilseeds)): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member raises a question which has a certain amount of topicality as far as the negotiations are concerned. The simple answer to that question is yes, that is one of the prime objectives of the negotiations. The way in which the PFRA has been able to deliver services in the past will be maintained if and when there is an agreement reached with the Government of Saskatchewan. Therefore, the simple answer to the question is yes.

FUTURE OF PRAIRIE FARM REHABILITATION ADMINISTRATION

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, the cattleman who was denied the Saskatchewan Water Corporation's permission to water his thirsty cattle because boaters on the Duncarn Dam would suffer will need stronger reassurance from the federal Government than that.

Is this the first step in the privatization of the PFRA as was recommended by the Nielsen Report?

Hon. Charles Mayer (Minister of State (Grains and Oilseeds)): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member has specific concerns about farmers in areas affected or about to be affected, I would be more than happy, as would the Minister of Agriculture, to look at them specifically. If he has some things with which he wants us to deal, we will be happy to do so if he lets us know.

Second, no, this is not the first step in any kind of privatization as recommended by the Nielsen Commission, absolutely not.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

QUERY WHY MAIL NOT DELIVERED IN SAINT-MAURICE DE L'ÉCHOUERIE

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for the Canada Post Corporation.

Two hundred and fifty-five families in Saint-Maurice de l'Échouerie, in the Gaspé, have not received their mail since July 4, because Canada Post failed to renew the delivery contract with the drivers who normally deliver the mail.

Could the Minister explain to these families why Canada Post decided, without warning, to send the mail 30 miles down the road to the village of Rivière-au-Renard? Why do these families have to travel 60 miles a day to pick up their mail? Is that the new Canada?

[English]

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, apparently the Hon. Member is not able to direct that question to Canada Post directly, where he knows it belongs. I will refer it for him.

I also refer him to Beauchesne's where he will see that that type of question is, if anything, an Order Paper question and is not fit for Question Period.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER INTERVENE

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, at this very moment, 255 families at Saint-Maurice de l'Échouerie are protesting and holding up a truck that delivers all the mail in the area. Is the Minister going to act responsibly and intervene to restore mail delivery to these people who are entitled to this service?

[English]

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether the Hon. Member might do the House a favour and spend a half hour with his colleague, the Member for Papineau, the former Postmaster General, who was the Minister responsible when Canada Post was made a Crown corporation. The Hon. Member for Papineau should instruct that Hon. Member as to what is the role of Crown corporations.

ROUTE TAKEN BY MAIL TRUCK

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the same Minister.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the women and children of Saint-Maurice de l'Échouerie took over their post office to draw the public's attention to their situation. The mail truck goes past their door, past their post office and off to another village, without stopping, and drops their mail there. Why can't the truck stop in their village? Why not? Why do women and children have to risk criminal charges to get their point across and get proper service?

[English]

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, that Hon. Member stood up on a Statement Pursuant to S. O. 21 before Question Period and said that at the main post office in Winnipeg they were unable to buy a stamp with the Queen's picture on it. I am informed that Winnipeg Postal Station A has 10,000 stamps with the Queen's picture on them.

With regard to the question or statement or whatever it was the Hon. Member made, I will refer it to the Post Office and seek their reaction since he is apparently not able to do that on his own.

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, the Conservatives may think it is funny, but a constituent of mine in Winnipeg wrote me a letter to indicate that he could not buy a stamp in Winnipeg with the Queen's picture on it.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, the Hon. Member has the floor.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary. I would like to ask the Minister whether he realizes that when ordinary citizens can't use Parliament to voice their needs, they have only one alternative and that is take direct action or let themselves be victimized. Is the Minister prepared to act responsibly as a Minister of this Parliament and protect Canadians against the arbitrary decisions of the bureaucracy?

[English]

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, when the Canada Post Corporation Act was brought before committee Jean-Claude Parrot, the head of CUPW, stated: "What we are saying is that under a Crown corporation we hope management will have its own authority to make certain decisions and to act as management".

That is what happened. The Hon. Member's question is one for management. Why does he not follow his leader's example and let management deal with it?

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

LAKE MICHIGAN—PROPOSED DIVERSION OF WATER IN UNITED STATES

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment and relates, as well, to the proposal to divert water from Lake Michigan into the Mississippi Valley.

The Minister's answer to the House a few moments ago indicating that the American Government had given our Government assurances that we would be consulted all along the way has an ominous ring and is reminiscent of the days when the Polar Sea sailed through our Northwest Passage.

Can the Minister advise the House whether the Government of Canada is prepared to join with those in the United States who oppose this diversion in the American courts, to oppose publicly any move to divert water from Lake Michigan into the Mississippi Valley, rather than waiting till later, as we did in the case of the Polar Sea?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member must know that the Supreme Court is the effective regulatory body in connection with the project in question. There is at present no formal process in train, as I understand it.

It is a proposal from only one state Governor. His proposal is being vigorously resisted by neighbouring states and by conservation groups and, as I understand it, even from within the U.S. administration itself.

If at some point the Government of Canada thought it advisable to intervene in some fashion—I do not know whether it would necessarily take the form of the recommendation of the Hon. Member—he can be assured that the Government of Canada, on behalf of Canadians and in the public interest, will take every relevant step necessary, as we have in the past, to oppose this insane kind of idea.

IMMIGRATION

DECISION TO STOP PROCEEDINGS AGAINST MEMBERS OF ANARCHIST DELEGATION

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. At a special immigration inquiry convened in Toronto yesterday, 14 Americans and one West German, who were members of an anarchist delegation and who took part in a violent and ugly rampage through downtown Toronto on Monday, were suddenly freed after immigration enforcement officers were ordered, from on high, to drop the cases and testimony that they had prepared against these individuals.

Will the Minister explain why the Government made a back-room deal to drop the cases that would have prevented these people from ever returning to Canada without special permission? Does the Minister believe that this kind of sweetheart arrangement will engender public confidence in the system, when such violent radicals will have full opportunity to return, while so many relatives of Canadians, for example, are denied the legitimate right of visiting or gaining landed immigrant status in Canada? For whom is the law working?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, in this case the law was working to get them out of the country, which I would have thought the Hon. Member would have supported. There is no secret deal. The counsel for the 13 Americans and one West German gave assurances to the adjudicator that her clients would leave the country. To my certain knowledge, I believe 13 of the 14 have already left. We are seeking confirmation on the 14.

There was nothing behind the scenes about it. It was an assurance that was given to the adjudicator. Since the objective was to have them leave the country so that we can do more for people who are trying to bring in relatives and so on, it was a perfectly appropriate action.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, the Minister had the obligation to uphold and apply the law, and to send a strong message that such violent elements are not welcome in Canada. She abandoned her obligation. That is most regrettable.

Given that these 15 individuals were charged with property damage, mischief, obstructing and assaulting police, escaping custody and resisting arrest, is she not worried that she has set a very dangerous precedent in cutting a deal that is very convenient to these culprits? Why does she believe that the price of the important principle in barring these people from re-entering Canada and of sending a clear signal to other like-minded radicals, is a price not worth paying? Since these individuals were not deported, they are allowed to return into the country scot-free.

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, under the process in place at the moment, it would have taken another two or three years to get them out of the country, as the Hon. Member well knows. He also knows that we are trying to change that, but I will not get into that again.

Let me just say that these people are now gone and they will not come back.

EMPLOYMENT

SITUATION OF OLDER WORKERS

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Labour. It has been almost three years since the Standing Committee on Employment and Immigration recommended to the Minister of Labour that there be a program for older workers. It recognized the plight of older workers.

It has been two years since the Minister declared his program. Why does he continue to blame the provinces? When will he meet the promise to older workers of Canada and implement the program?

Hon. Pierre H. Cadieux (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, let me put the record straight. I do not blame all the provinces. There are definitely some provinces that are not co-operating the way they should. I believe that the plight of older workers is the responsibility of all governments in Canada, including the provincial governments. Hopefully with their co-operation the program will be announced soon.

FUNDING OF PROPOSED PROGRAM

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, 41 per cent of older workers are frustrated and depressed, and have actually left the labour market. If the Minister is sincere about implementing the program, why does he not take the advice of the committee and contribute 100 per cent of funds to implement the program and keep his promise?

Hon. Pierre H. Cadieux (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, the Opposition always comes back with the 100 per cent program. Let me remind the Hon. Member, who, like myself as a matter of fact, was not here at the time, that that program was not for all older workers. It was discriminatory in that it dealt only with older workers in particular domains. The program we are proposing will deal with all older workers.

Oral Questions

LAKE MICHIGAN—PROPOSED DIVERSION OF WATER IN UNITED STATES

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. It concerns the matter of diversion of Great Lakes waters to the United States. The Minister says that this is only a proposal from one state Governor and therefore it is not necessary for him and the Canadian Government to act on this matter right now.

Is it not true that this is a matter that the United States Corps of Engineers, an institution of the U.S. Federal Government, is looking into right now and about which it is on the verge of making a decision within the next two weeks? Why will he and the Canadian Government not intervene now to head off that decision by the U.S. Corps of Engineers?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, it should be very clear that the Canadian Government has already made its representations known. I also want to assure the Hon. Member that arrangements regarding the Great Lakes waters go back to 1909. The House may recall that there was a Liberal Prime Minister at the time. Since then, all of the arrangements in the Great Lakes water systems and the boundary water systems have been organized to the mutual benefit of both countries. It is Canada's belief that no diversion can take place without our official consent.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, if the representations by the Canadian Government have been so effective, will the Acting Prime Minister tell us why the United States Army Corps of Engineers is still looking into the matter? If the Government is so serious about the boundary waters treaty, why has the Government failed to raise this matter immediately with the International Joint Commission that operates on behalf of both Governments under that boundary waters treaty?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Because, Mr. Speaker, we have taken our concerns directly to Washington and we feel that it is important in this case to do so.

CONTROL OF CHICKEN AND EGG IMPORT QUOTAS

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for International Trade and concerns the control of incubated eggs imported from the United States. Many producers have made representations to me, saying that they are worried and wonder why nothing is done to control American imports that are replacing Canadian domestic production.

Can the Parliamentary Secretary assure the marketing board and its members that measures will be taken to control import quotas for eggs and broiler chicks so that producers can plan their investments and production accordingly and thereby make this whole industry secure?

[English]

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the Government is aware of the pressures in the hatching egg sector and the request by the Canadian Broiler Hatching Egg Marketing Agency. There is speculation that importers have been attempting to establish artificially high historic levels in case controls are introduced.

Let me advise the Hon. Member that over-all levels of imports have declined by 14 per cent in the first five months of this year over last year's imports. While Canadian production is increasing, the Government has the agency's request under consideration.

CARMANAH VALLEY, B.C.—PRESERVATION OF SPRUCE TREE HERITAGE

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Hon. Minister of the Environment. Carmanah Creek Valley adjacent to Pacific Rim National Park contains the largest and tallest spruce trees in Canada—probably in the world. MacMillan Bloedel has proposed that a small portion of this valley be set aside as a park that would preserve some of the largest trees.

I would like to ask the Minister if he recognizes the importance of saving the Carmanah Valley in its entirety as a miniature eco-system that will go on living, and not simply preserving a few of the largest trees that will eventually die off and fall. If he does, could he tell the House what he and the Government are prepared to do to save this valley from logging?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, in response to the first part of the Hon. Member's question, my answer is yes, I do recognize the ecological treasure at stake here. After some 15 or 17 years of a combination of procrastination and insurmountable difficulty, the federal Government under our administration finally confirmed the boundaries for Pacific Rim National Park and arranged for the transfer of provincial Crown land to the federal Crown, paid out from the A-Base of my own budget $25 million to make it possible to establish the national park, only to discover that another area to the west of the park was at risk.

Some of the trees simply had not been identified previously by conservationists or others as being so special as to warrant being included in the national park.

It would be with great reluctance that I would ever consider reopening the question of Pacific Rim and renegotiating the boundaries, because of the difficulties that bedevilled successive Governments to get the park completed. But I will use my good offices and those of the federal Government as a whole to see whether the provincial Government might be prevailed upon to establish a provincial ecological preserve, and also to put some benevolent pressure on MacMillan Bloedel, whose tree licence is relevant in this case, to see whether they would not respond very favourably to the overture being made by the Sierra Club and by others to have those trees saved.

PROPOSED MORATORIUM ON LOGGING

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Minister for his favourable response. We recognize on this side of the House that the Government has had difficulties in dealing with the Government of British Columbia. I would like to ask the Minister will he pursue actively the possibility with MacMillan Bloedel and the provincial Government of a two-year moratorium on the Carmanah Creek area while individuals and concerned organizations work for a more permanent solution.

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I think that the Hon. Member would know that it would be a matter of moral suasion in trying to exercise benevolent influence. There is not anything that is legal that I could do, nor would the Hon. Member want me to, in the sense of expropriating the land. I will say that the area in question is precious, the trees are almost unprecedented in their magnificence. I think all Members of the House would agree that everything that could be done ought to be done to protect them, and in that connection I will be doing what I can.

SHORTAGE OF SKILLED WORKERS—TRAINING PROGRAMS

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. According to a recent report of the Canadian Labour Market and Productivity Centre, a tripartite agency of the Government, there is a serious shortage of skilled workers in Canada while, at the same time, we have over one million unemployed. The Centre concluded that the rate of unemployment would be lower if we had more effective training and mobility programs provided by the Government.

In these circumstances I want to ask the Minister how she and the Government can justify a cut of 32 per cent in training programs since 1984, and a further 11 per cent cut in those programs for this fiscal year? Since she is relatively new at her portfolio, would she not take a fresh look at this and recognize that labour market training and mobility should be a government public responsibility and should not be left to the free market system?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, there is one thing that the Hon. Member knows, but I will remind him again, and that is that there are four million Canadians who change jobs every year. Most of them do not need government help. What we have done under the Canadian Jobs Strategy is to concentrate first of all on those areas where there is a need, both on the side of the employee, who may need the training and upgrading, but also of employers who are looking for help.

The free market functions very well for most of those four million people. We have in the Canadian Jobs Strategy 84,000 participants in the skill investment area, 160,000 participants in the skill shortages area, from 1985 to 1988. Within the Canadian Jobs Strategy we have the flexibility to deal first of all with people who need training and upgrading at an entry level, plus the flexibility for areas where there is labour shortage and where people can upgrade their skills. That is why the program works so well.

Mr. Speaker: Given the time, we are going to have to close Question Period. I will come to the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) in just a moment.

VOTE ON BILL C-72

Hon. André Bissonnette (Saint-Jean): Mr. Speaker, I would like to tell Canadians that I was not able to be present for the vote on Bill C-72 at noon today because of communications and traffic problems, but that I unequivocally support this Bill.

At the same time, Mr. Speaker, I would also like to ask the Treasury Board to solve the problem of the language teachers which has been going on for too long and affects my riding as well.

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Deputy Government House Leader to give us a statement of the business that the Government intends to put before the House for the coming week.

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, today we will proceed to deal with the Bills that are on the Projected Order of Business as much as possible. The first Bill that we are going to deal with is Bill C-58. We will need unanimous consent in order to proceed with report stage and third reading of this particular Bill. We will then move to Bill C-61, an Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Food and Drugs Act, at report stage and third reading. Then, Bill C-124, an Act to amend the Canada Labour Code, report stage and third reading. It will be followed by Bill C-75, report stage. That is the Act to implement an agreement between the Government of Canada and the Government of Nova Scotia on offshore petroleum. Then we move to report stage of Bill C-122, followed by report stage of Bill C-129.

Mr. Speaker, the comments that I am going to make vis-à-vis report stage and third reading should apply to all Bills at all stages, and that is that obviously we can only move to third reading of a Bill with consent, where it is easy for it to be given. Naturally we would like to do third reading, but in the event that it is not possible to do third reading the same day, we will move it on and try to find a time which is convenient to the opposition spokespersons and the Government.

Tomorrow we will proceed with any of those Bills which have just mentioned which are not completed. In addition, I believe there has been some discussion with the Minister responsible for the Wheat Board, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Clark), and their respective spokespersons vis-à-vis Bill C-92 at report stage, Bill C-132 at second reading and Bill C-112. I believe those discussions have taken place and that we will move those measures forward.

If it is at all possible, we would like at least to get started on the Government's reply to the Senate's amendments to Bill C-84.

On Monday morning, it is our intention to call Motion No. 25, the abortion motion, for procedural debate only in order to determine whether or not the motion as put on the Order Paper is procedurally correct. As soon as the procedural arguments have been made, we would then adjourn that matter to allow the Chair an opportunity to decide on it.

We would then move to report stage and third reading of Bill C-93, the multiculturalism Bill, followed by Bill C-82, which is the lobbyists' registration Bill. Obviously, we would also complete the proceedings on the reply to Bill C-84.

There is a Bill that has been sent to us from the Senate, Bill S-17, regarding a trust company. I understand that consideration on it will take place on Monday at a time which is convenient to the spokesperson for the Liberal Party who has some questions which he wishes to ask of the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin).

That brings us to Tuesday morning when we will call Bill C-126, the Bretton Woods Bill, for report stage and third reading, and Bill C-110, the trade tribunal Bill for report stage and third reading.

I would also point out that we have had a request from our colleagues in the Liberal Party to recess the House on Tuesday at 6 p.m. We find that to be appropriate. Thus we will be moving a motion in that respect on either Monday or Tuesday.

I would point out that this schedule may sound like a reasonably heavy one, but it has been put together in the interests of getting us out of here. It has been put together with the assistance of the opposition spokespersons in order to meet the convenience of as many people being here at the appropriate time as possible.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order with respect to the House business. I would like to inquire of the Government House Leader whether there have been some discussions and whether the Government is now prepared to take Bill C-273, which is the Bill put forward by the Hon. Member for Ottawa West (Mr. Daubney) regarding political rights, and turn it into a government order in order that this Bill may be expedited and may go to the Senate, and in order that the campaign promise of the last election made by not just my Party but by his Party with respect to granting political rights to people working for the Government of Canada may in fact be implemented. I say that particularly in light of the fact that the Bill as it has been adopted and redrafted by the legislative committee in large measure conforms to the promises which were made by the Progressive Conservatives during the last election campaign. In addition, it is acceptable to the other two Parties.

Given that there is a willingness on the part of the other two caucuses to see this go through with a minimum amount of House time, is the Government prepared to bring it up as a government order and see it expedited rather than continue to drag it back and possibly not get it up before the next election?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased that my colleague opposite brought up the results of one of our election promises, that is, our promise with respect to parliamentary reform. As a result of parliamentary reform Private Members' Hour and Private Members' Business now mean something. My hon. colleague knows that the first Bill to pass all three stages was the Bill on tobacco presented by his colleague, the Hon. Member for Broadview—Greenwood (Ms. McDonald). We did as a House and as a Government implement parliamentary reform to allow for Private Members' Business to mean something.

There is one thing that I think will be confirmed by his colleague, the House Leader for the NDP, and also by members of the Liberal Party too, that is, we have been very careful vis-à-vis Private Members' Hour to stand back and to let it operate as Private Members' Hour. The Hon. Member's suggestion has merit. However, I would not want to suggest that we do anything which abridges the rights of other private Members with other Bills and which sets a bad precedent. I am not afraid to set precedents, but I do not want to set one that disrupts what all of us have spent two years building in terms of an effective Private Members' Hour.

I take the representation seriously. I will look into it. We will try to work it out with the House Leaders so that whatever we do is done with the agreement of caucus and does not abridge the rights we have built up over time.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on that same point. I want to ask the Deputy House Leader if he has not indeed heard the suggestion that was made. I think it came from me some weeks ago. That is to say, if we want to get through with Bill C-273 then we could ask the Government to take that order upon itself and put it to the House in due course.

It is much more difficult, as the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) has said, to use the present system because that Bill will only come back next fall. There are only two days of debate, one at report stage and one at third reading. We are asking the Government, telling the Government, that if it wants to co-operate with us, that is, the Members interested in this Bill to give political rights to public servants, then it could pick up the Bill as a government order. That would make it a lot faster and a lot easier.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I will take that representation under advisement too. I do say that whatever we do we should do as a House vis-à-vis Private Members' Hour. I think that is the safest way to proceed, but I will take it under advisement.

Mr. Speaker: I am going to interrupt Hon. Members for a moment. I will then come back to continue on some points of order and to continue this discussion, if it is necessary to do so. I see that the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre and others are rising.

Mr. Speaker: I will now hear the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre on the same point concerning the business of the House.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I was going to say that I am sure the discussions on this matter having been raised in the House can be pursued privately. I hope they could have a positive and early outcome. I will leave it at that.

Mr. Daubney: Mr. Speaker, as the proposer of the Private Member's Bill in question, I would just like to make it clear on the record that I support the suggestion of my two colleagues, the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) and the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier). While I am a great believer in parliamentary reform and am proud that my Bill has got this far in that process, I recognize the reality of the legislative and electoral timetable. The only way I think that our Party would be in a position to fulfil its promise to the people made in 1984 is if the Government adopts this as a piece of government business. I certainly urge it to give serious consideration to doing that.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, this morning, the Senate split Bill C-103. It is sending back Bill C-103 to the House of Commons as Bill C-103, Part I, dealing with the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency.

Point of Order—Mr. Plamondon

I would like to ask the Government House Leader whether the Government will consider introducing this Bill C-103, Part I immediately to the Chamber so that it can be passed, with one minor amendment.

• (1520)

Mr. Speaker: There is a procedural difficulty in this matter. There is a long-standing tradition that we do not comment upon the proceedings in the other place until we have received some notice one way or the other. The Hon. Member may have had a special communication, but the House has not received anything official. The Hon. Minister of State may wish to respond.

Mr. Lewis: We would be very disappointed if the Senate has done anything to interfere with the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency. We think this Bill will really help Atlantic Canada and it will put the administration of regional development into that area. We will be replying very quickly if there has been any tampering with that Bill by the other place.

PRIVILEGE

PROCEEDINGS IN LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE ON BILL C-130

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, my point of privilege arises from the deliberations of the legislative committee dealing with Bill C-130. This morning the chairperson indicated that it was to be his ruling throughout the considerations by the legislative committee that the committee would not interrupt its proceedings in response to a vote within the House of Commons.

As an individual Member of Parliament responsible to my constituents for voting on a vast number of pieces of legislation coming before us, this seems to me to be a distinct limitation of my privileges as a Member of Parliament. I would ask the Speaker to review the situation and to make some remedy, if possible.

Mr. Speaker: The complaint of the Hon. Member is that it may well be from time to time a committee might decide, as a consequence of the majority of the members in that committee, to carry on its proceedings even when a vote is taking place. Whatever may be the particular virtue or otherwise of that procedure, it has been allowed for a great many years in our tradition.

I might just say to the Hon. Member, with respect to the particular committee to which the Hon. Member refers, this morning, at the helpful suggestion of some Hon. Members and the co-operation of others in the committee, the committee did adjourn and all Members did take the vote.

I am aware of the complaint, and the Hon. Member will have to leave it with me. Under those circumstances, I cannot rule at the present time that it is a question of privilege.

Mr. Langdon: If I could just clarify the ruling which was made by the Chair, it was not that a majority of Members would have to be in favour of an adjournment, but instead that unanimously the committee members would have to agree to adjourn in order to permit their participation in a vote in the House. I felt it important to make that distinction for you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I have the Hon. Member's distinction, and I will consider the matter further. In the meantime, unless I feel it necessary to reopen it, that is where the matter lies. I will take a look at the particular distinction raised by the Hon. Member. If I feel that it is appropriate to do so, I will come back to the House and ask Hon. Members to argue the matter briefly.

Mr. Langdon: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. For purposes of this legislative committee notice was not received of the meeting this morning until well past the period customarily expected by the House. In that case, I wonder if the meeting itself has any force.

Mr. Speaker: I must ask the Hon. Member to take that issue and raise it at the committee. I do not think that the Chair can rule on a matter like that.

With respect to the other matter raised by the Hon. Member, I have to be absolutely sure that it has not extended to the point where, in some way or another, Hon. Members in the committee, or the Hon. Member who has raised the complaint, are denied their rights to function as Members of Parliament. That, of course, is an issue of privilege.

I will further consider the distinction raised by the Hon. Member, but on this latter matter clearly the Chair does not have any jurisdiction to intervene. I invite the Hon. Member to take the problem back to the committee.

Mr. Murphy: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. I know that the Member did not receive notice of the committee meeting at the appropriate time. In addition to that, and this may be a more general problem, I do not believe that the announcement that the committee was meeting was in the general notification of committees meeting that is circulated to all Members. In the House there are people who are not serving on standing or legislative committees who are interested in the transactions of those committees. The only means that Members have of knowing if a committee meeting is occurring is if it is listed in the daily bulletin.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member for Churchill. I know the Hon. Member understands that in this particular matter it is not the place for the Chair to intervene. However, the Chair has very generously allowed the matter to be raised. I am sure the appropriate people will attend to it.

MUTUAL LEGAL ASSISTANCE IN CRIMINAL MATTERS ACT

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-58, an Act to provide for the implementation of treaties for mutual legal assistance in criminal matters and to amend the Criminal Code, the Crown Liability Act, and the Immigration Act, 1976, as reported (with amendments) from the legislative committee.

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, I indicated when I did the projected business that we would need the consent of the House to proceed at this time to report stage and third reading of this Bill, and I would ask for that consent at this moment.

Mr. Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

• (1530)

Mr. Speaker: I must now give to Hon. Members my ruling on Bill C-58, an Act to provide for the implementation of treaties for mutual legal assistance in criminal matters and to amend the Criminal Code, the Crown Liability Act and the Immigration Act, 1976.

There are two motions in amendment on the Notice Paper for report stage of Bill C-58, an Act to provide for the implementation of treaties for mutual legal assistance in criminal matters and to amend the Criminal Code, the Crown Liability and the Immigration Act, 1976.

[Translation]

The two motions standing on the Order Paper in the name of the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) are in order. They will be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

[English]

I will now put Motions Nos. 1 and 2 to the House.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre) moved:

That Bill C-58 be amended in Clause 4 by striking out line 37 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"shall, by order, add to or delete from the".

That Bill C-58 be amended in Clause 4 by striking out line 41 on page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"(2) The Governor in Council shall, by".

He said: Mr. Speaker, I have a number of comments to make about the Bill. As I understand the Government will support these amendments, I suggest that I make my comments on third reading when I will perhaps take issue with some of the general aspects of the Bill. In this case the Government and the Opposition are agreed that we might go forward to the vote, so I will raise my points generally at third reading stage.

[Translation]

Mr. Richard Grisé (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, obviously, as my colleague from Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) has just said, his amendment is in order and acceptable to the Government. Now, Mr. Speaker, as is clearly stated, not only must the word "may" be replaced by "shall" on line 37 of the English version of the amendment, but also on line 41. Also in the French version, Mr. Speaker, the word inscrit must now appear in the amendment to be consistent with the word "shall", and also the word prend in French.

By the way, Mr. Speaker, regarding this extremely important Bill on mutual legal assistance in criminal matters, I would like to congratulate Hon. Members from both opposition Parties for their co-operation so that this Bill can be dealt with as soon as possible.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 1 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Centre (Mr. Cassidy). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 1 agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: The next question is on Motion No. 2 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 2 agreed to.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved that Bill C-58, as amended, be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: When shall the Bill be read the third time? By leave, now?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Hnatyshyn moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

He said: Mr. Speaker, before the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) rises and gives his fulsome support to this very progressive piece of legislation, I thought I might set the groundwork to allow him to understand the Bill fully so that he can convince his colleagues to support the Bill on third reading.

I want to join with the Parliamentary Secretary who made reference earlier on today with respect to the work of the legislative committee which studied the provisions of this Bill. There was excellent co-operation. The committee gave prompt attention to the Bill and dealt with it on a deliberate and reasonable basis. It is important for us to try to bring pieces of legislation forward in all stages of the process as best we can, have the differences fully examined and have the matters put to a vote. I do thank Members from all sides of the House for their co-operation.

At the outset of the Government's mandate, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) enunciated a goal of constructive internationalism. This principle recognizes that some problems being international in scope can only be adequately addressed through international co-operation. Law enforcement agencies have long recognized that major crimes, such as drug trafficking, the laundering of money obtained by crime, fraud, tax evasion and offences committed by terrorists and organized crime are often transnational in scope. Criminals seek to use international boundaries to cloak their activities, hide the proceeds of their crimes and escape detection. It is clear that nations must act together if this growing phenomenon is to be stopped because crime is no longer merely a local or national affair.

Hon. Members will recall that an important mutual legal assistance treaty was signed by the Prime Minister on March 18, 1985, at Québec City. Since then, a second treaty with the United Kingdom limited to drug offences was signed by the Prime Minister and Prime Minister Thatcher at Ottawa on June 22 of this year. A number of other treaties are presently under negotiation with Australia and European and Caribbean countries.

Our goal is to negotiate a network of treaties so that we may, in concert with our treaty partners, improve our ability to investigate and prosecute transnational crime. The Bill before us today sets out the legal framework necessary to implement Canada's obligations in the Canada-U.S. and the Canada-U.K. mutual legal assistance treaties and in any other treaties to which Canada may become party.

I refer Hon. Members to my remarks at second reading on this Bill when I laid out the principles of the Bill. I think there is a stranger knocking at the door, interrupting an otherwise brilliant speech.

THE ROYAL ASSENT

A message was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod as follows:

> Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Deputy to the Governor General desires the immediate attendance of this honourable House in the chamber of the honourable the Senate.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker with the House went up to the Senate Chamber.

and being returned:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I have the honour to inform the House that when the House went up to the Senate Chamber the Deputy Governor General was pleased to give, in Her Majesty's name, the Royal Assent to the following Bills:

Bill C-131 an Act to amend the National Transportation Act of 1987—Chapter 26, 1988;

Bill C-141, an Act to regulate the marketing of agricultural products in import, export and interprovincial trade and to provide for national standards and grades of agricultural products, for their inspection and grading, for the registration of establishments and for standards governing establishments—Chapter 27, 1988.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Hnatyshyn that Bill C-58, an Act to provide for the implementation of treaties for mutual legal assistance in criminal matters and to amend the Criminal Code, the Crown Liability Act and the Immigration Act, 1976, be read the third time and passed.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Madam Speaker, I know you are highly regarded in this House as a very excellent Speaker. You now have a new qualification as probably the fastest Speaker one has seen around here in a long time. You certainly got down there and back in very short order and I was unable to even finish my coffee while you were away.

I was referring to the Canada-U.K. mutual legal assistance treaty, but this legislation makes provision for other treaties which Canada may enter into with other countries.

Briefly, the mutual legal assistance as implemented by this Bill will be carried out by Canadian authorities making applications where necessary to Canadian courts according to recognized Canadian legal principles. The Bill provides authority to Canadian Superior Court judges to order four types of compulsory measures: search warrants; summonses to witnesses; orders to transfer temporarily persons in custody; and orders to lend exhibits. None of these types of assistance will be provided unless a treaty provides for the particular type of assistance, the request was made in compliance with the treaty, the assistance requested is not contrary to a Canadian public interest as determined by the Minister of Justice, and any conditions imposed by a Canadian judge have been accepted. In addition, there must be grounds sufficient to satisfy a Canadian judge that an offence has been committed in the requesting state to which a treaty applies, and that evidence of that offence or the whereabouts of an offender can be found in Canada. In the case of a search warrant, the Canadian court must also be satisfied that a less intrusive order, such as an evidence gathering order, would not suffice.

The same measures of assistance made available to a treaty partner will be available as a treaty obligation to Canadian authorities investigating offences committed in Canada where there is believed to be evidence abroad.

[Translation]

During consideration in committee, several amendments were made to the Bill. The purpose of these amendments is to increase the flexibility of our legislative framework, so that we can achieve our objectives and meet the requests of the countries with which negotiations have been initiated since the introduction of Bill C-58.

One of these amendments expands the meaning of the word "treaty" as defined in the first version of Clause 2, since the legislation allows the implementation of only those treaties whose primary purpose is to provide for mutual legal assistance.

The amendment, as approved by the committee, now recognizes that Canada may wish to be a party to other conventions such as the proposed United Nations convention on unlawful trafficking in narcotics and psychotropic substances, whose primary purpose is to fight drug trafficking which will probably contain important provisions on mutual legal assistance.

This amendment gives Canada the requisite flexibility for being a party to such a convention and implementing the major mutual assistance measures provided therein, but only if the convention includes the guarantees set forth in paragraph 2 of the Bill.

[English]

Another amendment was the addition of a new Section 41 providing for the safe conduct of persons who voluntarily come to Canada pursuant to a Canadian request, to assist a Canadian investigation or to testify in court. This safe conduct for a person not in custody would parallel the safe conduct provided in Section 41 of the Bill for persons in custody who come to Canada pursuant to a request for assistance. This provision will encourage persons whose assistance is requested to travel to Canada. The safe conduct is provided only for a limited time and applies only with regard to acts committed prior to arrival in Canada pursuant to the request. This assurance is a prior requirement for this kind of assistance from some European countries. It is found in the European Convention on Mutual Assistance and the Australian legislation.

These are the principle elements of amendments made to Bill C-58. In conjunction with Bill C-61 concerning proceeds of crime, which I hope to take up immediately after this Bill, Canada will be taking a major step forward in the international fight against drug trafficking and other serious crimes.

Simply put, this Bill allows us to carry out our international obligations with respect to the examination and investigation of transboundary international crime, and allows us to assist other western industrialized countries and others around the world with respect to dealing with organized crime and terrorism, and the locating of evidence to make sure there are successful prosecutions of these undesirable and untenable acts.

I think we are giving leadership in this area of international co-operation. As I indicated in my remarks, we are in the process of dealing with a number of countries to obtain similar treaties. When we consider, in the light of my responsibilities as Minister of Justice, the actions taken to amend the Criminal Code so as to allow us to better investigate and prosecute criminal activity, I think this is the type of legislation that should commend itself to all Members of Parliament.

I hope there will be support from all Parties for this legislation because it is based on fair principles, it is under Canadian control, and allows us to call upon our friends who have signed treaties with us to collect evidence in Canada at the same time we extend our good offices to assist them. This is good progressive legislation whose time has come and I ask Members to support it wholeheartedly.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Madam Speaker, I am standing in for the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson), our justice critic. I think all my friends and colleagues in this House know that he is one of the most hard working Members of this House and has taken a good deal of interest in this Bill. Unfortunately, he is unable to be here today and I have been asked to speak on his behalf.

I sought to speak a few minutes earlier and, probably because my head was turned, two amendments were accepted by the Government which will presumably go down in the history books as standing in my name. That is something that has rarely occurred in my many years in Opposition, both in Queen's Park and here. I am, of course, seeking the privilege of being able to move amendments and have them carried as a matter of course. I trust that will occur very shortly once we become the Government.

I do not intend to be that controversial in my remarks. I simply want to talk about the reservations which we expressed when Bill C-58 came before the House for second reading which, unfortunately, have not been responded to by the Government during the course of committee stage or today. In other words, although we appreciate the modest improvement in the Bill which has occurred as a consequence of the two amendments which have just been accepted, we still have grave reservations about the Bill.

The Hon. Member said that this is because of the need for mutual legal assistance, particularly in such areas as the prosecution of drug traffickers and with respect to other serious crimes. To the extent that that is the purpose of what has taken place, I do not think there is any particular objection. In fact, most people would endorse that particular provision, particularly given the fact that along with the globalization of finance, commerce, and tourism, et cetera, has come the globalization of crime. Perhaps the easiest place for that to occur is where there is a lengthy common boundary as occurs between Canada and the United States with a good deal of traffic back and forth in many areas between the two countries.

What concerns us in this particular case is the fact that there are a number of areas in the legal systems of the two countries in which there are significant irritants, as the word is used in international Parliaments.

The United States, as the larger country, has a rather less coherent legal administrative system. It, as well, takes a different view of freedom of speech with regard to people who take progressive opinions in different areas. There are really some significant irritants which we believe should have been sorted out prior to legislating to bring this treaty agreement into force.

My friend, the Member for Burnaby, mentioned as an example Farley Mowat who produced a wonderful book based on his experiences when he was bumped off an airplane bound for Los Angeles in 1985. Farley Mowat is a distinguished, famous, and popular author, not only in this country but around the world, including the United States. As the Member for Burnaby pointed out, Farley Mowat's offence was to suggest that he was going to shoot down American aircraft a few years ago using a shotgun somewhere in Newfoundland and hoping the planes would fly over him and within range. He was, of course, speaking in jest. One would question whether Farley Mowat would have been able to shoot in a vertical rather than horizontal direction.

The point is that the Americans lacked both the sense of humour and the administrative system, first, to recognize that this should not have been subject to an offence. Second, if it was noted in their intelligence files it should not have stayed as a black mark on the books of a Canadian citizen forever. Third, there should be some means by which this type of thing could be wiped off the books. Fourth, the degree to which the Americans seem to exercise their sovereign right to exclude people from their country is ridiculous. They are exercising this right against distinguished Canadians whom, there seems to be no conceivable reason to exclude from going into the United States, just as Canada would see no conceivable reason for excluding from Canada Americans of similar stature and similar distinction.

A friend of mine from Toronto, Professor Don Wilmott, a distinguished academic teaching at York University, has also suffered under the McCarran Act provisions which were brought in at the height of the red scare in the United States in the 1950s, which provisions have stayed on the books. It seems to me that a Canadian Government which was negotiating at the highest level for mutual legal assistance should have been entitled, while negotiating this agreement for which there is obviously a need, to ask to get away from the kind of legal irritant which is barring Canadians citizens from reasonable access to the United States.

We are not talking about the relationship between Canada and Pago Pago, Uruguay, or some other distant country from which there is a small volume of annual traffic. There are tens of millions of visits between Canada and the United States by citizens of the two countries on an annual basis. Probably one-quarter of the population of Canada seeks to visit the United States at some point during the course of a year because we are good neighbours and good friends in many ways.

However, there are too many cases where Canadians have been blocked because they attended a conference which was deemed to be left wing, because as students they went to a peace conference sponsored by a Soviet-sponsored peace body, or because they associated with a group in Canada which was legitimate under Canadian law and had the right to free association in Canada but which the Americans considered for some reason to be subversive and not acceptable in their country.

This is the kind of thing which should not occur between two mature nations which seek to be friendly with each other in a reasonable and normal way. Since Canada does not reject people on these grounds, one has to assume that it is the United States which is immature in this particular case.

I am glad to know that Congress now has before it legislation which would repeal these offensive provisions of the McCarran Act. However, a person whose name has been put into a computer by American immigration because of the McCarran Act has to go through incredible amounts of red tape. I have approached the American Embassy here in Ottawa on behalf of constituents on this particular matter. I was subjected to bureaucratic bafflegab and stonewalling beyond belief. The Americans essentially say, "Oh, you know what Congress is like, we can't do anything about it. We're awfully sorry, we're terribly sympathetic, we can't help you, goodbye". I do not think that is good enough. The Government of Canada should have exercised the leverage it had in order to do away with an irritant which affects thousands of our citizens who would potentially go into the United States, which is quite unreasonable.

I know the problem is that the Government is uncritical with regard to actions and policies of the United States Government. That may be the reason it decided not to do anything in this particular area. We heard the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Crosbie) say the other day, with regard to the tragic loss of life when an Iranian plane was shot down by an American missile, that as far as the Government was concerned it saw no reason to question the American account of the incident. Therefore, initially, the Government was not prepared to support requests which we and many other people, including the Iranians quite properly, were making for an impartial investigation into what took place there.

That same kind of credulity and perhaps naïvety seems to exist with respect to the trade agreement. I will not go too far in that direction or you might call me back to order. The point I want to make is that while we are good friends, good neighbours, and extraordinarily important trading partners with the United States, and vice versa, at the same time Canadians too have interests with respect to the United States. We should be using every opportunity to promote those interests and ensure they are rolled over by American authorities. We also know that the Americans are too prone to do that.

The Corps of Engineers wants to open the taps and drain water from the Great Lakes. As far as they are concerned, it is a matter that could be approved by the Pentagon with no problem and Canadians should not be so presumptuous as to suggest that since we are affected by a lower water level of the Great Lakes, decisions on the Great Lakes should be made jointly rather than unilaterally.

I would also speak passionately about another unresolved matter. It is the failure of the Canadian Government to use every means possible to seek justice from the United States over the Canadian victims of brainwashing in Montreal which was sponsored and financed by the Central Intelligence Agency. That too is a legal question involving a mutual legal affair. In this case acts in Canada—

Mr. Friesen: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think the Member would want to be a little more accurate. The victims in Montreal were in fact victims but, as I understand, not victims of brainwashing but as a result of the use of drugs that are found to be harmful. I think it is in error to say that it was brainwashing. It was medical treatment that was untried and should never have been used. They are victims, but I wish the Hon. Member would be accurate about that.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I would only suggest to the Hon. Member to heed his own advice and let us perhaps stay closer to the subject at hand so that we may be able to keep on with the debate.

Mr. Cassidy: Madam Speaker, I think the Hon. Member would agree that these were victims of experiments which were financed by the CIA and certainly related to brainwashing although they may or may not have involved the use of brainwashing.

The reason I raise these questions is that our country is being given authority, according to the Bill, to enter into pacts for mutual legal assistance with many other countries in the world. There is no assurance that where there are irritants or outstanding legal questions with those countries, we will undertake to sort out those questions at a point when we have leverage. It is in the mutual interest of both countries to have a treaty for mutual legal assistance.

The Bar Association was not happy about the rather broad powers granted under this Bill. We believe that the problems with the Bill are sufficiently serious to justify our view not to support it as it stands at third reading.

The Government is prepared to give more legal recourse to foreign jurisdictions than Canadians give to ourselves. For example, in Canada, a person cannot be compelled to give evidence, but under this legislation any person can be forced to give evidence as a result of the invoking of the procedures in this treaty. If the requesting country, under a mutual treaty, provides that a witness is not required to give evidence when self incrimination might be involved, Canadian authorities cannot insist and the witness cannot be compelled to give evidence.

While my knowledge of the law fails me somewhat here, in the case of a country which may not have such a respect for the rule of law as we do here, and there may be no legal restriction on witnesses being compelled to give evidence, it could be that rather than Canadian standards of justice, the standards of testimony of a country about whose social and legal system we have grave misgivings would be brought to bear on the witness who is here in Canada.

I recognize that drug trafficking and other serious crimes are a great problem. However, the Bar Association itself gave a great deal of thought to its presentation and raised concerns about evidence gathering. Mr. Victor Paisley, Chairman of the Bar Association, said this in the Bar's submission:

> ... these provisions are at variance with Canadian criminal law. Interference by a state with the lives of its citizens or those under the protection of its laws ought to be kept to a minimum. The measures proposed under clause 18 seem to us to risk authorizing mere fishing expeditions.

He went on to say:

> Compulsory examination on oath of individuals as an aid to criminal investigation is a substantial departure from Canadian traditions of fair play.

He cited the Court of Star Chamber in England, saying that it was a brief episode in British legal history under common law. He went on to say:

> While some nations may still feel comfortable with inquisitorial procedures, we do not believe Canadians should be denied their traditional rights simply because a foreign state wishes to be accommodated.
> In our view, no case has been made for an additional broad power to compel suspects or other persons to answer questions beyond the present provisions of Canadian criminal law. The right of an accused person not to be required to incriminate himself—the right to remain silent—is a fundamental part of our legal tradition.

This Bill does not supersede the Charter. It does supersede all other Canadian laws with respect to the requirement of evidence and other matters involved in the Bill. Therefore, the point raised by the Bar is valid and serious.

Whether or not the Bill would stand up to the Charter is something that I suppose would be tested in the courts at some point. Regardless of the outcome of such a decision, do we in the House wish to proceed with a Bill that would appear to be greatly at variance with the Canadian legal tradition of the right not to incriminate oneself? That is a fundamental part of Canadian legal tradition, as the Bar has stated. The Bill in its present form strays from that fundamental legal tradition. The Bill does not exclude the use of hearsay or opinion in evidence as invalid. I will leave it to knowledgeable legal persons to expand on that issue, but that too is at variance with our existing practice.

The investigatory powers provided for in the Bill are very broad and subject to mischief and abuse. The concern is that a foreign government would be able to invoke the provisions of the treaty in order to investigate a criminal matter.

Present outstanding treaties exist with the United States and Great Britain. Despite President Reagan and Mrs. Thatcher, we enjoy a good deal of common cause with those countries and we tend to trust their legal systems.

What about treaties with Governments in Africa or Latin America? We are concerned that a Government from Chile, El Salvador or Guatemala could use the powers under this treaty in order to harass people or make charges for offences that would not be considered offences in the normal way by Canadians.

This Bill represents something of an open door policy. It is skeleton legislation under which 100 treaties could be signed, with no further recourse to Parliament except for the possibility of questions in the House or occasional questions to the Minister during the Estimates.

There is also a concern about confidential information provided by the Canadian authorities. It should be clarified whether all of the protections guaranteed by the Privacy Act apply in this legislation. This concern was raised at second reading and it is important to raise it again.

The Bar Association also raised the question that in some foreign states they may be prepared to consider as domestic offences, offences that were committed outside of their territory, something which is not inherent in Canadian law. That, too, could raise a situation of harassment or of unreasonable intrusion on people living in Canada or on people who would become Canadians.

I have to say that I am concerned that, in the case where you have a dictatorial government in a foreign country which seeks to extend these powers into Canada, the protections which are given to the person who is the subject of investigation in Canada are significantly less than, for example, those that exist in the extradition treaties which Canada has signed with some 40 or 50 countries around the world.

Some of those countries have Governments which are perhaps not wholly democratic in the sense that we understand it here in Canada. Nonetheless, it is appropriate that there should be an extradition treaty with those countries if there is a significant risk that there may be criminals who are accused of an offence and who are suspected of being harboured in the other country. Canada has a reverse interest in terms of being able to pull people back from those countries as well. We have a case under way currently with respect to a person suspected of being involved in the explosion aboard the CP Air jet in Tokyo three years ago.

The extradition treaty provides for a court process before the suspected or the accused person can be extradited. The standards under which these provisions are being put forward would appear to be somewhat less in terms of the gathering of evidence, investigations and other forms of mutual legal assistance.

The final point I want to make is the following. The Government has agreed that the Schedule to the Act will contain the names of states which are signatories to the treaties. If we had had the opportunity, we would have liked to have moved as well for some means of public disclosure around the power of the Government to enter into informal or temporary agreements for mutual legal assistance for periods of up to six months. This can be done either for areas not specified in the treaty—if a treaty exists—or with a country that has not signed the treaty.

Again, there is the possibility of being able to agree to the request from, let us say, a country in Central America, where there are rather undemocratic regimes, for mutual legal assistance because they feel that there are persons in this country whom they are pursuing because of some political problems in their own country. And the idea that that could be done for six months and possibly renewed thereafter—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: It is not possible.

Mr. Cassidy: —without any public disclosure under Section 6—the Minister says that it is not possible, but I am sure that that is the case. That is a very legitimate question which raises concerns with us.

According to the note that was prepared for the House of Commons in June by the Parliamentary Research Bureau, "the administrative arrangements that would be allowed under Section 6 could be negotiated and executed in total secrecy". I do not believe that that has changed.

Those are some of the concerns that we have and those are the reasons why we are not prepared to support the Bill. As indicated previously, we will agree to let the Bill go to third reading on division rather than calling a vote.

I would like the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) or one of his colleagues to stand up and say, at the very least, that Canada had now determined that we are going to take an active role in negotiating those restrictions on Canadians under the McCarran Act, and in reaching for a resolution for the victims of the CIA experiments and that that would be one of the things that the Government would guarantee as part of the package for mutual legal assistance with the United States.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

[Translation]

Mr. Hnatyshyn moved that Bill C-58, an Act to provide for the implementation of treaties for mutual legal assistance in criminal matters and to amend the Criminal Code, the Crown Liability Act and the Immigration Act, 1976, be read the third time and do pass.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion agreed to on division and Bill read the third time and passed.

CRIMINAL CODE, FOOD AND DRUGS ACT AND NARCOTIC CONTROL ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-61, an Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Food and Drugs Act and the Narcotic Control Act, as reported (with amendments) from the legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): There are 14 motions and amendments on the Order Paper for report stage of Bill C-61, an Act to amend the Criminal Code, the Food and Drugs Act and the Narcotic Control act.

[Translation]

Motions Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 12, 13 and 14, standing in the names of the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson), the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) and the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mrs. Dewar) are the same as the amendments which were moved, debated and negatived in committee. Therefore, in accordance with Standing order 114(10), they will not be selected for debate in the House.

[English]

Motion No. 5 of the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) is similar to an amendment moved at the committee stage, debated and later negatived. Although similar, this motion is sufficiently different that it shall be put to the House.

Motion No. 10, standing in the name of the Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada (Mr. Hnatyshyn), will be debated and voted on separately.

[English]

Mr. Cassidy: Madam Speaker, it was agreed that in the absence of the Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) the motion could be moved by the Member for Hamilton Mountain (Ms. Dewar).

Mr. Grisé: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Parliamentary Secretary to the Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council (Mr. Grisé), on a point of order.

Mr. Grisé: Madam Speaker, after discussion among the various parties, I believe you will find there is unanimous consent for the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain to move the motion in the name of the Hon. Member for Burnaby.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Ms. Marion Dewar (for Mr. Robinson) moved:

That Bill C-61 be amended in Clause 2 by striking out lines 36 and 37 and substituting the following therefor:

"judge shall require notice to be given to and shall upon request hear any persons who, in the".

She said: Madam Speaker, the purpose in asking for this amendment is that if a person has an interest in the property it should be not only a request but a demand that they be heard. That is all we are asking for. I certainly hope that the Government will agree to the amendment.

The other amendments which have been ruled out of order were ruled out of order because they were debated at committee. However, this one, as you have seen, Madam Speaker, and as you agree, is different enough that it would certainly make the Bill much more fair. The judge would have to hear anybody who has an interest in the property. I see the Minister nodding. I hope that the Government will agree to the amendment.

The amendments which were not allowed included references to bawdy houses and prostitution. Prostitution in this country is not illegal. If this type of recommendation were included, and the Fraser Committee report was very clear on what it would do, prostitutes would be put in the same category as victims of organized crime. If their property, which was acquired not as a result of organized crime but legally, is seized and they have not been heard, it seems important that they should be heard before there is an order put in on it.

I must admit that I am certainly not as familiar with the Bill as the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) who worked on it at committee. I apologize for that. But the measure made all sorts of sense to me and I believe that this is the type of amendment that helps to make the Bill more fair.

I will speak to the Bill as a whole after report stage is dealt with.

[Translation]

Mr. Richard Grisé (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Parliamentary Secretary, on a point of order.

Mr. Grisé: Thank you Madam Speaker. The Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Mrs. Dewar) is speaking to Motion No. 3, which the Chair has already ruled out of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I will try to clarify the issue for the Parliamentary Secretary. It is true that in the case of Motion No. 5, the Chair's decision acknowledges there is a similarity with another amendment. However, the Chair found that there was nevertheless sufficient difference to allow Motion No. 5 to be moved again in the House.

The Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn).

[English]

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Madam Speaker, I just want to spend a couple of minutes trying to deal with the motion which has been accepted by the Chair moved by the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Ms. Dewar) on behalf of the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson).

This appears to be something which, if one were to use the logic that is put forward by the Hon. Member that it is something that is desirable, would mandate a court to take certain action, that is to say, hear people who claim to have an interest in property which is subject to deliberations before the court. However, one can understand, in terms of our judicial process, that these are questions, after all, that should be left to the courts to decide.

First, does the claimant have a sufficient prima facie basis upon which to have a hearing? Second, once that has been established, the court should have the discretion to determine the basis upon which the person claiming interest can be heard. It is up to the court, in the final analysis, to determine the merits of these cases.

If we were to put a mandatory provision such as has been suggested by the Hon. Member there would be absolutely no discretion. Anyone could walk in off the streets and say: "I have an interest in this matter" and would be able to take up the time of the court simply as a matter of right.

You point out in your ruling, Madam Speaker, that a similar matter was discussed in the course of the committee. In effect, it was voted down. But since there is some difference in the wording put forward by the Hon. Member today and because it is sufficiently different we are considering it.

We still think that this Bill in its present form, with the exception of an amendment that I want to put forward myself at report stage, achieves a reasonable balance in the interests of the state to pursue, to seize, to freeze and, in effect, to forfeit the proceeds of illicit activity. The whole function of the Bill is to allow us to overcome a situation which, on the face of it, to any Canadian looking at the present situation is absurd.

What we now have is a situation in which a person could be convicted of illegal drug trafficking, could have made an enormous amount of money out of this activity, could be convicted of the offence, served time in jail, came out and enjoyed the proceeds of the crime in circumstances in which the state has no right to attach the proceeds of that illicit activity and use the money for worth-while purposes such as public health, education and other important governmental objectives.

What happens is that we also in the same vein want to allow people who have a legitimate claim to come forward and make application to the court to establish that the moneys that are attempted to be seized by the provincial Attorney General are in fact property which should not be seized because it belongs to them. In our system, of course, there is an obligation to establish not beyond a reasonable doubt but on the basis of reasonable probabilities that there is a case for that person to make. It is always left in these circumstances for the court to hear the application. The discretion is there in the court to hear the application, by all means, but then if it is satisfied that there is a sufficient basis it will give an order.

I do not know whether there is anything accomplished by mandating every claimant, regardless of the merits of the case, to have their day in court to put forward this situation. I think that this balance is one which is understandable. It is consistent with the processes that we have in our Canadian judicial system. It allows an opportunity, a counterbalance, for legitimate third party interests to come forward and to apply to the court to have their cases heard.

I cannot say anything further. I will talk on third reading about this Bill which is, I think, a very good Bill which moves us forward in terms of fairness in the criminal justice system to allow the state to pursue and to discourage people who make large amounts of money out of illicit activity. I gave the example of drug trafficking.

This Bill is a good Bill. I wish I could be more accommodating to the Hon. Member with respect to her amendment. I think, on balance and reflection, she might agree with me that it might lead to unusual and unacceptable consequences for our judicial system. With the greatest of respect for the Hon. Member, I would like to indicate that we are not prepared to agree at this point in time.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Motion No. 10.

That Bill C-61 be amended in Clause 2 in the French version by striking out lines 2 and 3 at page 14 and substituting the following therefor:

«contrevenant à qui une amende est infligée en vertu du paragra-».

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion? Debate. The Parliamentary Secretary.

Mr. Richard Grisé (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker . . .

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Grisé: I am sure my comments will be much shorter than the applause I just received, since this amendment, proposed by the Government, is merely aimed at bringing the term "amende" in the French version in line with the word "fine" in the English text in Clause 2, lines 2 and 3, at page 14.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): When shall the Bill be read the third time? By leave, now?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

He said: It gives me great pleasure to rise once again to speak to Bill C-61 which has been recognized as fundamental to law enforcement efforts against enterprise crime, especially drug trafficking. It is now recognized that it is long overdue. The Bill is designed to ensure that offenders are not allowed to profit from their crimes. Bill C-61 will provide effective but fair measures to ensure that crime does not pay.

At this time, I would like to commend the legislative committee that reviewed Bill C-61 and has now presented its report to the House. It is obvious that all members of the committee recognized the pressing need for this legislation, given the growth of enterprise crime in recent times. They have obviously carefully considered both the need for the new measures in the Bill and the safeguards contained therein which ensure that the interests of the accused person and the innocent third parties are protected.

Regarding the principles of the Bill, I refer Members to my remarks during second reading. Allow me to review briefly some of the major aspects of the legislation. The courts have been empowered to authorize seizure and restraint of assets upon the undertaking of the Attorney General to provide such compensation as the court deems appropriate where the case for forfeiture cannot be made out and losses to the owner or third parties are suffered. A process of immediate judicial review of these powers, upon application by the persons concerned, has been provided for and includes an opportunity for an accused person to claim the payments of reasonable living, business, and legal expenses out of the seized or restrained property.

I must point out that these types of safeguards are unprecedented in Canadian law. In addition, the rights of third parties are recognized throughout the entire process of seizure, restraint, and forfeiture. The legislation has balanced an effective forfeiture mechanism with the constitutionally protected right to counsel in a manner that is characteristic of the Government's approach to criminal matters and avoids the criticisms that have been levied at similar American legislation in this area.

The Bill also provides that a court may order the payment of a fine when forfeiture is impossible either because the offender has hidden his illicit gains or has removed them from the jurisdiction of Canadian courts.

Aside from the power to order the forfeiture of property on conviction, when the prosecution has established beyond a reasonable doubt, following a hearing, that the property in question is proceeds of crime, the Bill provides that the court may order forfeiture of the goods when the offender has died or absconded to another country.

Madam Speaker, in this regard the legislative committee has passed an amendment allowing this procedure to be applied if the offender has fled to a country that refuses to extradite him to Canada where he would stand trial in criminal court.

I think that this is a useful amendment that complies with the spirit of the act.

[English]

In recognition of the sophisticated attempts that are made to disguise the tainted sources of proceeds of crime and to invest them in so-called "legitimate" enterprises and other forms of property, the Bill creates a new offence of "laundering" that will be punishable by up to 10 years imprisonment.

In recognition of the need for assistance to law enforcement agencies in their efforts against organized and enterprise crime, the Bill has created a protection against liability for any person, such as a bank employee, who reports to the authorities activity related to proceeds of crime on condition that the belief is reasonably held. Also, a provision for access to income tax records to assist in the investigation of drug related offences has been proposed. This will only be available upon court authorization to ensure that confidentiality of these records will be protected as much as possible. All members of the committee recognized the need for special rules regarding income tax information.

These are the principal elements of Bill C-61. In conjunction with Bill C-58—which has just received third reading—concerning mutual legal assistance in criminal matters, Canada will be fulfilling her international commitment to combat organized crime, especially in the area of drug trafficking.

In this regard I find it most appropriate that at this very time officials of my Department, as well as of the Departments of National Health and Welfare, External Affairs, and the Ministry of the Solicitor General, are in Vienna, Austria, with other officials from all countries of the United Nations finalizing the Draft Convention Against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances which is expected to be concluded this fall. That document specifically calls for an undertaking on behalf of signatories to implement proceeds of crime legislation.

Bill C-61 represents, together with Bill C-58, Canada's commitment to the international fight against drug trafficking. I ask that Canada be allowed to join the ranks of such nations as the United Kingdom, Australia and the United States that have all recently passed similar legislation.

Let me point out once again that this Bill has finally proceeded to third reading. I trust it will be accepted by the other place and made the law of the land. Similar attempts have been made by previous Governments to bring in legislation in connection with forfeiture of illicit proceeds of crime. This Bill is the synthesis of much consultation by Members of Parliament, in particular the Hon. Member for Etobicoke—Lakeshore (Mr. Boyer) and others who have been of great assistance to me with the legislation.

This Bill is a balanced and fair piece of legislation which does not contain some of the excesses seen in previous legislation. It is one in which the rights of parties are fully respected. There is an an effective mechanism for getting at the illicit proceeds of crime. It does not expand itself to the extent that it is done in the United States. I think this is the Canadian way. We want to make sure, when we are attacking the proceeds of crime, that we do so in a fair way respecting the rights of individuals to ownership of property legitimately obtained.

I commend this legislation at third reading. I hope it will receive the unanimous consent of all Parties. I thank Hon. Members who have been so helpful in their deliberations, especially the Parliamentary Secretary, the Hon. Member for Chambly (Mr. Grisé), who has been in the forefront of the legislative committee's work on Bill C-58 and to whom I owe a great debt of gratitude. He is an outstanding parliamentarian, a man who commands respect of Members on both sides of the House and who does a lot of work for me. I appreciate the great assistance that he gives.

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Madam Speaker, I only wish this Bill contained all the great attributes to which the Hon. Minister has alluded. But we are very disappointed on this side of the House. It could have been a much better Bill.

First, I think this kind of legislation is long overdue in Canada. It is something that we must see implemented. I want to commend the Minister and the Parliamentary Secretary for the amendment which they accepted in recognizing that if a person were found innocent the Government would be required to see that he or she was compensated for loss. That is very important. I also commend the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) for putting the amendment forward.

I am disappointed with some of the inclusions. I refer particularly to procurement and bawdy houses. It has been very clear in studies done in this country over the last decade—the latest one being the Fraser Commission Report—is that no direct connections have been made between organized crime and prostitution. We recognize that prostitution is not legal in Canada. But it has not be tied to organized crime. Some prostitutes have been seen to be operating very much in an entrepreneurial sense. The money they have acquired has been money which they have invested and used to look after families and this kind of thing. The Fraser Commission was very clear that if something specific were put in this legislation it would drive prostitutes into organized crime networks and connections. That is something about which we are very concerned. Evidence was brought forward in the committee and it was addressed at that time.

I am very disappointed that the Conservative Government did the royal cave-in to the banks. You can drive a truck full of money to a bank and unload it with no accountability as to where those proceeds came from. Even the administration in the United States that we on this side of the House have often criticized made U.S. banks accountable. It is a shame and a disgrace that the Government has not made the banks accountable for this kind of thing. Many things will be whitewashed if you cannot trace them through the financial institutions.

The Minister has not rushed with this Bill. We had first reading of the Bill in 1987. Here we are at the last minute in an extended session trying to pass the Bill. The Minister has had plenty of time to recognize that the banks should be held accountable.

In 1981 the Government asked that a study be done. The report to the Justice Department in 1983 said:

> —Without clear track and identify the movement of profits by sophisticated criminals, it will be hard for police and the courts to effectively use the—"freeze and seize" provisions.
> Without clear powers to identify and track the proceeds of crime, it is difficult to connect the proceeds to a particular offence or to a particular criminal.
> Given this obstacle, it follows that it would be equally difficult to apply provisions for freezing, seizure and forfeiture of criminal proceeds.

It will be very difficult to implement the objectives of the Bill before us. The senior counsel at the Bank of Nova Scotia said:

> We're efficient at what we do. As such we're a good target of money launderers.

The bank is admitting to laundering, yet the Government has chosen to do nothing about it and has not made the banks accountable. My understanding is that the banks objected to the large amount of paper work. If that is the kind of thing that we are accepting as a legitimate excuse to not make the banks accountable, we should be ashamed of ourselves.

For the record, Madam Speaker, I would like to quote Mr. Rocky Pollack of the Canadian Bar Association. The Bar Association was very concerned. Mr. Pollack said:

> I must say that everyone to whom I spoke, and it is not a representative population, was amazed that, as was reported I think in the paper last week, you can literally back up a truck to a Canadian bank, unload all those dollar bills in the back of the truck, and get a deposit slip, and so on, and it is all private and secret; nobody knows about it. That is rather amazing. That is my only comment.

We had the Hon. Member for Kitchener (Mr. Reimer) saying that he too felt strongly that the Bill had major loopholes and he wished the Government would amend it. When we get those kinds of comments from government Members, surely we must recognize that the Government has done a royal cave-in to the banks. Under no circumstances must the Government ask the banks to be accountable.

That is not the kind of thing New Democrats like to see in legislation. New Democrats believe that all Canadians should be accountable. We think it is very nice to draft legislation, but we will be unable to implement the intent of it because of grand loopholes like those found in tax reform.

The intent of the Bill is good. The goals and objectives are real. They are the kinds of things we like to see. We feel that the Bill is very inadequate when we cannot make the financial institutions accountable to the Government of Canada. We know that nothing different will happen. We know that the banks will still be the source through which people can launder money and remain attractive to criminals. I take exception to the Minister's comments that this is the Canadian way. The Canadian way is much more accountable and not becoming the protectors of people who want to launder money.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S BUSINESS—BILLS

FOOD AND DRUGS ACT

The House resumed from Thursday, June 9, consideration of the motion of the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) that Bill C-289, an Act to amend the Food and Drugs Act (list of ingredients), be read a second time and referred to a legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): When the House last considered Bill C-289, the Hon. Member for Scarborough East (Mr. Stackhouse) had the floor. Resuming debate. The Hon. Member for Kent (Mr. Hardey).

[English]

Mr. Elliott Hardey (Kent): Madam Speaker, I rise today to speak on this Private Member's Bill, Bill C-289, which is intended to amend the Food and Drugs Act regarding the listing of ingredients. The most important aspect of Private Members' Business, of course, is the opportunity for Members of Parliament from all Parties to develop and promote new laws and ideas together or, if some choose, to speak and vote against them and to do so as individual Members regardless of what side of the House they sit on. It is certainly a refreshing exercise and one that we all look forward to participating in.

I want to compliment the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) for bringing forward this issue. It is a matter that I support. It is an issue of sensitivity which is receiving increased attention by health professionals and food regulators due to concerns raised by the public at large as well as the print and visual media.

I have noticed that previous speakers have referred to tragedies resulting from food sensitivity reactions in their ridings or in ridings nearby. I too witnessed the grief of a family who lost their nine-year-old daughter last October. Kelly Chinnick was allergic to nuts and she was unaware that peanut butter was in the icing of a cake she tasted at a Thanksgiving celebration at her school. The reaction was fast and no one could help her. I know first hand that this type of grief never really subsides. As a caring society, we must do everything we can to help the Chinnicks and other families who find themselves in such distress.

In order to be of assistance, at first it seemed that I simply had to research and assess this problem in a practical way and surely some answers would surface. As I began that research, I found that the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) was not only aware of the increased prevalence of food allergy reactions but was also very concerned. He had already issued instructions to his Department to determine how much real increase in food-sensitivity reactions there had been, how much was perceived due to the availability of better instrumentation and diagnoses and how much was due to the population as a whole becoming more sensitive for one reason or another.

I found as well that the Standing Committee on Health and Welfare was already conducting a study on the feasibility of mandatory labelling of food products sold in restaurants and fast-food outlets. Non-medical components used as fill found in prescription drugs, both brand name and generic, were also under study, and representatives from the Canadian Restaurant Association and the Canadian Pharmaceutical Association as well as the Minister of National Health and Welfare were called as witnesses.

I also found that difficulties in assessing the problem also included documenting the specific incidents, determining if the adverse response was related to the consumption of foods in the first instance, and if so, to which food component. Health professionals have to play a detective game, the complexity of which would put any amateur sleuth to shame. They have to consider such things as age, sex, geographic location, racial origin, income levels, lifestyle, diseased state and much more to even properly assess the question. Of course, the question is, what is the rationale for labelling and what needs to be labelled.

The Government is seriously trying to wrestle with these problems in the face of pressure from individuals or groups proposing any number of quick solutions. The Government does not want to end up with an arbitrary system of disclosure that is patently and scientifically unsound. It is likely that a large proportion of food-sensitivity reactions are due to relatively few foods or food components. On the other hand, this is offset by the potential of almost any food to elicit a food-sensitivity response in an occasional individual.

The Government is thus looking for a system that will require disclosure of selective and known offending substances in order to discourage misinterpretation of information or proliferation of misinformation leading to unnecessary self-diagnosis or diagnosis by unqualified non-medical practitioners. This is a typical problem and it is essential that the consumer be informed in a way that is meaningful to all concerned.

In resolving a problem of this complexity, it is vital to solicit input from all affected parties. In fact, this is the approach being taken by the Health Protection Branch of Health and Welfare Canada, and to date, Health and Welfare officials together with our colleagues at Consumer and Corporate Affairs have had consultations with the Canadian Restaurant and Food Services Association and the Allergy Information Association.

Consensus has been reached that a chart identifying the foods served in an establishment and whether or not they contain the allergens on the priority list was the most suitable mechanism for providing information required by a sensitive consumer. In this context, the Health Protection Branch of Health and Welfare Canada will also seek advice and input from the medical community on the proposed priority list of allergens.

Yes, it is a complex issue and many heads are at work to help allergy victims so that we can do what must be done as well as create something which is enforceable. The Canadian Restaurant and Food Services Association is currently testing the use of a food chart in some of the larger food chains and restaurants. It has accepted that it has a responsibility to protect to the best of its ability the customers who are at risk to allergy, and I believe that this will prove to be workable. As well, it is very welcome news. I compliment the restaurant association for this generous and caring thrust.

I also wonder, however, if we are going quite far enough. That is why I support this Bill which, if passed to committee, will initiate further study.

We have technology to call on and I want to suggest that we use that technology to simplify the listing process in another area, the major chain fast-food outlets which could be required to computer list all the ingredients of foods offered.

Fast-food outlets are very popular and usually offer a very limited number of dishes. The main problem here is the practice of subcontracting of ingredients, either precooked or uncooked. By making use of a computer, ingredient lists could be compiled and also automatically added to or subtracted from when subcontracts of certain ingredients change. All outlets would have access to accurate information with a simple push of a button. Secret recipes involved would not be jeopardized as the ingredients would be lumped together for each packaged item, and I think suppliers would likely not hesitate to co-operate.

The thrust I have just described added to the charting method for restaurants now being tested would allow a tremendous breakthrough in the restricted lives that allergy victims find themselves living. That is what I want. I want to help severe food-allergy victims enjoy a fuller life without jeopardizing their safety.

Let me assure all Hon. Members that people who have this extreme sensitivity to certain foods do not want to shirk their own responsibilities to look after themselves and their loved ones. They know full well that preparing all meals and snacks themselves is certainly one way to guard against tragedy, but lifestyles continue to change. Everyone eats outside the home well over 50 per cent of the time and the trend toward restaurant and fast-food outlet consumption continues.

Surely all Canadians have the right to enjoy the same lifestyles in this wonderful country and not to be subjected to the frustrations of being denied the knowledge of what is in the food prepared for them in public outlets. We are not talking about convenience, we are talking about life and death when it comes to victims of severe allergies.

The Hon. Member who brought this Bill forward has admitted that it is not perfect and I will not dwell on that, but its intent is sound. It should be supported by this House and moved into committee for further study so that amendments can be developed. I believe the need to assist severe allergy victims in Canada is well established and we are capable of developing forcible solutions to address that need which consumers in general will accept.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Madam Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to say a few words on Bill C-289, to amend the Food and Drugs Act, presented by the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps). It gives us an opportunity to increase the awareness of Canadians about ingredients of food which could be harmful to them or members of their family.

I want to say at the outset that I do not intend to speak at any great length on this Bill. Just by presenting the Bill the Hon. Member has raised awareness around some general problems in the food industry which have been responded to very positively by the industry, particularly through the appearance of the Canadian Restaurant and Food Services Association before the Standing Committee on National Health and Welfare on several occasions. They were quite frank in recognizing that a problem exists and they desire to do something about it.

The Hon. Member also recognizes that her Bill will create some problems, particularly for small restaurant operators. Yet there is absolutely no doubt that the Canadian public wants to see some action along the lines proposed by the Hon. Member. Indeed, the Hon. Member who just finished speaking referred to the sentiments expressed by his own constituents and others.

I understand as well that a number of municipal Governments and organizations, such as the Consumers' Association of Canada, the Canadian Council on Children and Youth, the Canadian Association of Retired Persons, and a number of others, have written to the Hon. Member for Hamilton East to express their support for the measures proposed in her Bill.

I think the House and Canadians would be well served by having this Bill referred to committee as quickly as possible. There we can discuss any weaknesses in the Bill and perhaps amend it to cover the concerns expressed before the committee by the Canadian Restaurant and Food Services Association. Hopefully we can come out with some legislative proposals that would serve the Canadian public and at the same time protect the industry and satisfy the problem that exists with respect to ingredients placed in foods which in several cases recently have caused the death of some young Canadians.

We in this Party, without further debate, support this Bill being referred to committee in order to have those things taken into consideration.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel R. Tremblay (Québec-Est): Madam Speaker, I will be speaking on Bill C-289, an Act to amend the Food and Drugs Act, as tabled by the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps).

Bill C-289 addresses the problems of persons who, in a restaurant, unknowingly ingest food containing ingredients to which they are allergic. The Bill tabled in the House would compel each restaurant to make available for public consultation a list, in English or in French, of all the ingredients in any food sold by it.

The Bill would also compel each branch restaurant to afix on the packaging of any packaged foods sold by it a list, in English and in French, of the ingredients in such food.

The problem which Bill C-289 was introduced to solve is really quite acute in Canada. There are many persons who suffer from allergic reactions to various foods, food products or ingredients. There have even been some deaths caused by severe allergic reactions.

The Hon. Member for Hamilton East has pointed the finger at a considerable problem, and I want to thank her for raising the issue here in the House.

However, the motion of allergic reactions and how they are related to the foods we eat and our daily habits is in most cases ill-defined. In children, we see specific reactions to certain foods, and it is possible to prove that these reactions are due to allergies. Most adults are well aware that certain foods or beverages will cause digestive discomfort or allergic reactions, and that although the discomfort or reaction may not be serious, it is nevertheless unpleasant.

The impact of the substances in question tends to be worse when people are tense, nervous, tired or ill than when they are healthy and relaxed. Not enough is known as yet about the actual mechanisms of such reactions, and they may depend far more on the characteristics of the person who consumed the allergy-causing product than on the product itself.

Consumers may suffer discomfort as a result of allergic reactions to substances used in the preparation of food, and this is even more likely to happen when they eat at a restaurant or eat food purchased from caterers.

By exercising a reasonable amount of care when shopping and cooking, a person can be reasonably sure of controlling the substances he eats in his own home. Thus, the individual who suffers from allergies will not be exposed to substances that may cause discomfort as long as he eats at home.

However, as soon as he goes to a restaurant or eats food purchased from a caterer, that control no longer exists. Anyone who eats food prepared outside the home has to assume the food does not contain any ingredients to which he could be allergic.

Madam Speaker, in the public mind, allergies may be related to the substances used in additives or preservatives, but that is not necessarily the case. For instance, allergies to basic foods such as nuts, seafood and dairy products are quite common. A person might order a meal in a French restaurant without knowing that a particular dish is prepared with a cream sauce, or in an oriental restaurant without being aware that the meal includes a peanut sauce. Some people are allergic to certain types of oil or certain kinds of flour.

Furthermore, today's foods are prepared in a very complex way or in recipes with many ingredients. Often, many additives and preservatives are used, which may produce allergic reactions in some individuals.

We know that various substances may produce different reactions in some people. There is no question here of casting doubt on some foods or wondering whether some restaurants use unsafe ingredients. Agriculture Canada and Health and Welfare Canada have published strict regulations regarding food safety and freshness and the nature of additives.

Additives that present a complex risk are banned or subject to very strict control, like sulphites, for example, on which the Government recently imposed strict control after it was shown that they caused too many allergic reactions. Health and Welfare Canada now prohibits their use on all fruit and vegetables sold or served fresh, except grapes.

When people who are subject to allergies consume certain substances, a whole series of physiological effects that may produce reactions occurs and therein lies the problem. This is a matter of information in general and health affecting all consumers. We must ask ourselves how to inform those subject to allergic reactions, who therefore cannot take the chance of consuming food made outside the home.

Bill C-289, although incomplete and imperfect, allows us to take a step forward by offering a possible solution. I am sure that officials at Health and Welfare Canada and Consumer and Corporate Affairs will carefully study it in detail, while continuing to protect the health and safety of Canadian consumers. I am also sure, Madam Speaker, that they will continue to discover ways to protect persons suffering from food allergies.

Mr. Fernand Jourdenais (La Prairie): Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member for Hamilton-East (Ms. Copps) has tabled Bill C-289, an Act to amend the Food and Drugs Act. This Bill would compel restaurants to make available for public consultation a list in English and in French, of all the ingredients in any foods sold by them. This Bill, madam Speaker, would also compel caterers to affix on the packaging of any packaged food they sell, in French and in English, a list of all the ingredients they use.

The purpose of Bill C-289 is to protect consumers who may have allergic reactions to various foods or to the ingredients in such food. The Bill, madam Speaker, proposes to solve this problem by forcing restaurants to provide a list of the ingredients they use.

Madam Speaker, the problem is the same for consumers who buy food in food stores. Consumers may also in that case have allergic reactions and that must be taken into consideration. In so far as food purchased in food stores is concerned, the problem is partially resolved by the listing of ingredients as required by food and drug regulations.

However, the requirement to list ingredients on pre-packaged foods was not conceived with allergic persons in mind, but to give consumers a list, in decreasing order, of the various substances contained in the foods they purchase.

Madam Speaker, it is the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs that has the responsibility of managing the labelling, packaging, and marketing of foods, pursuant to the Consumer Packaging and Labelling Act and regulations and the Food and Drugs Act. The Health Protection Branch of the Department of Health and Welfare advises the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs on the labelling and marketing of products that have any bearing on health.

Madam Speaker, various information is required on the labels of pre-packaged foods, such as the following.

1) The common name of the food;

2) The net quantity of the contents;

3) The name and address of the person or company that produced the food;

4) The list of ingredients;

5) The shelf life of the food and preservation instructions.

All this information must be provided, in French and in English. The only exceptions are the name and address of the manufacturer which may be printed in either of the official languages of this country. And I refer you to Bill C-72.

Madam Speaker, as we are now debating Bill C-289, it is important to mention that it is the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs that was entrusted with the responsibility for these labelling requirements.

That is understandable as these measures were adopted to protect the consumer. The consumer must know what he is buying. He must be aware of the quality of the product and be sure it is not being sold on the basis of misleading advertising.

Madam Speaker, this is a very important point, and I want to make it clear that our present labelling requirements which have been in effect since the early seventies and are quite strict and effective, are above all aimed at protecting the consumer. However, while Bill C-289 is also aimed at protecting the consumer's health, its purpose is to protect the consumer against the possibility of allergic reactions to allergens in food consumed in restaurants. As I said before, neither the Food and Drugs Act nor the regulations on labelling were designed to indentify allergens.

However, Madam Speaker, the public is demanding specific information on ingredients and components of the food offered in restaurants and by suppliers.

Madam Speaker, Canadians are eating more and more meals outside the home. Every year, the percentage of our income spent on restaurant meals and on food purchased outside the home is increasing considerably, and the number and popularity of fast food restaurants is increasing as well.

Furthermore, Madam Speaker, a number of Canadians suffering from allergies is important. Canadians are concerned about their health and, according to public opinion polls, they are aware of allergy problems. The use of additives, preservatives and colouring agents is often challenged, especially if they contain allergens. That is why food processors often indicate on their labels the fact that their products do not contain such substances.

There are also certain whole foods that may cause allergies without containing additives or preservatives. We know that some people are allergic to nuts, fish, the gluten found in corn and wheat and to dairy products.

In the last few decades, Madam Speaker, food technology has made tremendous progress. Many foods and food products are subject to complex processes or combine a large number of ingredients. All this increases the complexity of our food and also increases our chances of having an allergy.

For all these reasons, Madam Speaker, Canadians who are at risk should be offered a margin of safety when they go out to a restaurant, especially since this is becoming an increasingly common social custom.

In concluding, I would say that Bill C-289 is a step forward. However, we must not forget that identifying ingredients is only one of the solutions to the problem we are facing today. This legislation will certainly be a first step, but there are other questions that remain to be answered.

For instance, publishing exhaustive lists would preclude any substitution, and so a chef would no longer be free to be creative. If there is a shortage of a particular ingredient, another ingredient cannot be substituted. Chefs would no longer be free to improvise and follow their inspiration. Restaurants that offer daily specials, and these are usually the smaller establishments, would have trouble meeting these requirements.

Bill C-289 is a good start, Madam Speaker. Many Canadians suffer from allergies, and we must consider the problems they may face when they go out to a restaurant. Bill C-289 would seem to suggest a number of solutions, but there is room for improvement. A start has been made, but what we need now is further debate and discussion that will lead to satisfactory solutions.

Mrs. Jennifer Cossitt (Leeds—Grenville): Madam Speaker, I rise to speak to Bill C-289 which has focused the attention of the House on the problems faced by many Canadians who suffer from various food allergies. This Bill would require the mandatory listing of the ingredients used in restaurant foods.

I want to compliment my colleague for introducing this Bill. It is important to make the Canadian public more aware of the problem. Indeed, I have spoken to a number of my constituents who have food allergies and they say that it is very necessary for restaurants to list food ingredients. I believe the House of Commons and the Government can find a solution to this problem.

Food allergies constitute a real problem for a significant number of Canadians. According to a recent report on Global News, 25,000 Canadians are at risk every day because of their food allergies. Other reports have stated that in Canada over the past two years at least 24 people have died from allergic reactions to food after having eaten in restaurants. This is a very frightening statistic to anyone with a dangerous food allergy.

There has been a recent precedent set in the area of food allergy and adverse reaction. In the early 1980s, sulphites, a group of substances that had been widely used as preservatives for years, received a good deal of public attention as the possible cause of a number of allergic reactions suffered by people eating in restaurants. In some cases the adverse reactions were severe enough to require medical attention and even hospitalization.

The health protection branch of Health and Welfare Canada has consulted with many expert sources on this issue. Meetings and consultations were held with groups such as The Allergy Information Association, the Canadian Society of Allergy and Clinical Immunology, the medical community, regulatory agencies from other countries, and the Canadian Restaurant and Food Services Association, which has resulted in a clearer picture of the problem.

We have learned that the use of sulphites on fresh fruits and vegetables in salad bars, for example, was the most common source of problems. Restaurants like to use sulphites to keep the salad ingredients looking fresh.

However, in further meetings with the Canadian Restaurant and Food Services Association, that organization took voluntary steps to discourage the use of sulphites by its members. In addition to that voluntary initiative, the health protection branch went further. It felt it prudent to enact regulations prohibiting the use of sulphites.

It also carried out a consumer education program on the use of sulphites through the use of fact sheets and brochures. Based on all the available information, these have been effective and the problem with sulphites has been minimized.

I have spoken about sulphites at some length because there is at least a rough parallel between the way that issue was handled and the way a solution to the problem of allergic reactions to restaurant food is emerging. As I said, a number of unfortunate and even tragic incidents have occurred, and the media has reported on this issue.

Members know that we are now in a period of discussion and consultation, not the least caused by the introduction of this Bill. The Standing Committee on National Health and Welfare has held hearings on the topic. Officials of both Health and Welfare Canada and the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs are actively seeking the best possible solution to the problem. Extensive discussions are being held with the allergy association, the medical community, and the Canadian Restaurant and Food Services Association.

In a very encouraging development, the private sector is again addressing itself to resolving a very serious problem. The Canadian Restaurant and Food Services Association is strongly encouraging a voluntary program among its 6,800 member companies. In fact, according to a recent report by Canadian Press, industry spokesmen have said that restaurant menus should warn consumers of ingredients that could lead to allergic reactions before they order a meal. The Vice-President of the Restaurant and Food Service Association was also quoted as saying that a system of warning charts could be introduced in quick service chains because they have highly centralized control over ingredients.

The consistency of the menus in chain restaurants, combined with the limited choices available, make the charts a manageable idea. According to the same Canadian Press report, the association has talked to 24 national quick service chains, and 22 of them have agreed to take part in the allergy chart idea.

This is good news. It shows that the food services industry is well aware of the problem and is more than willing to take steps to resolve it. It further shows that the idea of an ingredients list, if it can be fine-tuned and made manageable and practical, is indeed a good one.

However, there are some questions yet to be answered regarding ingredients list. What about the ingredients that went into the butter that is in the cake which is in the final product? Just how comprehensively would disclosure requirements be applied to sellers of food? Would they apply to owners of chip wagons and vendors of hotdogs at the Sparks Street Mall and at our ballparks?

The breadth and scope of the food service industry presents a very real challenge in this area. It is so diverse and widespread that any new programs must take these qualities into consideration.

Bill C-289 is serving a very useful purpose in getting the public to think seriously about the issue of food allergies and restaurant food. However, it leaves these and many other questions unanswered. It may very well be that the listing of restaurant food ingredients is the best way to tackle the issue. Indeed, present thinking by both industry and all of us concerned about allergies seems to be along these lines.

In the event that ingredients lists are the way to go, every effort must be made to see to it that the listing system that is adopted is the best possible one that can be put in place. In this area it does seem certain that Bill C-289 can be significantly improved.

It is essential that consumers get the information they need to protect themselves in the market-place and to make intelligent choices. This applies as much to allergy sufferers who dine in restaurants as it does to anyone else.

The Government is determined to bring about an effective solution to the issue. If that solution is to centre upon ingredients disclosure lists, the House can be assured that listing requirements will be applied in a manner that is effective, fair, and as cost-efficient as possible. I say this because some of the attraction in dining out, particularly at fast food or quick service outlets, is that prices are reasonable and obviously affordable to a great number of Canadians. We want to make sure that it stays that way.

We must adopt a system that affords the best possible protection to the Canadian consumer and allows greater freedom and safety for the sufferer of food allergies.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Madam Speaker, I shall speak on Bill C-289, an Act to amend the Food and Drugs Act, tabled by the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps).

Bill C-289 is concerned with the problems of those who, in a restaurant, unknowingly eat food containing ingredients to which they are allergic. The Bill tabled in the House would require every restaurant to make available to the public a list in French and English of all the ingredients used in the food sold.

The Bill would also require every branch of a restaurant and every restaurant chain to indicate on all packaging a list in French and English of the ingredients used in the food.

The problem that Bill C-289 seeks to deal with is really acute in Canada. Many people suffer allergic reactions to various foods, food products or ingredients. People have even died from severe allergic reactions. The Hon. Member for Hamilton East has put her finger on a considerable problem and she must be thanked for bringing it to the House of Commons.

The concept of allergic reaction itself, and its relationship to diet and daily habits, are unfortunately undefined in most circumstances. Children have particular reactions to some foods and it is possible to show that these reactions are due to allergies. Almost all adults know very well that some foods or drinks will disturb their digestion or cause allergic reactions, which, although not serious, are nevertheless unpleasant.

The troublesome substances cause even more problems when people are tense, frightened, tired or sick than when they are well and relaxed. How such reactions occur is still little known and may have much more to do with the characteristics of the individual who ate the product that caused the allergy than with the characteristics of the product itself.

Consumers may suffer from allergic reactions to substances used in food preparation and this is more likely to occur when they eat in a restaurant or eat food supplied by a caterer.

By being careful when shopping and cooking, someone can be reasonably sure of controlling the substances eaten at home. Thus, an allergic individual keeps away from troublesome substances when eating at home. But when he eats in a restaurant or eats food purchased from a caterer, the person cannot monitor things as closely. Thus, a person who eats food prepared outside his home must take it for granted that such food does not contain any ingredient to which he might be allergic.

Madam Speaker, public opinion has it that allergies may be related to substances used in additives or preservatives. But that is not necessarily the case. For instance, many people are allergic to such staple foods as nuts, seafood, and dairy products. One might easily order a meal in a French restaurant without knowing that a given dish comes with a cream sauce, or in an oriental restaurant without knowing that a meal will be served with a peanut sauce. Some persons will have allergic reactions to certain oils or to certain types of flour.

Furthermore, it must be said that today's foods undergo complex preparation or are made from recipes containing a multitude of ingredients. Often, many additives and preservatives are used, ingredients which may provoke allergic reactions in some people.

We know that different substances can produce different reactions in some people. Our purpose here is not to call into question the safety of certain foods nor to ask whether some restaurants are using dangerous ingredients. Agriculture Canada and Health and Welfare Canada have published strict regulations on food safety, its freshness and the nature of additives used.

When additives do present a complex risk, they are banned or subjected to very strict controls, as was the case for sulfites, on which the Government recently imposed strict controls, after it was shown that these substances were causing too many allergic reactions.

So, Health and Welfare Canada now prohibits the use of such substances on any produce sold or served fresh, excepting grapes.

When certain substances are consumed by individuals subject to allergies they trigger a whole series of physiological sequences that may result in reactions, and there lies the problem. This is a comprehensive disclosure issue, a health issue that involves all consumers. We must ask ourselves how we can inform people who may be subject to allergic reactions, but who for that reason cannot consume food that is prepared outside their homes.

Bill C-289 gives us an opportunity to make a step forward by proposing a possible solution, albeit incomplete and imperfect.

I am convinced that officials of Health and Welfare Canada and Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada will review the details in a careful way, while continuing to ensure the health and safety of Canadian consumers.

Madam Speaker, I am also convinced they will go on finding ways to ensure the protection of people with food allergies.

Mr. Nic Leblanc (Longueuil): Madam Speaker, Bill C-289 comes as a commendable effort to limit a serious consumer problem. It is aimed at providing the information they need to individuals who may suffer from allergic reactions to foods they eat in restaurants.

The current packaging and labelling Act and regulations work toward that goal by requiring disclosure of information on foods that are bought in food stores. Under that Act, most foods sold in food stores must be labelled in both official languages. That requirement covers both foreign and domestic products.

Canadian consumers are entitled to complete information in both official languages on the food they buy. As consumers, they must have an opportunity to make informed choices, and to that end they are entitled to get in the language with which they are more familiar information that will guide their choices.

The Consumer Packaging and Labelling Act requires certain compulsory information, and the regulations prescribe that information be supplied in both French and English.

Current requirements cover the common name of the food, the net weight of the product, the name and address of the relevant firm, the list of ingredients and directions as to the shelf life and preservation of the product.

Since its enactment in 1972, that Act has been working well: it is consistent, and both producers and entrepreneurs know it well. Suppliers know what is expected from them, and they provide on the labels bilingual information meeting the requirements.

With respect to the list of ingredients, most prepackaged food must have one showing either the decreasing order of ingredients or the percentage of their use. There are exceptions of course, and here are some of them:

—Repackaged products from bulk retail production;

—Prepackaged individual portions served with meals and snacks in restaurants;

—Individual portions prepared by a supplier and sold in vending machines or mobile canteens;

—Standard alcoholic beverages;

—Vinegar.

None of the standards specified in the Consumer Packaging and Labelling Act applies to food sold in restaurants or other similar establishments. In such places, people suffering from allergies might unknowingly run the risk of eating food or substances to which they are allergic. In some cases the ensuing allergic reaction is serious and, now and then, it may even be fatal.

Bill C-289 is a commendable effort aimed at eliminating such situations and providing consumers with the information to which they are entitled with respect to foods served in restaurants. It is a step in the right direction, but the motion of the Hon. Member is very brief. The question has a number of aspects with which the motion does not deal, and it can be improved in many ways.

For instance, the restaurant business has to be a very flexible undertaking. Various ingredients may be available to the chef today but not tomorrow. Many restaurants change menus regularly—every day, in some cases—to offer a better choice to their patrons and take advantage of what is available on the market. It would be next to impossible for a restaurant—or even an establishment which has printing facilities—to provide clients with the full list of ingredients used to prepare daily menus.

Think of the many ingredients used to prepare a French sauce, for instance, or any other food dish. Menus would be ridiculously bulky and practically illegible. Ethnic restaurants would have to deal with the added problem of translating the names of exotic ingredients without being in a position to guarantee that an allergy-prone customer would be protected against unknown ingredients. Such an excess of information might cause a real problem.

Moreover, customers suffering from food allergies might get a false sense of security with such a list of ingredients. The risk of error remains high. One single lapse in concentration and an additional ingredient in a recipe could have unfortunate results. Not even a minimal substitution or change would be allowed. In view of the very nature of restaurants, this is hardly a reasonable attempt.

Certain practical difficulties associated with the production and labelling of foods should be taken into account.

Madam Speaker, Bill C-289 deals with a problem which I feel is real and should be dealt with. I wonder, however, if this Bill is really the best possible way to protect Canadians suffering from food allergies.

For instance, some believe that we could require restaurant owners to provide upon request to consumers suffering from food allergies a verbal list of all their ingredients.

This would have the benefit of immediate effectiveness while relieving the restaurant owner of the obligation and costs of a printed menu. Good restaurants—I do not mean the most expensive ones—willingly provide such information. Fast food operators could have a list of ingredients which could be distributed upon request.

Mr. Speaker, I wonder if such suggestions are likely to help solve the problem. But we must of necessity examine all proposals which could help us protect Canadians suffering from food allergies.

Through its committee responsible for warning labels on food and drug packaging, the House of Commons addressed this issue once before. On the other hand, the officials at Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada and Health and Welfare Canada continue to look for all possible ways to help Canadians suffering from allergies. There is no doubt that Bill C-289 will greatly help us solve this problem.

[English]

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I am going to speak to this Bill very briefly as one who has had personal experience with an allergic reaction which necessitated my going to the hospital on three occasions, twice here in the national capital area, in fact to the Riverside Hospital, and once in Nairobi, Africa, where I took a severe allergic reaction to some foods that I had eaten. One instance, in fact, caused me to go into a very difficult breathing period when I thought I was going to pass out and die. I can relate very closely to this Bill from a personal point of view.

The Bill is entitled Bill C-289, an Act to amend the Food and Drugs Act. This Bill is designed to help Canadians with food allergies when they eat out at restaurants or places that supply fast foods. As you know, Sir, there are many within our country. We had a very unfortunate incident recently in which a young lady in the National Capital Region died from an allergic reaction to some nuts that she ate which she did not realize were in the food she had consumed.

The particular Bill here would have a dual effect. First, it would require every restaurant to make available for the public consultation, a list in English and French, of all the ingredients in any foods sold by it. The Bill would also compel each branch restaurant of a restaurant chain to affix on the packaging of any foods sold by it a list in English and in French of the ingredients in such food.

Many thousands of Canadians suffer from food allergies. They are described in some contexts as a nuisance. I guess I can describe my own as a nuisance because it did not persist for very long. However, for some Canadians they can be much greater than a nuisance, they can be deadly.

The CBC reported quite recently that in the last two years upward of 24 persons have died in Canada from severe allergies to foods. As things now stand, while most packaged foods sold in food stores have labelling requirements for ingredients and quantities, there are as yet no mandatory labelling requirements for restaurant food. Instead, individuals with food allergies have to ask the appropriate questions as to whether the ingredients in a restaurant food will trigger an allergic reaction. In other words, it is incumbent upon the person who goes to a restaurant to eat to ask those questions.

Therefore this Bill is performing a very valuable service in so far as it is causing a much greater debate on the subject, and in that it is raising the question of whether or not the present system is adequate. Certainly, Canadian consumers deserve the best possible protection, whether they buy food in a supermarket for preparation and consumption at home or whether they go out and eat in a restaurant, be that restaurant a very humble one or a very luxurious one.

The Standing Committee on National Health and Welfare has heard testimony recently on this issue from the Canadian Food and Restaurant Association and, in particular, Mr. Bill Dover, who is the President of Red Lobster of Canada which, in principle, is supporting the directions of this Bill. I hope that in due course the House will do the same thing.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The time provided for the consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired. Pursuant to Standing Order 36(2), the order is dropped to the bottom of the list of the order of precedence on the Order Paper.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster) on a point of order.

Mr. Foster: Madam Speaker, on behalf of the Chairman of the legislative committee on Bill C-73, I would like to seek unanimous consent of the House to present the report of the legislative committee on Bill C-73, an Act to provide for the implementation of an agreement respecting Indian lands in Ontario.

Committee Report

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The House has heard the request of the Hon. Member for Algoma. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

INDIAN LANDS AGREEMENT (1986) ACT

PRESENTATION OF REPORT OF LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Madam Speaker, on behalf of the Chairman of the legislative committee on Bill C-73, Bill C-122, and Bill C-123, I have the honour to present to the house the report of the legislative committee on Bill C-73, an Act to provide for the implementation of an agreement respecting Indian lands in Ontario, with amendments.

I might add, Madam Speaker, that we made good progress on this Bill. It is very important to a number of bands throughout Ontario, including five in Manitoulin Island, Nipissing, and Sarnia, because it provides for the negotiating authority for these bands respecting important land claims.

There is one amendment in the report. There is another one which we will be putting at report stage. I am pleased to present this report to the House now.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA LABOUR CODE

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-124, an Act to amend the Canada Labour Code, as reported (without amendment) from a legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): There are 18 proposed motions in amendment to Bill C-124, an Act to amend the Canada Labour Code. Four are in the name of the Hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Cadieux); two are in the name of the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy); and the remainder are submitted by the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan).

[Translation]

The first and second motions in amendment are proposed by the Minister and Mr. Kaplan respectively. They are of a technical nature to the French text of the Bill and are in order.

[English]

Motion No. 3, proposed by the Hon. Member for Churchill, seeks to oblige mine employers themselves to test air quality in the mines. I must regretfully rule that the motion in amendment is out of order, in that it is beyond the scope of the clause.

The purpose of Clause 1 to which the motion is proposed is to set out compliance obligations that employers must meet. These requirements involve compliance in working conditions set by the Coal Mining Safety Commission. A motion in amendment, placing an obligation on mine employers themselves to conduct air quality tests, is a different category of obligation from those set out in the clause. For this reason Motion No. 3 is out of order.

[Translation]

The fourth motion in amendment, like the first proposed by the Minister, is again of a technical nature. This motion seeks to make a change to the English language of the bill and is in order.

[English]

The sixth motion in amendment stands in the name of the Hon. Member for Churchill. It seeks to limit searches of employees by the employer for the purpose of preventing drinking or smoking in the mines. The motion in amendment is in order.

These four motions in amendment to clause 1 (motions 1, 2, 4 and 6) will be debated together and voted on separately.

[English]

Motion No. 5, in the name of the Hon. Member for York Centre, seeks to insert "technology" in the list of prescribed processes for which mining employers must meet safety standards. This is similar to Motion No. 12 which in this case is applied to Clause 3 of the Bill, rather than to Clause 1. Of a contrary intent is Motion No. 13, proposed by the Minister; it seeks to delete a reference to "technology" in another line of Clause 3. These motions will be debated together and the vote on Motion No. 5 will be applied to Motion No. 12, while Motion No. 13 will be voted separately.

All the following motions in amendment deal with clause 3 of the Bill. Motions 7 and 8 are identical and seek to modify the French text of the Bill by deleting an unnecessary reference to a previous sub-paragraph. Since the Minister's motion, numbered 7, was received first, it will be the one selected for debate and decision.

[English]

Motions Nos. 7, 9, 10, 11, and 14 are all in order and will be grouped for debate, but voted separately.

Motions 15, 16, 17 and 18 are in order. For the purpose of debate, these four motions shall be debated together, but they will be voted on separately.

[English]

In summary, Motion Nos. 1, 2, 4, and 6 will be debated together and voted separately. Motions Nos. 5, 12, and 13 will be considered next. The vote on Motion No. 5 will be applied to Motion No. 12, and there will a separate vote on Motion No. 13. Thereafter Motions Nos. 7, 9, 10, 11, and 14 will be grouped for debate and also voted separately. Motions Nos. 15, 16, 17, and 18 will also be grouped for debate, but voted separately.

I suggest that the House should now proceed to debate motions No. 1, 2, 4 and 6.

Hon. Pierre H. Cadieux (Minister of Labour) moved:

Motion No. 1.

That Bill C-124 be amended in Clause 1 in the French version by striking out lines 16 and 17 at page 1 and substituting the following therefor:

"(c) permet l'inspection et la vérification, au nom des employés, de la manière".

Motion No. 2

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): On behalf of my colleague the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan).

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is there consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

[Translation]

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques) moved:

Motion No. 2

That Bill C-124 be amended in Clause 1 in the French version by striking out lines 16 to 20 at page 1 and substituting the following therefor:

"c) permet qu'on procède, au nom des employés, à l'inspection et à la vérification de la mine et des machines et appareils qui s'y trouvent, de la manière et aux intervalles maximums réglementaires;"

[English]

Hon. Pierre H. Cadieux (Minister of Labour) moved:

That Bill C-124 be amended in Clause 1 in the English version by striking out line 5 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"conformity with plans and procedures as".

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill) moved:

That Bill C-124 be amended in Clause 1 by striking out lines 17 to 20 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"for the purpose of preventing articles for use in smoking from being brought in the mine,".

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question? On debate, the Hon. Minister.

[Translation]

Hon. Pierre H. Cadieux (Minister of Labour): Madam Speaker, concerning motions No. 1 and 2, after checking the wording of Motion No. 2, I suggest to withdraw Motion No. 1 and to vote in favour of Motion No. 2, because the wording of that motion is better than the wording of Motion No. 1. I am sorry I have to admit that, but it is true, and because the wording of Motion No. 2 is better and more appropriate, I suggest to withdraw Motion No. 1 and to vote in favour of Motion No. 2.

Concerning Motion No. 4, if I may, Madam Speaker, this is simply a technical amendment which had escaped those who drafted the original text, the word "as" being much more appropriate in the English version than the word "so". This being purely a technical amendment, I do not think there will be any opposition to that motion.

As to Motion No. 6, if I may, Madam Speaker, I should like to reserve my right to respond once the mover of that motion has put forward his arguments.

• (1810)

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I would like to ask the House whether there is unanimous consent, first, for Motion No. 1 to be withdrawn and second, for the Minister to be recognized once the Hon. Member for Churchill has made his case on Motion No. 6.

Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 1 withdrawn.

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Madam Speaker, I would like to say a few words on motion No. 2. As the Minister indicated earlier, he kindly accepted to withdraw his motion No. 1 in order to accept motion No. 2. Essentially, the amendment merely improves the Bill's wording, not its meaning.

Clause 1 proposes many things, for example, in paragraph c): "permet qu'on procède, au nom des employés, à l'inspection et à la vérification de la mine et des machines et appareils qui s'y trouvent, de la manière et aux intervalles maximums réglementaires." That is, in fact, the wording of the proposed amendment. It's about the same as in the Bill, except that it reads better in French.

If Molière were amongst us, he would be happy to see such an improvement in the wording of the Bill, not for the purpose of changing the substance of Bill C-124, but of expressing it in a more elegant or natural French. That is the sole objective of this motion which is moved by my colleague from York-Centre (Mr. Kaplan) and which I was happy to present on his behalf.

[English]

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, it is not surprising to find in Bill C-124, respecting the amendments to the Canada Labour Code, that we have a number of technical amendments at this time. It is amazing that the amendments are in the name of a Member who is not a member of the legislative committee. Usually members of the legislative committee make amendments. It is not unusual that we have this number of amendments, because committee study on Bill C-124 was a rush job. Government Members would not allow the committee to call any witnesses other than the Minister and his staff, nor would they allow a second meeting of the committee.

Let me refresh Hon. Members' memories. The committee met on May 9, 1988 at 3.38 p.m. The Minister and one of his officials appeared with him. I asked permission to contact members of the unions involved and the only employer involved in the case. The request was denied by members of the committee. I asked that there be a second meeting so that we could study the legislation. Again, government Members refused.

As a result of the process all the clauses of the Bill were passed by 5.07 p.m. The Bill was studied in committee for only one and a half hours. The Minister and his official spoke. We had a procedural squabble over the desire to have witnesses who would know what this legislation would do to them.

I said that we would not stall the legislation, that what we wanted was the right to have witnesses "one week hence", and that I was able to guarantee the legislation would pass committee stage that day or the following one. Conservative members on that committee, I believe on instructions from the Department, refused to allow any witnesses whatever.

This piece of legislation was allowed through second reading on the basis of one afternoon's debate. This was not legislation that the Opposition was stalling. This was not legislation that was even being opposed by the opposition Parties. We recognized that as Members of Parliament we had an obligation to allow people who would be affected to make their presentations, to explain what they believed should be in the legislation, but the request was denied and I believe Parliament failed in its duty in doing so.

Today, two months after the Government refused to have a second meeting of this committee, the legislation was brought to the House. Obviously any time during those two months we could have heard from witnesses. This was not a matter of pressing and urgent necessity. This was an example of government arrogance, an example of the Government refusing to listen to those affected, an example of the Government assuming that it knew better than any of those who would be affected.

The Minister has admitted that one of the opposition motions is better than his own Department's. He has withdrawn his own amendment. We have other amendments that are probably technically better than the Government's amendments. In addition, we have a number of what I would call controversial issues dealing with the work site which were never raised in the House of Commons. Motion No. 6 speaks to that.

Motion No. 3 was ruled out of order and speaks to a matter of controversy and concern to people in the workforce. As well, since this legislation was rushed through committee study, the Minister himself has received representations from one union, the Canadian Union of Public Employees whose members work at the plant. The union would like to see the committee looking at workplace safety being restructured so that it could include a representative of the union, but that will not happen.

I do not have much time to explain all these points because I am limited to speaking for only 10 minutes. However, I think what I have said sets the groundwork. This legislation is coming to the House flawed. The process that we went through was very objectionable. It denied us the advice of people who will be directly affected by the legislation. It prevents Parliament from resolving some of the difficulties of people who work in the mines at Cape Breton.

Some suggestions were made to the Minister, and he knows that. There is a conflict among the unions in Cape Breton, and the Minister also knows that. Had the committee had the opportunity in one afternoon to hear from a representative of each of the three unions involved, as well as from the management, perhaps we could have amended this Bill in a manner that would have met all concerns. I do not believe the issues were without any possibility of being resolved. Instead, the House of Commons committee refused to allow these problems to be resolved and, worse than that, the committee refused even to allow the participants any sort of a fair hearing.

This legislation affects only one employer. It affects only three groups of unionized workers. I do not believe the House of Commons was in such a rush that we could not have heard from them. I do not believe our agenda was so tight that we could not have heard from them. I find it very regrettable that Conservative Members refused to allow witnesses to appear. As a result the legislation will not meet the needs of all workers at that work site, particularly those of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

The legislation we have is meant to prevent fires and explosions at the work site. We accept and support that, but for some reason the Minister and his officials have deemed it necessary to give the employer the right to search for drugs, alcohol, and other goods. If the purpose of the legislation is to prevent explosions and fires, then we should certainly allow for searches for those goods which would directly cause explosions and fires. Obviously smoking materials could do that and, therefore it would obviously be correct to search for those items. That is something to which the employees agreed as well.

I find it unusual that in this legislation we are granting an employer a right we do not grant any other employer who falls under the Canada Labour Code. I must ask the Minister why he is setting this precedent in this legislation. I believe that is why he has reserved his right to speak after me on this amendment. Why would he introduce this widespread power when the legislation is supposed to give an employer a very specific right to deal with a very specific problem?

I appreciate that you have given me some extra time, Madam Speaker, because of the complexity of the situation. While the Minister is on his feet, perhaps he could explain if this legislation granting this extraordinary right under the Canada Labour Code will set a precedent for other legislation that the Minister might be introducing.

[Translation]

Mr. Cadieux: Madam Speaker, I would like to thank Hon. Members who, by unanimous consent, granted me the right and the privilege to speak after the movers of the motion had done so.

As I said earlier, Madam Speaker, we in the Government intend to support Motion No. 2 for the reasons mentioned by the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault), not for those invoked by the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy), who just said or who just tried to say that . . .

[English]

"If some amendments have to be brought at this stage it is because of a rush job". I think my hon. colleague will recognize that, on the contrary, this Bill is not the product of a rush job.

If the Hon. Member were to check with the unions involved, the employer, and even the federations such as the CLC, he would find and would have to admit that we have been consulting with the parties in the Cape Breton mine since 1985 with respect to the terms of this legislation. There was even one meeting which the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) attended dealing with this particular legislation.

When I am told that this has been a rush job, I take issue with that and I think it is wrong. It is unjustified at this time in the debate to try to take cheap political shots by saying that this Bill is the result of a rush job. It is not, and I think the Hon. Member would agree with that.

With respect to the Hon. Member's remarks about the committee, I doubt very much that the committee members, including the Conservative committee members, took any instructions from the Department of Labour, assuming such instructions would have been given. I can assure Hon. Members that this Minister and his Department did not give instructions to committee members to refuse to hear witnesses. Most of those witnesses had been consulted before the introduction of the Bill.

I admit that this Bill is not perfect in its drafting and that is why this Minister himself is proposing some amendments. It is to ensure that we have the best Bill possible, perhaps not perfect but the best Bill possible.

I have here some correspondence from the parties in Cape Breton who are concerned with this legislation. They wrote to me after the committee hearings saying that they were pleased that the Bill was passed without amendment. My hon. colleague probably has copies of these letters and, if he does not, it will be a pleasure for me to give him copies. I will not take the time of the House to read them but they are here.

I will turn to the specific amendment, Motion No. 6.

I simply want to add a comment on Motion No. 6, moved by the Hon. Member, which is aimed at eliminating searches for drugs and alcohol. The Hon. Member said that we would be creating a precedent, that this had never been done before, and that consequently, this could create a precedent so that the Government or governments might be tempted to introduce similar measures in other bills.

As for creating a precedent, Madam Speaker, I would like to say to the Hon. Member that he, as an expert, is probably aware that in Canada similar legislation exists in Ontario, Manitoba, Newfoundland, Saskatchewan and Nova Scotia. Outside Canada, we find similar legislation in the U.K. and the United States. Madam Speaker, requirements like the one for searches to detect the presence of articles for use in smoking, alcohol or drugs, constitute protection of the kind included in the safety regulations in effect in coal mines operated by the Cape Breton Development Corporation since 1967. Madam Speaker, the searches have been going on since 1967, and the reason is simply for the sake of the safety of employees working in these mines. The atmosphere in a coal mine is such that explosions can be touched off by sparks generated either by matches or articles used in smoking or because someone was working while under the influence of alcohol and drugs. All this could cause the mine to explode and with it the employees in the mines at the time. Even the miners support this measure because it is for their own protection in a very specific context and environment and, I might as well say it, a very explosive environment!

This measure, Madam Speaker, was requested by people who work in the mines in Cape Breton, by employers and employees, and it is necessary and indeed essential, considering the purpose of this legislation which is to protect the health and safety of employees.

As for whether this would constitute a precedent for subsequent federal legislation, I can give the Hon. Member the assurance that this amendment will not constitute a precedent for other industries where no such measures or procedures exist at this time, Madam Speaker.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Madam Speaker, I know that this was a rush job in the committee but the Minister is moving an amendment. He seemed to imply that it was a rush job prior to the legislation. However, I want to respond to some of the other remarks he made and I will use this opportunity.

The Minister waved some letters which he said were from workers on the plant site who said they wanted this legislation passed without amendment. He forgot to point out that he also had correspondence from people working at that site who wanted amendments.

I made only one charge against the Government, and that is that it would not allow witnesses to appear before the committee. That was based on the fact that we had at least one group of employees at that work site who had some concerns about the legislation and wanted an opportunity to present their case. That is what I said. I admitted in my presentation that there were other unions who liked the legislation. This was an interunion conflict. I never implied that it was all black or white. I said that there were some concerns which could have been resolved in a second meeting of the committee. That is what was not allowed.

Here we are with government Members who have no idea what the Minister's motion is about, and the Minister cannot even explain in one or two sentences what his motion does. They want a quick vote. I would hope that they would have enough interest in what we are doing in this House to get at least a one or two line explanation from the Minister. We do not oppose the legislation or the amendment in front of us. However, I believe the Government should at least have the decency to explain what the amendment is.

Mr. Cadieux: Madam Speaker, since my hon. friend wants me to speak on this motion, I will do so very briefly. However, I took it for granted that NDP Members, like Conservatives, know how to read. It is very obvious what the motion is about. It is on the Order Paper and anyone who reads it knows what it is. Perhaps contrary to the NDP, in this caucus there are some discussions with respect to legislation. Members on this side are well aware of what it is. As surprising as it may sound, when there is a question all Members have to do is ask. Our Members are very aware that if they have a question they can ask, which they do.

Again, it is self-evident. It is an amendment in order to comply with the other articles of the Bill, and I think my colleague is taking cheap shots. I suppose he is entitled to do that—it is a democracy—but we are dealing with the safety of workers. This Bill deals with the safety of those workers and even the subject to which my hon. friend was trying to allude, the interunion difficulty with respect to one element of this Bill, was discussed with the unions before and after study by the committee. I think my hon. friend is taking cheap shots for nothing.

Motion No. 13 agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): We will now go to the next group of amendments. The first one is Motion No. 9 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan). The motion is withdrawn in the absence of the Hon. Member.

The next one is Motion No. 10 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for York Centre. The motion is withdrawn in the absence of the Hon. Member.

The next one is Motion No. 11 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for York Centre. The motion is withdrawn in the absence of the Hon. Member.

Mr. Cadieux: Madam Speaker, this may sound strange, but with respect to Motion No. 10 I believe my friend, the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault) wanted to move this amendment.

It is an amendment that will be useful in the sense that both texts, French and English, will be made to have the same wording. As Minister of Labour, of course, in order to make sure that the text of this legislation is compatible in both languages and is for the protection of workers in the mines of Cape Breton, I will definitely agree to the amendment as long as my friend is here to move the motion. If not, perhaps someone from the NDP will volunteer to move the motion.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Minister was talking about Motion No. 10, is that correct?

Mr. Cadieux: Yes.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): With unanimous consent, then, the motion will be moved.

Mr. Russell MacLellan (for Mr. Kaplan) moved:

Motion No. 10.

That Bill C-124 be amended in Clause 3 in the French version by striking out line 30 at page 3 and substituting the following therefor:

CANADA-NOVA SCOTIA OFFSHORE PETROLEUM RESOURCES ACCORD IMPLEMENTATION ACT

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-75, an Act to implement an agreement between the Government of Canada and the Government of Nova Scotia on offshore petroleum resource management and revenue sharing and to make related and consequential amendments, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): With regard to Bill C-75 there are four motions on the Order Paper offered in amendment to it. Motion Nos. 1 to 4 inclusive stand in the name of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Masse). I understand that the Hon. Minister had tabled identical amendments in the legislative committee, but that due to the infringement upon the financial initiative of the Crown by one of the amendments and consequential effects to other amendments they could not be dealt with at the committee stage. I have noticed that the Minister has obtained a new Royal Recommendation which satisfies the requirement as far as Motion No. 3 is concerned.

Since Motion Nos. 1 to 4 inclusive are related, I would suggest that they be grouped together for debate with a vote on Motion No. 1 being applied to Motion Nos. 2, 3, and 4. The House will now proceed to debate Motion Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources) moved:

Motion No. 1.

That Bill C-75 be amended in Clause 47 by striking out lines 13 and 14 at page 27 and substituting the following therefor:

"the purposes of subsection 13(2), 25(3), 37(1) or 140(5), the government or Minister proposing".

That Bill C-75 be amended by adding immediately after line 33 at page 57 the following:

"104. The interest owner of an interest in relation to lands situated in that portion of the offshore area that is described in Schedule IV is, in respect of those lands, exempt from the payment under section 81 of the Canada Petroleum Resources Act of any amount in respect of any period mentioned in subsection 140(1) or specified in a notice issued pursuant to subsection 140(7)."

That Bill C-75 be amended by adding immediately after line 27 at page 82 the following:

"140. (1) No person shall, on or before January 1, 2000, in that portion of the offshore area described in Schedule IV, explore or drill for or produce, conserve or process petroleum or transport petroleum produced in that portion of the offshore area.

(2) A public review of the environmental and socio-economic impact of exploration and drilling activities in that portion of the offshore area described in Schedule IV shall be conducted by a panel that is to be established for that purpose, in accordance with this section, on or before January 1, 1996.

(3) The panel referred to in subsection (2) shall consist of not more than five members.

(4) Two members of the panel referred to in subsection (2) may be appointed by the Federal Minister and two by the Provincial Minister, and the chairman of the panel is to be appointed by both the Federal Minister and the Provincial Minister.

(5) Where the two Ministers fail to agree on the appointment of the chairman of the panel referred to in subsection (2) within sixty days after the first appointment of a member of the panel, the chairman shall be selected by an arbitration panel, constituted in accordance with section 47, within thirty days after the appointment of the chairman of the arbitration panel, unless at any time prior thereto the two Ministers agree on the appointment.

(6) A report containing the results of the public review conducted pursuant to subsection (2), including any recommendations of the panel made in respect of those results, shall be prepared by the panel referred to in that subsection and submitted to the Federal Minister and the Provincial Minister on or before July 1, 1999.

(7) On or before January 1, 2000, the Federal Minister and Provincial Minister may, after consideration of the report submitted to them pursuant to subsection (6), jointly issue a written notice prohibiting, for such further period as is specified in the notice, in all or any part of that portion of the offshore area described in Shedule IV, the exploration or driling for and the production, conservation and processing of petroleum and the transportation of petroleum produced in that portion of the offshore area.

(8) The Federal Minister shall cause a copy of any notice issued pursuant to subsection (7) to be published in the Canada Gazette forthwith after the notice has been issued."

That Bill C-75 be amended by adding immediately after Schedule III at page 161 the following:

Mr. Jack Shields (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to propose to the House today, on behalf of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Masse), a package of amendments to Bill C-75 dealing with an issue of deep concern to Nova Scotians, the protection of the Georges Bank fishery.

There is no dispute that the Georges Bank fishery is an important economic resource for Canada, the Province of Nova Scotia, and the people of southwestern Nova Scotia in particular.

The Government was fully aware of the importance of the Georges Bank fishery. It was also very much aware of the environmental sensitivity of the Bank and of the concerns being expressed by the Government of Nova Scotia and by the people of region over the potential impact that petroleum activity could have on the Bank. Therefore, discussions were held with the Energy Minister and the Premier of Nova Scotia and others on how best to satisfactorily resolve the impasse.

It was agreed, following these extensive discussions and consultations, that there should be a full and open public review of the environmental and socio-economic issues related to petroleum activities on the Georges Bank.

There had also been the concern expressed that such an environmental review conducted under the auspices of the Oil and Gas Management Board would not provide the objectivity this important issue deserved. As a result, it was agreed that the review would be conducted by an independent panel rather than the new Offshore Oil and Gas Management Board.

The Georges Bank is a unique fishery resource, and unique measures are required in the circumstances to balance the interests of all concerned. The moratorium and public review process will provide assurances to all Canadians that the Government understands the seriousness of environmental concerns and how these relate to other major considerations in our lives.

An agreement was reached with the Government of Nova Scotia on an amendment package for Georges Bank which contains the following key provisions. First, a moratorium is to be put in place on oil and gas activity on the Georges Bank until at least the year 2000.

Second, prior to the year 1996 an independent review panel will be constituted to hold public hearings on the environmental and social impacts of drilling on the Bank. The panel will report to the federal and provincial Ministers of Energy on or before July 1, 1999. The Ministers will then jointly decide whether the ban on petroleum activity should be extended beyond January 1, 2000.

These amendments will bring the federal accord legislation into line with that of the Province of Nova Scotia whose legislature passed the Georges Bank amendment package on May 25, 1988. The decisions embodied in the Georges Bank amendment package represent a credible solution to a very sensitive issue, one which is widely supported as being in the best public interest. I am pleased that the Governments of Canada and Nova Scotia, working together in a climate of co-operation, were able to resolve this issue.

I am today asking this House to join with others in supporting these measures by giving the amendments its stamp of approval.

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Madam Speaker, it is my opinion that these amendments merely mirror the legislation in the Province of Nova Scotia, nothing more and nothing less. I would like the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary's confirmation that that is in fact the case.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): With unanimous consent, the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary.

Mr. Shields: Madam Speaker, I can assure my hon. friend and other colleagues in the House that this is mirror legislation to legislation which has previously been passed in the Legislature of Nova Scotia.

• (1850)

Mr. Paul Gagnon (Calgary North): Madam Speaker, I wish to move an amendment to Motion No. 3. I move:

> That Motion No. 3 be amended by deleting from subsection 140(2) therein the date 1996 and substituting therefore the date 1990.
> That Motion No. 3 be amended by adding immediately after subsection 140(6) the following:
> "(7) Notwithstanding subsection (1), if the report submitted pursuant to subsection (6) concludes that the exploratory work or activity can proceed in the offshore area described in Schedule IV without undue risk to the environment or resources of the area, the Federal Minister and the Provincial Minister may jointly declare that the authorization of the work or activity is a fundamental decision for the purposes of this Act and may be granted on condition that any proposed development resulting from any authorized work or activity could not proceed without a further public review of the proposed development. And by renumbering the subsections following and by substituting in the renumbered subsection (8) a reference to subsection (8) for the reference to subsection (7)."

Basically the main motion would freeze what is commonly called the Georges Bank from all exploration activity until the year 2000. This is done in conjunction with the Province of Nova Scotia but very much in a unilateral manner.

There is no need to include such a freeze within the Bill. The board which will be established under Bill C-75 already has the power to halt all exploration or development if there is an environmental problem.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Before the Hon. Member continues, may I know who will second the amendment? It will be seconded by Mr. Clifford.

Mr. Gagnon: Madam Speaker, there was a lot of discussion in the committee. I was privileged to be a member of that committee, where we heard from the Canadian Petroleum Association, Texaco Canada, and Chevron Canada. Obviously they are not unbiased about this issue and have a point of view to express. They brought me a book written by Richard H. Backus, Chairman of the Department of Biology at Woods Hole. He is a well- known independent biologist who looked at the environmental situation. At the outset he was opposed to oil development but concluded that development should proceed. Let me quote what he wrote:

> My own opinion is that cautious development together with suitable monitoring should proceed, with no opportunity being lost during the process for learning more about the bank and its fisheries and thus about coastal marine systems in general.

I submit that the safeguards already exist. We do not need a 12-year ban. People who have considered the environmental situation believe that we should proceed in a very cautious manner.

Mr. Jack Shields (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, I only have a couple of remarks on the subamendments moved by my friend, the Hon. Member for Calgary North (Mr. Gagnon). He indicated that the motions were put through in a unilateral manner. There would be nothing unilateral in sitting down and negotiating with the province which has an agreement with the federal Government that the offshore resources in Nova Scotia will be treated in the same way as the resources in western Canada and the western basin.

The people of Nova Scotia have decided on a moratorium until the year 2000. The people of Nova Scotia have said that they fear the environmental impact on Georges Bank, which is a very important resource to Nova Scotia.

The Member is asking us to take a unilateral position like that which was taken by a previous Government when it imposed on the western basin and western provinces the divisive National Energy Program. Had it remained, it could have broken the country in two.

I would not want to be party to imposing anything on the Nova Scotia people that they and their legislature did not want. Therefore I ask my colleagues to defeat the subamendment.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): As we have ruled earlier that a vote on Motion No. 1 would apply to the other motions, we shall deal with the amendment to Motion No. 3. The question is on the amendment of Mr. Gagnon. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: No.

Amendment (Mr. Gagnon) negatived.

Mr. Shields: Madam Speaker, for clarification, did we just vote on two subamendments?

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Since the amendments dealt with two different parts of the same motion they were treated as one amendment, which has now been negatived on division.

The next question is on Motion No. 1 standing in the name of the Hon. Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the yeas have it.

Motion No. 1 agreed to.

Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources) moved that the Bill, as amended, be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Hnatyshyn (for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Jack Shields (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Madam Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I introduce, on behalf of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Masse), final reading on Bill C-75, an Act to implement the Canada-Nova Scotia Offshore Petroleum Resources Accord. The Bill before the House will implement the Canada-Nova Scotia Accord that was signed on August 26, 1986, by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and by the Premier of Nova Scotia, John Buchanan. Lying at the heart of the legislation is a new shared management regime under which the province has an equal say in decisions. This will significantly improve on the arrangements contained in the 1982 agreement with Nova Scotia, pursuant to which the province had only an advisory role in a federally controlled system.

The legislation will create a new independent board to administer and regulate petroleum activities in the offshore on behalf of the two Governments. The board will have considerable autonomy on technical decisions but will be subject to the joint direction of the two Governments on any fundamental decisions.

The legislation will convert the $200 million offshore development fund created under the 1982 agreement into a grant. Above and beyond this, the Government of Canada will make available a new $25 million fund to Nova Scotia Resources Ventures Limited, to assist in participating in exploration and development drilling in the offshore area.

This legislation incorporates existing federal legislation, the Canada Petroleum Resources Act and the Oil and Gas Production Act, so that there will be consistency in the legal framework for oil and gas activity in all offshore areas of Canada. This is highly desirable, from both an industry and government perspective, in ensuring consistently safe and well understood practices to be applied in all coastal areas.

In conclusion, the legislation will assure the Government of Nova Scotia of its rightful place alongside the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador as an equal partner with the Government of Canada in the management of petroleum resources of the East Coast.

The legislation will set aside the question of which level of government has jurisdiction over the offshore resources in favour of a joint management regime under which these resources are managed together for the benefit of all Canadians and, particularly, those in Nova Scotia.

It will thus create a stable investment climate to encourage industry investment by eliminating the risk that jurisdictional disputes will delay important project decisions.

The Government of Nova Scotia has passed into law the provincial legislation implementing the Nova Scotia Accord. I would ask this House to join with Nova Scotia in sanctioning this important legislation, thereby taking Canada one more purposeful step forward in national reconciliation and full realization of the benefits that will flow from the accord.

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Madam Speaker, I am very pleased to have the opportunity to speak on third reading of Bill C-75, an Act to implement an agreement between the Government of Canada and the Government of Nova Scotia on offshore petroleum resource management and revenue sharing and to make related and consequential amendments.

We have been in the process of passing this Bill for a good many months now and I think that we have a Bill that is going to be satisfactory to all of the people of Nova Scotia. For that, I am very pleased. I would like to thank the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Masse) for his co-operation in agreeing to this amendment, and also his Parliamentary Secretary (Mr. Shields) who was probably the one who was really instrumental in formulating this policy. I would like to thank him as well.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. MacLellan: During the course of the legislative committee meetings it was brought to the attention of all the Members of Parliament on the committee that this Bill could be substantially improved by the addition of an amendment which would protect the bountiful fish resource of Georges Bank. Although this Bill was initiated with offshore petroleum resource management, it was made clearly evident by representatives of the Nova Scotia fishing industry that protection of the fishery was of equivalent importance to oil and gas resources and had to be given consideration within the framework of this Bill. I think that is rightly put forward.

I want to thank also at this point the representatives of the fishing industry who came before the committee and, particularly, the organization known as NORIG, for their very relevant and in-depth presentation and support given to all committee members.

According to the accord to which this Bill relates, which was originally signed on the August 26, 1986, one of its seven major objectives was as follows: "To achieve the early development of petroleum resources in the offshore area for the benefit of Canada as a whole and Nova Scotia in particular". This statement overlooked the fact that there is a traditional resource in Nova Scotia, and that is, the fishery.

To act for the benefit of Canada as a whole and Nova Scotia in particular, we have to give particular attention to the fishery. Georges Bank is the most prolific fishery grounds in the world. That is of tremendous importance to the Province of Nova Scotia. It is many times more prolific than any other fishing grounds in the world, and of course there are a great many good fishing grounds throughout the world.

Six thousand people in the Province of Nova Scotia depend on the fishing industry directly related to Georges Bank. If we did not heed the seriousness of drilling in Georges Bank then the quality of life in Nova Scotia could be set off balance as a result of petroleum exploration and development. As a result, we have this amendment, which places a 12-year moratorium on oil and gas exploration and development on the Canadian side of Georges Bank. We establish by this amendment as well a review panel which will report on the environmental and socio-economic impact of exploration and drilling activities in this specific area by January 1, 1996.

Bill C-75 acted as a catalyst to make the legislative committee in the House of Commons confront the needs of the region, ensure the best use of the offshore resources, including the fishery, and put in place a process which will provide an equal hearing to those with differing concerns on offshore resource management.

I think that sets up the framework that all Canadians would like to see. There are, of course, various interests that will not be satisfied by this, but I think that what has been put in place is fair, and certainly fair to the fishing industry of Nova Scotia.

The situation on the Georges Bank highlighted three factors which are relevant to making decisions about resource development and management; socio-economic concerns, scientific evidence, and the political objectives of the people.

This proposed legislation provides a viable process for federal-provincial co-operation on offshore petroleum resource management. As I mentioned in my speech during second reading, the process will have limited use as no resource development is currently taking place. The lack of a coherent energy policy by this Government has led to merely ad hoc initiatives which may or may not be in the long-term interests of Canadians. This is why we did not have these very important provisions in the original Bill.

Furthermore, the objective of the Government, "to protect, preserve and advance the attainment of national security of supply" of energy resources, will be superseded by the terms of the free trade agreement.

The development of offshore resources is more likely to be based on decisions by U.S. multinationals whose objective it is to supply U.S. markets rather than plan to meet the future needs of Canadians. I do not think that that is wrong. The energy multinationals have played a very important role in the development of oil and gas and energy needs of this country and they are to be congratulated and thanked by the Canadian public.

However, there is a limit. One cannot expect oil companies, multinational or otherwise, to act in the interests of the fishing industry of Nova Scotia. It just makes common sense that oil companies have their vested interests. Fishermen and the fishing industry have their vested interests. This is why it is paramount that the Governments of this country look at situations like this and come down on the side of the people, the best interests of the people and the region in which they live. This is being done with the amendments that have been brought forward here this evening in the House of Commons at report stage. I feel good about this Bill. It certainly has the support of my Party as amended.

The fact that the Government has failed the people of Canada on two counts is demonstrated by the response of the Nova Scotian community to the idea of oil and gas drilling on Georges Bank. The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources failed to develop a national energy strategy upon which regional initiatives would be based to ensure a security of supply.

In addition, the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans (Mr. Siddon) and other members of the Government have not taken into consideration, or did not take into consideration initially, the needs of the fishing industry in Nova Scotia. It was really members of the fishing industry and the communities involved that brought to the attention of the Government the need for these amendments, both here and in the Province of Nova Scotia.

This is one of the finest examples we will see in Canada of people interested in a particular resource knowing that they could lose the very vital industry on which their incomes and their livelihoods have come to depend. They have reached out to the Government and made their presentation in a forceful and objective manner. They have succeeded in having the Government, all Members of the House of Commons, and all members of the Legislature of the Province of Nova Scotia, listen to their arguments and accept their validity.

To have shown a disregard and a lack of empathy for the needs of the people dependent on the Georges Bank fishery would have been a catastrophe. It would have been a very bad example to the rest of the country. It would have been devastating for the people of Nova Scotia. We now have these amendments which are the results of this positive process which was initiated by the people in southwest Nova Scotia.

In addition to serving the needs of Nova Scotians and Canadians, the amended legislation is playing a leadership role in gaining U.S. support to prohibit oil and gas drilling on its portion of the Georges Bank. In June, the United States House Appropriations Committee voted to extend the one-year moratorium on any sites less than 400 metres deep. Previously, this restriction was only on 60 metre sites. Thus, that committee has increased protection of the U.S. side of the Georges Bank to almost 7 million acres.

This is a direct result of the action taken by the Government of Canada and the Government of the Province of Nova Scotia to say that we are not going to be drilling on Georges Bank during the moratorium period of 12 years. Had we not listened to the fishing community in Nova Scotia and to the concerns of Nova Scotians in general, and had we allowed the possibility of drilling to occur on Georges Bank, then this would have set a precedent for the United States. It could very well have followed suit. Not only have we prevented the drilling on the Canadian side of Georges Bank, we have also prevented drilling on the United States side of Georges Bank.

Some people may ask why we should worry about the United States side. Primarily, it is because the current in Georges Bank goes in a circular motion. Any spills or debris that is thrown into the bank comes around on to the Nova Scotia and the Canadian side. Any debris, any spillage, any pollution of any kind not only pollutes the side on which it occurs but it pollutes both sides of the border.

Canada is establishing an admirable precedent with this legislation. We have decided that the fishery as a resource takes precedence over petroleum resources until it is proven that no damage will be incurred to the Georges Bank or to the quality of life in Nova Scotia.

All the politicians in the Province of Nova Scotia and almost all of the politicians in the House of Commons—certainly all the members of my Party—have decided that we will not risk sacrificing the fishery in order to promote oil and gas development, particularly since this country does not have a comprehensive energy policy. We would be throwing darts in the dark if we were to allow drilling since we would not know what exactly would occur from any commencement of activity on the Georges Bank.

In this instance, the democratic process has worked. Nova Scotians have affected the legislative process. It is my pleasure to tell the House that Liberals support the speedy passage of Bill C-75.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Madam Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to speak on this particular Bill. It is an area with respect to which I am not particularly well informed. However, there is a principle here which needs to be considered.

I have often wondered why it is that we think that all our non-renewable resources have to be spent as quickly as possible. That idea is the position that has been taken by much of the world's oil industry. It has been taken all over the world and, to a great extent, it has been supported by Governments around the world. In this case, the interest of companies in the Georges Bank and the development of the industry in that area ended up in a rather bitter fight between the oil exploiters and the fishermen of Georges Bank. It is good to know that in this particular situation a good look was taken at the responsibilities and the needs of both groups.

A moratorium is being imposed which gives both groups the opportunity to assure themselves that one will not hurt the other in any way when, sometime in the future, there is the possibility of development of the industry on Georges Bank. There are several attractive features in the plan which are being developed in this particular Bill by the Minister. These are positions which might be models for the future.

The previous Liberal Government took a similar type of approach in looking at the Mackenzie Valley as a source of gas and a pipeline which would have traversed all of Canada. It ended up making a recommendation, and following the recommendation which put that particular pipeline on hold. As it happens, the events have caught up to the pipeline. It now seems much less of an economic requirement. This might happen in the case of the Georges Bank as well.

The Bill establishes a model which might be used in the future with respect to the development of other resources and other conflicts that arise between industries. It is refreshing, and I must say unusual, to have the will of the people override the desire of large corporations to make more money. That is exactly what this particular Bill is dealing with, the desire of the industry to exploit the gas on Georges Bank, and it is against that group of people who think that perhaps it is not worth doing so. There are other examples of the use of resources to increase the value and the standard of living of part of the population. In some cases, that type of use of resources becomes worth-while. In other cases, development of resources can go in the opposite direction and do more harm to the population than good.

For example, in the development of its North Sea oil, Norway decided that the speed of development should be at the requirement of the country rather than at the requirement of the oil industry. Norway set a timetable which allowed the development to the extent that it did make for a real change in the life structure of Norwegians. Norway used the benefits from those resources to improve the lifestyle of Norwegians without a boom structure. The significance of that type of approach is very important, and it needs to be looked at and perhaps it can become a model for resource development or other industrial development in certain areas.

The previous speaker indicated that not only has it helped in giving opportunities to the fishermen and the people of Nova Scotia to decide on the direction of their lives and the type of lifestyle they want to live, but it served as an example to the United States. I have here a letter from possibly the next President of the United States, Michael Dukakis. He wrote to his Department of the Interior telling them that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts was extremely pleased that Canada was doing what it was doing, and suggesting that the United States take similar action in ensuring that the banks were not disturbed without knowing exactly what the effects would be.

It is refreshing to note that all political Parties here, and the two Parties in Nova Scotia, backed the idea and the Bill. I must express concern on the part of the fishermen that, although they appreciate the 12-year moratorium and the panel being put in place, they have a concern that at some time at the end of the moratorium drilling might start with the support and blessing of both Governments without an investigation into its effect.

We in the New Democratic Party also support the passage of this Bill right now.

Mr. Gerald Comeau (South West Nova): Madam Speaker, I take great pride and pleasure in saying a few words on this most tremendous achievement for the people of Nova Scotia, particularly the people of the western part of Nova Scotia which includes the south shore and South West Nova. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan), referred to the fact that it affected some 6,000 fishermen in Nova Scotia. It affects the 6,000 fishermen plus all the fish plant workers who depend on the products of Georges Banks, the lucrative scallops, the groundfish, and the lobsters that are caught in that area. There are hundreds of millions of dollars worth of landed fish values from that area taken on shore every year. Therefore, it affects thousands and thousands of people, for example, fish plant workers, cab drivers, and all the people who are directly and indirectly associated and dependent on the fishery.

It affects a great number of communities that I represent that have depended on the fishery for hundreds of years. In most of those communities fishing is all that they know, communities such as Argyle, Yarmouth, and Digby, and communities that I do not represent on the south shore such as Lunenburg, Shelburne, and Lockeport. All of those people can now rest assured that there will be no activity on Georges Banks involving drilling. After this Bill is passed those people will have a good nights sleep.

I wish to say a heartfelt thank you to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Masse) who had his ears tugged both ways. On the one hand fishermen and people like myself were approaching the Minister and stating that we do not want this to happen, and on the other hand the oil companies from the West indicated that they wanted to do some drilling on Georges Banks. The Minister had a difficult choice to make. There were no studies available that specifically stated that there should be no drilling. The Minister decided to do what was right. He went to southwestern Nova Scotia and communities such as Pubnico and Yarmouth. He met with the fishermen, and he met with people who depend on the fishery. He walked the streets of Pubnico and Yarmouth and talked to individual citizens and asked: "Should we drill on Georges Bank?" He received a resounding answer.

The point I am attempting to make is that the Minister decided not to listen to the people around him. He spoke to the people of the area. That is what is important. The NDP, the socialist Party, thinks that it has a monopoly on the concerns of people. That is not the case. The Progressive Conservative Party of Canada which now forms the Government is as concerned, and in some cases more so, because it actually takes concrete measures to go and meet with the people, and we are seeing the results. We are seeing the results of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources who was courageous and went against what would normally be called "the flow of things", and what would normally be called "the big company interest". He went with the people. The Minister showed leadership, and I certainly appreciate that leadership.

The Parliamentary Secretary referred to the previous Government's unilateral strategy of imposing a National Energy Program on the people of the West. I wish to remind my colleague, the Hon. Member for Calgary North (Mr. Gagnon), that the National Energy Program did much harm to his home province. Would he not feel the same way if people from Ottawa had gone to southwestern Nova Scotia and imposed a decision which they did not accept?

I wish to remind my colleagues from the West that sometimes the people of Atlantic Canada want to be a part of the decision-making process. The people of southwestern Nova Scotia have a great debt of thanks and appreciation to give to the Minister. On their behalf I wish to extend my full appreciation to the Minister and to his colleague, the Parliamentary Secretary, for having brought in this very significant and positive piece of legislation.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

ELDORADO NUCLEAR LIMITED REORGANIZATION AND DIVESTITURE ACT

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-121, an Act to authorize the reorganization and divestiture of Eldorado Nuclear Limited and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): There are three motions in amendment on the Notice Paper for Bill C-121, an Act to authorize the reorganization and divestiture of Eldorado Nuclear Limited and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, standing in the name for the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow). Motions Nos. 1 and 2 cause the Chair some difficulty procedurally.

[Translation]

The Bill and, more specifically, Clause 5 are concerned only with shares and voting securities of Eldorado Nuclear and not with other matters related to Eldorado Nuclear's operations. Therefore, although these proposed motions in amendment may be of utmost importance I must regretfully rule that, procedurally, they are inadmissible in that they go beyond the scope of the Bill.

[English]

Motion No. 3 is acceptable and will now be put to the House. It is in the name of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North.

Is there unanimous consent for the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) to move the motion on behalf of the Member from Winnipeg North?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (for Mr. Orlikow) moved:

Motion No. 3

He said: Mr. Speaker, this motion sets the date for coming into force of this legislation five years after proclamation. That, perhaps, is not too surprising because we in the New Democratic Party feel that a lot in this Bill is not the kind of development that should occur. Our preference would be not to pass the Bill at all. We would prefer that Eldorado Nuclear and the Saskatchewan Mining Corporation remain in public ownership rather than becoming a private corporation. There are good reasons for that preference. First, the corporation has not come to a satisfactory agreement with the workers regarding their pensions and other benefits. That in itself is a good reason to hold off the effect of this Bill.

As a resident of Saskatchewan I am against this Bill because Saskatchewan got a very bad deal by accepting a tremendous amount of debt and gave away part of the company that was worthwhile having. The economic benefits are being passed on to the private corporation. The direct benefits for sales, particularly in the case of the Saskatchewan Mining Development Corporation, are being lost to the public.

There are many reasons that we should not be doing what is being suggested in this Bill. There is a need in dealing particularly with uranium to establish standards for occupational health and safety for the workers. Those standards are much more likely to be established at a high level if the corporations remain in the public domain for at least another five years.

When the Saskatchewan Mining Development Corporation was established and when the uranium industry developed in Saskatchewan, two large corporations along with the Government went into the development of uranium mining in northern Saskatchewan. The Government kept the major portion of shares in those cases. When the surface rights were signed for those corporations there was a requirement that at least 50 per cent of the workers had to be native northerners. A New Democratic Government and a Conservative Government in Saskatchewan made fair attempts to meet that requirement, but in 15 years or so that requirement has not been met. At the time there was much public policy input into how these corporations developed.

Because we are dealing with uranium, and I suppose this is true with almost any resource development, there is a real need to develop long-lasting and effective environmental protection structures. There are special problems associated with uranium mining. Control is more easily developed by public corporations than by private corporations. The bottom line is too important to the private corporation which has a tendency to cut as many environmental corners as it can. That is a standard approach which has been a problem in other resource development industries and other manufacturing concerns across the country.

We need to be involved with the industry to some extent. We need a window on the industry to give us some knowledge about what is happening, where uranium is being shipped, how it is being treated and whether it is becoming more of an environmental problem. These are some of the good reasons that we think that it would be much better if this legislation were not put into effect for another 5 years.

Summing up all these disadvantages, one sees a clear reason for putting the legislation off. In fact, one wonders why the Government persists with this Bill at all. It is not a good Bill for the people of Canada who are taking on the debt of Eldorado and it is not good for the people of Saskatchewan who are taking on the debt of the Saskatchewan Mining Development Corporation.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I too am pleased to speak on the amendment standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) to the Government's legislation, which is to authorize the reorganization and divestiture of Eldorado Nuclear Limited and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

The reason we are in favour of a hoist on the proclamation of this legislation is that we believe that the Government has not really studied it. We believe that promises made by the former Minister of Privatization, the new Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mrs. McDougall), have not been kept. We believe that the native people of northern Saskatchewan are not adequately protected by this legislation.

I would like to spend most of my time speaking about the pension problem. In a statement earlier today, I pointed out that a promise made by the previous Minister of Privatization was that existing pension plans would be protected and would continue to exist. That promise has been broken by the corporation. In some briefings it gave to employees in the last couple of days, the new corporation has indicated that the status of the surplus in the pension plans will be distributed in such a way that the workers who are currently there will not have the same protection in the future as they have at this time.

The Minister made a direct promise in a press release. It was a direct promise that was again made by the company when it appeared before the standing committee of this House. Even before this legislation was brought back to the House for consideration at report stage, the companies announced that they have a new plan, which means that those people who are already retired will be protected and the surplus will be used to help them, but those workers who remain with Eldorado will not be covered by cost-of-living increases in the future, as would have been the case before the privatization.

I believe that for the sake of honour, the Government which made this promise when it said it wanted to privatize this company should look into what has happened in the last couple of days. As I indicated earlier today, we will not allow this legislation to go to third reading tonight because we want the Government to take this opportunity to investigate what we consider to be very serious charges which we made in the House of Commons earlier today. At 2.15 p.m. today, we made the Government aware of that intention. We believe it would be extremely foolish for this House to pass this Bill at report stage and third reading at this time without investigating this matter.

Time after time, those workers have been told that their present plan would be protected. That issue came before the committee as well. Motion No. 1 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North would have provided that any surplus in the pension plans of Eldorado and any subsidiary of Eldorado shall be used only for the benefit of current contributors and pensioners and their beneficiaries. We wanted in the legislation the protection that would ensure that that surplus would be used in such a way that those workers, past and present, would be protected.

The Speaker, in his good judgment, said that we could not introduce that motion because it went beyond the scope of the Government's Bill. It may be beyond the scope of the Government's Bill, and it may be technically out of order, but it does not go beyond the scope of the promise the Government made to those workers.

The use of surplus funds in pension plans is a very political issue in Canada. The employees, past and present, believe that they were promised that they would have the same protection now as they had before the effort to privatize Eldorado Nuclear. They believed that they had that assurance from the Minister. She said so in her press release, and she further stated it in a statement she sent to the employees.

This is an issue which deserves investigation. We cannot let this legislation pass until the Government has investigated this matter and assured the workers that that promise made by the Government will be kept.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, this is a very serious matter that my colleague, the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) has raised in the House. It is not a matter that is new to the House either.

Several years ago, amendments to the Pension Benefits Standards Act were before the House. In those amendments, there was no mention at all of what would happen to surplus pension funds, more adequately and properly called excess earnings of a pension plan. For that very reason, I moved an amendment to the Pension Benefits Standards Act at that time which would have guaranteed that any excess earnings of pension plans would belong to the pension plans and that no employer had the unilateral right to claim those excess earnings as if they belonged to the employer.

The argument I made at that time, an argument which I think still holds true today, is that a pension plan, like any other benefit that an employee enjoys in an arrangement with an employer, belongs to that employee because it is deferred wages. It is deferred wages in the sense that a group of employees in a bargaining unit enter into negotiations with an employer for a collective agreement and there are certain elements in that collective agreement whereby the employees agree that rather than accept money on a weekly basis in the way of salary increases, they decide with the employer's agreement to defer some of that salary to pay for other benefits such as benefits paid under private pension plans.

That argument is one with which employers generally do not agree because they tend to view these excess earnings as a benefit that comes to them as a matter of right. That is an argument I reject, quite frankly.

Several years ago, one of the largest grabs that was ever made to a pension plan was made by Conrad Black in the Dominion Store employee case. This gave rise to a number of court cases. It was finally concluded about a year ago, I believe, that some if not all of that money did in fact belong to the employees, and Conrad Black was directed to pay those moneys back to the employees. That was done for the very same reasons that I argued here. Those moneys in the pension plan belong to the employee. They are deferred wages that the employee passed up in order to secure a benefit under the pension plan and therefore belong to them.

In this particular case, as I understand it, the employer is doing exactly the same. There are surplus funds in this pension plan and there has been absolutely no discussion and no attempt at negotiating with the union on behalf of the employees as to how those excess earnings should be used. Should they be used to increase benefits under the plan? Should they be used to provide another and different benefit to the employees? Nothing like that has gone on.

I am sure that in the transition period there will be certain disruptions in the workforce. It would not surprise me at all to find that many members of that workforce with 25, 30 or 36 years of service may find themselves on a scrap heap, so to speak. They deserve better. While I make the key argument that surplus funds in any pension plan belong to the employees, I would not be adverse to the employer sitting down with the union and attempting to negotiate the disposition of those surplus funds. However, the option has to be there. The employer has absolutely no right at all to take those funds and use them in any way be wishes.

This is a very serious matter, and I agree with what the Hon. Member for Churchill said. This Party will not agree to third reading of this Bill tonight. The Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mrs. McDougall) gave assurances to those employees and their union that those surplus pension funds would be protected, therefore the Minister has some obligation to reassure those employees and the union that those funds will be used on behalf of the employees concerned. That must be done before we agree to third reading. That is the Government's obligation at the very minimum.

In addition, I think it is high time that we took another look at the Pension Benefits Standards Act and amended it to make it illegal for an employee to treat a pension plan in this manner. Both opposition Parties supported my amendment in the House to that effect, and it should have been done two years ago. If it had been, we would not be facing this problem today. Neither would these employees, many of whom have long service with the company and are entitled to much better treatment than they appear to be getting today.

Ms. Audrey McLaughlin (Yukon): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak to this amendment calling for a five-year delay in the coming into force of these provisions following proclamation.

As other Members have said, we would prefer that this privatization not take place at all. There are several good reasons for that, apart from the ones which have been spoken to such as pensions and protection of workers. Obviously, with the price of uranium today this is not a favourable time to be selling this company. To do so, the Government effectively has had to write off Eldorado's accumulated debt and excuse the corporation from anything but a very limited responsibility for the environmental clean-up. That is a very important issue and it should be studied and addressed more carefully over the five-year period that we are asking for in the amendment.

The environmental issues surrounding such industries as this one are extremely serious. We have just heard the results of the conferences held on the environment and the consequences of inadequate environmental protection. No longer, as we so clearly know, can one industry assume that the effect it has on the environment will not have important consequences, not only on local areas or a country but globally as well. Therefore, this issue really does require extended study.

Another area that I would particularly like to address is that of benefits to certain targeted groups. One thing that has been done, as a Member outlined previously, was an attempt to ensure that northerners and native people have access to these jobs. While it had not been accomplished totally, it was at least a principle that this Crown corporation was attempting to implement. I think it is clear to all of us that a Crown corporation can have somewhat more latitude in this area and should indeed operate not only with the principle of making a profit but also ensuring that the objectives of its policies, both economic and labour, are in the interests of the workers and the country in general. Certainly making a profit is important, but management should have as one of its principles the taking into account of these other factors.

We have the example of other industries. The limestone project in Manitoba is one where local employment has proven to be extremely effective. Local workers have been hired. We have concerns about this in my own riding where we see the impending sale of the Northwest Telephone Corporation. We are attempting to ensure that the 400 NTC jobs which currently exist in Whitehorse will remain. While that number of jobs in a large urban area may not be a serious consideration, certainly in the smaller areas where mines such as that of Eldorado Nuclear are located there is a need to ensure that workers have either the ability to be retrained or they have an opportunity to participate in the workforce.

Certainly this issue was raised by several groups when they appeared before the committee. The steelworkers, for example, raised some particular concerns when they said, "We have learned the hard way to be wary of mergers. In this case we have received half-hearted assurances that there will be no job loss as a result of the merger. Our members deserve more. They deserve an ironclad commitment that there will be no lay-offs as a result of the merger".

The steelworkers' proposal was that the new company employ a minimum number of jobs at each local, making allowances for the fact that obviously uranium mining is a cyclical business. This proposal for a five-year delay in implementation would allow for the kind of adjustment that may be necessary and would take into account the cyclical nature of non-renewable resource development.

It does seem, however, that the major privatizations tend to favour management rather than the interests of workers. Management no longer has to meet the objectives of a Crown corporation or even set an example in health and safety conditions which are particularly important and necessary in an industry such as this one. As I mentioned earlier, over the five-year period there could be much greater study on both health and safety standards for employees and environmental consequences.

In this particular industry and others similar to it there is often very high unemployment. We have already addressed the commitment of the Government of Saskatchewan, which in its focus on developing non-renewable resources in northern Saskatchewan really attempted to develop a model for the integration of aboriginal people and other people living in those more remote areas. As we have seen by that example, it does require a commitment and a plan. The circumstances which led to the Saskatchewan policy were clearly well planned out and well thought out.

The proposed amendment would allow time to deal with these important issues which have long-term consequences for the workers, the environment, and the industry.

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox—Powell River): Mr. Speaker, it is indeed a pleasure to have an opportunity to speak on this very important amendment before the House tonight. I hope the Government will be inclined to support it. The people of Canada deserve a chance to comment on this proposition in a federal election. The proposal to unload at a fire sale price into the private sector the uranium industry in Canada makes very little sense from the point of view of most Canadians. They should certainly have the opportunity in an election to comment on the Government's performance and this proposition.

The Government is proposing to, for some $250 million, sell off the assets of the merger between Eldorado Nuclear and the Saskatchewan Mining Development Corporation and then assume $600 million in debt. To any reasonable taxpayer this must be viewed as a red hot deal, except that the taxpayer is being stung.

Second, a massive clean-up of some 880 million cubic yards of material will have to be dealt with by the taxpayers at an estimated cost of between $250 million and $660 million. If we take the worst case scenario and add the $600 million in clean-up costs to the $600 million in debt which the taxpayers will assume, the taxpayers will be $1 billion in the hole. I, as a taxpayer, would certainly want to comment on this proposition in the next federal election.

Of course, the question is why the Conservative Government of Canada would want to do such a thing. The only apparent reason is a philosophical fixation that nothing in the public sector is any good, a philosophical fixation of the Conservative Party, which is truly a contradiction when it comes right down to it, that the Government is bad. They have spent a period of time since September of 1984 proving to the Canadian people how bad a Government can be. There has been a litany of catastrophes from that date forward.

The one before us tonight, wherein the Government is proposing that the assets of the corporation be sold off and its debt and liabilities be assumed by the taxpayers, makes no economic sense. I guess the Government would prefer to act in a manner which is consistent with the philosophy that this Government is bad and go ahead with it. It is, however, my hope that the Government will adopt the amendment before the House tonight.

Another reason that we should wait for the period of time suggested in this amendment is that there will have to be a major clean-up and the technology and the mechanism for carrying out that clean-up have not been worked out. With regard to making nuclear waste safe, some time should be taken and this property should be held intact by the Government until such a decision has been made.

Another aspect for consideration is that there is a substantial amount of money in the workers' pension fund which we suspect will be raided by the company. This legislation should definitely offer an opportunity to protect those funds for the workers.

The fourth aspect is that the uranium market is extremely depressed. The prospects of that market improving over the next five years are pretty remote. There is talk of uranium being depressed under $20 a pound. If it remains at that price over the next five years, there will be some serious difficulties in the economics of that company.

Undoubtedly in future the people of Canada will have to make a contribution to the survival of this industry if they wish to continue with it. The taxpayers will pay again, thanks to the Conservative Government. That payment will be made to individuals in the private sector rather than toward maintaining a public corporation.

It is surprising that the New Democratic Party is the only group in the House tonight that will take a position to try to defend the workers in this industry, to try to protect the pension plan of those workers. The New Democratic Party is the only organization in the House speaking out on the issue of nuclear safety. Tonight we are speaking on the rotten economics of this proposal put forward by the Conservative Government. It is surprising that other members of the Opposition are not attempting to defend the Canadian people against such an outrageous proposal.

The five-year amendment makes a lot of sense. If that amendment were in place, the first thing that would happen is an election. The outcome of that election is clear in the minds of most Canadians. The Conservative Party of Canada will not form the next Government. I hear the odd snicker and sounds of regret around me in the House. This is truly false bravado. It is very difficult for someone facing annihilation to be able to admit the faultiness of his or her ways, even in the eleventh hour.

To reflect on Canadian history, the time of the depression was very similar to the eleventh hour of this Government. At that time another famous Canadian Conservative, R. B. Bennett, led the country down the drain. In the eleventh hour he recognized the wrong-headedness of his approach and attempted to change it all.

Unfortunately, I do not think Members opposite would recognize the merits of the proposition in that amendment which would provide Canadians with a safety valve. Perhaps other Members who are coming into the House will rise to speak in support of this common sense proposal for a delay of five years before this legislation becomes law. Canadians need more time to consider this. I urge the House to support this very reasonable approach.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, the amendment that has been accepted by the Chair would defer the proclamation of the Bill for the privatization of Eldorado. There are other issues that we had hoped to address with our amendments but which have not been accepted by the Chair.

It seems that Eldorado did not realize the Bill had not been passed because in the last couple of days it has submitted a radical change in the pension plan of Eldorado employees, which at the very least is not in good faith in terms of commitments that were made by the company during the course of the discussions on privatization.

The Minister of State for Privatization indicated: "I can confirm that pensions are protected by this agreement". She said in her press release that existing pension and benefit plans would be adopted by the new company.

I am not sure what kind of games are being played, but the existing company, before being privatized and merged with the Saskatchewan company, is changing the pension plan radically. I cannot give all the details because we are only just absorbing them ourselves, but the detailed information which has been sent to the workers in the last few days gives them next to no time to analyse what will happen and judge whether or not Eldorado's proposals make sense.

It appears that in order to sweeten the deal as far as Eldorado's sale is concerned, the company will be allowed to strip $12 million in surplus from the existing pension plan. It is called a residual surplus. The successor company will be allowed to use that residual surplus to offset employee and employer contributions for approximately four or five years.

If I understand that correctly, it means there is a substantial sweetener which reduces the cost of acquisition of Eldorado when it moves into the private sector. My colleagues have already mentioned that this is not a good deal, at least for the taxpayers of Canada. In return for getting about $250 million, we are absorbing some $600 million in debt plus taking on the obligation for clean-up in Port Hope, which could cost another $200 million to $600 million.

The workers in the Eldorado properties in many cases are longstay employees who made a commitment to the company. They have been there for some 20 to 30 years and had been relying on an indexed pension. That was one of the benefits and one of the reasons they stayed with the company. Now, instead, they are being offered a number of different options.

I must confess that the information here would probably be Greek to an average pension consultant. It is certainly difficult for a worker in Saskatchewan or a worker in Port Hope to grasp easily. The workers are being told that they have an important initial decision to make about either a deferred pension option or an improved benefit entitlement option. In either case, they are becoming members of the new money purchased pension plan. The only option is how they dispose of their existing rights under the plan that have accrued in the last several years.

This has not been done with the consent of the workers. While the workers pay half the cost, the decisions are made entirely by the management of Eldorado. One commitment that was made was that the workers would be protected in retirement if there were serious inflation. Now they will get a money purchase plan. The company states: "When you retire, the money accumulated in your account is used to purchase a life annuity, a contract that guarantees that you will receive a regular monthly pension based on the amount of money in your account and the interest rates in effective when you retire".

This means that the pension of those workers on this new pension plan could be worth half as much as they expect, if interest rates happen to be low. If they strike it lucky, or the Bank of Canada squeezes the economy dry and interest rates become particularly high, perhaps they will do better and have a pension that is greater than they anticipated. However, that is not the kind of security people look to. When people retire, they do not want to play a speculative game of chance with their monthly pension. They want to know what their pension will be.

Furthermore, when the workers retire at age 60 or 65, hopefully their health will not be too badly eroded from the industrial pollution at Eldorado. Today, people can expect to live from 12 to 25 years after retiring at age 60 to 65. Even if inflation is at 4 per cent or 5 per cent, the value of the pension without indexing drops to half its purchasing power every 15 years. This means that the worker who retires at age 60 will see his pension halved in value at age 75. While their expenses for care, nursing, and so on will go up, the value of the pension will continue to drop if this money benefit plan is not changed.

In its haste to privatize Eldorado, the Government has broken faith with the workers of Eldorado. Perhaps the workers at Eldorado should have known, but the Conservatives have broken their promises on indexed pensions. The Conservatives, who have broken promise after promise to the Canadian people in the last five years, are breaking another promise.

The Minister of State for Privatization said that existing pension and benefit plans would be adopted by the new company. The new company has not even been formed, and the existing company is changing radically the kind of pension benefit plans that those workers had. Shame on the Government; shame on the Government for that kind of treatment to workers who have given their lives to this company. That is the kind of shoddy treatment people have come to expect from the Progressive Conservative Government.

In the course of the next election, the credibility of the Progressive Conservative Party and the Government will be first and foremost among the issues facing the Canadian people. They will want to know whether they can get a Government that has integrity and is honest and fair.

The few hundred workers at Eldorado who are affected, many other workers, and other people know that the Government can be judged on its treatment of the workers at Eldorado as much as it can be judged on its treatment of other people, such as the old age pensioners who were subjected to the threat of deindexed pensions in 1985.

I recall that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) promised exactly the opposite in the 1984 election campaign. He has eroded and degraded political promises to the point where a Small Claims Court Judge in Kitchener warned the public not to believe anything they hear from politicians. I must say that is unfair to the New Democratic Party. We keep our promises. The Progressive Conservatives have systematically broken their promises one after another. They cannot be trusted and in this Eldorado case, when they took away pension protection from the Eldorado workers in the course of privatizing the company, it once again demonstrated that this is not a Government which can be trusted.

Mr. Richard Grisé (Parliamentary Secretary to the Deputy Prime Minister and President of Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I listened with close attention to the comments of the Member of the socialist Party on Motion No. 3, the purpose of which is to defer the privatization of Eldorado Nuclear for five years. Firstly, the privatization of Eldorado Nuclear will be effected over a period of seven years. As far as privatization is concerned, the Bill itself stipulates that the privatization provisions will be applied over a period of seven years.

The policy of the New Democratic Party, as I understand it, is to make a decision today, but to apply it five years later. I would judge this to be a fairly unusual practice in management or administration.

Mr. Speaker, the Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) and the other Members of the socialist Party have also spoken on the importance of the employees' pension fund. They have said that the employees' pension fund was completely—that what was being done was disastrous.

[English]

With regard to the pension fund for the employees, Eldorado Resources Limited has sent special bulletins to the employees.

Mr. Cassidy: Could you explain it to them on the basis of that information?

Mr. Grisé: They have the option to take the pension they have earned to date in the current pension plan, which will be paid to them on their retirement, or to take the value of their earned pension benefit under the pension plan and transfer this lump sum to the Eldorado money purchase pension plan. I could go on. They have had some organized meetings. They had meetings in Port Hope on July 7 and July 8, Blind River on July 14, and in Ottawa on July 18.

We listened to the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) but he never listens to anybody but himself. He is such a great Member. He won in 1984 by a very strong majority of 32 votes, but we know where he will be after the next election. The words from the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre tonight are exactly the same as the ones he said about the privatization of de Havilland and Canadair. I listened to the western members of the New Democratic Party. They want to defend Saskatchewan.

Mr. Cassidy: What about defending the workers?

Mr. Grisé: How can you defend Saskatchewan? What happened with de Havilland? Was it bad for Toronto? What happened with Canadair? Was it bad for Montreal? Do you or do you not want something good for Saskatoon? The Member should go and tell the employees of Canadair and de Havilland that they have had a bad deal since they have been in the private sector.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker, once again it is quite clear that only . . . and I want to congratulate the Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) who supports privatization, and who earlier supported quite actively a bill concerning energy in Southern Nova Scotia. That is the type of Bill that will allow us to continue to help the Canadian economy and to obtain the assistance of the private sector; we have tangible evidence: take de Havilland, and Canadair, for instance. But of course, the socialist Party can only accept control by the state, by Shirley Carr, by Bob White.

Madam Speaker, they will only tolerate private enterprise in the Oshawa riding. For some strange reason, in the riding of Oshawa, private enterprise becomes acceptable, foreign investment becomes acceptable! But elsewhere in Canada, Madam Speaker, we are not to help private enterprise, everything must remain public to help the socialist Party progress.

Madam Speaker, this Government has put forth a valid privatization program that has provided exceptional results up till now, and we will continue to apply it; we will privatize Eldorado, we will privatize Air Canada, and people will have better service. Employees have better guaranties, there is more activity in private concerns, employees have better security, and we will continue our application of these programs.

[English]

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Madam Speaker, my remarks will be relatively brief. I have sat here tonight, on my duty night, in complete incredulity of the position of the New Democratic Party.

What does this motion mean? This motion means that the New Democratic Party is clearly against the Province of Saskatchewan. This Party has an opportunity to vote in favour of the establishment of the largest integrated uranium company in the world with headquarters in Saskatchewan. It should be ashamed of itself. This will not be forgotten by the electorate of Saskatchewan in the next election. What do its members say? I will summarize their argument.

They want to postpone this for five years. That has the effect of killing the deal. They know it and we know it. We are not bumpkins out in Saskatchewan. We understand from where the New Democratic Party takes their orders. The union leadership tells them where to march and they march, ready, aye, ready, as soon as their union leadership—Shirley Carr and the group—tell them where to go. Let me just simply tell New Democratic Party Members that they are not going to fool the people of Saskatchewan in the next election.

Mr. Cassidy: With the barons of Bay Street—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I am talking about promises. The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) is a man who makes promises. The man got up on behalf of the New Democratic Party and said: "Elect a New Democrat and we will move the frigates from New Brunswick to Montreal, ready, aye, ready". That is the New Democrats—ready, aye, ready when the union leadership speaks.

The people of Saskatchewan are not going to forget this. I am a great admirer of the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) who wants to run in the riding of Saskatoon—Humboldt. What has he to say to the people of Saskatoon when they are awaiting the head office of this new gigantic corporation to be opened? It is an opportunity for value-added, for us to take our natural resources and develop them under the control of the people of Saskatchewan.

What are they going to say about a Member who comes into this House and tries to crush this Bill and bring to a halt this new development for Saskatchewan and things that we want to do out West? We want to develop our resources and have control over our resources in a way which is fair and equitable. They want to hoist this for five years because they are concerned about the pension plan. This Party believes that everything should be run by the Government. They believe that Crown corporations should be established for every conceivable operation in this society.

Members of that Party are telling us that because Eldorado is carrying on a Crown corporation function, and there is some concern with respect to pensions, we as a Government should move in and have a heavy hand and a political influence on Crown corporations. J. S. Woodsworth would roll over in his grave if he heard these people talking now. Imagine. It is a terrible insult they are paying to the concept of Crown corporations which are supposed to operate in the public interest without political interference. Now all the New Democrats, Shirley Carr, and union leaders should say: "Political interference. We want to control everything in society".

I will now sit down because I think I have made my point. The New Democratic Party is against Saskatchewan. It is against the interests of the people of that province. Shame on them. This will be remembered.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Call in the Members.

And the division bells having rung:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 13(4)(a), I have been requested by the Chief Government Whip to defer the division until a later time.

Accordingly, the division on the question now before the House stands deferred until Monday at 6 p.m., at which time the bells to call in the Members will be sounded for not more than 15 minutes.

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-129, an Act to provide for the continuance of Air Canada under the Canada Business Corporations Act and for the issuance and sale of shares thereof to the public, as reported (with amendment) from a legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): There are 10 motions in amendment on the Notice Paper for Bill C-129, an Act to provide for the continuance of Air Canada under the Canada Business Corporations Act and for the issuance and sale of shares thereof to the public. I am now ready to make my ruling concerning the grouping for debate and voting.

The amendment contained in Motion No. 1 having been adopted by the legislative committee, the motion therefore will not be put to the House.

[English]

Motions Nos. 2 and 7 are acceptable and will be debated together but voted upon separately.

Motions Nos. 3 and 5 are in order. They will be debated together but voted on separately.

[English]

Motions Nos. 4 and 6 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) and the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) provide the Chair with some difficulty. That part of Motion No. 4 which attempts to insert a new paragraph (f) and Motion No. 6 may appear to go beyond the scope of the Bill, in that the Bill envisages the issuance and sale of shares of Air Canada to the public but does not delve into matters of what Air Canada itself may do with its shares, nor with what matters Air Canada should be required to maintain in the future. However, after careful consideration I have decided to give the Hon. Members the benefit of the doubt and allow the motions to be put. They will be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

[Translation]

Motions Nos. 8 and 9 are in order. They will be debated and voted on separately.

[English]

Motion No. 10 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North attempts to amend the title of the Bill. Paragraph 1 of Beauchesne's Citation 780 states that the title may be amended if the Bill has been so altered as to necessitate such an amendment. Nevertheless, I am not convinced that the Bill has been or, even if all the proposed amendments were adopted, will be amended in such a manner as to warrant a change to its title. Therefore, I will not put this motion in amendment to the House.

The House will now consider Motions Nos. 2 and 7.

[English]

Mr. Cassidy: Madam Speaker, I rise on debate on Motions Nos. 2 and 7. I regret your decision, although I accept it, not to allow Motion No. 10 to be considered. That was the motion which seeks to change the title of the Bill to the Canadian Public Ownership Termination Act. I felt that was particularly apt—

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): If I may, I now realize that the Hon. Member is on debate. It would be proper for me to put the motions to the House.

Both motions stand in the name of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North who is not in the House. Therefore I need unanimous consent for the motions to be moved by another Hon. Member. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): May I have an indication from the New Democratic Party as to who will move the motions?

Mr. Cassidy: I will, Madam Speaker.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (for Mr. Orlikow) moved:

Motion No. 2

That Bill C-129 be amended in Clause 6 by striking out line 27 at page 3 and substituting the following therefor:

"those votes to not more than five".

That Bill C-129 be amended in Clause 8 by striking out line 18 at page 7 and substituting the following therefor:

"shares of the Corporation up to a maximum of forty-five per cent of voting shares."

He said: Madam Speaker, these two amendments which have been grouped go to the heart of the Bill. The first amendment is designed to limit foreign ownership in Air Canada shares to 5 per cent of the voting shares instead of the 25 per cent which is being permitted in the proposal put forward by the Government.

The second amendment which is contained in Motion No. 7 asks for, in effect, a limitation of the number of shares which the Minister can sell or dispose of to 45 per cent. The reason for this amendment, if I can begin with it, is very simply that we are trying to keep the Government to its promises, even if only partly to its promises.

You will recall, Madam Speaker, that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) himself, after meeting with the president of the Québec Federation of Labour, back in January, 1985, gave assurances that Air Canada was not and is not for sale. In order to try to keep the Prime Minister from appearing to have failed to have spoken the truth, the Government decided to sell only 45 per cent of Air Canada, a decision which seems to me probably gives us the worst of both worlds. Madam Speaker, may we have order in the House, please?

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order, please.

Mr. Cassidy: The Government then decided that government shares would not be voted, but that effectively the owners of the 45 per cent of the shares that were to be sold to the public would be able to dictate the future of Air Canada, and there would be no voice at all for the 55 per cent of the shares left in public hands. On top of that, the Government designed a Bill which does not embody the 45 per cent pledge. Madam Speaker, with respect, the Hon. Member for Duvernay (Mr. Della Noce) insists on wishing to have the floor. I am not sure if the rules would give him the floor, but I would suggest that order be called again, or the Members who wish to have conversations take them somewhere else.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order. There are many conversations going on, and it makes it very difficult for the Chair to hear the Hon. Member who has the floor. I know that it is getting late, but the Chair would appreciate a little more discipline in the House, if at all possible. The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy).

Mr. Cassidy: I did not necessarily expect to have the full attention of members of the Government, but I was finding that your attention was becoming distracted, Madam Speaker, by these other conversations. As a matter of fact, I will speak to some of my friends from Québec.

I will speak to my friends of Quebec who are colleagues but belong to the Progressive Conservative Party. They supported the Bill which is aimed at selling 45 per cent of Air Canada shares but which will lead to total loss of control over the company because the shares held by the Government will not be votable shares, nor will they impart any sense of direction at all.

Madam Speaker, the proposition here was to make sure that at least the Government would not be allowed to sell off the whole company, that the sale would be restricted to 45 per cent of the shares. The oral promises of this Government inspire precious little confidence because they have so often been broken.

Madam Speaker, the credibility of the Government is on the line. Therefore we need legislation to make sure that if the Government says that no more than 45 per cent of the company is to be put on the block, then the sale of shares will indeed be limited to 45 per cent.

[English]

I would also point out that there is a very real danger that the control or the direction of the company will be taken by an American airline which will decide that Air Canada will become a junior version of Air America. There will be bases and maintenance in Canada and some type of head office operation in Montreal, but if 25 per cent of the ownership is allowed to fall into the hands of foreign owners, what is to stop a foreign airline from integrating Air Canada's operations with its American operations to the point where Montreal becomes a weigh station on a hub and spoke organization of air routes around Syracuse, New York, rather than around Montreal and Toronto; where Minneapolis or Denver become a spoke rather than Calgary or Edmonton? This is the type of thing that I fear we may see with the allowance of foreign ownership up to the level of 25 per cent.

Yesterday we saw the sell-out of the country by the Government in the free trade agreement that the Prime Minister struck with his good friend, Ronald Reagan. I note with interest that the last good friend of the Prime Minister's good friend, Edwin Meese, has resigned under yet another cloud of scandal and—

Mr. Grisé: A point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary on a point of order.

Mr. Grisé: Madam Speaker, I would suggest that the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) is straying far off the motion under consideration which has to do with the privatization of Air Canada.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Considering the danger that Air Canada may be Americanized because the Government's Bill provides that 25 per cent of Air Canada shares may be acquired by Americans, our amendment to Motion No. 2 sets a 5 per cent limit on the maximum number of shares which may be bought by foreigners and non-Canadians.

Madam Speaker, I am moving that specific amendment because this Government puts more faith in President Reagan and in all the Washington Republicans, it puts more faith in those people than in the men and women of Canada.

We New Democrats believe that Air Canada must remain under full Canadian control. It is a good company which has been providing outstanding service in this country for 50 years. As we see it, there was no need to privatize, particularly such inefficient privatization in terms of—we are not talking about a cat or a mouse—owing to the fact that only 45 per cent of the shares will remain in the private sector but that full control will be in the private sector.

What is the point of the Government hanging on to 55 per cent of Air Canada if it does not have the kind of managing authority which under normal circumstances any owner of 55 per cent of the shares of a company would have?

[English]

Those are some of the concerns that we were trying to address with this particular amendment. We want to take the Government at its word and ensure that, if the Government is not selling more than 45 per cent of the shares, there is a legislative assurance that the people of Canada will retain majority control. We as a Government would be prepared to use that majority control when we become the Government, which I hope will be in the next election.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Cassidy: I would say to my friends and erstwhile colleagues from the Progressive Conservative ranks, "look to your seat-mate because one of the two of you will not be in the House of Commons after the next election".

An Hon. Member: You won't be around.

Mr. Cassidy: I will be around, Madam Speaker. I undertake that Ottawa Centre will remain as a New Democratic seat, and I will stay there. The Liberal Party is so anxious that it has put two candidates up against me and it can only run one. It does not realize the old rule of politics.

I would also point out that the partial privatization, as its called for—

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Member for London Middlesex (Mr. Clifford) on a point of order.

Mr. Clifford: It is very clear that the privatization of Air Canada is something on which the Government has acted very wisely and the people of Canada and, most important, the employees of the firm want. I wish the Hon. Member would stick to that particular argument.

Mr. Cassidy: No one in the House, Madam Speaker, not even I, could recognize the intervention of the Hon. Member as a point of order.

Apart from the airline pilots, the unions at Air Canada representing the workers have not supported privatization. In fact, they have opposed the privatization. The only group that is for privatization is those workers whose average incomes are two or three times that of any other group of workers in Air Canada. They are entitled to their views. I believe that they should look at the situation of the sale and deregulation of airlines in the United States. In the airline industry it was thought that this might be a benefit to the employees. In fact, there have been sharp cut-backs in salaries and working conditions for the workers. Many workers have been laid off. Some of those airlines which have been around for 40 or 50 years have been merged and have now disappeared.

Mr. Clifford: Are you talking about Air Canada?

Mr. Cassidy: I am talking about the airlines that have gone through the process of deregulation in the United States.

Mr. Clifford: Let's talk about Air Canada.

Mr. Cassidy: I would point out that the same thing that happened to the airlines in the United States is what is liable to happen to Air Canada. The two British airlines now merged have together lost almost half of their workforce. I do not think the employees of Air Canada would like to see a sharp drop in jobs and job security or a reduction from jobs that currently are decent jobs to jobs that pay $7 or $8 an hour. The Conservatives may think that this country can prosper when every worker in the airline industry is paid $7 or $8 an hour. Workers at that salary level cannot buy goods and services. We are going to take our country down with this kind of proposal.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Member for Portneuf (Mr. Ferland) on a point of order.

Mr. Ferland: Madam Speaker, I feel the NDP Member is pushing a bit too far this evening, and shows no respect for Air Canada workers.

Air Canada workers clearly stated they supported privatizing Air Canada, they were all for becoming owners.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order, please. That was not a point of order. That was debate. The Hon. Member will have an opportunity to enter into it later on if he so wishes.

The Hon. Member's time has expired.

I now recognize the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Hudon).

Mr. Hudon: Madam Speaker, I would invite the Hon. Member opposite to join his group outside, those who oppose free trade, who walk around with small umbrellas, small chinese shoes, woollen socks, who oppose—

I am beginning to understand why last month Madam Speaker—this was one of the few Bills I kept for my election campaign—when an Hon. Member proposed to enshrine property rights into the Canadian Constitution, they all voted against that. They will have to explain that at some point in time, because that is what they are afraid of.

Those people are strict supporters of nationalizing almost everything. When he suggested earlier that private sector corporations, former Crown corporations that are now in the private sector, were thriving corporations, it is because they were feeding on Government money. They were feeding strictly on Government money, and today Air Canada as you very well know has come to a crossroads, because if it is to expand, it will need huge investments that will have to come from Canadians. That will belong to Canadians. But they absolutely oppose all private ownership. Very soon, we will have to ask them if they feel that even bank accounts or what-have-you should belong to the State.

Madam Speaker, those were recorded votes and all NDP Members who will run under that banner in Quebec will come and explain that to Quebecers. I will write articles on that, I will fight my election campaign on that. Common property belongs to all. They are here strictly to undermine other people's credibility, Madam Speaker.

There is a lockout in my constituency, at the Expro Company. For some four months an NDP backbencher has been simply destroying the credibility of that company, because they want it to belong to workers in order to do the same "ruddy" business. They are destroying—

Mr. Cassidy: And rightly so!

Mr. Hudon: Go and ask workers at the Expro Company tomorrow morning if they are ready for the NDP diversification plan. No way! They won't have any part of it. They are going to vote now to go back to work because a settlement is underway, and don't worry, you won't have them on your side. Because you have been undermining and wasting their livelihood day after day, without proving to the Secretary of State any of the allegations.

But you, because you speak in the House of Commons, you assume nobody is listening. In the end they will know what is being said in the House of Commons. They are not idiots. Expro workers are not idiots. Canadians and Quebecers who support private ownership are not idiots either.

Go and join your small Chinese shoe wearers opposite! Go out and shout for an election! We are ready to fight an election campaign on free trade.

[English]

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Madam Speaker, I want to say a few words on Motions Nos. 2 and 7.

With respect to Motion No. 7, let me point out that I can see the merit in the motion put forward by the Member from Winnipeg. In the announcement of the privatization of Air Canada, the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) said that only 45 per cent of the shares would be sold. This was trumpeted as being a headline item in the Government's announcement, yet we see nothing about it in the Bill. The Government is being somewhat hypocritical by saying in its announcement of Air Canada's privatization that only 45 per cent of the shares would be sold while in the Bill, which is the governing vehicle for the actual privatization, there is nothing mentioning that all.

With respect to Motion No. 2, the motion is not exactly as stated by the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy). The amendment as put forward does not actually refer to the percentage of shares to be held by non-residents. That is in another subclause of the same section. The amendment mentions when the voting takes place and how many non-resident votes will actually be counted.

I can sympathize with the position taken by my colleague from Ottawa Centre. However, our Party feels a definite obligation to the Government in one particular way. The Government did not include any provision in this Bill originally to indicate when the votes take place at annual meetings of the corporation how many non-resident votes will actually be counted.

The situation is that 25 per cent of non-government votes of Air Canada could be held by non-residents. The problem is that at an annual meeting the 25 per cent held by non-residents could be 50 per cent or more of the actual votes that would be cast at the annual meeting.

My amendment to the Bill in Motion No. 1 provides that at the annual meeting of the corporation no more than 25 per cent of the votes actually counted would be non-resident votes. This means that at the most only one-quarter of the votes counted at an annual meeting can be votes of non-Canadians. It prevents non-residents actually winning the day at the meeting. Because the Government agreed to that motion, I feel we are honour bound to go along with it. We feel it may not have been the best provision but it is one the Government accepted. It is somewhat in keeping with the provision in Bill C-121, and it is much better than not having the motion at all.

In that regard we feel the Bill has been improved considerably. Therefore, we are not going to ask for a further amendment.

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox—Powell River): Madam Speaker, the debate has certainly taken an interesting turn tonight. Before we head out we should recognize that Air Canada is one of the finest airlines in the world, one of the safest, and one of the best to fly. It is a source of enormous pride to Canadians. That probably resulted in the statement by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) that Air Canada was not for sale. It is certainly with regret that I as a Canadian and other people now find that it is on the block. Air Canada is on the block in a very difficult way, in a way that many people do not understand. There is an option for Americans to purchase it as well as other non-residents.

There is quite a long history to privatization of Air Canada. When the previous Government was in power, a committee studied the deregulation process in which the privatization of Air Canada came up and was quite widely supported by that Government. Things have now come full circle. The present Government now intends to sell Air Canada. In my opinion this Bill should have been called "an Act to make Max Ward happy" or "an Act to make PWA happy".

Throughout the history of the discussion of the privatization of Air Canada it is key that no other airline can operate effectively in this country unless it hobbles Air Canada. It is such a powerful, effective competitor in the market-place that it dominates the airline business in this country. People who have been here for a number of Parliaments have heard airlines protest that they must hobble Air Canada to get a fair share of the market. The sale of the shares is a very disturbing item and that is what this amendment comes to. This very prestigious airline was built by the people of Canada and operated on behalf of the people of Canada. It is internationally recognized as a tremendous airline. This airline is now up for sale. Instead of being held by all Canadians, it will be held by a small number of Canadians. In fact, a majority of the actual controlling shares could be held by Americans, and that is extremely disturbing. It does not make any sense.

I would urge the Government to reconsider its position. What is the point of selling those shares in the United States market and jeopardizing the control of that airline? This must be stopped.

The other irrational aspect of this sale is that 45 per cent of the shareholders, not the 55 per cent owned by the people of Canada, could wind up being very closely held shares. Those closely held shares could in fact control the company. I wonder what would happen if others who have interests in other airlines in Canada were to purchase substantial blocks of those shares. Again, that would make a very interesting proposition that has to be considered.

What is the state of Air Canada? Air Canada is a very large airline. It has a great mix of airplanes. Canadian Airlines International rationalized its fleet into DC-10s, 737s, and a new 767. However, Air Canada will likely have to cut back on airplanes. It will likely have to rationalize its equipment and downgrade it so that it can reduce its enormous stock and its costly overhead and training programs.

Of course, the end result of that in private hands will be an enormous loss of jobs. That will happen, whether it will mean fewer people in the cockpit or fewer people doing maintenance on a limited variety of aircraft. Indeed, this will become a very lean airline. It only makes sense that if it is cut free in the private sector in a deregulated environment, a lot of people will lose their jobs. That is the reality of the structure of the airline.

What is the market in which the shares will be held? Air Canada will be competing in the private sector against two other major airlines as well as many regional airlines. It will have trouble selling the shares. The employees may want to buy them, but look at the stability of the situation in which they will be buying them. This Parliament will change and it will be a very different Parliament after the next election if we read the trend of the polls correctly. I suspect that there will be a majority of Members in the House who will want Air Canada held as a national carrier. The people who are buying shares in that kind of environment will be very concerned about the stability of the shares.

Market conditions for airlines change. The fluctuation in the number of people flying is enormous. As interest rates go up, profits will be eroded. Airline travel will drop and there will be fewer people flying, fewer profits, and a great deal of uncertainty. Those shares will be likely to drop substantially in value when they hit the market.

Another area of concern is the directorship of Air Canada. I personally believe that this Government has hobbled the Board of Directors of Air Canada and has limited its ability to function rationally in the airline market-place. I think it has inflicted great harm on that company to date, and I along with other people certainly regret that.

Again, the prognosis is that the airline will cut its number of aircraft, it will cut its routes, it will cut its employees, and it will cut its inventory. Down the road, we will see a much smaller operation with a great number of people losing their jobs. Again, this airline will lose its position as Canada's national carrier, and it will lose its position and reputation in the world community.

The Bill before us tonight is downgrading a thing of great pride to Canada. It is turning a major public asset and utility into the hands of very few people, to the detriment of the transportation system of Canada and indeed to the detriment of Air Canada's reputation.

Ms. Audrey McLaughlin (Yukon): Madam Speaker, Air Canada has served this country for over 50 years. It has been an extremely reputable airline, as the Hon. Member who spoke previously said, and it has certainly provided a standard in aviation services to which many of its competitors have aspired. More important, Air Canada has been a symbol of a public commitment to the provision of air service to a country which has a very diverse geography and through which air travel is extremely expensive and difficult. Air Canada certainly was the pioneer.

It is with sadness that I participate in this debate today. I do not think Air Canada should be privatized nor do I think any part of it should. This rather peculiar arrangement of having 45 per cent of the shares sold and 55 per cent held by the Government is not necessarily one which, in my view nor in the view of my Party, will serve the interests of Canadians.

The two motions before us now are obviously attempts to preserve some integrity in this Bill at least with regard to Air Canada's shares. The motions deal with the percentage of shares that can be held by non-residents, as well as with the percentage of shares to be disposed of in the public market.

On the matter of foreign ownership, it is extremely concerning that not only is this a move by the Government to privatize this airline but in fact it is a move to de-Canadianize it in a very specific way. It de-Canadianizes it by allowing the number of foreign-owned voting shares to be up to 25 per cent. This motion proposes that that figure should be reduced to 5 per cent to prevent the eventual takeover of Air Canada by non-residents.

The Government has indicated that 45 per cent of Air Canada's shares will be sold and that the remaining 55 per cent will be voted passively by the Government. In essence, the shareholders of the 45 per cent will dictate to the 55 per cent what will be done. The 25 per cent of foreign-owned or non-resident owned shares will be a part of that 45 per cent. Clearly, it is not in the interests of Canadians to have our national airline, the people's airline, controlled by foreign interests.

The 25 per cent limitation exists because, as I understand it, that is the limit the United States puts on foreign ownership of its airlines. However, the 5 per cent proposed in this amendment would be reasonable and would greatly improve upon this legislation, because it would ensure that we do not run the risks that were outlined in committee by Professor Fred Lazar, a transport economist at York University. He pointed out several areas of concern. Eventually, with the high percentage of non-resident ownership, we could see diversions of flights that might serve particular areas of Canada.

As we have seen with deregulation in the United States and as we are beginning to see in Canada, a diversion of services is often a diversion away from the less profitable areas, the more remote areas of Canada, those areas where air transport in some cases is essential or in some cases is the only mode of transportation. That would be the case for some of the far northern areas.

Those of us who live in more remote areas of Canada are very sensitive to the possibility of seeing the principle of serving the entire country including more remote locations undermined by having control taken away from the public sector and also by having potential control over the airline by non-residents who would obviously not have the interests of Canada—

Mr. Redway: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. As the Hon. Member knows, the Bill deals with the privatization of only 45 per cent of the shares of Air Canada and 55 per cent will be retained by the Government. Therefore, the comments of the Hon. Member with respect to foreign ownership and control of Air Canada are completely out of order and irrelevant to the issue at hand. I would ask you to rule that the points being made by the Member are out of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In a Bill as complex as this one a ruling on the question of relevancy is rather difficult. Many Members have spoken on different aspects of the Bill, and I am sure that if the Hon. Member wishes to enter debate and disagree with what an Hon. Member is saying, he can do that a bit later.

Ms. McLaughlin: Clearly, Madam Speaker, what is being discussed here is the incremental aspect of a percentage of foreign ownership. The motion clearly suggests that this potential would be drastically reduced if the percentage were reduced to 5 per cent of the shares. That is the crux of the argument. I well understand, as I have already said, that it refers to the 45 per cent of the shares held by the public.

Another aspect of this Bill that I would like to comment on is Section 8 which leaves the percentage figure as it stands now entirely open. It could be 1 per cent or 50 per cent. The amendment would hold the Government and subsequent Governments to the promise that only 45 per cent of the shares would be sold. Of course we heard initially that Air Canada was not for sale. Now half of it is for sale or it will be partially privatized, but what is important about our amendment is that it simply confirms the statements the Government has already made. The 45 per cent would be specified in the legislation.

If the Government is going to control actively its 55 per cent as proposed and place its majority of directors on the board, then Air Canada's management will still have to respond to the public policy agenda I referred to earlier, which most Canadians want from a Canadian airline that serves all areas of the country. Unfortunately, I feel that under privatization we are going to lose that.

I think it is extremely important that this House think carefully about what is being done both in limiting the amount of foreign ownership, as Motion No. 2 proposes, and in specifying the 45 per cent public ownership in the Act as well. Therefore, I urge this House to support these very reasoned amendments.

I suppose for most of us they are second choice amendments because they are still directed to privatization. However, they would greatly enhance the Bill and ensure that at least some part of Canada's airline would remain under control of its people.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Madam Speaker, one of the difficulties with duty night is that I have to sit and listen to representatives of the NDP. Do people understand what they are saying here tonight? The Liberals used to have a truth squad. Maybe they would like to reconstitute that organization to follow the NDP around. These people are giving out misinformation. When I am not on duty I can get up and shut off the television and do important work, but here I am on my duty night faced with a steady diet of these people telling us untruths.

Let me just set the record straight. What is this whole thing about foreign ownership? Let me understand what they are saying. Possibly we can get these people into a little seminar and bring in someone to explain the provisions of the Act. A maximum of 25 per cent can be foreign owned under privatization. Where is the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), the transport critic for the NDP? I am sure he would bring this to their attention if he were in the House. Airlines in Canada must be controlled by Canadians.

What is the basis of this amendment? They talked about the idea that somehow this privatization poses some threat to our national airline. Quite the contrary. This privatization will ensure a stronger, more vital airline to serve all Canadians. This has nothing to do with whether it is owned by the Government or the people of Canada. We will still have the same strong airline.

Mr. Skelly: Point of order, Madam Speaker.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The truth somehow affects New Democrats in a very strange way.

Mr. Skelly: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Chair could instruct the Minister that giving misinformation in this House is a very serious matter. When he uses the facts and figures that he is using, that is misleading the House. With 25 per cent, a single American purchaser would control the airline under the terms laid down in the legislation. Could the Minister please give the correct information in the House?

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I think the Hon. Member is starting to debate again, which he did very artfully a little earlier today. He might want to do it later but this is debate.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Madam Speaker, I want to get on to the question of safety and the NDP suggestion that somehow privatization will negatively affect the safety of airlines, specifically Air Canada, I suppose. What kind of suggestion is that? Are they not aware of the fact that this Government brought in revisions to the Aeronautics Act? Are they not aware that for the first time in 62 years this Government updated and brought into legislation brand new regulations for all airlines?

Mr. Skelly: On a point of order, Madam Speaker, this is again a matter of a reputable member of Cabinet providing Members of the House with precise information. The new regulations are in effect, but the Government has cut the staff of people who enforce those regulations and the industry is not safe—

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): That is a joke.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): My comments are the same as they were 30 seconds ago.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Madam Speaker, I never correct the Chair, but you said something about an artful intervention. I do not believe it is artful; it is an intervention purely and simply without foundation.

I want to point out to the Hon. Member and the House that all airlines are controlled by rigorous regulations under the Aeronautics Act. This is not a question of privatization. That is totally irrelevant to the question. I would have thought that the NDP, who march to the orders of union leaders in this country, would want to listen to the employees of Air Canada, members of unions. They are overwhelmingly in favour of this Act. They understand the flexibility, the new dimensions, and the new opportunities it gives the company.

Canada is not acting alone in its privatization program. The socialist friend of the New Democrats, Mr. Mitterrand in France, presided over a substantial number of privatizations. I did not hear New Democratic Party Members standing up on statements and motions, beating their chests, and denouncing President Mitterrand and the socialists in France for not stopping the privatizations in that country. Why the double standard?

We are trying to do something sensible and reasonable here. We should defeat these amendments with alacrity, if not sooner.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Madam Speaker, I always thought it was the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Crosbie) who told jokes in this House.

The intervention of the Minister was rather remarkable, but not in a very favourable manner. First, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) said that Air Canada was not for sale. After a few years he decided that that promise was no longer operative and said that they would only sell 45 per cent of it. This Minister has now stood in the House and said that if only 25 per cent is foreign owned it does not mean that it is foreign controlled. If we trust the Prime Minister's word, only 45 per cent is going to be sold. If 25 per cent can be foreign owned, by most people's mathematics five-ninths of the shares that will be offered to the public could be in the hands of a foreign group. The Government itself has set up this arithmetic.

In addition, the Government has said that for the time being the 55 per cent that will remain in the public domain, again if we trust the Prime Minister, will be in a silent partnership, that it will follow the lead of the other 45 per cent.

I realize that the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) has never been the Minister of Finance, probably for good reason. Perhaps the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) can get up later this evening and explain why 25 per cent is not a majority of 45 per cent and why that 25 per cent cannot do as it wishes with the shares it has. The problem of the poor Minister of Justice is probably that he has not done very well in math over the years.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: It was my best subject.

Mr. Murphy: That is something I would not admit. The Government is trying to pretend that what it put in the legislation and what it said to the public are not what it put in the legislation and what it said to the public. It is obvious that foreign domination of Air Canada will be possible. The Government has set that up by its very statements. That is very obvious to anyone listening this evening. Why would the Government pretend otherwise? Why would the Minister of Justice try to pretend that that is not what is in the legislation and that that is not the result of the various ministerial statements, including those of the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) and the Prime Minister on this very important issue?

We are putting our amendments forward and explaining why they are important to us. We know full well that our amendment provides for the limitation of foreign ownership to 5 per cent. We do not pretend that it says anything else, yet the Government pretends that what it has in the legislation is not there. There is something very sad about that approach.

It is very logical to me that, if the Government means what it says and is going to allow only 45 per cent of the shares to be privatized, as the Prime Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister have said, it should say it in the legislation. We believe that the legislation should say what the Government says it means to do.

We find it very ironic that every attempt of the New Democratic Party to put the words of the Government into legislation is refuted by the Government. Is it afraid of its own words, or does the Government once again not mean what it is saying? Three years ago it was not selling any of Air Canada. Now it is selling only 45 per cent. However, it will not allow that to be put in the legislation because it might be forced to live up to its word.

We are trying to help the Government by putting the words of the Prime Minister, the Deputy Prime Minister, and the Minister of Transport (Mr. Bouchard) in the legislation. Our position is that we do not want to privatize any of Air Canada. However, we recognize that due to the numbers in this House the Government will eventually get its way on this legislation as it does on most. Therefore, we at least want the safeguard of having in the legislation that which the Government has promised.

We feel the same way with regard to foreign ownership. We have been assured that there will not be foreign control of Air Canada. The Minister of Justice has just used his convoluted math to explain why there will never be foreign control. Yet, the very fact that 25 per cent of the shares would be allowed to go into foreign hands means that there would be effective foreign control. Again, if the Government means what it says, why does the legislation not say that?

The pensioners heard one thing in the 1984 election campaign, and the Minister of Finance broke that word only a few months later in the spring of 1985. One must wonder whether the pensioners would like to see legislation which contains what the Government says. They would have loved to have seen the promise made during the 1984 election campaign that the Conservatives would not deindex the old age pension in legislation. They know that less than nine months later the Minister of Finance, with the support of the Prime Minister, broke that promise.

Earlier tonight we dealt with legislation dealing with the privatization of Eldorado. The workers of that company were told by the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mrs. McDougall), the then Minister responsible for privatization, that they would not lose any of the pension benefits they had before Eldorado was privatized. Only two days ago we received information that that was no longer the case, that the new corporation would not guarantee the pension benefits which workers had prior to the privatization despite the words of the Minister of the Employment and Immigration.

Motion Nos. 2 and 7 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) are in amendment to the legislation to privatize Air Canada and do not attempt to do something revolutionary. We are only trying to ensure that the Government lives up to what it said, that there will be no more than 45 per cent privatization and no foreign control of Air Canada. I find it amazing that the Government is afraid to put into legislation the words it has uttered in this House.

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Madam Speaker, I am pleased to have an opportunity to support the amendments moved by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow). Air Canada exists for a very good reason. One does not have to fly from Newfoundland and Labrador to Victoria to understand why Air Canada exists. It exists for exactly the same reason as the CBC. It is one of the structures in Canada that is necessary to hold the country together and provide services which would not be available to Canadians if it did not exist.

Canadians understand that perfectly. Not long ago I had an opportunity to travel to Sydney and Cape Breton. I was quite surprised to learn that there was no longer an Air Canada DC-9 service from Halifax to Sydney. Instead, I believe there was a Dash-8 service in its place, which creates horrendous problems for many Canadians with mobility difficulties. I thought there was unanimous agreement in this House that no Member on any side of the House wanted to see a reduction in services for disabled Canadians. A key issue which arose in the Special Committee on the Disabled and the Handicapped and was reflected in the recommendations made in the Obstacles report that Members on all sides of the House supported was that it was absolutely demeaning for an individual who required a wheelchair to gain access to an aircraft only to have that access by a fork-lift truck.

Mr. Redway: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. This is the debate on report stage, not second reading debate on the principle of the Bill. I hope you will draw the Hon. Member's attention to that fact. His remarks should be relevant to the amendments before the House rather debate on the question of principle that was dealt with at second reading.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I realize that the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) has sent a message to everyone in the House. However, the Chair has been fairly lenient tonight as everyone has gone a little beyond the scope of the motions.

However, I would still ask the Hon. Member to keep his remarks as close as possible to the motions before the House. The Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young).

Mr. Young: Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) has made so many interventions that he may as well have made a 10-minute speech. The House would have found that to be of much more value than his interventions.

I believe I am talking to the amendments because they clearly indicate that if they are not accepted by the House, the privatization of Air Canada will mean a reduction of services to Canadians. There is absolutely no question in my mind that if this Bill is not amended according to these proposed amendments reduction in service will occur. I believe my comments are entirely relevant. Of course, I accept your admonition that I should be a bit careful in order not to attract the wrath of the Hon. Member for York East, but I think the problems that this Bill will create without those amendments will mean tremendous hardship for a substantial number of disabled Canadians who require a wheelchair in order to have accessibility.

I have no idea why the Hon. Member for York East would object to our talking about the problems that that segment of the population will face if these amendments are not adopted by the House. Furthermore, the refusal of these amendments will also affect the issue of the one fare policy that has been with the Government for some time now. That is a policy whereby the CTC made a commitment to allow an individual who was unable to travel alone to have an attendant travel with him for the price of one fare. I suspect that this policy issue is being held up by the CTC because it wants to see this Bill passed. I further suggest that without the adoption of these amendments I doubt very much we will see that policy established at Air Canada or any other air carrier in this country.

I repeat that Air Canada exists to be a unifying force across Canada. If it is privatized, I suspect that management will cut out routes that may not be profitable because they cannot make a dollar. That will affect many communities in Canada.

The other day I spoke to a person who told me that it was more expensive to travel from Toronto to Newfoundland than from Toronto to Florida. Air Canada told me that it was more expensive because the volume of people travelling between Toronto and Florida was greater than from Toronto to Newfoundland. When management begins making decisions based on private enterprise rather than on public policy, one can well imagine what will happen to airline traffic in many communities that are now served by Air Canada because other private operators will not service them.

According to Angus Reid polls the majority of Canadians support Air Canada. As a matter of fact, the figures are quite dramatic. Angus Reid found that 63 per cent of Canadians believed Air Canada was well run, as opposed to 20 per cent who thought it was not well run. The same kind of popular support applies to CBC for exactly the same reason. The CBC is a unifying force in Canada and provides a service to many communities that is not provided by private networks.

The Hon. Member for York East asks about Canada Post. Seventy-two per cent of the respondents said that Canada Post is not well run. Angus Reid did not need to ask Canadians about that. He could have simply asked Members of Parliament, who would tell him that Canada Post is not well run.

Mr. Skelly: The Tories are running that.

Mr. Young: The Tories are running Canada Post. Imagine what will happen with Air Canada.

Mr. Redway: They run Air Canada too. That is why it is so popular.

Mr. Young: I want to give the Hon. Member for York East an opportunity to give us the benefit of his wisdom rather than sit there chipping away at other Members. I am sure the Hon. Member for York East will want to look good back home and, given the nature of his constituency, will want to be critical of what the Government is trying to do to Air Canada. If he knows what is good for him, in the next election he will oppose what the Government is trying to do to Air Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Madam Speaker, I wish to speak on the two motions now under discussion, No. 2 and No. 7, which deal with the percentage of Air Canada shares that the Government could sell and with the percentage of voting shares that could be held by non-residents, respectively.

Madam Speaker, with respect to the amendment proposed by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North limiting the shares that the Government could sell to 45 per cent, I wonder why the Government Members did not agree right away to this amendment, since it is in complete conformity with what the Deputy Prime Minister said in documents issued by the very Government presenting this Bill, saying that the intention was to sell only 45 per cent. If that was the intention, why not put it in the Bill? Madam Speaker, this is all utter hypocrisy. Because the Leader of this Conservative Government had promised not to privatize Air Canada, he had to find some way to get out of his commitment without losing too much face. And what did they find? They came up with this discrepancy between the Bill and the press releases. The press release said that it would be only 45 per cent and for that reason, the Prime Minister could say that he did not lie to the people, he did not privatize Air Canada, he only sold 45 per cent. But the Bill presented by this Government allows the Minister to sell 100 per cent. So I would just like to ask the Government and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) to put their money where their mouth is.

If it is true about the 45 per cent, why don't they put it in the Bill? And if it is not true, why not admit it? Anyway, Madam Speaker, I think this whole debate about 45 per cent of private ownership versus public ownership, as well as the 5 per cent vote instead of 25 per cent, is a tempest in a teapot, because this Parliament and this Government have presented and passed on second reading Bill C-130, where it is said in section 8, and I will read it to you, Madam Speaker, in order to show you how foolish this Government is. Section 8 of Bill C-130, passed on second reading, says:

> 8. (1) Notwithstanding anything in any other Act or law, in the event of any inconsistency or conflict between
> (a) this Act, or any regulation made under this Act, or the Agreement, and
> (b) a provision of any other Act of Parliament or of any regulation within the meaning of section 2 of the Interpretation Act, other than a provision as enacted or amended by Part III or IV of this Act . . .

Mr. Grisé: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I am sorry . . . The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary on a point of order.

Mr. Grisé: Thank you, Madam Speaker. We have no doubt that the member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) can read at a relatively fast pace. But I don't see why it is relevant here to read sections of Bill C-130 on free trade, an excellent Bill by the way, initiated by our Government, in relation with amendments 2 and 7.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): If the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary can be patient, I am sure the Member for Laval-des-Rapides will show us the connection.

Mr. Garneau: Because the length of speeches is limited to 10 minute maximum, Madam Speaker, we have really very little time to say anything. However, if the Hon. Member paid very close attention and followed my explanation which may be a little difficult for him to understand, I suppose he could see the connection between what we are doing and what we are debating, even the unamended clauses in Bills C-129 and C-130. The clause I have just read is practically a constitutional clause which invalidates any legislation which may have been passed before this one, so that when Bill C-129 is read a third time and finally adopted, we might as well throw it into the waste basket, because clause 8 of Bill C-130 which was given second reading and which is now in committee invalidates all provisions which might be inconsistent with other adopted legislation.

Madam Speaker, Part IV which amends the Foreign Investment Review Act will allow investments up to $150 million in 1992, and the Government will not be able to control these investments. Because the equity of Air Canada may vary, in view especially of the very complex indexation formula, this could reach much more thant 25 per cent of the total shares of the new privatized Air Canada which could be held by non residents. So the Government, both in Bill C-129 and the legislation concerning Eldorado which was considered earlier, is pulling our legs, because this other legislation will erase all that.

They showed great understanding for Canadian interests by saying: There are clauses in there—the clause which limits to 25 per cent the number of votes by non residents, and a little later, as soon as they pass the steamroller on Bill C-130, they will stand up and say that all these clauses meant absolutely nothing. Madam Speaker, the House should adjourn as soon as possible to prevent this Government which has no respect for the basic values developed in this country over the past 100 years from making further blunders such as this.

Mr. Grisé: Madam Speaker, I would like to make a few comments on what was said by members of the socialist Party and my colleague the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau). The Hon. Member for Comox—Powell River (Mr. Skelly) said that, in the event of privatization, Air Canada would lose its pride. We were also told that . . .

[English]

There will be a loss of jobs. I would like the Hon. Member for Comox—Powell River (Mr. Skelly) to remember what the NDP said. The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) is in the House right now; he is the greatest Minister of Finance that Canada has ever had or will ever have.

An Hon. Member: What about Mr. Crosbie?

Mr. Grisé: When the Minister of Finance issued his first Budget, the NDP said that we would lose 200,000 jobs in Canada with the first Conservative budget. Well, so far the Government has created 1.3 million jobs.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

. . . 1,300,000 jobs, and that's not all, Madam Speaker.

Those who say that privatization of Air Canada will lead to a loss of jobs should also refer to previous cases of privatization. How many jobs were lost at de Havilland, Canadair and Bombardier?

An Hon. Member: Good work, Richard, you're getting on their nerves!

Mr. Grisé: That's privatization, but the socialists are against it.

The Liberal-NDP coalition is slowly emerging. It is a wonderful sight, Madam Speaker.

The National Transportation Act states very clearly:

[English]

The National Transportation Act requires an airline to be 75 per cent Canadian owned and to be Canadian controlled in order to obtain a licence.

The National Transportation Act clearly states that Canadian airlines must be 75 per cent owned by Canadians.

I was listening earlier to the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) who is having some trouble with his calculations since he figured out that 25 per cent of 45 per cent of shares is five-ninths. I don't understand how . . . Since the Minister of Finance and a finance critic are in the House, they could maybe explain to me . . .

[English]

How can 45 per cent be a majority? It would come up to five-ninths like the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) said a few minutes ago. I have a little problem with that.

An Hon. Member: That is only one of your problems.

Mr. Grisé: You have more problems than I do. I am not talking to you, Madam Speaker. I am talking to the Member for—

An Hon. Member: That is unparliamentary.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Maybe the Hon. Member was not speaking to me, but he should.

[Translation]

Mr. Grisé: Madam Speaker, I will continue to address my comments to the Chair, of course . . .

Mr. Gauthier: In a more clever fashion, I hope.

Mr. Grisé: I beg your pardon. Especially after the day we went through yesterday, going third reading, to Bill C-72 which remains an historic event and one which all the people in my riding of Chambly support just as the Bill authorizing the privatization of Air Canada.

I was listening to NDP Members . . . Madam Speaker, I am not allowed to refer to this—but how many of them attended the legislative committee on the privatization of Air Canada? Did they hear the comments made by Air Canada management? Did they hear the comments made by Bob White's colleagues? Of course they heard of them, Madam Speaker—but they didn't really hear them, they read them, because all the comments made by the socialists in tonight's debate are a rehash of the comments made by the representatives of certain unions and Bob White's allies on the subject of the privatization of Air Canada.

On the other hand, no mention is made of the Air Canada Employees' Committee on Share-Buying which appeared before our Committee. And how many of them are in favour . . .

Some Hon. Members: Name them!

Mr. Grisé: . . . they have confidence in their Parliamentary Secretary, Madam Speaker, which is why Ministers can get away from their job.

[English]

The Ministers have confidence in their Parliamentary Secretary being able to manage the House for the time remaining.

[Translation]

No, no, he's a good guy. The Member from Châteauguay (Mr. Lopez) is an excellent MP, of course, just like the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark), the Minister in charge of political functions on the South-Shore and in the Montérégie region.

I could also make a few comments on motion No. 7 in the name of the Member from Winnipeg.

[English]

The motion as presented is defective. The corporation issues shares and, once issued, by definition 100 per cent are owned by the shareholders who purchase them. This is the case whether 10 shares or 20 million shares are issued. To be operative the motion would have to identify a specific group to which the limit would apply, i.e., for example, non-residents.

Madam Speaker, I would also like—when they talk about the famous 25 per cent they forget to mention that this is 25 per cent of shares not held by the Government; we are not talking about 25 per cent of all shares but 25 per cent of unheld shares. In other words, 25 per cent of 45 per cent. Not bad, it works out to between 11 and 12 per cent. So it is very unlikely that anyone holding 11 per cent of the shares would gain control over a company. Is that what they are trying to tell us?

One thing for sure is that the socialists are scared stiff of foreign investment. They will not have foreign investment . . .

[English]

No foreign investment in Canada, except in Oshawa! There can be hundreds and millions of dollars in foreign investment, U.S. investment—what a shame for the socialists—but it is not welcome in Canada, except in Oshawa!

Mr. Cassidy: The Hon. Member wants to sell Air Canada to the Americans.

Mr. Grisé: With respect to Motion No. 2, what could result is that 25 per cent would be owned by non-resident interests but only 5 per cent of the shares could be voted. Therefore, non-residents would be denied the fundamental right of share ownership, the right to vote.

Madam Speaker, in both instances I strongly suggest that the House reject these two amendments.

[English]

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Madam Speaker, I have a couple of words to say with respect to the motions before the House. I do not know why the Government will not accept the principle of these amendments. As the representative of the Official Opposition pointed out a few moments ago, they represent only what the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) had promised. It was only what the Government had promised prior to the announcement that we see in this particular legislation.

We have to be very careful of the Government of Canada. It is comprised of the very people who said: "No, no, we are not going to sell Air Canada". It is just like they said that they would not close down the Newfoundland railway. They also said: "We are not going to do anything to all your marine services in eastern Canada". Yet, what did they do? They introduced a Bill similar to this one here today creating Marine Atlantic.

We were not careful enough when that Bill went through. We were not careful enough because now, today under Marine Atlantic, one cannot even get a cabin crossing the Gulf from Newfoundland to North Sydney, Nova Scotia. The reason for that is that there is not one on the boat. One has to be very careful when one deals with a Bill presented by the Government of Canada, especially when we talk about shares, controls over what happens to a Crown corporation, and what happens to the service after it is disposed of.

The Government has sold the hotels that one could stay at. It has closed down the Newfoundland railway. It is selling the tracks to Venezuela. It has changed the CN service to Newfoundland so that there is no ferry in the middle of the night. It is now selling the telephone company. It is selling Terra Nova Telecommunications.

The Hon. Member here in the back will also be able to say that it is selling the telephone company in northwestern Canada on bids. This is a part of the privatization policy of the Government of Canada with no concern for the people using these services at all. There was no Bill introduced into this Chamber with respect to selling the telephone company. It just passed it along to some friends it might have in CN and said to CN: "You select some people to sell the company concerned". What does one do? The company cannot be rolled over within three years. In other words, it cannot be sold within three years by the successful bidder.

That is no protection at all for the communities or the people who are using that particular service. That is quite a record, is it not, Madam Speaker? It closed down the railway in Newfoundland. The tracks are being transported, presumably, to Venezuela eventually. It changed the marine service so one cannot get a cabin on the night crossing. It has sold the hotels that one used to stay at. That was all done within a four-year period. It is now selling the CN telephone company. We now have a Bill before the House which would authorize the sale of the airline company.

What else is there left to sell? The Government has sold everything in the air. It has sold everything on the ground. It has sold everything on the water. After it has sold the telephone company. What is there left to sell?

The people of Canada will make sure that with the next election there will be no more sales by this Government.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Madam Speaker, I wonder if I could ask whoever is representing the Government House

Leader at this point to tell us what the legislation will be for tomorrow. I understand that there has been some change in the proposed legislation to be offered by the Government already this evening. If I could have some information, it would be helpful to all sides of the House.

So if the Government spokesman would give us some information concerning the House business for tomorrow we would be very grateful.

Mr. Grisé: Madam Speaker, I take note of the question of the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray). I will immediately advise our Deputy House Leader and he will be getting in touch with the House leaders of the other Parties at the earliest opportunity.

Mr. Prud'homme: It does not make sense!

[English]

Mr. Cassidy: I rise on a matter of privilege. I want to say how my privileges have been expanded and enlarged in the House tonight by the unusual presence of spectators from all across Canada who came to see us in action, and I want to say "thank you" to them.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre is not new to the House and should know that the Speaker is the only one to recognize people in the gallery.

Mr. Lewis: As I was about to say before I was so rudely interrupted, we have discussed matters with Members respecting Bills that are very important to the West. Tomorrow we will do the appropriate stages of Bill C-92, report stage; Bill C-131 to committee; and Bill C-112 to committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It being 10 p.m., I do now leave the Chair until tomorrow at 10 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that a message has been received from the Senate informing this House that the Senate has divided Bill C-103 into two Bills as Bill C-103 Part 1, an Act to increase opportunity for economic development in Atlantic Canada, to establish the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency and to make consequential and related amendments to other Acts, and Bill C-103 Part 2, an Act to establish the Enterprise Cape Breton Corporation and to make consequential and related amendments to other Acts and . . .

[Translation]

. . . and that it has passed Bill C-103, Part I, without amendments.

[English]

For the benefit of Hon. Members, copies of the two parts of Bill C-103 are available at the table.

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wish to address a brief point of order to the Message from the Senate. I advise the House that the Government, and I think every Member in the House, should take exception to the proceedings in the other place which are reflected in the message you just read.

First, the message which you have just put before us contains not the Bill that this House voted to send to the Senate but two Bills by virtue of the fact that the Senate split the Bill. To me, that means that there are two Bills originating in the Senate rather than one Bill being sent to the Senate and a reply being sent back addressing the one Bill.

There are financial provisions in the Bill that was sent to the Senate. I suggest that it is unconstitutional for the Senate to send Bills to us which have financial implications.

I suggest that the Royal recommendation which was contained in the original Bill sent to the Senate has been breached by the Senate majority. I also suggest that the Senate amendment to split the Bill, by not having an accompanying recommendation which is a constitutional impossibility, breaches our Standing Order 87 which states that the Commons alone can grant aids and supplies, not the Senate.

I ask you, Mr. Speaker, in your position as our Speaker, to indicate in a ruling, if you will, your position on this matter. It is no longer hypothetical, it is very real. If you would do so, the minute you do so, we will then be guided by your wisdom and will be in a position to take action in the House.

That is the procedural argument. I cannot let this go without saying that I feel that it is not beneficial to Atlantic Canada to have the Senate interfering in this way. The Western Diversification Agency deals with four provinces and it was passed by the Senate as one piece of legislation. This piece of legislation deals with the Atlantic Provinces and the Senate is excluding one particular area. For that reason, we are unable to go ahead with the legislation.

I think that what the Senate has done is an affront to Atlantic Canada. It is an affront to the House of Commons. I think it is an affront to every taxpayer in Canada. I ask you, Sir, to rule on this as soon as you can.

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, the affront to which the Deputy House Leader referred has been made by the Government, not by the Senate. This Government tried to attach to a Bill that was to be primarily for the financing of important regional development projects in Atlantic Canada a portion that had absolutely nothing to do with the development of the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency. The Bill for the development of the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency is for the development of the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency and should not involve any other subject. Yet the Government put in a completely separate section to do away with the industrial development division of the Cape Breton Development Corporation. That was completely separate from what it wanted to achieve with the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency.

This is an affront to Atlantic Canadians. The Government chose to put a rider on the financing of the projects that Atlantic Canada deserves. It said that if Atlantic Canada wants this Bill, then it has to do away with the development division of the corporation. That is not fair. The people of Atlantic Canada cannot accept that rider because it is devastating to an area that needs assistance most of all.

The Government said that if the development division is done away with another agency will pick up the slack. That is not the case. Yet the Government maintains this Bill should not be separated. The Bill has to be separated because it is two separate subjects. It is not a question of new financing for the development division provisions at all. We are doing away with that division. The Government is not providing something new, it is doing away with it.

Mr. Boyer: It has already been passed as a single Bill in this House.

Mr. Speaker: I am going to ask the Hon. Member to complete his remarks in a moment, but I want to make it very clear to Hon. Members and the watching public what I have been asked to do here. A Bill has gone from this place to the Senate. The Senate, for whatever reason, and it is not my place to comment on that, certainly not at the moment anyway, has decided to split that Bill. That, I understand, is historically speaking unusual to say the least. What I need to know from Hon. Members is their argument as to whether it is procedurally appropriate for the Senate to do so. I have been asked by the Government to comment on whether or not it is procedurally appropriate to accept a split Bill back from the Senate, and I would like some argument directed to those two points.

I am not saying at the moment I have any particular opinion on it one way or another except to say this is certainly something unusual. The Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys could perhaps help the Speaker.

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, it is perfectly acceptable for the Senate to split this Bill.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. MacLellan: What the Senate is saying is that it wants the people of Atlantic Canada to have the benefit of the provisions governing ACOA.

Mr. Boyer: What is your procedural argument in support of your position?

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, if we are going to have the nincompoops howling, I am not going to be able to make the point that you want made.

Mr. Speaker: Without necessarily accepting the description of the Hon. Member, I will ask other Hon. Members to be quiet and hear the Hon. Member out.

It seems to me that because the Bill originated in this place, the question of whether it should be accepted back as split by some other place is the issue I have to face. The substantive arguments, which I know are very important to Hon. Members on both sides, are not helping the Chair very much.

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, I think essentially the principal point here is that there is nothing in this Bill which has come back to the House that was not in it when it was passed by the House initially. Nothing.

Mr. Boyer: Then why split it?

Mr. MacLellan: The Senate wanted to send back the provisions relating to the title of the Bill. The benefit intended under the Bill has not been changed in any sense. All the Senate has done is delete the portions related to the Cape Breton Development Corporation which have absolutely nothing to do with the spirit of ACOA. Nothing whatsoever. It was a complete red herring. It was an attempt by the Government to try and piggyback the destruction of the development division of the corporation onto this Bill, believing that Atlantic Canada wants regional development assistance so much that they would accept the devastation of the corporation as well. It was a catch-22 situation that the Government tried to perpetrate on the people of Atlantic Canada.

The Senate is saying that we should call it what it is, a Bill for the development of ACOA, nothing more. The provisions governing the spirit of the Bill have not been violated. All that has been taken away is the clandestine aspect of the Government's intention to devastate the Cape Breton Development Corporation.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I agree with the sentiment of the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) with respect to what the Senate is trying to do and the concerns that the people of Cape Breton have over the Government's ill-conceived move. Having said that, I must state that we cannot accept any move by the Senate to fundamentally alter legislation in a procedural way which destroys the ability of this House of Commons to make decisions.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Murphy: Despite the applause from across the way I am going to continue.

If the Senate is allowed to do this, we could be stuck with legislation in the future where the Senate has decided to split it into 15 or 20 or 30 different pieces in a way that would completely hamstring the House of Commons and democracy. I suggest to the Speaker that the Government should just move back to its original Bill, have the motion come back to the House, and then send it back to the Senate again.

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley—Hants): Mr. Speaker, I could not agree more with my hon. friend from Churchill (Mr. Murphy). I am absolutely amazed my hon. friend from Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) whose geographical base has obviously blinded him to any sense of reason. The House of Commons makes the laws. We democratically decide to put things in Bills or remove things from Bills. We had Bills here yesterday which did not find favour with all Members. This is the House of Commons and these things are done here. We do not go to the place down the hall and hide behind the skirts of the Senator from "Lake Anno", or whatever you call that lake up there in Cape Breton. I am just absolutely shocked as a Nova Scotian that this could happen. I was hoping that the ACOA legislation would be in place before the bureaucracy and administration has to close down and thus put in jeopardy many of the applications which will provide jobs in Atlantic Canada. That is what will happen if the Senate keeps playing tic-tac-toe with Bills from this House, especially this Bill.

I have the highest respect for my hon. friend from Cape Breton personally, but for him to stand here on a Friday morning and suggest that the Senate can do anything with the Bills that this democratically elected place sends it and then hide behind the skirts of the Leader of the Liberal majority, the Senator from "Lake Anno", was too much. I could not believe my ears.

Obviously the Hon. Member for Churchill is completely correct. We do not accept something back from the Senate in a half-baked way. Let MacEachen play his little games. His myopia over Devco has put in jeopardy the whole ACOA program for Atlantic Canada and even he should not be able to get away with it and we should not condone it for one more minute.

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, I have no objection to supporting the Hon. Senator from the other place up by the lake, but I certainly would not want to support the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley—Hants (Mr. Nowlan) who, as evidenced by his arguments, is up the creek.

The arguments of the Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) and the Member for Annapolis Valley—Hants go to the very foundation of the Parliament and the Constitution of this country. When the Constitution was first developed it called for two Houses of Parliament, the House of Commons and the Senate. The Senate was set up to look after the regions of this country. The seats in the Senate were allotted in accordance with the regions of the country.

There is no better example of the Senate acting in the interests of a region of this country than the Bill which we are presently discussing. To say that the Senate cannot split this Bill is to say that the Senate cannot act for the regions of the country and that the Senate and Senators from Atlantic Canada cannot act for Atlantic Canada. To say so would be in violation of the Constitution of the country.

Mr. Speaker: I will ask the Hon. Member to assist the Chair further. Is the Hon. Member saying that having split the Bill, as the Senate has apparently done, this House must accept it in the split form? Is that the suggestion?

Mr. MacLellan: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I am saying that this House does not necessarily have to accept the second portion. However, I submit that the House should accept the portion which has been returned to the House because it is in complete agreement and complete fidelity with the intention of the Government in proposing this Bill initially.

The Government presented this Bill in order to set up the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency. That has not changed. The provisions relating to the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency have not changed one iota. All the provisions which the House passed have been returned intact by the Senate. The intention of Bill C-103 was to provide the vehicle for the operation of the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency, and that has not been changed.

What has been taken out of the Bill is the clandestine attempt by the Government to jeopardize and devastate the Cape Breton Development Corporation, which was not the original intention of the Bill. That is not a fundamental principle of this Bill.

Whether the House should accept the second portion, if there is a second portion returned to the House, remains to be seen. That depends upon the content of that second portion, upon whether that second portion relates to the Cape Breton Development Corporation. We will not know that until we see that second portion. However, this portion is in complete agreement with what the Government intended when it presented this Bill to the House of Commons and I think it should be accepted.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member. The Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby).

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West): Mr. Speaker, I will begin by reflecting on your own suggestion to Members of the House that this was a matter of process and procedure, that is to say, we have to be certain that the proper procedure was followed in the House and in the Senate in dealing with the Bill approved by the House of Commons. I will address that point and then indicate how it reflects on other points.

When the Bill was before the House of Commons Members of this House, including the Members in the Liberal Opposition, and especially the Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan), had the opportunity to seek the approval of the House for any amendment they wanted to make to the Bill. If Members of the Opposition in the House of Commons, or indeed government Members, thought the Bill dealt with two separate matters, thought the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency ought to be separated, they could have taken the appropriate action. If they had taken such action it would have been voted upon. The answer would have been given in this House of Commons and the House of Commons would have spoken on the matter.

The House of Commons, having approved the Bill in that form, having decided that it dealt with one and the same matter and was in proper form, presented it to the Senate. What right do the people in the other place have to say to this House of Commons: "You have done the wrong thing, you have not followed proper procedure, you have not followed the processes of Parliament"?

Obviously, Mr. Speaker, those in the other place do not have that right under any statute of which I am aware, including and especially the Constitution of Canada. They are exercising a political judgment which is not given to them to exercise by the Constitution of Canada. I am as shocked as is my colleague from Annapolis Valley—Hants (Mr. Nowlan) that the Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys would endorse that political action by the Senate of Canada.

He sought the vote of the people of Cape Breton. His colleague, the bard of Lake Ainslie, did not. He elected not to seek the vote of the people of Cape Breton to send him to the House of Commons. He opted to accept an appointment to the Senate of Canada. Yet, he still wants to govern and influence policies of this House of Commons from that place. It is time he was exposed.

You have to deal with processes and procedures and with the technicalities, Mr. Speaker, but you should know that behind this is the ill motive of people in the other place who seek to undo the work of this House of Commons. They seek to destroy the initiative of the Government in developing the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency and a similar agency for industrial development on the Island of Cape Breton. They are jealous of that initiative and seek to destroy it. They are hiding behind technicalities which you, Mr. Speaker, must reject out of hand.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys for a final reply.

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, in reply to my friend from Halifax West, the Senate is not seeking to destroy anything. The Senate is taking the provisions of this Bill which relate to the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency and putting them in a Bill which relates to the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency and does not include other subjects. It is putting in a separate Bill the subjects which were inappropriately and wrongfully included in this Bill, those subjects relating to the Cape Breton Development Corporation.

We have seen in the portion of the Bill that has been returned to the House that the sections relating to the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency have not been changed, amended, or in any way misconstrued. How can that possibly be construed as changing the Bill? It has merely put it in the form in which it should have been originally.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether, through you, I could pose a question to my friend from Cape Breton—The Sydneys who says that there has been no change, that they have just divided the Bill. The Member fully appreciates the state of this House and fully knows what happens to Bills when Houses are dissolved.

We have been thrown back from the Senate and Lake Ainslie a Bill which has split the two functions of one Bill which we have democratically passed. That will cause delay in getting the Bill concluded, passed, and proclaimed in order that we will have a legislative framework to do what the bureaucrats are doing now and which is being put in greater jeopardy the longer it remains without a legislative framework. If we move on one part of the Bill and leave the other half alone and this House dissolves, does the Hon. Member not believe that could result in a fundamental legislation change?

If the Bill is divided to deal separately with Cape Breton Corporation and ACOA, and the House dissolves, the legislation will be fundamentally dead. My friend is trying to pretend that that is not a fundamental change to a Bill that was passed by a majority of this House.

Mr. Speaker: Ordinarily, the Chair probably would not extend this discussion any longer, even though a very experienced and much respected Member has asked to put a question to another Member through the Chair. However, this is a unique and very interesting point. I will exercise my discretion and hear the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys, but very briefly.

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your latitude in this matter. The Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants has asked a very important question. The answer is straightforward.

The Government presented a Bill to set up and structure the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency. The Senate studied this Bill and considered the intent of the Government to set up this agency. It took that portion of the Bill relating to the agency, dealt with it very quickly and returned it for consideration of this House as fast as I think could possibly be expected.

The Government wants to set up the agency. Presumably, it wants to help regional development in Atlantic Canada. It now has the portion of the Bill that will accomplish that. Nothing has been taken from the Bill that would frustrate the Government's wishes in that regard.

I think the Senate has acted responsibly. We will adjourn shortly for the summer and the Senate has given us that portion for passage. I think it has acted very responsibly.

Mr. Gerald Comeau (South West Nova): Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief. I served on the committee that travelled throughout the East Coast of Canada. We went to St. John's, Newfoundland, Cape Breton, Halifax, Summerside and New Brunswick. Throughout all the meetings, one Liberal showed up in St. John's, Newfoundland, to hear from people of St. John's. We went to Cape Breton. One Liberal—

Mr. MacLellan: A point of order.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for South West Nova may be relating events exactly as they occurred, but I think I am anticipating the point of order of the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys when I say that I must point out that that is going beyond the procedural matters I have to consider.

I will consider this matter very carefully. I believe there are several issues I have to consider. One is whether or not it is even for the Speaker of the House of Commons to rule on what takes place in the Senate. The second is to look carefully at the obligations of the Speaker in a case like this with respect to the integrity of legislation which is passed in this place and leaves here for the Senate. I will be considering carefully the implications of a situation in which it was acceptable for the Senate to split Bills that leave this place after the Government and this place have decided to deal with them in the form in which they were presented.

The Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys has put forth a vigorous argument on the substantive aspects of the situation. Those are arguments that no doubt took place here and may take place again if this place is considering the Bill further.

However, I have to consider the procedural implications of what the Senate is trying to do.

The Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley-Hants raises a very interesting aspect. It is one thing for the Senate to split a Bill in half, but if it can split a Bill into pieces and this House has to deal with it in that form, the effect on the time that would be taken is, of course, clearly evident.

Those are matters that I shall consider. I will return as quickly as I can to try to give some guidance to the House. I thank all Members for their interventions.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Thursday, July 7, consideration of Bill C-129, an Act to provide for the continuance of Air Canada under the Canada Business Corporations Act and for the issuance and sale of shares thereof to the public, as reported (with an amendment) from a legislative committee, and on the motions of Mr. Orlikow:

That Bill C-129 be amended in Clause 6 by striking out line 27 at page 3 and substituting the following therefor:

"those votes to not more than five".

That Bill C-129 be amended in Clause 8 by striking out line 18 at page 7 and substituting the following therefor:

"shares of the Corporation up to a maximum of forty-five per cent of voting shares".

Mr. Speaker: I should advise the House that we are debating Motions Nos. 2 and 7. I will recognize Members for debate.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to speak to Motions Nos. 2 and 7. There is no doubt that Canadians want a national airline. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) knew that before the last election when he said that Air Canada was not for sale. The drafters of this Bill also knew that is what Canadians wanted because the Bill only allows 55 per cent of the shares to be sold.

However, the Government is using smoke and mirrors and trying to play a shell game with Canadians. While the Government will keep 55 per cent of the shares, it will vote in accordance with the wishes of the 45 per cent private shareholders. Furthermore, 25 per cent of those private shares could be controlled by foreigners, leaving a real possibility that Air Canada could be controlled by foreigners.

Consequently, Motion No. 2 seeks to establish that foreign ownership of Air Canada shares be limited to 5 per cent rather than 25 per cent. The Government has only mentioned 45 per cent, and Motion No. 7 would require the Government to put that figure in the legislation so that we know what it means.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The question is on Motion No. 2 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The question is on Motion No. 7 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 14(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

• (1040)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The next two motions are numbers 3 and 5. They will be voted on separately. May I have consent that the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) can move the motions for the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow)?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (for Mr. Orlikow) moved:

Motion No. 3

That Bill C-129 be amended in Clause 6 by striking out line 34 at page 3 and substituting the following therefor:

"sauga, which centres shall maintain their staffing levels equal to those attained in the 1987-88 financial year; and".

That Bill C-129 be amended in Clause 6 by adding immediately after line 37 on page 33 the following:

"(f) provisions specified that the six bases for Air Canada flight attendants at Montreal, Halifax, Calgary, Winnipeg and Toronto be maintained with the staffing levels of each equal to those of the 1987-88 financial year as a minimum standard."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure if it is possible by consent to add the word Vancouver in Motion No. 5 but there was a drafting error when this motion was submitted. I would like to at least register the fact that the amendment was intended to refer to the six bases for flight attendants at Vancouver, Montreal, Halifax, Calgary, Winnipeg and Toronto that should be maintained. Only five were specified whereas the number six was used. It would be understood that the amendment was intended to include Vancouver as well.

The purpose of Motions Nos. 3 and 5 is to seek to be more concrete about guarantees with respect to employment and to the bases for flight attendants. We have been told the 55 per cent government shares will not be voted but will be passive, and, therefore, the decisions will be made by the new private owners. Under those circumstances even though there is a reference to the maintenance bases in Winnipeg, Montreal and Mississauga being maintained, there is no guarantee that the employment at those bases will be maintained.

The airline is now anticipating the large purchase of new airliners. It is understood those may well be Airbus planes from Europe. If that is the case, not only do we not know whether there will be any Canadian production as a part of that or a condition of that would be the case with Air Canada being publicly owned, but there is a strong likelihood that the maintenance requirements will shift. It is quite open to Air Canada to keep five or six mechanics with a couple of wrenches working in Winnipeg and say that is the Winnipeg maintenance base, basically shut it down and concentrate the maintenance in Mississauga or in Montreal upon the purchase of these new airliners.

At the very least, reference to the maintenance bases is made in the Bill but with respect to the bases for flight attendants there are no provisions at all that those bases be maintained.

We know, for example, that Canadian Airlines International, formerly CP Air, has closed its flight attendants base in Montreal. Canadian Airlines International is shifting its base because of the view held in the airline industry that Montreal is not a good place to have attendants based. It may be more efficient just to have flight attendant bases in Vancouver and in Toronto, but it also means that the prospects of working for the national airline, if it is privatized, will be best for people living within 75 miles of Toronto or Vancouver.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, this may particularly affect young men and women in Quebec who want to work for Canada's national airline, Air Canada, but who will find that they will be asked to move to Toronto or Vancouver. If we want Canada's national airline, Air Canada, to continue to reflect the variety and diversity of our population, including the fact that we are a bilingual and bicultural country, it will be much more difficult if Air Canada decides to shut down its flight attendant base for the men and women who work on its planes. That also concerns us.

[English]

It was suggested yesterday, and wrongly, that the unions are supporting the privatization of Air Canada. That is not so, Mr. Speaker, except for the pilots who have indicated some support and who belong to the smallest of the unions representing workers with Air Canada. It is also the case that certain employees have talked about the possibility of shares, but that is on the understanding that if Air Canada is to be privatized they would have as employees a chance to have some share ownership. That does not mean that collectively they want Air Canada to be privatized.

I have the brief submitted from the Canadian Automobile Workers representing some 3,200 employees. They note that Air Canada has already been trying to replace $14 an hour Air Canada employees having 20 years service with brand new $6 an hour employees for its non-unionized regional carriers. Many of the CAW employees are ticket agents and most of them work at reservation offices in airports and communities across Canada. These people are good, efficient, and part of the very fine service that we have come to expect from Air Canada, 75 per cent of whom are women. The contract they have has no provisions for job security and there are no provisions for job security in this Bill. They are worried that Air Canada has plans for base closure but as long as Air Canada is a public airline, and in danger of public outcry, it would back off. If Air Canada is privatized, they suspect that many of these bases will have reduced levels of service. As well there is the prospect of unstable schedules and loss of income to the community.

The machinists union representing some 7,000 or 8,000 workers, 8,500 in maintenance, ground service and accounting are also categorically opposed to this move. They found it particularly repugnant that Air Canada's senior management has been running a million dollar campaign to convince its employees, the members of the union, of the dubious merits of privatizing Air Canada. For all the money and effort Air Canada is expending, all it can offer its workers are big promises and equivocal denials.

The third union is the Canadian Union of Public Employees. CUPE represents some 3,500 flight attendants at Air Canada. They will be affected if Air Canada decides to closes the flight attendant bases. They say that they stand opposed to Bill C-129 and its underlying philosophy and say that it is bad legislation and bad policy.

On behalf of those three unions, Mr. Speaker, I am not sure how unequivocal or how much more definite they can get. For members of the Government to say the employees want that is simply not the case. With respect to job security, which is the issue addressed in one of the two amendments we are debating right now, CUPE points out that while some maintenance bases are guaranteed, there is no guarantee of the volume of work or the number of jobs at the maintenance centres. A private board of directors is in no way restrained by Bill C-129 if it decides to transfer large numbers of employees from its Montreal or Winnipeg bases to Toronto. This is inevitable as Air Canada decides to buy aircraft of a completely new generation from a different manufacturer.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, it is even possible that half of the Montreal maintenance base will be shut down and that the work will be transfered to the Mississauga base close to the Pearson Airport in Toronto.

[English]

For flight attendants, there are no guarantees in the legislation for any of our bases. As one New York based investment analyst has said, it is only a matter of time: "Eventually Air Canada will have to address the question: Does it need as many employees as it has?"

Just as has happened with British Airways, Air Canada employees who run a good, efficient airline, a profitable airline and a competitive airline are saying: "What is going to happen?" We will get American style airline management coming in, bottom-line management, cut, chop, slash maintenance bases stripped of everything except their name possibly in Winnipeg and in Toronto, flight attendant bases being shut down and the level of service being degraded overwhelmingly. The Americans, 10 years after doing it in the United States, are saying that their service is worse. People are fed up with the delays and the quality of service which is much less. The same thing is likely to happen here.

When the unions oppose this deal, when they seek guarantees on behalf of their employees they are trying to maintain a quality of service to which Canadians have become used. Anyone coming back from the United States knows what a pleasure it is to return here and what a pleasure it is to have the standards of quality and service that we have on Canada's airlines, both public and private. People know that is something worth valuing rather than something to be thrown away the way the Government is doing.

I very much hope that these amendments which are designed to preserve not just job security but quality of service for the passengers of Air Canada will attract the support of members of all Parties.

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak in support of these two motions. This is our chance in the House of Commons and in the country to safeguard a great many of the employees of Air Canada who quite possibly will be losing their jobs in great numbers if privatization goes ahead. That point has been made with respect to the maintenance base in the city of Winnipeg. It is mentioned in the Bill that this base will be maintained. However, I think it has to be accentuated that this base not only has to be maintained but maintained in its present strength, and that there should not be just a corporal's guard of employees in the city of Winnipeg in this facility. That has to be made known to the Government. It has to be emphasized. As Canadians we must have the assurance that this will take place.

Also in the city of Winnipeg is a very valuable and very smooth operating financial centre which is not guaranteed in this Bill and which should be guaranteed in it. The people of Winnipeg and western Canada have the right to expect that that financial centre will remain in the City of Winnipeg.

It has been the history of Air Canada to maintain six crew bases throughout the country in Vancouver, Calgary, Winnipeg, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax. This is something which was done by Air Canada while a Crown corporation. The staff members and crew members on the airplanes have come to rely on Air Canada maintaining these six bases. If Air Canada decides to close these bases, which it very well might, then imagine the disruption this will cause to these people who have been living their working lives in the cities that will no longer function as bases for Air Canada. There is quite a prevalent rumour that Air Canada will close four of these six bases leaving only the bases in Toronto and Vancouver.

[Translation]

It is necessary, Mr. Speaker, that Air Canada obtain the assurance of the Government of Canada and of the general population that it will stay in Montreal, which is a base for Air Canada employees, and that there will be no staff cuts so that that base can continue to function normally. Those are obligations that Air Canada must respect.

[English]

In all of the cities in Canada where these bases exist we are not only talking about the bases themselves but about the employees who work on them. I believe that the Parliamentary Secretary to the Deputy Prime Minister is sincere in his determination that these bases will remain. I give him full credit for that. I commend him on his attitude because I know he feels as I do and as most Members of the House do that there are obligations to people.

My only concern is that this message be loud and clear and that the obligation be inviolate as far as Air Canada is concerned.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I also want to speak for a few minutes on these two amendments and explain the importance of them. Especially in the city of Winnipeg the need to maintain a maintenance base is very important to the economy of that city. As you know, Mr. Speaker, in the past there have been moves to take away a lot of business from Winnipeg by the previous Liberal Government with respect to the maintenance base. That had a devastating effect not only on the economy of the city but on many families who either lost employment or who were forced to move.

I would also like to explain how important these amendments are in light of what has happened in other situations in which the Government has maintained operations without closing them down. I will give a very dramatic example of the military base at the community of Churchill in my riding.

Before I was born there was a very strong military base at Churchill with thousands of people employed at that particular site. What happened over the years is the Government said: "No, we are not closing down the base." But the operational strength went down to 300 people. A few years later it went down to 200 people. Eventually, it went down to a situation in which there were only 12 people at the military base in Churchill. The Government could say: "We did not close down the base at Churchill." Obviously, it was keeping a skeleton crew there which was not able to do the regular maintenance.

The Government has said that it will keep operations in these various cities, whether it is with respect to flight attendants or the maintenance operations. However, there is no guarantee that these maintenance people will be doing anything more than cleaning up the seats and, perhaps, doing some very minor work.

If the Government is sincere in its commitment that these communities will maintain the maintenance and overhaul facilities and maintain the staff components for the flight attendants, then we want that written into the legislation. As we know, a promise was made in 1983 in which it was expressed that we would not even sell Air Canada. That became a different promise by 1985 when the Government said that it would sell only 45 per cent of Air Canada. Who knows what the Government's situation will be two years from now and how good a verbal promise is.

If the Government is sincere in its promises to the city of Winnipeg and to those other cities, then why not put it in the legislation? I hope that the government Members will stand up for the words of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) and put their words into the legislation to secure the jobs of those people.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The question is on Motion No. 3. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed to the motion will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 5. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed to the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed to the motion will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the motion stands deferred.

It being 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 19(4) the House will now proceed to Statements by Members pursuant to Standing Order 21.

ST. LAWRENCE RIVER—POLLUTION CLEAN-UP

Mr. Jean-Luc Joncas (Matapédia—Matane): Mr. Speaker, on June 3, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) announced an action plan with a budget of $110 million to clean up the St. Lawrence. This plan covers four areas: conservation, protection, restoration and environmental technology. Today I would like to say a few words about the restoration aspect. To restore the St. Lawrence, our Government intends to clean up contaminated federal sites and rehabilitate certain wetlands. For this purpose, the Government has budgeted $21 million that would be spent more specifically on upgrading dredging technology in federal areas and rehabilitating certain wetlands along the St. Lawrence which are threatened by pollution.

Mr. Speaker, after years of neglect by the previous Government, the present Government is taking a dynamic approach to cleaning up the St. Lawrence River and making it the kind of river Quebecers and all Canadians want.

AIRPORTS

PEARSON INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT—INCINERATION OF AIRCRAFT GARBAGE

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, there is a thread which links Pearson International Airport to garbage and the Commissioners Street incinerator in Metro Toronto. The incinerator was ordered closed by July 1 because of fears it was spreading deadly pollutants, including lead, mercury, and dioxins. But Metro's executive committee moved to keep the incinerator open to burn the 25 tonnes of garbage that incoming planes bring daily to Toronto. Citizens for a Safe Environment are asking why they should be exposed to toxic air pollution and want the old incinerator closed.

The airport management had known of the proposed closure of the incinerator for some time but failed to come up with a waste management plan which would sort out what can be burnt and what should not be burnt. More important, airlines must play a role in reducing their refuse. A considerable step would be to replace plastic with reusable serving dishes and related food equipment and supplies.

Pearson International Airport is the place to start a sensible waste management policy. Scarce landfill sites and the effect of incineration on human health are of paramount importance!

VIEWS OF REVIEW COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN

Ms. Audrey McLaughlin (Yukon): Mr. Speaker, the Minister responsible for Canada Post has set up an interim committee to consult with Canada Post on rates and services. We can clearly see the direction that this new board will take. Although the Minister says that the board will be entirely independent, as chairperson he has chosen a man with Conservative ties, Mr. Alan Marchment.

It is clear that the principal interest of Mr. Marchment and his committee will not be in providing postal service. He has said that the committee will be "sensitive" to the public. However, we have already seen a good example of his sensitivity. Mr. Marchment is of the view that a good level of postal service is dependent upon where one lives.

In a recent statement he said that while urban Canadians want door-to-door service, rural citizens are happy if they do not have to travel more than 25 kilometres to get their mail, and up North people are happy if mail is delivered once a week.

I have news for the sensitive Mr. Marchment, Mr. Speaker, and for the Government. People in the country and up North want to get their mail regularly and daily just like the rest of Canadians. Good, basic postal service is a right for all Canadians. But I do not think we should hold our breath waiting for it from this Government.

YOUTH

GOVERNMENT'S TRADE AND LANGUAGE POLICIES—OPPORTUNITIES FOR YOUTH

Mr. Terry Clifford (London—Middlesex): Mr. Speaker, my statement pertains to the momentous steps taken by our Government this week. A clear signal has been sent to Canadian people, particularly youth, regarding free trade and Bill C-72. The vote on the Free Trade Bill illustrated our Government's commitment to Canada's growth as a major world trader. Our businesses and workplaces are alive with innovation to meet Canada's new economic frontiers in the U.S.A. and the world.

Bill C-72 demonstrated, just as clearly, our Government's commitment to fostering the full recognition and use of both English and French in Canadian society. This is a powerful Bill which offers a great deal to Canadians and demonstrates a uniqueness of Canada to the rest of the world. The youth of today must be made aware of what their future will demand and the unique role language and trade will play in this future. Only then will the greatest good be achieved from the free trade Bill and Bill C-72.

In London—Middlesex I will work together with all Canadians to make sure that the policies and programs emanating from these Bills achieve their deserved lofty status as 21st century landmarks for Canada and its youth.

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

PRICE OF DRUGS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, the central reason why the Liberal Opposition fought the Conservatives' pharmaceutical legislation to the bitter end was to maintain drug prices at a reasonable and affordable level. In defence, the Government promised that drug prices would not increase. Yet, since the passage of the legislation, we have had nothing but evidence to the contrary.

Just today I received a letter from Mrs. Hollis Newman of Toronto, who listed the significant price increases that she and her family have had to absorb on a number of pharmaceutical products in the last few months: 43.9 per cent on Albalon-A Eye Drops, 50.9 per cent on Tinactin Athlete's Foot Cream, 31.6 per cent on Phisoderm Skincleanser, 68 per cent increase on Labello Medical Lip Care, 134 per cent increase on Polysporin Antibiotic Ointment, 131.2 per cent on Dristan, and 50 per cent on Maalox.

In summarizing these dramatic and inflated increases, Mrs. Newman suggests that these increases are "totally criminal". I believe most Canadians agree with her.

And as an opposition Party it is not satisfying to be proven correct because, as a result, average and low-income Canadians and senior citizens are now paying dearly for the Government's indifference and insensitivity. If the Government had any moral fibre, would roll back these unjustified increases.

THE ECONOMY

LES ENTREPRISES LETEL—FREE TRADE ERA

Mr. Marcel R. Tremblay (Québec Est): Thanks to the federal Government's Regional Development Program, a business in my riding can now offer consumers a new food product, in response to a new trend in eating habits in North America.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, by setting up a plant for the production of fresh pasta—the pasta is refrigerated, will keep for a long time, is of superior quality and is sold in individual portions— Letel Enterprises has created twenty-five new jobs and will eventually be able to compete on the biggest markets in the world.

With these programs the Conservative Government has shown it is consistent, since with government assistance, businesses like Letel will be able to enter the new era of free trade and free markets without fear.

HERITAGE

PUBLICATION OF CANADIAN WOMEN: A HISTORY

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, the history of our nation has been a history told by men, and all too often the achievements and contributions of women have been overlooked in the telling. It is important that we recognize these contributions, for women's experience of history may be very different from the experience of men.

An understanding of that experience deepens our understanding of the development of our nation. This month marks the publication of the first comprehensive study of the history of Canadian women. Entitled Canadian Women: a History, the book is a result of collaboration between six women teachers and researchers.

I rise both to applaud the collective efforts of these women and also to express my concerns for the future of this kind of historical textbook under the free trade agreement.

Under the Mulroney trade agreement we no longer will be able to promote and encourage our cultural industries through Canada Council grants and subsidies and Canadian content regulation. What a tragedy it is to find the history of Canadian women, only to lose it again under the trade deal.

RAILWAYS

CARRIAGE OF DANGEROUS GOODS—SPEED LIMIT REDUCTION URGED

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, one year ago, on July 14, a train carrying hazardous material derailed in my constituency. Yesterday, one year later, I received the report of the Canadian Transport Commission investigation into that accident. The report indicated that at the time of the accident the train was travelling within the 65-mile an hour speed limit. It made no mention of the fact that just a short distance away the speed limit is only 25 miles per hour. It also made no mention of the fact that the train carried dangerous goods.

This one accident resulted in damages of almost $1.5 million. Surely it is time to reduce the speed limit for trains carrying dangerous goods through densely populated communities.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

OPINION POLL RESULTS ON EXPENDITURES

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, the Reagan plan to absorb Canada economically through the Reagan-Mulroney trade deal is now revealed to include full military integration. Southam News yesterday revealed the recommendations of a high-level Canadian task force for Canada to join the U.S. with closer defence ties and a common defence economic market.

Two-way military trade reached a staggering $3 billion last year and the task force recommended 20 specific ways to accelerate and to increase integration and continental military orientation. The Conservatives recommend an increase in defence spending of $185 billion over the next 20 years.

In May of this year Angus Reid conducted a national poll for the Canadian Peace Alliance on whether Canadians would rather spend their tax dollars on military purposes or on improved social services. By a margin of two to one Canadians prefer improved social services.

On whether Canada should allow foreign warships that are nuclear armed to enter Canadian waters and dock at our ports, only 27 per cent approve and 67 per cent are opposed.

Seventy-one per cent of Canadians have a positive opinion toward candidates in the up-coming election who will emphasize the importance of peace issues.

The Conservative task force recommendation to "eliminate national boundaries" in the areas of defence is not supportable. The task force blames a "strong nationalistic, protectionist, domestic, and political orientation" for restructuring the free flow of guns—

TEXTILES

POSITION OF NEW DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, the NPD cannot decide if it wants more or less protectionism.

Tariff barriers are now an outdated way to protect the domestic market. They restrict trade and protect our industries less and less. This policy is taken from Resolution B.2.1 of the 1961 Convention and it was reconfirmed in October 1986. Thus the NDP has contradictory commitments on textiles.

An NDP candidate speaking to textile workers can say, "We will impose restrictions on textile imports in order to protect our share of the Canadian market." This is Resolution A.2.11 of the 1983 Convention.

The next day, at a conference on the Third World, he can say, "We will abolish restrictions on textile imports in order to help developing countries. This is our policy that was adopted at a convention and published as Resolution B.2.4 in 1977."

In conclusion, it is clear that the NDP is somewhere between protectionism and expanding our markets abroad, between illusory socialism and false democracy.

FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS

SMALL BUSINESSES—BANKING FEES

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, when he announced the policy on bank charges on June 30, the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) spoke only of personal accounts and did not mention small business accounts.

S. O. 21

Mr. Speaker, this very vital sector, which creates the most jobs, was completely excluded. At the present time, small business is penalized by the banks, which charge a penalty if their customers pay with a bad cheque. Why does the Government, which uses small business in its public relations announcements, always forget them when it comes to policies to help them? Why does it always leave them out?

How long do Canadians have to wait? How many times must Canadians suffer this discrimination from the Canadian Government?

I call on the Minister to act immediately to correct this situation.

NATIONAL GALLERY OF CANADA

SPONSORSHIP OF DEGAS EXHIBITION

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, large corporations often use sponsorship of the arts to improve their corporate image. The National Gallery has shown courage by displaying Hans Haacke's work on the relationship between Alcan's support of the arts and its implicit support for apartheid by operating in south Africa.

How ironic therefor that the Gallery's first major show, a Degas retrospective, is sponsored by United Technologies Corporation, the second largest military corporation in the United States. Its subsidiary, Pratt & Whitney Canada, has been the number one recipient of government aid under Canada's Defence Industry Productivity Program and has received $460 million since 1969.

Pratt & Whitney engines have ended up in hundreds of military aircraft sold to repressive regimes around the world.

International military contractors deal in poverty, hunger, torture, and death, for the sake of corporate profits, and no amount of arts sponsorship can make them good corporate citizens. The National Gallery should show better judgment in its choice of sponsors.

CN-DERAILMENT OF CHLORINE CAR NEAR CHAPAIS

Mr. Guy St-Julien (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, yet another train derailment has occurred in Abitibi! All of these derailments, be they major or minor, increase the anxiety of the population and of CN employees, and they are due to gaps in security caused by the most recent staff cuts in 1987.

Mr. Speaker, these derailments are continuing. CN will have to review its security policy immediately, to improve its security checks of railway cars before a catastrophe occurs.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—ONTARIO GRAPE GROWING INDUSTRY

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, the Canadian grape growers have been sold out in the Mulroney-Reagan trade deal. They have been totally sacrificed both in the Okanagan and in the Niagara escarpment area. We learn that the adjustment program that the Government is putting forward is only $70 million in Ontario, which is less than half of what is needed for an adequate adjustment program. That is based on Ontario putting up half of that money, approximately $35 million.

Since Ontario is not a party to the agreement and is opposed to the Mulroney trade deal, it means that the farmers will receive less than a quarter of an adequate adjustment program.

If the Government is going to continue with the trade deal, I call upon it to provide an adequate adjustment program for those farmers who are facing the loss of their farms.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

LAKE MICHIGAN—PROPOSED DIVERSION OF WATER IN UNITED STATES

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I direct my question to either the Acting Minister of the Environment or the Acting Minister for External Affairs. I would like to point out that, on a day when most of the country is sweltering in above 30 degree weather, and from one end to the other most of the country is wracked with serious drought, the dramatic importance of water as an essential resource is uppermost in every Canadian's mind, yet the Government is contradictory and confusing in its responses and answers.

We would like to pose some questions to determine exactly what the position of the Government is on the very crucial issue of the proposed Great Lakes water diversion. Yesterday we heard from the Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs that the Government had made representations, yet External Affairs officials cannot tell us what those representations are.

I would like to direct the following question to whomever is in a position to answer. At the ministerial level, the level of the Secretary of State for External Affairs, or the Prime Ministerial level, will the Government immediately contact the U.S. administration and clearly state that Canada will not give concurrence to any diversion whatsoever of water from the Great Lakes basin, and nip this whole proposal in the bud, and make it unilaterally clear on our side that there can be no diversions of Canadian water or water affecting Canadian rights as proposed under the Great Lakes water diversion?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for that question. As was stated in the House yesterday, Canada's position is, by virtue of a number of treaties, that no diversion of water can take place from the Great Lakes system without our consent. That is categorical and straightforward.

With respect to the position taken by the Government, again it was pointed out yesterday that representations have been made to American officials in Washington on behalf of Canada, outlining our concerns in this regard. I am able to report to the Hon. Member that today our Ambassador to the United States is delivering to the State Department a specific reiteration of Canada's position in the most basic terms so that there can be no misunderstanding by any person on either side of the border with respect to our position.

We have been very cognizant of our responsibilities, and we will maintain Canada's position and make it quite clear with respect to any possibility, any plan, any tentative plan, or any project which might involve water diversion.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, we appreciate the fact that the Government, by today at least, has taken the action requested yesterday in the House by having the Ambassador make representations.

Considering the precedent established in 1983 when the then Government filed a reference with the International Joint Commission stating that not only was Canada to be consulted but that there could be no unilateral decision, can the Minister tell us if the note being delivered by the Canadian Ambassador makes it very clear that Canadian rights that are essential in this project must be recognized and honoured, and that there should be no consideration of this project whatsoever by any American authority because Canadians are saying no right now?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the fact is that this is a proposal—I think it is fair to describe it in that term—with respect to diversion. I think the representations we have made today will indicate that we are very firmly of the view that nothing can happen without our consent and there is no consent forthcoming. It is as simple as that. There is no further bottom line required.

The Minister of the Environment yesterday made reference to his view of the proposal. I think we have given a categorical statement to the American authorities, and all Canadians join with the Government in our position that this is a very serious question, one about which the Government of Canada should give a very strong message to the United States.

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—REQUEST FOR SPECIFIC WATER EXEMPTION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, while the Minister is in the mood to issue strong statements, let me pose this question to him. We are all aware of the conference that was held in Toronto last week which clearly outlined the emerging problems of climatic conditions that will cause droughts in large parts of North America. We also know that this proposed Lake Michigan diversion is only one of a whole series of efforts, attempts and initiatives by the United States, when it runs into water shortages, to export its problems to border states, whether it is Mexico or Canada.

Taking into account that we can be expecting more and more frequent attempts by the United States to solve its water shortage problems by having transport, export or diversion of water, would the Minister not now agree that it is time that he and his colleagues clearly recognized the problem? Because of the proposed agreement with the United States on trade which includes water as part of its terms, should we not ask specifically to have water exempted as a clause in that agreement so that there could be no ambiguity and no confusion in the minds of Americans that we control our water resources?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, let me say in the strongest terms of which I am capable that we control our resources. We will continue to control our resources. The question of our ability to control water policy in Canada transcends any agreement.

It has in fact been pointed out to the Hon. Member on a number of occasions that the agreement has no impact whatsoever with respect to the water resources of Canada. This is a matter which is so fundamental to our policy that we have given leadership that previous Governments have not given. I remind the Hon. Member that his Leader was the first one to raise the prospect of selling water to the United States. He should talk to his Leader, not lecture us.

MINISTER'S STATEMENT

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the appropriate Minister and has to do with the statement made yesterday by the Minister of the Environment in Question Period. He said that a diversion from Lake Michigan has nothing to do with the diversion of Canadian water or inter-basin diversions. Everyone who knows about the water system of North America knows that Lake Michigan draws its water from the Great Lakes which in turn are boundary waters. Will the Minister admit that the Minister of the Environment was wrong in making such a statement yesterday in the House?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I think that the Minister referred to the project as—I am not sure of the word he used—insane. Does the Hon. Member understand the meaning of that word?

Mr. Caccia: Mr. Speaker, he sure does, and that is why we think that the Minister was wrong in making the statement he made. This diversion has to do with the Great Lakes. The Great Lakes are shared waters and therefore the Minister has either to retract his words or to admit that he was wrong.

REQUEST FOR AMENDMENT OF TRADE AGREEMENT

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): In the meantime, Americans are claiming that water is on the table and is part of the free trade agreement. Will the Minister indicate to this House that the Government is coming to its senses and will amend the Bill before the House to include water as one of the items that is not part of the agreement?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the Liberals should not applaud that question because the basis of the question is simply false. Who are these people they are talking about, who are these Americans who imply that the free trade agreement in fact includes water resources? This is the kind of incorrect premise of a question which allows me to say that not only are Canadians opposed to this diversion but indeed a number of senior American governmental officials are opposed to it.

The Governors of Ohio, Wisconsin, and Minnesota are very much opposed to this project. On both sides of the border there is a unity with respect to this proposal which says to any diversion project that this is unacceptable and not on the books.

This is a matter for which Canada's consent must be obtained by virtue of treaties that have been signed over the years. It has nothing whatsoever to do with the free trade agreement, and the only reason the Hon. Member raises the question is because it is Friday and he cannot think of anything else.

FUR TRAPPING INDUSTRY

EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT—PETITION TO INTRODUCE LABELLING OF CANADIAN FURS

Ms. Audrey McLaughlin (Yukon): Mr. Speaker, on June 1 this House held an emergency debate on the British proposal to label furs which may have been caught in leg-hold traps. The House held a unanimous position in recognition of the devastating effects this could have on the 105,000 employees in the Canadian fur industry, having seen what happened to the seal industry.

Prior to the Economic Summit and the visit of the British Prime Minister, the British order was withdrawn. I learned last night that Canada was had. The British really gave us the old one-two.

Speaking last night to Canada's Ambassador to the European Parliament, I learned that that Parliament has already gone through the first stages, having secured over 260 signatures, the signatures required to petition the European Parliament to pass a similar regulation to label furs. This obviously has much more devastating consequences in that it involves 12 European countries.

My question is for the Acting Prime Minister. What has the Government done to inform Members of the European Parliament about the unanimous position of this House regarding such fur labelling?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for her question. I can assure her and all Canadians, especially those people who are involved in that industry, that we will make as vigorous a representation to the European Community as we have to Britain. In no uncertain terms, the European Community will know our position here in Canada. This can be done in many ways, but as the Hon. Member knows, the European Community has a representative here in Ottawa and representations will be made to that representative initially, informing the representative of this Parliament's, not just this Government's, feeling on this particular situation. We will fight it in every avenue open to us.

DIPLOMATIC ACTION—POSITION OF U.S.A. AND U.S.S.R.

Ms. Audrey McLaughlin (Yukon): Mr. Speaker, what is important to recognize is that this is a serious situation. When I talked to the Canadian Ambassador last night in Brussels, he confirmed that this is an extremely serious situation. This is an emergency situation which we cannot simply leave to discussions over a long period of time. We have to do something now.

What specific steps are we prepared to take? I understand that we will make our views known. We in the House have done so in the past. The Minister of Indian Affairs said that he would boycott some stores. I am sure that will terrify the Europeans, but we must have some plan for specific diplomatic measures with respect to the European Parliament.

Can whoever is responding to this question tell the House what we have done to combine our efforts with the U.S. and the U.S.S.R., the other two major fur producers? Will the Government enter into discussions with those two countries so we can present a united front to the European Parliament?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member tries to make it sound like this Government does not take this matter seriously. We do not minimize the seriousness at all. It is a very important issue. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Timiskaming, led the charge on this matter here in the House, together with the Hon. Member. We had a debate and Parliament unanimously supported our position.

In my answer to the first question I referred to the action this Government is prepared to take at present. The NDP would like to blow the whole wad right off the bat. There are diplomatic ways to handle this initially. If they do not work, there are other measures we can examine. Let us go the proper route first and not just throw everything out at once.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT CONTACT ALLIES ON ISSUE

Ms. Audrey McLaughlin (Yukon): Mr. Speaker, this is an emergency and we need a timetable for what the Government is going to do. The European Parliamentary Commission has the ability to make a decision about this regulation which will then become law in twelve countries.

Is the Government prepared at least to contact some of our allies, and why has it not done so already? Denmark, for example, is one of our allies in this matter. Is the Government prepared to say it will contact that country about this situation now?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the actions of this Government in the past on this matter show that we have been very successful in the measures we have taken. We will take all measures necessary to get our point across to the European Community about the importance of this issue. Our Prime Minister has probably established a better relationship with that Community than any other Prime Minister of this country. He has many colleagues and friends in that Community with whom he can confer. There are all kinds of avenues open to us.

I can guarantee to the Hon. Member and the people of Canada, especially those in this industry, that this Government will stand up for them in every way possible.

PROPOSAL HOUSE FORWARD RESOLUTION TO EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT

Mr. John A. MacDougall (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a supplementary question to the Parliamentary Secretary on the same issue. Would he be prepared to work with the other two Parties in the House to come up with a resolution by this House directed to the European Parliament, in addition to the one passed in June, stating firmly this Parliament's commitment in support of the fur industry and the thousands of workers involved?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, as you know, the Hon. Member for Timiskaming led the charge on this issue in the House, together with other Hon. Members. I give full credit to everyone. I appreciate the question. I think it is an excellent idea. I am prepared to discuss the matter with my House Leader with that view in mind.

DROUGHT IN SOUTHWESTERN ONTARIO—REQUEST FOR FEDERAL ASSISTANCE

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture. He knows that southwestern Ontario is facing its worst drought in 50 years. The losses in corn and other crops are expected to amount to over $1 billion. Earlier this week the Ontario Minister of Agriculture sent an urgent letter to the federal Minister of Agriculture asking the federal Government to provide to those farmers in southwestern Ontario assistance similar to that provided farmers in western Canada a few weeks ago.

Can the Parliamentary Secretary respond on behalf of the Minister today and give a clear signal that such assistance will be provided to those Ontario farmers who are facing similar drought conditions?

Mr. Lee Clark (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, certainly we on this side of the House are very proud of our record of consultation and co-operation with and support for the farmers in western Canada who were stricken by drought. As you know, there was an initial announcement of some $12 million under PFRA with respect to the supply of water. There was a subsequent announcement of $100 million to assist cattle producers who have in some cases been devastated by these drought conditions. Of course, there was an additional $53 million with respect to the production of greenfeed. All this was a result of a process of consultation and co-operation with provincial Governments and farm organizations in western Canada.

We are quite prepared to enter into the same strategy with respect to farmers and farm organizations in the areas of Ontario stricken by drought. In fact, a meeting is scheduled for Guelph on July 28 with farm organizations. In addition, there will be a meeting with provincial Ministers of Agriculture in Toronto next Tuesday and Wednesday.

We are of course willing to co-operate with the Ontario Minister of Agriculture. I note what the Hon. Member has said but I also note that the Hon. Jack Riddell has said "it is still too early to talk about that", referring to the drought and what should be done. "We are still unsure what our losses will be so there is no point in developing a program if you do not know what is needed."

CROP INSURANCE PROGRAM—REQUEST FOR EXTENSION OF ENROLMENT DEADLINE

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, the Parliamentary Secretary outlined the assistance that was provided for the disaster in western Canada of $76 million. That was exactly half of the assistance provided in the Lac-Saint-Jean by-election when the Government was facing a political disaster. That shows exactly the kind of priority that the Prime Minister puts on a natural disaster facing agriculture producers.

Yesterday the Minister said they were on top of this issue. Corn producers, whose losses are amounting to an additional $20 million a day, have asked that the crop insurance program be improved on the basis of the recommendations of the Canada-Ontario review committee last year. Will the Parliamentary Secretary, on behalf of the Minister, give a commitment right now to extend the enrolment period until the end of August so that these farmers facing losses of hundreds of millions of dollars will have an opportunity to enrol in the crop insurance program for this year?

Mr. Lee Clark (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member refers to a certain political disaster which occurred in the Lac-Saint-Jean area in the recent by-election. I would have thought it was his Party, or perhaps even more the NDP, which suffered a political disaster in that by-election.

Mr. Grisé: That was an NDP drought.

Mr. Lewis: A moral victory.

Mr. Clark (Brandon—Souris): I would also note that the figures the Hon. Member used with reference to that by-election should have properly been attributed to the entire province of Québec because that is where they were directed.

With respect to the question of crop insurance, I would remind Hon. Members of the meeting taking place on Tuesday and Wednesday in Toronto. I believe crop insurance is on the agenda for Tuesday morning and I am certain it will be dealt with at that time.

NATURAL DISASTERS—REQUEST FOR LONG-TERM EMERGENCY ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture and it refers to the annual meeting of Ministers of Agriculture in Toronto next week.

Western farmers have been devastated by drought, as have farmers in Ontario and Québec.

• (1140)

Given these natural disasters and the promise by the Government three years ago to deal with them on a more permanent basis, will the Minister be recommending a proposal to his provincial counterparts which will establish a long-term emergency assistance program so that farmers will know where they stand with regard to government aid when they are hit by a natural disaster?

Mr. Lee Clark (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I certainly agree with the Hon. Member with respect to the need to approach problems of this nature on a long-term basis. Quite frankly, I think we have been making some significant steps in that direction.

I refer, for example, to a new forage program which was not in place when we came into power four years ago. While not as many farmers and ranchers are making use of it as I would wish, the merits of that program are becoming more readily apparent with the passage of time.

In addition, there have been attempts to approach crop insurance in different ways. Studies have been done with respect to amending crop insurance to make it more responsive. One of the ways in which we might do that—although it is not a view shared by the province it may be a view shared by the New Democratic Party—is to move more in the direction of genuine tripartite.

There is no reason why agriculture should not be supported by tripartite programs, because it is a joint responsibility between the federal Government and the provinces. Quite frankly, the federal Government has been carrying its share very well in the last four years. Unfortunately, not all of the provinces have been doing as well.

FORTHCOMING MEETING OF FEDERAL AND PROVINCIAL MINISTERS

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, we need to get rid of the ad hoc approach which it has been necessary for the Government to use. With regard to the meeting of the Agricultural Ministers, will that item be on the agenda of that meeting?

In addition, is the Minister going to make a proposal to his counterparts regarding the promotion of grain ethanol as an industry in Canada?

Mr. Lee Clark (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member seems to speak in a disparaging way of ad hoc programs. I would think that most farmers in Canada are extremely appreciative of the ad hoc programs. I think of a $1 billion program in 1986-87 and a $1.1 billion program in 1988. I refer, of course, to payments under the Western Grain Stabilization Act. Many of these programs have kept the farmers operating on the land. If it had not been for them, they would not be there today.

In addition, with respect to long-term plans, there have indeed been some. I previously mentioned forage and will also mention the dairy program, a five-year program which the previous Government was not able to initiate.

With respect to crop insurance, if I recall the agenda correctly, the subject is on the agenda and will be addressed.

TELECOMMUNICATIONS

SALE OF GOVERNMENT COMPANIES—SECRECY REQUIREMENT

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, the Government of Canada is presently in the process of selling two telecommunications companies, each worth over $200 million, one being Northwest Telecommunications and the other Terra Nova Communications in Newfoundland. Certain questions have been raised as to the procedures being used by the Government concerning the sale.

I will direct my question to the Minister of Transport. Will he explain to this House why every bidder had to sign an oath of secrecy saying that he will never disclose any of the contents of his bid? Not only that, bidders had to sign an oath that when they visited the sites they would not tell the employees what company they represented.

Why all the secrecy? Whose interests are being protected? It is certainly not the interests of the employees and the communities affected.

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, there are a lot of interests which need to be protected. On such commercial bids it is commonly accepted that they have to be done with the secrecy to which my friend is referring. The first reason for that is to prevent lobbying because all bidders do not have the same ability to lobby. We consider that maintaining secrecy will not allow advantage to be given to any one bidder.

Many of these bidders are publicly traded and could be in violation of regulations. I think my friend will understand that. The arguments are relatively technical but they are for the protection of the commercial bids presented. For that reason we consider it to be for commercial use and it has to be done in the case of CN.

EXTENSION OF CLOSING DATE

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): No, Mr. Speaker, that is not normal practice. That is unnecessarily covert. Some people would claim that the interests being protected here are the Progressive Conservative lobbyists who are representing some of the bidders for those very companies. Those are whose interests are being protected, not the employees and not the communities affected.

Can the Minister explain why the decision date of July 15 has been lifted? Who made the request to lift that date? Why is it being lifted? Is it because this House will perhaps not be sitting and the decision which has to be made by Cabinet cannot be examined publicly in this Chamber?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I consider the Member from Gander to be a man of common sense. I believe that he is very impressive at this level. I cannot make any guarantees at other levels, but at this level he could be considered to be a man of common sense. For that reason I know that he basically agrees with me that this secrecy is the best procedure.

The reason we extended the closing date was to give all bidders—of whom I am not aware, and I am sure my hon. friend is not aware either—the chance to make site visits and talk to the employees in order to have the best chance that their bid will be successful. That is the only reason. I am sure that this Member will agree that that is common sense.

CANADA ELECTIONS ACT

DEFINITION OF ELECTION EXPENSES

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Government House Leader. After the investigation by the House Committee into the allegations with regard to the election expenditures of the Member for Frontenac it became apparent that there is a very glaring loophole in our election law. At that time the Government asked us for any proposals we had with regard to election expenses, and a definition to that end.

Three months ago, on April 12, we sent the Government a letter with legal wording defining what election expenses are and what they are not. We have not received a reply to that letter and have not seen the introduction of any legislation on this very important issue. When is the Government going to act?

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, the House will know that we brought forward Bill C-79 which makes a number of very important changes to the Elections Act. We were negotiating two or three changes within that Act at the time to which my hon. friend refers.

It is my understanding that there was a letter sent to both Parties in reply to the letter about which my friend speaks. I will check into it and ensure that my friend gets a copy of it.

REQUEST FOR ACTION ON LEGISLATION

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I believe I have every letter that has been sent on this issue. Every letter from the Government has deliberately avoided referring to election expenses except to say that it was still studying the matter. It has made no attempt whatsoever to deal with this issue.

Can we get a commitment from the Government that before we leave we will have at least proposed legislation before either the standing committee or the House in order that this matter is not delayed until after the next election? We do not want a Dodge City, wide open election. We want honest rules by which all of us can live.

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Minister, since my hon. friend mentions Dodge City, I should tell him that, at the same time as this suggestion came forward from the NDP, the Hon. Member for York East was quite concerned that taxpayers' money was being used by NDP candidates in municipal elections. That is also a very valid reason to open the Elections Act and correct it on behalf of the taxpayers of Canada.

REQUEST THAT NEGOCIATIONS WITH BRAZIL BE REOPONED

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance, and it concerns the textile industry and Canada's disagreement with Brazil concerning the quotas that country wants to obtain for its exports of towels and sheets to Canada.

GATT's textile surveillance body published its decision this week, based on Article 3 of the multifiber Arrangement:

Firstly, Canada's complaint of a disturbance in the sheet fabric market is well-founded;

Secondly however, the organization concluded that Canada's towel market had not been disrupted;

Thirdly, the organization suggested that both countries sit down again to negotiate and try to agree.

Would the Minister care to reassure Canadian textile workers and resume negotiations with Brazil? Alternately, because of the 100 per cent increase in imported towel fabric in Canada since 1982, will the Minister ask the arbitration tribunal to review the case?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): I thank the Hon. Member for Drummond for his question.

[English]

This Government took decisive action in January in response to Canadian concerns over the surging imports from Brazil. At that time we invoked Article 3 of the multifibre arrangement, unilaterally limiting imports on pillow cases, sheets, and terry towels.

Since then we were vindicated by the GATT surveillance body because they supported our action on the sheets and pillow cases. However, they indicated that we did not have sufficient grounds with regard to terry towels and have urged us to withdraw these restrictions.

I can tell the Hon. Member that this matter is before the Minister. He is studying the situation and the request from the surveillance body.

Canada retains the right to monitor and take action to protect Canadian jobs in the future if imports threaten to disrupt the market in terry towels.

FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS

BANKING FEES—SMALL BUSINESSES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance.

When the policy on bank charges was announced on June 30, the Minister of State (Finance) only mentioned personal accounts, thus excluding the business accounts of small businesses which are as vulnerable as consumers in this respect.

Will the Minister of Finance issue new directives to the banks to warn them and to protect small businesses from any undue increase in charges by the banks? That is what the Canadian Federation of Independent Businesses is asking.

[English]

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I missed the first part of the Hon. Member's question. I am sure he was asking about the unemployment rate this morning which was announced at 7.6 per cent.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

And also, Mr. Speaker, because of the drop in the unemployment rate in the province of Quebec. Today there is less than 9 per cent unemployment for the first time in the past seven years.

[English]

I am sure the Hon. Member put that question to me. If he wants to put another question on unemployment, I can elaborate on it.

I heard the second part of his question about bank charges as they relate to small business. We have also been in touch with some members of the small business community, including the Canadian Federation of Independent Business. My colleague, the Minister of State for Finance, has indicated that we are arranging a meeting between representatives of the small business community and the Canadian Bankers Association in the very near future to discuss this issue. I believe it is within the next couple of weeks.

Mr. Gagliano: Canadian small businesses do not need meetings, they need action. They have had all the meetings they can get.

TREATMENT OF SMALL BUSINESSES

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, why did the Minister exclude small business accounts when he announced that NSF cheques deposited on personal accounts will not be charged twice? Why does the Minister discriminate against small business? Why do small businesses, that receive most of those cheques from their customers, have to be charged twice? Instead of using small business when you have to make a public relations announcement, put your money where your mouth is.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think this Government has demonstrated a very clear ability to act on a number of issues. We do not need the blustering and posturing of the Hon. Member in that way.

The Hon. Member said that the small business community does not want to have meetings. The small business community has asked for meetings.

Mr. Gagliano: They have had meetings for six months. Act.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): We have responded to their request for a meeting. We are arranging that meeting which, as I indicated in my first answer, will be held within the next couple of weeks.

RAILWAYS

CN-DERAILMENT OF CHLORINE CAR IN ABITIBI—REQUEST THAT INQUIRY BE ESTABLISHED

Mr. Guy St-Julien (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. Once again we had a derailment in Abitibi. Last Tuesday, a CN tanker car of chlorine went off the track at mile 26.8 north of Senneterre. A disaster was averted.

Safety has deteriorated since the last cutbacks in CN personnel at Senneterre.

Would the Minister guarantee the population that better safety precautions will be taken by CN on the Abitibi—Témiscamingue railway network and that a public inquiry will be held immediately on the last three derailments that occurred in north west Quebec during the past year?

[English]

Mr. Allmand: Tell us how many jobs were created in Canada.

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): I am no longer Minister of Employment, Mr. Speaker.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I don't think the issue of the lay-offs at CN has any direct connection with the disasters to which the Hon. Member is referring, at least in the reports we are receiving so far, since the lay-offs were made in the locomotive maintenance sector. So there is no direct link.

However, like the Hon. Member, I realize this was the third incident of its kind within a given period, and I have asked Canadian National to give us all the information so that we can see exactly what is going on, especially since incredible precautions are taken when transporting this kind of material.

I will let the Hon. Member know as soon as additional information is available.

NATIONAL PARKS

SOUTH MORESBY—DELAY IN SIGNING FINAL AGREEMENT

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. On May 14, 1987, the House unanimously endorsed a resolution to preserve South Moresby and compensate interests affected, and to involve the Haida Nation fully in matters affecting South Moresby.

Since Monday is the anniversary of the signing of the Memorandum of Understanding in Victoria by the Prime Minister and the Premier of British Columbia, will the Acting Prime Minister advise the House as to what is holding up the signing of the final agreement? A state of chaos is being created on the Queen Charlotte Islands as visitors from around the world arrive to find public services inadequate to meet their needs.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question. I understand that the Province of British Columbia is looking at a proposal from their officials which is quite consistent with the terms of the Memorandum of Understanding signed between the Prime Minister and the Premier of British Columbia.

I expect there will be an opportunity for us to make progress on this matter at a very early date. I am hopeful that will be the case.

In the meantime officials of Environment Canada and Parks Canada are in discussion with respect to a co-ordinated plan with other government agencies on this important area. We are making specific arrangements to make sure that the tourist traffic will be adequately and properly dealt with and handled during the course of this tourist season.

Finally I want to say that we in the federal Government regard the arrival of an agreement with respect to South Moresby as a very significant matter. We look forward to the Province of British Columbia completing its consideration with respect to it at an early date.

INVOLVEMENT OF HAIDA NATION

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question. Since this House undertook unanimously to involve the Haida nation fully in all matters affecting South Moresby, and since for more than a year there has been no progress made in reaching a Canada-Haida agreement on South Moresby, will the Minister instruct officials to accelerate the progress and reach an agreement acceptable to the Haida Nation?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I am informed the Haida have been kept informed with respect to the progress of the federal-provincial agreement, and that Environment Canada is continuing its efforts to reach an understanding with the Haida on its role in the planning, management, and operation of the National Park Reserve.

We take the representation very seriously and appreciate the support of the Hon. Member. We want to be involved in a co-operative manner with the Haida Nation and are acting in a very pro-active way, if I can put it like that, with the Haida people to make sure that their interests are being fully considered and taken into account.

CAPE BRETON DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

APPOINTMENT OF PRESIDENT

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. It is bad enough that the Government is trying to sabotage the Cape Breton Development Corporation by doing away with the industrial development division, but on October 3 the Government fired the then president of Devco, that is over nine months ago, and the Government has not as yet replaced the president of the Cape Breton Development Corporation.

As the Minister can appreciate, this is having a devastating effect on the operations of Devco. Why is it taking so long for the Government to appoint a president for the Cape Breton Development Corporation?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, for somebody who expresses such a great interest in Atlantic Canada, it is very hard for me to believe that he comes from the same Party that in the Senate is devastating our economic development efforts in Atlantic Canada.

We are trying to create jobs as we have been doing throughout the country. We have 7.6 per cent unemployment throughout the country. Mr. Speaker, remember that number. When I look at the regional distribution, it is still more heartening. You see a very real reduction in unemployment in all regions of the country. That is what we are trying to do through our efforts in economic development.

With respect to the second part of the Hon. Member's question concerning the Devco presidency, we are going through the normal procedure to replace a head of a corporation, otherwise we would be accused of pork barrelling or what have you. The Opposition would be there with great phrases to reduce the kind of activity being undertaken. Through the board of directors we went through a search committee. That committee went through the normal process of having an outside independent firm review the possible candidacies of a number of people. Recommendations were made to Government and we are in a position to act very swiftly in this matter.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Minister quotes unemployment figures. The unemployment in Cape Breton today is higher than when the Government took office.

Mr. Valcourt: That is false!

Mr. MacLellan: It is not false. It is true.

Some Hon. Members: It is not true.

Mr. MacLellan: The miserable excuses which the Minister gives for not having appointed a president are just plain gall. The Government and this Minister—

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: In view of the hour, I would ask the Hon. Member to put his question.

Mr. MacLellan: The Government has had time to interview everybody in Canada for the job. Why hasn't a president been appointed for the Cape Breton Development Corporation? The people in Cape Breton are not going to accept lame excuses any more.

Hon. Robert de Cotret (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, first, the introductory remarks to the Hon. Member's question are totally false.

I would like to state a few facts that might interest my colleague. Here are the jobs that have been created—in Newfoundland 18,000; P.E.I. 7,000; Nova Scotia 32,000; New Brunswick 37,000; Québec 307,000; Ontario 588,000; Manitoba 33,000; Saskatchewan 13,000; Alberta 92,000, and B.C. 129,000.

That is good management. That is what we are doing with the economy. That is what we were doing with Devco. The Party of the Hon. Member is holding up the legislation that will help Atlantic Canada and Cape Breton get out of the situation which they had been in for years and years under the previous Government.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre. This will be the last question in Question Period.

PUBLIC SERVICE

EQUALITY IN EMPLOYMENT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for the Treasury Board. Is the Government satisfied with the report of the Public Service Commission published last week, according to which women in the Public Service earned about $27,800 compared to $37,000 on average for male civil servants and the gap between male and female increased from $9,000 to $9,300 between 1986 and 1987, when the Conservatives were in power? Why did the Government break its election promises for greater equality for women in the Public Service? And what concrete steps will the Government take to give women equal treatment in future?

[English]

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, I want to point out to my friend that prior to our taking office there were employment equity programs. We took at look at things and started to set targets.

While there are some areas in which we are not meeting all the targets that we would like to, I can assure my friend that the targets for employment of women by occupational categories have been set and we are getting very close to meeting them in all areas of the public service.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, is the Hon. Minister then saying that we are close to achieving targets but that, as a consequence, the wage gap between men and women will continue at around $9,000 a year and that that is tolerated as far as people working for the Government of Canada are concerned?

Is this Minister aware that federal law requires equal pay for work of equal value, and that that has been so for 10 years? When will that kind of equality be achieved in the Government of Canada under this Government?

Tabling of Documents

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, I think my hon. friend is mixing programs. We are negotiating at the present time with most of the bargaining units which currently represent a large percentage of women. There will be increases within those negotiations which in time will reflect very favourably in terms of salary and wages paid to women.

I want to reiterate that you cannot do anything without targets and know where you are going. This Government knows where it is going on employment equity.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) has a question of privilege?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I do have a matter of privilege that I wanted to raise concerning statements made yesterday in the House by the Minister for the Environment (Mr. McMillan). I am informed by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister that the Minister is not available today but will be in the House on Tuesday. I will raise it at that time so the Minister can respond personally.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member.

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE

Mr. Richard Grisé (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106(8), I have the honour of tabling, in both official languages, the Government's response to 10 petitions numbered as follows: 332-4668, 332-4748, 332-4751 to 332-4755 inclusive, 332-4760, 332-4761 and 332-4772.

TRANSPORT

ANNOUNCEMENT OF BILL TO CREATE INDEPENDENT BOARD OF INQUIRY INTO TRANSPORTATION ACCIDENTS

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, as the Minister of Transport, I can say that the safety of our transportation system is one of the Department's major concerns. For this reason, I am tabling today a Bill to establish an independent transportation accident investigation board that will cover all transportation modes in Canada.

A good investigation system is essential to transportation safety. The new board will improve the quality of investigations on railway, marine and aviation accidents. Creating an independent board will also guarantee that investigations are fair and objective. The result will be increased safety in our transportation system.

Of course, Canada already has an excellent transportation safety record. This is due to the constant vigilance and efforts of many parties, including the Government, employees and the private sector. However, we cannot afford to be complacent.

Our Government is committed to assisting in every way possible those who are involved in improving transportation safety. My Department is conducting research to make equipment safer, including studies of daytime "lights on" for cars, anti-smoke masks in aircraft and locomotive recorders.

We are upgrading our equipment to facilitate air and marine navigation. We conduct public awareness programs, such as Operation Lifesaver, to reduce accidents at level crossings, and various water safety programs are provided by the Coast Guard for fishermen and the public. We are providing funds for the provinces in connection with setting up a national safety code.

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, we are constantly updating our safety regulations and improving our enforcement capability.

• (1210)

Beyond all this activity, the Government proposed, and Parliament adopted, in the National Transportation Act a national transportation policy which places safety at the top of our list of objectives. The Government takes this commitment seriously. We have brought forward better safety legislation for all the modes of transportation regulated by the federal Government.

In 1985, Parliament passed amendments to the Aeronautics Act which give us the most effective safety regime in the last 60 years. In 1987, safety amendments to the Canada Shipping Act were adopted. Most recently, the Railway Safety Act was passed by this House and is now before the Senate. Today, we have before us the final piece of transportation safety legislation—the Transportation Accident Investigation Board Bill. It too will improve safety.

Transportation accidents involving ships, trains and commodity pipelines will now be investigated by an independent body reporting to Parliament. This board, like the Canadian Aviation Safety Board, will be completely separate from the agencies responsible for safety and economic regulation of these modes of transport.

Those who make safety regulations and enforce them will be at arm's length from those who investigate possible shortcomings in regulation and enforcement. They will no longer have a potential conflict of interest.

[Translation]

The new Board will determine, entirely objectively, the causes of transportation accidents and will issue recommendations aimed at preventing a recurrence of similar accidents.

More importantly, Mr. Speaker, the Board will publish its conclusions and recommendations. However, public disclosure of problems is not enough.

The Bill goes a step further. It provides that the Minister of Transport or any other minister concerned shall respond to the Board's recommendations. We must publish our response within 90 days.

Hence, Ministers will have to be accountable for their actions, both to the public and to Parliament. The Bill provides that the Board's headquarters may be located in the National Capital Region or another location. It is a pleasure to inform you that the Board will be located in Hull, Quebec.

Its staff will consist of persons who currently conduct investigations on aviation, railway and marine transportation accidents. Their knowledge and expertise are a guarantee that the Board will be a success.

Mr. Speaker, all Members of this House can take pride in the transport safety legislation that has been passed in recent years. The public's safety has improved.

[English]

This final piece of safety legislation is equally important. Indeed, I hope that the subject matter of the Bill will be referred to the Standing Committee on Transport. I hope that it will receive the same all-Party support as the earlier Bills enjoyed.

I invite all Members of the House to consider it seriously and to support it for what it is—another key to improving transportation safety.

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, Clause 43 and Clause 52 of the piece of legislation which the Government is introducing today deal with the transition from the Canadian Aviation Safety Board and the repealing of the Canadian Aviation Safety Board Act. This legislation, in other words, will replace the present investigative mechanisms in marine, air and, as the Minister said a moment ago, rail transportation.

There was an individual appointed by the former Minister of Transport about seven months ago to pass judgment on this Bill before the House. That individual is now a member of the Supreme Court of Canada. His name is John Sopinka. He said in his letter to the then Minister of Transport dated February 3: "My review consisted of an examination of the documentation referred to in the terms of reference". The terms of reference involved, as he said, "policy-related advice in respect of the proposed Act relating the Multi-modal Transportation Accident Investigation Board", which is the Bill that we have before us today.

When one reads what Mr. Sopinka said to the Government of Canada in February of this year, and when one looks at what has happened to the Canadian Aviation Safety Board in its non-investigation of the tragic disaster in Gander, Newfoundland, one has to come to the conclusion that this is negligent legislation. It is in total contradiction to what Mr. John Sopinka said to the Government of Canada in his letter in February.

He was hired by the Government of Canada to pass judgment on this legislation. Furthermore, the legislation flies in the face of just plain common sense.

This board is not all powerful. It is subordinate. To whom? It is subordinate to the Department of National Defence. It is subordinate to the RCMP. It has even to co-ordinate its investigations with other government Departments if they are conducting an investigation.

What did the present Mr. Justice Sopinka say was wrong with the investigative procedures? He said in his letter that there was a very serious problem between the board members and the Chairman of the Board and the investigators. He said that the Board as such had felt as if it had no power. That is why the Board presented a minority report on the Gander crash. The board claimed that it was not fully consulted and that it had no power. The chairman and four board members got together and passed a preliminary report which in effect forms the basis of the final report. Mr. Sopinka stated that that has to be closed in this Bill. What did the Minister and the Government of Canada do in this Bill? The Canadian Aviation Safety Board had 10 members. Under this legislation the chairman still calls the meetings and decides on what investigations should take place, but this time it is five board members. The chairman is one of the five. What is a quorum under this Bill? The quorum is two, two out of five.

Under this legislation it is even doubtful whether the investigation into the Gander air disaster can continue. It states in the Bill that on any matter that is being investigated by the Canadian Aviation Safety Board and on which no final report has been made by the Board when section 43 comes into force, that it will continue the investigation will continue under this investigative board. However, if one goes back to the powers of the Board, it states that "the Board shall not investigate a transportation occurrence that involves a military conveyance or military transportation facility". What is a military conveyance? A military conveyance is an aircraft, ship, rolling stock, motor vehicle, or any other machine designed for movement from place to place that is operated by or on behalf of the Department of National Defence, the Canadian Forces, or a visiting force.

As a former law clerk, I would have to conclude from that that one could argue that the safety board being appointed here today by the Government of Canada would not be allowed to investigate the crash that took place in Gander,

Newfoundland. If the Minister can argue that other sections of the Bill give the authority, I can argue, and any lawyer could with equal force that that section of the Bill prevents it from happening. This is not the answer. As I said, it is negligent legislation. It is a contradiction of what Justice Sopinka wrote only six months ago, and it flies in the face of common sense.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I share some of the concerns of the previous speaker with regard to this impending legislation. Regardless of the type of investigation that has been conducted over a serious industrial or transportation accident, the situation in Canada is that the investigations take too long, and the reporting to the public is a very long process. The inquiry into the Gander tragedy took years to be conducted and for the report to be made public. In the meantime, the Americans published two complete reports in a much shorter period of time.

The inquiry into the Ocean Ranger incident and the drilling rig took years before the inquiry was complete and before the public was aware of the results. The publicity surrounding the original incident diminished and that diminished public interest in the issue. In addition, people who are flying or who are involved in marine or rail transport are subject to a long waiting period before there is any action by government. Certainly, some action is taken, and there is not a complete lack of action in the meanwhile. But there has not been a complete inquiry. Information has not been made public, and there has not been a public response by government.

I am concerned with our record of delays, long inquiries, and the length of time to make a report. How can a smaller commission, which not only investigates air safety but has now been given the responsibility for rail and marine, conduct all the inquiries necessary and be any faster than the dismally slow process we have at the present time?

I would like to see this legislation receive thorough study by the transportation committee. I would also like to see the Government express a willingness to expand the size of the Board. I would also like to see some legislative time limits in which these inquiries report. To do otherwise is to encourage the terrible process and delays that we have suffered.

It is not only in this particular area. In Canada we have seen Royal commissions have been set up with a purpose of producing quick reports, and we see that it takes two to three years, or four to five years for those reports to be made public. I do not see it in the legislation, and I do not see it in the statement of the Minister, but I hope that the Government will make a major commitment to fast, thorough inquiries, and ensure that the new Board has the ability to do so. Looking at the information that has been given so far, and the details that I know of the legislation, if anything there will be longer inquiries and a longer waiting period before the public knows what has happened. I question why the Minister has taken this route under those circumstances.

CANADA-EUROPE PARLIAMENTARY ASSOCIATION

PRESENTATION OF REPORT OF SIXTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF CANADIAN PARLIAMENTARY DELEGATIONS

Mr. Terry Clifford (London—Middlesex): Mr. Speaker, in the spirit of Bill C-72 and pursuant to Standing Order 122, I have the honour to present to the House, in both official languages, the report of the 16th annual Canada-Europe Parliamentary Association meeting of delegations from the Canadian and European Parliaments, held in Naples from May 23 to 27, 1988.

[English]

Earlier in today's dealings in the House the issue of fur labelling was raised. I wish to assure all Hon. Members that this was a major issue in our annual meeting with the European parliamentarians. The authors of that action both from the European Parliament and the British Parliament were at the meeting. We dealt with this issue in great depth. Since it is of interest to all Members of the House, I would urge Members to look at what actions were recommended in our report. I hope it is of interest to all and helps in the solution of this problem for all Canadians.

TRANSPORTATION ACCIDENT INVESTIGATION BOARD ACT

Hon. Doug Lewis (for the Minister of Transport) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-142 an Act to establish a Transportation Accident Investigation Board and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Shall the Hon. Minister have leave to introduce the said Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS ACT

Mr. Patrick Boyer (Etobicoke—Lakeshore) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-306, an Act to amend the House of Commons Act (by-elections).

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Shall the Hon. Member have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Boyer: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave at this time to introduce a Bill entitled an Act to amend the House of Commons Act, pertaining to by-elections. This has been certified consistent with Standing Order 108, and timely notice has been given. Briefly, the Bill would require an election writ to be issued within seven days of the vacancy occurring in the House of Commons, and the election to be completed within, at most, 80 days thereafter.

Mr. Speaker, the bill is being introduced by the Member for Québec-Est (Mr. Tremblay).

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

CANADA ELECTIONS ACT

Mr. Patrick Boyer (Etobicoke—Lakeshore) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-307, an Act to amend the Canada Elections Act (withdrawal of a writ of election).

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Shall the Hon. Member have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Boyer: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to introduce a second Bill, an Act to amend the Canada Elections Act, pertaining to withdrawal of a writ of election. This is consequential to the earlier Bill pertaining to the prompt holding of a by-election for any vacancy in this House. Let me state in conclusion that the principle here is that the constitutional right of citizens to representation here in the House of Commons must take precedence over considerations of Party advantage as to the timing of by-elections.

This Bill has been certified in conformity with Standing Order 108. Timely notice has been given, and this Bill is also seconded by the Hon. Member for Québec-Est (Mr. Tremblay).

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I have two motions to put which have been discussed with the House Leaders of both opposition Parties. I think you will find it acceptable. Before I do that, I would like to revisit the Business of the House for Monday and Tuesday of next week. We made considerable progress yesterday afternoon, last evening, and I anticipate we will make considerable progress today.

This should take us to the point on Monday where we do the following. First, we will call Motion No. 25 on the Order Paper for debate, on a procedural argument only, and adjourn the debate immediately after the procedural argument in order to give the Speaker an opportunity to consider the representations. We would then move in the following order: Bill C-77, the reply to the Senate to the emergencies Bill; Bill C-93, the multiculturalism Bill, report stage and third reading; Bill C-82, the lobbying report on third reading; Bill C-103, the reply to the Senate on the Atlantic Opportunities Bill. I would also say that that also is awaiting a decision by the Speaker. Therefore, that is movable somewhat. It will be done at the convenience of the opposition spokespersons.

We then move to Bill C-30, the national parks Bill, report stage and third reading. It is definite that we will vote the concurrence on the motions and a concurrence report to Bill C-121, the Bill to sell Eldorado, and possibly the amendments and concurrence on C-129, the Air Canada Bill, at six o'clock on Monday. Then, at a time convenient to opposition Parties, we will deal with third reading stage.

All of the comments I make with respect to report and third reading stage are conditional upon it being acceptable to the House to move immediately to third reading from report stage.

On Tuesday, we anticipate doing Bill C-84, the reply to the Senate on the Immigration Act; Bill C-110, the Trade Tribunal Act, at report and third reading stage; Bill S-17, which is a Bill from the other place dealing with Montreal Trust. I would point out to the opposition Parties that they have asked that the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) be in the House to answer questions at that time, and we will make those arrangements.

We then complete the day with Bill C-126, the Bretton Woods Bill, at report and third reading stage. I want to clarify that when I suggested that we would not be sitting Tuesday night it was only intended to convey that we would not sit Tuesday night of next week but we will be sitting for the balance of the week; Wednesday, Thursday, Friday. I did not want to leave any misconception in the minds of other Members of the House or other Parties.

CANADA GRAIN ACT

> That, the order for second reading and reference to a legislative committee of Bill C-112, an Act to amend the Canada Grain Act and other Acts in consequence thereof, standing on the Order Paper, be changed to read second reading and reference to the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Does the Hon. Member have the unanimous consent of the House for the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): I think it would be acceptable to us in our corner that the House go to the agriculture committee rather than to the legislative committee.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Likewise, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

WESTERN GRAIN STABILIZATION ACT

CHANGE OF REFERENCE TO STANDING COMMITTEE

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Does the Hon. Member have the unanimous consent of the House to move the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

PETITIONS

IRRADIATION OF FOOD

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty, on behalf of approximately 3,000 petitioners, to present 235 petitions which deal with the irradiation of food. The petitioners say that irradiation in food processing causes certain products which may be toxic or carcinogenic in food and they say that it should not be consumed. There are certain bacteria which are not killed, and therefore people may eat food thinking it is safe. The Committee on Consumer and Corporate Affairs made a recommendation on the irradiation of food, and these petitioners want the appointment of a commission of inquiry to conduct an in-depth study into the safety of food irradiation.

OPPOSITION TO OPEN-CUSTODY FACILITY IN RESIDENTIAL AREA

Mr. Terry Clifford (London—Middlesex): Mr. Speaker, it is a duty and a pleasure for me to rise today to table a petition on behalf of over 1,800 constituents of the City of London in my riding of London—Middlesex who are protesting the establishment of an open-custody facility for young offenders in a totally residential area. The petitioners take no issue with the availability of open-custody facilities under the Young Offenders Act. They deplore, however, the arbitrary manner in which the Peterson Government in Ontario has imposed the centre on a residential neighbourhood without adequate consultation.

Notwithstanding several attempts by the residents to approach the Ontario Government to discuss this issue, it remains unresponsive to the concerns of London residents. The petitioners are asking the federal Government to give direction to the provincial Government so that the Young Offenders Act may be implemented in a way that is fair and equitable to both young offenders and other citizens.

PROTECTION OF RIGHTS OF THE UNBORN

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I wish to present a duly certified petition calling on Parliament to pass legislation that will protect the life of the unborn child from conception and at all stages of development with the exception of the situation in which an abortion is performed in order to save the life of a mother.

REQUEST FOR DESIGNATION OF ROUGE RIVER VALLEY

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, it gives me pleasure to present to the House a petition on behalf of a number of residents of Scarborough, North York, Oshawa, Willowdale and Bowmanville concerning the Rouge River Valley in Scarborough. It is a very unique and precious natural area. Endangered wildlife and wilderness areas should be preserved in the national interest. The petitioners join with the Scarborough City Council, the federal Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan), the Save the Rouge Valley System and the Coalition of Scarborough Community Associations in expressing a great interest in and support for having the valley made a park. We are calling upon Parliament to work with the provincial Government which owns about 90 per cent of this area to establish the Rouge River Valley as a Canadian heritage land or as a provincial park.

Mr. Richard Grisé (Parliamentary Secretary to the Deputy Prime Minister and President of Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos 350, 355 and 356.

BEDFORD INSTITUTE OF OCEANOGRAPHY

Question No. 350—Mr. Henderson:

In (a) 1984, (b) 1985, (c) 1986, (d) 1987 did the Government (i) allocate funds, (ii) award research contracts, (iii) make any other grants or contributions to the Bedford Institute of Oceanography in Dartmouth, Nova Scotia and, if so, through which departments and, in each case, in what amounts?

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Fisheries and Oceans, Energy, Mines and Resources and Environment as follows:

In so far as the Department of Fisheries and Oceans is concerned:

(i) Listed below are the funds allocated to the Bedford Institute of Oceanography in Dartmouth, Nova Scotia by the Department.

(a) 1984-1985 $44.7 million; (b) 1985-1986 $41.0 million; (c) 1986-1987 $38.9 million; (d) 1987-1988. As a result of the Department's reorganization, funds are no longer allocated to the Bedford Institute of Oceanography (BIO), but to the Scotia Fundy Region of which BIO is a part.

(iii) Nil.

Note: The Department of Fisheries and Oceans maintains the complex. The Departments of Environment and Energy, Mines and Resources have offices housed in the complex.

In so far as the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources is concerned:

(a to d) (i) No. (ii) No. (iii) No.

EM&R's Atlantic Geoscience Centre is part of the Bedford Institute of Oceanography. The Centre carries out geological, geophysical and geochemical studies in Atlantic and Arctic offshore areas and obtains data used in the search for hydrocarbon resources, in resource evaluations, in marine environment protection, and in improving the safety of coastal and offshore engineering structures.

EM&R's operating expenditures including salaries for the Atlantic Geoscience Centre are as follows:

1984-1985 $12.3 million; 1985-1986 $16.4 million; 1986-1987 $13.8 million; 1987-1988 $14.6 million.

In so far as the Department of the Environment is concerned:

(a to d) (i) No. (ii) No. (iii) No.

The Conservation and Protection Services of Environment Canada occupies laboratory space in the Bedford Institute of Oceanography at no charge.

Environment Canada's operating expenditures including salaries for the Conservation and Protection Services are as follows:

1984-1985 $636,000; 1985-1986 $598,900; 1986-1987 $664,200; 1987-1988 $719,500.

ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT STUDIES

Has the Government commissioned environmental impact studies concerning the proposed purchase of a fleet of nuclear powered submarines and, if so on what dates and, in each case (a) from what individuals or groups (b) at what cost (c) what were the findings?

Mr. Bud Bradley (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): (a) and (c) The submarine project will follow Environment Canada's Federal Environmental Assessment and Review Process (EARP) with respect to environmental impact assessments. Atomic Energy of Canada Limited will be contracted to commence the initial environmental screening in mid-1988. Consultations will take place with military base experts, members of the civilian environmental, scientific and technical communities, and local elected officials.

(b) The total costs are yet to be determined, but are expected to fall in the range $300,000 to $400,000.

OVER-ALL COST OF NUCLEAR POWERED SUBMARINES

Is the cost of the following expenditures associated with the purchase of nuclear powered submarines and, if so, has the Government calculated it and, if so, what is the amount in the case of (a) the purchase of initial spare parts (b) the purchase of initial weapons load of torpedoes and missiles (c) the construction of shore support infrastructure on the east and west coasts, including dockyard facilities and supply and quality assurance systems (d) the construction of nuclear fuel (i) transport (ii) storage (iii) handling (iv) disposal facilities (e) the (i) purchase of fuel abroad (ii) construction of nuclear fuel production facilities in Canada (f) the security for nuclear fuel transport and storage (g) the cost of upgrading submarines to Arctic operational standards (i) in general (ii) by the addition of hardpoints to the hull to enable surfacing through ice (iii) by the purchase of navigation aids and ice sensors (h) the training of two crews for each submarine, including (i) training abroad for some skilled personnel (ii) hiring of foreign instructors (iii) construction of training facilities (i) the training of dockyard personnel in servicing the submarines and reactors (j) the training of shore personnel in nuclear fuel (i) transport (ii) handling (iii) storage (iv) disposal (k) the (i) construction of infrastructure for manufacturing hull and internal equipment components in Canada (ii) training for builders (iii) purchase of Canadian-made components (iv) possible changes to the submarine design to accommodate Canadian components.

Mr. Bud Bradley (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): Department of National Defence's submarine project cost estimates include all items, with the exception of (e) (ii). An appropriate allowance for cost risk is also included in the estimates for each item. The estimates will differ somewhat depending on whether they apply to the French or the British submarine design. The estimates will be refined during project definition so as to support a subsequent government decision on whether or not to proceed with project implementation. The actual cost estimates cannot be divulged at this time so as to protect British and French proprietary information and not to prejudice the selection of submarine design country of origin.

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURN

Mr. Richard Grisé (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, if question No. 317 could be made an order for return, that return would be tabled immediately.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The questions listed by the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary have been answered. Is it the pleasure of the House that question No. 317 be deemed to have been made an order for return?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

FEDERAL EXPENDITURES IN KENORA—RAINY RIVER CONSTITUENCY

Question No. 317—Mr. Parry:

Since September 4, 1984, have any government departments or agencies spent money in the constituency of Kenora—Rainy River and, if so, by which departments or agencies and, in each case (a) in what amounts (b) under which categories and programs was the money spent?

Return tabled.

Mr. Grisé: I ask, Mr. Speaker, that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

AIR CANADA PUBLIC PARTICIPATION ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-129, an Act to provide for the continuance of Air Canada under the Canada Business Corporations Act and for the issuance and sale of shares thereof to the public, as reported (with an amendment) from a legislative committee.

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys) moved:

That Bill C-129 be amended in Clause 6 by adding immediately after line 37 at page 3 the following:

"(f) provisions restricting the Corporation from acquiring control, through ownership of shares or otherwise, in an air carrier providing international services under a license issued pursuant to the National Transportation Act;

(g) provisions respecting the enforcement of the constraints and requirements imposed pursuant to this section."

Mr. Mike Cassidy (for Mr. Orlikow) moved:

That Bill C-129 be amended in Clause 6 by adding immediately after line 37 at page 3 the following:

"(f) provisions requiring the Corporation to maintain and strengthen its role as a Canadian Corporation by ensuring that labour, equipment and services required by the Corporation be Canadian in origin wherever feasible and where not feasible that Canadian content be maximized as a part of such labour, equipment and services requirements;

(g) provisions requiring the Corporation to maintain existing Corporation standards respecting safety, maintenance and customer service;

(h) provisions requiring any subsidiary corporation of the Corporation to be bound by this Act including any subsidiary corporation which may be formed from or by the parent Corporation once this Act comes into force."

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I recognize the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) on Motion No. 4.

[Translation]

Mr. Grisé: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary on a point of order.

Mr. Grisé: Mr. Speaker, in the Chair's decision yesterday, Motions Nos. 4 and 6 were to be debated together and voted on separately.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Yes, they are to be debated together but voted on separately. The Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys has the floor.

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak to Motion No. 4 which I think deals with a very severe deficiency in the Bill that is before the House. I believe that it is a deficiency which must be corrected.

Motion No. 4 is in two parts. The first part relates to Clause 6 and refers to Air Canada not being able to purchase the shares of another airline that has international routes in accordance with the National Transportation Act. The primary reason for this is that all Canadians want to be assured that there is competition between the airlines in Canada. The Air Canada Act as stated alleviates any fear that any other airline in Canada will purchase controlling interest in Air Canada because each shareholder can only hold a 10 per cent interest in Air Canada. Unless there is a shareholders' agreement among various shareholders, an airline will not have controlling interest in Air Canada.

However, the other alternative must be looked at as well. We must not lose our competition through Air Canada purchasing the competing airlines which, in this case, would be Canadian Airlines International and Wardair. If that were to happen, then the lack of competition would drastically reduce any efficiency that would be left in the air transportation industry in Canada as a result of the privatization of Air Canada.

Canadian Airlines International, of course, was formed as a result of the merger of Canadian Pacific and Pacific Western Airlines. Because Pacific Western Airlines purchased Canadian Pacific, I think it is safe to assume that this airline is governed by Alberta legislation which, I believe, restricts the amount of ownership that any one shareholder can hold in Canadian Airlines International. That is not something with which I am very well versed, but that is my understanding.

That, of course, would alleviate the concern of Canadian Airlines International being purchased by Air Canada for the moment. However, the Legislature of Alberta is outside the jurisdiction of this House of Commons, and as such, can change its legislation as it wishes. This would mean that Canadian Airlines International, if it is restricted from having any of its shareholders own more than a certain percentage of its shares, could have that provision changed by the Legislature of Alberta. This amendment also reflects the fact that Wardair is not so bound.

Perhaps there is the protection of the National Transportation Act, but there is a certain amount of leniency in the federal Government's regulations which could ultimately lead to Air Canada purchasing its major international competition. For that reason, I think it is paramount that this amendment, Motion No. 4, which adds subclause (f) to Clause 6, be approved by the House.

Hon. Members will also note that there is a second portion to Motion No. 4 which would add a subclause (g) which deals with provisions respecting the enforcement of the constraints requirements imposed pursuant to the clause.

What that does to Clause 6 is add certain restrictions and reinforce certain of its provisions. For example, we have in Clause 6 provisions that non-residents can own only 25 per cent of the shares. As well, only 25 per cent of the non-resident shares can be voted at any annual meeting. That is an important safeguard. The clause also says that Air Canada must maintain its maintenance base in Winnipeg and its head office in Montreal. Those are important provisions and there must be a provision requiring them to be abided by and there must be sanctions should they be breached.

In Bill C-21, the Act to privatize Eldorado Nuclear and merge it with the Saskatchewan Mining Development Corporation, we find the exact wording of my proposal. Yet it is not included in this Bill dealing with Air Canada. The Government is saying it does not need that clause in this Bill because we are protected by Clause 6(2) which refers to the Business Corporations Act and says that Act will look after these requirements. However, I will read Clause 6(2) which says:

> (2) The regulations made pursuant to subsection 168(5) of the Canada Business Corporations Act apply, with such modification as the circumstances require, in respect of the Corporation as if the constraints imposed pursuant to paragraphs (1)(a) and (b) were a constraint referred to in paragraph 168(1)(a) of that Act.

The first deficiency is that the application of the Canada Business Corporations Act only applies to subclauses (a) and (b). It does not apply to subclauses (c), (d) and (e) as they are presently in the Act, and does not apply to (f) which would be the first part of Motion No. 4 that I am proposing. In effect, the provisions referring to the percentage of non-resident shares being voted at an annual meeting, the requirement that the maintenance base be maintained in Winnipeg and the requirement head office be maintained in Montreal, cannot be enforced. The provisions are there but the Government is saying they do not have to be abided by. That is ludicrous.

Let me just go on and see what safeguards the Canada Business Corporations Act provides for this clause. I want to refer to Section 168. This is the constraint referred to. Section 168(1)(a) says that subject to subsection 170 and 171 a corporation, any of the issued shares of which are or were part of a distribution to the public and remain outstanding and are held by more than one person may, by a special resolution, may amend its articles in accordance with the regulations to constrain the issue or transfer of shares to any class of persons who are not resident Canadians. That may be fine but there is an optional provision there. The Government does not have to abide by this. It is optional. Then we go to Section 168(5) which is referred to in the Act. Once again it is optional. Therefore, the Canada Business Corporations Act does not help us to make sure that these provisions in the Air Canada Bill have to be followed. I think if they do not have to be followed and are not followed it is going to be devastating to this country.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I am very conscious of the fact, and I hope the Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster) is, too, that we really need to get this part of the Bill through in order that the agricultural Bills, which are also important, can be debated. Since there will be no vote on this Bill until Monday night at six o'clock, we are in a very difficult position. As a New Democrat opposed to the privatization of Air Canada, I would dearly like to debate this Bill until two thirty today and again from ten o'clock on Monday right through the day. However, in the end the vote will take place at the same time. Therefore, it is the kind of thing one does at this time of year, that is, to speak less fulsomely than one would like on an extremely important principle.

The Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) has already spoken to his amendments and the ones put forward by myself on behalf of my friend from Winnipeg North which are rather similar. We in this Party are trying to ensure that if Air Canada is to be privatized because of a decision of the Government, we do not then wind up losing the standard of service, safety, maintenance, and commitment to Canadian content in its purchases by Air Canada which we have had in the past.

It is regrettable that in its desire to make Canadian air transportation a clone of the U.S. system the Government was not prepared to put these kinds of provisions in the Act to begin with. In addition, it is important that the articles of continuance, when they are drafted, have provisions to ensure that the commitments which are to apply to Air Canada are enforceable. I do not want to see a situation where pious wishes are put into the articles of continuance but the board of directors, which according to the Government will include only passive participation from the majority shareholder, the people of Canada, will be able to say we saw that but it was not very important and forgot about it.

There will be no means by which an employee, a union, a customer or simply a Canadian concerned about Air Canada will be able to ensure that the commitments being made in this Bill are lived up to.

It was stated repeatedly in committee that Air Canada is the leader among Canadian airlines in safety and maintenance. Do we want it to stay that way or do we want to allow the standards to be steadily downgraded as a means of shaving a dollar or two off the fares here and there? I suggest that this motion could be seen as a vote of confidence in the way that Air Canada's management and employees have run the airline over a lengthy period of time. I feel that sense of confidence and I am sorry the Government does not feel the same but is withdrawing its participation and letting Air Canada go into the private sector.

I fear that the quality of service we receive from Air Canada is going to diminish. Thanks to the magic of telecommunications, the new Air Canada management will find the area of Canada where it can drive wages down to the lowest level and will put its reservation services there rather than have a local service which is approachable and friendly. The guarantees that are suggested here in terms of maintaining standards of safety, customs services, and maintenance are not in the collective agreement. There is no binding force on those.

I, frankly, think I know what is likely to happen. We have two and a half national airlines given the restructuring of the airline industry which has taken place in recent years. I would not be surprised if the Government's effort at deregulation and its decision to privatize now will lead us very soon to having one and a half or possibly even only one national airline rather than having two and a half national airlines and that that one national airline will be in private hands and have an effective monopoly over air travel in much of Canada.

Canadians in Ottawa, Toronto, and Vancouver are well served by air services in Canada right now. One of the reasons for that is the public-private competition which we have also had in broadcasting, the railway industry, and other areas. However, to know what it is like to have only one private sector monopoly you should talk to residents of some of our northern communities who are served by only one airline. It costs them $600 just to get to a southern point where they can take advantage of the cheap fares which are offered from time to time for off-season travel.

That is the situation which will prevail in many parts of Canada if there is no further rationalization. No control of that can be exercised from here, nor can we exercise any control over the threat that the standards of Air Canada could be reduced at the risk of both Air Canada customers and those who presently work for this great airline. We want Air Canada to continue to be a great airline.

In the interests of time I will cease speaking now but I want you, Mr. Speaker, and all Canadians to know that New Democrats feel very strongly about these issues. We are distressed beyond words that the Government is prepared to allow Air Canada to be privatized and is not prepared even to guarantee that Air Canada will maintain the excellent standards it has had in the past.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I want to support Motion No. 4 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) concerning the takeover of other Canadian airlines with international routings because that would destroy competition for international carriers into Canada except those already owned by the United States.

There is great concern that the general thrust of Air Canada has been toward the international. Most Canadians do not mind that. We are proud to see the flagship of our national carrier carrying Canadians and visitors around the world to Canada.

The problem which I see with the privatization, which will ultimately be 100 per cent if this Government survives long enough, is that the policy direction of Air Canada and service to Canadians will be lost. Air Canada has already pulled out its service to Sault Ste. Marie in my own constituency of Algoma. It now serves only two cities, I believe, in northern Ontario. It is clear that when it moves away from ownership by the Government it will pull out completely and will go in the direction in which it has always wanted to go, that is, toward international carriers. I have no objection to that but I want the national carrier to serve the regions of this country. We oppose this Bill because we think that it is the only way to maintain the regional service and policy service to Canadians.

It is clear that the whole matter of competition is being lessened in a tremendous rationalization of airlines since we have two airlines in the country, Canadian Airlines International and Air Canada, and three if we count Wardair. If this company is allowed to take over Canadian Airlines International when it is privatized all the competition will be lost because Wardair has a very limited service and certainly does not serve the regions. If Canadian Airlines were to decide that there is more money in serving Bangkok, Melbourne, Sydney, London, and other international capitals, we could be left with no service to the regions.

I find it absolutely incredible that in this divestiture the Government is divesting itself, initially at least, of 45 per cent but is going to vote its 55 per cent share with the majority of the private shareholders. If those private shareholders are Texas Air and Pan American Airlines and hold 25 per cent they will have control because the Government of Canada is going to vote with the private shareholders. Therefore, if 25 per cent is held by various American airlines they will have the majority of the shares held by the private sector. The Government has committed to vote with the private sector even though it holds the majority of the shares. That is an incredible disaster.

We do not agree with selling off Air Canada. People in the private sector say that if the Government is going to sell it off it should sell it all in order that it become a fully private sector oriented arrangement. This is a mixture of private and public sector, with the public sector voting with the private sector. I predict that it will be like the BCRIC of the Socred Government in B.C. before the days of Vander Zalm. It will be a disaster.

We had the same problem with the Canadian Development Investment Corporation where the private and public sectors were mixed. It simply does not work because the public sector is offended and angry when the federal Government intervenes in decisions. It simply does not work and this will not work unless the Government divests itself totally, in which case, of course, we will lose complete control of Air Canada as a carrier which will benefit the regions.

We have seen the beginnings of that in the last three and a half years since the Government came to power. It has been pulling out of the regional airports and leaving them with poorer service. People who live in smaller cities like Timmins,

Sault Ste. Marie, and North Bay like to have a national carrier serving them. They like to be able to walk into the Air Canada office and have world-wide service for ticketing arrangements and inquiries. That, of course, has already been lost since the Government took power, but it will become even worse when Air Canada is fully privatized.

I want to support the motion before the House but I certainly want to put forward those caveats about the divestiture and privatization of Air Canada. My Party is not opposed to privatization. In fact, a large number of private sector companies that were held by the Canadian Development Investment Corporation were put into a package and privatized. We have supported privatization in other areas. We are not ideologically opposed to privatization. When the public policy role is not necessary, privatization is acceptable. It could be very beneficial.

However, Air Canada is our national carrier and the flagship of the nation around the world. We do not believe it is possible to mix adequately the private and public sector with regard to this institution which represents our nation throughout the world. It is not good for the private sector or the Government of Canada to be interfering in the policies of a private sector corporation.

If we are elected in an election this fall we will not privatize Air Canada. We believe that it has a policy role to play, not only as an important flagship for our country around the world, but in its responsibility to serve the regions of our country. The most important responsibility of a Crown corporation is to serve the national interest rather than the international transportation aspects of Air Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words in support of my colleague's proposal that Bill C-129 be amended by adding the following to Clause 6, after line 37:

> "(f) provisions restricting the Corporation from acquiring control, through ownership of shares or otherwise, in an air carrier providing inernational services under a license issued pursuant to the National Transportation Act;

Mr. Speaker, I want to stress the importance of this amendment because it touches on the subject of deregulation and privatization, a very current topic, and I think we owe it to Canadians to explain exactly what deregulation and privatization means.

Mr. Speaker, in other countries people have said that deregulation and privatization of public corporations has often wiped out smaller, less profitable companies which were unable to compete, once the rules of the game had changed.

If we look at our neighbours to the South, we see that passenger service has deteriorated substantially in peripheral regions. Why? The answer is quite simple. Airline companies prefer to concentrate on busy routes, on large urban centres and on opportunities for quick profits, in order to make more money and thus reduce competition. That is why we must keep Air Canada, to ensure that quality service is maintained throughout the country, between urban centres and between the regions. If we look at what happened in Great Britain, for instance, when they privatized British Airways, we see that they first cut nearly one-third of the jobs, and that in the final instance, privatization resulted in the establishment of a monopoly. We don't want that in Canada, because we are too dependent on air transportation.

Mr. Speaker, I wanted to speak to this motion because the amendment contains a very essential provision in this connection, to prevent Air Canada from acquiring control, through acquisition of shares or otherwise, of international services.

[English]

I want to refer to the May issue of Policy Options, a magazine that I think we all read attentively. There is a very interesting article dealing with deregulation and the whole problem of takeovers and big business. This article by Andrew J. Roman begins:

> Deregulation will increase competition, right? Wrong. What masquerades as economic "reform" is often naked self- interest.

He explains the effect of deregulation and privatization. He goes on to speak about Air Canada:

> The Canadian Government is trying to create more competition in the airline industry. This is not as easy as it appears. Air Canada now has 60 per cent of the jet traffic in Canada. It has created a computerized reservations system, widely used by travel agents. This system books reservations so as to favour Air Canada.

I recommend this article to all Members. I will be using it during my third reading speech, if we get the chance.

The dilemma facing Canadians in regard to deregulation and privatization may well be whether we want Air Canada to eat up the other international carriers. It essentially controls the heart of the system, which favours Air Canada rather than dealing with all carriers equally.

Deregulation and privatization may be an objective that the Tories embrace, but I do not think they are serious when they tell us that it will improve transportation services, the quality of service, or improve what Canadians expect from their international airline, which is that Air Canada be a good, solid and competitive company.

The Hon. Member's amendments should have the support of all the House in order to prevent competition from being diminished. Not only would this allow Air Canada to maintain its good quality service, it would prevent it from buying off the competition and becoming a monopoly.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Before I recognize the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain (Ms. Dewar), I wish to inform the House that because of ministerial statements, Government Orders will be extended 16 minutes.

I regret that I did not see the Hon. Member for Hamilton Mountain rise before the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier).

Ms. Marion Dewar (Hamilton Mountain): Mr. Speaker, it is with some sadness that I rise to speak to this Bill. I certainly urge Members of the House to support Motions Nos. 4 and 6 because they could make a bad Bill a little better.

We know that historically it has been important for Canada to have a national carrier, and it is tragic to be faced with legislation such as this.

These motions would ensure that the Government will implement in the legislation the kinds of policies it says exist. It is well known that Air Canada has the highest standards of security and maintenance anywhere in the world. We want to maintain that standard. The experience of Eastern Airlines in the United States shows how badly the standards have slipped there as a result of more competition through deregulation. That possibility exists in Canada. If the Government does not accept these motions, it is simply saying that it does not care. But many Canadians are concerned about the quality of our air carriers and their standards of maintenance and safety.

Some three weeks ago I was on an Air Canada flight from Toronto to Ottawa. I spoke to a gentleman who had boarded the plane close to midnight, after travelling from the southern states since the early morning. He explained to me how pleased he was to be on this airline because he had been travelling all day, with nothing to eat, on airlines that had been overbooked. He said that he had missed one important meeting because these damn fools think that deregulation improves services".

As Canadians we have to appreciate that we have the carrier we have. I said, "We have two carriers like this". He agreed and said, "We are so lucky to have that kind of thing but we won't have it for long. We will be back into the same thing".

Mr. Grisé: You are opposed to small business. Are you opposed to small airlines and small business? That is the socialists' philosophy.

Ms. Dewar: It seems to me that we have to look at other people's mistakes and instead of reinventing the wheel and making the same mistakes, we should benefit and protect ourselves from the disasters that have happened in the airline industry south of the border.

We have an airline that is now making money. We are asking in one of these motions for customer services to be retained. I want to see that protection built in for customer services. Very often you are talking about the ticket agent in the smaller community earning about $30,000 a year. That is not an exorbitant salary. It might be the kind of wages this Government would like to save by reducing them to $6 an hour. The present customer service allows the airline to make a profit. Air Canada has not been in a deficit situation; it has been making a profit. It is about time the Government recognized that.

Sometimes when I hear that Conservatives understand business I think, God help us all if we are left with those kinds of business decisions. Their understanding of business is to de-employ the population, make a lot of money for a few and not worry about services anywhere else. Look at what has happened in the United States. You talk about cheaper airfares, but we know that there are cheaper airfares for travel to the main centres; not good service, but cheaper fares. What happens in the more remote areas? We know that those fares, if there is any service at all, become very expensive. That should not be tolerated in this country. We hope that we will have an election soon so we can get rid of all this bad legislation before us.

Motion No. 6 attempts to protect the pension funds of the people who have paid them. We have seen the experience of certain private owners and what they have done with pension funds. We must protect those funds for the people who have been the contributors. Surely that is not too much to be asking of the Government when it is stripping people of their potential futures. Just to protect pension funds is not an over-demand. The Government spoke nicely at the press conference that the Government would secure all these things. If the Government really meant it, why is it not in the legislation? Those are the kinds of things we are asking for.

If the Government is sincere about trying to make the best of a bad situation, it would listen to these motions and support them. The New Democrats don't believe in the privatization of Air Canada. We think Canada deserves to have a national carrier. We have been able to have two very competitive national carriers, which has been a good thing. We think there has to be a mixed economy in Canada and we have been very successful in stabilizing the economy by having that kind of mixed economy. The tragedy is the convoluted formula that we have. Whoever dreamt up the idea in the bowels of the bureaucracy that 45 per cent will be privatized, but the remaining 55 per cent will have the same say as the 45 per cent private, that is, one vote. With 25 per cent nationally owned, that means you can have foreign ownership. I do not know who was playing with the computer that day, but obviously it went down when people were trying to figure it out.

It is a tragedy but also an embarrassment for us as Canadians to think that that is the way the Government is playing with our assets and national carriers. If the Government had any respect at all for the country and the image we have in the transport industry, surely it would adopt these amendments to bad legislation.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt Motion No. 4?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on Motion No. 4 stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 6. Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on Motion No. 6 stands deferred.

Motion No. 8 will be debated and voted on separately.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (for Mr. Orlikow) moved:

That Bill C-129 be amended in Clause 10 by striking out line 26 at page 7 and substituting therefor:

"the Corporation and the Commissioner of Official Languages shall include in the annual report a review of the performance of Air Canada in respect of attaining the goals and objectives of the Official Languages Act."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that we go immediately to a vote on Motion No. 8. Perhaps then we can debate Motion No. 9. I believe that would have the support of my friends in the Liberal Party.

Mr. Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11) the recorded division on the motion stands deferred.

Motion No. 9 will be debated and voted on separately.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (for Mr. Orlikow) moved:

That Bill C-129 be amended in Clause 11 by adding immediately after line 4 at page 8 the following:

"the Corporation assumes all assets and all liabilities of the Corporation held immediately prior to the day on which the Corporation becomes a corporation to which the Canada Business Act applied."

He said: Mr. Speaker, while we would like to prolong the debate on this we are aware of the agricultural bills and I will be the only speaker for my Party on this motion.

[Translation]

I may add that the motion on which we just voted was about official languages, and its purpose was to ensure that the Commissioner of Official Languages will continue to monitor the performance of Air Canada with respect to the objectives of the Official Languages Act. Unfortunately, the Government rejected this motion which simply ensured that the Commissioner's annual report would contain an assessment of Air Canada's performance in this respect.

[English]

This is the final amendment. The amendment is designed to ensure that the Government does not give away Air Canada to the private sector and then take back a number of debt obligations which essentially would take a load off the private sector and put in on the taxpayers of Canada. That can take place according to the legislation right now, unless this amendment is ensured.

I hoped that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) might have been prepared to speak to this amendment because it is designed to ensure that the deficit does not increase by half a billion or one billion dollars because of the taking on of the obligations of the private sector. People might say: "How on earth would they do that?". If you look at the Eldorado Bill or arrangements on the sale of de Havilland, that is exactly what was done. Basically, the people of Canada gave away their interests in those Crown corporations by means of the obligations and debt which they took on when those Crown corporations went into the private sector.

Time is very limited, but let me say that there is a great tradition in this country which goes back to Sir John A. Macdonald whereby the public, through the Government, have participated in the industrial development and the industrial life of this country. That has been the case beginning with the Canadian Pacific Railway, which was only made possible because of land grants and other participation of the Government of Canada. The Crown corporation culture is something that we have developed. We have been responsible for that in a very successful way. I hate to see this go down the drain.

I am not alone when we say that we want to make sure that we do not get ripped off in the privatization under this Bill. Many Canadians do not feel that the sale of Air Canada is fair. As it has been put, is it fair to give assets to the private sector and leave a debt with the public sector? That is what has been done in cases such as Eldorado and de Havilland.

In the case of Air Canada, the liabilities amount to about $2.1 billion, plus another $336 million in perpetual bonds. The assets are in the order of about $3 billion. This is a big company. It is an effective company. However, I do not want to see a situation in which taxpayers wind up taking on some of that debt in order to line the pockets of people in the private sector.

I note the comment made by none other than the present Prime Minister when he pointed out that the only people who benefit from a takeover such as this one are the lawyers, the accountants, and the stockbrokers. I suspect that that will be the case here.

Throughout this debate the Government has hinted that it has polls backing its position on privatization, particularly of Air Canada. The fact is that that is not the case. The results of two recent polls, the Angus Reid poll, first, indicate that 53 per cent of Canadians were opposed when they were asked the question: "Should the Government sell any of the following Crown corporations to the private sector?" With respect to Air Canada, 53 per cent replied no while 35 per cent replied yes. The Environics poll asked a similar question: "Do you think the Government should or should not sell Air Canada?" Some 51 per cent replied in the negative while 31 per cent replied positively.

There is a large number of Canadians—in fact, the majority—with an opinion.

[Translation]

Interestingly, in La Belle Province, 55 per cent of the population said the Government should not sell Air Canada and only 25 per cent said they were in favour of selling Air Canada to the private sector.

[English]

Older polling data also show a consistency in this high regard for Crown corporations. Back in 1983 a Decima report showed that some 60 per cent of Canadians supported and appreciated Crown corporations because of their pricing, their profitability, their public accountability and their role in providing employment. Another Decima poll also showed that Canadians, by about a 69 per cent margin, believed that public ownership should be the same or higher in the major industrial sectors. In other words, there was an acceptance among Canadians of the use of public enterprise in the constructive way in which we have had it in the country over the course of many years.

It is pointed out again and again that the sale of Air Canada is going forward primarily because this is an ideological question for Progressive Conservatives. Even if the private sector has to be subsidized to take these industries over, the ideology says: "Let's sell".

I wish to suggest that if the Conservative Party thinks that the private sector is such an effective provider of jobs and has such an efficient way of doing things, then let it explain the failure of Dome Petroleum, the Northland Bank, Massey-Ferguson, Maislin Trucking and Dominion Stores. There is a long list of private enterprises in the country that have not been efficiently and effectively run. Often the people in charge of them are people such as Conrad Black who are the bosom buddies of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and his colleagues in the Progressive Conservative caucus.

Here is what the Prime Minister himself had to say in his book Where I Stand: "I have yet to see a takeover that has created a single job except for lawyers and accountants". The people who will really benefit from this sale will in fact be the stock promoters and those type of people.

I will conclude on this note. In the British Telecom sell-off in the United Kingdom it is estimated that the costs of selling it off were somewhere around 120 million pounds and that the total expenses of the issue were about 220 million pounds. There were underwriting fees and advertising costs. A reduced price on shares was given to employees. There were telephone vouchers and bonus shares given to customers, et cetera, et cetera. This was all done by the Thatcher Government to move British Telecom into the private sector.

That type of thing will occur with Air Canada as well. In the end, all that will occur is that there will not be any money coming in to the Government of Canada. There will be a share issue which will allow a certain amount of money to Air Canada to buy new planes and nothing more. We will not see any effect on the deficit here in Canada. All we will have is a bunch of Conservative Cabinet Ministers and back-benchers with idiotic smiles on their faces, the Cheshire cats of politics in Canada, as they smile and watch Air Canada disappear into the great beyond, into the private sector.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have to say that I regret that very much. That is why at the very least I ask Hon. Members on all sides to support this amendment which will ensure that we do not subsidize by taking over the debt in the privatization of Air Canada.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing 114(11), a recorded division on the motion stands deferred.

Pursuant to Standing Order 13(5), the recorded divisions stand deferred until 6 p.m., Monday, July 11.

Orders of the day.

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (for the Minister of State (Grains and Oilseeds)) moved that Bill C-132, an Act to amend the Western Grain Stabilization Act, be read the second time and, by unanimous consent, referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. Lee Clark (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, in the interests of brevity and the importance of getting this Bill to committee, I will keep my remarks this afternoon to a bare minimum.

The Western Grain Stabilization Act has played a very significant role in supporting farm income in western Canada since 1976. It has been amended on two or three occasions since that time, the most important time being when the provisions for an interim payment on a regular basis were implemented. It has worked exceedingly well for those who are in the program.

By way of example, a farmer who has been participating since 1976 at maximum potential has paid some $8,925 by way of levies and has received approximately $65,000 by way of returns. The Government is concerned about two or three matters. First, we are concerned about the fact that there is a significant number of farmers who are not in the program. They may not be in the program for a variety of reasons. Perhaps, in part, they do not believe in the program. They may be opposed philosophically. Perhaps they believe, as some did, that it will never pay. There were no payments for an extended period of time.

We are left today with the fact that this is a very important part of the safety net in western Canada for the western Canadian farm community but some 13 per cent to 15 per cent of the farm population is not participating. Thus we are introducing a series of amendments to the Act which we hope will encourage a significant percentage of that group to join.

We are troubled by the deficit in the program. It exists at a level of about some $2.2 billion. There are provisions in the program as announced by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) last December at the time of the Outlook Conference, for a debt write-down of $750 million.

We are recommending that this Bill go to the Standing Committee on Agriculture. We are assuming that there will be a number of farm organizations that would want to appear before the committee, including a group that calls itself the Committee of Non-participants. Anyone who lives in western Canada is aware of the existence of this group. It is a group of individuals who believe for a variety of reasons that the proposed amendments are not satisfactory to them. We assume that the standing committee would want to hear this group of non-participants over the next few weeks.

The proposed amendments are designed to encourage people to join by the abolition of certain penalties which have been in place with respect to people who are conditional participants and those who might be rejoining the program.

There is an extension in the deadlines provided for in the legislation. The committee may want to look at that and perhaps even extend those deadlines beyond the prescribed dates in order to encourage as many people as possible to participate. The list of eligible crops covered by the program would be extended by the amendments. The fees would be raised, both the levies charged to the participants and also those paid by the Government as another way in which to make the program more fiscally responsible than it has been up to this point in time. There are some changes and proposed amendments with respect to people opting out, because some people may not wish to remain in the program and they would have the opportunity to opt out.

In general terms, as a result of the consultation process in which we have engaged to date and in which we assume the standing committee will participate, we are hoping that a significant number of western grain producers will conclude that it is to their economic advantage to participate in the program. As a result of the amendments we hope that the program will be in a more sound fiscal shape than it is right now. Quite frankly, if it were not for the support and the willingness of the Government to write-down some of the debt, I do not believe that this program could continue. That might be a debatable view, but that is my view, and it is the view of the Government.

With those brief remarks, Mr. Speaker, I recommend the amendments to the House and to the committee. In the interests of ensuring that the program remain viable I hope that the committee will be able to report back to the House in the relatively near future.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to have the opportunity to speak to Bill C-132, the Western Grain Stabilization Act. It seems that agriculture legislation gets a very low priority around here. Last week the Minister of State for Agriculture (Mr. Blais) spoke to a rush-up job on the Canadian Agriculture Products Standards Act. This week we heard the Parliamentary Secretary. We would like to see the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) in the House to defend the legislation, or at least the Minister of State for Grains and Oilseeds (Mr. Mayer). So far we do not seem to attract that assistance from the Minister, because we do not have a chance to put these Bills through.

Mr. McDermid: What is the matter with the Parliamentary Secretary?

Mr. Foster: If Members opposite wish to speak, I will be glad to listen. We can talk until 2:15 p.m. or move the legislation along, just as you like.

It is interesting that there is such great support for the Western Grain Stabilization Act. I recall back in the 1970s when Otto Lang was the Minister responsible for the Wheat Board and brought this legislation into the House and attempted to establish the concept that there should be stabilization of the grain industry in western Canada, and mechanisms should be put in place that would be triggered when world prices of grain were down or when the volumes were down.

In the last two or three years we have seen the wisdom of that legislation brought in in the 1970s by Mr. Lang and supported by his Parliamentary Secretary, Mr. Goodale. This legislation has shown its worth, if only last year when $1.4 billion was paid out under this program. In the previous year it was close to $1 billion, and payments will be needed this year.

This legislation is designed to bring greater participation, and to that extent, I support the legislation. It is desirable that we have greater participation. Ultimately, I would like to see that this legislation is the main way in which we stabilize western agriculture, as far as grain production is concerned. I am not sure that this Bill goes that far, but these amendments are designed to provide flexibility and retroactivity, and remove the penalties for not participating. I believe it will encourage a larger number of farmers to participate. It will provide for a larger number of crops to be utilized under the program.

Because the Government has written off the $750 million for those who have not participated, they believe that those funds should have been channelled through the special grains program. From a purely equitable and fair point of view they are correct, but the question arises from the point of view of the Government how that deficit would be paid, because the additional contributions that would have to be raised are inordinately large.

This arrangement provides that the contributions made by farmers will be increased from a maximum of $600 to $2,400, whereas the contributions of the Government will only be increased by 100 per cent. In the committee we will certainly want to look at the fairness and equity of that arrangement.

At the committee stage we will certainly want to be clear how the Government will make this program feasible in the long term. From officials we will want to know whether the increases to 4 per cent and to 6 per cent will be adequate to make the fund actuarially sound, or whether there will have to be large cash injections such as the one provided for under this legislation of some $750 million.

Because this is based on market returns, and market returns drop down, as we have seen in last three or four years, we will also want to know how this mechanism will provide an adequate return. It is not the market returns that farmers are concerned about, but that the costs of production are covered, and clearly those costs have been marching up every year, while at the same time the price of grain has dropped by 50 per cent during the last four or five years.

The Minister of Agriculture and the Minister of Grains and Oilseeds will have the distinction of having provided Canadian farmers with the lowest prices in cash dollars since the Government of R. B. Bennett of 1930 to 1935, and because of the drought that we face this year, we will probably be faced with one of the lowest levels of production in modern times. We see the difficulties of the Tory Governments of the 1930s being revisited on the country in the last half of the 1980s.

Those are a few introductory remarks. I believe these amendments will generally be beneficial. We want to see this legislation dealt with in more detail in committee where we will be able to identify whether the program will be actuarially sound; why the Government is increasing its contributions by only 100 per cent whereas farmers are being asked to increase theirs by 400 per cent; and as a result of the mechanisms in place whether the returns will be adequate to cover the losses of farmers this year.

The response will also be important from the group that have been non-participants as to the mechanisms the Government is providing in this legislation to ensure some equity and fairness to them because of the Government's bail-out of the fund when they see it as being more fair if the $750 million had been paid directly to the special grains program.

Those are a few preliminary comments and observations, Mr. Speaker. I wish there was more time, but there are several pieces of legislation before the House today, and I believe that this one can be dealt with in greater detail in the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, it is somewhat against my better judgment that I am here, because I made a decision some time ago that I would not go along with the rushing through of agriculture legislation through the House. I find myself here again, at the end of the parliamentary year, reneging on a promise to myself. In the past, several items of legislation have been passed—agriculture legislation—in exactly this way.

I think it is partially the priority of the House, but in many cases it may be that we just do not have enough support for the agricultural industry in the country. When we amended this particular Act some time ago, it was done in exactly the same way as it was being done here. In fact, it never did go to committee. That might partially be the reason for some of the little concerns that we have had. If we had taken it to committee then, we may not have had exactly the problems that we have now. There is no doubt that as we changed the triggering mechanism two or three years ago, we probably should have taken a good look at the levy structure. We may not have found ourselves in the huge deficit that we are in now.

There is general acceptance among all Parties here and across the industry, that there is a need for some amendments to this Act. The Government has the major need here, and it needs authority. To make a $750 million contribution to the fund is what the Government is doing in this particular case. It is an extra contribution to the fund. Without that being done, the whole structure of the stabilization program would collapse, because the levies would not even pay the interest on the deficit in the future. So we do need these changes.

This is also the kind of legislation, the kind of safety net, that is needed. Some day I hope that the three Parties here in the House can get together on a global safety net which would allow the industry to feel some security rather than be dependent upon ad hoc pay-outs by the particular Government in power.

I think that the farming sector of the agricultural industry feels a certain amount of resentment at being dependent upon the Government in power. It would much rather have in place a program which they could be sure will guarantee them some kind of security of income on the way. I think it is to the credit of the Government that it did put in some changes in the last few years which allowed the triggering under other terms than just a straight aggregate.

There is a concern regarding this particular Bill in that there are a number of groups who feel that since the aim of this Bill was to get as many people into the stabilization program as possible, putting into the Bill an opportunity for the people who are presently in the program to get out of it is a concern. As one farmer put it, "What we are doing is, we are giving those who helped to get the benefits of the deficit being created permission to leave the stabilization program". That is a concern. I do not have a solution for it. I do not think that we want to suggest that they should not be able to get out. We are making changes in the program so that they have a right to analyse whether or not they are in the program.

It is a concern and I think it is one of the things which the committee, when it gets together, will have to look at. In other words, what we are doing is inviting some people in through the front door, but we are suggesting to another group that they might leave through the back door. That may cause us some problems and it is something that we need to look at in committee. It is one of the reasons that most people involved with this Act have insisted that the Bill go to committee rather than being dealt with in the House. We do need some assistance and some consultation with those sectors of the industry that have a very good insight into that matter.

There are a couple of other concerns in this particular Act as well. The Bill allows a 1,000-tonne minimum for a designated purchaser. That whole area of farm-fed feeds needs to be looked at, and I think we might get some very profitable advice from the industry if we give them the opportunity to give it.

There is a concern that has been expressed about whether to extend this privilege of stabilization to non-Canadians. I know that that has to be dealt with within the Charter and it is something that we need to look at a little more closely, although I have no great concern about it, myself.

The third and fourth areas that we have to look at are the levy deductions, how they are going to be carried out. Knocking them off the pay-outs is one method which is suggested in here which may need to be looked at as well.

All in all, I have no particular concerns about the Bill. We will support it, but we do need to look at it and, possibly, there need to be some amendments. The people who have been non-participants in the past really need an opportunity to be able to say yes or no to some of the things that are in here, or give us advice as to how they think we should handle it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD ACT

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-92, an Act to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act, as reported (without amendment) from the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): There are three motions in the amendment of report stage of Bill C-92, an Act to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act, and all are related to Clause 8 of the Bill. After consultation, I am selecting Motions Nos. 1 and 3. Both will be debated and voted on separately. Motion No. 2 will not be selected. It is in the name of the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) and is in essence identical to the motion which was moved, debated and negatived in committee.

Therefore, the House will now proceed to debate on Motion No. 1.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma) moved:

That Bill C-92 be amended in Clause 8 by striking out line 33 at page 33 at page 5 and substituting the following therefor:

"railway car during the pool period. The said sum shall reflect an equitable allocation of the costs incurred by the Board to maintain the country delivery points."

He said: Mr. Speaker, my motion which amends Clause 8 is a provision to ensure that the amount provided for in Section 8, which provides for the Government to prescribe a payment to those farmers who use producer cars, is paid. The question turns on how large that payment will be, and how much of the cost maintaining the country elevator should be charged to those who use the country elevator system and those who use producer cars. My amendment provides that the said sum shall reflect an equitable allocation of the cost incurred by the Canadian Wheat Board to maintain the country delivery points.

There has been a great controversy surrounding this issue. The Prairie Pools has sent every Member of Parliament a letter which says:

Clause 8 would allow the Canadian Wheat Board to waive interest and storage charges on grain shipped in producer cars.

The farmers' right to use a producer car must be maintained. However, the only savings that should be deducted are elevation and handling costs.

The argument there is that the only cost that should be deducted and paid out as a sum to an individual farmer is the elevation and handling charges. This argument is put in very strong terms.

This letter received from the Prairie Pools today was signed by Mr. William Strath, Mr. Garth Stevenson and Mr. D. Livingstone, the Presidents of the three western pools. They go on to say:

Any further deduction of storage will likely add to the costs of those farmers using the country elevator system. The infrastructure costs of western Canada's grain handling system are not charged to the users of producer cars.

There is clear evidence of extra costs associated with the producer car since these costs are attributed to the railways and are paid for by all producers in the costing process.

You are aware of direct expressions of concern from large numbers of grain producers in the Prairie area. We urge you to take all possible steps to remove Clause 8 from Bill C-92.

The pools feel very strongly that this payment as proposed in Clause 8 would not necessarily ensure that those using producer cars are paying their fair share of maintaining the infrastructure surrounding the operation of the country delivery points. I do not want to elaborate any more fully. In committee, I thought that my motion was relatively mild. It did not propose to delete the clause.

The Canadian Wheat Board does not have the full responsibility for all of this. Some of it comes under the Western Grain Transportation Agency and some of it under the Wheat Board Act. We were not dealing with the Western Grain Transportation Act so we could not deal with that side of it. The Government refused to give us the cost figures. My amendment is simply designed to provide that there be a fair share of the costs of maintaining the country delivery point paid by those people using producer cars.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I would like to support this motion moved by the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster), particularly since I understand that my motion which is very similar was not allowed. I did not know the decision of the Chair until this moment.

I support this motion because, for some unexplained reason, the Government has been unwilling to deal with this issue logically. During committee hearings, a suggestion similar to this motion was brought up, and the suggestion that there are no other costs for producer cars is absolutely illogical. Consequently, there is a need to deal with the costs of producer cars in a comprehensive way. That is all we are suggesting in this motion. We should look at the cost of producer cars and decide how much of it should be returned or needs to be returned.

There are two or three possible ways of proceeding with this particular Bill. We could eliminate the clause altogether, which is what my motion suggested, or we could put in a clause which would deal with producer cars in a comprehensive way, or we could drop the Bill entirely and start over. However, there are some things in the Bill which the Government feels it needs, so that option is unlikely.

There are some benefits from producer cars and there are some liabilities. It is like a balance sheet. We want to be able to put the total picture in front of the farmers and the people who use producer cars, add the credits, subtract the debits and possibly pay that amount. There should not simply be an ad hoc approach, allowing the Wheat Board to try to make a decision, arbitrary or not, as to how much a producer should be paid.

At this time, the producer knows what he will get out of using producer cars. It is possible that he may even lose money if the Wheat Board decides it wants to do this in a different way.

Mr. Lee Clark (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, in the interests of brevity, I will make only two or three points in an attempt to address the concerns raised by both Hon. Members.

First, I want to make it clear that we are talking about a recommendation by the Wheat Board that certain moneys currently being paid by the users of producer cars for services which they do not receive will be remitted to them. It is important to remember that at the moment they are being charged for services which they do not receive.

The Bill itself only goes part way in addressing the concerns of producer cars. This is enabling legislation in which the Wheat Board would make a recommendation to the Minister which would then go to Cabinet and, by Order in Council, a percentage of the fees involved would be remitted to the users of producer cars. It is clear that they would continue to pay a certain amount to the country elevator system for services which they do not receive, but presumably that would be just in the sense that all prairie grain producers would benefit from the presence of the producer car system.

I would also remind Hon. Members that we are not talking about huge amounts. For example, at the moment, the storage and interest charges currently being paid for wheat by the users of producer cars is $2.68 per tonne. For barley, it is $1.62 per tonne. This Bill would permit the remission of a certain percentage of that amount, that percentage to be determined by Order in Council.

I think this is fair. It is perhaps a typical Canadian compromise. It goes down the middle in terms of addressing the concerns of producer car users while at the same time recognizing the need for the continued presence of the country elevator system.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The question is on Motion No. 1, standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster).

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 13(5), the recorded division on the motion stands deferred until six o'clock p.m. on Monday, July 11, 1988.

• (1410)

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert) moved:

Motion No. 3:

That Bill C-92 be amended by deleting Clause 8.

The Acting Speaker Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Pursuant to Standing Order 13(5) the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred until six o'clock p.m. Monday, July 11, 1988.

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (for Mr. Mayer) moved that Bill C-112, an Act to amend the Canada Grain Act and other Acts in consequence thereof, be now read the second time and, by unanimous consent, referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I was hoping the Parliamentary Secretary would speak, but this Bill tends to be a technical Bill and deals with a number of matters relating to the Canada Grain Act and things such as grading, documentation, definitions, and such things as, for example, changing the designation of chemists to that of scientists. It creates some new grades for wheat and a number of other changes like that. However, as we understand it, the secret reason for bringing this legislation before the House is to provide a seven-year tenure for the three members of the Grain Commission. We are concerned about this because it not only provides tenure at pleasure, but also provides for a five-year tenure for assistant grain commissioners. We are concerned that this might lead to the Government using it for political patronage purposes.

In the February 18 edition of the Manitoba Co-Operator it was reported that this was going to happen. The Government was planning to bring this legislation in to provide tenure so that the Hon. Member for Lisgar (Mr. Murta) can be appointed to the Canadian Grain Commission.

Whether or not that is true we are not sure, but that is what is reported in the Manitoba Co-Operator. The article says that the Hon. Member refused to be appointed to the Grain Commission because there was no tenure. The deal was then struck between the Minister responsible for grains and oilseeds to get a seven-year tenure for commissioners by changing the Act. That is the part of this Bill which we object to. We think that doing this is not necessarily in the best interests of the country.

The article points out that if the Hon. Member for Lisgar was appointed to the commission, the present commissioner would be moved over to the Canadian Wheat Board. I think we should ask the Government to withdraw these provisions which are of a purely partisan nature and which would change the commission from a non-partisan regulatory body . . .

Mr. Clark (Brandon—Souris): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. We were hoping we could go to committee and these questions could be answered in detail there because there are answers. Grain commissioners used to have a term of ten years in the 1970s, if I recall correctly. The legislation was then amended so that the term was at the pleasure of the Minister. It is now suggested that it be seven years.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): It is my understanding that the Hon. Member for Algoma was going to suggest that we not see the clock.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, I am prepared to see the Bill go to committee if we can avoid seeing the clock for another 10 or 20 minutes. Otherwise, I would rather see the Bill come back and we will finish it on Monday.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): We have Private Members' Hour coming up. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Axworthy: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I am quite prepared, if there is unanimous consent, to give another 15 minutes to the Bill. I want to reserve my right to speak for a few minutes because there are a number of things here that I think are important and I want to speak to them on second reading.

Mr. Penner: Mr. Speaker, I am quite prepared to agree to the request of the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster) that more time be given to this Bill so that it may go to committee. However, I do so on the understanding that the additional time would not be taken from the important motion standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Yukon (Ms. McLaughlin) and that we continue with the normal amount of time for that debate. This is a vital question relating to the North, and the North is much too neglected anyway to shortchange it this afternoon.

Mr. Grisé: On the same point of order, Mr. Speaker. We are prepared to extend debate on Bill C-112 for 15 minutes if we have unanimous consent that after that time this Bill will be referred to committee. After that, of course, you will allow the full one hour for debate on the motion of the Hon. Member for Yukon.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Do I have unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, our concerns are that this legislation is being changed as the result of a direct political arrangement worked out between the Minister of State (Grains and Oilseeds) (Mr. Mayer) and the Hon. Member for Lisgar. The Bill changes the present arrangement where members of the Canadian Grain Commission sit at pleasure to an arrangement where they have tenure. I do not know what the Parliamentary Secretary is talking about when he says there was a ten-year arrangement. Clearly the legislation as it exists today is at pleasure, and there is no guarantee of seven years.

It is not as if this matter has been raised only in the Manitoba Co-Operator. It was raised a number of times at other stages. The Government is creating a position by legislation for a member of its own caucus. Bearing in mind the tremendous controversy and publicity which has surrounded thousands of partisan appointments by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), I would think that the Government would not want to bring this kind of aura to the question of agricultural appointments in the West.

You will recall, Mr. Speaker, that when, a little over a year ago, the Member for Lisgar was to be appointed to the Canadian Wheat Board, there was such a fuss in western agricultural circles that the Government backed off almost immediately. However, on July 5 The Toronto Star reported, "Grain agency posting reported for Tory MP". The article reads:

> Progressive Conservative MP Jack Murta, a former cabinet minister, will give up his House of Commons seat and accept a position on the Canadian Grain Commission, a newspaper says. Sources told the Winnipeg Free Press that the Manitoba MP will be appointed a commissioner with the federal grain-regulating agency, at a salary of $70,000 to $80,000 a year, within five weeks.

The House of Commons is moving legislation directly to create a position for a Member of Parliament. I do not know whether that involves a question of privilege, but it is unseemly that this Bill is introduced and is being rammed through the House during the last week or so of sittings when we have difficulty getting important pieces of legislation through. These reports indicate that the Government is deliberately creating a seat on the Canadian Grains Commission for the Member who does not want a seat in the House of Commons.

Those are our concerns. When we get to committee we will certainly be moving to amend that section to retain the "at the pleasure" aspect. When the Government came to power it found that to be the most satisfactory arrangement to deal with commissioners and assistant commissioners of the Canadian Grain Commission. If it was satisfactory when they came to power, they should certainly want the same satisfactory arrangement in place when they leave.

Those are our concerns with this legislation. The technical aspects would probably be useful, but we are concerned about the political nature of the amendments as they relate to tenure for the commissioners.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to take a few minutes to speak on this Bill. I have somewhat the same concern that Clause 3, which changes the commissioner's term from "at the pleasure" to seven years, does guarantee an appointee of the Government a rather long term. It is unfortunate that timing may have caused some of this, but this has become known as the "Murta Bill", which is very unfortunate.

There are a number of things in the Bill which require thorough study by the committee and experts in the industry. Consequently, there is a great need for it to go to committee before being passed.

For example, the Bill contains the suggestion that the licensing of varieties is not at present acceptable in our grain trade. The suggestion is that it is still a little bit up in the air. We should study the licensing of varieties. There is no doubt that it can be improved and it should be thoroughly studied by the industry.

The Government is to be congratulated on the very good job it has done of consulting with the industry to establish what is needed. That was done between the bureaucrats or drafters of the Bill, but Members of Parliament are not cognizant of that.

There is a section in the Bill which takes away the necessity of Parliament to ratify changes in grades and makes it a bureaucratic decision. I do not believe that this is necessarily good. Parliament has not necessarily done that always in the past, but it has always had the authority to intervene if there was a need to do so. Consequently, I think that is one of the areas which we need to study.

I have no particular objection to the suggestion of privatization of certain of the Canadian Grain Commission's functions, but we should look at that very thoroughly. I have been assured by the Minister and the commission itself that there is no intention to dilute the effectiveness of the commission. If that is so, I wonder why this particular clause is included. On that basis I would allow this Bill to go to committee.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I will not take very long to speak on this Bill. I want to preface my remarks by saying that they cast no personal reflection on the Member for Lisgar (Mr. Murta). I regard him as one of the Hon. Members of this House. I recall with strong respect the speech he made on capital punishment, which I considered to be one of the finer speeches I have heard in this House. As a matter of fact, I understand the Member is now a constituent of mine, having bought a house in Winnipeg in preparation for his new standing in life.

The fact is that this thing stinks. There is no other way of putting it. I want to appeal to some Members on the government side who may have some shred of integrity left. The fact is that they fired people on the Grain Commission who were "at pleasure" without severance. They cut off their careers. They did not give a care about their future, their livelihood, or their families. They just fired them. They threw them out on the streets. They are now trying to protect one of their Members by changing the law in order to get a guaranteed seven-year appointment.

The contrast is that they are prepared to act in the most uncivil, intolerant, and insensitive way to other people, but in their own case are padding their own nest and providing for their own protection.

This is the worst kind of patronage we have seen in this House for many a year. The same thing is happening with Bill C-55. They are going to fire all the members of the boards through that Bill without severance and put their own Members in an entrenched, guaranteed, long-term pay period.

The Canadian people must understand this. Every single newspaper in the Province of Manitoba will have a copy of these remarks. There will not be a person in that province who will not know exactly what the Tories are up to. This is a death rattle. They are trying to take care of their own before they all go to their grave.

People should understand how the Government is abusing its power by trampling on the rights of the commissions and independent agencies of the country. That is exactly what it is doing. It is totally perverting and distorting the purpose of these commissions. They do not mind destroying other people's lives as long as they can protect their own friends.

Mr. Redway: Mr. Speaker, I just have one point of order. What a hypocrite!

Mr. Axworthy: You have no conscience and integrity. Try to defend this in your riding.

Mr. McDermid: The sorest loser in Canada.

Mr. Foster: A point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Before I recognize the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster), I would hope the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) would withdraw his remark.

Mr. Redway: Mr. Speaker, I was not aware that that was unparliamentary. Are you ruling that it is unparliamentary?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Yes.

Mr. Redway: Well, I certainly would not want to say anything that is unparliamentary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lee Clark (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, in the interests of getting this Bill to committee where it can be addressed seriously and in the presence of the expert witnesses it deserves, I will resist responding in kind to some of the comments that have been made, even though I must confess I am emotionally inclined to do so.

I want to make two or three points. First, in order to attract quality people to important regulatory positions—the Hon. Member laughs—to have some continuity in this regulatory body as we have in most other governmental regulatory bodies, it is exceedingly important that those individuals have an idea of the timeframe in which they must operate.

According to my information, there was a ten-year term until 1971 when it was amended, for whatever reason, by our friends opposite. The rationale for that can be discussed in committee. That is not the point to be made today.

The amendments in the Bill are important to the industry. These are primarily amendments that have been suggested by the industry. As suggested by the Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo), the Grain Commission is exceedingly important in terms of guaranteeing a quality product.

Quite frankly, if Hon. Members present wish at any time to question the competence or appropriateness of any appointment to positions such as this, they have the capacity to do so. If they see someone being appointed now or in the future who they do not think is appropriate or qualified, they can pursue that in the appropriate manner.

I suggest that the people who are part of the grain Commission now are well qualified. The people suggested and criticized by Members present, in my opinion, would also be well qualified for that responsibility. However, that has nothing to do with me or with the matter at hand.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I have received written notice from the Hon. Member for York—Scarborough (Mr. McCrossan) that he is unable to move his motion for second reading of Bill C-292 according to the order of precedence of debate during the hour provided for Private Members' Business.

A Bill which has been designated votable by the Standing Committee on Private Members' Business is now subject to an exchange in positions pursuant to Standing Order 39. Therefore, I am simply directing the Table Officers to drop that item of business to the bottom of the order of precedence.

It being 2.35 p.m., the House will now proceed to consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

CONSTITUTION ACTS 1867-1982

SUGGESTED INCLUSION OF THE YUKON AND NORTHWEST TERRITORIES GOVERNMENTS IN CONSTITUTIONAL CONFERENCES

Ms. Audrey McLaughlin (Yukon) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the government should introduce a measure to amend the Constitution Acts 1867 to 1982 to include the leaders of the governments of the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories among the First Ministers participating in all constitutional conferences; and

That this House urge the Senate and the Legislative Assemblies of all provinces to pass similar resolutions.

She said: Mr. Speaker, this is a simple motion that should not really be open to much debate. It states that the duly elected government leaders of the Yukon Territory and Northwest Territories should be part of constitutional talks at First Ministers conferences. This would seem quite logical to ordinary Canadians. I suggest that they would even be surprised that we had to go this route of a Private Members' Motion to petition the House to consider this issue.

The Meech Lake Accord which was passed by this House has effectively brought Québec into the Constitution. Alas, the Yukon and the Northwest Territories have effectively been cut out of potential future provincehood.

Both territories have quasi provincial type legislatures where its members and Governments have responsibility for provincial items such as health, social services and justice. In addition, we have government leaders who are analogous to a premier of a province. We have elections just like all other Canadians, and elect these leaders on the assumption that they will represent the people of the territory on federal matters as well as territorial matters.

While simple justice and fairness would dictate that the provisions in my motion would simply be accepted as indisputable facts, the Meech Lake Accord has had some interesting implications.

Let me return to the Constitution, 1982, in which Section 37 sets the principle for what did not take place in the current round of constitutional amendments. Section 37.1(1) states:

In addition to the conference convened in March 1983, at least two constitutional conferences composed of the Prime Minister of Canada and the first ministers of the provinces shall be convened . . .

It goes on to give the dates on which that shall be done. Section 37.1(3) states:

The Prime Minister of Canada shall invite elected representatives of the governments of the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories to participate in the discussions on any item on the agenda of a conference convened under subsection (1) that, in the opinion of the Prime Minister, directly affects the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories.

Is it being suggested that the Constitution of Canada, the creation of potential provinces in the North, the appointment of Supreme Court judges, the appointment of Senators, the question of whether provinces are allowed to extend their boundaries northward, the question of aboriginal rights, are not all matters that directly affect the people who live in those territories? Apparently that has been done.

In a 1983 meeting of the Premiers and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) there was a constitutional accord on aboriginal rights specifically. The territories were invited to participate in those talks dealing with aboriginal rights. At the same time, the Prime Minister and the Premiers signed a letter stating that they would deal at a later meeting with the outstanding issues of the creation of provinces and boundary extension. That has never really been done except in 1987 to reaffirm that new provinces could only be created by the unanimous consent of all other provinces. British Columbia, should it wish, could simply extend its boundary into the Yukon. B.C. does not have to ask the Yukon, B.C. could just extend its boundary as long as all its other friends in the provinces agree.

Needless to say, the disenfranchisement of 75,000 Canadians north of the 60th parallel in the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories did not meet with a lot of pleasure from the citizens. We have already assumed that we do not leave our rights at the 60th parallel.

During the Meech Lake Accord discussions the leaders of the Yukon and the Northwest Territories were not only not consulted and had no voice but when they came to Ottawa and decided to attempt to make some representation to the Government they were simply told to go home and that the Prime Minister would look after their interests. The interests that have been looked after are the issues I listed a few moments ago.

People in the North do not fundamentally have the same rights as other Canadians. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that I have spoken to many groups both here in southern Canada and in the North. One principle people immediately grasp is that Canadians are basically fair people and they understand when people are not being treated fairly. They ask, "Why wouldn't you have a voice? How could it happen that the residents of Alberta, British Columbia or whatever province should be able to say, "We are going to move the borders up. Thank you, Yukoners, take it or leave it' ".

The Prime Minister, to give him his due, as well as the Leaders of the other Parties have worked very hard for the reconciliation of this country by bringing Québec formally into the Constitution. It is an extremely important and historic part of this country. The Prime Minister and the other Party Leaders deserve great credit for that. However, "Why", northerners ask, "in reconciling these outstanding historical issues in the country did we have to disenfranchise northerners? Are we really a northern country? Do we take it seriously?"

We have lots of great speeches about Arctic sovereignty. We are all for supporting Arctic sovereignty. We are a northern nation, but do we really believe it or or do we just say, "We in the south will make decisions for those folks up there. They really don't deserve a chance to participate in one of the most fundamental documents in Canada's history, the Constitution"?

A number of years ago, to lend a little more perspective to this, the now Commissioner of the Yukon made some very interesting observations on history and the lack of Governments, particularly federal Governments, devolving powers to the people in various sectors of the country. Commissioner McKinnon, speaking four or five years ago said:

> The Federal Government today remains as distant, hesitant and uncompromising towards the principle of responsible government for the Yukon as did the Macdonald Government of the 1870s and the 1880s for the then Northwest Territories now Alberta and Saskatchewan.

He quoted also in this piece—which is quite interesting and I would recommend it to anyone who wants to know what northerners really have to say—from the Prince Albert Times of February 22, 1884. In an editorial we find:

> If history is to be taken as a guide, what could be plainer than without rebellion the people of the northwest need expect nothing, while with rebellion successful or otherwise they may reasonably expect to get their rights.

We are not talking about rebellion yet. We are talking about the principles of fundamental justice. As you will know, Mr. Speaker, the Yukon and the Northwest Territories have taken their case to the highest court in the land. They have not received a favourable response on various technical points, but on principle there has, in fact, been some encouragement. I would like to run over these principles of fundamental justice which we in the North, and I would suggest many other Canadians, feel have been abrogated by the process. In my motion I am attempting to redress that by at least giving elected territorial leaders a voice in constitutional development of this country.

The first principle clearly contravened is that of the duty of fairness, which includes the right to be heard, the right to give reasons for decisions which affect those rights. In this case, it has not happened. On the question of fairness and fundamental rights, the Prime Minister clearly, legally under the Yukon Act and the Northwest Territories Act, has fiduciary responsibility to the residents of the Yukon and the Northwest Territories, which is just a high-falutin' term for saying that the Prime Minister is supposed to ensure that he or she looks after the interests of the Territories.

We feel very strongly that this interest was not carried out in this case. In fact it would be impossible for a Prime Minister of Canada to juggle the best interests of the nation along with the best interests of the Yukon Territory and the Northwest Territories and so on. However, we do anticipate that the Prime Minister who has this responsibility will exercise it in the national interest. This, we say, has not been done and has not been done in the issue of fairness to northerners. We are not asking, and in this motion I am not suggesting, given the legal status of the Yukon and the Northwest Territories that are not provinces at this point, that we should be considering or saying that they must have a vote at the First Ministers Conferences.

From 1982 to 1987 our government leaders did often attend First Ministers' conferences. However, they were not allowed to speak. Can you imagine this ludicrous situation? You have the leaders of our country sitting around a table and you have the leaders of the Yukon and the Northwest Territories sitting in the back rows not able to express the views of the constituents they have been elected to represent. Surely that is a ludicrous situation. Would the leaders from British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba or Ontario put up with that? Of course not. It is ridiculous. I mentioned before that when our leaders did attempt to participate in 1987 they were basically shown the sidewalk and told that the Prime Minister would look after their interests. Clearly that has not been done.

The principle of fairness is the essential element here. But there is another principle. That is simply the expedient and realistic principle of making sure that those people who are affected by decisions are involved in those decisions. We have many, many historic examples of when they are not. What happens? As quoted by the Prince Alberta paper, there could be rebellion. Certainly if not rebellion, there is a form of alienation from Canada and Canadians.

I would remind this House that the people who live in the Northwest Territories and the people who live in the Yukon are those very people who will protect Arctic sovereignty, who have an interest in protecting that sovereignty, and who will continue to reside there. They will not leave. They are there to stay. The aboriginal people have been there 20,000 to 30,000 years. It is estimated that the aboriginal people in Old Crow, Yukon, have been in that area for 30,000 years. That is sovereignty and that is what we are talking about. Are we saying that those people cannot have a voice in Canada in terms of what Canada will become? I hope not. I suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that that is exactly what has happened.

There is a very strong feeling in the North—and I have been from the Baffin region to the Western Arctic to the Yukon in the past two to three weeks and I have seen it—there is unanimity on one point. There is not unanimity on very much in the North. There are a lot of individualists there. A great many of us have very specific opinions about things and about what we would like to see happen. There is the feeling that people have been left out, that they have been treated unfairly and that Canadian justice does not apply to those north of 60.

There is something quoted that is quoted so often that it really became a bit of cliché, but in this instance it really does not apply. It is that justice must not only be done but be seen to be done. I am very well aware of the constitutional and the legal position of the Yukon and the Northwest Territories. But if people feel disenfranchised, if they feel that they do not have a voice and a representation, then clearly that is a significant problem for the country.

Having no voice and having no vote is not acceptable. I suggest that they are not acceptable to the people in the North, and they are not acceptable to Canadians. Dictatorships are systems of government in which there is no voice and no vote. That is not the system that we are participating in here.

This motion is important because it would begin to redress that wrong. It is not a radical change. It is not changing the whole character of Canada. It is so simple. It is saying: "Let our elected government leaders sit down with you and express our point of view as resident northerners about some of the most fundamental issues in Canada".

I suggest that if the Government were to allow this matter to go to a vote it, would be an opportunity to say not only oui to Quebec but to say oui to the Yukon and the Northwest Territories. It is time that we acted sensibly and maturely. Surely the second largest country in the world can function with 13 provinces, if that is what is about to happen. Is that really so complicated? Can we not cope with that? Of course we can.

What are the consequences of enacting some of the fundamental actions in the Constitution which address the concerns of northerners? It would be to the benefit of the country. It would be to the benefit, certainly, of the development of northern Canada.

In summation, I would like to say that this motion which I put forward is simply a first step in that direction. It is not a radical change to the whole country. It is not rebellion. It is not separation. In fact, it is saying: "Please, Canada, include us in the discussions about the future of this country". We are mature enough to do this. Those who read the submissions by the Northwest Territories, the Yukon and the aboriginal groups, clearly see the concerns that were expressed for the development of a just Canada, a Canada in which all citizens have equal rights. A country in which some citizens have more rights than others is not the kind of Canada we want to see.

In conclusion, I would say here is the opportunity for the Members of this House to say: "We say yes to the North. Come and join us. You are part of our country".

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for the Yukon (Ms. McLaughlin) by her motion this afternoon reminds the House once again just how shabbily the Government of Canada tends to treat our two territorial Governments and their leaders. It is almost necessary to remind the House that the Governments of the territories and their leaders are drawn from their Legislative Assemblies just as our Government and our leaders are drawn from the Legislative Assembly of which we are Members. Those Legislative Assemblies in the North are elected precisely as we are elected—by constituted elections and by secret ballot.

I submit that, with respect to Motion No. 204, to exclude the leaders of the two territorial Governments, the Yukon and the Northwest Territories, from constitutional conferences and from those economic conferences that are called for under the Meech Lake amendment is undemocratic. I support wholeheartedly the sentiments that have been so well expressed this afternoon by the Hon. Member for the Yukon on that particular point.

We know something about how the Government of Canada regards the two territorial Governments. Those views have been expressed by legal counsel for the Government of Canada in open court. What government lawyers have said in open court is that the territorial Governments are not governments at all. They have said that what they are are agencies of this Government and that, in fact, they do not exist.

That is tough to swallow. I put that to my hon. friend from the Northwest Territories, the Hon. Mr. Ballantyne who is serving as Minister of Justice. I put it to him in committee. This is what he said in response to my question:

> —my colleagues in the Yukon and the Territories were shocked and surprised that an argument could even be considered in the furthest reaches of anybody's imagination that somebody by a whim can say you no longer exist. When I travel through the 73 communities of the Northwest Territories and when people come to me as they come to you as politicians with their complaints, they sure as hell think I exist. So I am not quite sure how the federal Government in 1987 could even present such a case.

As the Hon. Member has said, the approval by this House of this motion would not fully or wholly correct the constitutional insult under which northerners now live. It would not do that. However, it would at least be a small step in the right direction.

The Constitution Act of 1982 in Sections 42(1)(e) and (f) imposed upon the two territories the requirements of the amending formula, that is, if any boundaries were to be extended north, or if new provinces were to be created, there must be the agreement of seven provinces having 50 per cent of the population. I remember how delegates from the North came down here and, in fact, occupied part of the Hill to protest.

In 1982, when they came down here, I strongly favoured protesting that provision in the 1982 amendment. I came within a breath of voting against the 1982 amendment. If I did not want that Charter of Rights so badly, as I did, I think I would have been one of those who stood in the House to vote against the 1982 constitutional amendment. But that Charter of Rights and Freedoms was needed in the country as a check against the great executive power that presently exists.

Thank goodness that in 1983 at the First Ministers Conference there was an effort to repair the damage. It was suggested, first, in the 1983 Accord that never got off the ground—that agenda has never been completed—that, among other things, the future leaders of the territorial governments be invited to constitutional conferences. There was a bit of hedge in that, I admit. The hedge was that the Prime Minister had to agree that those matters were of concern to the territorial governments. I would ask my hon. friends in the House if they can give me one subject that would ever be debated or discussed at a First Ministers Conference that would not be of concern or of interest to the North? I cannot think of one. Even though that hedge was built in, I think, on careful analysis, it was not a serious one.

The second thing that the Accord of 1983 planned to do, if it had ever been completed, was to repeal paragraphs 42(1)(e) and (f). That would have returned the situation to what it was before, that is, extending boundaries or creating new provinces could not be done through the amending formula. It could only be done bilaterally between the people of the territories and the Government of Canada. That is the way Saskatchewan was created in 1905. My grandfather was a member of that territory and strongly advocated provincehood in 1950.

In 1905, the province from which you and I have origins, Mr. Speaker—you still, I am a deserter—was carved out of the Northwest Territories through an arrangement between the people there and the Government of Canada. It was bilateral. Why should that be changed? In the United States of America, a new state is created between the people of that state who are seeking statehood and the Government in Washington. The same thing applies in Australia and India. Why do we have this bizarre system in Canada that requires that the amending formula be imposed upon the aspirations of people who live in the North?

In 1949, when Newfoundland sought membership in Confederation it did not have to get the consent of Saskatchewan or Alberta. Instead of repealing paragraphs 42(1)(e) and (f) what we did in the Meech Lake Accord was to make matters worse. Now, instead of seven provinces with 50 per cent of the population, there has to be unanimity. What we did was to impose constitutional injustice upon the people who live in the North. Why did we do it? Did Québec demand that? I never heard any person in Québec say that that was a necessary price for their signature on our Constitution. It can only be described as an injustice. That is why the Hon. Member for the Yukon, the Hon. Member for the Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson), and myself, among others, voted against the Meech Lake Accord.

The road back to justice and fairness for the North will be a long and difficult one. Constitutional changes are always long and difficult. However, if today we can approve Motion No. 204 in the name of the Hon. Member for the Yukon, we would at least be taking a step in the right direction. It would mean that in the future territorial leaders would be able to sit down with Premiers and the Prime Minister and discuss their concerns and give their input.

I wish to tell the Hon. Member for the Yukon that she is in very good company in what she is proposing. The task force on the Meech Lake constitutional Accord, which was written by the Senate, supports that proposition. In 1986, the plenary session of the Liberal Party of Canada passed a resolution that was submitted by the Yukon Liberal Association supporting what the Hon. Member for the Yukon is proposing, and that was a priority resolution which passed in the plenary.

I wish to turn to the document that was prepared by the Special Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons on the 1987 Constitutional Accord. This document talked about difficult questions that had to be dealt with at First Ministers Conferences, difficult questions concerning the legitimate interests of the existing provinces without unfairly prejudicing the development of the North. On those difficult questions the document states:

> It would appear from the evidence that we have heard that not all of these matters have been addressed in the necessary detail to allow decisions to be made by First Ministers at this time.

I ask you, Mr. Speaker, and I ask my friends in the House, how can these difficult questions be considered? How can they be resolved? If the territorial leaders are absent from First Ministers Conferences, they cannot. Therefore, I say to you, Sir, and I say to my friends in the House, that Motion No. 204 in the name of the Hon. Member for the Yukon deserves full, unanimous, and unequivocal support of the House, and not to support it without equivocation and reservation is clearly an insult to northerners.

I want to leave the last word on this matter to a man for whom I have respect and admiration and who has done a fine job in his leadership in the North, the Leader of the Territorial Government in the Yukon. He appeared before the joint committee talking about the constitutional unfairness imposed upon the North by the Meech Lake Accord and he stated: "The right to be heard and to have reasons given for the decisions which affect our rights are fundamental. It is fundamentally unfair that our fate should be decided by others. It should not happen at ministerial meetings at which we are not represented". I say to Mr. Tony Penikett, Leader of the Government in the Yukon, I and my Party agree with you fully on that.

Mr. David Daubney (Ottawa West): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity this afternoon to contribute to the debate on the motion of the Hon. Member for the Yukon (Ms. McLaughlin) who is a recently arrived Member in this place for whom I have a high regard. The Hon. Member is a fair-minded Member who was good enough to give credit to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) in her remarks for his role in national reconciliation. I had hoped that perhaps she would have taken a minute today while she had the floor to tell Canadians, particularly her constituents, that today the unemployment rate in the Yukon Territory is the lowest it has been since 1975.

Ms. McLaughlin: There is an NDP Government in the Yukon.

Mr. Daubney: The motion before us today concerns the ongoing evolution of territorial participation at First Ministers Conferences. In my remarks I want to emphasize just how far we have come in providing a greater role for the territories in such conferences since our Government came to office in 1984.

I had the honour of being a member of the special joint committee of the House and the other place that looked at the Constitution Act of 1987. The Member will know that our committee heard a number of witnesses from the territories and a number of witnesses from aboriginal groups, and we gave very serious attention to the concerns that they expressed. We also expressed sympathy for many of the points that they raised and suggested amendments that First Ministers might wish to consider on subsequent rounds.

Under the Meech Lake Accord, which has now been ratified once again by Parliament and by eight Legislative Assemblies, there is a guarantee of First Ministers Conferences on the economy and other matters at least once a year. This provision has not attracted much attention during public and parliamentary discussion of the Accord. Perhaps we as Canadians have become a bit blasé and too easily take for granted the co-ordinating work done by First Ministers conferences. I want to remind Hon. Members that not so long ago the very convocation of such conferences was itself a matter for endless federal-provincial discord.

Until 1985 First Ministers Conferences took place if and when the Prime Minister saw fit. Premiers had to spend much time and energy asking to meet with the Prime Minister and putting forward shopping lists of issues that needed to be addressed. Public opinion was a weapon in this game, so national priorities could be set in exchange for headlines. That changed after our Government came to office with a mandate to seek national reconciliation to end the confrontation and mistrust that had marked federal-provincial relations for too long.

When he was Leader of the Opposition, the Prime Minister made his commitment in an historic address at Sept-Îsles on August 6, 1984. It was there that he laid down his program for bringing Québec back into the constitutional family "with honour and enthusiasm". The program triumphantly concluded with the Meech Lake Accord. But he did more; he also said the following in his speech:

> To end parallel or incomplete planning once and for all between the two orders of Government, we will set up a federal-provincial advisory and co-ordinating body. It will operate at the highest level, namely with the 11 leaders themselves working together in an appropriate institutional framework, advising on the options envisaged and the directions to take.

The First Ministers Conference is a forum where the provinces can make their special concerns known so that federal programs are framed in ways that work for all Canadians, wherever they live and whatever their social and economic setting. As Hon. Members know, the Prime Minister quickly reached the goal of co-ordination that he fixed at Sept-Îles.

At their Regina meeting in 1985, First Ministers unanimously agreed to meet at least once a year for a period of five years. The agenda items of these annual conferences was to include the following: A review of the state of federal-provincial relations; consultation on major issues concerning both orders of Government; and in particular the state of the economy; consideration of broad objectives for Governments in Canada; and exchanging information to facilitate planning for the operations of their Governments.

Three conferences have since been held, first in Halifax, then in Vancouver, and last year in Toronto. These conferences illustrate how First Ministers Conferences can set and move forward an agenda in areas where co-operation between the two spheres of government is essential.

In an address to the Institute of Public Administration of Canada in Saint John last September 3, the Minister of Federal-Provincial Relations, Senator Lowell Murray, said:

> Canadians know too well how easy it is to let political rivalries stand in the way of good economic and social policies. Most of our institutions—whether they be industrial relations, parliamentary or judicial—are premised on an adversarial model. We need to place much more emphasis on consensus-building institutions to achieve all we are capable of as a nation.

First Ministers Conferences are an institution. They provide a framework for continuing federal-provincial meetings of Ministers and officials and impose what Senator Murray called "a healthy discipline" on them.

A forthcoming conference represents a deadline to be met, and First Ministers can also, when necessary, break deadlocks. As Senator Murray told the Institution:

> Our approach to federal-provincial relations is firmly based in reality. No matter what the actual jurisdictional division of power, Canada's eleven governments function in an interdependent world. Each government's policy actions inevitably affect the other, and good policies cannot be developed in isolation . . .
> The real challenge before our federation is to seek agreement and shared purpose on the best policies for Canadians. This is rarely easy, but policy innovation and government responsiveness is nurtured by strong governments and the interaction between them.

Regularity lends stability to the annual planning cycle of all Governments, running through the preparation and presentation of Budgets in the first half of the following year, Premiers' conferences, the preparation of Speeches from the Throne.

It also ensures that when decisions are made by Governments at both levels, it is with an up-to-date appreciation of what the impact may be on the broader scheme of things.

I would like to turn now to the specific question of territorial attendance at federal-provincial First Ministers Conferences.

The government leaders of the Yukon and the Northwest Territories have been invited, as you know, Mr. Speaker, to sit at the table at the First Ministers Conferences convened under the terms of Part IV of the Constitution Act, 1982. These conferences are of particular and direct interest to the territories and to the aboriginal peoples of Canada.

Prior to the election of this Government, the government leaders of the territories were not invited to attend First Ministers conferences other than those dealing with the Constitution and aboriginal rights. The Prime Minister took the initiative in November, 1984, of writing to the Premiers to seek their views on possible territorial involvement in the First Ministers Conference held in February of 1985.

As a result of that important initiative, it was ultimately agreed that the government leaders of the territories should be invited as "official observers" to the conference. Furthermore, the Prime Minister invited both of them to come to the table to make short statements. Finally, the territorial Governments were both allowed to use the services of the Canadian Intergovernmental Conference Secretariat. These arrangements have been repeated at all the annual First Ministers Conferences since then, and they go far beyond what is provided for "simple observers".

I am proud, Mr. Speaker, of the role that this Government has played in providing for territorial involvement at public First Ministers conferences and, in particular, of the leadership role of the Prime Minister.

The arrangements I have described concerning the involvement of territorial government leaders at the First Ministers Conferences on the economy are a further example of this Government's commitment to undertaking practical steps to allow territorial Governments to pursue the practical needs and concerns of northern Canadians.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I am very honoured to stand as a second speaker for my Party today. I would like to start by commending the Hon. Member for the Yukon (Ms. McLaughlin) for not only bringing this Bill forward but for her outstanding role in a very short few months as representative of the Yukon Territory. I think that since I have been in this House, which is now nine long years, almost 10, it is the first year when we have had a very strong voice from the territories. She has been up on many different issues, but none more important than the issue that she raises today, of constitutional representation and representation of the Yukon and the Northwest territorial leaders at the table of the leaders of this land.

I must say, first of all, that I think it was just over three years ago that I attended the First Ministers Conference which was held in Vancouver, as an observer. It is rather ironic that the main topic of the sessions that I attended was equality.

I looked at the table and I was astounded to see that the leaders from the territories were not sitting there. I spoke to Mr. Penikett, as my hon. friend from the Liberal Party said, "the outstanding leader from the Yukon Government". He said that is true, we are still colonials, we are still treated as colonials. It is appalling, really, and I do not think that many southern Canadians really stop to think about this, that we are treating one-third of our territory and the people there who have the longest tradition—thousands and thousands of years—as second-class citizens.

I think also that the kind of situation that we have at First Ministers' meetings where offers are made that the Prime Minister would speak to the territorial leaders and then convey their wishes to the other leaders, if he thought it was important, is a sheer parochial form of government and it is quite insulting, I am sure, to northerners.

Now, we know that the northern territorial leaders have asked to be included, with full voice, at the meetings of the First Ministers. When the First Ministers met in 1987 to decide our constitutional amendments, both territorial government leaders came to Ottawa and they asked to participate. Then they asked that if they were not allowed to participate, could they at least be assured that they would be consulted by the Prime Minister before any amendment was finalized. It is appalling that they were denied both these requests. They had no consultation, no representation and they were allowed no vote at this First Ministers' Table, the most important meeting in our land and perhaps in our history.

The Leader of the Yukon Government made a number of very important remarks at that meeting. My friend from the Liberal Party has mentioned some of them, but I would like to mention a couple of others.

He stated, "On June 1, 11 men in a locked room decided to consign the occupants of one-third of the land mass of Canada to a constitutional limbo". As a matter of fact, I think he said this after a special joint committee meeting. He went on to say, "Except in a manner that would credit Franz Kafka, there was no trial. The condemned had no hearing. There was no evidence, no prosecution, no defence that we know of, but the jury became judges and sentenced generations of northerners to perpetual colonial status".

He said later that even if unanimity were possible, how could one justify allowing the representatives of everyone else in the nation except those most affected to decide the North's place in Confederation? Surely this is the very opposite of self-determination. Surely this is a rule fit for an exclusive gentlemen's club, not a democratic society. We would certainly agree that it was a gentlemen's club, and this kind of decision-making was certainly highly undemocratic.

Both opposition Parties and most government Members as well felt that the territories needed some redress and that we should have amended the Meech Lake Accord. Certainly our Party pressed very strongly for an amendment that would have allowed the former amending formula to be used in any future meetings concerned with the inclusion of the territories as future provinces. Unfortunately, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), despite having some sympathy for this, did not have enough sympathy to accept this amendment. I think that was very unfortunate.

I call on government Members today, however, to think of this motion as the first step they can take in redressing what I think is a really discriminatory action on the part of all of us in the Meech Lake Accord. In Motion No. 204, the Hon. Member for the Yukon has called on the Government to include government leaders of the Yukon and the Northwest Territories in all First Ministers constitutional conferences. It seems to me to be a very simple and democratic step to take.

It is indeed insulting that there has not been representation from the North. I am not talking about token consultation but about full representation with duly elected leaders from the Yukon and the Northwest Territories sitting down in an equal position with leaders of other provinces.

Speaking as a southerner, I think we miss a great deal when we do not hear directly from representatives of the North. We know how much we have learned from the Hon. Member for the Yukon today and from the many other speeches she has made. When I have visited the North, I have been fascinated and I would like to learn much more about the special needs and circumstances of northerners. Their health services are much different from ours, and perhaps we have something to learn from the kind of pattern that has evolved there. There is a higher birth rate in the North than in most other parts of Canada and the need for child care programs are different and perhaps much greater.

As Hon. Members who spoke previously pointed out, the North has now had long experience with effective elected Government, and the Northwest Territories is moving toward a division about which most southerners do not know. We need to hear about these things from the leaders of the North sitting at the table of First Ministers speaking in an equal way on behalf of the territories. I urge government Members not to talk this out today but to allow it to go to a vote so that we can see how all Hon. Members feel about this issue.

Mr. Penner: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. This afternoon, on a motion involving people living in Canada's North, representatives of the three Parties have spoken. The views have been expressed clearly, and I have not heard any dissenting views. Therefore, I would ask you to seek unanimous consent of the House that this question be put now.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Since this is Private Members' Hour, any Hon. Member rising is entitled to speak. I noticed that the Hon. Member for Québec-Est (Mr. Tremblay) is rising, so I recognize the Hon. Member for Québec-Est.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel R. Tremblay (Québec-Est): Mr. Speaker, I believe that the real problem is the failure to grant provincial status to the Territories. It must be clearly understood that their becoming provinces would entail fundamental changes in Confederation. To deal with this point first, the Territories recognize that provincehood would be a burden at this time. This is one reason, no doubt the most important, why they do not consider provincehood a practical proposition in the short term. Those who followed . . .

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. There is about seven minutes left on this Friday afternoon. I would like to be able to hear the Hon. Member for Québec-Est.

[Translation]

Mr. Tremblay (Québec-Est): As I was saying, Mr. Speaker, those who followed the hearings of the Special Joint Committee on the Meech Lake Accord may perhaps remember what Gordon Robertson said about this.

He spoke as someone who had been Commissioner of the Northwest Territories for 10 years, as well as Secretary to the Cabinet and Cabinet Secretary for Federal-Provincial Relations. He said:

> They certainly could not finance on the present basis of federal-provincial financing. The grant the northern territories get in lieu of equalization provides a payment to the northern territories that is proportionately far in excess of what any province gets under equalization.

This is nothing new for Northerners, Mr. Speaker, nor for the territorial Governments, as Tony Penikett, Head of the Government of the Yukon, said before the Special Joint Committee:

> The Yukon and the Northwest Territories are not provinces now; nor do we seek provincial status at this time. Few people in the Yukon and the Northwest Territories would argue that we have reached the point where provincial status makes sense. We know keenly our limitations: our small, scattered population; our slim economic resources; our inadequate transportation system.

In a word, Mr. Speaker, northern residents have the right to benefit from all the range of services offered to other Canadians, no matter where they live. At the present time, and in the near future, the Territories could not in any case provide those services, and northern residents would not obtain them without considerable assistance from the federal Government.

That is one of the main reasons which explains why the territorial governments are not seeking the status of province at this time, and they are not considering such a move in the short term. That is why I cannot support the resolution now before the House which would in effect grant them such a status indirectly or partially, not in the future but immediately. This leads me, Mr. Speaker, to broach another point of the Accord that has been criticized, the fact that there must be unanimous agreement for the creation of new provinces.

The Accord allows us to reach an objective, the recognition of the principle of the equality of provinces: the amending formula provision is the reflection of that principle. It is important for Canadian solidarity that all provinces have an equal say in matters that affect the fundamental nature of Confederation. The creation of a province is one of those fundamental questions. It has an effect on the make up of our Confederation, as well as on the application of the amending formula.

Before 1982, the creation of a province was the exclusive prerogative of Parliament. It was a form of equality, in the negative sense, since no province had any say in the matter.

In 1982, the creation of a province was made subject to the general amending formula, the so-called "7/50" criterion, that is the approval of two-thirds of the provinces with 50 per cent of the population of all the provinces in Confederation. This requirement brought about an imbalance which could have had serious adverse and unpredictable effects on Confederation.

It meant that Quebec and Ontario together obtained a right of veto, but not British Columbia and Alberta, for instance.

There is no doubt in my mind that the creation of one or more provinces would directly affect all members of the confederation. The addition of a province is a basic question which concerns the composition of the federation and, for example, the way the amending formula itself works. Allowing the creation of a province with the agreement of only some of the existing provinces would be contrary to the underlying principle that all provinces are equal. Adding another province would also have a strong impact on the financial structure of the federation, particularly in connection with equalization programs.

In that respect, here is what Robarts Centre for Canadian Studies Professor Tom Courchene wrote:

> Although the principle is now entrenched in the Constitution, the fact remains that creating a northern province might prevent the federal Government from increasing equalization payments, as it is being urged to do. This cannot be construed as an argument against the creation of new provinces. Far from it. However this argument rests on the principle whereby the three traditionally "rich" provinces of the federation—Ontario, B.C., Alberta—should not have the right of veto over the creation of new provinces if the three so-called "poor" Maritime provinces do not have it as well, especially if equalization payment funds are involved.

In his recent study on Meech Lake, Osgoode Hall (York University) Law Professor Peter Hogg wrote that:

> . . . delegated powers end up by confering full provincial status, and this situation deeply—albeit indirectly—affect the other provinces. The creation of new provinces will boost their total number and so will have an impact on the operation of the amending formula. Since any direct change to that formula requires unanimity, it can be argued that any other change having the same effect should also be subject to the same requirements.
> One may also claim that the creation of new provinces, especially ones with a sparse population over a vast territory with a harsh climate, would involve a thorough revision of federal-provincial financing arrangements. This is another subject on which unanimity is at least desirable. Therefore, one may rightly suggest that all existing provinces should agree before new provinces are created.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I must say that I do not believe unanimity to be the problem: the Accord itself shows and is concrete evidence that the requirement for unanimity is not an obstacle to change.

Mr. Speaker, I think that the real problem is the one that we will solve with the Accord. I say that because, as I see it, the problem is that mutual trust and respect, between Canadians and between Governments, have been lacking for too long. In short, the problem is one of confidence and faith in our institutions. We have seen that Northerners are not seeking provincial status for the time being and I think we can agree that unanimity is a reasonable requirement.

The real problem is that some northerners—not too many, hopefully—and I trust and believe that this will change . . .

Ms. Mitchell: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but I wonder if he would agree to allow time to give unanimous consent to this very important motion so that it can be brought forward and this House will be able to recognize the importance of the Yukon and the Northwest Territories having representation at leaders' meetings?

Mr. Grisé: On the same point of order, Mr. Speaker.

[Translation]

Mr. Grisé: Mr. Speaker, already today the House has agreed to sit beyond normal hours to deal with an important Bill, Bill C-112, to have it deferred after second reading to the Standing Committee. As we have already gone thirty-five minutes beyond the normal time of adjournment and as the Member for Québec-Est (Mr. Tremblay) has not finished his speech, I think that we should listen to . . .

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT IMPLEMENTATION ACT

REQUEST FOR AUTHORIZATION FOR LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE TO TRAVEL

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor) moved:

That the legislative committee on Bill C-130 be empowered to adjourn from place to place in Canada and the United States for the purpose of hearing witnesses on the proposed trade agreement with the United States.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt—

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Point of order, Mr. Speaker. I would like to contest, if I may, the procedural acceptability of this motion being on the Order Paper under "Motions". The reason I do that is this.

Traditionally, the heading "Motions" has been reserved for concurrence requests in reports of standing committees which have been prepared by this House through the efforts of the standing committee, an independent body of this House. Members of standing committees, as the Chair will know, have the right to request that a concurrence motion be put on the Order Paper and then any member of the committee can move that concurrence motion in order to have a debate. I suggest that if motions of this nature are allowed to be put on the Order Paper under "Motions", we will have a complete subversion of the private Members' process.

If you look at the Order Paper under "Private Members' Motions", you will see other motions of instruction which a private Member puts in a draw and takes the chance that the motion will be drawn from a hat and thus go through the regular private Members' motions process. The House will know that process was developed by the parliamentary reform committee to ensure that private Members' motions and Bills had a decent opportunity of receiving full consideration by this House.

A private Member drafts a motion exactly as my hon. friend has drafted his, puts it in a hat and hopes that it is drawn out. When it is, it goes to the private Members' committee for deliberation as to whether or not it will get one hour's debate, such as the motion of the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) on the Order Paper today, which says:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider designating as potential parkland all military lands located in urban areas and presently used for military purposes, once their present use is discontinued.

There are other examples on the Order Paper.

I suggest we have a process for private Members' motions. You will note this motion is on the Order Paper in the name of an individual Member. It did not flow from a committee. It is an individual Member's effort to bring something to the attention of the House. It is a subversion, in my opinion, of the private Members' motion process and private Members' Bill process which was instigated and enacted by this House. For that reason I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that my hon. friend is trying to do something by way of Motions which he should quite properly do by way of a private Members' motion.

• (1110)

Second, I suggest that the committees in this House are the masters of their own destiny. We set up committees under a legislative chairperson now, not under a government appointed chairperson. The Chair appoints those committee chairpersons from a panel and those committees operate and decide on the business of the committee independent of the House.

I think it is fair to suggest that the arrangement of the business of that committee, unless it is in the original motion sending the matter to the committee, should be left up to the committee. It is my understanding that, in this particular instance, the committee has decided not to travel.

It is very much the exception that committees travel. If one wishes to argue that this particular committee should travel, I would counter that by saying that standing committees of this House, one a joint committee with the Senate and one an independent committee of this House with no Senate membership, have already travelled this country to consider the issue of free trade. Before this legislative committee is the question as to whether or not Bill C-130 accurately brings into legislation the agreement between Canada and the United States on free trade. That is the narrow question before the legislative committee on Bill C-130. I think that speaks to why the committee should not travel.

In concluding my remarks I want to reiterate that I believe this motion should properly come under Private Members' Business, a motion for an allotted day, or proceedings on delegated legislation. Second, I want to refer to the argument which has always been before us, that is, that committees are masters of their own destiny. For those reasons I do not believe that this motion is in order.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to reply to the Minister's point of order that this motion is out of order and should not be moved under Motions during Routine Proceedings.

I first want to refer to Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, citations 756 to 762 which list the rules and practices with regard to instructions to committees. I believe that if you consult these citations you will clearly find that the motion which the Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon) has moved is in order in terms of the object which the motion seeks to achieve. Citation 756(1) states:

> An Instruction is a motion empowering a committee to do something which it would not otherwise do, or to direct it to do something which it might otherwise not do . . .

Clearly, the object of this motion is to empower the committee to travel, a power which a legislative committee does not normally have, as the Hon. Minister has indicated. That is all the motion does. In that sense it is procedurally a "permissive" instruction.

Obviously, this type of motion has not been moved in this House by an opposition Member in a very long time. In fact, I believe the last time such an instruction was moved by someone other than a government Minister was during the great pipeline debate in 1956. At page 604 of Journals for Wednesday, May 23, 1956, we find an instruction moved by Mr. Drew, seconded by Mr. Rowe, to enable the committee that was to study the pipeline legislation to divide the Bill into two separate orders.

As you are aware, Mr. Speaker, there was some discussion as to whether the motion required notice and whether or not the motion was debatable. Ultimately the Speaker of the day decided that the motion was in order and it was put to the House for a vote.

The principle which existed in 1956 has not been extinguished over time. The House now has the ability to instruct a committee to do something or permit it to do something that it might otherwise not be able to do. The right to move such instructions extends not only to government Ministers but to all Members of the House.

The right to move instructions is clearly recognized in Beauchesne. It is recognized in Bourinot at page 512 and in Erskine May Twentieth Edition at page 539. Nowhere in these citations does it indicate that such instructions can only be moved by Ministers of the Crown.

Proper notice has been given of this motion and it is my contention that the Hon. Member should be allowed to proceed with debate on this important issue. We are talking about enabling the committee to travel so that Canadians from coast to coast can come to these important deliberations and participate by presenting evidence on the effects of the trade deal. The Government may want to hide these hearings, to shut them off from the people of Canada, but we in this Party do not agree with this at all.

An instruction, if placed under Private Members' Business, as the Hon. Minister would have us do, would have almost no chance at all of ever coming up for debate. You, Mr. Speaker, know the process for private Members' initiatives. They go into a draw. I have had dozens in there for years which have never been drawn. In order to give instructions to a committee to act, we cannot go through the normal private Members' routine because the chance of that item being drawn for debate, and particularly for debate that would be followed by a vote, is virtually nil. It would be an exception.

If we are serious about giving instruction to a committee to travel this, in the absence of an initiative by a Minister, would seem to me to be the honourable way to do so, as has been tested time and again.

In response to the Minister's comment that there already had been travel, we all remember the farcical nature of the hearings when the committee was not debating the trade deal itself which was eventually signed by our Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), but the issue of free trade with the United States. Hearings were held across the country, allowing one single day per province. I remember the day they came to the Province of British Columbia, which I have the honour of representing.

Hearings were held for a few hours and legions, if you like, of individuals and groups which wanted to have input into the process were turned away.

By the Prime Minister's own admission, this trade deal is the biggest trade deal signed, not in Canadian history, but in world history. If, as the Prime Minister has indicated, this is the biggest trade deal ever signed in world history, surely to goodness it would be appropriate to travel throughout the country this summer so that Canadians, wherever they live throughout Canada, would have an opportunity to participate in this discussion on the most important trade deal in world history.

We recognize the fact that in its present structure under the present rules and traditions the committee is unable to take the initiative to travel. That is why the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor felt it was appropriate to move this motion so that the representatives of all the people of Canada in the House of Commons can give a clear instruction to the committee to do the honourable, decent, and correct thing, that is, to travel throughout Canada and hold hearings on what the Prime Minister himself describes as the most important trade deal in world history.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I think we should start by looking at what a committee is supposed to be. A committee is clearly a subsidiary body to which a matter is sent for consideration by a larger body. The legislative committee which is studying Bill C-130 is clearly a subsidiary body of this House. In spite of the fact that the rules with respect to parliamentary reform may give a standing or legislative committee more authority to do things of their own accord, nothing in those rules has changed the fundamental concept of what a committee is.

A committee, especially the committee set up to study Bill C-130, is not a totally autonomous or independent body. It is nothing more than a subsidiary body of this House, to which this House has literally committed a piece of legislation for the kind of detailed study which was concluded some time ago and cannot be given in this Chamber as a House of Commons or even as Committee of the Whole.

I make this point because the Deputy Government House Leader seems to be arguing that somehow or other, under the rules reflecting parliamentary reform, our committees have such a status that once they are set up they are somehow cut loose from any link with this Chamber and it is somehow wrong for this Chamber to try to direct or instruct such committees.

If you consider what is the concept of a committee in principle and look at what our rules say, I invite you to conclude that the Deputy Government House Leader is wrong in inviting you to decide that under our rules it is no longer possible for this House to give an instruction to a committee as to how it should conduct itself. This House has no less authority under our current rules than it did before the rules were adopted to give an instruction to a committee.

Incidentally, I find it ironic to say the least that the Deputy Government House Leader is basing his argument on the spirit of parliamentary reform when he and his colleagues on the Government side were so quick, so ready to throw parliamentary reform out the window when it served their purpose to do so in order to suspend the calendar concept under which we have been operating for some years so that the Government could get the House to sit through the summer.

Be that as it may, if the Deputy Government House Leader is interested in parliamentary reform and has returned to the view that parliamentary reform is important and should be supported, I maintain that there is nothing in our current rules under parliamentary reform which no longer makes it possible for this House to give an instruction to a group of Members who are nothing more than a subsidiary body of this Chamber.

It has already been brought to your attention that there are precedents that clearly set out what the authority of the House is to give an instruction to a committee. I want to draw your attention to some of the content of these precedents. You have already had drawn to your attention Citation 756(1) which says:

> An Instruction is a motion empowering a committee to do something which it could not otherwise do, or to direct it to do something which it might otherwise not do. It directs the order and course of the committee's proceedings and extends or restricts the order of reference according to the discretion of the House.

We already know that this committee has shown itself through the efforts of the Conservative majority unwilling to seek the permission of the House to travel. I think we have clearly reached the point where it is appropriate for the House to adopt a motion giving an instruction to the committee studying Bill C-130 to travel from place to place, to hear directly the views of Canadians, where they live, where they work, where they make their homes, about the Government's trade deal with the United States.

It is clear from looking at Citation 759(1) that the motion which the Government has challenged could not have been called much earlier and that we are now at the appropriate point in time for such a motion to be made. Citation 759(1) states:

> The time for moving an Instruction is immediately after the committal of the bill, or, subsequently, as an independent motion. The Instruction should not be given while the bill is still in the possession of the House, but rather after it has come into the possession of the committee.

We are just at that point contemplated by Citation 759(1). I suggest that the motion is very much in order from the point of view of the timing of its being called for debate.

I also submit that it is quite appropriate for this motion to be called under Motions rather than to be treated as a matter of Private Members' Business. I certainly can find nothing in the precedent set out in Beauchesne saying that this motion must be dealt with as Private Members' Business. I would say that the whole concept of instructions to a committee by the House would be meaningless unless such instructions could be proposed as a motion during the point in time in our Routine Proceedings for the consideration of motions.

I repeat, there is no meaning whatsoever that could be attributed to the right of this House to give instruction to a committee unless it could be done in a way which would lead to a decision being taken on the request for instruction. This can happen only if it is done during the time set out in Routine Proceedings for motions.

I also suggest that it is consistent with the spirit of parliamentary reform to which the Deputy Government House Leader has once again become converted, after his unfortunate lapse in connection with cancelling our rules respecting the calendar concept.

If he is serious in regard to what parliamentary reform is supposed to mean, giving greater authority to individual Members to do things in the House, surely individual Members not of the Privy Council must be permitted to move motions to give instructions to committees during that item under Routine Proceedings entitled Motions. I believe the Deputy Government House Leader is very much in error when he argues that this motion can be presented only as a matter of Private Members' Business.

My friend, the New Democratic Party House Leader, says that a motion to instruct the committee with respect to such things as travel is rare and last happened during the pipeline debate. I have to take some issue with him on that because at page 230 of Beauchesne, paragraph 6 of Citation 761 states:

> Power to adjourn from place to place—Instructions have been given to committees to adjourn from place to place both within and outside Canada for the purposes of receiving evidence. Journals, October 21, 1976, p. 49.

There is a much more recent precedent on which to base our request that this motion be accepted and dealt with as quickly as possible. As recently as 1980, approximately, the special joint committee on the Constitution was authorized by this House and by the other place, I presume, to broadcast its proceedings after the committee was under way and without receiving any request from the committee that it be given such authority. That is a further precedent of this House giving instructions to a committee to do something it would not otherwise have the power to do. My hon. friend interjects to say that this motion to which I just referred was done on consent, but all consent means in this House is the equivalent of a unanimous decision of this House, but the consent does not always have to be given.

We are discussing whether this motion is in order, and I would like to say that rather than making the argument that this motion is somehow contrary to the spirit of parliamentary reform, if the Deputy Government House Leader and his colleagues have once again become converted to parliamentary reform, after their lapse with respect to suspending the calendar in order to force the House to sit through the summer, they would welcome the initiative of the Hon. Member for Essex-Windsor (Mr. Langdon) and the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), our critic on trade, who proposed motions to allow the committee to travel.

I want to conclude, Mr. Speaker, by saying that I believe this motion is in order not only insofar as it intends to give an instruction to a parliamentary committee, but with respect to it being called during Routine Proceedings under the heading of Motions, and also with respect to the substance of the matter.

I think something that is very consistent with the spirit of parliamentary reform is to make it easy for Canadians to have access to their parliamentary institutions. One of the best and most effective ways to do this is through enabling committees to travel when they are considering something as important as this trade deal so they can get the views of Canadians where they work, where they live, where they have their homes, and where they will be affected by measures such as this Government's trade deal with the United States.

It is not satisfactory to say that a committee has already travelled for this purpose. As has already been pointed out, the travel of a previous committee was clearly inadequate with only one day in each provincial capital. In any event, the committee in question did not study the matter that is currently before the legislative committee on Bill C-130. It did not study Bill C-130, nor the trade deal itself.

Mr. Speaker: I wish to hear all the submissions and certainly those of the Hon. Member for Windsor West. However, with respect, I think the Hon. Member is straying from the procedural point with which I am faced. I will certainly hear the Hon. Member for Windsor West in conclusion, but I would like to put a question to him. Assuming this particular motion is acceptable and receives the support of the House, can the Hon. Member for Windsor West assist the Chair as to whether that would mean that the committee would necessarily have to accept the power given to it and to in fact decide to travel? It seems to me, as the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap pointed out and very properly, that this is framed in terms of a permissive motion and even if it was passed here, it would not necessarily result in the committee deciding to travel.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, you quite rightly pointed out that in effect there are two kinds of instructions. There are mandatory instructions and permissive instructions. I would hope we could have an instruction from this House which is mandatory, which requires this committee to travel and hear Canadians where they live and work and where they will be affected by the Government's trade deal. If that is not the case, there is a motion on the Order Paper presented by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry which I would interpret as providing mandatory instructions.

I would point out, looking at the previous decisions in this respect, that mandatory instructions are quite acceptable and have been used in the past. As Citation 758 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition states:

> The object of mandatory instructions is to define the course of action which the committee must follow.

If this House wishes to do so, it can give an instruction to the committee which is mandatory. It may be that there are other examples of mandatory instructions related to exactly how a committee should deal with a particular Bill, but I do not think there is any limitation on the authority or power of this House to give a committee a mandatory instruction with respect to the process or procedure it should follow in study of a particular Bill. If this House agrees, and I think it should because this is what Canadians want this House to do, they want the committee on Bill C-130 to travel and hear evidence across the country, then the motion is quite in order and should be passed, and the committee would be obliged to follow the instruction in its mandatory terms.

Mr. Speaker: I am going to hear the Hon. Member and also the Minister of State. I will hear the Hon. Member for Kamloops Shuswap and the Hon. Member for Windsor West if necessary, in reply. However, I take it the position of both the Hon. Member for Kamloops Shuswap and the Hon. Member for Windsor West is whether or not a mandatory motion of somewhat the same nature is procedurally in place, this is a permissive motion. The argument that is being put by both the representatives of the Official Opposition and the New Democratic Party is that procedurally it ought to be allowed, and if it is put into the procedures for Private Members' Motions, the practical result is it may never come back for consideration. Do I understand the position of both spokespersons for the Opposition correctly? The Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap. I just want to be sure I have the point and I will hear you later in detail.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, the intention of putting forward a permissive motion is that the permissive instruction is the most common and most commonly used, particularly coming from an opposition Member. The reason it was put forward as a permissive motion was that during the committee's deliberations of the last day when it was deciding on how to proceed, when the request came from both the opposition Parties to travel throughout Canada to allow people to have input into the deliberations of the committee, the government Members indicated that the legislative committee, of course, had no authority to travel, that there was no opportunity to travel. Therefore, it was in that spirit that we felt that since the committee itself had determined that under the existing rules it had no authorization to decide to travel throughout Canada, the question was put aside because it was not part of the terms of reference of the legislative committee.

It was at that point that we felt a permissive motion ought to be presented both from an opposition Party and a Member, not a Member of the Cabinet, not a Minister. There was also the fact that if that was the committee's concern, a clear instruction from the House of Commons would then clearly remove that and would allow the committee to continue.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Windsor West. I just want to be sure I have the point.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): I do not intend to extend my general argument, but I do want to say, first, the one basic point we are making is that any motion with respect to the committee travelling should not be placed under Private Members' Business just because it is offered by a Member not of the Privy Council of the Government. Second, I have to admit that the motion could be read as a permissive motion but, as the Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) has said, if the concern of the Conservative majority on the committee was that they did not have the power to travel, and if they had the power they would do it, then, let us hope that such a motion as we are discussing now will clear the air and the Conservative majority will follow through if it is passed and allow the committee to travel.

Mr. Benno Friesen (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I will not take long on this matter. I simply want to point out that as a member of the committee which studied parliamentary reform, I can say quite firmly that as far as I can recollect, it was never the intention of the committee to have motions used in this way.

Mr. Gauthier: We discussed that.

Mr. Friesen: Further to that, whether this motion is either permissive or mandatory, one of the effects remains the same as a result of it. That is to say that if the committee travels it will involve an expenditure of funds and someone will have to pay for it.

Ms. Mitchell: Take it out of your propaganda budget.

Mr. Riis: You're using $50 million for PR now, maybe you can set a little aside for travel.

Mr. Darling: Keep quiet!

Mr. Speaker: I would remind Hon. Members that I have heard from the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap and the Hon. Member for Windsor West twice, as well as the Minister of State. All Hon. Members have given them the courtesy of expressing their comments to the advantage of the Chair. I would ask that that courtesy continue.

Mr. Friesen: Mr. Speaker, we are not talking about exact budgetary figures but a principle of government, that is, its ability to govern. If motions can be introduced in the House at any time which affect budgetary decisions and which take away from the Government the decision-making process with respect to expenditures, then it fragments the Government's role and the historical right of Government with respect to the right of expenditure.

Mr. Riis: A parliamentary right.

Mr. Friesen: I would suggest that it fragments the Government's ability to govern since it would take away from the Government the right of expenditure.

[Translation]

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, I would just like to revert to a remark by the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr Riis). I am a member of the legislative Committee on Bill C-130, I was present during the discussions. When the Hon. Member says that the committee decided not to travel, it wasn't like that at all. He claims the committee asked permission of the House or that it said the permission of the House was necessary. Nobody ever said that. The committee on its own initiative and because of the parliamentary reform, among other reasons, is aware of its powers and it was the committee itself, notwithstanding what the Hon. Member says—he told an untruth, Mr Speaker—it was the committee itself that decided not to travel in order to fulfill more rapidly the mandate that had been entrusted to it by the House of Commons.

[English]

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I have one or two points in reply. I notice other Members rising. I hope that I can reserve my right to reply after I have heard the other Members. In any event, my remarks will not be long.

[Translation]

Mr Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr Speaker, I would just like to make a few comments on the remarks by the Hon. Member for Surrey—White Rock—North Delta (Mr Friesen), about how we shouldn't spend the money, or the government wouldn't like to spend the money without authorization. I would like to point out to the Hon. Member that it is up to the House of Commons to decide, and that it's the budget of the House of Commons and not the government's budget that is in question here.

[English]

It is the House of Commons which will address this question. I hope that it will address the question seriously and possibly divide on it. If the Government wants to have a question put on it, we will vote on it.

This question is an important question since it deals with process and not with substance. It does not deal with the many, many motions that we find on the Order Paper under the heading Notices of Motions under Private Members' Business. Private Members can and should put substantive motions which state: "That, in the opinion of this House, the House should . . . " That is quite common practice. I have several of mine in there. God knows I have not had a chance to have them drawn, since if I had I would have been able to discuss them. However, because of the draw and because of luck some of us are not as lucky as others.

The point to be made, and the one which has been made by my colleagues from Windsor West and the New Democratic Party, is that it is proper to have such a motion in the order where it finds itself today, that is, in Routine Proceedings under Motions. Where else can private Members who are supposed to be getting more powers as a result of the McGrath Committee and others, as well as be given more power of initiative, put motions which would the Government in the right direction and understand that Parliament it to remain supreme?

We are not talking here about the Government's intentions of pushing this matter through quickly. We think that the committee—and it has been the practice of Parliament thus far—should be given instructions, instructions which it should follow. We have done that before. There is nothing in the Standing Orders or anything as far as I can see in Beauchesne's which would forbid that. It is stated clearly in Beauchesne's that at the committee stage we, that is, the House, may instruct the committee. That is Citation 756. I will not repeat what my House Leader just said. But in this regard one has to refer to Citations Nos. 756, 757, 758, 759 and 760.

I want to say that, first, the motion is appropriately placed on the Order Paper and should be the object of some debate, and a division if the Government so requires. Second, it is a weak argument to say that this would entail or obligate the Government to expend public funds for a purpose for which there is no Royal Recommendation. We are talking here of Parliament's decision. Parliament will pick up on the expenditures involved in that committee in particular if it so desires to travel, or if it is so instructed to travel. That is done every day. It would be astounding to ask how many committees of the House have travelled across the country since September 4, 1984.

Mr. Stewart: How much did you travel on Bill C-72?

Mr. Speaker: I appreciate the intervention. We are now getting into the question of what other committees have done and I do not think that that is helpful.

I want to assure Hon. Members that the Chair has taken very well the point of the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap, the Hon. Member for Windsor West, the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier and, with great respect, unless there is something very particular that either the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap or the Hon. Member for Windsor West may want to add, I do not think I need to hear more. However, out of courtesy I want to hear the Hon. Minister of State.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I will be brief. One point I would like to make is that my hon. friends have brought forward several quotations from Beauchesne's. I do not dispute the strength of those quotations. When Your Honour comes to your decision, I am sure you will appreciate that those quotations and citations are only relevant vis-à-vis the Standing Orders as they existed at that time.

Second, with respect to the televising of the constitutional committee hearings, I would point out, Mr. Speaker, that that was on consent. I think it should be taken in that light, that is, the consent of all Hon. Members having been given.

Third—something which I should have picked up in my original argument—my friend would be on much safer ground arguing this if the wording of the actual motion put on the Order Paper had been "be instructed" rather than "be empowered" since the committee has already taken a decision. I think my friend is a little late in moving this motion today.

Finally, I suggest to the Chair that in view of the importance of this issue that the Chair may wish to reserve judgment on this matter in order to consider fully the implications of the Private Member's Motion aspect of the argument.

I appreciate the time of the House. I think it is important that we do have a good debate on this issue. We await with anticipation the Chair's ruling on this matter.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I do not have anything new to add in terms of the debate on the admissibility of this particular initiative. However, I do want to clear up one small error that was made by my hon. friend, the House Leader of the Official Opposition. I wish to preface my remarks by saying that his experience and comments I value and respect a great deal. While I had indicated that the last time this initiative was taken was in 1956 during the very famous pipeline debate, he indicated when he quoted from Beauchesne's Fifth Edition that it states:

> Instructions have been given to committees to adjourn from place to place both within and outside Canada for the purposes of receiving evidence. Journals, October 21, 1976, p. 49.

That is correct, Mr. Speaker. That was an initiative by a Government member, by a member of the Privy Council. The point I was making was as a member not in the Privy Council, but as a member of the Opposition, the last time that this was done was in 1956.

• (1150)

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to respectfully direct your attention to Standing Order 56 which states, in part:

> 56.(1) The following motions are debatable:
> (p) such other motion, made upon Routine Proceedings, as may be required for the observance of the proprieties of the House, the maintenance of its authority, the appointment or conduct of its officers . . .

You will recall, Mr. Speaker, I submitted that a legislative committee is a subsidiary body of this House subject to its authority. I would submit to you, Sir, that this Standing Order clearly contemplates the making of motions of the kind we are discussing now either at the initiative of the Government or a private Member in order to maintain the authority of the House over one of its committees. The wording of the Standing Order is a solid foundation for the points that I have made and those made by the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap.

Second, I know that you will want to look at the Standing Orders and the precedents in light of one or the other, Mr. Speaker, to see which precedent is still relevant. It is a novel argument made by the Deputy Government House Leader that certain precedents should automatically be struck down simply because they anti-date our current rules. I know that you will want to look carefully to see if there is anything in our current rules, Mr. Speaker, that make the precedents that I have cited, or those cited by the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap, in some way irrelevant. I respectfully submit that there is nothing in the rules that make these precedents irrelevant.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: I thank all the Members for their statements. I understand that a few more Members would also like to make statements, but I would ask all Members to co-operate with the Chair, as I believe I fully understand the two arguments. Furthermore, I agree that it is an important issue and for that reason I will probably reserve judgment until tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Once again, I thank you for your statements; as always, they are a great help to the Chair.

CANADA-U.S. FREE TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106 it is indeed an honour to present a petition on behalf of a large number of constituents. The petitioners are very concerned about the recent trade deal initialled by our Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) because they believe that the fabric of Canadian sovereignty is threatened by the proposed trade deal. The petitioners also believe that the Government lacks a mandate from the people of Canada because it was not an election issue back in 1984. As a matter of fact, if my memory serves me, the Prime Minister indicated that he was against this type of trade deal with the United States, so he obviously mislead the people of Canada during the election.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Riis: The petitioners are also concerned that the trade deal would reduce our ability to plan our economic, social and cultural future in Canada.

Mr. Speaker: I understand fully the reason the Hon. Member is pressing all the reasons why somebody may or may not have signed a petition. However, the petition asks something specific, and the rule is clear. The Hon. Member presenting the petition should make the request specific and not prolong the argument, effective and full as it no doubt was.

Mr. Riis: I thought you were preoccupied in the Chair, Mr. Speaker, and perhaps not paying too much attention.

I will summarize by saying that the petitioners are asking that a national debate take place on the trade deal and that this debate result in a national general election.

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106 I have the duty and honour to present a petition from several of my constituents who are opposed to the trade deal, who are worried about the trade deal, and who feel that it can only be passed as a result of an election. Therefore, the petitioners call upon the Government to pull the plug and go to the polls like yesterday!

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106, I wish to present six petitions from people in the Province of Ontario who state that Canadian sovereignty is threatened by the trade deal, the Government has no mandate, Canada's ability to plan is threatened, and the trade deal would integrate Canada into a North American defence industrial base. Therefore, the petitioners call for a national debate which would end in an election before such an agreement is signed.

REQUEST FOR DESIGNATION OF ROUGE RIVER VALLEY

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, I would like to present a petition today from residents of Scarborough, North York, Don Mills, Toronto, Burlington, and Etobicoke concerning the Rouge Valley in Scarborough. The petitioners state that it is a unique, precious, and natural area that needs protecting because of the endangered wildlife wilderness areas, and it is in the national interest to do so.

I join with the Scarborough City Council and the petitioners. The City Council of Scarborough is meeting tonight to amend the official plan to accommodate a park. The petitioners call upon Parliament to work with the Province of Ontario in establishing the Rouge River Valley as Canadian heritage land or provincial park.

CANADA-U.S. FREE TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to present a petition in which the petitioners indicate that the Conservative Government had no mandate from the Canadian people to conclude a free trade agreement with the United States. The Prime Minister promised that Canadian sovereignty would not be compromised. By removing the power of the Canadian Government to exclusively control foreign ownership, to develop Canadian energy resources in the best interests of Canadians, and to equalize opportunities between the regions, the proposed trade agreement would deny Canada the policy freedom to determine its own economic future. The proposed trade agreement not only denies Canadians secure access to the U.S. market, but threatens the loss of hundreds of thousands of Canadian jobs.

Therefore, the undersigned petitioners call upon Parliament to dissolve and allow the people of Canada the opportunity to accept or reject the proposed free trade agreement during a national general election.

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition duly certified from a number of Canadians. The petitioners are concerned that the Conservative Government had no mandate to conclude a trade agreement with the United States, and point out the negative effects of that trade agreement.

Therefore, the petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to dissolve and allow the people of Canada the opportunity to accept or reject the proposed free trade agreement during a national general election.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition which has been duly certified under Standing Order 106, and comes from people in my constituency, especially in the areas of La Salle, Windsor, Belle River, Tilbury, and indicates to the Government that they believe that the Conservative Government had no mandate from the Canadian people to conclude a trade deal with the United States, that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) promised in the course of trade negotiations that Canadian sovereignty would not be compromised, and yet the trade agreement would in fact deny Canada the policy freedom to determine its own economic future and would therefore undermine our ability to build a society distinct from that of the United States. They therefore call on this Government to dissolve Parliament and to permit the people of Canada a chance to have their say on this issue.

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I, too, have the pleasure to present a petition signed by a number of electors, this time from Nova Scotia. It is a petition that has been properly certified by the Clerk of Petitions. These petitioners, like many on both sides of the free trade issue—those in favour and those opposed—agree, as indicated in this petition, that the agreement should not come into force until there has been an election held to provide the mandate that did not exist at the time that the accord was signed.

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 329, 363 and 366.

[Text]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS AND CSIS—EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES

Question No. 329—Mr. Boyer:

Are Canadians of East European background employed (a) in the Department of External Affairs (i) as a whole (ii) on the East European desk (b) with the Canadian Security Intelligence Service and, if so, in each case, how many?

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of External Affairs and the Ministry of the Solicitor General as follows:

In so far as the Department of External Affairs is concerned, the Department does not keep statistics of the type requested.

Personal information obtained by the Department can under Section 7 of the Privacy Act only be used for the purpose for which it was initially collected or for the purpose of responding to specific circumstances outlined in Section 8 of the Privacy Act. The compilation of the requested statistics would not be consistent with those conditions which must be met before personal information can be disclosed to a third party. Accordingly, it is not possible to assemble requested statistics.

In so far as the Ministry of the Solicitor General is concerned:

With respect to the Canadian Security Intelligence Service, information about particular employees cannot be disclosed. Under Section 7 of the Privacy Act, personal information obtained by a department can only be used for the purpose for which it was initially collected or for the purpose of responding to specific circumstances outlined in Section 8 of the Act. The compilation of the requested statistics would not be consistent with those conditions which must be met before personal information can be disclosed to a third party.

The personnel practices and rules under which the Service operates do not provide for the gathering of information on the East European background of employees. Any such information that might emerge from the security screening process is protected.

Accordingly, it is not possible to assemble the requested statistics.

DSS—CONTRACT AWARDED SOLE-SOURED

Question No. 363—Mr. Caccia:

Was Department of Supply and Services contract 08DB.45045-7-7573 sole-sourced and, if so, (a) who authorized the sole-sourcing of this contract (b) was the sole-source justification technically and financially evaluated, and, if so, by whom (c) did the Department of Public Works make any recommendations on this contract or the tendering process related to this contract and, if so, what were the (i) recommendations (ii) responses of the Department of Supply and Services (d) are there other suppliers of such equipment and, if so, were any contacted prior to the awarding of this contract (e) who signed the purchase requisition?

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of Supply and Services): The DSS contract was sole-sourced.

(a) The request for sole source, directed procurement, was contained in "Sole Source Justification" document attached to Requisition 45045-7-7573, authorized by T. Thompson, Director Headquarters Operation Division, Statistics Canada.

(b) The sole source justification was technically and financially evaluated by Public Works, A and E Services, and recommended by the Director of the main Computer Centre, Statistics Canada.

(c) (i) The Department of Public Works recommended use of Pillar system since it offers maximum protection against line distortion, with EPE System as second option to be considered and a possible combination of MPL/EPE Equipment as a third option.

(ii) DSS accepted the Statistics Canada Sole Source Justification for Pillar System as per letter attached to requisition.

(d) Yes. Since evaluation had been carried out, and sole source justified, no contact with other suppliers was considered necessary.

(e) The Requisition for Goods and Services from Statistics Canada was signed by the following:

Recommended by M. J. Tremblay, Assistant Director, Administrative Support Services Sub-Division, authorized by T. Thompson Director, Headquarters Operations Division, financial authority (Section 25), R. Quesnel, Manager, Accounting Operations.

VETERANS AFFAIRS—EXPENDITURES IN METRO TORONTO AREA

Question No. 366—Mr. Redway:

Since September 4, 1984, did the Department of Veterans Affairs make grants and/or loans to persons or corporations, non-governmental organizations and governments within Metropolitan Toronto and, if so, to which ones and, in each case, in what amount and for what purpose?

Hon. George Hees (Minister of Veterans Affairs and Minister of State (Seniors)): Grants paid to recipients in the Metropolitan Toronto area for the period September 4, 1984 to May 31, 1988:

Assistance Fund

Grants paid under the Assistance Fund Regulations, of up to five hundred dollars to eligible veterans to meet unforeseen emergency needs and unexpected contingencies $189,000

Treatment Allowances

Grants paid under the Veterans Treatment Regulations, to pensioners who were receiving treatment for their pensioned disability $613,000

Last Post fund

Grants paid under the Last Post Fund Regulations to reimburse the Fund for expenses incurred for the funeral and burial of indigent veterans $821,000

Children of War Dead/Pensioners Training

Allowances and Tuition Fees paid under the Children of the War Dead Regulations, to eligible students registered in recognized universities or colleges

Also, the payment of allowances and tuition under the Pensioners Training Regulations to eligible pensioners who are registered in approved retraining programs. $252,000

Grants paid under the Pension Act to provide for the funeral and burial entlited pensioners $307,000

[English]

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I would ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The questions as enumerated by the Minister of State have been answered. Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S. O. 29

POSSIBLE WATER DIVERSION FROM LAKE MICHIGAN

Mr. Speaker: I have an application from the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon), under S. O. 29. I will hear the Hon. Member.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I would like to move to seek leave to adjourn the House for the purpose of discussing what I consider to be an extremely vital and pressing issue facing our country. That is the issue of water diversion from Lake Michigan, which could have devastating effects across the Great Lakes system and which would demonstrate to Canadians yet again how important water is within our relationship with the United States and how important it is that there be protection provided for us as a country to safeguard that water in the future.

Because we have such an important issue here, with many indications from the United States of pressure building in order for this diversion to take place, I hope that you will give very careful consideration to this request. Perhaps it might make sense to reserve judgment on it because of the importance of the issue to my constituency, to the many people across Ontario and to all people across Canada, and in view of the widespread implications of a diversion of this kind toward our relationship with respect to water with the United States in the future.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor for bringing this matter to the attention of the Chair. As Hon. Members know, this has been a matter of some interest to this place for some days. However, I want to assure the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor that it is an important matter and the Chair has given it very careful consideration, but at least for today the Chair is not disposed to move to an emergency debate. Of course, as I have stated before on other matters for emergency debates, that does not preclude another application at another time, depending on the circumstances and on what may or may not be said in this place. I thank the Hon. Member.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I wish to advise the House that in view of the amount of business that is before the House today and the time that was taken on the procedural argument vis-à-vis the motions on the Order Paper, the Government has decided not to proceed with the procedural debate on Motion No. 25. This has been communicated to the other House Leaders. Instead, we will proceed immediately to consideration of amendments made by the Senate to Bill C-77. That is the second item on the Order Paper.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the Government has the right under the rules to determine government business under Government Orders, but I want to say for the record that we received word, not long after nine o'clock this morning, that the Government did not intend to call the abortion motion to enable procedural argument to take place. I do not know how at that point in time the Government was able to determine whether there would be a procedural debate on a motion to instruct the committee on Bill C-130, or to enable the committee on Bill C-130 to travel. I was personally ready to make the points that I had to make about the procedural acceptability of the Government's motion on abortion this morning.

I do not think that the Government should, under the circumstances, use the relatively brief debate that we all had on the motion to enable or to instruct the committee on Bill C-130 to travel as a reason not to proceed with the procedural debate on the Government's abortion motion. I admit that the Government has the full authority to call any motion or any matter it wants with respect to the use of its time under Government Orders, but I do not think it should leave on the record the impression that somehow or other, because the Government itself chose to initiate a procedural debate on the acceptability of the motion to enable the committee on Bill C-130 to travel, it cannot now proceed with the abortion issue. If I am in error as to who first made the procedural arguments, I will withdraw that. I just wanted to say that we were quite ready to debate the procedural acceptability of the Government's motion on abortion.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I, too, have to take a moment or two to register a concern. It is the July 11, and of course once the Government decided to set aside the Standing Orders and to sit in July to conduct government business, we are required to do so. To conduct the business of the House of Commons in a business-like way we need advance notice to enable all sides to plan accordingly. That normally happens, but when it does not happen I think one has to raise a concern. I am a bit puzzled. The Deputy House Leader stood up just a moment ago and said that because we had a prolonged procedural debate this morning, he had decided not to proceed with the procedural debate on the abortion motion.

I was informed this morning, prior to the House of Commons sitting, that we would not be proceeding with the abortion procedural debate. I am curious how the Government House Leader knew at that point that we would be taking up some time in a procedural argument. Other than the fact that there obviously seems to be some confusion with the Deputy House Leader, I want to say to him that to enable us to work as efficiently, as effectively and as positively as we can, it is absolutely necessary that we get some forewarning to allow, not only ourselves as House Leaders to prepare but more important the critics to prepare and to be aware when in the agenda of the day they will likely be participating in a debate. I make an appeal for order to enable us to conduct the business of this House in the most orderly way possible.

Mr. Speaker: I appreciate the comments of both the Hon. Member for Windsor West and the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap. However, both Members while registering a complaint have certainly made it clear that it is completely within the authority and aegis of the Government to set the order for each day. In this respect, the Government is completely within its rights.

EMERGENCIES ACT

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence) moved the second reading of, and concurrence in, amendments made by the Senate to Bill C-77, an Act to authorize the taking of special temporary measures to ensure safety and security during national emergencies and to amend other Acts in consequence thereof.

He said: Madam Speaker, let me just thank the Hon. Member for Brant (Mr. Blackburn). It had been my intention to allow him to speak first and then to respond but it is probably more appropriate for me in moving the motion to speak now.

This will be a very short intervention because Parliament has had the opportunity already both in the Senate and in the House of Commons to debate this legislation. I will say that this is a very momentous day for Canada. With the acceptance of these amendments and the passage of this Bill from the House of Commons, we will see the abolition of the War Measures Act in Canada. Never again will we have a situation, as was the case in World War II, where Canadian citizens were interned on the basis of their racial ancestry. What we will have is a situation where there will be guarantees. Never again, for example, will there be the ability to use the War Measures Act to knock on the door in the dark of night, to sweep up our citizens, to hold them without charge and without the right of habeas corpus. What we will have, Madam Speaker, is a new and modern piece of legislation, one that is adequately safeguarded, one which protects the rights of all Canadians and one which gives to the Government the ability to protect the lives of Canadians, to keep them safe and to ensure that every Canadian has adequate protection in times of crisis.

As the House will know, Canada is virtually alone among modern western jurisdictions in not having this sort of flexible legislation. As a consequence, acceptance of these amendments and passage of this legislation will bring Canada into the 20th century. It will prepare us for the future in terms of the needs of this country.

I might simply mention that the Government is prepared to accept the two amendments which have been proposed by the Senate. One deals with the issue of conscription. While the Bill as it was passed unanimously on third reading in the House of Commons would have allowed conscription to take place by Order in Council, it would have simply maintained the status quo which existed under the old War Measures Act.

In the two instances where we have had conscription in the past, even though it would have been possible to do so by Order in Council under the old War Measures Act, the Government of the day felt it was appropriate to introduce special legislation. I would prefer in safeguarding the interests of all Canadians in times of emergency that that power still remain. The very nature of an emergency is such that it is impossible to predict the very dire circumstances which could take place. But I am satisfied that if a balance has to be struck that it is likely it would be possible in times of crisis, if Canada had to go to war, that there would be enough time for us to reconvene Parliament and for us to pass special legislation, if there was consent of the House.

Additionally, there is another minor change made by these amendments, namely, to change the structure of the joint parliamentary committee to ensure representation from both sides of the Senate. We are prepared to accept that as well. It does not go to the heart of the Bill and is something which obviously will reflect better the views of some of the members of the Senate.

I think it is appropriate simply to recall to the House the process that was used with this Bill. It was first indicated to Canadians that the Government intended to act in this area in the White Paper on National Defence which was tabled over a year ago. I tabled the Bill in June of last year prior to Parliament rising for the summer recess with the assurance that the Bill would sit on the Order Paper without being called over the course of the summer and that we would solicit from Canadians, from groups and individuals and from Members of Parliament their views, their responses about the Bill, their concerns and their suggestions about what improvements could be made to ensure that the Bill struck that appropriate balance between the rights of Canadians, the need of the state to protect its very survival and to protect the lives and safety of individual Canadians. I think it is a process which has worked well.

I want to thank members of the legislative committee and Members on all sides of the House for the co-operation which they have shown. We have the Bill which has been substantially amended over the course of the time in which it has been in Parliament. The vast majority of these amendments, in my view, make it a better Bill and better strike the balance between the rights of Canadians, the needs of the Government to provide for the safety of Canadians and for the integrity and survival of the state itself. It has been a process which has demonstrated that Parliament can work if goodwill is shown on both sides of the House.

[Translation]

I would simply like to thank all Members for their spirit of co-operation. That positive, constructive spirit has produced excellent results for all Canadians. Because of those efforts, we will have a more effective law that will better protect the rights of all our fellow citizens.

[English]

It is an example of Parliament working as Parliament was intended to work and, again, I thank all Members of Parliament for their efforts and co-operation.

I would conclude simply by saying that it is a very proud day for me to see this legislation passed into law. I think it should be a proud day for every Member of Parliament that Parliament is acting now to keep faith with Canadians with the commitment that was made some 18 years ago in the October, 1970 crisis that we would scrap the old War Measures Act and bring in properly balanced and safeguarding legislation to ensure that Canadians in the future would have a piece of flexible legislation with a range of capacities enabling us to deal with emergencies starting on the one hand with natural disasters and going all the way through to war emergencies. We will now have that legislation. I think it is a credit to this Parliament. It is probably a matter which is of great satisfaction and great pleasure for all Canadians that Parliament has acted in such a timely way and that before we rise for our summer recess we will have this sort of legislation.

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Madam Speaker, on behalf of the Official Opposition I am pleased to note the achievement of today in getting an important piece of legislation as far as it has and to commend the Minister and other Members for the way in which the debate has been handled.

I have to contrast this with the regrettable way in which in earlier Parliaments the issue of emergencies was treated when members of the then Opposition and now Government were certain that the Government had a plot in mind to introduce regulations under the War Measures Act from day to day and that there was a secret plan to subvert somehow or other the democratic process. To me as one who observed that process it was more than anything the impediment that existed in the past to try to update the War Measures Act and bring in more effective legislation. This is a Parliament which is less suspicious of the Government and less suspicious that there is a plan to declare an emergency jurisdiction in force in the country. We have turned our attention in a positive way to the real need for an updating of the War Measures Act and we have a satisfactory substitute before us.

I think the Minister should be commended for the attitude he took toward amendments. Many were introduced by people across the country who saw the Bill in its first version by Members of the House of Commons and finally, and significantly if I can touch on it for a moment, by the Senate.

The Senate is often criticized for its participation in the parliamentary process. It exists in our Constitution. It exists, in fact, down the hall from us, as the so-called other place, but when it tries to act and tries to make an input into legislation it is very often criticized and condemned for what it tries to do.

We have before us an example of a very effective contribution by the Senate dealing with the issue of conscription under the emergency measures legislation, a concern expressed by the Senators. The Minister recognized that, although the War Measures Act contained the power to bring in conscription by regulation, in the past, Governments, however troubled by the emergency at hand in World War I and World War II, chose not to bring in conscription by regulation but to proceed by a more democratic political process. The Senators have proposed an amendment, which I am glad to see the Government has adopted, which will assure that an emergency in the future will be dealt with in the same manner.

• (1220)

For me, it is an important moment as we pass a replacement for the War Measures Act, a legislation that can be used more moderately.

I would like to conclude with the idea that while it can be invoked more moderately, it does not have to be done that way. The legislation we are passing today still gives the government very broad powers, and there will always be a role for the lawmakers to play, that of watching to ensure that the four different categories of emergencies provided for under this legislation are not used by the Government as an excuse to seize the power to rule by regulation.

[English]

We always have to be vigilant in this place, in the media and across the country, with whatever emergency legislation the Government has, to be certain that it is not being abused. If there is anything that has been learned in the course of this debate and in the course of the committee hearings, it is that Government, given any power, needs to be watched. While the War Measures Act was a very extreme piece of legislation, that very extreme feature was in a way a safeguard that it would not be used lightly. This legislation can be used lightly, and I think to be certain that it is not used lightly will be the continuing responsibility of vigilant Canadians, of the media and of Members of Parliament in this place.

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Madam Speaker, a couple of things have always troubled me in my parliamentary career with respect to the Liberal Party of Canada. That is its ability to turn no logic into logic and to support the insupportable and make it look as if there were logic in both.

The Hon. Member from whom we have just heard is a former Solicitor General of Canada. He was a member of several Liberal Governments. Between 1971 and 1984, the Liberals had some 12 or 13 years in which to do something about the infamous War Measures Act. They chose to do absolutely nothing. They chose to leave it on the statute books.

This morning, we heard the Liberal spokesperson say that somehow the Opposition bothered them through those years by suspecting all kinds of unquestionable thoughts that might be entering the then Liberal Government's mind with respect to concentration camps and other nefarious business. I find it very, very strange, and from a logical point of view totally unacceptable and insupportable, that the Liberal spokesman would now stand up and somehow switch the blame around by saying that thank heavens today we do not have a suspicious Opposition and therefore this has made it easier for the Government to cope with the infamous War Measures Act. I fail to see any logic in those statements, and I fail to see how an intelligent, responsible Member of Parliament could support that kind of argument.

We all know that previous Liberal Governments had years in which to throw out the War Measures Act and bring in a new Bill, and they consistently refused to do so. That is the sum total of their disastrous record.

I might also add that during the very serious and productive discussions at the committee hearings, we went clause by clause and prior to that listened to representations from a broad spectrum of Canadian organizations and individuals. The Liberals hardly ever showed up at the committee hearings and, moreover, to make it even more disgraceful, they never offered one amendment to the Bill.

At the end, as the Minister said a few moments ago, the Bill was drastically changed as a result of the input from various groups of Canadians, from the New Democratic Party, from members of the Minister's own Party who were represented on the committee and from the Minister himself, showing an openness and a willingness on his part to accept reasonable, intelligent amendments. I think we made some history in this Parliament, as it draws to a close, I believe, in that there was input from the Opposition, from the New Democratic Party, that was listened to and accepted by the Government, and we listened to and accepted government changes brought in at committee, but there were no changes from the Liberals. As far as I am concerned, they acted in nothing but a disgraceful manner throughout the entire proceedings of Bill C-77.

Having said that, I want to mention a couple of points in these, our final remarks on this very important piece of legislation. The first has to do with representations made by the Association of Japanese Canadians, but I think it would also apply to representations made by Ukrainians who came before the committee with respect specifically to the concentration camp episode in our history, a very black part of our history indeed.

The Association of Japanese Canadians, in a letter to me, and I believe also to the Minister, asked that the Government submit this Bill to the Supreme Court of Canada for a final and ultimate decision with respect to the override of the Charter of Rights. We were assured by the law officers of the Crown during committee that no Government could override the Charter provisions in this Bill without a separate amendment to the Bill. In other words, it would have to go through the regular parliamentary process even during an emergency. This apparently does not satisfy some of the critics, namely the Japanese Canadians, and I would think possible the Ukrainian group as well, although it did not send any representation to me and I do not think that the group sent one to the Minister.

I would once again ask the Minister, as I have already in a letter, I believe, and also in my third reading debate, to put in motion as quickly as possible that request by the Japanese Canadians. I think it is a reasonable one. It would certainly allay all fears if the Supreme Court of Canada, as I think it will, decides in favour of the legislation, that no Government in the future could override the Charter of Rights in the application of Bill C-77 which is about to become law.

Another point concerns one of the amendments from the Senate which reads:

> Page 32, clause 62: Strike out lines 3 to 7 and substitute the following:
> "(2) The Parliamentary Review Committee shall include at least one member of the House of Commons from each party that has a recognized membership of twelve or more persons in that House—

I am not suggesting that the Government should hold up the passage of the Bill at this point, but I am not certain whether it is wise to put in the figure of 12. I think that should be deleted and I think it should be deleted at an early stage.

As the membership of this House increases, it is only reasonable to assume that that figure of 12 which would designate officially an opposition Party or a Party in the House will also increase. The next move could be to 15 or to 17, depending on the total membership of the House. It is a minor point, but I think it is one that should be cleared up at the earliest possible opportunity.

Finally, obviously I am very proud to have been part of this process that has brought forward what I think it is a good piece of legislation on balance. We will never get perfect legislation out of this Chamber or any other Chamber of this kind, a democratic legislature, but certainly we can always strive to do our best. I truly believe that members of the committee, the chairperson of the committee, the Parliamentary Secretary, the Minister, and those of us who had the privilege to sit on it, did our best and worked hard to bring forward what I consider to be a good Bill of we can all be proud.

• (1230)

A great deal of the thanks has to go to a gentleman who obviously cannot be here today to speak on this Bill, Mr. Bill Snarr, the senior public servant involved in helping pilot this Bill through committee. He was of great help, I can assure you, to an opposition Member like myself. He worked in an extremely objective and helpful and certainly knowledgeable way. I think I can speak on behalf of Minister this morning in public and extend our heartfelt congratulations to Mr. Snarr. I believe he is reaching pretty well the end of his public service career and this is probably the last piece of legislation he will take an active part in. Therefore, on behalf of all Members of the House, I want to extend to Bill Snarr a very long and happy retirement.

I hope this Act will never have to be used, certainly not Clauses 3 and 4. We have no control, of course, over natural disasters. I hope future governments will use it with caution and responsibility, and I am sure they will.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Questions or comments?

Mr. Beatty: Madam Speaker, I would like to use the vehicle of questions and comments to fully associate myself with the remarks of my friend from Brant with respect to Mr. Bill Snarr. Mr. Snarr has served Canadians for over three decades with a tremendously distinguished record. This Bill is certainly fitting testimony to the tremendous contribution he made. I know Members on all sides of the House have been tremendously impressed by his dedication, knowledge, flexibility and determination to ensure that legislation passed by this House is good and well prepared. I think he developed many friendships, particularly in committee, over the time the Bill was under study and certainly I felt privileged to know Mr. Snarr, both as a member of the Opposition prior to the last election, and as a member of the Government. He has retired from Emergency Preparedness Canada and is currently serving as senior adviser to me.

This represents, as the Hon. Member indicated, probably the last piece of legislation that he would be associated with, although there is still an important contribution for him to make to Canadians. However, the mere fact that this Bill has passed unanimously with the support of Members on all sides of this House certainly attests to the tremendous contribution which Bill Snarr made to Canadians. We will certainly miss his contribution to the public service.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Motion agreed to, amendments read the second time and concurred in.

CANADIAN MULTICULTURALISM ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House proceeded with consideration of Bill C-93, an Act for the preservation and enhancement of multiculturalism in Canada, reported with amendments by a Legislative Commitee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): There are thirty-two (32) motions in amendment on the Notice Paper for the report stage of Bill C-93, an Act for the preservation and enhancement of multiculturalism in Canada.

[English]

Motions Nos. 1, 2 and 3, standing in the names of the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp), the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) and the Hon. Member for La Prairie (Mr. Jourdenais), respectively attempt to include Parliament and the courts within the scope of the Bill. This proposal is taking the Bill beyond what was envisaged when the House approved its principle at second reading when it defined federal institutions.

Second, this motion is proposing a substantive change to the interpretation clause of the Bill which, as Hon. Members are aware, is not an acceptable practice in accordance with Beauchesne's Citation 773(10). Therefore, I must declare the motions procedurally unacceptable in that they go beyond the scope of the Bill as defined in Beauchesne's Citation 773(1).

[Translation]

Motions numbered 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 30, 31 and 32 are acceptable and will be debated together but voted upon as follows:

[English]

An affirmative vote on Motion No. 4 obviates the need for a vote to be taken on Motions Nos. 5 and 6. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 4 necessitates the requirement that a vote be taken on Motion No. 5. Consequently, an affirmative vote on Motion No. 5 obviates the need for a vote to be taken on Motion No. 6. Nevertheless, a negative vote on Motion No. 5 necessitates the requirement that a vote be taken on Motion No. 6.

Motions Nos. 7 and 8 will be voted on separately.

An affirmative vote on Motion No. 30 obviates the need to vote upon Motions Nos. 31 and 32. A negative vote on Motion No. 30 necessitates the requirement for a vote to be taken on Motion No. 31. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 31 obviates the need to vote upon Motion No. 32. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 31 necessitates the requirement for a vote to be taken on Motion No. 32.

[Translation]

Motions numbered 9 and 29 standing in the name of the honourable Members for York West (Mr. Marchi) and Thunder Bay-Nipigon (Mr. Epp) propose to establish a separate Department of Government and a commisssioner of Multiculturalism. In so doing the first Motion undoubtedly would cause a significant charge upon the Federal Treasury in order for the new Department to function on a daily basis. The amendment is at odds with the Royal Recommendation which accompanies this Bill as there is no provision in the Royal Recommendation or in the Bill for a separate government department.

In addition, the proposal for a commissioner with investigative and reporting powers appears to take the intent of the Bill beyond what was included originally.

Consequently, in accordance with paragraphs (1) and (7) of Citation 773 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, I must declare these amendments inadmissible.

[English]

Motions Nos. 10, 12, 14, 15, 17 and 18 are in order and will be debated together but voted upon separately.

[Translation]

Motion numbered 11 standing in the name of the honourable Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp) is identical to motion numbered 10 and will therefore not be selected and put to the House.

[English]

Motions Nos. 13 and 16 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) are identical to Motion No. 14 and thus will not be selected and put to the House.

[Translation]

Motion numbered 19 standing in the name of the honourable Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp) causes the Chair some concern. Paragraphs (h) and (i) of the motion, in my view, take the clause beyond what was agreed to in principle at Second Reading. The Bill makes no mention of designated agencies monitoring, investigating or auditing federal institutions.

In this regard, I must rule the amendment inadmissible, in accordance with paragraph 1 of Beauchesne's Citation 773 in that it goes beyond the scope of the bill.

[English]

Motions Nos. 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25 and 26 are acceptable and will be debated together but voted upon as follows:

Motion No. 20 will be voted on separately.

An affirmative vote on Motion No. 21 obviates the need for a vote on Motion No. 22. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 21 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 22.

An affirmative vote on Motion No. 23 obviates the need for a vote on Motion No. 24. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 23 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 24.

Motions Nos. 25 and 26 will be voted upon separately.

• (1240)

Motions numbered 27 and 28 are admissible and will be debated together but voted upon as follows:

[English]

An affirmative vote on Motion No. 27 obviates the need for a vote on Motion No. 28. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 27 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 28.

[Translation]

I shall now put motions numbered 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 30, 31 and 32 to the House.

[English]

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon) moved:

Motion No. 4

That Bill C-93 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 35 to 40 at page 3 and substituting the following therefor:

"(b) promote the recognition of cultural and racial diversity as a fundamental characteristic of Canadian society and as providing invaluable resources for the shaping of Canada's future;"

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West) moved:

Motion No. 5

That Bill C-93 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out lines 37 and 38 at page 3 and substituting the following therefor:

"mental characteristic of Canadian society and that it provides an invalu".

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is there unanimous consent for the Hon. Member for Willowdale (Mr. Oostrom) to move Motion No. 6 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Parkdale—High Park (Mr. Witer)?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Marchi: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): There is not unanimous consent, therefore that motion will not be proceeded with. The Hon. Member for York West did not give his consent.

[Translation]

We shall now vote on Motion No. 7.

Canadian Multiculturalism Act

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West) moved:

Motion No. 7

That Bill C-93 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 41 at page 3 and substituting the following therefor:

"(c) ensure the full and equitable partici-".

[English]

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon) moved:

Motion No. 8

That Bill C-93 be amended in Clause 3 by adding immediately after line 29 at page 4 the following:

"(k) encourage the youth of Canada to nurture the multicultural heritage of Canadians while seeking a full participation in the economic, social, cultural and political life of Canada."

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Lastly, Motion No. 30.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon) moved:

Motion No. 30

That Bill C-93 be amended in the Preamble by striking out lines 31 to 36 at page 2 and substituting therefor:

"Canada recognizes the diversity of Canadians as regards race, national or ethnic origin, colour and religion as a fundamental characteristic of Canadian society and is committed to a policy of multiculturalism designed to preserve and enhance the multicultural heritage of Canadians while working to achieve the equality of all Canadians in the economic, social, cultural and political life of Canada;".

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Motion No. 31.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): moved:

That Bill C-93 be amended in the Preamble by striking out lines 34 to 36 at page 2 and substituting therefor:

"that this multicultural nature is a fundamental characteristic of Canadian society, the Government of Canada desires to preserve and enhance this inherent quality in the continuing evolution of the country;".

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne)): Motion No. 32 is in the name of the Member for Parkdale—High Park. Is there unanimous consent that the motion be moved by the Member for Willowdale?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Marchi: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Member for York West has denied unanimous consent. The motion will not be proceeded with.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motions? The Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp) on debate.

Mr. Oostrom: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Last week, in the co-operative spirit which existed in this House on the languages Bill, both sides of the House allowed Members other than the Member in whose name a motion stood to present the motion. We are starting off on the wrong foot again. I would like to ask the Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) to reconsider his denial of unanimous consent for the moving of these amendments.

Mr. Marchi: Madam Speaker, one of the reasons that I did not give unanimous consent is that the amendment proposed by the Member for Parkdale—High Park is found both in an amendment that I will be presenting and in an amendment presented by the New Democratic Committee for multiculturalism. Therefore, no amendments of a substantive nature will be omitted.

Also at heart is the way in which the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism and the legislative committee was treated by the Government which rapidly pushed the Bill through committee, did not listen to witnesses, and did not give critics the opportunity to move the appropriate amendments.

Therefore, as there was no co-operation and respect by the Government and the Minister in committee, we believe that there should be no co-operation offered at this stage.

Mr. Lewis: Madam Speaker, I heard only part of my hon. friend's comments. However, I would like to put on the record what has been understood among House leaders, that is, that my instructions, as we entered this last two weeks, have been that at all times Members of the Opposition would be granted permission to move motions on behalf of other Members in their absence. That in fact happened at report stage on the Air Canada Bill and may have happened on other Bills which I cannot recollect at this moment. However, those are our instructions in order that no Member of the Opposition, nor indeed the opposition Parties, will be foreclosed from placing amendments because of the way in which the Government calls its business.

At this stage it is in the interest of everyone to co-operate, no matter what happened in any committee. I hope that my hon. friend will reconsider because in this business one often finds that the shoe is on the other foot. Even if permission is not given, I stand by my comment that the Government will allow Members, other than the Member in whose name a report stage motion stands on the Order Paper, to move the amendment. In the interests of co-operation and better legislation I hope my hon. friend would reconsider.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Resuming debate. The Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp).

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Madam Speaker, although we are only at report stage on Bill C-93 one is struck by the importance of this moment in that we have Canada's first multiculturalism Bill returned from the legislative committee for consideration in the House. Without making any comment on certain things which have happened, I want to express my pleasure in the ruling which you rendered a few minutes ago. In surveying the motions on the Order Paper for amendment of the Bill, some motions were ruled to be procedurally inadmissible and some the Speaker, with the guidance of the Clerks, found to be in order and are before us today for consideration by the House prior to voting on them.

The significance of this Bill which will provide for the legislating of the multiculturalism policy is that we have achieved a point in the evolution of multiculturalism policy that previous Liberal Governments had never achieved.

While I do not want to reflect on the ruling itself, it is regrettable that the shortcomings in the legislation made those rulings inevitable. These rulings include the application of the Bill to the Parliament of Canada, motions for the creation of a department and the establishment of a commissioner of multiculturalism. These motions were inevitably found out of order by the Speaker because the legislation was so constrained.

It is regrettable that the legislation brought forward by the previous Secretary of State contained no such provisions. That regret has been expressed by myself and other Members, as well as by many people across the country. They regret that this historic Bill has those constraints. While the Bill does much to establish the principles of multiculturalism policy, it does not fully assure Canadians that this policy will be the basis for action by government in the future.

The motions that you have ruled we are to debate today primarily provide for a recognition of multiculturalism or ethnocultural diversity in this country as a fundamental characteristic. When the Bill came out of the legislative committee, the Government spoke of that in terms of a fundamental element. To speak of diversity or even a policy as an element is poor English. The fact that it is poor English is hardly half the reason to consider means by which we could recognize the diversity of this country.

One of the consequences of the work on the constitutional accord 15 months ago, which has been approved by the Parliament of Canada and eight of ten provincial legislatures, is that there is a recognition for linguistic duality in this country. It recognizes it as a fundamental characteristic.

It is most important that this historic Bill recognize the ethnocultural diversity of the country. The Government should recognize that as well through similar language in the legislation.

The Meech Lake Accord spoke of duality as a fundamental characteristic. That left many of us convinced that there were other fundamental characteristics. This matter has become more difficult for the Government to consider in the last minutes because the two motions by a Government Member which have not been found to be in order provided for this recognition in both Clause 3 and the preamble to the Bill. I suggest that the Government should consider carefully other motions by Opposition Members who were on the standing committee and active in the legislative committee. The Government should carefully consider that one or other of those motions for both Clause 3 and for the preamble be found acceptable by the Government when it comes time to vote on them so they may carry through the amendment to the Bill.

There is a good deal of support for this by various organizations across Canada. The Canadian Ethnocultural Council, the national organization speaking in this area, has suggested that "fundamental characteristic" rather than "element", would be a better way of wording the matter. It is more of an observation than a demand.

However, other organizations have made the case much more forcefully. These include such diverse organizations as the Manitoba Inter-Cultural Council, which has the distinction of being most representative in the sense that it is chosen by members of the community. Most of the members of the Manitoba Inter-Cultural Council are practically elected by ethnocultural communities in Manitoba.

The Council stated firmly that the language should be "fundamental characteristic". The National Congress of Italian Canadians has a most honourable place among the national ethnocultural organizations. In its brief there was a clear recognition of the fact that the Meech Lake Accord had made "fundamental characteristic" a phrase in the context of duality and should also apply to the ethnocultural diversity of the country.

The Affiliation of Multicultural and Service Agencies in British Columbia, one of the most broad organizations involved with both ethnocultural groups and immigrant services, has made the same argument that we should have "fundamental characteristic" as the provision in both Clause 3 and the preamble.

There is a diversity of arguments, from recent Canadian experience, as well as from language and from community organizations across the country that the phrasing should be "fundamental characteristic". I will watch with interest as the Minister of State for for Multiculturalism (Mr. Weiner) thinks about these matters and decides what advice he should give his caucus colleagues, knowing that the motions proposed by a colleague in his own caucus are not before us for decision this afternoon.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Madam Speaker, I wish to register our support for Motion No. 4 in the name of the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp). It recognizes the change in the word "fundamental element" to read "fundamental characteristic".

I too have a number of motions which address the very same aspect. It is an important matter and I wish to record our support for Motion No. 4.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I would recognize the Hon. Minister right now, but may I suggest that we call it one o'clock, and I will recognize the Hon. Minister after Question Period?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this day.

At 12.59 p.m. the House took recess.

AIRPORTS

PEARSON INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT—PRICES CHARGED BY SNACK-BARS

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, in the Pearson International Airport at Toronto, the smallest glass of pop, coca cola, for example, costs $1.29. I was at the airport yesterday and had to spend a fair amount of time waiting for some travellers. I was appalled at the prices they charged at the concession snack-bars in the airport. I call upon the Government to look into this problem.

These are basically monopoly operations which are under the control of the Government. The Government wants to brag about running airports as profit centres and, to a certain point, it is entitled to do so, but it also has a responsibility not only to the public as taxpayers but to the public as travellers. It is appalling to discover how much is being charged for these basic simple services. It should be part of the Government's responsibility to ensure that prices being charged are reasonable in relation to the service and products provided.

I call upon the Minister of Transport (Mr. Bouchard) to look into the situation and to report on what is being done by the Government to keep prices in line for the travelling public at our airports.

FISHERIES

ATLANTIC INSHORE FISHERMEN—LOBSTER LICENCE STATUS

Mr. Lawrence I. O'Neil (Cape Breton Highlands—Canso): Mr. Speaker, I rise to urge that the desire of inshore fishermen to have their concerns about upgrading their lobster licences to A from B be addressed. Many of these fishermen received a commitment years ago that they would be allowed to regain their licensed status if their personal circumstances changed. Still others had their licences cancelled based on incorrect information or procedures employed at the time. Fishermen who are seeking reinstatement of their lobster licences should be given a full hearing.

To date, fishermen are being told by the Atlantic Licence Appeal Board that the board cannot upgrade or reinstate, it can only decide whether the policy in effect at the time of down grading or cancellation was applied correctly. That is not enough. This issue must be addressed in a complete way with a view to restoring equity by having the circumstances of each appellant fully considered and responded to.

CLOSURE OF WESTERN SHORE, N.S., POST OFFICE

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, on Sunday in Western Shore, Nova Scotia, the local post office will be closed. It will be closed for the last time. All 720 residents of this small town signed a petition asking that their post office be maintained but no one has listened. These people say that the Member of Parliament for the area simply passed on the message to Canada Post without any recommendations. He is obviously following the lead of the Minister responsible for the Post Office who washes his hands of responsibility when it comes time to stand up for rural post offices.

This problem came about when the local postmistress decided to retire. Are Canadians living in rural areas to be frightened every time one of their postmistresses or postmasters decides to retire that this will be the time their post office will close down?

We must hear these people. Their voices must be heard loud and clear. They describe their post office as a meeting place and they believe the old people will really be the ones to suffer. The people used the post office for money orders and things like that, and every kid who came into the post office received a sucker. That is all gone now. These people deserve to be heard. Rural Canada needs a voice in this Parliament.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

CENTENNIAL OF AGASSIZ, B.C., POST OFFICE

Mr. Ross Belsher (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, it is an honour to rise in the House today to commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the post office in Agassiz, British Columbia. Actual postal service to the community was started in 1884, but it was not until four years later that the name of Agassiz was adopted, named after the first postmaster, Mr. L. A. Agassiz. Since that time 14 postmasters have efficiently run the post office, and today Debbie Cliff proudly holds the title of postmistress. Miss Cliff recently accepted a Canada Post plaque honouring the centennial of the community post office.

• (1405)

There is a rich history of community involvement in the post office. Henry Wilson was the postmaster for 16 years, and Dorothy Aspelund was the first female appointed to the postmistress position in Agassiz. She served for 19 years.

The community of Agassiz has been growing in the last decade, and a second rural route was established in 1980 to meet the needs of this fine community.

Hats off to the people of Agassiz and to your post office! You have set a fine example for many other community post offices in B.C. and Canada. Congratulations!

MISSING CHILDREN

RETURN OF ABDUCTED HAMILTON BOY

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, in the dog days of summer we do not often get good news. However, I had some last week.

You may recall, Mr. Speaker, a couple of months ago I raised in this House the case of a young boy who had been abducted by one of his parents and who had gone missing for several months. Last week that boy was returned to the care of his mother in the city of Hamilton.

I think one of the reasons for the happy ending to what could have been a very sad story was the fine work done by the Hamilton-Wentworth Regional Police and, in particular, Sgt. Wilde, who worked diligently day and night on the case. The boy's mother and other family members never gave up hope that he would be reunited with his mother.

I know that there are hundreds of other missing children, many of whom have been abducted by a parent. I want to ask those parents to remember this. An abducted child, a child who is away from his home, is not a happy or contented child. Think about the child. In this case we had a happy ending. If those parents who really love their children think about them, they will reunite them with their family environment.

I am extremely happy that this story had a happy ending.

SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH

RESEARCH IN QUÉBEC—GOVERNMENT PERFORMANCE

Mr. Guy St-Julien (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, once again, the Conservative Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Masse) has given the Province of Quebec a helping hand. He announced that an earth sciences research centre would be set up in Quebec, in cooperation with the Quebec Institute of Scientific Research, in addition to an energy research laboratory in northwestern Quebec. The creation of this laboratory in Abitibi-Témiscamingue will be welcomed by the mining industry.

Decisions such as this by the Conservative Minister will enable all Canadians, from Quebec and elsewhere, to contribute to the national policies of his Department. The Department must be present in Quebec, just as Quebecers must be present in the Department.

Mr. Speaker, that is the result of the excellent work done by the Conservative Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Masse) and Hon. Member for Frontenac.

SHIPBUILDING

PROPOSAL TO BUILD MINESWEEPER PATROL VESSELS

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, it has long since become clear that the Mulroney Government has no shipbuilding policy beyond the assignment of government work to one shipyard or another.

Similarly, the last Liberal Government used special capital recovery projects to provide vessels for the Coast Guard. The present Conservative Government uses naval construction and refits to keep shipyards working.

The award of work on the HMCS Nipigon to Port Weller Dry Docks last week marked the application of this practice to an Ontario yard. Ontario shipyards have suffered severely from the shipbuilding depression. Collingwood was closed two years ago, and Port Arthur Shipbuilding is forced to rely on repair work alone.

A consortium led by Canadian Shipbuilding and Engineering Ltd. has proposed construction of minesweeper patrol vessels for the Canadian Navy. The consortium has proposed distribution of this work to yards in Ontario and Quebec, as well as in the Atlantic and Pacific regions.

I urge the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Beatty) to recognize the Navy's need for these vessels and the shipyards' needs for the work. I urge the Minister to award this contract to the consortium led by CSEL.

AIRPORTS

OTTAWA INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT—SUGGESTED IMPROVEMENTS

Mr. Bill Tupper (Nepean—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I wish to bring Members' attention to a major study of the Ottawa International Airport which has just been completed.

The study, commissioned by the Ottawa-Carleton Economic Development Corporation, points to two surmountable obstacles to growth. First, although the airport has the fifth largest passenger volume in Canada, it ranks last in terms of direct access to major U.S. air transportation hubs. Second, Winnipeg, Calgary, and Edmonton all have U.S. preclearance facilities, but the Ottawa airport lacks such a service.

The airport study indicates that we could remedy the first defect without bilateral negotiations by designating Ottawa as an underserviced destination. The second defect could be remedied by granting immunity to U.S. Customs and Immigration agents, assuming the U.S. would reciprocate.

These are constructive recommendations to improve the airport of our nation's capital. I would like to encourage further consideration of them by our transportation Ministry.

NATURAL RESOURCES

WATER—POSITION OF LIBERAL AND PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE LEADERS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, in the last few weeks, while western farmers have been experiencing the worst drought in 50 years and people in central Canada have been baking in temperatures in excess of 35 degrees, a lot of politicians have been hopping on the bandwagon and protecting our water from the Americans. Well, in a speech to the United States Chamber of Commerce, 1967, the Leader of the Liberal Party (Mr. Turner) said:

> If some day we can agree to the sharing of this continent's water by offering some of our water for export, we might want to insist that if water is to be considered a continental resource, markets should also be considered on the same basis . . . That, as I see it, must be our position.

Mr. Speaker, when Liberals get up in this House to defend our water, they should remember that their Leader was prepared to export our precious water only a few years ago.

What about Liberal Premier Robert Bourassa? In 1985 he said:

> There is little doubt that Québec and Canada could be a source of water for North America in years to come.

Brian Mulroney in an interview in 1985 with Fortune magazine said:

> If somebody wanted to buy a little of our water, hell, we are in business, that is what it is all about. We have it coming out of our ears in Sept-Îles.

Can Canadians really feel that our precious water is safe in the hands of this Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) or the Leader of the Liberal Party?

As prairie farmers watch their crops shrivel and die from a lack of rain, and as the millions of Canadians living near the Great Lakes are faced with the diversion of much of this water to the United States, they should consider just who they can really trust to stand up and fight to keep control over our water resources. It is not this Government and it is not the Liberal Party. Only one Party has been consistent in the defence of our water—the New Democratic Party of Canada.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—THE ADVANTAGES

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, because of free trade in the automotive sector, General Motors of Canada has over the past three years invested 3.7 billion dollars in the Oshawa riding. That is money that is of immediate benefit to 20 350 workers, and the investment is due to free trade in the automotive sector. Fifty par cent of Ontario's exports to the U.S. in recent years are attributable to free trade in that sector.

The Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent), the leader of the socialist Party, is very well aware that American investment under free trade is profitable to the Oshawa riding.

Bob White, president of United Auto Workers, also knows how profitable free trade is for automobile workers in the Oshawa region.

It is strange, Mr. Speaker, that Bob White is against free trade when it pays him so well and pays the socialist leader so well. We should remember that Bob White is the national vice-president of the socialist party. These two men, White and Broadbent, have vowed that Canadians who do not live in Oshawa will not be prosperous.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—WATER RESOURCES

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, it is very disturbing to learn that Americans are already saying that water is included in the trade agreement, despite denials here in Ottawa. In addition, pressure is mounting to increase the flow of water from Lake Michigan into the midwest river system, so as to keep water transportation afloat. The Canadian Government has not made its opposition to such increase known in Washington, except for extracting a weak commitment that Canada will be consulted before a decision is made.

The weakness of the Canadian position is scary. Canadian water is threatened. The least the Government must do is to exclude water from the trade agreement. Without such amendment, the credibility of the Government is seriously damaged. We must not allow our water to be up for grabs.

GLOOMSAYERS' INCORRECT PROPHECIES

Mr. Elliott Hardey (Kent): Mr. Speaker, I want to take a moment to congratulate the gloomsayers in this House. They should be recognized for their amazing consistency on every major issue since 1984. They have been proven wrong every time.

They said that the Government could not reduce the deficit without killing many of our social programs. The deficit has come down every year since 1984. Social programs have been increased.

They said that the Government could not lower and stabilize interest rates for any length of time without triggering inflation. They were wrong again. For four straight years inflation has remained under control while exports and housing starts flourished.

The gloomsayers said that you couldn't reduce government make work projects without increasing unemployment. How wrong can you get? Last Friday unemployment in Canada had reached a seven-year low. Canadian youth are showing confidence that jobs are waiting for them as they leave their schools. What a difference from the Trudeau days!

Is it any wonder that Canadians are doubting the gloomsayers now, as they preach their negative nonsense about free trade, tax reform, and defence issues?

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

PUBLIC SERVICE—HIRING PRACTICES

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, last week Canadians saw the dinosaurs of the Tory caucus in action once again. This time they were displaying their intolerance by trying to destroy the essence of the Official Languages Act, a Bill supporting bilingualism, a Bill widely accepted by most clear-thinking Canadians.

It is true that those Tories have every right to table amendments, but that misses the fundamental point, that is, the necessity that bilingual federal Public Service hiring practices must be fairly and equitably applied for Francophones outside Quebec and Anglophones within Quebec. Their amendment gave Canadians a rare glimpse of the archaic out-of-touch thinking inside the Tory caucus.

Let us not forget that it took active intervention by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to get this Bill passed. Now, will the Secretary of State fulfil his responsibility by ensuring speedy implementation of Bill C-72 for both Anglophones within Quebec and Francophones outside Quebec? Let me remind him that implementing this Act is a federal responsibility which does not require an entente cordiale anywhere across this land.

I am sure all Canadians will remember this episode as a repeat one, a reminder of Tory thinking that began when more than 26 Tories voted against the first Official Languages Act back in 1969.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

GREENHOUSE EFFECT—NEED FOR CO-OPERATIVE MEASURES

Mr. Bill Gottselig (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, as a result of what is being termed the "greenhouse effect" future generations may be forced to live through devastating years of hardship and drought, far worse than we experience today. Not only could disease such as skin cancer be more prevalent and deadly, but crop production could be diminished to an extent that ultimately will affect our basic food supply. Jobs could also be lost.

It is a known fact that human activities influence the destruction of the ozone layer. If Canadians were to adjust their way of life we might be able to slow down this damage significantly. For example, farmers could implement changes in their methods of grain production and livestock maintenance; we could all learn better waste management in order to prevent pollution in a variety of areas; and water should also become a cherished commodity and used with greater respect.

I urge government, business, labour, and individual citizens to pull our resources together. We must enhance research and become more aware of the environmental consequences of our actions, which have become habit.

Environmental protection is everybody's business.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—WATER RESOURCES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. The Minister knows that I have been arguing for some time that Tariff Schedule Item 22.01 of the trade deal with the United States covers ordinary natural water of all kinds, and thus will allow for the eventual export of Canadian water to the United States. The Minister also knows that his colleague, the Minister for International Trade, has argued that Item 22.01 applies only to bottled mineral water—he talked about Perrier with great gusto in the House of Commons.

The Minister of National Revenue has issued the official explanatory notes on the harmonized customs tariffs for the Canada-U.S. trade deal. I quote from his document where he states that the official explanation for Item 22.01 is "ordinary natural water of all kinds other than sea water". It seems pretty clear.

Will the Minister explain why his explanation of the customs Item 22.01 contradicts flatly the rejection of our argument of the past number of weeks here in the House of Commons that the trade deal does not contemplate the inclusion of water within its ambit?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the position is exactly as has been stated repeatedly, and is very clear from the free trade agreement. The free trade agreement does not apply to water in its natural running state. It does not apply to any diversion of water from any natural basins of this country. It applies principally to bottled water.

Let me tell the Hon. Leader of the Opposition the following. If he checks the same agreement, he will see in one of the schedules that compressed air is included. That does not mean to say that Canada is in danger of losing its air, certainly as long as the Leader of the Opposition is around.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

• (1420)

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I think the air pressure in this House will stay well above normal as long as the Minister sticks around, and that won't be for too long.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

[Translation]

POSITION OF MINISTER OF NATIONAL REVENUE

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, that may be the Minister's point of view, but I want to repeat the official interpretation given by his colleague. Under the law, the Minister of National Revenue is responsible for providing an official interpretation of all questions related to Customs. This official explanation by the Minister says that tariff item 22.01 covers water of all kinds except sea water.

Now the Great Lakes are not sea water, any more than Lake Winnipeg, Lake Athabasca, Lake Nipigon or Great Slave Lake or the St. Lawrence River. The waters of these lakes are covered by this tariff item in the Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement, despite the claims and statements by the Minister for International Trade. Does the Minister of National Revenue deny having sent this official explanation to his Customs officers and how can he reconcile his official interpretation with the statements made by his colleague, the Minister for International Trade?

[English]

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, might I refer again, in our attempt to keep the Leader of the Opposition on a factually correct road—I know he would not intentionally distort the facts—to an interview shown on television on Sunday, May 1. Mr. Craig Oliver along with Pamela Wallin interviewed Ambassador Clayton Yeutter on CTV.

Mr. Yeutter was asked—he, of course, is the United States trade representative who negotiated this deal—a question:

> Did you see this deal as leading to a system by which the United States can also have easier access to Canadian supplies of water?

And he said:

> I don't see the free trade arrangement being used as a vehicle to accomplish that, but I can certainly see there might be U.S.-Canada discussions on access to water supplies over the next 10, 20 or 50 years.

That is exactly the same point which the Leader of the Opposition in his famous book made a number of years ago when he said he could see water being used as an item of trade as a natural resource.

Mr. Yeutter went on to say:

> I happen to know the issue of water well because I did my PhD. dissertation on water law and water administration, but I don't see it being an FTA issue. I see it being a separate issue that will inevitably draw attention in time.

And so on. Here is the chief trade representative of the United States who said that the free trade arrangement has nothing to do with the question of water, that it is a separate issue that will inevitably draw attention in time.

When it does, this Government has a policy that we will not permit—which was enunciated in November, 1987, for the first time by any Government in Canada—inter-basin transfer of water from Canada to the United States or anywhere else. We have got the policy. We are only in danger if the hon. gentleman opposite gets into power.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Dick: Poor John. Give him some water.

REQUEST THAT AGREEMENT BE AMENDED

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in that celebrated declaration which the Minister cites that I made 20 years ago to the United States Chamber of Commerce I said quite clearly to the suggestion that the water of North America should be considered a continental water supply, Canadians say hold on a minute. We say there is Canadian water, there is American water, and there is Mexican water, but we do not like the new vocabulary which calls our water continental water. That has always been my position and it is my position here before the House.

I don't care what Clayton Yeutter's PhD. thesis says or how he interprets the agreement. The Minister of National Revenue in his official interpretation of Article 22.01 includes ordinary natural water within the purview of the agreement. No matter what the Minister of Trade says, no matter what Clayton Yeutter says or what anybody else, that is the official interpretation of this Government.

The Minister of Justice—I ought to put this to the Acting Prime Minister, and I would like to be advised who is Acting Prime Minister today—

Mr. Crosbie: We will let you know.

Mr. Beatty: Who is the Acting Leader of the Opposition today?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I will put the question to the Acting Prime Minister whoever he or she may be.

On Friday the Minister of Justice said:

> The question of our ability to control water policy in Canada transcends any agreement.

That is to say our water policy would out rank anything in the agreement. However, Clause 8 of the legislation passed by this House says quite clearly that the trade agreement supersedes and transcends any Canadian legislation or policy.

• (1425)

With great respect, I say to the Minister of Justice that he does not know what he is talking about. I ask the Acting Prime Minister, if the Minister for International Trade is so categorical that despite the trade agreement, despite the trade legislation and despite the customs tariff we have recited, why does he not agree to an amendment specifically to exclude water from the purview of the agreement?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I want to remind the hon. gentleman first about what he said in his famous book. He said:

> We might wish to export water, not for money as we sold power under the Columbia River Treaty, but in return for access to your markets. That, as I see it, must be our position. I don't want to sound tough.

He didn't.

There is nothing in the free trade agreement which requires the diversion of water to the United States. We are not going to permit the diversion of water to the United States. That is our policy.

The prohibition of water exports by means of inter-basin transfers falls squarely within exceptions permitted by GATT and is totally consistent with the free trade agreement. The hon. gentleman, The Toronto Star, and their supporters who are anti-free trade are trying to stir up these fictitious fears. Let the mud settle. It just is not true. Please just let it settle and stick to the facts. Don't stick to your book of a few years ago; that is too dangerous.

REQUEST FOR SPECIFIC EXEMPTION OF WATER

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister for International Trade, and sticks to reported facts, at least that are as recent as one week ago.

Last week the same chief negotiator for the United States, Mr. Yeutter, was quoted as having said in an interview with Republican Representative Grandy that water is in the agreement. This is as recently as one week ago.

In light of continuous pressures on Canadian water, what has the Government of Canada got to lose by adding water to the list of items including beer, unprocessed fish, and lumber, items that are exempted from the trade agreement?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman who asked the question himself issued a release just a few days ago, July 5, not that long ago, which should not have passed out of his mind so quickly, in which he said, "While the Government has repeatedly stated that nothing in the trade deal forces Canada to sell water to the U.S."—the hon. gentleman admits that the free trade agreement does not force Canada to sell water and then he goes on to say—"the same Government cannot give assurance that the deal prevents the export of water." We do not enter into agreements to prevent something. If we are a Government with resolution, a Government that has a policy, we do not need an agreement to tell us what we can prevent. We prevent it by saying it is against our policy to permit it, something which you never did when you were in power and now you are clucking like a rooster every time water is mentioned.

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, that is exactly where we want the Minister for International Trade to do, to take a measure that will prevent it. That is all we are asking for. What have you got to lose by including water in the trade deal? Tell us now.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the free trade agreement cannot now be amended. It is before the U.S. Congress and it is before this House, but not only that, there is no need to amend it. There is no danger unless the Hon. Leader of the Opposition gets into power and wants to treat water like a commodity and make some money on it.

The Hon. Member quoted Iowa Republican Representative Grandy who made certain comments which he said were based on comments made by a U.S. trade official at a discussion on trade issues organized by Grandy for his constituents. He never had any conversation with Mr. Yeutter. He has no information from Mr. Yeutter on this matter.

The U.S. trade office will confirm that water in its natural state is not a subject of the free trade agreement. Only bottled water is, the same as compressed air. I know the hon. gentleman is going to go racing around the country now saying, "Watch out for the air, watch out for the air, because it is being sold to the United States under the free trade agreement," just like the little red hen.

• (1430)

PROPOSED CHICAGO CANAL WATER DIVERSION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister.

Mr. Rodriguez: Which one?

Mr. Langdon: I am not sure which is the best actor over there.

A water diversion increase of three times the amount presently going through the Chicago diversion, which is what is being proposed by various U.S. Senators and Governors—

Mr. McDermid: Wrong! Name the second Governor.

Mr. Langdon: —would decrease the water level in Lake Huron by up to nine inches, by five inches in Lake Erie, and would have a tremendous effect on water quality, hydroelectric production, shipping and recreation. It is not a laughing matter.

Given this significant danger will the Acting Prime Minister show leadership and see to it that this House unanimously passes a resolution to be conveyed to the U.S. which indicates our complete opposition to any increase in the Chicago diversion?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the House will be happy to know, and I believe the House already knows, that we have conveyed the strong views of this Government to the U.S., and I am sure those are the views of all Members of the House. We have had our Ambassador visit and set out our position very clearly. Our position was also stated clearly by the Attorney General, I believe it was, on Friday.

We take the position that Canadian consent is needed for any such diversion of water as proposed by one or two Governors, not by all. Our view is not based on any interpretation of U.S. domestic law. We say the obligation to get Canada's consent is governed by international law and is based on a number of bilateral treaties, agreements and exchanges of notes between Canada and the U.S., including the 1909 Boundary Waters Treaty, the 1959 Niagara River Treaty, and the exchange of notes on the Long Lac-Ogoki diversion, as well as the practice of the two countries going back to the early 1940s.

In all that time no unilateral diversions have been undertaken by either country, and we fully expect that this proposal will be rejected also. There will be no diversion with our consent and the U.S. knows forcefully and well that we object strongly to this proposal.

REQUEST THAT AGREEMENT BE AMENDED

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, the same detailed report of the International Joint Commission reviewed this whole question in 1985 and indicated that unfortunately there is an ambiguity in our legal right to prevent the U.S. from diverting water from Lake Michigan. Given that unfortunate fact, will the Government move to do something about the ambiguity by amending the trade deal so as to block water diversions from the Great Lakes to the U.S., whether through the Chicago diversion or some other diversion south of Lake Superior, or any place else in the Great Lakes Basin? Otherwise, the impact on our country would be disastrous.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, we have heard a lot of warnings from the hon. gentleman about disasters to befall Canada. I am sure if there was a serious diversion of water, that would be of serious concern to Canada. However, we do not believe there to be any ambiguity in the practices which have been followed since the early 1940s, or in international law. We always know, of course, that there can be arguments about what the law is.

Our position is there is no ambiguity, but if there is we know that our relationship with the U.S. is a good, solid, honest, cooperative one and we feel sure that the U.S. administration will listen to our representations, apart altogether from laws and ambiguities that might surround any issue.

GOVERNMENT'S POSITION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, the former Minister for International Trade, who negotiated this infamous trade deal, said she is against even considering the possibility of an amendment. What is it that prevents the Government from putting such a simple safeguard in a trade deal? What is it that prevents the Government from standing up on behalf of Canadians for once and doing what it should do? What is it that prevents the Government from standing up for Canada for once?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, these theatrics are not very impressive. The position is this. I am answering these questions as Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs. This has nothing to do with trade matters.

If the U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement had never come into existence, if it had never crossed anyone's mind, if it did not exist, if it was up on the Moon or Saturn somewhere, we would still have this problem of the proposal by the Governor of Illinois to divert these waters and we would be handling it in the same way. It has no connection at all to the Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement, which is an agreement governing commercial relations to increase our access to the U.S. market, to make our people more prosperous, to give Canadians a chance to show what they can do in competition with the Americans, to help Canada and Canadians.

It has no connection whatsoever with the free trade agreement and we do not need to approach the Americans about the free trade agreement. This is a different issue to be treated differently by a different Minister.

REQUEST FOR AMENDMENT TO AGREEMENT

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I will direct my question to the same Minister. If he had read the agreement he would know that Article 409 provides for a full sharing of goods and services. The interpretation given by the Minister of National Revenue to his customs officers includes natural water as part of that definition of goods and services. It is therefore part of the agreement.

The Minister can solve the problem very simply by proposing an amendment that would exclude water from being subject to Section 409. The Minister says he cannot do that because the deal is final. The fact is that the U.S. has not completed its legislation. It has not tabled its Bill yet. The Minister is not describing the state of affairs accurately to the House. Considering Article 409 and the official interpretation given by his colleague, why does the Minister refuse to propose the kind of exclusion required to ensure that water will not be included as part of the trade agreement?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the only way in which water is touched upon in the free trade agreement, and I will say this again for the record, or any trade in water as a commercial good, is under the heading "beverages, spirits and vinegar". Vinegar is certainly apt when we hear these repetitious questions, these same feeble attempts to alarm the Canadian people, day after day, week after week.

Water itself as a natural resource is not dealt with in the free trade agreement. There is nothing in the free trade agreement which requires or obliges or directs or orders or permits the diversion of water to the United States. The policy of this Government, contrary to the last Government, enunciated in November, 1987, is that there shall be no transfer from Canada of water as a natural resource.

We have ignored the advice of the Leader of the Opposition in his book from which I quoted a few minutes ago. We do not buy that policy. We are not going to permit water to be given away like that.

The exact analogy is to compressed air which is also dealt with as a commercial good. Compressed air—does that mean that Canadians are now in danger of being cut off from the air because some Government is going to sell all the Canadian air? For heaven's sake, stop the childish nonsense.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I would like the Hon. Minister to add a document to his reading list as part of his remedial reading program. That document is one provided by his colleague, the Minister of National Revenue, which in the explanatory notes to the customs tariffs which apply to Section 401, says the following very clearly on Article 22.01:

> Waters, including natural or artificial mineral waters . . . This heading covers: (A) Ordinary natural water of all kinds . . .

It is not mineral water, not the Minister's hot air, and none of the other spurious comments he is making.

The fact of the matter is that under the present proposed agreement Section 409 includes goods and services. This custom tariff classification clearly includes natural water as part of that definition. In order to ensure that there is no future demand under the trade agreement for access to our water there is only one serious, responsible way of proceeding, that is, to propose an amendment, which the Minister has every right to do because the deal is not yet finalized. The Americans are still considering their amendments.

Why does the Minister stand time after time and refuse the logical, honest, responsible way of dealing with a matter which is very important to Canada? Is it simply that he knows the real reason and he is prepared to sell out Canada and its water?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, obviously the hon. gentleman's remedial reading is confined to The Toronto Star.

The situation in Canada with respect to beer is unchanged by the free trade agreement. Wine changes and liquor changes, but beer is not included. Even though it trickles along or flows out if you turn the bottle upside-down, up, just like water, it is not included. That does not mean to say that Canadians have to send all their beer down to the United States. It just means that there is a provision which deals with beer.

I will refer again to Mr. Yeutter who headed the United States negotiating team. In the same interview he said the following about water: "But I don't see it being an FTA issue. I see it being a separate issue that will inevitably draw attention in time. Now, clearly all of that would have to be worked out on the basis of an international compact between the two countries".

Water in its natural state is not included. There is nothing to fear. As long as the Government is kept in power there is nothing to fear about the transfer of water in large amounts to the United States.

PROVISIONS OF AGREEMENT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister for International Trade. He will be well aware that the provisions of the trade deal transcend government policy now or in the future. He indicated in his response to the Leader of the Official Opposition that the policy on water can change. It could change with this Government and can change with a future Government.

If the Minister felt it was appropriate to exempt logs from this trade deal, and also that it was appropriate to exempt beer, with the concern that this has created across the country why not work to exempt water? Is the Minister saying that beer is more important than water?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I can tell Hon. Members that beer has never crossed my lips. I don't like the stuff. Whether it is different from water, I don't know, having never tasted beer.

To return to the question, it is not appropriate, nor is it necessary, to deal with water in the U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement. Water has been dealt with in a statement of policy by the Minister of the Environment. If and when the Government decides that legislation is also necessary, the way in which to deal with the matter would be with legislation brought into this House by the Minister of the Environment.

The Liberals were in power for 40 years and they did nothing, they didn't adopt any policy. The man who was Minister of the Environment then did not care about water. We do not know what he cared about because he never spoke up at all during the time he was Minister.

If the Government decides that legislation is necessary, the hon. gentleman will hear about it in the usual way. Perhaps we should open up longer during the summer to deal with it in that way, but we are not proposing to open up the U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement which was signed last January 2 and which does not deal with water. Nothing forces us to divert water to the United States.

REQUEST THAT AMENDMENT BE INTRODUCED

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I remember the words of the Minister for International Trade when he said to the people of Canada not many months ago, "If we told them what we were going to actually do they'ld never vote for us". In recalling that now I wonder whether there is not some hidden agenda here. I wonder whether the Minister is not trying to cover up what the Government is actually up to.

If the Government were listening to the people of Canada it would know that people across Canada are very concerned about the whole discussion of water diversion into the United States, whether from the Great Lakes, the Nawapa plan, the Garrison Project, or whatever the project. There are very serious concerns.

This morning on the West Coast the former Minister for International Trade said that the Government is not at all interested in an amendment at this time. At this very critical moment the Minister could set aside the concerns of Canadians and make a lot of Canadians feel a lot easier about the Government's intention, forgetting about its stated policy, by simply bringing in an amendment. Why will he not do that simple thing at this time to ease the fears which are growing by the day across Canada?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, if there are fears growing by the day across Canada on this issue it is because the people are being misled by hon. gentlemen opposite who do not want them to understand the position.

With respect to the diversion of water as suggested by the Governor of Illinois, that is not a matter which can be dealt with in the free trade agreement. That is a matter to be dealt with under bilateral treaties with the United States under international law. According to the precedents since the early forties the Americans have never attempted to divert water in that way without consultation with and the consent of the Government of this country.

The hon. gentleman referred to something which he alleges I said at some time. I remember reading what the hon. gentleman said about his colleagues. He said, "They have misspoken the truth, they have misrepresented what happened, they have lied, they have not told the facts. I don't know how much blunter I can be about that". It was with reference to Mr. Waddell and Mr. Manly that the hon. gentleman said those words. How does he explain them?

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES

OVERSEAS SERVICE—FINANCIAL NEEDS OF FAMILIES

Mr. Lawrence I. O'Neil (Cape Breton Highlands—Canso): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Associate Minister of National Defence. I am concerned about the special circumstances of Armed Forces families who must move frequently and face new expenses, including expenses related to spouses seeking new employment, their eligibility for unemployment insurance, and the existence of exchange rates in West Germany, for example.

Can the Minister tell us what the Department is doing or is contemplating doing to meet the special financial needs of the families serving in Canada's Armed Forces?

Hon. Paul Dick (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, Canadian Armed Forces personnel who move overseas are already given a foreign service premium. There is a cost of living allowance which is indexed to the local economy in which they are living, there is a shelter share in which the Department subsidizes the housing utility costs, and there is a living-out allowance for single persons who wish to live off a base.

As a result of the differentiation between the mark and the Canadian dollar, last year we increased the amount they were allowed for living off the base in rental accommodation to try to make it more equitable for them.

• (1450)

We continue to analyze any fluctuations in the exchange rate to see if this fairness can be maintained.

RAILWAYS

CARRIAGE OF DANGEROUS GOODS STUDY—RELEASE OF MINORITY REPORT

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Minister of Transport who, regrettably, might be the Acting Prime Minister. Residents of Toronto are still waiting for the result of a study into the rail carriage of dangerous goods, a study that was undertaken because of the near disaster in Mississauga. The minority report which is dated today and was just released by Harold Morrison, gives a behind the scenes insight into the pro railway bias of the majority of the task force, and reveals that the majority report does not recommend reduced speeds.

Today I want to call on the Acting Minister to release the majority report and, at the same time, indicate that in spite of that report reduced speeds will be imposed on the carriage of dangerous goods by rail through Metro Toronto.

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am sure all Members would regret that a member of the committee would release a minority report before the main report has even been tabled with the Minister. We have not yet received that report, but I can assure the Member that when it is tabled, which I understand will be in the next few weeks, it will be dealt with properly by the Minister and in a way that I think will be satisfactory to the vast bulk of Members here.

MAJORITY REPORT

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Parliamentary Secretary. Does the Government intend to hold on to that report until it makes its own conclusions or, as I have urged, will that report be released as soon as the Government receives it?

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, it will be dealt with like all reports. The Minister will have to study it and make his own personal consultations with people with whom he thinks he should touch base. He will make a recommendation to the Cabinet and it will then come to the House in that way.

ENERGY

DEVELOPMENT OF HYDROGEN TECHNOLOGY

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, today the Agriculture Ministers are meeting to consider the tragic consequences of an historic drought. As questions today indicate, we are immersed in a controversy over the diversion of Great Lake waters. This is an indication of the tremendous perils that the greenhouse effect presents to mankind if we do not wean ourselves from carbon based fuels. Yet since 1984 the Government has cut expenditures on alternative fuels and energy conservation. It has yet to respond to the proposal by its advisory committee that Canada establish world leadership in the development of hydrogen technology.

My question is directed to the Minister of State for Science and Technology. When will the Government respond to the proposal that Canada make a significant contribution to the attack on the greenhouse effect by developing technology for substitution of hydrogen for carbon? When will it correct its error on cutting back in energy alternative expenditures?

Hon. Frank Oberle (Minister of State (Science and Technology)): Mr. Speaker, as usual, the Hon. Member is merely responding to action the Government has already taken in a number of these areas. In fact the Prime Minister raised the issue during the summit conference in Toronto, offering Canada to take a leadership role in co-ordinating the activities throughout the world in terms of the management of the global commons.

Initiatives are under way following a report on hydrogen to examine the prospect of using hydrogen as one of the replacement fuels going into the next century. A consortium of business people from the major companies in Canada recently met with me and the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources to get together in a major national mission on hydrogen.

The Hon. Member is merely following behind the lead dog and has lost his vision.

Mr. McCurdy: I did not know we were talking about dogs. I am sure dogs would be more specific in answering the question than the Minister of State just was.

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, when will the Government announce that it has restored the cuts in expenditures for alternative energy and for conservation? How much, when, over what period of time? Will the Government establish the hydrogen authority as asked for in the advisory committee report? When will the Minister establish that committee and how much funding will it be provided? Do not give these general assertions of being in favour of this or that.

Hon. Frank Oberle (Minister of State (Science and Technology)): Mr. Speaker, as usual, it is a very simplistic approach simply to anticipate that one can buy all of these solutions. The fact is that these committees are meeting, discussions are under way.

We have just announced $1.3 billion of new spending for science and technology. Five hundred and forty million dollars will go into universities for fundamental research. There will be a centres of excellence program. There is no doubt in my mind that energy will be one of the areas which Canadian scientists will want to study and develop linkages to leaders in various disciplines throughout the world. I could go on forever. The fact is that we are acting and measurable progress is being made. The Hon. Member just refuses to acknowledge it.

FISHERIES

ARREST OF SPANISH FISHING VESSELS OFF NEWFOUNDLAND

Mr. Morrissey Johnson (Bonavista—Trinity—Conception): Mr. Speaker, two Spanish fishing vessels were arrested off the coast of Newfoundland over the weekend for alleged illegal fishing inside Canada's 200-mile zone in 1985. Will the Acting Minister of Fisheries fill in the details of the arrest and what has transpired since the vessels were apprehended?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to have a chance to praise the officials of the Department of Fisheries and Oceans for this magnificent piece of work. On Saturday two Spanish trawlers were sighted by a specially equipped Beach Craft King air surveillance aircraft operating out of St. John's, owned by Mr. Tom Collingwood's firm, and leased to the Department of Fisheries and Oceans. It was determined that arrest warrants were outstanding for the two vessels and the captains.

The Leonard J. Cowley patrol vessel was alerted to intercept these two vessels and board them to determine whether the two captains were the same as those named in the warrants. It successfully intercepted the two Spanish trawlers on Sunday and first arrested the Lenengoa and its captain and then the Bigarena and arrested her captain. They were brought into St. John's at four o'clock Sunday afternoon.

It turned out that both captains had been wanted since 1985 for alleged offences that have occurred in our waters. This was a magnificent piece of work, as was the apprehension of the American vessel that attempted to steam away with four of our officers onboard but was intercepted by a second vessel with an armed patrol party. All of these measures were instituted by the present Minister of Fisheries and Oceans.

SPORTS

CANADIAN POLICY—SOUTH AFRICAN ATHLETES

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport. He will know that his Government has adopted a sports policy which is clearly racist in nature and violates the spirit of the Gleneagle's Agreement. It is setting the stage for a situation where we are now permitting South African athletes who belong to racist organizations to compete on the international level by parading as "independent business people". Is he prepared to reverse the policy that was adopted by his predecessor in relation to Canadian sports policy?

Hon. Jean J. Charest (Minister of State (Youth) and Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport)): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of what exactly the Hon. Member is referring to. If she is referring to any specific case as far as our policy applies to South African athletes, the policy that we have laid out is not always easy to apply but we have done our best.

Perhaps she is referring to the case of two tennis players that was brought up in The Toronto Star. If that is the case, I can only inform the Hon. Member that the two athletes to whom she is referring have never asked for visas to enter Canada.

REQUEST THAT VISAS BE DENIED

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister give a commitment in the House today that they will be denied visas and this will be the first step in the revision of a policy adopted by the Conservative Government in 1985 which permitted individual athletes to come to Canada under the guise of independent business?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, our policy on sporting contacts with South Africa is fully in accord with the spirit and the text of the 1977 Gleneagle's Agreement on sporting contacts with South Africa, and the 1982 Code of Conduct.

With respect to the tennis players, participation in the Canadian Open tennis tournament is determined according to the international ranking of eligible players. These several persons, if they do apply for visas, will not fall within the Gleneagle's policy, because it is sports people who represent the South African Government—

• (1500)

Ms. Copps: Not true, and I've got a copy of it right here.

Mr. Crosbie: —sport associations, or organized South African sport, who fall within the policy.

Ms. Copps: That's false!

Mr. Crosbie: That is how the policy is applied. We will have to wait and see if and when they do apply for visas.

BANKS AND BANKING

NSF CHEQUE CHARGES—SITUATION OF SMALL BUSINESSES

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. About two weeks ago the Minister of State for Finance responded to the report of the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs with respect to bank service charges and how they affected consumers. The Minister at that time referred to the charges, particularly the NSF charge-back, as reprehensible and objectionable.

In light of the fact the banks reluctantly withdrew the charge-back on NSF cheques for consumers, would the Minister not agree that what was reprehensible and objectionable for consumers is equally reprehensible and objectionable for small businesses?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, this raises a broader question of which I am sure the Hon. Member is aware. The Canadian Federation of Independent Business has had consultations with the Department. In fact Mr. Bullock had a meeting this morning with my colleague, the Minister of State for Finance, to discuss this whole question of bank charges as it relates to small business. We want to have further meetings with Mr. Bullock and his people, and following that we may have some further discussions with the banking community.

ROYAL BANK SUGGESTION

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. We are very concerned about specifics with respect to the charge-back on NSF cheques. Rob Parker at the Royal Bank feels that the NSF charge-back to small business is justified. He says it is a cost of doing business, and further suggests that small businesses ought to use their credit card system to protect themselves. In light of that suggestion from Mr. Parker, would the Minister not agree that this is a form of tied selling which is specifically prohibited by the competition laws of our country? Would the Minister investigate this suggestion by the banks with respect to tied selling?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think the conclusion the Hon. Member has drawn is a somewhat far-fetched one—

Mr. Rodriguez: That's what Rob Parker said.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): —but I am pleased to discuss that further with my colleague. Tied selling is a responsibility of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, but both that Minister and my colleague, the Minister of State for Finance, will be in discussions with the banks. It is quite a bit more complex when the matter of bank charges involves the business community. It is much more difficult and complex as to how to deal with it, but we are looking at various proposals the Canadian Federation of Independent Business has put forward to us and we may want to take these up with the banking community as well.

Mr. Speaker: I want to advise the House that there will be a single question from the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques followed by a single question from the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway. We will then close off Question Period.

LABOUR RELATIONS

BELL CANADA STRIKE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I have a question about the strike at Bell Canada.

Canadian consumers continue to experience problems with communications, especially those who require the installation of new equipment and those who need operator assistance to make their calls, and I am thinking especially of the handicapped.

Mr. Speaker, the Government has done very little so far to try and settle this dispute. All we have had was a kind of homemade conciliation effort by an official from the Department. No conciliation commissioner, much less a mediator, has been appointed.

I would like to ask my question . . .

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): . . . for the benefit of my "interrupters" opposite. I want to ask the Government to inform the House whether consumers should expect to face these problems for some time yet, or does the Government intend to take some kind of action to help reach a settlement? What does the Government intend to do to put an end to this strike? When is the Government going to wake up and help Quebec consumers, despite those turkeys who are trying to interrupt me?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I understand that Bell Canada has indicated that continuation of the TDD service for the hearing impaired will have top priority during the strike.

Mr. Speaker, I can assure you that management personnel are replacing striking operators in order to provide a much needed service, for the handicapped.

DISASTERS

NORTH SEA OIL RIG EXPLOSION—LOSS OF CANADIAN LIVES

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. I spoke a few moments ago by telephone to a father in Vancouver who lost his son on the Piper ALPHA Platform which blew up in the North Sea a little while ago. He indicated to me he has some serious concerns about the safety measures which were not taken.

Given the difficulty of an ordinary Canadian affording representation at any inquiry, for example, in Aberdeen, would the Government consider giving legal representation to the two Canadian families involved? And would the Government admit there is also a national interest for Canada because if we start Hibernia, we will have oil rigs out there in very dangerous situations? Would the Government be prepared to consider giving representation to two ordinary Canadians and their families at that inquiry so the families could feel justice could be done as much as that is possible now for their loved ones who were lost?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I want to assure the Hon. Member that the concern of the Government for safety measures is ongoing. We have on our East Coast, particularly with respect to Hibernia and to developments there, some of the strictest safety measures in place in the world. That is not to say that at any time they cannot be improved. Suggestions coming from individuals and organizations would certainly be studied.

I cannot give the Hon. Member an assurance that certain individuals could go to specific hearings, but I can assure him that if he would see that their concerns are channelled to the Government, we will see they are given consideration.

SPEAKER'S RULING ON BILL C-103

Mr. Speaker: I want to bring to the attention of Hon. Members that on Friday last there was some discussion in this Chamber as to a certain action taken by the other place, and for those uninitiated that means the Honourable the Senate, with respect to a Bill which after having passed in this place was sent to the Senate.

In the interests of Hon. Members, but especially in the interests of the public who are watching and listening, I want to just in very simple language explain what happens because I have a technical ruling and it just may be that the public of this country, which ought to understand what we are doing here, will find it easier to follow if I give a brief explanation in layman's language, if I can put it that way.

What happened was simply that a Bill numbered Bill C-103, which is a Bill respecting economic development in Atlantic Canada, was passed by this House in all stages and was sent to the Senate, as is the normal procedure. When it was being considered by the Senate, the Senate decided, for whatever reason, to split the Bill, in other words to break it into two parts, and the Senate sent back to this House one part of the Bill. There was much argument in the House Friday as to whether or not this was justified. It is not for the Speaker to say whether or not on any substantive reason there was any logical justification for it.

Essentially, that is the point that the Speaker has been asked to comment upon, that is, whether it is under our system appropriate for the Honorable The Senate to take a Bill that has passed this place and to break it into two parts and send back one-half of the Bill, especially when it is a money Bill which requires at its very beginning the Royal Recommendation for the expenditure of funds.

As I have said, that is a layman's explanation. It is important that all Canadians understand just exactly what it is the Chair has been asked to do in this particular case. I am now going to get into the formal part of the ruling. I will try not to keep the House too long. I hope that given this explanation it will be clear to everybody just exactly what has happened here and what the response of the Chair is in this ruling and the invitation that the Chair gives to this House as to whatever further response the House may wish to take.

On Friday, July 8 last, the Chair informed the House that a message had been received from the other place that it had divided Bill C-103, an Act to increase the opportunity for economic development in Atlantic Canada, to establish the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency and Enterprise Cape Breton Corporation and to make consequential and related amendments to other Acts. The message from the Senate simply informed this House of its decision and reported back without amendment only Part 1 of Bill C-103.

The Hon. Minister of State for the Treasury Board (Mr. Lewis) rose on a point of order objecting to the unprecedented action by the Senate in dividing Bill C-103 and requesting guidance from the Chair as to the acceptability of such a message. The Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) counter-argued that what the Senate had done was quite logical since Bill C-103 was composed of quite distinct parts and could easily be divided into two parts, each standing as separate and independent legislative proposals.

I point out that the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys also argued strenuously for the substantive issue that is involved. As I said, that is for others to argue and is not for the Chair to comment upon.

The Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy), supported vigorously by the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley—Hants (Mr. Nowlan) and the Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby), objected to the innovative procedure of the Senate on the grounds that the privileges of this House had been violated. The Hon. Member for Churchill claimed that the Senate had no authority to split a Bill originating in the Commons. The Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley—Hants further added that if this precedent were to be allowed, the House of Commons would be at risk in seeing much of its legislation originating in an elected Chamber compromised in principle by the Senate's actions.

[Translation]

Before dealing with the essence of the problem, it might be useful to summarize what happened with Bill C-103, the Government Organization Act, Atlantic Canada, 1987.

The House passed Bill C-103 on third reading on May 10, 1988, and sent it to the Senate the same day with a message signed by the Clerk of the House.

[English]

Let me say parenthetically that it is unusual to refer to specific proceedings of the other place—again, for those listening, "the other place" is a term used here to mean the Honourable The Senate—in this House. The Chair finds itself obliged to lay that convention aside for clarity's sake in this particular issue.

On June 1, 1988, a motion was moved in the Senate to instruct the Senate Finance Committee to divide Bill C-103. A procedural debate ensued. Having first reserved his decision, the Speaker of the Senate on June 7, 1988, ruled the motion out of order. In other words, the Speaker of the Senate ruled the motion to split a Bill from the House of Commons as out of order. His reasoning, which is a matter of record, was based on the fact that Bill C-103 is a money Bill and that the Senate, while free to split Bills originating in the Senate, as a general principle should not divide Bills originating in the Commons.

Thereupon the ruling of the Speaker of the Senate was appealed to the whole House, that is, to the whole Senate, and was overturned by a majority vote. The motion to split Bill C-103 was moved, proposed, debated and passed. May I also add parenthetically that this House, the House of Commons of Canada, has seen the wisdom of leaving final procedural decisions to its presiding officer and accordingly has long abolished the appeal procedure relating to Speakers' rulings.

[Translation]

Bill C-103 was then studied by the Senate Finance Committee, which split the Bill in two, in accordance with the Senate's instructions. The Committee reported Part I of the Bill to the Senate and the Senate sent this part back to the House last Friday. That is where we are today. The House has only one part of Bill C-103.

[English]

I must also underline for the House that this procedural event is totally without precedent. I have been unable to find any instance in our practice in which the Senate divided a Commons Bill, or in which the Commons has divided a Senate Bill. There are several cases in which the Speaker of the House of Commons has ruled certain Bills originating in the Senate out of order because they infringe the financial privileges of the House which are enshrined in the Constitution of Canada. I refer Hon. Members in this case to Journals of November 12, 1969, and June 12, 1973, for two such examples.

[Translation]

I refer Hon. Members to page 502 of the 20th edition of Erskine May. It concerns a procedural incident in the British Parliament, where there had been an attempt in the House of Lords to split a bill from the House of Commons, but this attempt failed after a motion to split the bill was rejected. This incident is reported but the author carefully refrains from indicating how the Lower House could have reacted if the motion had passed. This incident occurred in 1852 and I could find no similar incidents anywhere since then.

[English]

A Canadian precedent does exist for a consolidation of two Commons Bills into a single legislative measure by the Senate. That took place on June 11, 1941, with a message from their Honours, from the Senate, asking for the concurrence of this House. The Commons agreed with the Senate proposal, that is, a proposal to take two Bills from this place and put them into one Bill. The Commons agreed with the Senate proposal waiving its traditional privilege, and a single Bill was eventually given Royal Assent. I underline that that was the act of this House in waiving its tradition of privilege and accepting the invitation of the Senate to put two Bills together.

If it is admitted that the Senate can consolidate two Bills, why then can it not divide one Bill into two or more legislative measures? The answer is at least in part in the message. In the 1941 case just alluded to the Senate specifically sought the concurrence of the House for its action. Apparently it was the disposition of this place to accept it. In the message received last Friday relating to Bill C-103, the Senate does not seek the Commons' concurrence in the division of the Bill, it simply informs this House that it has done so, and returns half of a Bill.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: I ask Hon. Members to restrain their comments until some other time. Whatever Hon. Members may feel, I do not think that this is a partisan matter. I am trying to make it very clear that it is a procedural matter, and a matter of some importance to the workings of this place and its very important relationship with the honourable the Senate, which is very much part of the Parliament of Canada.

The Speaker of the House of Commons by tradition does not rule on constitutional matters. It is not for me to decide whether the Senate has the constitutional power to do what it has done with Bill C-103. There is not any doubt that the Senate can amend a Bill, or it can reject it in whole or in part. There is some considerable doubt, at least in my mind, that the Senate can rewrite or redraft Bills originating in the Commons, potentially so as to change their principle as adopted by the House without again first seeking the agreement of the House. That I view as a matter of privilege and not a matter related to the Constitution.

In the case of Bill C-103, it is my opinion, and with great respect of course, that the Senate should have respected the propriety of asking the House of Commons to concur in its action of dividing Bill C-103 and in reporting only part of the Bill back as a fait accompli has infringed the privileges of this place.

Furthermore, Bill C-103 has attached to it, pursuant to our Standing Orders and Section 54 of the Constitution, a financial recommendation of Her Excellency the Governor General. Again, for those who are watching and who are uninitiated in all the terminology that we use, there is a requisite that in a Bill that is going to call upon the expenditure of funds, a financial recommendation of Her Excellency the Governor General is necessary. So this Bill is in a very real sense a financial Bill. The Senate is somewhat limited in its review of money Bills. Standing Order 87, which is still on the books after many decades, is quite clear and it states:

> All aids and supplies granted to the Sovereign by the Parliament of Canada are the sole gift of the House of Commons, and all bills for granting such aids and supplies ought to begin with the House, as it is the undoubted right of the House to direct, limit, and appoint in all such bills, the ends, purposes, considerations, conditions, limitations and qualifications of such grants, which are not alterable by the Senate.

Certain questions remain to be answered: by splitting the Bill does the Royal Recommendation still apply? Have the financial privileges of the Commons been breached? Will the Crown assent to two Bills when it agreed to the introduction of a single one? As Speaker of the House of Commons, I will not attempt to answer such constitutional questions, but clearly this House has always considered Standing Order 87, which I just read, as setting out the special relationship between the Commons, that is, this House of Commons, and the Sovereign.

I have ruled that the privileges of the House have been infringed. However, and it is important to understand this, I am without the power to enforce them directly. I cannot rule the Message from the Senate out of order for that would leave Bill C-103 in limbo. In other words, it would be nowhere. The cure in this case is for the House to claim its privileges or to forgo them, if it so wishes, by way of message to Their Honours, that is, to the Senate, informing them accordingly.

In conclusion, I wish to state to the House that while Bill C-103 is a Government Bill, the same situation could arise under our reformed rules for a Private Members' Bill. It is in the better interests of this place to request Their Honours in the Senate to first consult with this House before they report to us such unilateral action. As Speaker of the House of Commons of Canada I must uphold the privileges of this place at all times, and I must also advocate them privately, publicly, and with vigour. Having said that, if on an issue of substance, the House wishes to waive those rights, as usual the Speaker will not enter into substantive debate but will follow the House's directives.

I thank all Hon. Members for their valuable contributions in this most unique and interesting case.

The Hon. Minister of State on a point of order.

Mr. Lewis: I wish to thank you on behalf of all Members of the House for the very clear ruling which you have made in reinforcing the privileges of this House vis-à-vis the other place. We had intended to immediately call for debate on the message which is presently on the Order Paper to send this matter back to the Senate immediately. I think that we would all benefit from an opportunity to review your ruling in detail and incorporate it into our remarks as we address this as Members of Parliament, no matter what Party we represent, in order that we can make it very clear where the Members of this House stand vis-à-vis the other place, the actions which should be taken by the other place, and the actions which we think are constitutional for the House of Commons and the other place to take.

For those reasons, I wish to compliment you on your ruling, and signal to the House that instead of debating the Message to the Senate immediately after your ruling we will ask the

Mr. MacLellan: I would like to thank the Deputy House Leader for his recommendation with respect to Your Honour's ruling. Certainly, our Party would find it preferable to have some time to study your ruling and then to comment. We welcome the Deputy House Leader's suggestion.

Mr. Speaker: I know Hon. Members would not object to me saying directly to the Hon Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) that, having listened to his very vigorous argument on Friday, the decision is on a procedural basis and does not affect his strong views on other matters relating to the Bill.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I, too, want to join with my colleagues in indicating that it is a more than appropriate way to proceed, and to lend my voice to that of the Deputy House Leader for the Government in terms of the content and the initiative of your decision. While we always accept your decisions as being appropriate, there are some that send a very clear signal. The primacy of this place encourages us all, and I wish to thank you for that decision.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADIAN MULTICULTURALISM ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-93, an Act for the preservation and enhancement of multiculturalism in Canada, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee; and Motions Nos. 4, 8 and 30 (Mr. Epp, Thunder Bay—Nipigon), and Motions Nos. 5, 7 and 31 (Mr. Marchi).

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Resuming debate. The Hon. Minister of State for Multiculturalism (Mr. Weiner).

Hon. Gerry Weiner (Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Madam Speaker, I wish to give the support of the Government for this motion, Motion No. 4 by the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp).

When I appeared before the legislative committee examining Bill C-93, I pledged to work to improve this Bill, to take the necessary measures to ensure we would have the best possible Multiculturalism Act for Canada. Well, I kept my promise and I think we all can see that the Bill as amended by the committee is considerably stronger. Today we are finishing that process. The amendment presented by the Hon. Member states clearly that the cultural and racial diversity of Canada is a fundamental characteristic of this nation.

Why have we chosen to support this motion? Why do we feel that the words "fundamental element" are not clear enough? Is it true that the Bill even from its first reading was clear in stating that multiculturalism was part and parcel of our identity, our realities and our heritage? I feel that it is important to underline this. It is not only part and parcel; it is one of the foundations of our identity and heritage. It is one of the foundations of Canada.

This Bill deals with relationships among Canadians, about a fundamental characteristic of Canada. It seeks to bring people together to build a stronger nation. We have worked closely with all those who came before the committee and in particular with the Canadian Ethnocultural Council, who, from the very outset of this exercise have had as their goal that multiculturalism finally would be recognized as a fundamental characteristic of Canada.

We are doing that today, and I call on all Members of the House to unanimously support this motion and the whole Bill. But while we support this motion today and a similar one which brings to the preamble of this historic Bill similar language, I wish to draw to the attention of the House a small limitation in this motion.

This motion translates the expression "fundamental characteristic" as trait fondamental. This in my mind is weaker language than the use of the phrase caracteristique fondamentale. We had presented a strong amendment which embodied this language. But, the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) chose to block it on narrow procedural grounds. Although this is an important difference, I feel that it is one that we must set aside in order to proceed with this Bill today. We must set aside these petty tactics to bring forward a world first—a first-class Multiculturalism Act.

Therefore, it is with pleasure that we on this side of the aisle support this motion and will support a corresponding one made by the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon to the preamble.

Mr. Marchi: Point of order, Madam Speaker. I appreciate the words of the Minister, although I have differences with the Bill. I would like to withdraw my opposition to both Motions Nos. 6 and 32, in the name of the Hon. Member for Parkdale—High Park (Mr. Witer), and would consent with my other colleagues to have the Hon. Member for Willowdale (Mr. Oostrom) present them at this time, as we are discussing the groupings of these amendments. It was not a procedural move. I have recognized as well that there is a difference in the French translation and a fundamental characteristic in both languages, I think, is supreme. Therefore, I would be prepared and pleased to allow the Hon. Member for Willowdale at the appropriate time to introduce and debate those amendments on the floor of the House of Commons.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Chair does thank the Hon. Member for York West. As we are debating both Motions Nos. 6 and 32 as a group at this time, I think I should put them both to the House.

Mr. John Oostrom (for Mr. Witer) moved:

Motion No. 6

That Bill C-93 be amended in Clause 3 by striking out line 37 at page 3 and substituting the following therefor:

"mental characteristic of the Canadian heritage".

Motion No. 32

That Bill C-93 be amended in the Preamble by striking out line 35 at page 2 and substituting the following therefor:

"mental characteristic in the continuing evolution of".

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Resuming debate. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow).

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Madam Speaker, I rise to support the amendment proposed by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp), and to welcome the support for at least one of the amendments that he has proposed by the Government.

No Member of Parliament who represents any city in Canada can help but be aware of the tremendous changes which have taken place in terms of the people living in the cities of Canada in recent years. The constituency which I represent has always been recognized as an ethnic constituency, a constituency populated almost completely by immigrants; first, of course, by the immigrants who came from Great Britain and, later, by immigrants from Germany, Russia, Poland and many of the eastern European countries.

In the last 10 or 12 years we have seen a tremendous change in my constituency, as in many others, because beside the groups which I referred to earlier we now see people from Portugal, Italy, the Philippines, all the Caribbean countries, Central America, Africa, and Asia. From Asia we see people from India, Sikhs, Vietnamese, Chinese people from Hong Kong and from mainland China, Laotians and I am sure there are others who I have missed.

We also see a tremendous movement into the City of Winnipeg by native Canadians, who are moving to Winnipeg as they are to a number of other cities, from the reserves which they find completely inadequate to provide them with a decent standard of living.

A situation has developed in the City of Toronto where a majority of the students attending the public schools are neither from Anglo-Saxon nor French origin. This type of movement has created tremendous problems for the cities and for the people who come to this country. The issue of multiculturalism was first raised by one of the members of the Bilingualism and Bicultural Commission appointed by the then Liberal Government, headed by Mr. Pearson. A resident of Winnipeg, Professor Rudnyckyj, who, while accepting the main recommendations and findings made by the commission, which dealt with the relationships between the French and the English-speaking people of this country, pointed out that an increasing number—now a third of the population of this country—come from countries which are neither English-speaking nor French-speaking.

Many of these people come from countries which do not have, or ever had our democratic institution, our democratic way of life, our trade unions or co-operatives or civil liberties organizations. Many of them come here without the ability to speak either English or French. While canvassing in the older parts of my constituency I still come across women in their sixties or seventies who still cannot speak more than a few words of English.

In this country until a few years ago we did very little to deal with this problem. We are happy and proud to see the people who have come to this country. We are happy and proud to see the progress that they have made, but they need a great deal of assistance in making that transition from the country from in which they came in making that transition to this country which is so different.

It is not enough simply to give them the opportunity to work. Many of them work in some of the hardest, poorest paid jobs available in this country. We have to give them the opportunity to learn the language. We have to give them the opportunity to fit into our society. For many of them, Madam Speaker, the way in which they do that is based around and with the people from the same countries from which they came. Many belong to the hundreds of thousands of voluntary organizations which these groups have formed.

The Government of Canada and the Parliament of Canada in the early 1970s recognized the importance of helping these new ethnic groups to adjust and integrate into this country. We adopted in principle the idea of fostering the multicultural fact in this country. We have established a part-time Minister and part-time Department. It sounds good. It looks good when one reads about it, but the reality is we really have done very little.

If we compare, for example, the resources allocated for multicultural activities in my province—I will use my province as an example in which as I have indicated a very substantial percentage of the population comes neither from the Anglo-Saxon nor the French background of Canada—we find that what is allocated to help foster the various ethnic communities in the Province in multicultural activities is a very small amount compared to the money, the services and the assistance given to the Franco-Manitobans who make up a very small percentage of the population of Manitoba.

I am not for a moment questioning the assistance given to the French-speaking people of Manitoba. I, like most Members of Parliament regardless of Party, recognize the necessity and the justness of helping the French-speaking people of Manitoba and of every other part of Canada to foster, maintain and strengthen their language and culture. But when I compare the assistance given to them to the assistance given for multicultural activities, I have to face up to the fact that what we are getting most is mere words.

I know that my colleague, the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon has put a great deal of effort into his work in this area. I want to say on behalf of myself and all members of the New Democratic Party that we support those efforts and we call on the Government, as we called on the former Liberal Government, to do more than say the right things, to do more than make pretty speeches, to do more than appearing at functions organized by various ethnic communities in this country. We call on this Government to take seriously the principles supported almost unanimously in this Parliament by all Members from all Parties to support the efforts of the new ethnic communities and of the native communities to help them maintain the cultures which they brought, all of which in the years to come will help to make this country a much better place in which to live.

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Madam Speaker, I take great pleasure rising in today's consideration of Bill C-93, the Canadian multiculturalism Bill and to urge Members on both sides of this House to support this basic and fundamental amendment No. 6 to the Bill.

Some weeks ago the Minister of State responsible for Multiculturalism (Mr. Weiner) appeared before the legislative committee examining Bill C-93 and told the committee that he was willing to work with it to improve Bill C-93, as he stated in the House today. That is exactly what happened. The Bill which we are considering today is considerably stronger. It is considerably more vital than that with which we started in late March.

There have been amendments made to this Bill which strengthened it from the preamble to the very last clause. But one or two things have been left to be done here today.

The amendment which I proposed today makes this recognition even more clearly. Many witnesses appeared before the committee expressing their concerns that the multicultural nature of this society could be lost in other considerations and that the Bill was not sufficiently precise in underlining this fundamental characteristic of Canadian society. Many witnesses urged the committee to make a clearer expression of this matter.

The motion that I propose does so. This motion states simply and cleanly that multiculturalism is a fundamental characteristic of our Canadian heritage and identity. In a few moments I will also propose an amendment which brings these clear, simple and precise words to the important preamble of the Canadian multiculturalism Bill.

Why have I chosen to make this motion? Why do I feel the words "fundamental element" are not clear enough? It is true that the Bill, even from its first reading, was clear in stating that multiculturalism was part and parcel of our identity and our heritage. But I feel that it is important to underline this. It is not only part and parcel, it is one of the foundations of our identity and heritage. It is one of the foundations of Canada. That is why we adopted simple and precise language, language which has clearly entered our constitutional lexicon to express what multiculturalism means to this society.

I know my hon. friends, the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) and the Hon. Member from Thunder Bay have proposed relatively similar amendments and I congratulate them for doing that. I do not think these particular amendments are well founded for a number of simple reasons.

The Hon. Members from York West and Thunder Bay have translated in their motions "fundamental characteristic" to be trait fondamental. If we are to use the same strength of language that is used in other places, we must use the expression caracteristique fondamentale. This is not just a matter of terminology. It is important that the language of this Bill in both official languages be crystal clear. I hope the House appreciates the motion that I am presenting today and I urge hon. colleagues from both sides of the aisle to support this simple motion, a motion which in both official languages underlines that multiculturalism is a fundamental characteristic of our society.

I would like to take a few moments of the time of the House today to explain Motion No. 32 which clarifies and strengthens the preamble of the Canadian multiculturalism Bill.

Earlier in this debate I rose and urged the House to support a simple, clear and precise amendment to the multiculturalism policy of Canada which stressed that multiculturalism is a fundamental characteristic of our identity and heritage. I would urge this House to accept a similar, simple and clear amendment to the preamble of the Canadian multiculturalism Bill which states in only a few words that multiculturalism is a fundamental characteristic in the continuing evolution of our nation.

This is an important amendment. The amendment shows that the Government has listened to those who appeared before the legislative committee examining Bill C-93. This simple amendment shows that the Government has been willing to work with the committee and with Members of this House to strengthen the Canadian multiculturalism Bill.

At this time there are two other amendments relative to the preamble, one presented by the Hon. Member for York West and one presented by the Hon. Member from Thunder Bay. These amendments are excellent in spirit, but they are flawed, I believe, in their creation. First, both amendments in the French language utilize the words "trait fondamental" as opposed to "caracteristique fondamentale". This is an important difference. It is an important shortcoming in both motions about which I spoke earlier today. If we are to signal what this amendment is about and to say that multiculturalism is a fundamental characteristic, and if we wish to give the language sufficient force, we must use the language which is already in the lexicon; namely, caractéristique fondamentale.

Second, both amendments presented by the Hon. Member for York West and the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp) muddy the waters. In the instance of the amendment of the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon, it mixes policy statements with preambular language. Policy commitments properly belong in Clause 3 of the Bill. A preamble sets the stage. It presents values. It is for that reason that I find the Hon. Member's amendment appealing but unsatisfactory.

In the instance of the amendment presented by my colleague, the Hon. Member for York West, I found repetition of words and ideas in places, and of course, the problem with its French translation and the weakness of that French translation. I think is important that we maintain simple amendments and that we put forward amendments in clear and precise language. It is important that we utilize the lexicon involved in this nation. For this reason, I would urge Members on both sides of the House to support the motion I have brought forward today and thus to recognize that multiculturalism is a fundamental characteristic of our Canadian society.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order which has to do with the language of Motion No. 30. There has been some discussions about which motions might be acceptable to the House, discussions which I will not get into, but on Motion No. 30, I would like to change the word "trait" to the word "caractéristique". If there is unanimous consent in the House, I would like to move:

That Motion No. 30 be amended in the French text by striking out line 4 and substituting the following therefor:

"de la couleur et de la religion constitue une caractéristique".

The only change in the text as published is that last word "caractéristique", to which point the Hon. Member for Willowdale (Mr. Oostrom) was just speaking.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): If the House does give consent, it would then be easier to simply amend the Hon. Member's motion than to call it an amendment to the amendment which would require another vote. If there is unanimous consent, "trait fondamentale" would be changed for "caractéristique fondamentale". Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Marchi: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I would like to deal with essentially the same principle. The Hon. Member for Willowdale (Mr. Oostrom) was quite correct in saying that there is a difference between the English and the French words in the motion of the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp). The same applies to my motion. Suffice it to say that I had moved the initial motion in English and left it up to the House officials to translate it into French. I would seek the same co-operation to change the word from "trait" to "caractéristique" as well because it was a translation of the House and not a translation put forward by this Member.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Do I understand that the Hon. Member is referring to Motion No. 31?

Mr. Marchi: Motions Nos. 5 and 31.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Perhaps the Chair could be helpful by pointing out to the Hon. Member for York West that as far as Motion No. 5 is concerned, an affirmative vote on Motion No. 4 would obviate the need for a vote to be taken on Motions Nos. 5 or 6. The Hon. Member might consider the motions together. Then we could get to a vote which would include whatever should be right in this motion.

Resuming debate with the Hon. Member for Vancouver East.

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Madam Speaker, I would like to join with my colleagues in saying a few words in this debate, particularly to acknowledge the very great importance of changing the language of the Bill through these amendments in order to strengthen it. Many groups across Canada have criticized this Bill because it appeared to be too soft and was in effect tokenism. These groups will certainly be pleased with this amendment, although at this stage we are only dealing with words. We certainly must toughen up other clauses of the Bill as well.

As I understand it, the change of wording in this clause will establish an equal partnership between all cultural groups within Canada. It will mean that people of both French and English origin will be recognized as being part of the fundamental characteristic of Canada and so too will be those from so many other countries. These in fact are the people who are now becoming the majority, certainly in western Canada. These people have origins other than French or English.

It is very important that this Bill not simply be a recognition of songs and dances, arts and culture, which is what some people think is meant by multiculturalism. It is absolutely essential that it have the strength to fulfil the spirit of the Charter. This means that there has to be equal opportunities and there has to be a removal of discrimination and racism that affects people from origins other than French or English.

In western Canada and particularly in the ridings of Vancouver East and Vancouver—Kingsway, by far the majority of new Canadians as well as second and third-generation Canadians are those who have come from Asian countries and those who are not Caucasian but are people of colour or visible minorities. It is absolutely essential that our multicultural policy begin to recognize that not all people of different cultures came from Europe. There is a very different stream of people who are coming from Asia, and in some cases the cultures are very different indeed. For those who come from China or some of the oriental countries, English must be learned in a much different way.

It is also very important to recognize that there is not a representation of visible minorities in the House, and that is very typical of the decision-making process across Canada. It is important that we take this matter seriously and that we strengthen this Bill so that it helps to facilitate and implement multicultural policies.

In the past few weeks, I have attended high school graduations throughout my riding of Vancouver East. I would say that only 5 per cent to 10 per cent of the students graduating from secondary schools are from Anglo origins and probably none are from Franco origins. The majority are young people who are members of visible minorities and have wonderful motivations to complete their educations. They will probably face barriers that are much greater than some of their colleagues at university.

It is important that the Bill not be seen as tokenism and that we recognize the real issues of racism and discrimination in Canada. The Government must do this by acknowledging the injustices of the past. I am referring particularly to the injustices to Canadians of Japanese origin who faced such terrible discrimination under the War Measures Act. People of Chinese origin were also discriminated against and had to pay a head tax and face the Exclusion Act, which was a purely racist Act.

• (1600)

It is time we acknowledged these injustices and provided fair redress so that our young people can grow up and be proud to say that regardless of their origin, regardless of the colour of their skin, they have equal rights in Canada.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Madam Speaker, I wanted to say a few words following the Hon. Member's speech.

I can speak pretty openly here, I am losing my riding of Vancouver—Kingsway, and there are a couple of things I would like to say that I think Members might be interested in.

My riding has more Chinese Canadians than any other riding in Canada.

Mr. Belsher: The Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) said her's does.

Mr. Waddell: There is some disagreement about that, but I think mine really does. As I said, the riding will be gone under redistribution in a couple of days, although I still remain the Member until the next election, but it has become a unique spot with respect to Asian immigrants. This is the new reality in Canada. It is a great plus for Canada. The way Canadians should look at the flow of Asian immigrants is to see it first as part of the continuous flow which builds the population of Canada. My parents came from Scotland when I was a young boy. The same thing is true for people from Italy and other parts of Europe. Now we have a wave of Asian immigration. We should think of it as an advantage. This is where the advantage is.

Second, we are trying to reach out to the Pacific Rim. It is the fastest growing trading area in the world. Canada is on the edge of the Pacific, it is one of our oceans. We have this great resource of Pacific cultures in Canada. We have people who are bicultural. These sons and daughters of immigrants would become Canadians through our schools. We are different from the U.S. because of our multicultural heritage. It is inscribed in our Constitution. We have committed ourselves to saying to people that they can keep some of their heritage. We have great strength in that. The strength lies in these Asian Canadians. That will be in many ways a great help in getting Canada into the Pacific Rim, the Asian Pacific. We should be thinking about things in this way. It took me a while to think that way even in my own riding.

The Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell), an eloquent spokesperson for immigrants and multicultural groups and so on, raised the issue of past injustices. She talked about the Exclusion Act and the Chinese head tax and how she fought for compensation for those who were discriminated against.

Other people, including my predecessors from Vancouver—Kingsway, Grace McInnis and Angus McInnis, fought for redress for Japanese Canadians for the racist treatment they got in Canada during the war. I do not want to go into this in a lot of detail but I want to answer a question which I think a lot of Canadians do not understand. That question is: why deal with past injustices? I remember asking Pierre Trudeau in the House about compensation. He shrugged and said: "Why fight battles of the past?" The reason you have to deal with past injustices is to make sure they do not happen in future. We had the incident of a boatload of Jewish people who were turned away just before the war. Think about that. Think about what we did.

This is a great country, a just country. In spite of our shenanigans in Question Period and our debates and arguments in this House, look at the question I put today to the Minister of Communications (Mrs. McDougall). I asked her if she would take up the case of a fellow who had lost his son in this oil rig disaster and perhaps provide some legal representation. It is going a long way, but she took it up and said they would consider it. That is the best of Canada. We are an open and fair country. We have to make sure that that happens with our immigrants and the multicultural base of our country.

We passed a multicultural constitution in 1982. You know I have had troubles with the new one in 1986, but the one in 1982 was a magnificent constitution. Canada is like a cake, if I might say so. We have the native people at the foundation. Then the French and English. In the constitution we had the recognition of education rights, which I think is really important. Then on top was the recognition of the multicultural reality of Canada. That is a good vision of Canada.

We cannot just sit back and say we have done this kind of thing in law and symbolically. We have to do real things to help multiculturalism. I will give you an example. I do not know what other cities are like, but in Vancouver, English as a second language is the language of the majority of kids in the public schools. That is a difficult situation. It is difficult for the educational system. It may mean that the federal Government, dare I say it, may have some role in additional funding for English as a second language.

Ms. Mitchell: It is done now.

Mr. Waddell: I know it is done now. I do not think the Government has much of a role right now because education is of course a provincial responsibility. However, we may have to look at it and say the federal Government has to help. If you are bringing in waves of new immigrants you have to help educate them in the English language. Parents want their kids educated in English or French in Québec so that they get into the mainstream of Canadian society. We have to take the measures necessary to help multicultural groups retain their own language as well. We have the Ukrainian dancing groups, theatre groups, culture groups, that we support. We take a different view from the Americans. We do not take the melting pot view, we take a broader view where you can maintain some of your multicultural heritage.

I will sit down now. The Hon. Member for Vancouver East provoked me to speak because she gave such a good speech. I just want to come back to that one point which I would like Canadians to think about. I know it is sometimes very difficult, and I hear it in my community offices, "Why are you bringing all these immigrants in? They are different than we are." You have to look at the advantages of immigration. I think one of the big advantages is, especially with Asian Canadians, that instead of sending the traditional businessman to China to try to get a contract, we can send a Chinese Canadian whose family is there. He might be able to speak the language, has taken courses and brushed up on Cantonese or Mandarin at the Chinese Cultural Centre in Vancouver. That is a forward-looking Canada and that is the way we should look at multiculturalism and immigration.

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Madam Speaker, I would like to add my support to this Bill and congratulate the Minister on bringing it in. In my view a multicultural Bill has been long overdue in Canada.

I was raised in a cosmopolitan area, probably as cosmopolitan as any in Canada, namely the Drumheller Valley. During my lifetime that area has seen 21 or 25 coal mines, all of which have now disappeared. However, people came from practically every country of the world to work in those coal mines. The wonderful thing about the Drumheller Valley was that these people did not continue to call themselves Ukrainians or Hungarians or Britons, they called themselves Canadians. At the same time they retained their own language, their own customs. I want to pay tribute to those people today.

I want to deal with some specific people, the Ukrainians, for instance. Hundreds of them came to our coal mines. Hundreds of them came in their sheepskin coats and braved the blizzards, the chinook winds, and the droughts. They worked toward a better country. They tried to build a heritage.

Many people do not realize that the Ukrainian people were the first to work on the building of our railways across western Canada. They were later replaced by a large number of Chinese people. The Chinese people were certainly taken advantage of but they remained here. Many of them brought their relatives here and they have become excellent citizens.

Another large group in my area is the Italian community. As a matter of fact, the Italian community is probably the second largest in the Province of Alberta. The Italian group was notorious for bringing their language and customs with them. They still speak Italian in their homes today, but they speak English outside. They endeavour to keep the customs of their homeland.

Another large section is the German community. One of the first things I remember as a young boy during and just after World War I was the antagonism toward those of German descent. I remember my mother saying many times that none of us had any choice as to our nationality, colour, or creed; that it was the way we lived that really mattered. German people suffered a lot of persecution in Canada at that time, but they remained and are wonderful citizens. In my riding in Beiseker and Carbon there are some of the finest farmers in the world. They are doing their utmost to build a great Canada.

In addition to Ukrainian halls in the Drumheller Valley we had a Hungarian Hall. Many people came from Hungary and worked in our coal mines. Some of their descendants now hold high positions throughout Canada. A notable one is the head of the regional office of Parks Canada in Calgary. He came from a wonderful Hungarian family in the Drumheller Valley.

We have the Poles, the Americans, and the Dutch. The Dutch people have made a tremendous contribution too. They are not mentioned often. I attended the golden wedding celebration of a Dutch couple only a few weeks ago. They are symbolic of hundreds of others who have contributed to Canada.

The Spanish, Norwegian, Swedish and Danish groups have also made a wonderful contribution. A chap who originated from Sweden came up from the Dakotas into the Drumheller Valley. He was the first to drive oxen into Canada. There are histories of him throughout the Valley today.

I remember a young Japanese lad who lived in the old Midland Mine. His father was one of the finest citizens I have ever known. He loved Canada and loved our way of life. One of his boys served in the Armed Forces during the war.

We have the Jewish people and the Arabs. They may be fighting each other today, but not in the Drumheller Valley. They are Canadians. They brought their customs and their language, but they are now Canadians. We have the Koreans, the Vietnamese, and many people from that part of the world who are part of our population.

We talk about the English and the French, and they are the founding nations, but these others have played a tremendous part in building this country too. The Scottish, the Irish, and the Welsh object to being referred to as English people. They have their own customs and their own language.

We have people from Yugoslavia, India, Egypt, South and Central America, and Africa. People from all the continents have come to Canada, and I like to think of Canada as a multicultural country, not only as a two-nation country but as a great multicultural nation called Canada. I like to think of Canada as being a tremendous mosaic.

An honour I will never forget is when I was asked to represent Canada at the opening of the Pan-American Highway about 1965. The people in Mexico put on a tremendous outdoor show for the delegation made up of one American, two Canadians and people from Central America and South America under the auspices of the U.S. organization. At the show I saw dances of Scotland, Ireland, and the Ukraine. I saw aspects of almost every country which is now represented in Mexico. What a tremendous job an artistic director would have in Canada today to put on an outdoor show to exhibit the customs of all the nations which have become part of Canada. Someday I hope there will be a tremendous mosaic which will show what all these people have contributed toward building this great nation.

After all is said and done I like to think of the people of Canada, not as the English, the French, Egyptians, Hungarians, Germans, Italians, or Dutch, but as Canadians, because Canada is their country of adoption. They have made Canada their country and this has made Canada a greater and a better country.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question on the first grouping?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I would remind the House that an affirmative vote on Motion No. 4 obviates a need for a vote to be taken on Motion Nos. 5 and 6. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 4 necessitates the taking of a vote on Motion No. 5. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 5 obviates the need for a vote on Motion No. 6. However, a negative vote on Motion No. 5 necessitates a vote to be taken on Motion No. 6. That is just so we all know where we are.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt Motion No. 4?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

Motion No. 4 negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt Motion No. 5?

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The question is on Motion No. 8 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

We will proceed to Motions Nos. 30, 31 and 32. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 30 obviates the necessity for a vote on Motions Nos. 31 and 32. A negative vote on Motion No. 30 necessitates a vote on Motion No. 31. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 31 obviates the need to vote on Motion No. 32. A negative vote on Motion No. 31 will necessitate a vote on No. 32.

The question is on Motion No. 30 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion No. 30 agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): We will proceed to the next grouping.

Motion No. 18

That Bill C-93 be amended in Clause 3 by adding immediately after line 8 at page 5 the following:

"(g) develop annual plans for the implementation of the multiculturalism policy and report on such plans in their annual reports."

[English]

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Madam Speaker, in our continuing consideration of amendments to Bill C-93, this particular group includes some small changes in total bulk but represent very significant attempts to strengthen the Bill.

If it is in order, I would like to recognize the presence in the gallery of the President of the Canadian Ethnocultural Council and the past President. Of course, it is not in order, so I note that, in considering the motions before us here seriatim, Motions Nos. 10 and 11 are provided for in part by changes that were made in the legislative committee. My Motion No. 11 is designed to ensure that Clause 3(2) would read: "It is further declared to be the policy of the Government of Canada that all institutions shall—"

The Bill as reported from the legislative committee was amended to read "shall" rather than "should".

Having mentioned the Canadian Ethnocultural Council a moment ago, may I say that this is one of those very important points that this national organization of ethnocultural communities emphasized was necessary. The Bill initially was encouraging, but an absolute commitment was required by the Government of Canada to take strong action. That was accomplished with the use of the word "shall" as it was changed in the legislative committee.

Unfortunately, it might still not be quite sufficient. Therefore, Motion No. 10 is designed to go beyond that. Motion No. 10 in the name of my colleague, the Member for York West (Mr. Marchi), was accepted by the Speaker rather than my own. It is a motion which states that: "institutions shall, with a view to implementing the policy stated in Clause 3(1)." It places an even greater obligation on the Government of Canada to be sure that the policies to which Parliament is committing the Government and to which the Government itself is committed will be acted upon in the way of various specific proposals.

Motion No. 12 is my proposal for an explicit addition to the Bill designed to put into these obligations that the Government of Canada would accept, an obligation to act upon the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, specifically Section 27. This particular motion would commit the Government of Canada to develop policies and programs that assist ethnocultural communities to make larger contributions to the preservation and enhancement of Canada's multicultural heritage.

I would like to comment on the carrying of Motion No. 30 rather than Motion No. 32, proposed by the Hon. Member for Parkdale—High Park (Mr. Witer) and moved, by agreement, by the Hon. Member for Willowdale (Mr. Oostrom). Motion No. 30, moved by myself which was chosen over Motion No. 32, put into the preamble the language of Section 27 of the Charter in a way analogous to what was done in our consideration of the Official Languages Bill, Bill C-72, which was passed last week.

I think putting the language of the Charter into legislation is a useful exercise, so in Motion No. 12 I have endeavoured to commit the Government of Canada at the outset to acting on Section 27 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

Motion No. 14 is designed to remove the word "promote" from several of the paragraphs in Clause 3(2) and insert instead the word "implement". Here again is a proposal that has come not only from the Canadian Enthocultural Council but from the various community organizations. If the Parliament of Canada is really serious about the multicultural policy we first adopted in 1971, we should have an actual obligation on Ministers and all Departments to implement the policy and to look for ways in which the policy could be made more real.

Motion No. 17, moved by the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi), is an alternative to the proposal in Motion No. 8. I endeavoured to take up the concern of the Canadian Ethnocultural Council to recognize explicitly in the Bill the importance of the youth of our country and to ensure that our multicultural policy was carried through with explicit regard to the youth of the country and their needs. One way to do that is to make it one of the principles on which the Government would be committed to act in the first section of Clause 3, which is where my Motion No. 8 stands. The other way to do that, of course, is to use Motion No. 17, putting it in as one of the obligations of the Government.

I would hope that recognizing the Government rejected my Motion No. 8, although it was initially on a voice vote, the House might have the will to take up Motion No. 17 and make it an obligation. It is, after all, a strong request from the young people who are active in the Canadian Ethnocultural Council to have their needs recognized. I look to the Minister and hope there might be some readiness to take up this particular proposal.

There remains then, only one other motion on which I would like to comment. Motion No. 19 was found to be out of order because it went beyond the scope of the Bill as the Government presented it. I want to note that the motion moved by the Hon. Member for York West takes up the first paragraph of my motion. I take it, then, given the ruling on Motion No. 18, that Motion No. 19 would have been found in order if it had only gone that far, although it would have been an exact duplicate. I endeavoured to go beyond annual plans to provide for review on all those activities oriented to the establishment of a commissioner of multiculturalism which, again, the Government has not taken up.

Motion No. 18 has a very useful proposal that the Departments of Government have an obligation to make plans annually in order to realize the multicultural policy of the country. In the context of my motion being ruled out of order, but Motion No. 18 being in order, I speak in support of that motion as well as in support of the motions on which I have already commented.

These are important motions to strengthen the Bill. Let me leave it at that and look to the comments of others. I trust we will have the support of the House for these motions to ensure that this historic Bill really becomes the kind of legislation it should be.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Madam Speaker, I would like to address my remarks in the time allotted to Motions Nos. 10, 15, 17 and 18. Motion No. 10 which stands in my name is an attempt to make the language and commitment somewhat more specific. We have tried to move this intent at committee and today at report stage because I believe that if there is one ill with the Bill, it is its lack of commitment in terms of very specific, clear and committed language.

With respect to Motion No. 10, what I am endeavouring to do is to tie subsection (2) under the federal institutions to the earlier stated multiculturalism policy for the federal Government. The intention of Motion No. 10 is simply to review and to try to commit the federal Departments in a very specific way to the multiculturalism policy as articulated in subsection (1). Those words tying the federal departmental role to the federal policy is not stated explicitly. Rather than keep it vague and general in terms of having federal Departments expand and enhance multiculturalism, I would like to see the role for the federal Departments tied to the very clear multiculturalism policy as articulated under subsection (1).

Motion No. 15 attempts again to expand on the principle and general scope of that particular clause on page 4, line 40. As it reads now, one of the roles of the federal institutions is to "promote policies, programs and practices that enhance the ability of individuals and communities of all origins to contribute to continuing evolution of Canada". I would also add the words "and that removed discriminatory barriers to their full and equal participation in Canadian society". This is an attempt to try to eradicate the specific problem that many Canadians all to often face in terms of discrimination in the workplace, in terms of vertical mobility and in terms of hiring practices.

The intent, as it now stands, generally addresses that concept. What I would like to do, and what many organizations would like us to do as a Parliament, is to make specific reference to the type of systematic barrier problems that Canadians face. Therefore, the intention of Motion No. 15 is to tie down explicitly the concept and make it very practical and specific, ensuring that one of our goals as a Parliament and as a Government is not only to talk about equality of opportunity but to do something about it and to come closer to ensuring that political, social and economical equality in our House and in our Constitution is predicated upon.

With respect to Motion No. 17, what I would like to replace is a reference under our federal institutions and our federal Departments, as the Canadian Ethnocultural Council's youth wing had advocated before the Standing Committee of Multiculturalism and before the legislative committee studying Bill C-93, to a specific reference and commitment to enhancing the policies, goals and objectives of multiculturalism specifically and target them to the youth of Canada. I think it is incumbent upon a Parliament and a Government to try to address the challenge that is inherent in different generations. That is to say that my parents may affix a certain definition and have a certain expectation of what the multiculturalism policy of the country ought to be doing. As a second generation Canadian I perhaps have a different expectation from a third or fourth generation Canadian. In addition to cultural retention perhaps, a third or fourth generation Canadian would also affix a political, economic and social expectation on the policy of the country.

I am not suggesting that one definition is wrong as compared to the other. What I am pointing to is that both definitions are valuable and relevant. Yet a different attitudinal approach is needed to provide a bridge between the various generations to ensure that the first generation and the second and third generations view the multiculturalism policy as a relevant instrument upon which to build a bigger, better and stronger Canada.

Therefore, I believe that the recommendation from the Youth Committee of the Canadian Ethnocultural Council is a very wise one. I ask the Minister and government Members to consider supporting Motion No. 17, a motion which tries specifically to have federal institutions carve out a specific and effective program to address multiculturalism among the younger elements of our society.

The last amendment in my name is Motion No. 18. It would add subparagraph (g) to Clause 3. It suggests that federal Departments develop annual plans for the implementation of the multiculturalism policy and report on such plans in their annual reports.

The objective of this amendment is to try to commit federal Departments in a very specific way. If there is a role to play for our federal Departments, and clearly there is, in terms of enhancing and exercising all our policies and programs, then multiculturalism should not be an exception to the rule. We should not leave it there generally. We should try to apply it in a very specific way so that our federal Departments constructively and explicitly try to project a vision, an action plan, a series of priorities they would like to accomplish in any given year vis-à-vis multiculturalism.

It is not good enough to have a Department, a Minister, a departmental head or a Deputy Minister say: "We adhere to the general policy". Instead, they should be saying: "What can we be doing? What should we be doing as one Department to fulfil the goals and aspirations embodied in a multicultural policy in a multicultural Canada? How can we advance it one step further?"

The Government has chosen not to accept the concept of having an official multiculturalism commissioner, as there is with respect to official languages. There is a piece of legislation in place which was debated only last week which empowers an official commissioner who is able to monitor in order to try to ensure that the Civil Service and Crown corporations are adhering to the official bilingualism policy. The Government rejected the same type of approach with respect to multiculturalism. I regret that very much. I will be alluding to it in much greater detail in my speech on third reading.

Because the Government has not accepted that, I believe that the specific requirement for all Departments to have a yearly plan which would be submitted to Parliament and to the Minister is quite important. It would not carry out the function that would have been carried out by a commissioner such as the Official Languages Commissioner who is independent and who must report to Parliament. Notwithstanding that deficiency I believe it is incumbent upon us to say to the Departments: "If there is going to be a role, then let us tie it down. Let us ensure it is part of a coherent strategy plan within the Departments so that we as parliamentarians can address the various Departments to see where those annual reports are and therefore evaluate whether we are doing a job that is justified or whether we are doing a job that could be improved upon".

I am pleased that Parliament was able to agree with respect to the whole question of the fundamental characteristic which I addressed briefly only moments ago since I thought we were only debating Motion No. 4. It is an important step. It is a step the Liberal Party tried to have recognized in the Meech Lake Accord when we moved one specific amendment. It was to have in the opening clause of our Constitution a recognition that our two official languages and our multicultural society constitute fundamental characteristics of the same country. To suggest one is fundamental and the other is an element really implies a different status for the two.

While we are not changing the constitutional Accord, and while this Party is still committed to negotiating a Meech Lake Accord that would see the opening clause proudly recognize multiculturalism as a fundamental characteristic, I am pleased that in Bill C-93 we are recognizing that multiculturalism constitutes a fundamental characteristic of our nation. It is my hope that we can go from this one specific clause in this piece of legislation and transfer that feeling and emotion into our Constitution the next time Parliament deals with the Meech Lake Accord.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Madam Speaker, I rise to support the amendments that are being discussed, particularly the amendments moved by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp).

It is not difficult for Governments to enunciate policies and for Governments to try to implement those policies by passing legislation. Unfortunately, experience and history have taught us that we can have a law and a policy, but if the determination to see that those policies are carried out is not very firm, then not much happens.

I remind Hon. Members that long before this Parliament or any of the provinces dealt with the question of multiculturalism the Parliament of Canada, and I believe almost every province in Canada, enacted after a great deal of discussion and after hearing many representations, fair employment practices legislation and fair accommodations legislation. The Parliament of Canada and the legislatures of Canada enunciated the principle that to discriminate in the fields of employment or housing against a person or persons because of their race, religion or colour and, later, sex, was contrary to the law. That sounds fine, but if one looks at the reality one sees that very little in fact has been accomplished.

If a study were made of Governments, federal, provincial or municipal, to see how many public servants employed by the three levels of government come from visible minority groups we would all hang our heads in shame. In my own City of Winnipeg I am certain that, if I examined the people who worked for the police and fire department, I could count on the fingers of my two hands the total number of people working for those two departments who come from visible minority groups.

Last week my colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—North Centre (Mr. Keeper), was urging Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation to use its influence to take action against the owners of rental housing because there is a great deal of evidence that they discriminate in renting apartments to native people. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—North Centre, was correct in raising that matter. But I have to say with a good deal of dismay that I believe that not only was Canada Mortgage and Housing remiss, but so was the Manitoba Human Rights Commission, a commission set up in legislation in a province that has had an NDP Government for years. That commission should have been dealing with this question.

These are not easy matters. There is a great deal of prejudice among sections of our population. The whole point of that type of legislation, and the whole purpose of our attempt to deal with the reality of multiculturalism is to help the people from minority groups. My friend, the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi), stated that he is a first generation Canadian. I am a second generation Canadian. The fathers and grandfathers of some of the people whom I represent came to this country years ago, and some of the people I represent have come more recently in the last few years. They need assistance. They do not only need speeches telling them that we welcome them. They do not only need legislation which supposedly helps and protects them. What they need is real action on the part of Governments.

I say with a great deal of regret, and perhaps if I thought about it I could use much stronger language, that regardless of Party, Governments have not been as vigilant, as aggressive, and as determined as they should have been to deal with the type of discrimination that goes on.

Let me return to the debate when the Government brought in its Employment Equity Act. What is contained in the Act is fine as far as it goes, but the Act will be a failure because there is nothing in the Act that requires Departments to set targets, to attempt to reach those targets, and to report each year on how close they have come, or if they have come anywhere near to achieving the targets. If Departments are not implementing the policies that Governments have stated they believe in, then Governments can take the action to see that the type of principles set forth in that Employment Equity Act, and in the principles that are set forth in this Bill, become more than words in a Bill which gathers dust on the shelves of most law libraries in this country, but become a reality. That reality is extremely important and necessary for many people who live in this country.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Madam Speaker, I have a few words to say about this legislation, and I do wish to make a few points with regard to the motions that we are presently dealing with, particularly Motion No. 14 put forward by my colleague. This motion is designed to commit federal institutions to implementing policies, programs and practices rather than simply promoting them.

The reason this motion is significant is that in presenting this notion I hear my colleague saying that Governments ought to take action and not only have great rhetoric with regard to multiculturalism in Canada, and not only have the correct phrases when it comes to ethnic groups, but they ought to have programs that will make a real difference to the lives of people in the ethnic groups and communities in Canada. Some of the groups that exist in my riding have very high levels of employment, for example, the Philippine and Portuguese communities, and many other groups that are living in the inner city. Often members of those groups have professional qualifications acquired elsewhere which are not recognized in Canada. They have levels of unemployment that are unacceptable by Canadian standards and are certainly not reflected in the Canadian statistics that are issued and that become part of our television news.

Recently there was a report that unemployment in Canada is down to the lowest level in seven years. That is very impressive, but it is not the reality experienced by people in Winnipeg, in the inner City of Winnipeg, or in Winnipeg—North Centre. In ridings such as mine with very high levels of ethnic and immigrant groups, unemployment is more in the nature of 30 per cent rather than 6 per cent or 7 per cent, or whatever the official statistics are.

I do wish to compliment the Government with regard to its actions today. The Government has responded to the appeals from the ethnic and multicultural groups to put the words "fundamental characteristic" in the legislation, after much prodding from my colleague who is our critic in this area and prodding from the critic in the Liberal Party. The Government has seen the light and has introduced the words "fundamental characteristic" to describe multiculturalism rather than "fundamental element", whatever that was supposed to be.

I am pleased that the Government has responded to this prodding and has recognized that the multicultural nature of the country is a fundamental characteristic of the country. To me that means that we have a country and an ideal that respects the cultural heritage of each and every one of our citizens and groups, and that we have rejected the American notion of the "melting pot". We can have people preserve their language and culture and take pride in their origins. That is what "fundamental characteristic" means.

Now we have the ideal established, we need to get some muscle behind that ideal and at the level of the day-to-day lives of ordinary Canadians and new Canadians in order that it can make a difference in the type of jobs that they have, in the type of communities that they have, and in their equal access to opportunity and to a good life that they can enjoy in this country.

I must say that I welcome the fact that the Government has realized that it made a great deal of sense to put the words "fundamental characteristic" into the legislation. I am glad that the communities have had an opportunity to have their voices heard through the instrument of this Parliament. I hope this is only a first step and we will get down to very concrete programs. When ethnic groups and new Canadians are in the market-place, their qualifications will be recognized, their opportunities for employment will be equal to those of any other Canadian, and they can look forward to an equal place on the Canadian stage, regardless of how long they have been in the country.

I understand that this multiculturalism Bill is a first, and it is long overdue. We welcome the fact that it is here today and being debated.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It being 5 o'clock, the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business, as listed on today's Order Paper.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS--MOTIONS

[English]

FEDERAL LANDS USE

SUGGESTED DESIGNATION OF MILITARY LANDS AS POTENTIAL PARKLAND

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider designating as potential parkland all military lands located in urban areas and presently used for military purposes, once their present use is discontinued.

He said: Madam Speaker, you may be wondering why this motion is on the Order Paper and up for debate today. The motive and the instigation is caused by the fact that we do have across the nation a number of places where the land is being used for very appropriate and understandable purposes, including military purposes. In some large urban centres in Canada you have an area the size of an airport in the heart of the city, an area that is coveted and looked upon by a number of potentially interested parties, if and when the day will come for these lands to be abandoned for present use by the Department of National Defence.

My message is an environmental one, related to land use in urban Canada. I will put it very briefly along these lines. There will be pressures on our publicly-owned lands, which are at the present time under the administration of the Department of National Defence, as to when they should be declared vacant. The pressure will be enormous, particularly for additional housing, as indicated by my colleagues in this House in recent months. They have actually urged, particularly in the case of the city I come from, that the Downsview lands be used for housing purposes.

There could be pressure for other uses, such as commercial uses, and initiatives that would somehow indicate the desirability of the development of these lands. The alternative that I would propose in this motion is that these lands be designated at the appropriate time. I suppose this would have to be done in co-operation with the municipal and provincial authorities in order to designate them as parklands.

What does that mean? It is the concept of parkland in the broadest sense of the word. It would mean a use of these lands dedicated to environmental education, in relation to kids, in relation to schools and in relation to the public at large, on weekends. In other words, these would be demonstration areas where the biological characteristics and eco-systems of that particular region would be explained, and the number of environmental protection policies and programs would be explained at all levels. Therefore, you would have a centre in this particular park where the public would have an opportunity to absorb and to become acquainted with the science and practical application of environmental goals and objectives. It would not be such a bad idea, judging from the success that this idea has had in certain cities in Europe.

Second, the land that would be given up by the military authorities at the appropriate time could be used for conventional parkland, with the amenities that go with a park, which I do not have to describe at length.

Third, there could also be a combination or an addition or a parallel use of this land devoted to recreation, particularly in downtown areas where the densities are high, where there are large number of apartment dwellers and where the ratio of population to open space would be such that it would require this type of recreational land use.

Fourth, perhaps the ultimate in land use these days in an urban setting, where possible, is to devote such lands the creation of urban wildlife areas. We have, as you know, a wildlife that is retreating from the built-up areas, for understandable reasons. These wildlife areas may be possible where the size of the particular land is large enough. The size of a military airport is particularly suited for such a purpose. It may be a very interesting initiative to devote that particular public land to the development and the enshrinement of wildlife for the enjoyment of Canadians living in that region.

It is our use of land, if and when it becomes available, that has a very clear, specific purpose, namely, that of enhancing the quality of life in Canadian cities and in urban Canada in a manner that perhaps would make some of our cities unique in the world.

We have the space. We have the opportunity to do it. I would suggest that this would be a very imaginative way of contributing to the uniqueness of our cities. True, the pressures will be enormous in opposite directions. There will be those who will want additional housing, and it could make for a very strong social argument in their favour. I do not deny that. There will be those who will want commercial development. There will be those who will be able to propose some very interesting industrial land uses. Nevertheless, the purpose of this motion is centred around the notion of creating parklands in publicly-owned lands in our urban cities, because that is where the pressure is and where the transportation tie-ups already exist. That is where the pollution at times is high and where you would want to create open spaces for the benefit of citizens living in that particular area.

I will stress it again, it is in our urban cities in the last two or three decades that we have seen a mushrooming of high-rise apartments, of high density dwellings, where the open spaces, the greenery, the yard, the front lawn of course exist only on a very minute surface, considering the number of people who live vertically above that specific property.

Therefore, the necessity of providing in certain urban centres additional open spaces cannot be denied, particularly if you come from Banff, like the Hon. Member across the aisle, or if you come from a community which is endowed with enormous amounts of open spaces, like Kapuskasing. I am talking of metropolitan centres that would include Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver, to mention our larger urban centres.

• (1710)

Why would one take the trouble to make this point? In December of last year the then President of the Treasury Board, the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski), released a press communique on a federal lands study in Toronto. It put forward three concepts which I would like to examine quickly and put on record with which I find myself in partial agreement and then in total disagreement.

Mrs. Browes: How can you do that?

Mr. Caccia: There are three, there is not one only. I will come to that.

The examination is limited only to federal lands in the Toronto region. It is a very interesting examination. The study is one which one no doubt must take seriously. I refer to the first page of the study where the main principles, the so-called guiding premises, are mentioned. The first one I find perfectly reasonable. It reads:

> The federal Government will continue to hold lands that are appropriate to its operational needs.

There is nothing wrong with that. That is a way of having an insurance policy 100 years from now when these lands will become available. It may be that at that time the population pressures will be such as to enhance rather than diminish the chances for these lands to become open spaces, recreational areas, parkland, urban, wildlife or environmentally educational centres.

The second principle reads:

> Lands not required for these purposes will be transferred to the appropriate jurisdictions or to other interests.

The words "other interests" trouble me a lot. I do not know how to interpret that. If it means a transfer from the federal level to a provincial or municipal level for public purposes, that is fine with me. I have no difficulty with that and I fully concur. But if it means transfer to private sector interests, then that is where we part company immediately.

The third principle reads:

Where the federal Government agrees to transfer land, it is obligated to act in the best interest of Canada as a whole—

Which is just fine. There is no problem with that. Then, this is perhaps why I was bit unclear earlier. It goes on as follows:

—including seeking full value of the land on behalf of Canadian taxpayers.

The full value aspect, Mr. Speaker, troubles me enormously. If it means monetary value, as I suspect it does, then we part ways again. If it means that values are related to the enjoyment of landscapes, wildlife, trees and open spaces, there is no problem with that. If that full value implies monetary values, dollars and cents, then I submit there is no real way of arriving at a full value on behalf of Canadian taxpayers because some of this land has been increasing in value year after year, decade after decade. Only upon a sale does it reflect the value. That is not good enough when it comes to public land.

In an attempt to summarize the explanation for this motion before you and before my colleagues here today, Mr. Speaker, I would say that the study carried out by the consultants for the disposition of federal lands at a future date is welcome as an initiative. It is good that we find out what the major criteria should be. It is also a good thing that we debate this, which is what is taking place today. We should put our views on where we agree and where we do not.

I submit, as I have already, that land pressures in our metropolitan centres as the years go by will increase enormously. Hence we will have pressures for development in the conventional sense, as we know it, be it housing, commercial or industrial structures and buildings. I submit there is an alternative and there is a very good one. It relates to the necessity of having an alternative to the strong trend of building highrises, high density and the concentration of population on our limited urban land base.

We should make provision in the long term as one generation providing for subsequent generations—for those in the gallery, their children and grandchildren—with open spaces that they will enjoy. There is nothing more impressive than to go through a city that is heavily built up like Paris, Rome, my home City of Milan, Berlin, London, New York—you name it—and see what a limited and valuable commodity it is to come across open spaces in the form of parks. When they were established the parks may have been at the edges of a city and may have been surrounded or within a very small community. Now, instead, these parks are surrounded by highrises and are located in a major population centre. They are, therefore, such a strong contrast with the rest of the urban setting that they become green oases, for lack of a better word.

I am trying to argue this afternoon that we should project our thinking in the future and plan to make the military lands located in urban areas, when they become available, into green oases, open spaces for the enjoyment of generations of Canadians to come.

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in the debate on the Private Member's Motion today which has been put forward by the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia).

Canadians take a well deserved pride in the beauty of our natural landscapes and in the history of our nation. The Hon. Member is to be congratulated for reminding the House of this fact. As a former Minister of the Environment, the Hon. Member knows that the Canadian Parks Service of Environment Canada is the federal agency whose clear mandate is to protect outstanding natural areas and historic places of national significance across Canada. Furthermore, he knows that the Canadian Parks Service plays a vital role in the preservation of our national heritage for present and future generations.

While we would all wish to expand Canada's national park system, Mr. Speaker, the present motion before the House would be both inappropriate and unnecessary. First, let us consider the nature of our national park system. Environment Canada, through its Canadian Parks Service, protects our national parks for all time because they are representative natural areas of Canadian significance. The national parks system encourages public understanding, appreciation and enjoyment of this natural heritage so as to leave it unimpaired for future generations. You should note, Mr. Speaker, the emphasis on the word natural. To be suitable for consideration as a national park, an area must have experienced minimal modification by humans or, if significant change has taken place, it must have potential for restoration to a natural state. Military lands in urban areas would simply not meet these criteria.

I was surprised to hear the Hon. Member talk about the Downsview airport which is located practically in the centre of Metropolitan Toronto in the North York section. It seems to me that the area in Metro Toronto that should be preserved and is in that wild state now is the Rouge Valley and not the Downsview airport which is more appropriate for housing.

The Hon. Member said that there should be urban wildlife. The motto of the Save the Rouge System is: "Wild in the City". Indeed, there is a whole herd of white-tailed deer running through Metro Toronto, if you can believe that, Mr. Speaker. We want the deer to be preserved wild in the city.

In fact, it is self-evident that in all of Canada, the places the furthest removed from their natural states are urban military areas. Military lands located in urban areas would certainly not qualify for inclusion in our national parks system based on the essential criteria of sights representing unspoiled natural beauty.

However, the Canadian Parks Service, through its National Historic Parks and Sites Program, may designate and commemorate areas of national historic interest. This is accomplished only upon the recommendation of the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada, which is the advisory body in such matters for the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan). To be selected for such commemoration, a place must be associated with an event or a movement which has shaped Canadian history, and/or illustrate effectively the culture of a pre-historic people or be associated with important archaeological discoveries.

Only places of extraordinary value to Canadian history are acquired and developed as national historic parks. All military lands are not intrinsically of national historic significance. They are not, nor should they be, automatically eligible for national commemoration.

This process is as it should be right now. Truly worthy sites of genuine national historic significance can be and are considered by the Historic Sites and Monuments Board. When these sites meet the proper criteria, they are given the appropriate designation. The system has worked and is working very well indeed. There is no need to tinker with it now, nor was there such a need when the Hon. Member who moved this motion served as Minister of the Environment.

To date, there has been excellent co-operation between the Department of National Defence and Environment Canada. DND is fully aware of Environment Canada's interest in and mandate for maintaining land of national historic significance. DND has routinely co-operated in the past by transferring to Environment Canada historically significant lands that were no longer required for military purposes.

In fact, military lands are already exceedingly well represented in Canada's historic parks system. DND has already transferred to the Canadian Parks Service some of the most important military sites in Canada. In fact, Canada's whole system of national historic parks and major historic sites began in 1917 with the transfer of Fort Anne in Nova Scotia from the Department of Militia and Defence to what was then the National Parks Service. Fort Anne was the first of our national historic parks.

From Signal Hill in St. John's, Newfoundland—where the final battle of the Seven Years War in North America was fought on September 15, 1762—to Fort Rodd Hill in Victoria, British Columbia—where batteries were constructed in 1895 as part of a coastal system to defend Esquimalt and Victoria—military sites, literally from one end of Canada to the other, have been preserved and are appreciated by hundreds of thousands of Canadians and foreign visitors each and every year.

Indeed, when it comes to military historic sites, Canada has been blessed. Seventeenth, 18th and 19th-century military history is well preserved and represented by national historic parks and sites. When one adds provincial sites to the list of federal lands of this type, we can proudly say that this aspect of history remains a living heritage accessible to all Canadians.

As all Hon. Members can see, it is clear that it would be totally inappropriate to turn over urban sites owned by the Department of National Defence for use as national parks because their value as unspoiled natural areas has been irredeemably debased. They would add nothing to our system of national historic sites which already include impeccable and comprehensive representations of our 17th, 18th and 19th-century military history.

Hon. Members can be assured that this Government will continue to ensure the preservation of nationally significant examples of Canada's military history as we have done so well in the past. For all these reasons, the motion put forward by the Hon. Member for Davenport is inappropriate and should be rejected by Hon. Members of the House of Commons.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Before continuing with debate, I would like to apprise the House of the following: I have received written notice from the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) that he is unable to move his motion during the hour provided for Private Members' Business tomorrow, Tuesday, July 12, 1988. It has not been possible to arrange an exchange of positions in the order of precedence pursuant to Standing Order 39. Accordingly, I am directing the Table Officers to drop that item of business to the bottom of the order of precedence. Since notice will be removed, the hour for Private Members' Business will be cancelled and, pursuant to Standing Order 39, the House will continue with the business before it prior to that hour.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Madam Speaker, I was not sure whether or not I would support the motion put by the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) until I heard the Parliamentary Secretary. She confirmed in my mind why I should support the motion, and I will tell her why in a minute.

The Hon. Member for Davenport was good enough, as he always is, to raise the difficulties involved in this issue. One difficulty he raised was the competition in land use in urban areas between land needed for housing and land that could be used, as he said, for environmental purposes or for parks. I personally do not think that the two are necessarily in conflict, but sometimes they can be partly in conflict. I have some concerns about that.

I thought that the Parliamentary Secretary was too bureaucratic and that there was too much of the DND in her response. I thought she mixed up the notion of national historic sites and national military sites, of all things, with what the Hon. Member for Davenport was trying to deal with. The Hon. Member for Davenport mentioned the use of lands under a number of criteria. He mentioned using land as an environmental centre, as conventional parkland, as a recreational centre, as a wildlife centre or as all of these. He suggested that we could use these military lands that are no longer used for military purposes for environmental purposes, but for different kinds of environmental purposes.

I do not think that the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary should dismiss this motion so quickly. She said that perhaps Downsview airport is more suitable for housing than it is for parkland and she said that we should look to the Rouge Valley. I believe that is in the Hon. Member's riding, is it not?

Mrs. Browes: Very close.

Mr. Waddell: I figured that.

Mrs. Browes: You are supporting it?

Mr. Waddell: I do support it. I think it makes sense to use the Rouge Valley as a park. As a matter of fact, I was almost blown away by what the Hon. Member said. She said that there were white-tailed deer running through Metropolitan Toronto. I always thought that it was only people chasing money running through Metropolitan Toronto.

Mr. Jepson: There's a lot of wildlife in Toronto.

Mr. Waddell: I knew there was a lot of wildlife in Toronto, as the Hon. Member said. As a matter of fact, we have a little saying in Vancouver. Of course, I do not subscribe to it. They say: "They don't call it Hogtown for nothing". It is nice to know they have some deer and that everyone is not in a fervent rush to make money. When I think of Toronto, I do not think of Bambi, I think more of Godzilla. However, it is nice to know.

• (1730)

Here is where the Parliamentary Secretary is wrong. She said there were precedents for taking military land. She mentioned that the DND transferred military land to parks, so we have precedents. Let us not confuse it with military sites, though. I would rather have environmental sites, quite frankly, than more military sites. We would have more sites commemorating militarism. While we have to commemorate our past, the reality of military battles, let us not go overboard. My feeling was that DND would tend to want to have more military sites than environmental parks, so let us not dismiss the Member's motion. I think he has a good idea.

To give you an example. In my home City of Vancouver, right near where I used to live, there is a park called Jericho Beach. It was an active military site, and still is, although it is empty now. It was used during the war. You can see pictures of the old hangars and military barracks and so on. It is right on the ocean, just outside of English Bay, towards Point Grey and the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, a beautiful area. As a matter of fact, it was used for the Habitat Conference. The Hon. Member for Davenport mentioned an environmental centre. It was used as a people centre for the Habitat Conference 10 or 15 years ago. That was the beginning of the Stockholm environmental notion and the things we are dealing with today. We did a good job in Vancouver in having it there.

The other thing about Jericho Beach is that it has areas for recreation. I used to jog around there myself when I was in better shape before I came to Parliament and got out of shape. It was a good area to jog around. There was wildlife there and even the military people who were looking after it allowed some bogs and areas like that to continue to exist. They did not develop it all. There was and is wildlife today, bird flyways and so on. You have urban wildlife, the real kind, that is, animals and birds. That is a good example, and therefore I do not think the Parliamentary Secretary should decide this out of hand and take the bureaucratic line from DND. I think this is something worth looking into.

I congratulate the Hon. Member for Davenport because he is a former Minister of the Environment who has always had his heart in the right place on environmental issues. However, I wish he had enumerated in more detail the number of these military sites. He mentioned Downsview. I have seen Downsview from the air while flying across Toronto and I wonder what it is being used for. I would like to know the future plans for that area. I wish the Hon. Member had named some of the other sites across Canada because there may be other areas available. Let us enumerate them, let us see what uses they could be put to.

He also mentioned the report done by the Government on the federal land study in Toronto. I, too, have my concerns. We have a Conservative Government that likes to privatize government property for its friends in the private sector. It is a Government that you cannot trust. For example, it made promises to seniors that it would not deindex their pensions, and then turned around and tried to do just that. It made a promise there would be no free trade. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) said he was against it, and then he brought in free trade. So it is a Government you cannot trust.

Mrs. Browes: On a point of order, Madam Speaker. I would like to remind the Hon. Member that he should stay on the topic of the motion we are discussing. I think he is veering off a little bit to the left, as he usually does.

Mr. Waddell: Madam Speaker, my point simply is that many of us, not just me, but many others in the country do not trust the Government to deal straightforwardly with matters. One of the problems in dealing with these particular lands is the federal land study in Toronto. We are concerned that instead of putting them to environmental or other uses such as housing, the Government might sell them to its friends. Let us look at the record. Look at the past. Look at what the Government has done.

I want to conclude by saying this. I think the Hon. Member for Davenport has made a good start. We really should look at and analyse these military lands. We should make the environment, whether it is a centre, a parkland, a recreation, urban wildlife or combination of them all, an important use. We have to weigh the housing usage factor. We have to weigh the use for commercial purposes and environmental purposes. I agree with the Hon. Member. I think the time has come to restrict urban growth and create more open spaces and enhance the existing ones in urban areas. That will enhance the quality of life, which is what we are all trying to do and what we are proud of having as Canadians. That is why I think this is a very creative motion and it deserves a better look than the Parliamentary Secretary was prepared to give.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Luc Joncas (Matapédia—Matane): Madam Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to take part in the debate today on Motion 164 moved by the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia).

Madam Speaker, this motion by a former Minister of the Environment, well-intentioned though it may be, comes somewhat as a surprise. In any case, since the Hon. Member for Davenport must be aware of the federal policies relating to the Canadian parks system, he might have refrained from presenting this kind of motion.

Perhaps the Hon. Member is worried that Canada's military heritage is under-represented in our network of national historic parks.

Future generations need not worry. Since the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada was established in 1919, the number of historic sites, parks, monuments and canals has steadily increased. Since 1917, several old forts administered by the Army has been transferred to the National Historic Parks Branch.

Madam Speaker, perhaps I may recall that in the fifties, the federal Government has focused its attention on a number of sites, most of which were former military centres.

In fact, from the outset, co-operation between the Derpartment of National Defence and the department responsible for national parks was always excellent, and it still is today. Thanks to this mutual understanding, from the early settlement of this country to the beginning of the twentieth century, all across this country from Signal Hill, Newfoundland to Fort Rodd Hill, British Columbia, our national historic parks are a faithful reflection of the relationship between our country's history and its various regions. These parks give Canadians and foreign visitors a good picture of our military history in the 17th, 18th and 19th centuries.

Madam Speaker, the motion in its present form does not specify the historic value of these lands and fails to make any distinctions. In view of existing provisions for having any site of national historic significance taken into consideration, and since the motion fails to consider the value of the lands in question, a motion of this kind is useless as far as the preservation of our country's heritage is concerned.

It is not useful to create national parks, Madam Speaker, since it ignores the objectives and criteria of Environment Canada in this respect.

The purpose of creating national parks is to safeguard natural areas that are representative of this country so as to keep them intact for future generations.

It does not seem necessary to me to sustantiate for the House the fact that the motion introduced by the Hon. Member for Davenport does not meet the criterion of geographic representativeness; it also goes without saying that a former Minister of the Environment should know that military lands located in urban areas are far removed from the definition of a natural area. I ask you, Madam Speaker, what could be less natural than a city?

It remains passing strange, Madam Speaker, that this former Minister of the Environment, who has done so much for our common heritage could have drafted such a motion.

Canada has one of the most beautiful networks of national parks in the world. At the present time, this network comprises 34 national parks disseminated throughout our vast land. They cover 1.3 percent of Canada's overall territory.

Since this Government came to power, we have signed agreements and spent millions of dollars for the creation of new parks, such as at Moresby South in the Queen Charlotte Islands, on the Bruce Peninsula in Ontario, on Ellesmere Island in the Arctic, and more recently, in the Saguenay region in Québec.

In Quebec, our historical military heritage is far from being under-represented. For instance, we have Fort Lennox on l'île-aux-Noix, Battlefield Park and the walled fortifications of Quebec in the City of Québec, Fort No. 1 of Pointe-Lévis in Lauzon, the Chateauguay Battlements in Howick, and Chambly Fort in Chambly. All of these parks and historical sites bear witness to the military history of past régimes.

The public has shown a growing interst in such sites, and thousands of our fellow Canadians, as well as tourists from all over the world, seek them out for their beauty and for their historical interest.

We can assure the Canadian population that we are continuing and will continue to work for the preservation of our heritage and that we will also continue to improve our national parks network and our national historical parks.

Unfortunately, Madam Speaker, motion 164 introduced by the Hon. Member for Davenport is far from meeting the objectives which underly the creation of national parks and national historical parks, nor can it influence municipalities or provincial governments to preserve green spaces.

For all of these reasons, Madam Speaker, we suggest that the motion be defeated by this honorable House.

• (1740)

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Madam Speaker, I would like to say just a few words in support of Motion No. 164, on behalf of my colleague from Davenport (Mr. Caccia). I think that this motion raises some very important issues for people living in urban areas who have military facilities that are obsolete or declared surplus for government requirements and that must be redeveloped either for housing or in accordance with some municipal projects or plans or that are to be used for roads or other purposes for all municipalities in the region.

I raise the matter because, first of all, it is of current interest in Ottawa—Vanier and, second, it has always concerned me. How are federal lands that are declared surplus disposed of and how are lands that were used for military purposes disposed of not only for the development of communities that identify with those facilities or have had to live with them for many years, but also how can nature parks and other natural areas, which everyone considers very important, be planned for our urban centres? There is a great need to maintain green spaces that everyone can enjoy and to give municipalities a chance to develop within their territory a place where people can do other things than playing war games.

Madam Speaker, Motion No. 164 from the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) reads as follows:

> That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider designating as potential parkland all military lands located in urban areas and presently used for military purposes, once their present use is discontinued.

So this is a recommendation that the Government should take seriously and put on the agenda to see whether urban areas do require more facilities to meet public needs, before dismissing it entirely.

You know, Madam Speaker, in my riding, there is a property known as . . .

[English]

—DND property on Lees Avenue. It is known as the Armories property. I understand that some years ago this property was designated as surplus to federal needs in terms of military installations. Therefore, everyone and his neighbour has had his eyes on it and planning has been going on to take this property to serve transportation needs or other regional requirements. Much to my dismay no one in Government has seriously suggested that it be used for ecological environment parks or, even better, in downtown Ottawa, some good affordable housing.

This dossier has been with us for some time. Just for the sake of making it known that we do have a few sites in Ottawa Vanier which have been declared surplus, and in whose interest it is that they be preserved for public use, there are plans to declare the federal property known as the Armories as surplus and to transfer that property to the regional Government for a major road project through the area proposed by the regional municipality.

I wish to refer to a letter from the Alderman Nancy Smith of St. George's Ward, written to me on January 29, 1988. She says:

> I am writing you with regard to the DND property on Lees Avenue, otherwise known as the Armories property. It would appear that this property may become surplus in the near future.

She goes on to say that the regional municipality of Ottawa-Carleton may have access to that property to realign some of its road patterns in the area. She continues:

> The land in this area is zoned for residential. In particular, the DND site was reviewed at the time of the Ottawa East Neighbourhood Plan (1979 to 1980). It is zoned for family housing with a 35 foot to 45 foot height limit.

She went on to explain how important it is that there should be housing on that property.

• (1750)

The Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) stated that he would like to see any surplus federal lands now used for military purposes, when they became surplus declared to be environmental parks. I do not disagree with him that there is a need for environmental parks, but on that point I might debate his argument. There are some cities where there are several such military properties. I can think of at least two in my riding. The site on Lees Avenue, known as the Armouries site, could be used for good quality housing while giving the residents of Ottawa East a park at the same time. In other words, we could easily cope with both the housing requirements of the community and the park requirements of the children and residents of that area.

This is a good motion. It appeals to me because of its human approach to disposing of properties that the federal Government no longer needs. This could easily be taken up by the Government, to consider how the various cities, towns and urban areas where properties used for DND purposes that were declared surplus could be converted into parks or, for that matter, a mix of parks and housing. If that is the purpose at hand, then it has the full approval of all residents of Ottawa—Vanier.

Mr. Bob Hicks (Scarborough East): Madam Speaker, I am pleased to participate in the debate today. I congratulate the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia), a former Minister of Environment, for his interest.

I want to take this opportunity to point out what I genuinely feel are a few imperfections in what he is proposing. As a former Minister of the Environment, the Hon. Member for Davenport should know that this motion is neither feasible nor practical. The very wording of the motion, the way in which it is drafted, seems to fly in the face of government policies, both of this Government and of previous ones, for parks designation and for the disposal of surplus lands.

Let us look at the phrase "considered designated as potential parkland". The motion does not explain what this phrase means, nor does it say how such a goal can be achieved in law.

At present there is no provision either in the laws governing the selection or acquisition of our national parks, or in the parks policy of the Canadian Parks Service, for the designation of an area as potential parkland. After an area is selected for consideration as a national parkland on the basis of well defined criteria, it is either designated a park or it is not. There is no such thing now, nor has there ever been a designation for potential parkland.

Let us consider the selection procedure for designating a Canadian national historic site. This selection process is carried out by the National Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada. A site, which may have national significance, either as a location in its own right or in relation to a person or event of Canada-wide importance, is nominated for consideration by the board.

Nowhere in this process, which has been working smoothly and efficiently since 1919, is provision made for a designation as potential parkland.

Likewise, Motion No. 164 refers to parkland rather than national parkland or land for national parks. The mandate of the Canadian Parks Service concerns the establishment of national parks; that is, the establishment of parks as areas that have true national significance as a result of their superlative natural characteristics and unspoiled state. Surely a former Minister of the Environment should be expected to realize that the chances of any urban military land qualifying under the rigid criteria for national parks are extremely remote, to say the least.

Since this is the case, the Hon. Member for Davenport must be implying by the omission of the word "national" that the surplus land intended for designation as potential parkland is intended for municipal or provincial parkland. Surely it is not the role of the federal Government to tell other levels of government what they should or should not designate as parkland, either potential or not. If such a designation is meant to apply to urban areas for consideration by the federal Government as parkland it is meaningless, if it is meant to apply to provincial or local governments it is presumptuous.

The proposal of the Hon. Member for Davenport to designate surplus urban land of the Department of National Defence as potential parkland is simply not feasible. Moreover, it is unnecessary. There is a formal disposal process already in place to handle surplus DND land, and indeed all surplus land of the federal Government.

If the intent of Motion No. 164 is simply to designate surplus urban DND land as parkland in order to alleviate shortages of green space in urban areas, then the Hon. Member for Davenport could have perhaps stated his goal more clearly. In that case, however, he might have confronted the reality that municipal and provincial Governments already have the opportunity to obtain federal Government land once it is declared surplus. If they decide surplus DND lands are required for parks there already exist adequate and functional procedures to obtain such lands.

The intent of Motion No. 164 is clear, to say the least. As a measure to augment our national parks system it cannot work, because urban lands are unsuitable for use as national parks; as an instrument to improve the selection of historic parks and sites it is unnecessary; and as a means of increasing municipal urban green space it is inappropriate and ineffectual.

Canada's national parks system is one of the great glories of our country. Our national parks are a means of preserving, in their natural state, areas which are representative of the major natural environments of Canada. They are special places which protect part of the heritage of all Canadians, now and in the future. The first national park in Canada was established in 1885 to protect the then newly discovered Banff Hot Springs for public use. Now, our national park system encompasses 34 parks, which cover 1.3 per cent of Canada's entire land mass.

The official policy of the Canadian Parks Service sets as a goal the representation of each land and marine natural region of Canada by a national park or marine national park. However, many land and most marine natural regions are still unrepresented. This is a worth-while goal which this Government is diligently and constantly pursuing.

The present Government is proud to have added a significant number of new national parks to Canada's national parks system during the years of its tenure. Bruce Peninsula and Ellesmere Island are the new national parks or national park reserves the Government has recently created. Canadians can be assured that the Government will continue to build on this record of success and show leadership in continuing to improve Canada's national park system.

Unfortunately, Motion No. 164 will not bring us any closer to reaching any of these goals, nor can it possibly have any practical or additional impact on the preservation of urban green space by municipal or provincial Governments.

Notwithstanding the items I pointed out, I still congratulate the Hon. Member for his interest in the environment. Both my colleague, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of the Environment (Mrs. Browes), and I have worked diligently on behalf of the Save the Rouge campaign in eastern Metro Toronto. We are sympathetic to all worth-while suggestions regarding the environment. Unfortunately, Motion No. 164 does not appear to be the vehicle for the end result that is actually sought by the Hon. Member.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Madam Speaker, in the closing minutes of this debate on the motion put forward by my colleague, the Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia), a former Minister of Environment, I want to salute the best intentions that have gone into this motion in trying to humanize the large urban centres in this country with much deserved and needed parkland.

The City of Ottawa has attempted to combine green parkland with an urban use. I believe it has achieved a pleasant surrounding and ambiance.

Like my colleague, the Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), let me also point out that I do not believe the entire surplus land—

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Unfortunately, I must interrupt the Hon. Member. The time provided for consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired. Pursuant to Standing Order 42(1), the order is dropped from the Order Paper.

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-92, an Act to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act, as reported (without amendment) from the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It being 6 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 13(5), the House will now proceed to the taking of deferred divisions on Bill C-92, an Act to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act. The first vote will be on Motion No. 1. Mr. Foster moved:

Motion No. 1

That Bill C-92 be amended in Clause 8 by striking out line 33 at page 5 and substituting the following therefor:

"railway car during the pool period. The said sum shall reflect an equitable allocation of the costs incurred by the Board to maintain the country delivery points."

Call in the Members.

The House divided on Motion No. 1, which was negatived on the following division:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I declare the motion lost.

Mr. Lewis: Madam Speaker, there have been discussions among the Parties, and I think you would find unanimous agreement to apply the vote that was just taken to the remaining motion under report stage of Bill C-92 and to reverse the vote for the concurrence motion on Bill C-92.

I think you would also find that that same procedure could be applied to the report stage motions on Bill C-129. In other words, the Government is against the motions; the Opposition is for them.

Mr. Gauthier: No.

Mr. Lewis: Fine, I understood—

Mr. Kaplan: Madam Speaker, I was absent while the preceding vote was taken. I would agree to this procedure provided that I was included as voting with my Party.

Mr. Charest: Madam Speaker, I must admit that I am not too sure what is going to happen. Somebody from the Opposition cut off the Minister of State, the House Leader for the Government, as he was about to propose something, and now it is not certain what will happen.

In the eventuality that the Opposition will come to its senses and agree to the proposition made by the Minister of State, and if ever the Hon. Member can get his act together, I will vote with the Government.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Chair understood that the vote which has just been taken would be applied to the question on Motion No. 3 standing in the name of Mr. Hovdebo, and that the vote in reverse would be applied to the concurrence motion, with the two additions of the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) and the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport (Mr. Charest). That would take care of Bill C-92.

Therefore the next question is on Motion No. 3.

Mr. Hovdebo moved:

That Bill C-92 be amended by deleting Clause 8.

The House divided on Motion No. 3, which was negatived on the following division:

AIR CANADA PUBLIC PARTICIPATION ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Friday, July 8, consideration of Bill C-129, an Act to provide for the continuance of Air Canada under the Canada Business Corporations Act and for the issuance and sale of shares thereof to the public, as reported (with an amendment) from a legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The House will now proceed to the taking of the deferred division on the report stage of Bill C-129.

Shall I dispense with the ringing of the bells?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The first question will be on Motion No. 2. Mr. Orlikow moved:

Motion No. 2

That Bill C-129 be amended in Clause 6 by striking out line 27 at page 3 and substituting the following therefor:

"those votes to not more than five".

The House divided on Motion No. 2, which was negatived on the following division:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I declare the motion lost. The next question is on Motion No. 4. The Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) on a point of order.

Mr. Riis: Madam Speaker, I think you would find a disposition in the House to apply the results of the vote just taken to all remaining report stage motions and to apply the reversal of that vote to the concurrence motion on Bill C-129.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The House has heard the suggestion of the Hon. Member. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The next question is on Motion No. 4. Mr. MacLellan moved:

That Bill C-129 be amended in Clause 6 by adding immediately after line 37 at page 3 the following:

"(f) provisions restricting the Corporation from acquiring control, through ownership of shares or otherwise, in an air carrier providing international services under a licence issued pursuant to the National Transportation Act;

(g) provisions respecting the enforcement of the constraints and requirements imposed pursuant to this section."

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Thursday, July 7, consideration of Bill C-121, an Act to authorize the reorganization and divestiture of Eldorado Nuclear Limited and to amend certain Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The House will now proceed to the taking of the deferred division at report stage of Bill C-121.

Shall I dispense with the ringing of the bells?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Accordingly the question is on Motion No. 3. Mr. Orlikow moved:

That Bill C-121 be amended in Clause 17 by striking out lines 21 to 24 at page 16 and substituting the following therefor:

"17. All sections shall come into force five years following Proclamation by Governor in Council."

The House divided on Motion No. 3, which was negatived on the following division:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I declare the motion lost.

Hon. Flora MacDonald (for the President of the Privy Council) moved that the Bill be concurred in.

Mr. Gauthier: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think you will find unanimous consent to apply in reverse the result of the previous vote to this vote, with the addition of the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) who just walked in.

Ms. Copps: No.

Mr. Gauthier: We will leave her out.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The House has heard the suggestion from the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier). Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the motion stands deferred.

The House will now proceed to the next grouping.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon) moved:

Motion No. 20.

That Bill C-93 be amended in Clause 4 by striking out lines 9 to 16 at page 5 and substituting the following therefor:

"4.(1) The Minister, all other Ministers of the Crown and all federal institutions shall implement the multiculturalism policy of Canada.

(2) The Minister shall provide advice and assistance to other Ministers in the development and implementation of programs and practices that achieve the multiculturalism policy."

Motion No. 21.

That Bill C-93 be amended in Clause 5 by striking out lines 17 to 21 at page 5 and substituting the following therefor:

"5.(1) The Minister shall take appropriate measures to implement the multiculturalism policy of Canada and, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, shall

(a) engage in an ongoing consultation with ethnocultural communities and multicultural organizations in finding the best means to achieve the multicultural policy;"

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West) moved:

Motion No. 22.

That Bill C-93 be amended in Clause 5 by striking out line 21 at page 5 and substituting the following therefor:

"of the foregoing, shall".

Motion No. 23.

That Bill C-93 be amended in Clause 5 by striking out lines 18 to 21 at page 6 and substituting the following therefor:

"(2) The Minister shall engage in ongoing dialogue with all provinces and territories respecting the implementation of the multiculturalism policy of Canada and may enter into an agreement or arrangement with any province or territory further thereto."

Motion No. 24.

That Bill C-93 be amended in Clause 5 by striking out lines 18 to 21 at page 6 and substituting the following therefor:

"(2) the Minister shall engage in an ongoing dialogue with all the provinces and territories and enter into agreements with any or all of them whenever such agreements advance the multiculturalism policy of Canada."

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon) moved:

Motion No. 25.

That Bill C-93 be amended in Clause 6 by striking out lines 27 to 31 at page 6 and substituting the following therefor:

"6.(1) The Ministers of the Crown shall recognize the leadership role of the Minister in implementing the multiculturalism policy and shall, in the execution of their respective mandates, take the actions required to implement the multiculturalism policy of Canada."

Motion No. 26.

That Bill C-93 be amended in Clause 6 by adding immediately after line 31 at page 6 the following:

"(2) Each Minister shall develop an annual plan to advance the objectives of the multiculturalism policy of Canada within his department and indicate the resources required to achieve these objectives."

He said: Madam Speaker, this group of motions is designed to clarify the responsibilities of the Minister responsible for multiculturalism and other members of the Cabinet in acting on the statement of principles which Clause 3 has set forth so well in the Bill, but which in the draft that came to the House and in the Bill that came back to the House from the legislative committee still leaves all too much opportunity for individuals to act on the policy or to ignore the policy.

Because of the nature of these provisions, I provide as an example Clause 5, the first paragraph of which provides that the Minister shall take such measures as the Minister considers appropriate to implement the multiculturalism policy of Canada without limiting the generality, and so on. Then some specific statements are made. That particular phrase, "shall take such measures as the Minister considers appropriate", has impressed a great many people as opening the possibility to failing to respect the principles set forth in Clause 3, as opening the door to ignoring the multicultural policy, something which many observers seem to think has characterized government Departments far too often.

The need to strengthen various clauses of the Bill was recognized by the Canadian Ethnocultural Council in its own presentation on the matter which, under the title "Strengthening the Act, a Brief on Bill C-93", was made public in April of this year and said among other things in specific reference to Clause 5, paragraph (1):

> The opening paragraph of Section 5(1) could be worded in a more definitive manner as follows: "The Minister shall take measures appropriate to implement the multicultural policy of Canada and, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, may"

Similar suggestions have come forth for other clauses. Looking at Clause 4 of the Bill, the Canadian Ethnocultural Council has suggested that there might be a broadening of the ambit of the Bill by stating that the Minister, all other Ministers of the Crown, and all federal institutions shall implement the multiculturalism policy of Canada. It has been my response to these suggestions to put forward this series of motions, all of which deal in one way or another with ministerial obligation.

Motion No. 20 gives the Minister an active role by himself and with his cabinet colleagues. Motion No. 21, as I have already said, removes from Clause 5 any excuse for inaction and commits the Minister to ongoing consultation with ethnocultural communities and multicultural organizations.

I need hardly say that organizations nationally and provincially have been very concerned about the need for such close consultation. They have all too often been promised consultation by Ministers and then have not seen it actually carried out. Again, with its basis for the implementation of multicultural policy, I have endeavoured in Motion No. 21 to place that obligation on the Ministers so that they will actually realize, having read the Act once it is proclaimed, that these are the requirements of the position.

Motion No. 24 amends Clause 5 in order to ensure consultation with provincial and territorial Governments. I do not think it is any secret that the first federal-provincial meeting of Ministers responsible for multiculturalism, a meeting which the Hon. Member for Lisgar (Mr. Murta) carried out as the first multiculturalism Minister of this Conservative Government, was thought by people in some of the provinces as a very important meeting in forcing provincial Governments to give attention to multiculturalism and in encouraging them to press on with the elaboration of their own policies. Recognizing from our side that this policy of 1971 needs to be pushed on in the various jurisdictions of Canada, an obligation to have such meetings with provincial and territorial Governments could be of great value.

Finally, in Motions Nos. 25 and 26 I have attempted to amend Clause 6 in order to strengthen the obligations of all Ministers of the Crown to advance the multiculturalism policy. In Motion No. 26 I have attempted, again deliberately, to ensure that Ministers' Departments develop annual plans designed to ensure that the multiculturalism policy, to which lip service is so often paid politically, and to which governments have ostensibly been committed for many years past, is actually achieved in practice and becomes the basis for action in the various Departments of the Government.

These various motions are designed to strengthen the Bill and ensure it is a reality for the federal Government.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Madam Speaker, I would like to address two motions of the group that I proposed on behalf of the Liberal Party, that is to say, Motions Nos. 22 and 23. Before doing that, I would like to say that I support my friend's Motion No. 26 in that it is very similar to the motion I moved earlier, a motion which was ultimately defeated, to try to get Ministers and their Departments to develop annual plans to foster and enhance multiculturalism not in broad general strokes but in very specific and tangible ways.

With respect to Motion No. 22, in essence it seeks to change very weak wording to very strong and committed wording. Clause 5 of the Bill talks about ministerial obligations. It says the Minister "may" take such measures as the Minister considers appropriate to implement the multiculturalism policy of Canada, and so on. I propose here, as I have in other areas of the Bill, to change the word "may" to "shall".

Some Members might think that is nit-picking. Some people might think that it is being too particular. I suggest it is not. From the opening paragraph to the closing paragraph of the Bill we have a lot of words which should have been changed to make the Bill more forceful, more secure, more tangible. We should avoid talking about doing something or wanting something done, and instead ensure that it will be done. It has to be seen as an obligation on the part of the Minister to fulfil a number of multiculturalism policies that I concur in. However, if the language suggests that the Minister "may" do it if he or she wants to, then you have a situation where one Minister of one Party will do it and a subsequent Minister of the same Party or of a different Party may not. That leads to inconsistencies and differences in the implementation of programs. The language in the Bill is crucial if we are to maintain consistency, commitment, and national standards.

Motion No. 23 refers to Clause 5 of the Bill which says again the Minister "may" enter into an agreement or arrangement with any province respecting implementation of the multiculturalism policy of Canada. My motion would have the Bill say that the Minister "shall" engage in ongoing dialogue with all provinces and territories respecting implementation of the multiculturalism policy of Canada and so on.

There are two key points to this motion. The first one concerns changing "may" to "shall". The first conference called by the then Minister, the Hon. Member for Lisgar (Mr. Murta), was I believe held in 1985. There have been no other meetings since then. It would have been very valuable and productive to have had a commitment to annual meetings of First Ministers on such an important issue. As it was, it was a one-day wonder and nothing was produced. There was no tangible follow up to that meeting. Had there been another set of meetings in 1986, 1987 and again this year there would have been action on a number of priority items. As it was, it was an initiative by one Minister that simply went nowhere.

The second point of my motion concerns the territories. Right now the legislation stops at provinces. I note that the Minister of State for Multiculturalism (Mr. Weiner) is in the House right now and I applaud him for being here. I ask him to consider adding the word "territories" to the Bill. I ask myself, why leave out two territories when we are talking about a national policy? We sometimes hear calls from the wilderness, if you will, where people feel that they are being left out of the process. There is some justification for that feeling, particularly when we look at the Meech Lake Accord and other issues. This is a case in point. The legislation speaks only to arrangements on multiculturalism with the provinces. I suggest it would be in keeping with this country's history to include the territories in any discussion of multiculturalism.

I hope the Minister and his Government recognize the failure, and I am not saying it was intentional, perhaps oversight is a better word, in leaving the territories out. I ask the Government to remedy that by including the territories in discussions with the provinces.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West) moved:

Motion No. 27.

That Bill C-93 be amended in Clause 7 by striking out lines 37 to 45 at page 6 and substituting the following therefor:

"7.(1) The Minister shall establish a council to advise and assist the Minister on the implementation of this Act and any other matter relating to multiculturalism and the Council shall be constituted as follows:

(a) to be called "Canadian Multiculturalism Advisory Council";

(b) to consist of 56 members with the following distribution; British Columbia-7, Alberta-4, Saskatchewan-3, Manitoba-4, Ontario-16, Quebec-12, New Brunswick-2, Nova Scotia-2, Prince Edward Island-2, Newfoundland-2, Yukon-1, North West Territories-1;

(c) to have an executive committee of 1 member from each province;

(d) to have a membership which reflects the multicultural diversity of Canada;

(e) appointments to the Council shall be made by order in council from among nominees recommended by organizations of ethnocultural minorities and other organizations working in the area of multiculturalism.

(2) The members of the Council shall consult with ethnocultural communities in their provinces on a regular basis and transfer grassroots advice to the Minister.

(3) The Council shall make an annual appearance before the appropriate Committee of the House of Commons.

(4) The Council shall make an annual report to the Minister and a ministerial response to its report shall be made public.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon) moved:

Motion No. 28.

That Bill C-93 be amended in Clause 7 by striking out lines 37 to 45 at page 6 and substituting the following therefor:

"7.(1) The Minister shall establish an Advisory Council to assist the Minister and Government in implementation of this Act and any other matter relating to the multiculturalism policy of Canada.

(2) The members of the Advisory Council shall be appointed by order in council from nominees elected by the various ethnocultural communities and national multicultural organizations."

Mr. Marchi: Madam Speaker, I would like to address my remarks to Motion No. 27, which is one of the last two amendments at report stage. Motion No. 27 refers to the section in the Bill which addresses the Canadian Multiculturalism Council. The CMC, or the advisory committee, is a body established by the Government to advise the Minister of the day on issues affecting the multicultural policy of the country. I have proposed a much more description and, I believe, a much more effective direction to the CMC as it now is.

Clause 7(1) of the Bill says:

> The Minister may establish an advisory committee to advise and assist the Minister on the implementation of this Act and any other matter relating to multiculturalism and, in consultation with such organizations representing multicultural interests as the Minister deems appropriate, may appoint the members and designate the chairman and other officers thereof.

The language is noncommittal. The word "may" is used which does not commit the Minister to any specific action. A different approach to implementation may be taken by subsequent Ministers, thereby confusing the entire CMC as we know it today.

In addition to proposing in Motion No. 27 that "the Minister shall establish a council to advise and assist the Minister", I go to some length in proposing the shape of the Canadian Multiculturalism Advisory Council, the number of members, the issue of an executive committee, the fact that the membership should reflect the diversity of the Canadian mosaic, and that appointments should be made from lists submitted by the various organizations across the country in order to ensure that the people appointed to this committee will reflect the diversity which exists in Canada and will be in touch with the communities which they purport to represent.

These amendments reflect the proposals which were made for the Canadian Multiculturalism Advisory Committee by the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism which the Government rejected.

It is particularly important that we have an executive comprised of one member from each province. This will eliminate having a large organization coming to Ottawa to meet and advise the Minister. I do not think that large numbers are as effective as a smaller group. In Motion No. 27 I suggest that the council be formed of the 56 members which I propose: seven from British Columbia, four from Alberta, three from Saskatchewan, four from Manitoba, 16 from Ontario, 12 from Québec, two from New Brunswick, two from Nova Scotia, two from Prince Edward Island, two from Newfoundland, one from the Yukon, and one from the Northwest Territories. I recommend that only one member from each province and territory form an executive to come to Ottawa. This will reduce the expense and will enhance the effectiveness and efficiency of that body.

The other important element is that appointments by the Minister to the Canadian Advisory Council on Multiculturalism should be rooted in the large number of organizations which are working on behalf of multiculturalism across the country. It is now alleged, unfortunately, that many of the appointments tend to be very political and partisan. In fact the Vice-President, Mr. Peter McCreath, acknowledged, in a paper to which I will be alluding later, that the current CMC is nothing more than an appendix of the current Government.

I am not suggesting that that kind of political partisanship did not take place in previous administrations—it did. I am suggesting that we should rise above that in order to appoint people who can enhance and propel the policy of multiculturalism in the future. I am not suggesting that the current membership of the existing CMC is not interested in multiculturalism. However, there is a perception in the country that they tend toward having a political partisan base.

There is a real concern that members who are appointed to this committee to represent one cultural group or community are not known to that group or community. They ask what is the purpose of having a committee of individuals who are not rooted in the actual communities and cultural groups themselves to advise the Minister and the Government. I believe my amendment would attempt to redress that perception which has existed for a number of years. Our obligation is to eradicate that perception. In that way we will build confidence and a positive perception of government institutions.

Motion No. 27 is an attempt to go beyond the proposition in Bill C-93, to make it more of a commitment so that the Minister will, rather than perhaps, appoint a committee. It is an attempt to root the membership from actual membership lists provided by groups and organizations across the country. It provides for a specific membership allotted to the provinces and territories and that there be an executive committee.

If we follow this course, I believe we will be in better tune with the workings of government machinery and in better tune and synchronization with the aspirations of communities across this country.

Hopefully the Government will see the benefit of such a proposition, which was included in the unanimous report of the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism which urged the Government to reform the area of the advisory committee in a very real and profound way so as to remove the very negative way many people viewed the appointment of individuals to an important body.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Madam Speaker, the last two motions before us for debate deal with the constitution of an advisory body to the Government, particularly to the Minister of State for Multiculturalism (Mr. Weiner). This is a matter of great importance. Given the changes that have occurred in the Bill, presumably on the suggestion of the Minister or the will of government Members, it is particularly important to deal with this matter in a responsible way.

I recognize that the motions with which we were dealing a few moments ago deal with the commitment of the Minister of Multiculturalism's policy and that Conservative caucus members believe the Bill does not need to be strengthened in those areas. However, I want to ask some serious questions of the Minister and seek to persuade him and his colleagues of the possibility of changing their minds on this matter.

When the Bill first came to the House, Clause 7 read: "The Minister may establish a council to advise and assist the Minister on the implementation of this Act and any other matter relating to multiculturalism". When the committee considered this particular clause in the Bill, the Conservative members, who were the only ones present that afternoon, decided to change "council" to an "advisory committee". Frankly, the logic for that never became clear to me. It might be worth the Minister's taking a few moments to explain why an advisory committee would be a preferable change.

The Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) already referred to the long history of a consultative committee on multiculturalism. It became the multicultural council, and the present council has been advising Ministers for some years. While its members have been reappointed and some new ones added since the Government took office in 1984, there has been a good deal of continuity from its first constitution to the present one. It has been an advisory council throughout this period and, admittedly, it has tended to be perilously close to the Minister's pocket in many ways.

It has rarely said anything in public. I believe the only time the multiculturalism council to the present Government said anything in public was when it decided to, I might say, shoot its mouth off in support of the Government's failure to act on Japanese Canadian redress. Many Canadians would regard that as a rather lamentable statement.

While it has done important things for Government, it has not really lived up to the advisory council nature that one would have expected.

Perhaps the Minister is suggesting that since the council does not do much it may as well be turned into an advisory committee, to make it even more in house. The Member for York West quoted, in a document sent to a previous Minister, the vice-chairman's description of the Canadian Multicultural Council as being all Tories working for the re-election of the Government. I want to say quite advisedly that I do not believe that is true of all the members of the CMC. I am certain some of them are not card-carrying members of the Conservative Party, but are members who are really committed to multiculturalism and for whom the re-election of the Government is less important, if I may say, than the realization of the multicultural policy. I suggest that to change the multiculturalism council to an advisory committee seems a rather serious demotion.

What alternatives exist? We are dealing here with two motions. The Member for York West has spoken well to his proposal. I was involved in the elaboration of that proposal as a member of the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism. Obviously, I think his motion is quite good.

I chose not to become involved in the details of numbers and constitution concerned with executive committee and so on. As a member of the standing committee I am not withdrawing my support from those detailed proposals with which the standing committee dealt, and will likely support this motion. In my motion, however, I endeavoured to turn the advisory council to the Minister into a council that would be explicitly advisory to the Minister and to government.

Let me take a moment to read Clause 7 in part as it would read if my motion were accepted. Clause 7(1) would read:

> The Minister shall establish an Advisory Council to assist the Minister and Government in implementation of this Act and any other matter relating to the multiculturalism policy of Canada.

Clause 7(2) would read:

> The members of the Advisory Council shall be appointed in order in council from nominees elected by the various ethnocultural communities and national multicultural organizations.

There is a deliberate attempt in the first paragraph to establish a body that will be advisory to the whole Government, not simply to the Minister. I think that would make it a more public body than has been true of the consultative councils on multiculturalism before and the present multiculturalism council as such. In considering such a body, we might have an expectation of something like the Advisory Council on the Status of Women. In fact, I thought quite explicitly of that model in another area. In that case, of course, there were national organizations which thought it advisable to have an action committee in communities and nationally to ensure that the Government was sufficiently pressed. However, the Advisory Council on the Status of Women has had research capacity. It has, I believe, a full time chairperson and staff who carry on the work. I think that provides a model which is really far preferable than an advisory committee as presently stated in the Bill.

• (1930)

With respect to the second paragraph, I have been quite concerned to ensure this body would relate to the communities. Whether people were all Liberals in the past and all Conservatives now, and I do not suppose it would be either of those situations, what was, I fear, all too often the case was that persons, for whatever reason—primarily, I suppose, they had to be known to the politicians—did not necessarily translate into being well positioned in the communities and well aware of what the people wanted. There was in fact quite a real danger that the persons who made up this so-called advisory council to Government were not equipped in their experience and involvement to be the best of advisers to Government.

Therefore in both of these motions, and in the report of the standing committee, there is an attempt to ensure that these persons will be nominated by the communities and, of course, appointed by Order in Council of the Government of Canada to constitute such an advisory body. In fact, in the case of the Manitoba Intercultural Council there is precisely such a body. The majority of the members of the Manitoba Intercultural Council are in fact members of that council on precisely this basis. That ensures that the council is well grounded in the communities and equipped to speak for them, which I think is the all important thing.

I hope the Minister may comment at least briefly on his own vision of the advisory committee. If the arguments my colleague and I have been making for a different structure were to impress him, perhaps he would be interested in taking up one or the other proposal as he has done once or twice already this afternoon.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The question is on Motion No. 27.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on motion No. 28.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The House will now proceed to the taking of the deferred divisions at report stage of the Bill now before the House.

The first question is on Motion No. 7.

Call in the Members.

● (2000)

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I declare the motion lost.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), on a point of order.

Mr. Gauthier: Madam Speaker, I believe there would be a disposition to apply the vote that has just been held to all subsequent motions and, in reverse, to the concurrence motion.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is there unanimous consent?

An Hon. Member: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): There is not unanimous consent. The Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis).

Mr. Riis: I rise on a point of order, Madam Speaker. I assumed that we would be applying the results of the vote to all subsequent motions at report stage as well as applying it in reverse order to the concurrence motion.

However, if that is not the case, we ought to have another vote on the concurrence motion. Our intention would be to apply this vote to all of the subsequent ones, including the concurrence motion.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Consequently, the vote which has just been taken will be applied to Motions Nos. 8, 10, 12, 14, 15, 17, 18, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, and 28. For the concurrence motion we will be using the same vote but in reverse. Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

An Hon. Member: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I declare the motion lost.

[Translation]

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications), on behalf of the Secretary of State, moved that Bill C-93, an Act for the preservation and enhancement of multiculturalism in Canada, be concurred in as amended.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Minister of State on a point of order.

Mr. Lewis: Madam Speaker, there have been discussions among the Parties. I think you would find consent for third reading to proceed immediately. I have discussed it with the other Parties, and I think that there may be Members who wish to address this matter beyond the hour of ten o'clock. We have agreed not to see the clock at 10 p.m.

We have also agreed that if a recorded division is demanded, such recorded division would be deferred until 3 p.m. tomorrow, and that there will be no quorum calls during that time. In the event that the proceedings should finish before 10 p.m., there would be no further business called by the Government and we would call it 10 p.m.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The House has heard the suggestions of the Hon. Minister of State. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis on a point of order.

Mr. Prud'homme: Madam Speaker, who ever said that the Official Opposition never co-operates in helping process legislation in an easy fashion?

• (2010)

Miss MacDonald (for Secretary of State of Canada) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

Hon. Gerry Weiner (Minister of State (Multiculturalism)): Madam Speaker, I rise today with great pleasure to participate in the final stages of the debate of Bill C-93, the Canadian multiculturalism Bill. I want to tell you how proud I am to be the Minister of State for Multiculturalism during the final passage of this historic Bill.

This is a world-class Bill. It is a first of its kind. It is the solemn recognition by the Parliament of Canada on behalf of all Canadians of the fundamental importance of multiculturalism in our society. It gives concrete expression to the multicultural guarantee contained in Section 27 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. There are so many people I could thank for their work, foresight, and dedication in making this Bill possible, but I would like to single out two of them in particular: Mr. George Corn, immediate Past President of the Canadian Ethnocultural Council—

Mr. Prud'homme: Hear, hear!

Mr. Marchi: Hear, hear!

Mr. Weiner: —whose steadfast dedication for so many years has been an inspiration to so many, and David Crombie who, as Secretary of State, introduced the Bill on December 1 last—

Mr. Prud'homme: A great guy; he was too good and that is why he left.

Mr. Weiner: —and whose vision of being Canadian is a vision which encompasses us all.

I have followed the debate on Bill C-93 from its introduction to today. I have been impressed by the thoughtfulness of the many witnesses who came before the legislative committee. I have also been impressed by the thoughtfulness of the hundreds, yes, thousands of Canadians who have written both to me and to my predecessor. Underlying those submissions was the recognition that now was the time for the Canadian multiculturalism Bill.

Now is the the time for the Parliament of Canada to come together to recognize the multicultural reality of this nation and to celebrate our multicultural heritage.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, we have before us a Bill that provides an approach to multiculturalism based on co-operation, incentive, consensus and choice. We have before us a Bill that is a solemn recognition of what we are building together, all of us, in this great country of ours.

My appearance before the Legislative Committee at the beginning of April was one of my first official functions as Minister of State (Multiculturalism). On that occasion I indicated my intention of working with the Committee to improve and reinforce the Bill and make it more understandable to all Canadians. That is exactly what the Committee has done. It has reinforced the Bill, from the preamble down to the very last clause.

[English]

We were searching for the best way of expressing in this Bill our belief that multiculturalism is part and parcel of our Canadian identity and heritage. I feel that we settled on the best wording, that multiculturalism is a fundamental characteristic of our heritage and our evolving identity.

We sought a way to make even stronger the system of parliamentary accountability which is at the heart of this Bill. I think we found that way by the amendment that the Government of Canada and all its institutions shall undertake their responsibilities relative to the implementation of the multiculturalism policy of Canada. This one simple amendment gives concrete force to the commitment of the whole of the Government of Canada. We have not needed to resort to complex technicalities to deal with what was basically a very simple problem. As I have said, we will have in this Bill a very forceful parliamentary accountability process for the implementation of the multiculturalism policy of Canada. The combination of a Minister directly responsible to Parliament, clearer and more direct obligations for all Ministers and all federal institutions, a professional full-time departmental secretariat, a strengthened ministerial advisory committee, and a key scrutiny role for the standing committee make for a powerful, effective, yet co-operative approach to multiculturalism.

All across our nation Canadians are supporting Bill C-93. They see a Government that has listened and has worked to improve this Bill. They see a Government that is reaching out to all Canadians, offering everyone the vision of a new and stronger Canada. Just last week the Canadian Ethnocultural Council, whose members were all here today and may still be here, I hope, voiced enthusiastic support for this Bill and its speedy passage. They support this Bill because we worked co-operatively with them to strengthen it. This is what accountability to Parliament is all about. We have just proved that this Bill works. It works right now.

Some of my colleagues across the aisle still want some kind of formal commissioner with broad coercive powers. They seek to transplant an organizational model that suits one setting into new ground. What they have failed to recognize is the fundamentally different situation for the implementation of the multiculturalism policy in Canada in comparison with putting in force the Official Languages Act and carrying out the protection of fundamental human rights under the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms and the Canadian Human Rights Act, where the aim is to remedy breaches of legally established individual rights.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the implementation of the multiculturalism policy will build upon many of the above-mentioned factors. Many of the problems Canadians face involve discrimination based on race, colour, and national or ethnic origin, and the Canadian Human Rights Commission has been mandated to meet those problems head-on. The Commitee amended the preamble to Bill C-93 to remind Canadians of the importance of the role of the Commission in the fight against discrimination.

[English]

This Bill encompasses a broad line of commitments, commitments which start in the preamble itself, which are expanded upon and given reality in the broad policy commitments contained in Clause 3(1) of the Bill, and which are made specific obligations for federal institutions in Clause 3(2). The Bill contains a very clear system of responsibilities and accountability for me as Minister and for every one of my ministerial colleagues. That accountability system is to the Parliament of Canada.

I do not feel we need import into this very clear system an external compliance and monitoring agency. Such would be contrary to the very spirit of this Bill. This Bill is about the primacy of Parliament, and surely we in Parliament can monitor our own affairs. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that we are serious about the very heart and specific commitments that we are making. That is why I was delighted to announce that we will be spending $192 million over the next five years to implement the new directions of the multiculturalism policy of Canada, an increase of $62 million in new funds for multiculturalism.

I have reoriented the programs of the multiculturalism sector to reflect the major themes of the Bill. Three areas are paramount: race relations and cultural understanding; heritage, cultures, and languages; and community support programs. That is also why I am establishing a multiculturalism secretariat to assist other federal Departments and agencies to implement the multiculturalism policy and to assist me in my important duty of reporting to Parliament on its implementation.

In our first Speech from the Throne delivered in the autumn of 1984 we identified certain key priorities. Two very important ones were, and remain, national reconciliation and social justice. This Bill before us today is about both these objectives. National reconciliation is all about being Canadian together. We can achieve our dreams. The Canadian multiculturalism Bill is part of this process.

This Bill is also about social justice. It stands as a landmark of a positive and pro-active approach to equality rights. We already have in the Charter, the Canadian Human Rights Act, and the employment equity legislation, a powerful set of anti-discrimination instruments, but we need a pro-active policy approach by the Government on behalf of all Canadians to break down the barriers and misunderstandings that have sometimes kept us apart. That is provided in the Canadian multiculturalism Bill.

We pledge to ensure that federal boards and agencies reflect the multicultural reality of our society. We have kept that promise. In a little over three years we have doubled the number of ethnocultural appointments to important positions on boards, commissions, and agencies of the Government of Canada. We introduced the first numerical objectives for the Public Service for the hiring of visible minorities to strengthen and complement our existing programs for women, disabled persons, and aboriginal peoples. Our employment equity legislation and policies have taken our priority of social justice into the workplace.

Equality of participation is our objective throughout federal jurisdiction: the Public Service, federal contractors, and federally-regulated industries. This Government has been opened up to cultural and racial minorities as never before, and we shall continue to do so. That is fairness and it is a major step toward equality of opportunity, toward social justice, and toward national reconciliation, the things which were and remain key priorities.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, we are crossing the threshold of a new era within our federation. We are also entering into a new era in international relations. The years to come will reveal unprecedented perspectives of growth, prosperity and peace.

Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Multiculturalism Act is another symbol of that new era. It sets the tone. It recognizes our diverse origins, the fact that we and our ancestors come from the four corners of the earth, and it charts the course to be followed by all Canadians.

[English]

During the second reading debate on this Bill, the Hon. David Crombie quoted Dr. Barbara Ward, the noted British economist who has described Canada as the world's first international nation. I would like to take a moment to reflect on what that really means. It means that Canada is in essence a microcosm of the world. Other nations look to us for leadership in the areas of human rights and equality rights.

The passage of this Bill will send a signal to every corner of the globe that Canada truly is a land of equality and opportunity. We will show clearly that Canada is a land which respects and cherishes individual liberty and allows every person the freedom to cherish and maintain his or her own heritage.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, it is with confidence that I call on all Canadian men and women to support the ideals and the principles set forth in the Canadian Multiculturalism Act. They reflect the cultural and racial diversity of our society; they show both where we have come from, and our course for the future.

[English]

This Bill is about co-operation and building together. It is about what makes Canada a very special nation. It is about our future.

The debate on this Bill is drawing to a close in the House of Commons, and I call on all Members from both sides of the aisle to join with me in affirming the principles of this Bill and in supporting this historic piece of legislation. I hope the Members of the other place will give this Bill speedy passage so that very soon the Canadian Multiculturalism Act will be law.

We are a nation of peoples from all corners of the globe. We believe in living together and working together as a family of individuals, and we are secure in our diversity. We are proud of our equality and we are confident in our future.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York-West): Mr. Speaker, I also am very proud to speak on this Bill tonight because the principle expressed in this Bill is very important for our whole nation, for all the regions of our country and for all Canadian citizens who come from all over the world. It is a Bill which is very agreeable to many people throughout the country, but it is a Bill that this Parliament had the opportunity to improve, to strengthen by amendments, and thus to establish as a very sound piece of legislation which we can be proud of and which will guarantee multiculturalism a permanent future in this country.

[English]

I too am pleased to speak on third reading stage of Bill C-93, the Canadian multiculturalism Bill because the principle and the concept which underlie the multiculturalism Bill is one that I believe all Members from all sides of the House subscribe to and will defend and promote. However, the Bill could have and should have been made better.

This multiculturalism Bill was a window of opportunity that would have provided this Parliament, and particularly this Government, with the opportunity to listen to Members of the House of Commons, to members of the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism who tabled a unanimous report, and to the multitude of organizations which came before the Government and the committee to request and demand a number of things that would create the national fabric of multiculturalism in a piece of legislation.

While I agree with the principles and the concepts of the Bill, and while I certainly agree with some fundamental parts of it, I believe very sincerely and deeply that this Government to a certain degree missed an opportunity to try to deliver a piece of legislation that would have captured the imaginations and furthered the aspirations of the current generation of Canadians and would have protected and embodied that enthusiastic support for future generations of Canadian citizens.

Bill C-93 is not a new initiative. It is not a unique undertaking. It had its roots and its beginnings in Bill C-84 which was introduced in the last Parliament and unfortunately died on the Order Paper after first reading because of the impending election. It was introduced by the then Liberal Minister, the Hon. David Collenette. It was not the entire answer. I admit and recognize that, and I have said so in debate in committee and in Parliament in the last number of years. Yet it was an important first step toward recognizing the need for an independent, comprehensive, strong and vibrant multiculturalism Bill which would provide a legislative framework around policies and programs. It would provide that the policies and programs could not be here today and gone tomorrow with another Government. Somehow, they would become part of the legislative foundation upon which this country is built.

I believe the proof of that innovative idea of 1984 was that after the 1984 election, the Hon. Member for Lisgar (Mr. Murta), the then Minister, sent Bill C-84 across Canada to various organizations and communities. He asked them for their input so that together we could build upon the strength of the 1984 legislation and try to correct the weaknesses.

It has been almost four years since this administration took office. This Bill provided the first opportunity we have had to discuss a major undertaking in multiculturalism policy. It has taken quite a while. It has taken almost the entire mandate of this Government to bring this Bill to fruition through a number of successive Ministers.

Beyond the speeches and rhetoric that come along with being an elected representative, beyond the speeches we hear from government Ministers who go across the land to various functions and picnics, I ask myself, as many other Canadians are asking themselves: "What other new directions have been taken in enhancing multiculturalism in the last four years?" What new initiative or expansion of existing programs was announced by the Government in 1984 when it assumed the national leadership of our country? I ask the Government how far the cause of multiculturalism has been advanced beyond what it found when it assumed office?

The answers to those questions go beyond the debate which has taken place over the last number of hours today and the second reading debate some months ago. Apart from that, however, I think there has been a vacuum in innovative and creative leadership on our multicultural policy that has been caused in part by the revolving door of Ministers we have seen in this portfolio during the four years of Conservative government. First, the Hon. Member for Lisgar assumed the portfolio, followed by the Hon. Member for Halton (Mr. Jelinek), then the former Member for Rosedale, and now the current Minister from Montreal. That revolving door of Ministers has not engendered confidence among Canadians in this policy, or encouraged consistency. Each new Minister has different priorities which he or she wishes to pursue. That has not made for a very strong, consistent, or effective multiculturalism policy over the last four years.

I believe the successes of the Conservative Government in multiculturalism policies have been very few and far between. The Government has essentially tried to put its own brand on the directorate and failed. The Hon. Member for Lisgar had his difficulties. The Hon. Member for Halton wanted to introduce a "multiculturalism means business" policy and that did not fly.

Compare all that to previous Governments. Some people have asked why the Bill was not brought in earlier. That is a good question. Why was this not done earlier? Yet if we look at the record of previous Governments and the evolution of the various programs affecting multiculturalism, it speaks to a certain commitment and momentum that went beyond rhetoric.

For example, the first multiculturalism policy was enunciated in this House in 1971 by then Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau. In 1972 we saw the first Minister of State for Multiculturalism appointed. In 1973 was established the Consultative Council on Multiculturalism, the first advisory body to the federal Government on issues pertaining to multiculturalism. Then we had the cabinet decision to offer financial assistance to the performing and visual arts programs and projects. We had creation of the intercultural communications program, creation of the writing and publication program, and creation of the Canadian ethnic studies program.

In 1977 we saw the cultural enrichment program approved by Cabinet. In 1981 we had the first national conference on immigrant women, held in Saskatoon. There was the first national conference on heritage languages. The first national conference on multicultural heritage and education was held in Winnipeg. In 1981 we saw establishment of multicultural centres to allow individual ethnocultural communities to share resources and expertise and also help the voluntary sector organizations working in the area of cross-cultural communications.

In 1981 the Government included in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms Section 15 which prohibited discrimination because of race, national or ethnic origin, colour, or religion. Then of course there was Section 77 which ensured that the Charter would always recognize the multicultural heritage of Canadians. Also in 1981 we saw the national program to combat racism and a new race relations unit was established.

In 1982 Cabinet approved a doubling of the budget from $11.4 million to $25.4 million to allow for new initiatives and new programs in the social development area and to augment support for cultural retention. There was also the first national symposium on race relations and the law held in Vancouver. The first national conference on minorities and the media was held in Toronto. There were guidelines issued on representative depiction of cultural diversity in the advertising of all government Departments, and funds provided for special training courses for visible minority Canadians in co-operation with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

In 1983 the then Minister responsible for multiculturalism introduced a notice of motion for the appointment of a special all-Party parliamentary task force on the participation of visible minority Canadians in Canadian society, to examine the situation of visible minorities and to look for constructive ways of improving race relations. That was approved by Parliament in June of 1983. Following that, we had the report Equality Now, tabled in March of 1984, and the Government response was tabled in June of that same year.

To go back to 1983, the Liberal Cabinet reaffirmed its commitment to cultural retention by tripling the funding and providing for inflationary increases for heritage language funding. New moneys allowed for the production of Canadian teaching materials as well.

Then we had the establishment of the national resource centre for heritage language at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education. There was the announcement of a strategy for inclusion of visible minority Canadians in the affirmative action programs of the Public Service, by the then President of the Treasury Board.

In 1984 there was new emphasis on making all sectors of Canadian society more aware of the multicultural reality which is Canada. There was a national conference focusing on business, communications, and culture. Encouraged by the then Minister, the Canadian Advertising Advisory Board established an informal referral service to advise members on the use of visible minorities in the general field and profession of advertising. New moneys were allocated and funds spent for visible minorities in a disadvantaged position as a result of institutional discrimination and racial biases. Then of course, as I mentioned, there was introduction of the multiculturalism Bill, as well as Criminal Code amendments to strengthen legislation against dissemination of hate propaganda in Canada.

Also in 1984, in co-operation with chiefs of police, there was the first national symposium on policing in a multicultural, multiracial society, held in Vancouver. The Cabinet at that time committed a further $5 million endowment to serve as a continuing and dynamic memorial to the courage and perseverance of the nisei generation of the Japanese-Canadian community, and to support initiatives developed by concerned Canadians to combat systematic racism in our society.

That, briefly and not all encompassing, is an example of what I meant by the evolution and building up of multiculturalism policy by previous Governments. I believe that exercise of establishing a foundation and building upon it has not occurred in the last four years of the current Government, until this piece of legislation was brought forward. Why? Before the last election it was very clear that the then Opposition had very ambitious programs, projects, promises, and dreams for multiculturalism policy.

• (2040)

In fact, on June 2 at a major conference in Toronto, the then Opposition Leader, today's Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), and the first Minister responsible for multiculturalism under the 1984 administration, made 46 different promises in the field of multiculturalism. They talked about cultural retention, the maintenance of liaison between government officials and the directorate, a review, increased funding, and new programs. As I look at the list of promises made, I ask myself how many of these promises were acted upon.

At that particular conference the Hon. Member for Lisgar committed that if he were to become the Minister the budget of the multiculturalism directorate would be doubled. As we debated the Estimates in 1985, 1986, and 1987 we saw that the budgets were, in some cases, lower than in previous years.

The lack of follow-up on promises cannot be better depicted than by the Japanese Canadian redress issue. The then Leader of the Opposition, the present Prime Minister, on the last day of the previous administration in Question Period, criticized the then Prime Minister, the Right Hon. Pierre Elliott Trudeau, for not having gone far enough on the issue of Japanese Canadian redress. The then Opposition Leader made it a national issue, not only by raising it in the national forum but by committing himself, his Party, and his government-to-be to a process of negotiation, apology, and compensation which went beyond what the Government of 1984 was prepared to deliver. He made that a campaign issue and raised it at various campaign stops.

For four years since then the promise has been continuously avoided and ignored. At no time, for instance, did the Prime Minister meet with the National Association of Japanese Canadians despite calls, letters, and urgings from Ministers and members of the Opposition to indicate that he would have been able to offer some mobilization, some encouragement to break the log-jam which has existed for the last four years.

The first Minister of multiculturalism, the Hon. Member for Lisgar, promised negotiations when he came into office and then backed away preferring to hide behind discussions. The Hon. Member for Halton was Minister of State for Multiculturalism at the time. When he addressed this issue it seemed to me that he was more interested in trying to divide that community and in moving away from the commitment made to negotiate with the National Association of Japanese Canadians. Rather than doing that, there were questions about whether the NAJC was the dutifully elected body to speak on behalf of the Japanese Canadian community.

We then had the former Member of Parliament for Rosedale who brought an informal and gutsy approach to his service in this Parliament. I have a great deal of respect for him. In his capacity as Mayor of the City of Toronto he captured, to a certain degree, the imagination of his generation in the sixties and seventies. He brought that refreshing attitude to this Parliament. However, when all the dust had settled on the issue of Japanese Canadian redress, the matter was not moved ahead. It was stagnating in a corner of Canada's Parliament. The current Minister is the fourth Minister to initiate discussions on Japanese Canadian redress.

I am not suggesting that the previous administration was pure on this issue. I disagreed with the previous administration's conclusion about redressing the past. I have tried, in my capacity as a Member and as the critic on multiculturalism for the Liberal Party, to overcome that position. I have tried to send the message that political Parties are able to change, are able to recognize that the policies of a previous time are not meeting the needs and aspirations of the current citizenry and leadership within the Japanese Canadian community. We were prepared to move.

However, the real issue is with the current administration. The previous administration, rightly or wrongly, took a position and defended it. This administration, led by the Prime Minister, took one position before the election and a different position for four years running. There is a question in terms of the acknowledgement, apology, and compensation, and then there is the process. The substance was never given an opportunity to materialize because there was no legitimate process allowed for that substance to be agreed upon.

I tell the Prime Minister, as rumours about an impending election circulate around the country and certainly around this Chamber, that it would do honour, not only to this Government but to this Parliament, to try to put behind us a very sad and sorry chapter in Canadian history, to try to recognize that injustice and to enable the 10,000 to 12,000 Canadians of Japanese ancestry who survive from that time to see the day when the pain in their bodies and souls will, to a certain degree, be eradicated.

I suggest that the process must be given a chance in order for a solution to be reached. The Minister and the National Association of Japanese Canadians must meet and set out the parameters. That must be followed up by negotiations with officials from both parties. Those officials must then go back to their respective organizations and analyse what happened during the bargaining session. The Minister and the national association must then come back together and try to resolve the differences which may still exist.

If there are still differences at that time, the Prime Minister should be involved in order to try to overcome the hurdles and the gulf between the NAJC and the Conservative Minister of multiculturalism. If that is not satisfactory we should consider a third party, be it a committee of this House or a one or two-person commission.

I understand the frustration with yet further study, further commissions, and further committees. However, we need to resolve this issue. It is simply too important to allow it to languish on the Order Paper, in the corridors, and in the endless meetings which have taken place on this issue. This is one issue which must be resolved. It points to the lack of leadership and commitment which has symbolized the multicultural policy of the Government.

Another aspect which deals with resolve and commitment is that of funding for the Department of Multiculturalism. Within a conference back in June, 1984, the Government of the day was saying that immediately upon assuming office it would double the budget of the multiculturalism directorate as did the Liberal Government in the mid-1980s. It was the smallest directorate of any federal Department, with an expenditure of $24 million or $1 per year per person on a per capita basis.

In this year's Estimates we were debating expenditures of a Department that had less moneys granted it this year in the Estimates than in 1985 or 1986. Not only did the Government fail to keep up with the cost of inflation, it failed to keep up with real money from previous years. In the last three to four years communities have pleaded with the Government and expressed their concerns. Members of the Opposition and government members on the standing committee have urged the Government for more funding.

Suddenly, with rumours of an impending election, the Minister has decided to increase the budget. That increase does not necessarily take place this year, but it is a commitment by Parliament for the next five years. Suddenly the Government will increase the funding.

Some may ask why we are complaining if this answers our concerns and the community and the Department are promised more money by the Government. Our complaint is that the budget of this Department continues to be hooked to the roller-coaster cart of an election. For some years the Department's budgets were smaller than those of the previous years. We argued against this in the House and in committee as well as throughout the country. It is quite a coincidence that suddenly the budget is increased right before a general election. The fact that this increase is a commitment by Parliament for five further years is unsatisfactory. I do not know of many other Departments that receive their financial backing in such a manner.

We have argued for a continuing, secure and encompassing set of financial resources to build the infrastructure of a Department that will not have to languish for four years with a budget that increases during election time and comes down the roller-coaster on the other side of the election. That does nothing for program delivery, for efficiency, or for the confidence Canadians will have in a Department that is well run and well managed.

The same can be said for the recent announcement increasing the advertising budgets for the third language media. The third language media plays a significant and increasing role in trying to bring the works of the federal Government and Parliament closer to the readers of their newspapers and to the audiences of multilingual and multicultural radio and television programming. They have been complaining for a number of years about cut-backs by the Government in terms of advertising and that the money has been going primarily to English and French media. They have been complaining that there should be advertisement from all federal government Departments rather than simply the federal multiculturalism Department. The Government has ignored these complaints for three and a half years. Suddenly, again by coincidence, a few weeks ago at a major conference in Toronto the money was found to increase third language media advertising.

I am not arguing against further increases. I am not arguing that those important media outlets should not receive Government support like other newspapers and radio and television stations. I am asking that we try to stop delivering funding to the multicultural portfolio in that fashion, to get away from the short-term frills to buy favour with various constituencies at election time, and to replace it with a more long-term, genuine and comprehensive budget that will probably do more, even if the funds are smaller, than those promised during an impending election.

Not only would we have a program and a Department that could build upon its success, it would go a long way in removing the emotional cynicism that exists in certain quarters of this country about the role of a federal multiculturalism policy. One cannot put a price on the kind of educational direction that would attempt to convert those who may be suspicious of the value and advantage of such a policy.

That confidence was not engendered by the actions of some members of the Canadian Multiculturalism Council, an advisory group of individuals who give of their time and their energies to try to promote and enhance a multiculturalism policy. For the most part, they do a very credible and proud job.

However, that confidence was not instilled when, on February 24, 1986, the Deputy Chairman of the Canadian Multiculturalism Council, Mr. Peter McCreath, wrote a confidential memorandum to the then Minister of State for Multiculturalism, the present Minister of Supply and Services. He basically admitted from his own perception that the Canadian Multiculturalism Council was nothing more than an outreach of the Conservative Government. Clearly, that is not its role.

He stated on page 2 of his memorandum that there were three strains of commonality among the members of the Canadian Multiculturalism Council: "One of them is that they are all committed supporters of the Progressive Conservative Party of Canada, the Government of the Right Hon. Brian Mulroney and the Minister of State for Multiculturalism".

He went on to say: "Our voluntary commitment to the Government and our wish to see it survive beyond the next general election together gives us the luxury of being able to assess the situation and present our recommendations solely in the context of what we truly believe is in the best interest of Canada and of the Conservative Government of the day".

As if that were not enough, he said: "Whatever weaknesses may be inherent in any recommendation to government from the CMC, they at least reflect and form advice and opinion from a selection of the Government's principal supporters across Canada".

That advisory committee to the Government of Canada is there to mobilize that assistance and advice, to percolate those ideas and aspirations from the grass root community organizations and various cultural constituencies across the country. That kind of manipulation, promotion and position by that advisory council is an abuse. That is not the purpose of the CMC. It is not there to protect and support, at any cost and at any interest, the particular political expediencies of one particular Party. The Canadian Multiculturalism Council exists to advise the Government on the best policy of multiculturalism. Yet, when individuals like the Deputy Vice-Chairman articulates very clearly, not once, twice, but three times, in the body of his memo that he considers the CMC as principal supporters of the Conservative Party there is something wrong.

There is something even more wrong when the Minister of the day, the former Member of Parliament for Rosedale, refused to remove that individual, not so the individual would not be able to serve the Government or the country or his interests in the area of multiculturalism, which I am sure he has done, but to send a message to Canadians that the Minister and the Government disavow themselves from the views of this individual. That was not done despite repeated urgings in Parliament, in committee, and in personal correspondence. That is the deep hurt. One would have thought there would have been the political courage to stand up and say: "No, that is not what the CMC stands for".

In September, 1986 some people suggested that that perhaps was an inadvertent slip by one Member and that it was water under the bridge, but we received a document from the Metro Toronto caucus of the Conservative Party. Outlined in a secret memorandum to the Minister was a number of different topics including immigration, internal communication, media, multiculturalism, appointments, prime ministerial and ministerial scheduling. It is a memorandum that is shocking in terms of the recommendations. Under immigration, for instance, the memorandum talks about trying to take advantage of ministerial permits. It states that Canada issued approximately 6,500 ministerial permits in 1985. Of these, only some 10 per cent were issued by the Minister's office. The balance was used by visa officers, CIC, and departmental staff. It states the political potential of ministerial permits is obviously being allowed to fall by the wayside. What this memorandum is saying in between the lines is: "Let us Conservative Members suggest who the ministerial permits should go to in order to help us win some friends".

The memorandum goes on to say that the perception of Tories sidling up to communities in the ethnic areas and opening the floodgates at our borders, as it were, can severely damage enthusiasm for the Party at the traditional grass roots level and thereby nullify any gains in the newer communities. It states that a watchful eye must be kept on the creeping hostility to immigrants which, especially in times of economic duress, is nearly fully dormant and represents a political back lash if acceptable selection standards are not maintained. The Conservative approach to immigration, therefore, must successfully combine intelligence with understanding and selectivity with compassion. Firm but fair was the slogan that was recommended.

The memorandum goes on to talk in terms of the media. It states the long-standing neglect by Tories of the third language press must be reversed before the next general election. That is exactly what happened only a few weeks ago. Good relations with third language media must be achieved if breakthroughs in Metropolitan Toronto's ethnic ridings are to be expected. Ministers, Members, the PMO, and the Party should all contribute to the current political effort aimed at ethnocultural communities and respond to the need to develop a detailed strategy on the federal level pertaining to the ethnic media.

The memorandum goes on to state that the value of the third language media in communicating government policy is generally not recognized. Advertising budgets do not allow for the publicizing of ethnic appointments. MTV suffers from a lack of advertising support from the Government, and given the station's plans to develop into a network, the problem of bad revenue causes considerable political damage.

The memorandum goes on to talk about multiculturalism. The Conservative caucus in Metro Toronto states in the opening paragraph that the committee believes that the articulation of a distinctive Conservative policy on multiculturalism is overdue and as such an urgent priority. Ethnocultural communities must be made to understand precisely why they should give their ballots to the Government rather than to the opposition Parties.

In terms of funding, what I find to be very offensive is the paragraph where the memorandum states that trends in funding of various ethnocultural groups were the next topic examined by the committee. It was stressed that there should be nothing arbitrary about funding cuts or increases. "Liberal funding patterns", whatever that means, "should be disposed of and a politically intelligent PC pattern should take their place. This may be accomplished by a gradual process of funding cuts and reallocations". Some grants managed there are properly reflective of ridings and the ethnic element within them. There was a strong feeling that leadership on grants should come from the caucus and from committees. "Members of Parliament who have access to grant cheques to present at ethnic functions should endeavour to take advantage of such opportunities". The memorandum goes on and on in terms of the very offensive approach and attitude taken in this report toward multiculturalism, appointments, and the role of the Prime Minister in trying to target a number of various ethnic communities that I could read into the record but will not.

I believe it goes to show this Member of Parliament the type of mind-set that exists above and beyond perhaps the general rhetoric that we hear in terms of a multiculturalism Bill.

The former Minister of State for Multiculturalism, the Member of Parliament for Rosedale, initiated the multiculturalism Bill last year, after work was done by the previous two Ministers under this Conservative administration. That Minister was actually opposed in concept to a multiculturalism Bill. Despite the introduction of a Liberal multiculturalism Bill in 1984, despite the commitment of the Members of Parliament for Lisgar and Halton, the former Member of Parliament for Rosedale was against the concept because he preferred—and I suppose the Government preferred it—instead of operating under a Multiculturalism Bill to make amendments to the Citizenship Act under the guise of multiculturalism. They thought that would be good enough.

I believe the former Member of Parliament for Rosedale essentially moved on a multiculturalism Bill only after he discovered that the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism was in fact studying and making a report upon which the major recommendation would be a comprehensive and significant multiculturalism Bill. At that time the Minister shifted his commitment. The committee and various organizations such as the Canadian Ethnocultural Council and others who supported the committee's ideas and visions were really responsible for moving the Government into building from that 1984 Bill and trying to crystallize this piece of legislation in Canada's books.

As I mentioned, the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism, which was representative of all three political Parties, provided a very detailed examination into the whole area of multiculturalism. In the end, it gave the political green light to this Government and to this Minister to proceed on a very comprehensive Bill that would encompass and embody the type of aspirations existing in the country among various member communities. That committee report was not an attempt simply to put on paper a few ideas or to try to stitch together a number of recommendations. It was the product of a very long and detailed process. It was a report that was established after the committee held 16 public meetings and heard from a variety of witnesses, including verbal testimony and briefs from such groups as the Canadian Ethnocultural Council, as well as responses from 20 different federal Departments, about where they thought multiculturalism should go in terms of their respective Departments.

Another major source of input was from the written briefs that the former Minister, the Hon. Member for Lisgar, requested and received from various organizations. These briefs were obtained and distilled as information pertinent to the area of study and reference.

Extensive information on multiculturalism and related policies was also obtained from the multiculturalism sector. A further major source of information was the consultative meeting on race relations hosted by the multiculturalism sector in August of 1986, and other documents. Then, of course, there were the various meetings of the committee in camera to try to digest all this information into a coherent direction.

The committee on the multiculturalism policy, a separate minister for multiculturalism, as well as a separate official multiculturalism commissioner would report to Parliament. There were recommendations built on those three general areas which ran deep in terms of the feelings that communities had and in terms of the goals and objectives that organizations brought to the committee. We made a number of recommendations, 18 in all, ranging from provincial and municipal policies to a separate line Department, to a multiculturalism commissioner, to an Act respecting multiculturalism, and so on. The committee took great pains to try to leave no stone unturned. We made an additional 44 recommendations concerning the Nielsen Task Force that related to multiculturalism and the federal policy.

We talked about a separate Department and not ghettoizing Canadians who were neither of English nor French origin. We talked about a separate line Ministry to offer additional political clout in the corridors of power in Ottawa. We talked about a revamped and separate line Department, not with fundamentally new moneys that would be spent irresponsibly at will but a realignment of existing and old moneys to be combined into a forceful mechanism that would deliver the programs with much greater efficiency and with much greater pride. We talked about bringing the program under the wing of Employment and Immigration, the Department of Secretary of State, Communications and Culture, about bringing it under one roof and referring to it as a separate Department of Multiculturalism.

To move those moneys and those programs under one Department was very symbolic. It would show that the Government of Canada took multiculturalism seriously. It would put it on an even keel with other Departments. It would see the Minister of State become a senior Minister. It would have a Deputy Minister of multiculturalism on an even keel with other Deputy Ministers.

That would not ghettoize multiculturalism as we have heard from the Government. In fact, to keep the status quo, to refuse to think about these reforms, is to ghettoize the multiculturalism policy. This would not be the be-all and end-all in terms of this realigned Department. It would be a transitional point going from a directorate of multiculturalism to a separate ministry to, one day, a Ministry of culture. That would have seen the integration and embodiment of culture and multiculturalism. That would have been the evolution of this Ministry and of this policy rather than allowing it to be jeopardized in one small corner of the federal Public Service. I believe that that type of movement would have crystallized a progressive vision of where multiculturalism is and, more important, where it can go rather than simply saying that to put it in a separate Department would be to ghettoize it. The inverse is correct.

In terms of an independent commissioner of multiculturalism, the committee was very forceful. We believe that an independent commissioner would get away from the partisanship of the annual report of a Minister. One Minister rarely slaps another whose Department may not be up to speed in terms of the policy of multiculturalism. This would get away from the fact that the Minister does not have the time, the resources or perhaps the willingness to go through the Public Service, Crown corporations, or public institutions, to ensure that their hiring practices and programs reflect and are in keeping with Canada's multiculturalism policy. The commissioner would be accountable to Parliament, not to a Minister, the Department or the Government, and through Parliament to the people. That is what the committee envisioned.

I ask myself why the Government was so fundamentally opposed to the concept of an official multiculturalism commissioner. Why are we in favour of an Official Languages Commissioner? Why are we in favour of giving additional powers, ones which we passed only last week, to the Official Languages Commissioner to investigate various complaints made with respect to our official bilingualism policy? If we had not seen fit back in the 1970s and only last week to recognize the value of having an Official Languages Commissioner, and if we recognized that official bilingualism would not be possible unless we had a proper bureaucratic structure for it, along with a proper budget and a proper Act, then bilingualism would not be the reality that it is today. As a citizen back in the 1970s I supported that policy. I was proud to stand up in my place last week to vote in favour of Bill C-72. Bilingualism is a fundamental characteristic of the country. If we say that multiculturalism is a complementary fundamental characteristic of the country, as are its aboriginal people, then why is the Government so much opposed to the concept of an independent commissioner?

In the amendments which were rejected in committee and in our pleas to the Minister we missed an opportunity to establish such a commissioner. If the Bill goes through this evening, as I believe it will, and when it receives approval from all sides of the House, as I believe it will, then the whole discussion of a separate line Department and the whole discussion of an official multiculturalism commissioner must be at the top of the priorities list when we try again to improve and to build upon this multiculturalism Bill.

I am saddened that we have not done it in this first window of opportunity. The possibility was there. It was particularly there among the members of the standing committee. It was there within the constituencies. It was there within the major organizations which tried to lobby the Government in terms of delivering the aspirations that they knew existed in their communities. There was a national consensus. I feel saddened that the Parliament of Canada, and in particular this Government, was not able to harness that consensus and pass those very important parts of the committee report.

Not only were the recommendations of the Opposition or various Members of Parliament ignored, but also the recommendations a number of major organizations. Most of them are voluntarily organizations whose members give up their time and energies to meet on Saturday afternoons, travel to Edmonton for their annual meeting, or come to Ottawa for consultations to meet with Members, Ministers, and bureaucrats. They too were not listened to.

I was somewhat amused when the Minister of State for Multiculturalism (Mr. Weiner) stated that here was a Government that was prepared to listen and to act. That is not the case with respect to the recommendations, studies, and statistics that were drafted and presented to the Government.

One of those major organizations, the Canadian Ethnocultural Council, a number of whose representatives are in the gallery this evening and watching this debate on Bill C-93, in a major report dated April, 1988 made a number of very important recommendations and suggestions for amending Bill C-93. In its executive summary on page 1 it stated: "the Bill is currently a statement of wishes and ideals. The amendments we are suggesting will ensure that the Bill is meaningful and effective". The Council went on to provide three priority resolutions: the whole question of fundamental characteristics, which we were able to achieve today in a spirit of co-operation from all three sides; a clear commitment to implement the multiculturalism policy in Section 3.2, which was not delivered upon; and the monitoring of the implementation of the Act by an independent officer modelled along the same lines as the Official Languages Commissioner, which was not acted upon. Those are the three major recommendations.

The council also has a summary of recommendations from 1 through 14. How many of those recommendations found themselves into the finality of this Bill? The Council also listed other issues that it considered important in terms of crystallizing important concepts in principle in the Bill: the question of multiculturalism funding; the question of a separate Department; the question of the charitable tax status; and the question of the cabinet committee on multiculturalism, and a multicultural institute.

The Minister stated that he listened. He certainly did not listen very much to this report or to any other major report that tried to move the Government in recognizing that national consensus.

Then there are the committee hearings. First, the Government did not want to send Bill C-93 to the permanent Standing Committee on Multiculturalism. It preferred to send it to the legislative committee. In my humble and respectful submission, it received very shoddy treatment. From the first day of the meeting of the legislative committee it was very apparent to me that the priority of that legislative committee, dominated by Conservative Members of Parliament, was simply to get this Bill back into the House for report stage as quickly as possible and at any cost.

Witnesses were not allowed to come before the legislative committee. Scores of witnesses wrote in stating that they would like to present recommendations. They were not allowed to appear. Many witnesses said: "If you are not going to allow us to appear, then have the committee travel and come to see us". That was also refused. In this first major multicultural legislation in four years witnesses from across the country were denied legitimate and justified opportunities to give their input and recommendations.

The committee was in such a hurry that it closed off debate and did not want to listen to any further witnesses. When my colleague, the New Democratic critic on multiculturalism, was not able to attend a drafting session of the amendments, the committee did not even have the respect to hold a meeting the next day in order that my hon. friend was able to attend. That is how quickly the Conservative Government wanted to get this Bill back into the House. The opposition amendments were moved in committee by government Members to attempt to defeat them in order that those amendments would not be able to see the light of day during report stage.

I do not think that that speaks highly of the motives and of the genuine interest in upgrading and amending and offering an input in partnership with constituents and organizations that enhance multiculturalism. They are the people in the trenches outside Parliament who translate the policies that we talk of into a crystallization of reality on the streets of this country. I say those things, not as a Member who is simply attempting to "cry the blues" but as a Member who is trying to have the public recognize that the process followed in this first multicultural legislation was very different from the course and the processes that have been followed in other pieces of legislation, which in some cases although important legislation were not as significant to the national fabric as this particular piece of legislation. In my opinion that process was not honoured to allow maximum participation of constituents to enhance and better a piece of legislation.

I am pleased that the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport (Mr. Charest) is present. I look forward to hearing his debate. I am sure that he is not familiar with the process that took place. If he has any questions he can rise.

Mr. Charest: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There is a rule in the House that has been long established and usually respected by Members of Parliament that when they address an issue or a piece of legislation they make their remarks pertinent to the piece of legislation.

I wish to point out that the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) has made so many long and vented complaints about the Government and partisan remarks that I do not think he is serving well the multicultural community that he pretends to serve. His real objective is to discredit the Government, and that has become very obvious. We can only regret the fact that he has made such a cheap issue out of a piece of legislation which he from time to time pointed out was the first of its kind. The Government and other Members from all sides of the House merit some congratulations, but instead we get this type of rhetoric.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Minister may want to enter debate. That was not a point of order. The Hon. Member for York West.

Mr. Marchi: Madam Speaker, I make no apologies to that Member or to any other Member for my actions and my commitment. I look forward to him rising on debate and respecting other Members. I look forward to his vision of the contributions of multiculturalism. I encourage him to rise as an individual and have the courage of his own convictions rather than take cheap shots and then return to signing his mail for his own Department, as much as that is important to do. I ask the Hon. Member to rise and discuss multiculturalism and to show the House his commitment, actions, and philosophies. If he wants to take shots at Members of this House, if that is his preference or obligation, I encourage him to do so.

Mr. Charest: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I do not wish to belabour the point, but the fact is that I think the same rule to which I referred a couple of minutes ago applies. The Hon. Member should keep his remarks relevant to the question before the House. I might add that we have a very competent and good Minister of multiculturalism whose remarks I fully adhere to.

Mr. Marchi: Madam Speaker, I apologize. The Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport is quite correct. My comments were irrelevant when I referred to him. He pointed out that I should get back to relevancy, and I will do so.

The other aspect that I wanted to point out was that the proof of the discontent is not only lodged with members of the Opposition or Members on this side of the House. One only has to look at a number of witnesses and organizations that have commented on Bill C-93. I draw the sports Minister's attention to these individuals. Are these individuals wrong as well? Are these individuals and organizations also misguided?

We have individuals like Lorne Waldman of the Jesuit Centre for Social Faith and Justice, who said: "I am in agreement with the position taken by the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism and am in particular in agreement about the need to create a Commissioner for Multiculturalism. I believe that the role of such a Commissioner ought to be clarified and strengthened".

Dr. Bhausaheb Ubale, Commissioner for the Canadian Human Rights Commission, said: "The proposed Multiculturalism Act changes nothing and it is not historic as the Minister calls it. It is purely symbolic. It is old wine in a new bottle."

Daniel Iannuzzi, President of Multilingual Television and editor of a weekly Toronto Italian newspaper, Corriere Canadese, said: "What we need is the recognition that multiculturalism is an integral part of Canadian society—the Bill does not allow for such an interpretation."

The Ontario Advisory Council on Multiculturalism and Citizenship said: "The decision not to establish a Ministry as it was recommended by the standing committee is unacceptable and it only demonstrates the lack of leadership commitment for multiculturalism as a fundamental goal for Canada."

Michael Lanphier, for the Refugee Documentation Project of York University, said: "It is recommended that a new Department of Multiculturalism become the lead Ministry in negotiating an enhanced role for multiculturalism in every federal department".

The Ontario Council of Agencies Serving Immigrants said: "The establishment of a Commissioner of Multiculturalism along the lines of the Office of the Commissioner for Official Languages, could greatly assist in monitoring and encouraging the implementation of a multiculturalism policy."

The National Congress of Italian Canadians said: "We believe a Commissioner of Multiculturalism will bring the important elements of visibility and a greater accountability to the implementation of multiculturalism policies."

Lewis Chan, President of the Canadian Ethnocultural Council—and formally he made the statement when he was vice-president—said: "It is a shining symbol, and certainly a step forward, but it is a symbol without substance."

The Canadian Multilingual Press Federation said: "By implementing only one of the major recommendations of the committee report, the Government is offering Canadians virtually nothing new from the policies established in 1971."

The Canadian Hellenic Congress said: "David Crombie has rejected the idea of a new Department of Multiculturalism. The current treatment of multiculturalism policies within the Government of Canada is unfocused and underfunded. We doubt that the passing of the proposed Act in its present form will do much to focus or strengthen such policies."

The Hellenic-Canadian Federation of Ontario said: "We are profoundly disappointed by the Government's recent legislation on multiculturalism. We are displeased by this action of the federal Government, which undermines the work of the standing committee, and amounts to nothing more than window-dressing. Indeed, it simply reiterates what exists in federal practices. Unfortunately, there is nothing in the recent draft legislation on multiculturalism of substance for the people of this country."

Those are some of the comments, not of opposition Members but of organizations, of living and breathing entities in our constituencies and across our country that have a deep feeling, as deep a sense of feeling for this policy as any individual in this House. Those kinds of statements were also reflected by a number of the major medias. One has to read the headlines in major medias like The Ottawa Citizen, which call this Bill an empty promise on multiculturalism. It said, "This Bill will be a disappointment to Canadians from all ethnocultural backgrounds. It fails to give teeth to the fight against prejudice and racism and, on the other hand, it makes an irresponsible promise on language that could rekindle old arguments. In sum, it is a mish-mash of circle squaring ambiguity and clumsy opportunism."

The Globe and Mail: "Multiculturalism bill gets cool welcome". The Montreal Gazette: "Multiculturalism bill ignores proposals by panels of MPs". The Vancouver Sun: "Ethnic bill called symbol over substance". The Vancouver Sun: "Ethnic bill gets mixed reviews". The Telegraph-Journal from New Brunswick: "Multiculturalism bill criticized". The Globe and Mail: "A multicultural mist". The Star-Phoenix from Saskatoon: "Multiculturalism legislation ignores major recommendations". The Chronicle-Herald from Nova Scotia: "New multiculturalism act short on means to implement programs". It goes on and on.

Again, these are not commentaries from members of the Government or on the opposition side; these are from individual organizations and media outlets across the country that have taken a look at this piece of legislation and have made a commentary.

I wanted to summarize some of my thoughts and try to crystallize in a few words what one has experienced over the last three and a half years in this administration leading up to this Bill. The concept of the multiculturalism Bill and the Canadian Multiculturalism Act was an important and significant one. I am saddened to witness that that window of opportunity was not utilized in a more profound way and in a more genuine fashion, in a way that there was a national consensus in the community and within Parliament.

I believe, notwithstanding those shortcomings, that it would be somewhat irresponsible for Members of this House or political Parties to try at the very least to deny the creation of a new Bill and of an Act. As I have stated—and it is very obvious—I would have preferred, as many other organizations, to be able to stand this evening and pass and approve a multiculturalism Bill that came a lot closer to reflecting the aspirations and desires of a country and of a collection of ethnocultural organizations from one coast to another.

I suppose that those ideas and visions that are not embodied and encompassed in today's Bill will become a reality that future Parliaments and a future Government may wish to have and hopefully will be successful in attaining.

I am pleased to have at least played a small part in the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism that tried to show the way for this Government to follow. I am also proud to say that it was a very co-operative committee including Members from all sides who I believe worked very well together. I also commend the members of the Government on the committee for having stayed the course and for having proposed and worked with members of the Opposition in providing a unanimous committee report that really showed the way which the Government should have embraced.

Notwithstanding that, I am pleased to have participated on that committee. I recognize that there is much more work to be done in the area of this multiculturalism Bill. I suppose the constituencies and the member organizations will see this as a start, as a beginning that needs to be worked upon as the initial foundation to hopefully what will become a much more durable, encompassing and dignified Bill, an Act that reflects the aspirations and the work of Canadian citizens from all walks of life, from all backgrounds in Canada, right across the regions and territories.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Madam Speaker, perhaps Members will allow me to comment on how pleased we all are that I am restricted to 20 minutes—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): —and will have to be concise. I know, Madam Speaker, that you wished I had unlimited time because I could use it well. I shall endeavour in a few minutes to consider the question that faces us on the third reading of Bill C-93 as the position we want to take.

Beginning more seriously with my observations, I feel honoured to speak at third reading debate on Bill C-93 on behalf of my colleagues and to consider the place that we should give to this Bill in the evolution of Canada's multicultural policy. We were very critical of the Bill at various points. That was true as we began consideration of the Bill at report stage.

Even though we have reached debate on third reading this evening immediately following report stage consideration, it is necessary to step back a bit and consider what we have been doing and what we have as the end result. We have to say that the Bill could do much more but, as everyone will concede, half a loaf is better than none. My friend, the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi) spoke of a window of opportunity. I am not very inclined to that kind of language. I think we could have seen another Government doing it much better. I would have liked to see a New Democratic Government providing the kind of multiculturalism Bill that would give structure and strength and put the policy in action, but we have not been given that opportunity by the people of Canada.

Mr. Charest: And you had such a good start to your speech.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): We are in the seventeenth year of the multiculturalism policy. This is the first time we have had a Bill carried to this extent. Given the years in which the Liberal Governments did not produce and what the Conservative Government has chosen to put forward, we are considering it in that kind of context.

It would be appropriate to recognize the fact that we are a nation that requires a multiculturalism policy. Surely recognizing that it is in the seventeenth year of the policy that we are debating, we can look back and recognize that in 1971, when the policy was announced in Parliament and accepted by all of the Parties represented at the time, there was a recognition of diversity of this country which made it necessary to move beyond the establishment of the policy of official bilingualism to provide for diversity that involved other elements.

As a matter of fact, in those years the people of Canada began to realize—we discovered last week that they still do not all realize it, by any means—that Canada could not exist simply as an English-speaking country and accepted a policy in which the federal Government would seek equality of French with English. Governments moved very quickly to recognize that it was not possible to see the country in bicultural terms. In those same years during which the policy of official bilingualism was established, the people of Canada began to recognize that there were fundamental realities, elements one might even say, in terms of the aboriginal peoples of this country who would go on and not be assimilated and who asserted their distinctiveness. We have been involved in these years since 1969 and 1971 in coming to grips with that.

We recognize that the policy of official bilingualism found expression in a Bill as early as 1969, and that a Commissioner of Official Languages was established to ensure that the policy of official bilingualism would be respected by federal institutions. It has never been easy work. Commissioners have often faced challenges in government and outside government in asserting that policy, but there was a commitment to it. I think one can relate those events of 1969 to 1971 and the succeeding years and the limited action that occurred on multiculturalism with events of the 1980s when, in the course of constitutional renewal following on the referendum in 1980 and the development of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, repatriation of the Constitution occurred. In the initial drafts there was not provision for the aboriginal peoples, nor any recognition of multiculturalism.

Those elements were added to the Charter. In Section 27 we have the important statement that the Charter shall be interpreted in such a way that it preserves and enhances Canada's multiculturalism heritage. At that point the Province of Quebec was left out of developments. Though the policy of official bilingualism was established in the Charter, there still remained work to be done.

Obviously I do not have time this evening to do anything like justice to what has occurred in the last year or two in this area, but there are many questions. I mention this as a way of suggesting a completing of the process in recognizing the linguistic duality of our country as a fundamental characteristic and making other provisions for the history of Québec within Canadian society. That struck many people as inadequate. I mention it this evening because at report stage on a Bill that did not deal properly, so many people felt, with the fact of ethnocultural racial diversity in this country, we have succeeded by one means or another through the co-operation of the three Parties in having fundamental characteristics put into the Bill. That is a very important achievement, and one of the developments out of report stage that allows me to be less critical of the Bill than I was when it was first tabled back in December, 1987.

It remains that though we have made various kinds of progress in recognizing diversity in our country, it was as late as 1987 that we had a Bill, and it is as late as 1988 that we are debating this particular Bill which still has the kinds of limitations that force one to speak of half a loaf and is reason to leave too many Canadians still feeling that the Government of Canada does not recognize diversity in anything like the way it should.

Perhaps I can consider the evolution of ideas about multiculturalism in this Parliament and relate those critically enough to the Bill again, because that too is appropriate at third reading debate. Suddenly in June, 1985 we had a standing committee struck. That was an important development however it occurred. I would like to have the inside story of that told to me sometime, but the standing committee was struck and got to work. It succeeded over the next two years in developing the agenda for multiculturalism policy in a report that was supported by all members of the committee and issued in June, 1987. The standing committee made recommendations on the means that we saw the Government of Canada requiring in order to take in all the fine principles of 1971, all our perceptions of diversity in this country. There was a need to ensure that the Government of Canada respected that diversity.

As the Hon. Member for York West has already noted, among the most important suggestions is the proposal for a full-fledged Department of Multiculturalism with a Minister and a Deputy Minister. We have a proposal for a commissioner of multiculturalism who would ensure that this Department, all other Departments of Government, and all federal institutions would respect the policy first enunciated almost 17 years ago and only now being legislated. There were proposals for a genuinely representative advisory council, for a centre for multiculturalism.

These various proposals are the ones that I had in mind at the outset in saying that another Government might have seen—though the Liberals for years past had not and the Conservatives have declined to see it—the challenge and have acted on it in a full and significant way.

What happened in committee represented a refusal by the Government to act on the understanding that all the members of the standing committee had arrived at. After all, that committee, like all the other standing committees, was composed of seven members: five government members, one Liberal and one New Democrat. Private members in the government caucus had come to realize the necessity of these institutions.

When the report was released, it was distributed widely in Canada. I took the liberty, after some of the events including the refusal in the committee to face up to the experience of racism in Canadian history, which left me in no doubt that we had to say these things and to press for firm action by the Government on multiculturalism, to issue my own minority report entitled "The Living Diversity: Multiculturalism for All". It was designed to comment on the work of the committee and to press on the report.

These reports were circulated widely in Canada. Then the Standing Committee finally began its consultations to learn what persons in the various provinces and the great cities of our country thought about our recommendations, the extent to which they supported them. When we began that process in the City of Toronto, we found ourselves being upstaged by this Bill, Bill C-93, which the Government suddenly tabled. This Bill declined to take up the challenge in the way all the members of the standing committee thought it should.

At those first sessions in Toronto we found group after group supporting our report and critical of what the Government put forward. It was felt to be largely a symbol, as the now President of the Canadian Ethnocultural Council, Lewis Chan, said so very well at the time. Many of those who appeared before us had these things to say.

The National Congress of Italian Canadians pointed to the subversion of the consultation process that was taking place and the fact that the Government had tabled a Bill which laid out a much more restricted and constrained statement of multiculturalism than the standing committee had wanted. There could be little doubt that the attempt to achieve a large statement of multicultural policy and to provide the machinery required to ensure that it is respected across all the institutions of the federal Government had failed.

In the work of the legislative committee there were similar shortcomings. There were suddenly constraints put on the number of witnesses we could hear in Ottawa. Suddenly we were rushed into consideration of amendments and that whole sorry process of defeating a large number of amendments in my absence and in the absence of the Liberal member of the committee took place. I will not make very much of that because report stage in the House today compensated for what went wrong in committee. That is why the process has taken the time it has in the House today. It is because the committee process was abused.

The reality is that this country cries out for action on a multiculturalism policy. The demographic realities of the country and the diversity of our great cities, a diversity that is being added to as Canada continues to respect its place as a country to which refugees, persons in danger of life and limb, can come, cry out for this multiculturalism policy. As immigration continues and as the great cities and regions of Canada become more and more diverse, society cries out for the policies to which we are supposedly giving our support in this Bill. Yet, there is so little in the way of assurance beyond what is given to us in language as weak as Clause 6, for example, which provides that Ministers of the Crown other than the Minister "shall", in the execution of their respective mandates, take such measures as they consider appropriate to implement the multiculturalism policy of Canada. I suppose Ministers never take action that they consider inappropriate, but to have an invitation to find things inappropriate in the very language of a Bill leaves me gravely concerned about what we are doing.

This, of course, is the context within which one has finally to decide what to make of the Bill, what kind of position to take. I note that there has been a good deal of support, although sometimes I wonder about the support that there has been in the ethnocultural communities. Who can blame them? They have watched for years while the Liberals did nothing until they brought out that draft in 1984 which was so much weaker than this Bill. Nothing happened and then there were three years or more of this Government. One cannot blame anyone in the communities for thinking that they had better grab what they have now.

The Hon. Member for York West put a number of things in a critical light by quoting all kinds of persons. Of course, I put my critical observations on the record last December. The Canadian Ethnocultural Council was very critical of the Bill at the time, as the Hon. Member knows.

In nearing the conclusion of my comments, I think it is appropriate to note that the Canadian Ethnocultural Council put out a release on Tuesday of last week in which it announced its support for Bill C-93 and urged all three Parties to ensure early passage of it. The President, Mr. Lewis Chan, said:

> Bill C-93 is much stronger today than when it was introduced seven months ago. It is a now in a form that we can support and in a form that we would want to see entrenched in law. The Government and opposition parties have listened to us and improvements have been made.

The release goes on to note three priority amendments. The first is a stronger commitment to implement multiculturalism, the priority involved in the change from "should" to "shall" in Clause 3. Second is the importance of having "fundamental characteristic" rather than "fundamental element" in the Bill. As I have already said, we finally achieved that this afternoon.

Third, there is the concern about an independent mechanism such as a commissioner to monitor the Act's implementation. The reality is that we failed in that area. We failed not so much because the Government was unwilling to spend the money, it seems. The Minister will have five officials in his Department involved in monitoring across the Government to ensure that Departments respect the policy. This is obviously an attempt to provide push from the Minister's quite junior position within the Department of the Secretary of State, and it is a long way removed from the kind of independence the Commissioner of Official Languages has.

We have quite simply failed to move the Government in these areas. We clearly have at best—a phrase I have used other places and it would only be fair to use it here—the first half of what could be quite a good Bill. As far as it goes, it is a pretty good piece of legislation and that is reason for supporting it.

My colleague talked about a window of opportunity. As I said before, I am not prepared to go so far as to use that phrase. The fact remains that a Government has chosen to bring forward a Bill which does at least this much in the way of legislating multiculturalism. For that reason, my colleagues and I intend to support the Bill and to vote for it.

We have no illusions about what we have actually accomplished. We still fear that we are far too close to symbolism rather than to real power in achieving multiculturalism. Few things could impress me as strongly in this area as the process in which we have been involved in the Standing Committee on Multiculturalism over the last months of trying to come to grips with what began when the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) sent a letter to provincial premiers urging them to boycott events organized by three Canadian Sikh organizations. The committee has attempted to meet with the Minister to have him clarify what he is about. He continues to insist that it is entirely a matter of terrorism and has gone to another committee instead of coming to meet with us.

We have endeavoured to force the Minister and to press the Department to recognize that he is not dealing simply with Canadian Sikhs but with other communities: Armenian Canadians, Ukrainian Canadians, Baltic Canadians. I think the Department of External Affairs has failed the Canadian people and has refused to respect multiculturalism as a commitment of the Canadian Government. It has done that time after time. When the Minister refuses to appear, continues to show contempt for us, sends the Associate Undersecretary of State for External Affairs—actually, we demanded that he come—who is constrained by the strait-jacketing that such officials experience when they speak in public, then that is just one more piece of evidence of why we need much stronger legislation. It also illustrates why, although I will vote with my colleagues in supporting the Bill for what it does, the next Government will face the challenge of achieving what the ethnocultural communities of this country want.

I recognize the constraints on time and the fact that you have been generous with me for an extra minute or two, Madam Speaker. Thank you very much for the opportunity to say these things about the Bill. We are doing something that people will regard as historic. Given that, why should those efforts be as limited as they are so very often in this country? Why can Canadians not achieve the kind of greatness they want and have achieved in multicultural policy?

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Questions or comments? Debate.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Madam Speaker, I am sorry, but I did understand that according to the agreement we concluded earlier, everyone would get a chance to express his point of view on this Bill today. I know it is late. I understand my colleagues' impatience. I will try not to impinge on their time, and I will even endeavour not to use up all of the time allotted to me. But still, as a parliamentarian, and I am probably among those who have served the longest here, I would like to make a few brief historical references to ensure that Canadian men and women who are listening to us, and Quebecers among them, understand fully that the process of building Canada is an ongoing, daily affair.

Before I make those remarks, however, I would like to very succinctly—and this is probably the specific reason which led me to ask for the floor—pay tribute to my colleague and friend the Member for York-West (Mr. Marchi) for the truly extraordinary work he has accomplished not only in the course of the past four years in Parliament but in all of the tasks which the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) entrusted to him. He has discharged his duties in a remarkable way. His single-minded diligence could almost serve as an example for his colleagues, and I think he will not mind, nor will he take it as a form of misplaced paternalism if I pay tribute to him tonight and thank him on behalf of my party for the extraordinary effort he expended in his work.

As you know, Madam Speaker, and I will not attempt to be a historian tonight, this land of ours was at first Indian and Eskimo land, became a French and then a British colony, moved quietly toward partial autonomy and then obtained its independence and was governed by a great Prime Minister; all of our prime ministers were great in their own way.

He wanted to make his mark on the Canadian character of our institutions. We experienced . . . I experienced the era of the Laurendeau-Dunton Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism. And so two languages and two cultures were to flourish in Canada, under Mr. Pearson.

Notice this development: two languages and two cultures. As though our first citizens simply did not exist! Make no mistake, we have a heavy responsibility to our first citizens. They may have been unhappy recently because they felt excluded from Meech Lake, and I will come back to that in a few minutes, but things must be seen in the context of the evolution of our country. Mr. Pearson felt, at that time, that there was a problem and called on eminent persons such as Jean-Louis Gagnon, Jean Marchand, André Laurendeau, Mr. Dunton, and several others to take a close look at this Canada that was evolving over the years and to attempt to define it.

Then there was the great Canadian flag debate, to make the flag authentically ours, which takes nothing away from the devotion some may feel for the flag of others.

Then there was the national anthem. I was directly involved as a member of the committee chosen by Mr. Pearson. It took 15 years until Canada's national anthem, which had been sung since 1880, was made official, as the committee recommended, in 1980.

Then came Mr. Trudeau, and I want to pay him tribute. In the early 1970s, he said, "Yes, bilingualism and biculturalism!" But there is something new in Canada, a growing phenomenon that enriches us, namely the contribution of other communities. We therefore proclaimed that it would be better for this country, which we wanted to be bilingual and bicultural, to be known as bilingual and multicultural. It is a policy I believe in, one that I defend in French in Quebec. It is not easy and that is why I do so in French.

[English]

I just said in French that it is sometimes not easy to defend multiculturalism in the province of Québec. I believe, and I repeat again, that if my name were "Prudomski" or "Prudomian" I would not understand why I should be less Canadian than those beautiful young Pages with us tonight who may be of English or French origin. We are all going to be equal and happy on an equal footing or we will not have a harmonious Canada.

How do we manage to have that harmonious Canada? It is true that the continuation of the Canadianization of our institutions has helped. After having proclaimed that Canada was bilingual and multicultural, we saw the repatriation of the Constitution and the creation of a Charter of Rights which is not yet complete. As long as you have in the Charter a clause saying "notwithstanding", we know it is not a complete charter. Any Government, federal or provincial, could use it, but hopefully not abuse it, until some day we amend that part of our Charter of Rights.

Then we have Meech Lake. That is not perfection on earth. Many people feel left out. However, it is a step toward a better Canada, a greater Canada, and a more Canadian country, more Canadianization of our institutions. It is going to be unique, so I am not going to quarrel with the Minister and the Government, saying that this piece of legislation could be better. It is not a finality, it is a step in the right direction.

I hope that Canadians will understand that the true meaning of the step which we have before us tonight is to remind Canadians to have the sensitivity to understand the feelings of others, to make them equal partners regardless of their colour or origin. If this piece of legislation helps, I will do as my colleague from the NDP and our able critic, the Member for York West (Mr. Marchi), has done and vote for it. Even though we may have liked it to be different, it is a step in the right direction.

The French and English call themselves the two founding nations just as though the Indians and Eskimos did not exist. I find this expression a little bit arrogant. Max GrosLouis is a proud Indian leader in the City of Québec from the Hurons. He always laughed when he heard me make big speeches about the two founding races. He looked at me from his height of almost six feet six, he clapped his hands and said, "Ha, ha, ha, where do I fit in this?" That really affected me. I realized that I lacked sensitivity to the Indians and I learned more about them, I learned to include them and to respect them.

What about those who came after the French and the English? They are so numerous now. We have an example in Toronto, everyone wants to be a candidate. I thank them because they want to take an equal part in the process. My colleague from Holland, who is not in our Party yet, is smiling. This is the new Canada that we are building together. There will be an election called soon, maybe this week, maybe next week, maybe next spring. There will be new candidates from new countries to which we are not accustomed in this House of Commons. We will have to adjust.

Mr. Oostrom: I hope they will be allowed to buy memberships.

Mr. Prud'homme: I do not want to reduce this very important debate to the gutter. I will discuss that later. The Member may make comments on my speech after I am done.

I welcome ahead of time the new Canadians who are going to run for office. Who knows, I may not be here to do so when they arrive. I know they are going to help build a new Canada. They must feel equal regardless of their name, their country of origin, the colour of their skin, or the God to which they may like to pray, or even if they choose not to pray. That is the kind of Canada we must learn to build together.

If legislation such as the Bill we are about to vote on helps Canadians to reflect, that is good. It is permissible to dream. While I am speaking I am thinking of one of my passionate dreams, which is that maybe someday we will not need this kind of legislation, that there will be a day when Canadians have learned to respect each other so much that we will not need such legislation. We will understand that it is natural to allow Canadians to run for any office, to have the feeling that they are as important as anyone else, that they have as much chance as anyone to be nominated to any position. That is the feeling that we must develop together.

I know the Minister very well and he is not going to say that this legislation is imperfect, he will say that it is outstanding. However, I have learned to be more "conservative" as I have gotten older. This step will have to be ameliorated in the future by others.

Many amendments were put forward by the multicultural groups of Canada and were not accepted by the Government. Many amendments were put forward by my colleague, the Member for York West, and the critic from the third Party. Regardless of the fact that they were not accepted, we will vote for the Bill.

I hope that by attracting the attention of Canadians to such legislation we will also bring to their attention the importance of respecting people who are not of French or English origin. Those of French and English backgrounds have a responsibility, not only to respect the newcomers but to remember that when the French came here there were already people here. It is our duty also to respect them.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Waddell: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I declare the motion carried.

Mr. Waddell: You didn't here the noes.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Madam Speaker, we would like to have an opportunity to vote on the Bill as per the understanding which was put forward earlier today that we would have that opportunity after three o'clock tomorrow. Can you tell me whether it is possible to request that even though—

Mr. Skelly: Waddell said no.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): No one—

Mr. Waddell: I yelled no.

Ms. Mitchell: We all yelled no.

[Translation]

Mrs. Mailly: Madam Speaker, I do not know if there was an agreement for the vote to take place this evening, but I believe that the Opposition whip could perhaps enlighten us on that.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I think I can answer the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary's question. No, there will not be a vote tonight. There is an understanding that, should a division be requested, it would be held at three o'clock tomorrow afternoon. My only problem at this time is that I did not hear anyone say no even though I did ask the question twice. If the hon. gentleman will just show a little bit of patience and not jump up for a fourth time, I am quite prepared, if the House agrees, to say that there will be a deferred division to be held at three o'clock. The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier).

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Madam Speaker, I think it would be fair and appropriate to put the question, to call for the "yeas" and "nays", and then we will see if there are five Members who want a recorded vote. Personally, I would pass the Bill as is, but if some Members want to vote, I am prepared to do so tomorrow, as specified in the agreement. Let the debate end tonight after ten o'clock, we would disregard the clock, and any vote requested would be deferred until three o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

If a vote is requested, I have no objection to that.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I just hope that everyone will understand the difficult situation in which the Chair is right now. As nothing was heard, the motion was declared adopted and the Clerk read third reading of this Bill.

• (2220)

However, if there is unanimous consent to go back, I will do so.

All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion, the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Pursuant to Order made earlier this day, the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred until tomorrow.

Pursuant to Order made June 23, 1988, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m. pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 10.21 p.m.

PETITIONS

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106(8), I have the honour to table, in both official languages, the Government's response to Petition Nos. 332-4759, 332-4814 to 332-4818 inclusive, 332-4820 to 332-4822 inclusive and 332-4827 to 332-4829 inclusive.

CANADA-U.S. FREE TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present three petitions signed by residents of the City of Winnipeg, Selkirk and a number of other cities. The petitioners say that the Conservative Government had no mandate from the Canadian people to conclude a free trade agreement with the United States and, as the proposed trade agreement would deny Canada the policy freedom to determine its own economic future and undermine our ability to build a society distinct from that of the U.S., they humbly pray and call upon Parliament to dissolve and allow the people of Canada the opportunity to accept or reject the proposed free trade agreement during a national general election.

PROTECTION OF RIGHTS OF THE UNBORN

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition on behalf of a number of residents from my constituency who state that the paramount right to life is vested in each human being and that the word "person" applies to all human beings. They hope the House will prepare legislation to the effect that unborn persons shall be afforded the same right to life as all others in Canada. The signatories are from such places as Nelson, Riondel, Harrop, Procter, Trail, and Castlegar.

REQUEST FOR DESIGNATION OF ROUGE RIVER VALLEY

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, it is a great honour and privilege to present a petition on behalf of residents of Scarborough, Don Mills, North York, and Toronto who join with thousands of supporters and volunteers in supporting the Rouge Valley in Scarborough as a unique and precious natural area.

They say that protecting the endangered wildlife and wilderness areas in the Rouge Valley is in the national interest. They join with the Scarborough City Council, the federal Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan), the Save the Rouge Valley System and the Coalition of Scarborough Community Associations in working to save the Valley. They petition the Parliament of Canada to work with the Government of Ontario to establish the Rouge River Valley as a Canadian heritage land or a provincial park.

IMMIGRATION—SPONSORING OF RELATIVES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by some 700 residents of the City of Toronto, in addition to ones previously presented in the same form. They point out that on October 30, 1987, the then Minister of State for Immigration promised unmarried sons and daughters of all ages would be considered as members of the family class of immigrants, that married children and brothers and sisters in the assisted relative class would get 15 points instead of 10 points.

These petitions were gathered during the past months and weeks and, of course, they will be pleased to have the Minister's answer at last, though it was originally promised in several months.

They also point out that two years ago the then Minister of Justice promised that the unfair distinction between Canadian citizens and permanent residents of three years or more would be eliminated so that both these groups would have equal rights to sponsor parents of any age, and that this promise has not yet been fulfilled. Therefore they call upon the House to ensure that the Government will fulfil its promise now.

PROHIBITION WITH RESPECT TO KNIVES

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a number of petitions from my riding and other ridings in the Greater Vancouver region. As well, there are over 100 names from Ottawa, Scarborough, Etobicoke and Toronto.

All these people are very concerned with the high incidents of crimes, including murder, robbery and sexual assault, that are committed with knives. This is on the increase in all major cities across Canada. They call upon the federal Government to amend the Criminal Code to prohibit the carrying of knives by citizens in public places, with some exemptions.

RESEARCH INTO PREVENTION AND CURE OF SCHIZOPHRENIA

Mr. Peter Peterson (Hamilton West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to present three petitions today signed by constituents from Hamilton West and the surrounding area. The contents of all three petitions are the same. They call upon the Government of Canada to increase funds in order to increase research necessary for a cure to the disease schizophrenia.

CANADA-U.S. FREE TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I wish to present a petition from petitioners who are concerned that Canadian sovereignty is being threatened by the proposed trade deal. They believe that the present Government has no mandate to negotiate and complete a trade deal with the United States.

They call upon Parliament to ensure that a national debate takes place on this trade deal during a national general election.

IMMIGRATION—SPONSORING OF RELATIVES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from a number of residents from Kelowna and other parts of British Columbia who remind the House of Commons that on October 30, 1987, the then Minister of State for Immigration promised that unmarried sons and daughters of all ages would be considered as the family class of immigrants and that married children and brothers and sisters in the assisted relative class would get 15 points instead of 10 points when assessed for immigration to Canada. These petitioners express a number of other concerns and they are asking the House to take steps to make sure the Government fulfils these promises now.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, I ask that all questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: Shall all questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

IMMIGRATION ACT, 1976

MEASURE TO AMEND—CONSIDERATION OF SENATE AMENDMENTS

The House proceeded to the consideration of amendments made by the Senate to Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Immigration Act, 1976 and the Criminal Code in consequence thereof.

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be able to move on to debate today the Government's position on Bill C-84. As I have said frequently, Bill C-84 forms with Bill C-55 a complementary package that will create a fair, effective way of ensuring that the rights of genuine refugees and our international obligations are respected.

Equally important, we must take the necessary legislative steps to ensure that abuse of the system does not occur.

[Translation]

Bill C-84 must be passed without delay so that the attempts that have repeatedly been made to abuse the refugee determination process can be counteracted. The passage of Bill C-84 is also necessary to ensure that the measures proposed in Bill C-55 will be effective once they are put in place. That is why I consider these two Bills to be a legislative package.

Madam Speaker, I would like to note that one of the controversial points in Bill C-84 was the empowering of the Minister to order ships turned back on the high seas if they were transporting people who hoped to claim refugee status in Canada. Today I want to announce a sunset clause that will do away with this power six months after the passage of Bill C-55.

[English]

I just want to make it clear that we are proposing a sunset clause that will eliminate the power to turn away ships six months after proclamation of Bill C-55. In the interim, the Government is also proposing an amendment limiting the power to turn back ships to those carrying illegal migrants which are intercepted outside our 12-mile limit. In addition, we are proposing, for consistency with Bill C-55, that only the Minister will be able to exclude security risks from Canada.

The Government believes that the deterrent measures in Bill C-84 provide ample power to discourage the increasing abuse of our refugee determination system. These measures include increased penalties for the organizers of illegal migration and for their accomplices, including the imposition of ten-year jail sentences and fines of $500,000; heavier fines for transportation companies that bring undocumented arrivals; increased powers to detain security risks and unidentified arrivals; exclusion of security risks and criminals from the determination process; increased powers of search and seizure; improved electronic surveillance capability.

The net result of these measures will be a refugee determination system better able to help those truly in need and to handle the unprecedented global pressures we are now facing. We will face these problems with legislation that respects the Geneva Convention, respects our Charter of Rights and Freedoms, and respects our humanitarian traditions in Canada.

In conclusion, it is my hope that now that our response to Bill C-84 can be seen to be fair and reasonable the other place will see fit to move with dispatch on Bill C-85 so that we can begin the process of putting it in place.

I move:

That a Message be sent to the Senate to acquaint Their Honours that this House agrees with amendment 1 made by the Senate to Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Immigration Act, 1976, and the Criminal Code in consequence thereof, but disagrees with amendments 2(A) and (B) and with the earlier amendments 5(B) and (C), on which the Senate insists, because this House believes they contradict the principles of the Bill for the following reasons:

Amendments 2(A) and (B) would reverse the policy on which the Immigration Act, 1976 was based, which policy was not changed in the Bill as passed by this House. The amendments jeopardize the possibility of successfully prosecuting persons who profit from organizing illegal migration and from counselling fraud among refugee claimants.

Earlier amendments 5(B) and (C) arise out of Senate amendment 5(A), which is amended by this House, and are inconsistent with that amendment.

And, that this House agrees with the principles set out in amendment 3 and in earlier amendment 5(A) on which the Senate insists, but would propose the following amendments:

Amendment 3 be amended to read as follows:

"Strike out lines 14 to 16 on page 24 and substitute the following:

Referred to in paragraphs 19(1)(E), (2)(A) and 48.1(c) and subsections 39(2), 40(1), 41(1), 82.1(2), 83(1) and 91.1(1), and any such power,"

Earlier amendment 5(A) be amended to read as follows:

"Strike out lines 13 to 30 on page 8, and substitute the following:

91.1(1) Subject to subsection (1.1), where the Minister believes on reasonable grounds that a vehicle within twelve nautical miles of the outer limit of the territorial sea of Canada is bringing any person into Canada in contravention of this Act or the regulations, the Minister may direct the vehicle not to enter the internal waters of Canada or the territorial sea of Canada, as the case may be, and any such direction may be enforced by such force as is reasonable in the circumstances.

(1.1) The Minister may make a direction under subsection (1) where the Minister is satisfied

THAT

(A) the vehicle can return to its port of embarkation without endangering the lives of its passengers;

(B) All passengers who seek Convention refugee status and are nationals or citizens of the country where the vehicle embarked them have been removed from the vehicle and brought into Canada;

(C) The country where the vehicle embarked its passengers is a signatory to the Convention and complies with Article 33 thereof; and

(D) The country would allow the passengers to return to that country or to have the merits of their claims to Convention refugee status determined therein.

(1.2) Where the minister believes on reasonable grounds that a vehicle within

(A) The internal waters of Canada, or

(B) The territorial sea of Canada

Is bringing any person into Canada in contravention of this Act or the regulations, the Minister may direct that the vehicle be escorted to the nearest port of disembarkation and any such direction may be enforced by such force as is reasonably necessary."

That concludes my response, Madam Speaker. I believe if you seek the opinion of the House you will find we have unanimous consent to add an additional amendment to this Bill.

• (1120)

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Minister is seeking unanimous consent to add another amendment. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Heap: Madam Speaker, I wish to give unanimous consent on the understanding that there will be occasion for debate with respect to the additional motion the Minister has moved.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All motions put to the House are debatable. Of course, the Hon. Member can have this assurance. The Hon. Minister may proceed.

Mrs. MacDougall: Madam Speaker, I move, seconded by the Minister of State for Employment and Immigration (Mrs. Vézina):

That Clause 8 of Bill C-84 be amended by striking out line 17 on page 9 and substituting the following:

"portation by sea.

4) If, during the second session of the thirty-third Parliament, Bill C-55 entitled An act to amend the Immigration Act, 1976 and to amend other Acts in consequence thereof is assented to, this section shall cease to be in force six months after the day on which that Act comes into force."

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The debate is on both motions.

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Madam Speaker, I am pleased to rise on behalf of the Liberal caucus to respond to the latest response of the Government concerning Bill C-84 which was introduced about a year ago. I think it is fitting that on the very anniversary of the boatload of Sikh refugee claimants landing on the East Coast of our country that we would be, first, debating a Bill that was intended to be an emergency and, second, that we would be talking specifically about the whole proposal of turning back boats and the sunset clause introduced by the Minister a few moments ago.

I would also like to pay tribute to the Senators, both the Liberal Senators and government Senators, who have worked very respectfully and thoroughly in providing a forum for organizations and groups from across this country.

Now that the dust has settled with respect to the so-called emergency, the so-called crisis, the national call for Parliament to convene to pass emergency legislation, members on the government side and, indeed Canadians, have been able to reflect on last summer's activities, the manipulation of the situation, and the creation of hysteria. After several months of reflection and taking a proper perspective on the situation, I believe all government Members and groups now believe that the tabling of such Draconian legislation was not only a disservice to the best traditions which define this country, a country which has offered international leadership to our partners and allies around the globe, but it was also an overkill in terms of the very proponents of the legislation contained in Bill C-84.

That is the reason that Members in this House and Members in the other place, as well as groups across this country, have tried to address what I believe is the worst performance of any government in dealing with immigration and refugee matters. I believe to call a national emergency based on 147 individuals is a shame for this Government and, unfortunately, a shame for this country.

It was only several years ago that the Government, supported by the same citizens, progressively and very courageously participated in a world-wide effort to find homes for the so-called Vietnamese boat people. This country accepted close to 106,000 Vietnamese boat people over the course of approximately a year and one-half. Half of them were sponsored by the Government and the other half were sponsored by individual communities. Only a few years later, last summer, based on 147 individuals, at a time when the Government found itself in the doldrums of the popularity polls, it moved in an unprecedented and very shameful way.

There have been efforts by Members in this House and in the other Chamber, as well as Canadians from coast to coast, to amend and ameliorate a bad piece of legislation. We tried to bring it into conformity with the standards and traditions of our country in terms of immigration and refugee policies. We did so not because, as the Government suggests, we somehow want to legitimize abuse. No one in this Chamber or in this country is in favour of illegitimate refugees, immigrants, or profiteers who simply make their living by taking advantage of desperate human beings in very difficult circumstances. No one in any part of government, whether it is a Department dealing with pensions or UIC, immigration or refugees, condones the undermining of our rules and regulations. However, having said that, nor do we consent to the stripping away of the regulations and the laws to which we adhered which took such a long time to develop and nurture. The fights and debates to get where we are in terms of our processes and in terms of our laws were not an overnight success. It was not an easy debate. In a short span of time we have sacrificed the work and the efforts of so many people and so many previous Governments. In the process we have jeopardized our reputation abroad.

Every legal expert who came before the legislative committee, the standing committee, as well as before the Senate committee, said that many clauses both in Bill C-84 and Bill C-55 are very much unconstitutional and violate the Charter of Rights and Freedoms which we passed as a Parliament several years ago. The importance of that testimony is in terms of what will happen if the courts agree with the body of opinion presented by legal experts, a nearly unanimous opinion which predicted that if this legislation becomes law it will be challenged in the courts and the courts will uphold those challenges.

What then will the Minister say to Canadians? What then will the Government say to the country when its policies are paralysed as a result of verdicts rendered by various courts? It will then have done the country a greater disservice since in paralysing our policies in the courts public confidence will not be there. Instead of public confidence there will be public cynicism rooted in the belief that the Government was trying to correct a situation but in so doing has made it worse.

Therefore what we were trying to do—and we make no bones about it—was to prevent a piece of legislation from being tied up in the courts and in the result having our system undermined by a court decision. One of the fundamental, if not the foremost, priorities as a Parliament is to draft good legislation, legislation that is in keeping with the first law of the land, our Constitution. If we have doubts about a law's constitutionality, or if we have doubts about the Department of Justice not being in accord with the Department of Immigration, and if we have not seen the justice opinion, if the Government has not had the courage to show its critics and cynics that the decision was rooted on sound judicial ground, then we have an obligation as a Parliament to try to correct that flawed legislation.

In the Minister's response of a few moments ago we saw the same inflexibility that she demonstrated in her response to Bill C-55. When she responded to Bill C-55 it was as a new Minister of Employment and Immigration. She is now somewhat more seasoned. She has had an opportunity to grasp a very difficult portfolio. No one pretends that this portfolio is an easy one with which to contend. However, in the Minister's response we see the same business-as-usual attitude. In her response to Bill C-84 she has failed to break the log-jam concerning two critical areas of concern. The first area of concern is the question with respect to turning back a boat. However, at the end of her remarks today she added an interesting and puzzling footnote with respect to a sunset clause on which I will comment later.

The real stumbling block for most Canadians was caused by the provision to turn a boat back and the aiding and abetting provision whereby individuals and church organizations, including priests and nuns who may be helping refugees come into Canada, will face a potential fine or imprisonment. Those were the two hang-ups that the country had with Bill C-84. Rather than try to ameliorate the two in a real fashion the Minister has chosen to ignore the testimony, the articulate, emotional and passionate pleas that organizations have made for months on end. As well she has rejected the compromises that were put forward by the Senate in its last response to Bill C-84.

The present Minister is the fourth Conservative Minister to hold the portfolio of immigration. There were expectations that she might bring a more moderate view to the Ministry, that she might be more open and flexible to a Canadian compromise in order to de-escalate the polarized views created by this legislation. There is disappointment that she has been unwilling to tackle head on these two very fundamental and serious shortcomings in Bill C-84.

I compliment the Minister on her acceptance of the first and third amendments proposed by the Senate which at the very least in an eleventh hour compromise suggests that if the Government is to refuse any individual entry into the refugee determination process on the grounds of a security threat the Minister is the only person able to bar that individual proceeding through the process. Before this legislation any official was able to exclude an individual. The Minister has accepted a compromise, an eleventh hour suggestion from the Senate which states that only the Minister's signature will be an authorization for a person to be excluded.

I would ask the Minister to be concerned with the proposal which would exclude individuals from the refugee determination process based on information we may receive from other Governments. I also point out that Belgium is the only country in the western world which rejects individuals based on security information provided by other Governments. I would ask the Minister to be concerned about information we may receive from other Governments.

After all, what constitutes a security risk or a security threat in the eyes of another Government? If South Africa were to provide our government officials with evidence that Nelson Mandela was a subversive, a law-breaker in South Africa, then would that constitute barring Nelson Mandela from our refugee determination process? I use that example to suggest that many individuals who may be political refugees and who escape the country of their torture or their harassment may be pursued by those very same government officials who pushed them to seek refugee status in the first place.

Political refugees are the worst public relations campaign for any country. Therefore if we have political refugees who come to this country or others then we can bet our bottom dollar that the countries from which they are running will disavow the refugees' claims these individuals will make. The Governments of the countries from which these individuals flee will try to discredit and undermine those individuals who in the eyes of a dictatorship or a military regime bring instability and pressure as well as media and world attention to their policies.

That is why I moved an amendment during the debate at third reading which suggested that if the Government feared that someone was a security threat, then it should not listen to the advice of some government abroad or information that came to it via a number of different foreign sources, but rather it should issue a security certificate which would be reviewed by the Security and Intelligence Review Committee. Automatically SIRC would conduct an oral hearing, and the Cabinet would be able to argue the case in front of SIRC that this individual is a security threat. If it can be proven at that particular hearing that this individual is a security threat given the proper protections, then this individual will be removed from our country and forbidden re-entry. That would be a guarantee that foreign governments would not provide fraudulent information upon which we would exclude this individual from the refugee process. I draw that information and concern to the attention of the Minister now that she will have the sole privilege of disallowing individuals from participating in the refugee process in Canada.

Amendment number two from the Senate concerned the aiding and abetting section. Unfortunately, the Government refused to budge on the Senate compromise and on the repeated concerns of the Senate and other groups and individuals in the House who were attempting to convince the Government that it would be morally unjust and legally obscene to fine or imprison individuals from churches and organizations who assist refugees with resettling in Canada. The Government proposes to make it an offence against the person who counsels or advises the individual with improper or illegitimate travel documents and the person advising that individual may face criminal prosecution. The Senate attempted to convince the Government to make it an offence for individuals, or members of churches or organizations who counsel unfounded cases with no credible basis, or who counsel in a clandestine manner.

The operative phrase in the Government's legislation now becomes the whole question of travel documents. The Government is saying if an individual does not have proper travel documents and is assisted by an organization, a priest, or a nun to come into this country, then those people assisting the individual will now face imprisonment or a fine.

I would like to point out to the Government that that is going in the wrong direction. A legitimate refugee is more inclined to not have correct documentation. A true refugee who is facing abuse or torture will not have had the luxury or the time to go to an embassy or consulate and pick up the appropriate visa before coming to Canada. If a person is fleeing a military or dictator régime that is harassing this individual then it might be incumbent upon this legitimate refugee to make an illegitimate travel document in order that they can escape the country of torture and abuse as a first step to entering Canada.

We have suggested that in most cases legitimate refugees would be the ones who do not possess real travel documents, but yet they possess a real refugee claim. Fake refugees may be coached into having the appropriate travel documents, but do not have a legitimate case for refugee status, particularly if they are being coached by those who are professional in the art of manipulation and of profiteering from individuals who face difficult circumstances abroad.

Therefore, why penalize churches or organizations that may be assisting an individual to come into the country? Regardless of the travel documents that he or she may be carrying with them, why penalize those legitimate elements in society who have tried to lend a hand and provide a bridge and a home to those who are fleeing and who are homeless?

Churches have been at the forefront of feeding the hungry through food banks, finding homes for those who live on streets or in parks, assisting senior citizens, the disadvantaged, and the poor. Why penalize those elements in churches and organizations who try to help another worthy cause, namely, those fleeing from persecutions and who are trying to find what you and I have, Madam Speaker, and what we all too often take for granted?

The Minister and the Government have said: "Don't worry. We will never use this particular clause against a church. We will never fine a priest. We will never imprison a nun. We will never undermine an organization that is legitimate". That is not how laws are constructed in this country. Legislation is not passed based on the intentions of one Minister. Today what might be the good intentions of a Minister, tomorrow might be the bad intentions of another Minister, or in 10 years' time from now. We in the House must debate and pass legislation, and analyse that legislation based on the force of this law or of the proposed law, and on the legal force and letter of this proposed law it would be criminal to persist in justifying the indefensible, and in defending and promoting that this piece of legislation should be getting the support of this Parliament and the other place.

I regret that the relatively new Minister did not have the moral fortitude to admit that that clause is onerous, offensive, and is a slap in the face to those voluntary organizations that do not have any malice or criminal intent, and have no profiteering intent, but simply try to lend a helping hand to those whom they feel are deserving of that assistance. Rather than encouraging and applauding those efforts, the Government is potentially prepared to penalize those important efforts across the country.

The other amendment that the Minister refused to accept from the Senate was amendment No. 4. This clause allows the Government to turn ships around. In amendment No. 4 the Senate attempted to amend this very sensitive clause by having the Government recognize that, if it wanted to discourage those captains and profiteers and that type of manipulative business, then the ship must be escorted into port. This would provide the opportunity to impound the boat, sell it, and proceed with prosecution of the captain for having dumped a human cargo off a coastline of our country, or attempting to subvert our regulations and laws. That would send a clear message across the Atlantic or the Pacific. If there was another captain who was prepared to set sail with another human cargo, that captain would think twice when hearing the news that another captain or his friend lost his boat and is now facing a fine or imprisonment. That would be the deterrent that we would be looking at as a country and as a Parliament.

Instead, the Government, in refusing amendment No. 4, continues to argue that the deterrent would be to turn back the boat. I suggest that that is not the case. If you were to simply turn back a boat on which you or I were the captain, then what is the risk involved for us as a captain navigating that ship? Assuming that we collected the cash from those individuals for that Atlantic or Pacific journey, we would have the money in our pockets and 50 per cent says that we will dump the people on the coastline successively and, at the very worst, the other 50 per cent risk is that the Coast Guard finds out and turns the boat back, without even looking at who is on board, but simply turns it back.

What is the big risk for the captain? He has his money. He either dumps the human cargo further offshore or returns them to the point of departure or brings them to another country. There is nothing to lose for the captain because he has made his dollars and, indeed, has probably made big dollars.

The Government wants to discourage these manipulators, as it should, by throwing the law book at them with all the force and determination. We urge it to bring the boats in, impound them, and charge the captains. That will send a strong message. Instead, how did the Government respond? Not only did it say that it would be better to simply turn the boats around, but it began to define what areas of the sea it would be doing it in.

For instance, the Government, in the response just tabled by the Minister, suggests that between 12 and 24 nautical miles it can turn back a boat if it is satisfied with four conditions. One of the conditions is the seaworthiness of the boat and the fact of there being no danger to the lives.

Now, how are they going to make that determination 12 to 24 miles out at sea? If it is foggy and raining and the waters are choppy, what are they going to send; the Minister in a boat to determine how seaworthy the ship is? How are we going to see the condition of the ship? How are we going to make a determination concerning who is on the boat or what the health of those passengers is or how much food or water is left on that boat if we turn them around? What we are talking about is a very illogical determination that we have to make, almost impossibly, out at sea. That is what is being asked for in this one clause.

The second condition is to suggest that passengers who seek conventional refugee status and are nationals or citizens of the country from which the ship departed are removed from the boat and brought in. What do we do then? Again, in the middle of the night, we send a boat out to sea and we ask for identification. What if there is no identification, no travel documents, and people suggest that they came from a certain country and that they are nationals of a certain country, or lie or mislead simply to get onshore? How are government officials supposed to validate who is from where and when, out at sea in the middle of the night?

The third condition is to suggest that if there are individuals on that boat who come from countries which participate in the Geneva Convention, then those people should be sent back and not be removed by the boat. How do you manage to make that determination by going through the boat in the middle of an evening with perhaps documentation that is not up to par? A boat goes out, brings back some people and a determination is made that these are individuals who are nationals from countries which do face refugee problems. They leave the rest on board based on another determination saying: "Well, you come from a country where you have your own refugee process and you respect the Convention, so we are sending you back." How can they verify on the spot, at that moment, out at sea who is who?

The fourth condition is to suggest that they are going to allow the people to go back if the country they are coming from will allow them to return. Again, what are they going to do? If people on the boat say: "Well, I come from Belgium, I come from Argentina", what is the Minister going to do? Will she call the Ministers in Argentina and Belgium overnight and say: "Are you going to allow these people to return?" How are they going to make a determination at sea regarding which country and which Government will allow a person to return? To return means nothing. It does not mean to admit. There is no legal force in having a person return. That could simply mean return them to the country and the shore, keep them at the airport or the port and then send them packing.

The real problem in all these four conditions is how do you make a determination in the middle of the sea, between 12 and 24 miles, after you have stopped a boat, that these four conditions are being lived up to? How can any Government pretend to be satisfied by incorporating these four conditions concerning turning back a boat? These four conditions are an insult to people's intelligence in this Chamber and across the country. I would suggest that no government official would dare try to verify these four conditions in the middle of the sea, 12 to 24 nautical miles outside of this country. It is simply incredible. They are passing it off as legitimate proposals.

The Minister should have a serious rethinking and re-evaluation and not try to pass off the very humorous—they are not even that. They are serious. If this is going to become the legislation of this country, it is going to be very serious and indeed a shame to try to make these conditions verifiable in the middle of the sea.

Then they talk about internal waters. Concerning internal waters and up to 12 miles, they basically have the same philosophy. In that particular amendment, the Government is saying that between our internal waters and 12 miles the Government may bring a ship into port. Well, the word "may", of course, is very weak. It means, by the same token, that a ship within those waters may be turned around as well. If you are going to turn them around between zero and 12 miles, where are the conditions? You do not have conditions, first, and second, if you did have conditions, as badly and as poorly and as illogically drafted as the first set of conditions, then those are not a safeguard in terms of trying to validate who is on board, whether the passengers are refugees, whether they are safe, and to impound the boat and fine and imprison the captain.

The Government, while trying to define between 12 miles and 24 miles on four flimsy conditions, is really saying the same thing: "Give us the power to turn boats around". The Senate is suggesting, and we are suggesting that that is not the answer to illegitimate smugglers, because it does not offer a penalty harsh enough, because you cannot get the captain or will not be able to impound the boat, and second, how do you process potential refugees on a boat? How do you turn that boat around? How do you allow those people to return when you do not even know if they are going to be returning to face continued persecution or possible death?

Therefore, the logical and humane thing to do would be to accept the boat and escort it under Canadian supervision into our port, allow the cases to be processed and allow the captain and the boat to be penalized to the extreme. That would be the solution rather than the response that the Government has proposed to us this morning, which I believe is very silly and in essence saying the same thing by using different legislative language.

Concerning the zero to 12 miles the Government uses the language "may bring a ship into port". I will be moving an amendment at the end of my comments to change the word "may" to "shall". At least within internal orders and up to 12 miles the law of the land will be that if you see a boat you will bring it into port, not return it, but "shall bring it into port" so you will offer the processing and the punishment that should be facing the captain and crew.

The Government through the Minister a few moments ago moved a very puzzling and seductive sunset clause. After just arguing the case for turning back a boat, after the sophistication of between zero and 12 miles and 12 to 24 miles, after a full year of the Government defending the absolute need for turning back boats, the Minister now says that the Government will be prepared to consider a sunset clause. The Government is saying that if Parliament gives us Bill C-55, the Government will drop the turning back the boat provision six months after that legislation comes into force. The big question is why do that at this stage. If you accept the point that you need two pieces of legislation, one for reforming the processing—which is Bill C-55—and one for discouraging smugglers, why after arguing for a year does one at the eleventh hour, after offering the stick and carrot routine to the Senate, let go of the carrot? Something is wrong.

Either the Government could have admitted that turning back the boat was a very wrong and misguided provision or the Government could have defended it, if that is what the Government wanted to do. Instead the Government has chosen perhaps the worst of all possibilities. It has defended its right to the end today by rejecting amendment No. 4. It then offered the carrot by saying if you give us Bill C-55, we will strike that provision from the books. It is a very seducing carrot that I do not regard as completely being respectful. The Government is mixing the two Bills and is using potential lives at sea as the bargaining chips for it to get through the House and Parliament another piece of legislation. That is bargaining of the lowest kind.

When the Government accepted the principles of having a deterrence and a processing Bill, we advocated that if those two went together we would have one Bill, striking the clause of turning back the boats because that is a wrong direction for this country to go on refugee legislation. If the Government is interested in making that seducing deal with the other place, and it is trying to get Bill C-55 through so it can strike the provision, why make a deal in terms of the provisions in Bill C-55 where there is inflexibility?

If you accept at this stage that you will not be able to turn back boats, why did the Government not accept that principle a year ago when we urged it not to have that provision and urged the Government to have people processed as the Government will have us do if and when Bill C-55 becomes legislation? The Government will now strike the provision. I too would want that provision struck from our laws and books. One can argue that even if this is a very immoral way of bargaining, using people as leverage to try to strike a provision that was wrong from the first, it would still be laudable to have that provision off the books. I am also asking at what price and at what cost is the Government asking us to do it and in what manner is the Government trying to strike it from the books by trading it with another piece of legislation rather than having the principle and the gumption to stand up and say that that particular clause is wrong, we will eradicate it; there are no conditions; there are no strings attached; it will not become part of our legislation?

While I do not want to see that provision in the law books of the country, I find it very disturbing the Government would use desperate people as leverage to strike something that was wrong to start with.

We still have two onerous provisions; aiding and abetting and the turning back of the boats. In terms of aiding and abetting, it is useful to remind ourselves of the words spoken by Nancy Pocock from the Inter-church Committee for Refugees. She was recently given a prestigious award for her work in the area of refugees. She said:

> If my Government tells me it is a crime to help these people, I will have to say I am obeying a higher law and I am going to continue to help them when they need me.

We should think about that, Madam Speaker. We should also think about the words spoken by Mr. George Cram also from the Inter-church Committee for Refugees. He spoke about turning back boats and said:

> When we had the boat crisis in 1979, we went and saw boats being pushed off the coast of Malaysia. We saw boats being pushed off various countries around the Southeast Asia and we saw refugees dying. Why? Because the boats were not allowed to land.
> We are creating that. We are doing precisely what we spoke about in the United Nations in horror, that when boats carrying illegals are not allowed to land, they die.

Finally I refer to a letter that was just sent to the Minister. I believe a photocopy was sent to myself and my colleague, the Hon. Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap), the critic for the New Democratic Party. This letter reads in part:

> I am very concerned about the possible passage of Bills C-55 and C-84 as they are in their present state... I also have a great fear that our international reputation for humanitarian conduct has already been somewhat eroded. At this moment, since I volunteer with the resettlement of refugee women, I am not too proud to be a Canadian. I would like to be able to hold my head up high when and after I assist these women to deal with the rules we make in this country.
> I trust that you will pay attention to our concerns re. the refugee Bills. Canadians have done years of hard work to achieve for Canada its reputation as a good citizen among other countries. Let's not destroy that now!

That letter was written by Maria Lanthier of the City of Toronto.

I believe those three individual quotes summarize how we feel about this legislation. We hoped that the Minister would have amended those two onerous clauses so we could preserve a domestic system that would do us honour but at the same time would protect our international reputation as Mrs. Lanthier has so articulately spelled out in her letter. We will then continue to be leaders of good policy around the world. We would be trying to build an international resolve for strengthening rather than weakening the international leadership for assisting refugees throughout the world.

In closing, Madam Speaker, I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau):

> That the proposed motion to amend Clause 91.1, subsection (1) of Bill C-84 be amended as follows:
> "(1.1) The Minister shall make a direction under subsection (1) where the Minister is satisfied
> (A) The vehicle can return to its port of embarkation without endangering the lives of its passengers;
> (B) All passengers who seek Convention refugee status and are nationals or citizens of the country where the vehicle embarked them have been removed from the vehicle and brought into Canada;
> (C) the country where the vehicle embarked its passengers is a signatory to the Convention and complies with Article 33 thereof; and
> (D) the country would allow the passengers to return to that country or to have the merits of their claims to Convention refugee status determined therein.

(A) the internal waters of Canada, or

(B) the territorial sea of Canada is bringing any person into Canada in contravention of this Act or the regulations, the Minister shall direct that vehicle to be escorted to the nearest port of disembarkation and any such direction shall be enforced by such force as is reasonably necessary."

The key change, as I articulated earlier, is to change the word "may" to the word "shall" which would have the force of ensuring that any boats within 12 miles of Canada which approach with refugee claimants will have to be brought into port so that the refugee claimants may be processed and the captain thoroughly punished, fined and imprisoned and the boat sold. In this way, we may send a real message that there is a front door for refugee determination and that those who take the back door will pay a very severe price.

That is the direction in which this Parliament should be going. That is progressive legislation for this Government to build on the success and tradition of our victories in refugee legislation. The Government should not shame them by undermining them and by tearing apart the resolve that took years of building and debating.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): At this point, the Chair would like to suggest to the Hon. Member that the Chair will reserve for a while on this amendment. We will continue debate and the Chair will get back to the House as soon as possible.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Madam Speaker, I am glad to have this opportunity to speak again against Bill C-84 and particularly against the Minister's message to the Senate the second time around answering to their second attempt to reduce the wrongs of this Bill.

The Minister's message continues injustice to refugees. It continues, contrary to her opinion, to flout the United Nations Convention in the opinion of those who are expert in the matter. It continues to flout the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada that provides to everyone physically in Canada the opportunity to make a refugee claim and it continues to visit special indignity and insult and injustice on Canadians who help real refugees.

This arises out of a so-called emergency 11 months ago when about 174 dark-skinned people came in a boat to the East Coast and asked for refugee status. That was regarded as an invasion. Although the Minister preferred to talk about thousands and tens of thousands, it was 174 people with dark skins whom the Minister used as the excuse for this unjust legislation.

I will not repeat the long list of people who came as individuals or as representatives of the churches and other public bodies to testify against this Bill, and who sent letters and petitions and who organized rallies against this Bill. In contrast, none, not one came from the public to support this Bill, only the Minister and those officials who had helped to write it. The fact is that that opposition has not gone away and the Canadian Council of Churches has vowed that it will raise hundreds of thousands of dollars to make it possible to fight these Bills in court on the basis of Charter challenges.

I will point out the errors in the Minister's response. I will point out also the need that before this Bill and Bill C-55 should be proclaimed, the Minister ought to clean up the overseas refugee selection process as suggested in a report which I delivered to her yesterday morning. I will intend also to offer two amendments.

The Minister has accepted the first amendment proposed by the Senate, but unfortunately, that amendment in itself, as proposed by the Senate, introduces a new kind of injustice into what we are doing here, a new kind of injustice into the Bill. I refer to the words which say that a person may be excluded from the right to make a refugee claim if the Minister certifies that allowing him to go through the refugee process would be contrary to the public interest.

It is bad enough, as was previously being done, to say exclude him if the Minister certifies that he is a security risk. It is bad enough because there is not due process of law for that person within Canada to defend himself. But to say, as the Minister and the Senate say in Section (c), a person that they will exclude from that right guaranteed by our treaty with the United Nations, will exclude a person described in paragraphs 19(1)(e), (f) or (g), 27(1)(c) or (2)(c), if the Minister is of the opinion that the application of Sections 45, 48, 70 and 71, the refugee process, to that person would be contrary to the public interest.

There are certain security and criminal concerns that are to be recognized and are recognized within the process that Canada agreed to 20 years ago with the United Nations that should be examined after a person has made a refugee claim and been heard, not before. But this goes much further even than the previous bad legislation proposed by the Government because this does not rest on security at all. The Government simply says: "We think it would be contrary to the public interest".

For example, if a man called Santokh Singh asks for refugee status, and if the Indian Government makes it known that it would not like it if he were given refugee status, and if Canada is seeking certain fat computer contracts with the Indian Government, then apparently it might be urged by the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) that his colleague, the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mrs. McDougall), should not allow that person to make a refugee claim. It might be bad for business.

Or, for example, if the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Friesen) feels that such a person has unsatisfactory ideas, that such a person is perhaps an existentialist or belongs to some philosophical group such as the ones the Hon. Member condemned in his speech a few weeks ago, that Canada should exclude that person and that he would no doubt try to persuade the Minister to say that that person should be excluded on the grounds that it would not be in the interests of the public of Canada to allow an existentialist to enter Canada. He has a lot of other people whose ideas he does not like as well, but the existentialist was the one that made even the Parliamentary Secretary laugh a few minutes ago.

This is contrary to the Charter, many of us believe, because that person in Canada has certain rights of equal treatment and due process under the Charter. Unfortunately, by the rules of order, I cannot offer an amendment to this because this was amended not by the Government but by the Senate, no doubt after consultation.

The second response to the Senate is to kill the Senate's attempt to soften the Government's section which criminalizes thousands of respected Canadians for doing what is admired by most Canadians and what has been admired by the Government of Canada and what has been admired by the United Nations High Commission for Refugees in giving Canada the Nansen Medal. They did not give it to the Government, fortunately. They gave it to the people of Canada for doing the very thing that this law would turn into a crime, helping a person, who did not already have a visa to do so, to come to Canada to claim refugee status.

It has been further demonstrated in the report I gave to the Minister's office yesterday that in places like El Salvador or Guatemala, bona fide refugees, people who have reason to fear persecution by their Governments and their death squads, are often afraid to seek a visa to enter Canada because the Canadian offices are watched by the secret police of those countries. Therefore, they have no choice but to come here without a visa. Those are the people against whom the Government has directed Bill C-84.

It has also directed the Bill against those who help those people in any sense. It has created a new offence. The Government claims it was always an offence, but that claim is patently false because no prosecution was ever attempted during the decade the existing legislation was in force. This penalty applies to people, as mentioned by my friend, such as Nancy Pocock who received the Pearson Peace Medal, who openly help these people get to the nearest Canadian Immigration Office at a point of entry to claim refugee status in spite of the fact they had not been able to get visas. This Bill creates this new offence and the Government tries to conceal that fact by claiming all it is doing is increasing the penalties. That is patently false because the penalties could have been increased without creating a new offence.

Then the Government undertakes to amend an earlier Senate amendment which it had rejected some months ago, but this time with rewording. What the Government is saying is that it wishes to allow these ships to enter under certain conditions and with certain considerations having been looked at in advance. I will not go into all of the conditions proposed in the revised 19.1(1) of the Minister, but I do wish to point to subsection (d) where she says the Minister must be satisfied that the country to which the boat would be sent back would allow the passengers to return or to have the merits of their claim to convention refugee status determined therein. That is worthless from the point of view of saving the life of a real refugee. They can be returned to that country and the country says yes, you can return, and the next day sends them out. "Return" in immigration legal usage in this country, and that is what we have to work with, does not mean return with the right to stay.

The word "admit" means return with the right to stay, but the Government has consistently refused to allow an amendment that would use the word "admit". I will be asking again that the words "the country would allow the passengers to return to that country" be struck out and replaced with the words "the country would admit the passengers to that country". That is enough to sink the whole clause. That is, without that amendment, the error of sending them back there only with the idea they can return for an hour or a day or a week is enough to sink the whole clause and the whole law.

I wish now to come to the Minister's additional motion which, along with my hon. friend, I accepted by unanimous consent for debate. I wish to point out that with this law for turning away ships, Canada has already become an international disgrace. Canada has the gall even now to condemn Thailand for pushing boats containing refugees away from its shores, the very thing that this law insists on doing. The fact that the Minister has the common sense to say "six months later, when no one is looking, let's just quietly tow it away", may get Canada out of a bad political hole but it does not fully correct the false signals sent to the world to say Canada is now joining Thailand in pushing refugees away from our shores, legally or physically pushing them away. The most I can think of doing to amend that clause is by replacing "six months" with "one month" so that we will be correcting it very soon after C-55 has been adopted and in force, if it is adopted and in force.

I now wish to come to the points on which not only Bill C-84 and Bill C-55 fall condemned, but that there must be corrective action taken if the Minister insists on putting these into law. The effect of these laws is not only to criminalize Canadians who help refugees come to Canada to seek refugee status, but as far as possible to prevent them from doing that and to have all refugees selected overseas. Therefore, the study I commissioned examined Canada's overseas refugee selection process as it relates to Central Americans applying to our overseas offices. It finds three very grave faults in that process.

One is that it favours certain countries. I am referring here to the self-exiled person class regulation in which a person from Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, the German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Poland, Romania, and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is not required to show fear of persecution. The simple fact they come from those countries is considered adequate grounds for being considered a refugee. That is discriminatory. It is unjust. It is a denial of our obligations to the UN which require that each refugee case be considered on its merits.

There is a similar problem emerging within the region of Central America in which one country, Nicaragua, with a much better human rights record than its neighbours El Salvador and Guatemala, nevertheless has a higher acceptance rate of refugees in Canada, perhaps because they are of a more professional class. We do not know the reasons but we know the fact that there is the appearance of discrimination in favour of Nicaraguan anti-Sandanista refugees as against refugees from the fascist Government of El Salvador and the extremely repressive Government of Guatemala. This again violates our obligations to the UN.

Second, our process fails because it puts immigration considerations ahead of refugee considerations. Refugee claimants in El Salvador and Guatemala are examined first in a prescreening process to see whether Canada thinks they would be useful immigrants. If they flunk that, if they do not have medical degrees or something we would like, then they are not even allowed to state their refugee claim. This is a violation of our obligations to the UN. The prescreening used, and the sequence of interview questions used, are clearly designed to keep out many bona fide refugees and favour those who have only the slightest refugee claim but who are otherwise more desirable immigrants.

The third point is that our security requirements can delay a person for as much as a year during which time it has happened that a refugee claimant is murdered by the people he was afraid would murder him. The security requirements result in risk of physical harm to the refugee claimant and very little benefit to Canada. The RCMP testified last August that during 1986 and to that point in 1987, of 11,000 undocumented aliens that they had examined, they found no evidence of security risk or danger to Canada.

I ask the Minister to clear up these points. If she is going to insist that all our refugees be selected overseas, at least let her ensure that the system is changed to become more honest, open, fair, and in keeping with our obligations to the United Nations. I wish to move the two amendments of which I spoke. The first amendment is to Section 91.1(1)(d) as amended by the Government. I move:

> That Section 91.1(1)(d) as amended by the Government be amended by deleting the words "the country would allow passengers to return to that country" and in insert therefor the words "the country would admit the passengers to that country".

The reason for that amendment is as I have mentioned. The word "admit" in our usage means that that country would allow the person to enter and stay as of right, not to be bounced out again on the next boat or the next plane.

My second amendment is to the Government's new clause. I move:

> That Clause 8 as amended by the Government be amended by striking out the word "six months" and inserting therefor the words "one month".

This is an attempt to reduce the scandal caused around the world by the fact that Canada has been proposing for a year now to do what it condemns countries of Southeast Asia for doing, that is, pushing the boats away. I know there will be arguments that they are going to look after the safety of the boats and so on, but the essential point is that unless my other amendment is accepted we will be pushing away real refugees who will not then have an assured chance of having their cases examined. Since Canada has pushed them away without hearing them, Canada has no reason to expect that another country will hear them. I would ask the House to adopt both of these amendments.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Chair would like to deal at this time with the amendment presented by the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi). It is in order, and will read as follows:

> That the motion be amended by deleting the word "may" in 91.1(1.1) and (1.2) and substituting the word "shall" therefor.

As to the motions presented by the Hon. Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap), the amendment to Clause 8 is in order and can be put to the House at this time. However, the amendment to Clause 91.1 (1)(d) cannot be put to the House at this time. We must dispose of the motion of the Hon. Member for York West before we can deal with this one. Henceforth the amendment to Clause 8 proposed by the Hon. Member is now before the House.

There is a question and comment period following the Hon. Member's speech.

Mr. Keeper: Madam Speaker, I have a few questions I would like to ask my hon. colleague to elaborate on. The first takes us back to the genesis of this legislation. I use the word genesis advisedly because it seems to me that this legislation came about a long time ago. Last summer we were called back here in an emergency situation to deal with an urgent crisis which was facing the nation. We were called back under special Standing Orders in order to take quick action. Yet a year later we are dealing with that same legislation.

Would my colleague comment on the nature of this emergency? What kind of emergency was facing the nation which we were called back to deal with, when a full year later we are still dealing with the same legislation? Will my colleague comment on what he thinks was going on when we were called back in an emergency session a year ago and we are now still in the same session dealing with the same piece of legislation?

Mr. Heap: Madam Speaker, I thank my colleague for a very appropriate and timely question. I will make two points in response. The nature of the emergency, as presented, was that 174 dark-skinned people had landed on the East Coast of Canada claiming refugee status. Whether they will be found to be refugees under our laws we do not yet know. The Government suggested that there would be many boats of this sort coming if we did not pass a law quickly to stop them. Eleven months later no more boats have arrived. There have been rumours of boats and rumours of wars, but no more boats have arrived. Therefore, it seems that the Government over-reacted.

Second, had the Government really been interested in simply increasing penalties for people like the Captain of the Amelie, it could have done so within weeks with majority consent of the Opposition and the Canadian public. This was made known to the Government by representatives of churches, bar associations, unions, all the refugee support groups, and immigrant groups including the Canadian Ethnocultural Council. They all said that if certain amendments were accepted which focused the penalties on those who tried to bring refugees in secretly and clandestinely by deception, we would pass the legislation quickly.

The Government did not want to limit the legislation that way. It wanted to criminalize and intimidate thousands of Canadians who have been helping refugees. That is why this law has been held up today and will be held up even after it has been proclaimed because it will not stand in the courts.

Mr. Keeper: Madam Speaker, I have another basic question about the legislation on refugees with which we are dealing. It has to do with how people who claim to the Canadian authorities to be refugees are treated. I am wondering whether my colleague, who is informed in this area, can tell us whether when people from East European countries, for example, apply for refugee status in Canada they are treated any differently than people who apply for refugee status from Chile or El Salvador?

• (1240)

In other words, is the Government pursuing a uniform refugee policy or is there a significant difference in the way people from Central America are treated? I am particularly interested in knowing how someone from Chile who is applying for refugee status would be treated. We know that a young lady from Chile who stayed in Montreal had suffered serious burns as a result of political persecution under General Pinochet in Chile. She is showing great courage by going back to that country.

Can people from Chile who apply for refugee status expect equal and fair treatment as those applying from eastern European countries?

Mr. Heap: Madam Speaker, the answer to my colleague's pertinent question is no. According to the regulations they get unequal treatment.

A person from Chile on the run from a bloody dictator may be rejected. Some of them are rejected by Canadians on the grounds alleged by Canadian Government representatives that they cannot prove satisfactorily that they have a well founded fear of persecution if they stay in Chile or return to Chile.

However, persons who come from Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, German Democratic Republic, Hungary, Poland, Romania, U.S.S.R. or Yugoslavia, according to the government's self exiled person class regulations, are not examined on that point at all. It simply states that they will be considered if they are citizens, former citizens or former residents of a country listed in Schedule 1 and are outside of Canada and are not residing or sojourning in any of the countries listed in Schedules 1 or 2, including those countries I mentioned, and are unwilling or unable to return to their country of citizenship or former habitual residence. It does not say anything about a well founded fear of persecution. The regulation goes on to state that they will be considered if they have not become permanently resettled and are seeking resettlement in Canada. There is a double standard, and it works against refugees from most countries in the world.

Mr. Keeper: According to Government policy, as I am sure was true under past Liberal governments as well, a person from Chile who is applying for refugee status faces an extra obstacle before achieving refugee status in this country. They must establish a well founded fear of political prosecution, of death or other persecution in that country. Is that what my colleague is saying?

How could anyone doubt that someone from a country like Chile does not have a well founded fear? Anyone who visits Chile would have no doubt that the people in Chile live in terror. One only need walk the streets of Santiago to feel the fear and terror under which people live. It is the very essence of that political system.

How could a Canadian Government official ever doubt that a person who has been politically active in Chile would not have a well founded fear? Unless someone is a special assistant to General Pinochet, the very nature of the political system in Chile would provide a basis for someone to have a well founded fear.

Mr. Heap: I cannot say what is in the minds of Government officials in terms of doubt. I can say what the action was in one typical case. Chileans who were flying to Canada to claim refugee status stopped en route at Buenos Aires. A Canadian consular official went on board and before even talking to them said they were not refugees, just economic migrants. When a reputable Canadian lawyer, an expert in refugee affairs, was sent at private expense to Buenos Aires to examine them, he found a person who had been more than once imprisoned and tortured by the Chilean police for his trade union activities. Yet the Canadian official said he was not a refugee, just an economic migrant. She did not even listen to his story. That is the treatment often, but not always accorded to Chileans but not to people from Schedules 1 and 2 countries in eastern Europe.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Madam Speaker, normally one is pleased to speak to a particular Bill. However, I think it is a disgrace that we are here, still dealing with this Bill, on the anniversary of the arrival of 147 Sikhs on Canadian shores. We were called back to the House of Commons on the pretext of a crisis in which we needed immediate laws to handle this supposed untenable situation. We were presented with this Draconian legislation.

The fourth Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mrs. McDougall) appears to be more flexible. She obviously understands what needs to be done. I agree with her that we require proper laws in this land. We knew that in 1983 when we asked Rabbi Plaut to chair a committee that would give us an indication of how to deal with refugees who come here. We wanted to be a safe harbour to those in need and legitimately had the right to claim that status here. We wanted the kind of security measures and assurances to monitor and ensure that unworthy and unwanted people coming to this shore would not be given safe harbour. Yet neither problem has been answered adequately by a Government that does not seem to understand how to draft a Bill that reflects the Canadian attitude of openness toward strangers in need. Those who have no right to be in this land are not welcome.

The Minister is right in saying that we must send a message that undesirables are not welcome in Canada. Furthermore, those who confuse the issue by lying and stealing from those who would come here must be dealt with as well. Adequate punishments must be imposed.

The Draconian legislation introduced by the Government is before us once again on the anniversary of the arrival of the Sikhs. The Senate proposed some very intelligent and rational changes. It really was the Chamber of sober second thought. It was all Senators, not just Liberal Senators, who made recommendations. They strongly suggested there were errors made in this Bill both with respect to the methodology of turning back the boats and in the way it was written around the aiding and abetting of church groups and private citizens who, in a sense, were acting like good solid Canadians in lending the kind of help that I think the Minister intended in principle be acknowledged. However, the Bill unforgivably ignored the basic principles suggested by the Senate.

Let us look at how these things were ignored and how the Senate was rejected with respect to the compromises it put forward. Let me say in entre parenthèses that I come from a riding in which almost 40 per cent of its membership have come to Canada in the last 30 years. They have built the fabric of the Mount Royal riding into an absolutely exciting and dynamic multicultural, cosmopolitan part of the City of Montreal, of Canada and of Québec. I have talked to the Sikhs and to the Vietnamese boat people who have built up a wonderful centre in this riding.

If we had had this kind of narrow-minded mentality 20 years ago, we would not be enriched by those people and the kind of economy and personal initiative they have brought to this country, and that goes for the whole Caribbean Diaspora where there are problems, as you well know, Madam Speaker. It goes for the Tamils as well and I think the Minister should come to my riding and talk to these people. She would then correct the errors in this Bill. She would not turn back boats with these conditions and she would not charge as aiding and abetting with fines and imprisonment for people who have had some disagreement with Bill C-55.

The fundamental prescreening process is in some disagreement. The safe third country concept is an unacceptable concept because there is no real way of ensuring a safe third country. There is an inadequate non-universal appeal system which goes to the Federal Court, a court which does not have the kind of training or expertise that is required to examine a refugee claimant in order to determine their status in an intelligent and enlightened way. These are human beings. These are people who have families, who have children and whose lives are in danger. So there is a disagreement on the fundamental process.

These church groups, public advocacy groups, and fundamentally well-intentioned people are there to look at the individual cases to see if they can help them get the proper documentation. When the Senate wanted to protect those who acted in that way in a more open and upfront non-clandestine way, we say no. These are good solid Canadians of good will and we make them cheat. That is ridiculous. That is where we have to make some changes.

There are lawyers who want to help real refugees who are seeking the kinds of information a refugee needs. A refugee cannot stop and run back to his country because he needs his papers. He is fleeing a country which is no longer home to him. Anyone who has had to move from one city to another knows the trauma of dislocation and relocation, language, culture, environment, weather, the whole bit. These kindly and concerned lawyers try to enable a refugee to get their proper documentation but they will be harassed and subject to fines, and unnecessarily so. It is too bad that that was not changed.

I listened to the Minister as she talked about the refugees who were to be excluded from the refugee determination processing system and that she alone is responsible for that final decision. I think the Minister takes a terrible chance with those kinds of responsibilities. One should not disallow in that way for security purposes, but I know she has already said no to that amendment. It boggles my mind that she has said no to so many sound and intelligent amendments.

With respect to the deterrence and punishment procedure of people who are already on boats, my colleague, ho, I would suggest, has given a carefully listening ear to people who have experienced this refugee system. He has travelled and has heard from people who have experienced this particular trauma of dislocation. He has brought to our attention a very credible amendment which I would like to support very strongly. Under Section 91.1 the Minister may make a direction if she is satisfied that the vehicle can return to its port of embarkation without endangering the lives of its passengers. That is utterly ridiculous. Is she going to get frogmen out to take a look at the underside of the boat to see if it is safe? Is she going to investigate inside the boat?

There are four conditions here. If the vehicle is 12 to 24 miles outside of our country, it would have to be determined and then decided whether or not to send the passengers back to their country of origin, if they have refugee status, if they are nationals or if they are citizens of that country. The whole thing is just a mess of potash and I would suggest it be returned and looked at again. She should instead bring in the ship, arrest the captain, throw the book at him, throw the key away, and impound the ship. That is the kind of message we should be sending out to the world. We should be saying: "If you bring your boat in here, mister, you will end up in jail and you, the owner of the boat, say goodbye to your property". Believe me, they would not then be involved in this kind of illicit action such as bringing in illegitimate refugees, because we do not want those illegitimate refugees. We want productive, hard working, honourable people. Those are the kind of refugees who are welcome in this country.

I would like to speak about Section 91.1(1), where the Minister believes on reasonable grounds that a vehicle within the internal waters of Canada or the territorial sea of Canada is bringing any person into Canada in contravention of this Act or the regulation, the Minister may direct that the vehicle be escorted to the nearest port. Why "may"? It should read the Minister shall be obliged to. That is what Canadians want. It should read, after the boat has been escorted to the port of disembarkation and any such direction "shall" be enforced by such force as is reasonably necessary. In that way the search and the seizure could be done, the bona fides of the refugees involved could be established and the captain could be taken from the boat as well. I hope there will be serious consideration and support in this House for the amendments put forward by my colleague.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It being one o'clock p.m., I do now leave the chair until two o'clock p.m.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S. O. 21

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Crosbie) does not appeal to or speak for rational Canadians when he says that Canadians are tired of the trade debate and just want to see the deal approved because they have made up their minds. Does he not realize that the latest polls show more Canadians oppose than support the deal?

The Minister for International Trade does not appeal to the pride and independence of Canadians when he says that the trade legislation cannot be changed by Parliament. Why should Canadians bother to elect Members of Parliament if they are to sit impotent and approve a Bill which overrides all other federal or provincial legislation that conflicts with the agreement?

The Minister for International Trade underestimates how much Canadians value water when he treats casually Illinois Governor Thompson's demand to triple the flow of water from Lake Michigan to the Midwest rivers.

When will the Minister for International Trade come to his senses?

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

RANGE FIRES CAUSED BY LOCOMOTIVE SPARKS

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, ranchers in southwestern Saskatchewan are understandably upset over the numerous range fires caused by sparks from locomotives along the right of way of the Canadian Pacific Railway main line. These fires spread rapidly, causing considerable damage to the grassland. As well, the time and effort of countless numbers of local residents, neighbours, and volunteers are expended on the containment of these fires.

The ranchers question whether the spark arresters on the locomotives are properly maintained. They also ask why the CPR does not conduct more controlled burnings of the right of way in order to reduce the fire hazard. Finally, they ask why they should be fighting the CPR's fires thereby placing themselves at risk, without compensation.

Feelings in the southwest are running high. Some ranchers indicate they are prepared to burn the right of way themselves if the CPR will not do so.

In short, residents along the main line of the CPR resent the cavalier attitude of the railway. They ask that action be taken in order to maintain properly the right of way and the spark arresters on the locomotives.

HUMAN RIGHTS

RETURN OF CARMEN QUINTANA TO CHILE

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, this evening a young woman of uncommon courage and grace is going home. Despite the obscene efforts of a wicked military regime to dismember her body and still her voice, Carmen Quintana is returning to Chile, determined, as always, to serve the cause of justice and democracy.

With the help and support of countless friends in Chile and Canada, caring burn doctors and nurses, she has defied medical odds, and General Pinochet. Tonight, she will do as she always vowed she would—return to her troubled homeland.

For the Chilean people she is living testimony that the human spirit endures and, ultimately, conquers the practitioners of terror. "I want to work with the Chilean people to bring back democracy", Carmen said yesterday as she bid us goodbye.

Albert Camus once wrote: "Those who love and are separated can live in suffering, but not in despair; they know love exists".

Carmen Quintana is returning to a land she loves. She is returning to a people she loves. She goes home with the love and admiration of all Canadians.

NATIVE PEOPLES

AGREEMENT BETWEEN FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AND JAMES BAY CREE

Mr. Guy St-Julien (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, a 14 million dollar agreement was announced today by the Government of Canada and the James Bay Cree; this is a first step in the freeing up of negotiations on the implementation of the James Bay Convention with the Cree.

The agreement marks the end of a dispute revolving around four years' worth of adjustments to the amount of transfer payments to be made to the Cree for part of municipal service charges, that is the operating expenses of local and regional Cree governments, fire-fighting services, public health, roads and the maintenance of public facilities and buildings.

Mr. Speaker, the accomplishments of the James Bay Cree in administering their own affairs constitute a remarkable success for the Cree and for all Canadians.

We should appreciate the work done by Big Chief Matthew Cooncome, as well as by the eight Chiefs from Cree villages, Judge Réjean Paul, federal negotiator Andrew Croll and Roderick Pachano, the Cree's negotiator. Mr. Pachano stated that the permanent relation between the Cree government and the Canadian government is based on respect for the spirit of the James Bay and Northern Québec Convention. In the absence of goodwill, it is hard to accomplish anything at all. Today's agreement marks the beginning of the reinstatement of trust.

QUEBEC'S EXPECTATIONS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, we are a few weeks or a few days away from an election call and the Conservative government, after four years, still has not settled 12 priority issues important for Quebec: the Space Agency; the Banking Center; the development of the Port of Montreal; the improvements to the Old Port of Montreal; the contract for the construction of railway engines for Bombardier; the CN maintenance shops in southwest Montreal; the paper mill in Matane; a bridge on route 30 for the City of Valleyfield; a specific agriculture policy for Quebec; early retirement, and the Lauzon, Sorel and Montreal shipyards.

Mr. Speaker, I will conclude with that. This is what we are wondering about at the present time: is the Government delaying its decisions in order to announce them during the election campaign in the hope that Quebecers will forget its incompetence and its neglect of them over the past four years? Or does it simply not have the courage to make decisions because there is disagreement within its caucus about the Space Agency?

VETERANS AFFAIRS

KOREAN WAR—AWARD OF SERVICE BADGES

Mr. Allan Pietz (Welland): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Veterans Affairs (Mr. Hees) recently announced that Canadians who served in the Korean War are being awarded Korean Service Badges by Canada for the first time in 35 years.

On July 26 we will celebrate the thirty-fifth anniversary of the end of the Korean War. As we commemorate that day, we can be proud that it was this Government that at long last has seen fit to show Canada's appreciation for the dedication and sacrifice of Canadian servicemen who fought for freedom in that conflict.

Up until the recent announcement by the Minister, Korean War veterans were awarded British service medals and United Nations service medals only, and unlike veterans who served in the First and Second World Wars received no specific recognition from their own country.

S. O. 21

The Korean Service Badges recognize the contribution made by veterans who served with the Canadian Forces or associated support groups between June 27, 1950, and July 27, 1954. The Minister also announced that the immediate family of a deceased veteran may apply for the badge.

It is about time that these brave men and women received an official thank you from the people and Government of Canada, and I am very proud to be a member of the Government that has finally made this possible.

NATIONAL CAPITAL COMMISSION

PROPOSED CANADIAN HALL OF FAME

Mr. Bill Tupper (Nepean—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I have been privileged to live in the nation's capital for nearly three decades. I describe this national capital as a jewel, even though every jewel needs a little polishing. This capital possesses great natural beauty. It is a safe and secure place in which to live, work, and raise a family. It has great schools, universities, research and cultural institutions.

The National Capital Commission recently prepared a discussion paper entitled "The Capital Orientation Plan". The NCC has a mandate to ensure that our capital serves as a meeting place, bringing Canadians together through the democratic process; communicating Canada to Canadians; and safeguarding and preserving those national treasures which are unique in their influence on all Canadians— in short, the mandate to turn our capital into a national symbol.

One of the Commission's principal proposals is to make known the major achievements of Canadians. This could be done by creating a Canadian Hall of Fame in the capital which would recognize both individual and collective achievements and contributions to the quality of Canadian life. I would like to encourage the National Capital Commission in achieving its goals.

LABOUR RELATIONS

TORONTO—LOCK-OUT AT CFTO-TV

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, as communications critic for the New Democratic Party, I am concerned about the lock-out by CFTO-TV in Toronto. It looks like the company is simply out to break the union and it is clearly bargaining in bad faith in order to do so.

I quote from someone who is not what I would consider a leftie, and that is Lorrie Goldstein of the Toronto Sun. He said:

> Personally, I don't like unions.
> Having said that, if CFTO-TV chief Doug Bassett was my boss, I'd probably be a union man.

I am concerned especially about their biased news reporting of their own strike. That is an abuse of the freedom of the press, abuse of the airwaves, and the CRTC should look into that. I am also concerned that cabinet Ministers have been crossing the picket lines in spite of the fact that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) says that he would never cross picket lines and cabinet Ministers are not supposed to do so.

This is a mean, vicious strike. The management of CFTO better realize that there are larger issues involved here and get a settlement of the lock-out strike.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

BEIRUT REFUGEE CAMPS—ARMED STRUGGLE FOR CONTROL

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton—Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, once again innocent men, women, and children in the Beirut refugee camps of Shatila and Bourj-el-Barajneh have been caught up in the crossfire of rival PLO militia groups who have been struggling for control.

Since the beginning of May approximately 170 people have been killed and over 600 wounded as a result of the fighting between the mainstream PLO Fatah forces of Yasser Arafat and those of his Syrian-sponsored rival, Col. Said Mussa's Fatah-Uprising faction. Witnesses say that "virtually every building in the Shatila camp has been wrecked or severely damaged". PLO officials state that 80 per cent of the Bourj-el-Barajneh camp has been destroyed by bombardments over the last 60 days.

On June 27, Mr. Arafat's group was forced to surrender the Shatila camp to Mr. Mussa's men after losing a three-month battle that killed over 90 people. While this brought the fighting in that camp to an end, a number of Fatah fighters requested and were granted safe passage by Libyan mediators to Mr. Arafat's bases near Sidon. There they will undoubtedly regroup to fight other battles and claim more innocent lives. By July 7 the Bourj-el-Barajneh camp had fallen to Mr. Mussa's forces, with 38 people being killed and 93 wounded since the battle for the camp intensified on July 4.

There has been no official Canadian government statement about this slaughter. It is unbelievably strange that such scant media attention has been given this brutal tragedy which has lasted several months. Canada should give consideration to what measures it can take to help innocent people escape the factional warfare of the PLO that inevitably leads to the death of their own refugees.

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

BENEFITS OF BILL C-72

Mr. André Plourde (Kamouraska—Rivière-du-Loup): Mr. Speaker, the people of Kamouraska—Rivière-du-Loup are delighted with the adoption on third reading of Bill C-72, the Official Languages Bill.

I wanted to raise the subject today and express my unqualified appreciation of our democratic system, thanks to which the equality of French and English as official languages within our federal institutions has finally been recognized.

Mr. Speaker, the passage of this Bill has corrected a situation that in this day and age was becoming intolerable. In fact, it took a Conservative Government and our Conservative Prime Minister, who has the courage of his convictions, to table and adopt the Official Languages Act, something the Liberal Government under Pierre Elliott Trudeau was afraid to do.

Mr. Speaker, the democratic process has dealt with certain individuals in this country who had a narrow and unbending attitude towards the French fact. Personally, I believe that our diversity and our respect for our differences will enhance our stature as a nation.

AGRICULTURE

WESTERN DROUGHT—ASSISTANCE SOUGHT BY BRITISH COLUMBIA BEEF PRODUCERS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, the South Kamloops Stockmen's Association recently informed the Minister of Agriculture for Canada (Mr. Wise) about the very critical situation its members are facing as a result of the prolonged, hot and dry weather. With herds representing thousands of head of cattle, their present water supplies are completely inadequate, and many ranchers are forced to haul water. Some have been hauling water since last fall and some ranchers presently have no water supply at all.

The situation looks especially bleak for this fall, and it means that there will likely be no water at all for this winter. The drought in the Thompson-Nicola region of British Columbia is at a crisis stage and these beef producers require immediate and special assistance.

I urge the Minister of Agriculture to take action immediately to provide the members of the South Kamloops Stockmen's Association with a subsidy to offset their recent drought related costs so that they will not be forced to sell off their herds.

These cattlemen form a crucial component of our regional economy and all efforts must be made to ensure their survival during these extremely dry months.

• (1415)

When we think of western agriculture, Mr. Speaker, often our thinking stops at the Rockies. I urge the Minister of Agriculture to remember all those struggling through the drought, including those ranchers in the interior valleys of British Columbia.

FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS

SERVICE CHARGES—TREATMENT OF SMALL BUSINESSES

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Federation of Independent Business is seeking protection from unfair financial service charges on small businesses. It says that a measure of justice has already been accorded to the consumers of Canada, but much more is needed to be granted to small business people affected by financial institutions.

Particularly the Federation asks that financial institutions provide complete information on changes when they are to be made to service charges. It wants charge-back fees on NSF cheques eliminated. It calls for an annual monitoring of service charges as they apply to small businesses, and it seeks an appeal process to redress grievances.

The Government has already made a beginning in responding to these recommendations. I urge it to finish the job. The health of small business is vital to Canada's economy. We are aware that the key problem in this instance is the extreme imbalance of power between the financial institutions and small businesses. Here is an opportunity for Parliament and the Government to provide the equalizer.

RAILWAYS

DISBANDMENT OF NEWFOUNDLAND RAILWAY—EFFECT ON NORTH SYDNEY, N.S.

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, when the Government on June 20 announced the closure of the Newfoundland Railway it said that the town of North Sydney would not be affected. Yet on the same day the President of CN said that he was starting a new boat service from Halifax to St. John's. The very next day, CN sent a directive to all its outlets saying that as of June 25 all containers in eastern Newfoundland, east of Gander, would be shipped from Halifax to St. John's.

Atlantic Container Express just a few days later said that the closure of the Newfoundland Railway would mean that its business of shipping from Montreal to Corner Brook and St. John's would increase by 12 per cent to 15 per cent, which would have a devastating effect on the freight crossing from North Sydney to Port aux Basques and Argentia.

Now the workers in North Sydney are more alarmed than ever because the statistics, since the closure of the Newfoundland Railway, indicate that freight traffic from North Sydney to Newfoundland has declined by 70 per cent. This is despite the Government's statement that North Sydney would not be a affected.

When will the Government realize it is devastating freight shipments from North Sydney to Newfoundland?

PROVINCIAL AFFAIRS

ONTARIO—EFFECT OF PROVINCIAL POLICIES ON HEALTH SERVICES

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, the Peterson Government has announced that 101 beds at Wellesly Hospital must remain closed in order to meet budgetary restraints. In fact the Peterson Government will soon force more bed closures in all hospitals across the province as a result of its overspending in other fields. What hypocrisy!

What happened to the 1987 election promise of $3 billion toward health care? The Peterson Government recently enacted one of the biggest tax grabs in Ontario history by raising taxes across the board, including substantial hikes in sales and personal income taxes. Yet the Peterson Government is ignoring health care, the most vital of all government services. It is apparent that the Government of Ontario places politics above the health of its citizens.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—WATER

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. Last night, our deputy chief trade negotiator, Ambassador Gordon Ritchie, declared for the first time that during the talks with the United States, Canadian experts from the Department of the Environment and experts on our negotiating team had drafted a special clause to exclude, to exempt our water from the FTA, and that the Canadian negotiating team had never insisted on getting this exemption.

Mr. Speaker, this raises some troubling questions. First of all, why have Conservative ministers systematically denied before the House that there had ever been any intention of excluding water? Why this misleading attitude? And second, since the trade legislation has paramountcy over Canada's water policy, why didn't Canada insist on obtaining this exclusion which was judged to be necessary by our experts from the Department of the Environment?

[English]

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, it seems very difficult for the Leader of the Opposition to understand that water was never on the table in the free trade negotiations.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1420)

Miss MacDonald: Quite frankly, the Leader of the Opposition may not want to understand that because, of course, his past references to water would lead us to believe that he indeed would have put it on the table.

Mr. McDermid: He would have given it away.

Miss MacDonald: There is no question about where this Government stands on the issue of large-scale diversions of water. We have said that there will be no large-scale diversion of water from this country. What is more, we have done something which the Liberal Party had never done in all its time in office. We have issued a water policy which expressly prohibits the exportation and the diversion of large-scale amounts of water.

I think it is about time that the Leader of the Opposition understood what this issue is all about, without trying to contrive some false approach which simply does not hold water.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I had known for a long time the Minister was Acting Prime Minister today, but I regret to say that she appears to have caught the contagious bombastic disease of her absent seat-mate. We might as well have been listening to the Minister for International Trade today. His philosophy when dealing with the House of Commons is simple.

Mr. Rodriguez: Deny, deny, deny.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): No, it is don't read the deal. That is number one. Don't debate the issues. That is number two. Try to bluff your way out of any falsehood you can. That is number three.

LENGTH OF COMMITTEE HEARINGS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Acting Prime Minister, while she is in such a benign mood, on such a complex, serious and vital issue for Canada as this, why are Canadians being allowed less than one month to come to Ottawa to appear before the committee and to express their views on this crucial trade arrangement with the United States? Why do the residents of Vancouver Quadra, or of any other riding in Canada, have to travel hundreds or thousands of miles to come to Ottawa to get the chance to have their say on this Bill? Why is the Government afraid of the Canadian public?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, once again the Leader of the Opposition expresses his own fears. If there is one individual in one Party who is afraid of the Canadian public, he is sitting opposite in this House of Commons.

The free trade debate has gone on for a long period of time. It has been debated. It has been raised by hundreds of organizations and thousands of individuals across the country.

Obviously there will be presentations put to the parliamentary committee within the next month. I would think that the individual Members of Parliament who sit on that committee will give very proper attention to those who come before them. There will be full and adequate hearings, and the members of the committee will give proper consideration to the presentations that are made.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, the Acting Prime Minister has a unique opportunity. She is in charge today of the Government of Canada. She can leave the House immediately, go see the Governor General, and let's issue the writ. What about that?

Some Hon. Members: Go, go!

TERMS OF IMPLEMENTING LEGISLATION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Acting Prime Minister has been briefed by the Hon. Member for Brampton—Georgetown. He is looking real tough there. He had better get back to his constituency and protect his behind.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): The Acting Prime Minister talked about fear. More than a month ago the Principal Secretary to the Prime Minister of Canada, Mr. Burney, in a panic, flew down to Washington because, on behalf of the Government of Canada, he was disturbed about what might be in the American legislation, particularly having to do with the tribunal and with the definition of subsidy.

• (1425)

My question is this. How can the parliamentary committee studying the Canadian legislation implementing the deal have any confidence that Canadian concerns expressed by the Prime Minister's Office about the American legislation have been addressed when that legislation has not yet been made public? What is the idea of the Government pushing our legislation through this House in such a hurry when we have not yet seen the American legislation? Why the obscene haste?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Two points with regard to the preamble, Mr. Speaker. One has to do with recent elections. The Lac-Saint-Jean result would not, I think, provide any great support or encouragement to the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss MacDonald: Second, because he raised the issue—

Mr. Riis: You bought that election.

Miss MacDonald: Now we are hearing from the NDP which managed 9 per cent of the vote in Lac-Saint-Jean.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss MacDonald: The Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition raised another point when he said that Mr. Burney went down to Washington in a panic. I want to assure him that I have never known Mr. Burney to do anything in a panic.

Finally, I want to say that we are proceeding with legislation in this House and in committee because this happens to be a sovereign Parliament. We decide the process and the way this Parliament will implement legislation in this country. We do not, like the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition seems to think, take direction from the people he listens to in Washington. Those are the ways in which the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition seems to think this Parliament should operate. We do not think that way because we know this is a sovereign Parliament.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I can only say to the Acting Prime Minister that if her assessment of the key to electoral success for the Tory Party in Lac-Saint-Jean was $164 million, it will cost the Canadian people $45 billion for it to win the general election.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Write the cheque, Mike.

Mr. Axworthy: It would take that much to win Rosedale alone.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct this question to the Acting Prime Minister. We have seen a suppression of the rights of Parliament in its ability to provide access to Canadians to proper committee hearings and the ability to make amendments. In addition, the Canadian people are being put at a major disadvantage vis-à-vis the U.S.

The omnibus Trade Bill is now in front of Congress ready to be passed. Our senior trade negotiator, Mr. Ritchie, has acknowledged that Bill would totally undermine the trade agreement. We have the Chairman of the Finance Committee saying that the U.S. Congress will introduce major new subsidy requirements for Canada as part of its implementing legislation. We now have two damaging pieces of trade legislation before the U.S. Congress, yet we are going to rush our Bill through without proper hearings.

Mr. Gormley: Do you have a question sometime this afternoon?

Mr. Axworthy: Why is the Government ready to suppress the rights of this Parliament and put Canadians at a major disadvantage vis-à-vis the U.S. and its trade legislation, rather than taking the prudent, responsible course and ensuring that the two pieces of legislation are at least brought forward at the same time so we can see where the advantages and disadvantages lie?

• (1430)

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I come back to the point I raised before. Obviously the Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry does not believe that this is a sovereign Parliament. We do. We feel that we should be taking the steps which we as a Government and as a legislature believe should be taken for this country.

There can always be some question as to how many Canadians are in favour of the free trade deal and how many are not. However, every survey which has been taken shows that more Canadians want to have the free trade agreement implemented than are opposed to it.

That happens to be the case with the Opposition. Once again they are backing a losing proposition. They want to tear up the free trade deal. Canadians want to see it implemented and we are doing that.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, if the Minister is saying that the Government's decision is dictated by the polls, then I point out a very important poll which appeared last week which indicated that 65 per cent of Canadians want an election on this issue. We can only conclude that the Government is afraid to have one because it is afraid to put the deal in front of the Canadian people. That happens to be the case.

ENERGY—MANITOBA STUDY

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, the Department of Energy of the Province of Manitoba released a study yesterday which pointed out that if the Canada-U.S. trade deal had been in effect during the last energy crisis, from 1979 to 1982, it would have cost Canadian consumers an additional $72.6 billion because we would not have been able to provide the support and protection to Canadian consumers which was available at that time.

Has the Government undertaken similar studies which would confirm these findings? Would it table those studies? Would it be able to tell us what the cost would be to Canadian consumers if they faced another energy crisis under the Canada-U.S. trade deal? Would it be another $72.6 billion?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I know the Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry likes to pose hypothetical questions to the House—"if it should be this", "if it should be that", and so on.

Quite frankly, with regard to energy deals we saw exactly what it cost the people of Canada in the early 1980s, particularly the people of western Canada, when the former Liberal Government implemented an energy package which did immense damage to this country economically.

We are dealing with the reality of the situation rather than with hypothetical issues. We knew that the national energy plan had to be turned around and we know that this one has to go ahead.

WATER RESOURCES—AMBASSADOR'S TESTIMONY

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Prime Minister as well. On June 16 the Minister for International Trade said, "Water is not affected by the free trade agreement".

Last night in committee Ambassador Ritchie indicated that "there was technical work done" on the question of exempting water from this trade deal. In fact, he indicated that there was a "technical proposition" on the matter prepared, and confirmed "some official from another Department had indicated with great pride that he had some involvement . . . " in that work.

Given this, why has the Government consistently maintained that there was no connection between water and the trade deal when this preparatory work had been done according to the testimony of our ambassador?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I reiterate once again that water and the diversion of water was never on the table. I will repeat that for the Member. Water was never on the table. I hope he will understand that.

In fact, with regard to water policy we have introduced for the first time a water policy which states very clearly that there shall be no diversion of large scale water projects in this country.

I would also like to point out that Mr. Ritchie did say last night that there is nothing in the agreement which would constrain the Government in implementing its water policy. In other words, legislation dealing with water policy could flow from the statements and the policies that have already been introduced, but they are not part of the free trade agreement.

REQUEST FOR INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION ON WATER RESOURCES

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, the point, of course, is that that is precisely what Ambassador

Ritchie went on to say. He went on to say that there was nothing which would prevent action being taken to prevent such inter-basin water transfers as are now threatening the Great Lakes.

Given that there was nothing within the agreement which would prevent that, which is precisely what he said, would the Government, on an emergency basis, bring in legislation to prevent such water transfers which will damage people right across the Great Lakes basin?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I have two points to make. Last night Ambassador Ritchie said that water for export on a large scale was never considered to be part of the free trade agreement.

Second, I will be glad to send the Member a copy of this document dated November 5, 1987, which says, "Large-scale water diversions to the United States will not be considered by the Canadian Government under any circumstances according to the federal water policy tabled today by the Environment Minister".

I would ask the Member to read this so that he will know what the policy of the country and the Government is.

Mr. Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor but I think the Chair should observe that the last question was, at least in the opinion of the Chair, hypothetical. I know this is a very important matter and Ministers, of course, may answer if they wish. However, I would ask Hon. Members who are asking questions to remember the rule that hypothetical questions are, strictly speaking, out of order. I know the Hon. Member will be able to pose his question adequately.

REQUEST FOR INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION ON EMERGENCY BASIS

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I want to point out to the Acting Prime Minister that in the comments which she quoted from Ambassador Ritchie he went on to say that it may have been in error that they made that conclusion. Therefore, I ask the Minister—

Some Hon. Members: Come on, be honest.

Mr. Langdon: I quote from the transcript of the committee. If the Acting Prime Minister has the transcript, let her quote it back.

Given the fact that the Government can move to put legislation in place to protect the Great Lakes basin, will the Government, on an emergency basis, bring such legislation in at once?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, once again I will refer to the water policy which has been enunciated by the Government. I have read what it says. Legislation may indeed at some time flow from this policy, but this is the policy of the Canadian Government. The Minister stated, "Let me state categorically that the Canadian Government opposes the diversion of fresh water across our international borders".

That is the statement of the Minister, that is the policy of the Government. We have a tremendous concern about the water resources of this country, about water policy, and about environmental policy. It was for that reason that the Government of Canada this morning signed an agreement with the Province of British Columbia on the South Moresby Park.

• (1440)

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss MacDonald: That is an indication of the kind of concern that we continue to express.

WATER POLICY—REQUEST FOR INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. It flows from her last reply. It is almost one year since the federal water policy was announced and published. It is a policy that has no teeth until it is transformed into legislation. The Acting Prime Minister may be surprised, but it has no teeth until it is law. It is just a policy.

When will the Government introduce a Bill that will give teeth to the federal water policy that is explained in the document itself which is almost one year old? When will that happen?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I find it absolutely amazing that a Member who was a former Minister of the Environment, who never got around to introducing any kind of policy, should now be saying that we have not moved quickly enough. What was he doing all the time he was in the federal Cabinet? Did anyone ever listen to him? Did anyone ever pay attention? Obviously not, because there was no water policy announced.

This has been announced, and people who are concerned know what the policy of the federal Government is. We will see it moving forward as it should and as it has until now.

Mr. Caccia: Mr. Speaker, it is definitely of secondary importance that I initiated this process of arriving at a federal water policy.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Caccia: It is astonishing to realize that the Acting Prime Minister does not even know that or does not want to recognize it. But that is not the question.

LEGISLATION—TIMING OF INTRODUCTION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, if the Acting Prime Minister is serious about this matter she will have to recognize that this policy has no teeth unless it is transformed into legislation. When will the Government introduce the legislation flowing from the federal water policy so that it will be in the Statutes of Canada, hopefully not to be overridden by Bill C-130 which will have overriding powers on any legislation, according to Article VIII of the agreement? When will the legislation be introduced?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has given some misleding information, probably because he has not read the agreement yet. Bill C-130 has an override only on legislation which pertains to the free trade agreement. The transfer of large bodies of water to the United States is outside the agreement. Therefore, Article VIII of the agreement does not pertain to it. The Hon. Member's preamble is totally wrong.

EFFECT OF AGREEMENT ON ENERGY COSTS

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. It was stated in an earlier question that the Manitoba Energy Department has issued a report, part of which states that the energy bill to Canadians between 1979 and 1982 would have been some $72.6 billion more had this particular agreement been in effect. Will the Government not finally admit to Canadians that this free trade agreement will mean higher energy costs for Canadians and lower energy costs for the Americans, especially in times of energy crisis?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I am sorry that the Hon. Member was not at committee to hear the evidence that has been presented in the last couple of days on that very subject. Let us consider electricity exports for example.

Québec, Ontario, Manitoba, whoever sells their hydro, will sell it for the highest price they can receive. Nothing in the free trade agreement prevents that, and nothing in the free trade agreement states that people in Ontario, Québec or Manitoba must pay the same price the Americans are paying for electricity. As a matter of fact, today Ontario Hydro is selling electricity for three or four times more than what Ontario consumers are paying. I think he will find the same thing in Quebec.

The Hon. Member is away off base. He should come to committee because he will learn a lot.

MANAGEMENT OF ENERGY RESOURCES

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, if the Government would only allow the committee to travel—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. de Jong: If the Government would only allow the committee to start hearing some testimony about how this agreement infringes on the rights of western producing provinces in pricing and developing their energy resources, perhaps the Government would begin to learn what this agreement means to the rights of western Canada. How can the Government claim that it is supporting western producing provinces when it is stripping the West of its right to manage the energy resources?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, nothing in the free trade agreement prevents the provinces from managing their resources. According to the Constitution, they own the resources. There is nothing in the agreement that states they cannot control their resources. The provinces tell the explorers where they can drill and when. If they are lucky enough to find any oil or gas, the provinces tell them how much they can pump, when they can pump and so on. That has not changed under this agreement one iota.

Let me say something about the Hon. Member's preamble. He tells us about all the opposition in the West. Why are all the provincial Premiers supporting this—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Riis: Vander Zalm does not speak for British Columbia.

Mr. McDermid: Why is the support for the free trade agreement in the West so strong? Is the Hon. Member telling—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Kootenay West.

Mr. de Jong: Call an election on it.

Mr. Riis: Vander Zalm does not speak for British Columbia.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: Neither do you.

Mr. Speaker: I would ask Hon. Members, given the time, to co-operate with other Hon. Members who have been waiting to ask a question. The Hon. Member for Kootenay West.

CANADA PENSION PLAN

DISABILITY BENEFITS—DEFINITION OF "SUBSTANTIALLY GAINFUL OCCUPATION"

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Anyone who has ever applied for a Canada Pension Plan disability is familiar with the words "prolonged" and "severe".

But nobody seems to know, including the judges of the Appeal Board, just what is meant by the words "substantially gainful occupation".

The Oxford dictionary describes "substantial" as something of real importance or value, of considerable amount, well-to-do, and describes "gainful" as lucrative or remunerative.

Will the Minister have the wording defined to reflect its true meaning, or change the wording to reflect some of the Appeal Board decisions which would have us believe that licking stamps and addressing envelopes is substantially gainful employment?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has expressed the frustration many Members have experienced with the Canada Pension Plan. I have been concerned about it as well.

I must explain to him that those words lack some definition, but Hon. Members opposite will know that agreement with the provinces is needed for any changes to be brought about to the Canada Pension Plan. I have asked for a review of those words as well as for a recommendation as to how we might change them.

As the Hon. Member has mentioned, obviously there is concern about the application of those words on a case-by-case basis. The review has been undertaken and I hope some changes can be made. However, until they are brought about I am obligated to abide by the rulings of the Pension Appeal Board which, as the Hon. Member knows, is the final court of appeal. His point is valid and that is why the action was taken by this Government.

PUBLIC WORKS

SALE OF FALCONBRIDGE RADAR SITE IN SUDBURY

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Public works, or whoever pretends to be the Minister today. It concerns the sale of the Falconbridge radar site in Sudbury for $140,000 as part of the Government's mad rush to privatize anything. Given that this property includes no less than 97 houses valued at $1.5 million, a gymnasium, a theatre, garages, and an industrial park, with a total value by the Government's own appraisers of $5 million, why was the property sold for 3 per cent of its appraised value?

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank my hon. friend for the preciseness of his question. Under the circumstances, in the absence of the Minister, we will take it under notice and get back to the Member as soon as we can.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, let me be reminded never to hire the Minister of Public Works to act as a real estate agent for me in the future. The people of Canada would not want to hire him either.

[Translation]

SALE OF REAL ESTATE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): I would like to ask the Acting Minister of Public Works a supplementary question. Since the rent alone on the housing units brings in revenues of $250,000 a year, why did the Department sell these properties worth $5 million for $140,000? Why did it not keep these properties and rent homes to people who need them? Why did it give away this public asset?

[English]

Hon. Doug Lewis (Minister of State and Minister of State (Treasury Board)): Well, Mr. Speaker, I simply have to say that I will take the matter under notice and get back to the Hon. Member as soon as we can.

SUPPLY AND SERVICES

COMPUTER INFORMATION NETWORK CONTRACT—RCMP INVESTIGATION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister and it concerns the fairness of the bidding process for a $150 million integrated information and communication system for the Department of External Affairs, which is one of the largest computer services contracts ever awarded in Canada.

Can the Minister explain why Systemhouse Limited of Ottawa and DMR Limited of Montreal, two of the largest and most experienced systems integration firms in Canada, have apparently been passed over for this contract, while the Government is negotiating to make Fenco Lavalin of Toronto the prime contractor despite its limited experience in systems integration as compared to the two competitors?

Can the Minister also explain why the RCMP Commercial Crime Division is investigating this matter? Is this a criminal matter or is it a bungled contract award?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, as the Minister of Supply and Services explained yesterday, the evaluation of the bids has not been completed. The process is ongoing. So I do not think the Member should comment at this point about who or who may not be involved in the bidding process. It is an ongoing procedure.

I also would remind the Member that the Minister said yesterday that investigation, both by the Department of Supply and Services and the Privy Council Office, had concluded that everything that has been done is in compliance with the procedures under which government contracts are evaluated. Finally, I would inform the Member that an RCMP investigation is being conducted because of a complaint raised by one of the bidders and not because of any internal process.

BIDDING PROCESS

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. The two companies which have apparently been passed over because final discussions with Fenco are now under way, just cannot believe that a contract whose most important element is systems integration should be given to a company which, however competent in other fields, has a very limited track record in the area of systems integration, particularly when this is a vital element in the future conduct of Canadian external affairs over the next 20 or 30 years.

The Minister has said that internal investigations have cleared the process and now the RCMP is looking into it, but can the Minister say what is going on? Was the bidding process fair, or has there been some kind of influence exercised to lead to a contract decision which seems to be so contrary to common sense?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, obviously the Member had written out his second question before he heard the answer to the first. I said to him when I replied the first time that the process is ongoing. There has been no award of a contract to date. There has been no decision taken. I would think that he should await the completion of that process before he makes statements about who or who does not have the contract.

DAY CARE

SITUATION IN METROPOLITAN TORONTO

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Metro Toronto has basically frozen the amounts to be given to subsidize day care spaces in that city. The reason is because the municipal Government, although willing to subsidize day care spaces, cannot do so unless the Ontario Government shares the cost, and the Ontario Government, along with other provinces, does not want to get caught spending money that may not be matched by Ottawa. In the meantime, the number of families awaiting day care subsidies has doubled, and in view of the lack of legislation provided to us by the Conservative Government in March, no one is quite sure what funds the federal Government will allocate.

In view of the hardships faced by parents across the country, can the Government provide us today with immediate assistance to day care users?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for the question. If she has patience for a day or two, she might have her answer.

[Translation]

DAY CARE CENTRES—ACCESSIBILITY FOR ALL CHILDREN—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I am very happy to know that the Government is planning to give us an answer on day care. Since we will have an answer soon and we know all the difficulties that face parents and children as a result of the Conservative Government's decision to limit its participation in federal-provincial cost sharing for child care facilities, where before its participation was unlimited, can the Minister tell us whether the Conservative Government is ready to reconsider this aspect of the program within two days and give access to day care to all children instead of limiting it to those with money?

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, the Government came in with a plan which was very reflective of a special committee on which the Hon. Member sat. It was a majority opinion of the committee, and we have been discussing various configurations with the provinces.

My first answer stands with respect to the second half of her question.

IMMIGRATION

OVERSEAS REFUGEE STATUS STANDARDS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. In light of the report I sent to the Minister yesterday concerning defects in Canada's process for overseas refugee selection, will the Minister assure this House that before proclaiming Bill C-55 and Bill C-84, which have the effect of restricting persons from coming to Canada to claim refugee status, she will bring Canada's overseas refugee status standards into line with the United Nations, for example, by eliminating discrimination on the basis of country of origin, whether it is eastern Europe, Chile, India, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Guatemala, or wherever else?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is well aware that we do not discriminate against refugees by country of origin. According to this Government, a refugee is a refugee. It does not matter from which country they come, their source of origin, or whether it is a left wing regime or right wing regime, if someone is fleeing genuine persecution they are welcome in Canada.

EXAMINATION PROCESS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I invite the Minister to study the regulation on self-exiled people which completely contradicts what she just said. I would ask her further whether before proclaiming Bill C-55 and Bill C-84 she will ensure that Canada's overseas refugee selection process is corrected so that our overseas officials will examine the refugee claimants about the grounds of their fear of persecution first, before examining them as to their economic suitability for immigration to Canada?

• (1500)

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, that is very much a part of our process now. The Government increased quite considerably the number of people we have brought from refugee camps in our overseas selection process. Private organizations have done the same thing.

We have also introduced a program called "Women at Risk" which ensures that women heads of households and women with particular problems can be brought out of the camps and to Canada. We intend to continue to focus on improving our standards for overseas selection.

At this point there is no discrimination. We intend to ensure that our policy continues to be fair and humane.

AIRPORTS

OTTAWA INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT—DIRECT FLIGHTS TO U.S.—PRECLEARANCE SERVICES

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. The National Capital Region is the fourth largest metropolitan area in Canada. It is trying to diversify its economic base and lessen its dependence on government. The newly redeveloped Ottawa International Airport is a key element to that diversification.

I would like to ask the Minister what plans his Department has to allow for the introduction of more direct flights to the USA, coupled with possible US customs preclearance, in order to allow for the National Capital Region—

Ms. Copps: What are the people of Hamilton supposed to do with their airport?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa—Carleton: —to attract more business development to this area.

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Carleton for his question.

Recently the United States indicated that it is reluctant to provide preclearance services at additional points in Canada. The people at Transport Canada are working with officers of the United States. However, we have our own reluctance because the United States would like to have some immunity, something with which I disagree. It has not been easy to find a way where we could have that agreement. However, we are always working on trying to find an answer to the problem which, by the way, is not any easier than trying to close the mouth of the Hon. Member for Hamilton East.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

SITUATION IN HAITI—DEATH OF JOSEPH LAFONTANT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Parliamentary Secretary to the Secretary of State for External Affairs and has to do with the deteriorating situation in Haiti.

In the last few days, we learned that General Namphy had suspended the constitution. Today, we were sorry to learn that one of the great defenders of human rights, Joseph Lafontant, was assassinated.

I would like to know what the Canadian Government intends to do. Will it finally come down on the side of democracy or will it continue to support dictatorship?

Hon. Monique Landry (Minister for External Relations): Mr. Speaker, we were of course very affected by the assassination of Joseph Lafontant, whom I know the parliamentary delegation met during its trip to Haiti. We know how much this man is recognized for his stand on human rights.

I asked our ambassador to convey to the Haitian authorities our deep indignation at the death of this esteemed man and I also asked our ambassador to express how urgently we expect the Haitian Government to act to punish the guilty ones.

Mr. Speaker, I think that I must add how really puzzled we are by the present situation in Haiti, given that the authorities there undertook to respect human rights, freedom and democracy. We have serious questions, Mr. Speaker.

Point of Order—Mr. Scott (Hamilton--Wentworth)

PROPOSALS MADE TO GOVERNMENT BY QUÉBEC-HAITI SOLIDARITY COALITION

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary is directed to the Minister. Haitians, as the Minister ought to know, want only one thing and that is a democratic country where they are free to exercise their fundamental rights.

The Coalition de solidarité Québec-Haïti has made some very specific proposals to the Government, asking it to transmit certain instructions to the staff of the Canadian embassy.

I would like to ask the Minister whether the Canadian Government has accepted these proposals and whether the Government will, in fact, immediately proceed to implement the proposals, as suggested by the Coalition de solidarité Québec-Haïti.

Hon. Monique Landry (Minister for External Relations): Mr. Speaker, I am aware of this letter which was, of course, sent to the Secretary of State for External Affairs, who intends to reply as soon as possible.

Meanwhile, I can inform the Hon. Member that we have suspended bilateral aid planning and that we are taking a long, hard look at the continuity of bilateral aid.

We shall, of course, consider the Committee's recommendations in terms of respect for human rights, the application of democratic principles, and also the freedom that should exist in a country like Haiti.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry to have to say that that closes off Question Period. I know that the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt was hoping to catch the Speaker's eye. If he is here tomorrow I guarantee him that he will.

The Chair recognizes the Hon. Member for Hamilton—Wentworth on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

ALLEGED ABUSE OF RULES DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Mr. Geoff Scott (Hamilton—Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a brief point of order which I believe affects directly all Members of this House and indirectly the vast viewing audience of these proceedings.

My point of order arises not out of one isolated incident this afternoon but from an accumulation of exchanges that I have witnessed during recent days and weeks. I am referring, Mr. Speaker, to the continuing flagrant abuse of parliamentary rules during Question Period, particularly the unholy length and argumentative nature of preambles and some answers—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Scott (Hamilton—Wentworth): —which limit Members on all sides the right to ask questions.

Let me state at the outset that through you, Mr. Speaker, the atmosphere in this House during Question Period has improved. By and large dirty words are out and during the recent past no Members have been thrown out for unparliamentary behaviour. That is a credit, I think, to all MPs, and most assuredly to you, Sir, as a very fine occupant of the chair.

That being said, what has deteriorated, and where improvement is needed, is with the conduct, dispatch and presentation of Question Period. Since this daily 45 minutes to one hour amounts to the most highly visible and newsworthy time of our parliamentary day, it is only natural that Hon. Members will use every opportunity to play to the Press Gallery and to the home-viewing audience. When Members ask a question they are not talking to the Government, they are talking to the national media. We all do it.

In the process we are forgetting that this is Question Period—not debate. My reading of the parliamentary rules, and in particular Beauchesne's, says that questions should be preceded by short, sharp preamble, and that questions should be seeking present or future government policy.

You and I know, Mr. Speaker, that there are some terse, telegraphic and pointed questioners in the House. I will just give the Chair three or four examples. I think of the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) who always gets an answer whether she likes the answer or not. Her questions are always well briefed. I think of the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) who regularly punches through his material with brevity. The Hon. Member for Cape Breton Highlands—Canso (Mr. O'Neil) is another who had an exchange yesterday with the Associate Minister of National Defence (Mr. Dick).

Ms. Copps: What is my grade, sir?

Mr. Scott (Hamilton—Wentworth): The Hon. Member for Vancouver East (Ms. Mitchell) is an expert questioner as well.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, this is an abuse. Come on. Sit down! This has to be a big farce.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): He is giving us all a report card.

Ms. Copps: And he gets an F.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. There is some agitation among some Hon. Members about this point of order, and there is a suggestion that it is an abuse of the rules. It is a point of order. It concerns conduct in this place. I do not know how the Speaker, because I may not altogether enjoy hearing this, can cut it off. I will hear other Hon. Members in a moment. I will not let it go on unduly long.

• (1510)

Mr. Scott (Hamilton—Wentworth): I know of too many cases, which I will not cite here, of lengthy preambles which are irrelevant and argumentative. These diatribes-cum-political statements are being smuggled in. Some Members are speaking for too long and other Members are suffering the penalty of the clock running out at the 45-minute mark. Moreover, these violations of rules are annoying to the public because once Your Honour rises to intervene, those watching hear only the barracking, name-calling, and general school-room hubbub which does nothing to enhance the dignity of this place.

I realize, Sir, that the lengthy partisan pitches put you as Speaker in a difficult position. A Minister will naturally move in and take on the argumentative nature of the preamble before he or she gets to the substance of the question, and that is only fair.

But we are also having constant repetition because when one opposition Party happens to pre-empt a second opposition Party on a question, then the question is asked not once, not twice, but five times or ten times to try to get different answers and to try to make the national news. When constantly repetitive questions are asked again we are in clear violation of the rules under Beauchesne's.

Ms. Copps: We never get any answers and we will continue to ask the questions.

Mr. Scott (Hamilton—Wentworth): If the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) will quieten down for a moment more, I can remember former Liberal Government appointed Speakers and I think particularly of the Hon. Lucien Lamoureux, and Speaker James Jerome, who were constantly admonishing Conservative and New Democratic opposition Members about repetitious questions which clearly are out of order, and detailed questions which should be placed on the Order Paper.

In conclusion, if we do not exactly need to overhaul Question Period, there are a couple of routes that we could take to restore some of the dignity and decorum of this place. Through you, Mr. Speaker, I would like to suggest that one route we could take would be to refer Question Period concerns to the House Leaders of the three Parties, or second, and perhaps preferable, to the House Leadership of the colleagues who have enough on their plates these days, it might be advisable to set up an ad hoc committee of concerned colleagues on all sides of the House to compile our thoughts and suggestions on tightening up Question Period.

The goal would be to allow for better exchanges and more questions, thereby making life easier on Members and on our viewing audience. Clearly we need some mechanism to resurrect the true nature of Question Period and to make more effective this most high profile hour of any sitting day.

Point of Order—Mr. Scott (Hamilton--Wentworth)

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, with an unusual display of crocodile tears unheard of in this Parliament, if not in the history of Parliament, whether or not he realizes it, the Hon. Member has reflected unfairly on your conduct, Sir, of Question Period. The Hon. Member has made continued reference to what he calls the "rules". There are only two references in the rules, that is, the Standing Orders of the House with respect to Question Period. One Standing Order relates to when in the day Question Period takes place, and how long it should be, and it is 45 minutes, not one hour. Second, Standing Order 65(1)(a) states:

> Questions on matters of urgency may, at the time specified in Standing Order 19(4), be addressed orally to Ministers of the Crown, provided however that, if in the opinion of the Speaker a question is not urgent, he or she may direct that it be placed on the Order Paper.

This has always been interpreted to mean that the Speaker has the absolute discretion as to the type of questions and, for that matter, the answers, that may be allowed during Question Period. However, from time to time individual Speakers have announced guidelines as to how they would use the power given to them under the Standing Orders with respect to Question Period. These guidelines have been published in successive editions of Beauchesne's.

My hon. friend has failed to note that the most recent set of guidelines were those announced in this Parliament by your distinguished predecessor. Those guidelines were set down some time after this Parliament began, and some time after the practices which my hon. friend appears to be complaining of were established and very much in terms of precedents as to what were accepted, not only by yourself, but your predecessors in other Parliaments.

I want to point out to you, Mr. Speaker, that if my hon. friend is complaining about preambles, if my hon. friend is complaining about the content of questions, then in all fairness he should also talk about the answers. He should particularly talk about the length of answers and what often appears to be a deliberate effort, and I hope I am wrong in this, on the part of Ministers answering to talk out Question Period and to do the very thing my hon. friend complains of, that is, to prevent Hon. Members on both sides of the House from putting questions within the time limited by the rules for Question Period.

I draw your attention, Mr. Speaker, to this rather strange and unfortunate lack of balance in the point of order of my hon. friend. Everything my hon. friend complains of was done over and over again in previous Parliaments by members of his Party when they were in Opposition and therefore precedents were established in terms of preambles, in terms of length of questions, and in terms of content of questions which I do not think that my hon. friend can credibly complain of at this time because of what he and his colleagues did when they were in Opposition.

In conclusion, as far as I am concerned you have the judgment, Mr. Speaker, in the exercise of the authority given to you under our rules to deal with the matter of Question Period fairly with respect to people on all sides of the House. If you want to give consideration to the point raised by my hon. friend, there is no way it can be done in an equitable way unless you pay particular attention to the length and content of the answers given by Ministers.

Question Period is one of the few checks and balances in our system, particularly when a Government has a majority. Question Period is particularly an instrument of opposition Members to hold to account the members of the Government. If members of the Opposition, through such points of order as this, are prevented from carrying out their duty on behalf of the Canadian people, then this entire Parliament suffers, and the entire parliamentary institutions are undermined.

I will concede that my hon. friend has raised this point of order today out of some sincere concern, but he has obviously forgotten the past and the precedents created by the past. He has obviously forgotten the role of answers with respect to Question Period, and today, perhaps most important of all, from the perspective of the Government House Leader (Mr. Lewis), with his point of order he is eating up time which the Government and other members of this House hoped to spend debating and making decisions on legislation.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I, too, wish to participate in this debate. While the points raised by my hon. colleague in his point of order reflect concerns that all of us share, raising it in this manner was inappropriate. It is a direct attack on the Chair and the work that the Chair is doing in terms of conducting the affairs of the House. However, the point the Hon. Member made was that the members of the Opposition have extremely long preambles. I would ask my hon. friend to do a content analysis of yesterday's Hansard. If he does, he will notice that time after time members in the Opposition asked questions of the Minister for International Trade (Mr. Crosbie). Some of these questions are three or four or five lines and then a half a page for the Minister for International Trade's reaction. Time and time again, it is short, concise and then a long, convoluted bafflegab from the Minister for International Trade.

It is very clear. It does not take any particular analysis to simply glance at Hansard and find that it is not the opposition Members' questions that are exceedingly lengthy, but the incredibly convoluted answers. Actually, they are not answers. I guess that is why it is called Question Period, because there are never any answers; there are only questions.

I would ask my hon. friend, before he is so critical of the Opposition, to take a look at what his own Ministers are doing in terms of using up valuable time during Question Period, to kill the clock. Yesterday's Hansard portrays that very clearly.

I also want to take this opportunity to remind the House that a year ago we in the New Democratic Party, during the routine Question Period, would average about seven questioners on a typical Question Period day. We are now often down to an average of four questioners.

An Hon. Member: Like today.

Mr. Riis: I am not saying that we are not guilty ourselves at times of perhaps a lengthy preamble. When the questions raised are long and the responses are doubly long and nobody is ever criticized or ever taken up for that fact, it encourages others to participate on longer questions and longer responses.

As my hon. colleague from New Westminster—Coquitlam indicated, the designated time for statements allows a Member to have up to 60 seconds to make a comment. That is the maximum. Perhaps we want to consider some time allotment so that the Member could use that time in terms of a concise question, with the idea that the response would be of an equal period and equally concise.

While I do not appreciate the point raised or the way my hon. friend has raised a point—because I do think it is a direct attack on the Chair—I think that his comments reflect a great number of concerns from Members on both sides of the House in terms of the interplay during Question Period, and the recognition that it has to be tightened up.

Mr. Speaker: I am going to exercise the prerogative of the Chair and close off this debate. First of all, I am going to close it off because, while I have listened to it as a point of order, as I think I am bound to do, if it is to be carried on, this is not the place in which to carry it on.

If there is complaint and concern on both sides of the House with respect to any matter of order in this Chamber, naturally the Chair must hear that concern, but having had the point made and having heard the reply, which I have heard from eloquent spokespersons of both the Official Opposition and the New Democratic Party, the debate ought to carry on in another place.

Now, may I just say this. There is nothing particularly easy for Hon. Members who are sometimes asking questions in this place, or Ministers who are replying.

I have said on other occasions that this is not a tea party. There are strong views held and those strong views of course will be replied to in a strong way. If a question has an argumentative turn to it, it is understandable that some argument will come back by way of reply. I invite all Hon. Members to repair to the Table Officers and take a look at the exact time of questions and answers, not just over the last couple of days but over an extensive period of time. I think that they will probably be well instructed to do so.

In any event, I have listened to the observations of the Hon. Member for Hamilton—Wentworth (Mr. Scott), the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray), the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis), and I would ask other Hon. Members to co-operate with the Chair. If they want to continue this discussion further, there is, of course, another place to do so.

It may well be that the Chair, with the help of Members on both sides, can have more Members up. The Chair is concerned about that and it has ideas that may be helpful to both sides. If I am requested to share them with Members in a constructive way, I would be quite prepared to do so.

I might just say, in remarking on something that the Hon. Member for Windsor West said, that other Speakers have set out a long list of suggestions, guidelines and guides as to the proper conduct of Question Period. These guides are of course always helpful. Ultimately, this place operates on the basis of what it collectively is prepared to accept.

I am a servant of all of the Members here, and as soon as you wish me to conduct these affairs in a different way, where I feel that there is support for some change one way or the other on both sides of the House, I give you my complete assurance that I will certainly try to do that.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: I would point out one thing. I think it is important that we all understand that while at times exchanges are noisy and may be too lengthy in Question Period for some and despite the fact that there is very vigorous debate and exchange in this place, for the most part, over many, many months this has been a civil place where it has been possible for the Government and the Opposition to engage in discussion as to the conduct of business, without rancour, and with particular expedition in a great many places. Now, that says something for the general mood in this place. I say this as your Speaker. It also says a great deal for the co-operation which Hon. Members have given to their Speaker, for which I thank you.

The Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray).

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I believe it was the intention of the Deputy Government House Leader to present a motion to the House with respect to the time of adjournment today. Can he indicate if he is ready to do so now or very soon?

Mr. Lewis: Immediately after the three o'clock vote.

Mr. Speaker: I take it from the whispered exchange that the Minister of State may speak later.

Mr. Lewis: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: Is the Hon. Member for Windsor West satisfied at the moment?

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Yes.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Lewis: I rise on a point of order, Madam Speaker. There have been discussions among the Parties and I think you will find that if you were to call Bill C-84 immediately, a recorded division could be taken immediately without the necessity of ringing the bells.

I also wish to advise the House that, after that, in taking up the business of the House, if there are any other recorded divisions requested, those divisions will be deferred until 6 p.m. tomorrow.

Having made those points, I would advise the House that there have been discussions among the Parties with respect to business, and in view of the progress we are making I move: That this House adjourn at 6 p.m. this evening.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The House has heard the suggestion made by the Hon. Minister of State. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The House will now proceed to the taking of the deferred divisions on Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Immigration Act, 1976.

IMMIGRATION ACT, 1976

MEASURE TO AMEND—CONSIDERATION OF SENATE AMENDMENTS

The House resumed consideration of the amendments made by the Senate to Bill C-84, an Act to amend the Immigration Act, 1976 and the Criminal code in consequence thereof; and the motions of Mrs. McDougall (p. 17445) and (p. 17445); Mr. Marchi (p. 17450); and Mr. Heap (p. 17453).

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Shall I dispense with the ringing of the bells?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The House divided on the amendment (Mr. Marchi), which was negatived on the following division:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I declare the amendment lost.

Mr. Heap: On a point of order, Madam Speaker. I understand from the ruling this morning that an amendment that I introduced was not appropriately before the House at that time, but would be at this time, the previous amendment having been disposed of. If so, I ask leave to move the amendment now.

Mr. Gauthier: Madam Speaker, we would agree to the vote being taken at this time but that the previous vote would apply to this vote.

• (1600)

Mr. Heap: Madam Speaker, I would have no objection to the Hon. Member's suggestion after I have moved my motion.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is there unanimous consent for the Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap) to move his motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Heap: Madam Speaker, I move:

That Section 91.1(1)(d), as amended by the Government, be amended by deleting the words "the country would allow passengers to return to that country" and inserting therefor the words "the country would admit the passengers to that country".

Mr. Gauthier: Now that the amendment has been put I think you should seek unanimous consent to apply the same vote to the amendment as was taken on the amendment of the Hon. Member for York West (Mr. Marchi).

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I am sure the Hon. Member will allow me to put the question officially to the House. Is there unanimous consent that the previous vote be applied to this amendment?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Gauthier: Once again, Madam Speaker, I think you would find a unanimous disposition to apply the previous vote to this question, but in reverse. Some day we will win one.

Mr. Tobin: Madam Speaker, could my name be added to the count on this latest vote for which I would have been present, and to subsequent votes?

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Table Officers have heard the request by the Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin).

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I declare the amendment lost.

The next question is on the motion of Mrs. McDougall, which reads:

Canadian International Trade Tribunal Act

That clause 8 of Bill C-84 be amended by striking out line 17 on page 9 and substituting the following:

"portation by sea.

4) If, during the second session of the thirty-third Parliament, Bill C-55 entitled An Act to amend the Immigration Act, 1976 and to amend other Acts in consequence thereof is assented to, this section shall cease to be in force six months after the day on which that Act comes into force."

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-110, an Act to establish the Canadian International Trade Tribunal and to amend or repeal other Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): There are 15 motions on the Order Paper and Notices offered in amendment to Bill C-110, an Act to establish the Canadian International Trade Tribunal and to amend or repeal other Acts in consequence thereof.

Motions Nos. 1 to 7 inclusive, 10, 11, 13 and 14, stand in the name of the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon).

Motions Nos. 8, 12 and 15 stand in the name of the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson).

[Translation]

The Chair has some hesitation about Motion No. 1 which adds to Clause 2 a definition of the term "domestic producers of goods". According to the definition, this term would cover any firm employing, or any trade union representing, workers producing the goods involved. If I understand the Bill correctly, the right to file a complaint directly with the International Trade Tribunal, on the grounds of injury as defined in the legislation, is granted to all Canadian producers.

Under Paragraph 26(1)(b), an inquiry by the International Trade Tribunal into a complaint may not be initiated unless the complaint is made by or on behalf of domestic producers who produce a major proportion of domestic production of the like or directly competitive goods. There is no provision for direct access to the International Trade Tribunal by a firm employing, or any trade union representing, workers producing the goods involved.

[English]

Furthermore, the Member is attempting to take the power away from the Governor in Council to make regulations with respect to defining the term "domestic producers" in Clause 40(b).

[Translation]

For the reasons just mentioned, I have concluded that this amendment is beyond the scope of the Bill as adopted on second reading in the House.

Furthermore, this is a substantive amendment of the interpretation clause of the Bill. I would refer the Hon. Member to citation 773 (10) of Beauchesne's, Fifth Edition, page 233, and I quote:

> (10) A substantive amendment may not be introduced by way of a modification to the interpretation clause of a bill. Journals, May 21, 1970, p. 835.

Consequently, the motion is ruled out of order.

[English]

I have concerns with regard to Motions Nos. 2, 3 and 4. These motions are related because the intent is to grant the International Trade Tribunal the power to initiate injury-related inquiries on its own. I understand that an identical motion as to Motion No. 3 was ruled out of order at the committee stage. In Clause 16, the powers, duties and functions of the International Trade Tribunal are stated. These powers are further elaborated in Clauses 18, 19 and 20 which provide for the kind of references of inquiries which the Governor in Council and the Minister of Finance may authorize the International Trade Tribunal to undertake.

[Translation]

According to the Chair, it would be beyond the scope of the Bill as adopted on second reading by the House to give the International Trade Tribunal the power to conduct inquiries as a matter of course. The motion is therefore ruled out of order.

[English]

Motions Nos. 5, 6, 7 and 10 are in order but they will be grouped for debate. A vote on Motion No. 5 will also apply to Motions Nos. 6, 7 and 10.

[Translation]

Motions Nos. 8 and 9 which are also in order will be grouped for debate. A vote on Motion No. 8 will dispose of Motion No. 9.

[English]

Motion No. 11 is in order and it will be debated and voted on separately.

[Translation]

Motions Nos. 12 and 13 concerning reports following inquiries by the International Trade Tribunal will be grouped for debate, and a vote on Motion No. 12 will dispose of Motion No. 13.

[English]

Motions Nos. 14 and 15 are in order but will be debated and voted on separately.

[Translation]

The House will now proceed to consideration of the first group, being Motions Nos. 5, 6, 7 and 10.

[English]

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor moved:

Motion No. 5

That Bill C-110 be amended in Clause 22 by striking out lines 18 to 24 at page 7 and substituting the following therefor:

"22. In Sections 23 to 30 'complaint' means a written complaint filed with the Tribunal under subsection 23(1), and, for the purposes of those sections, a complaint is properly documented if it contains the information required by section 23 together with such other information as the Tribunal may reasonably require pursuant to Section 24."

That Bill C-110 be amended in clause 23 by striking out lines 25 to 35 at page 7 and substituting the following therefor:

"23.(1) Any domestic producer of goods that are like or directly and competitive with goods being imported into Canada, or any person or association acting on behalf of any such domestic producer, may file a written complaint with the Tribunal alleging that the imported goods are being or are about to be imported at such prices, in such quantities and under such conditions as to cause or threaten to cause serious or other injury to domestic production of like or directly competitive goods."

[Translation]

Motion No. 7.

—That Bill C-110 be amended in Clause 26 by striking out lines 13 to 22 at page 9 and substituting the following therefor:

"(a) that the information provided by the complainant and any other information examined by the Tribunal disclose a reasonable indication that the goods that are the subject of the complaint are or are about to be imported at such prices, in such quantities and under such conditions as to cause or threaten to cause serious or other injury to domestic production of like or directly competitive goods."—

[English]

Bill C-110 be amended in clause 27 by striking out lines 33 to 42 at page 11 and substituting the following therefor:

"27.(1) The Tribunal shall, in an inquiry into a complaint, determine whether, having regard to any regulation made pursuant to paragraph 40(a), the goods that are the subject of the complaint are being or are about to be imported at such prices, in such quantities and under such conditions as to cause or threaten to cause serious or other injury to domestic production of like or directly competitive goods."

He said: Madam Speaker, I thank you for your ruling with respect to this Bill. As Members of the House will recall, the Bill attempts to put together the three trade tribunals which presently exist in this country: The Textile and Clothing Board, the Tariff Board, and the Special Import Tribunal. In doing so there are some serious powers which at the moment are presently held by the textile and clothing board, including powers to put recommendations to the Minister, to initiate inquiries, and I must say myself that I am disappointed the Government has chosen to reduce the independence and capacity of this new institution to act at arm's length from the Government as compared with the textile and clothing board from the past.

Perhaps more important for the specific industries to which I refer, these industries themselves are treated quite differently under the international regime which exists under GATT. Textiles and clothing have been, since 1962, the subject of special consideration under, first, the long-term cotton arrangement and subsequently under the multifibre arrangement. Yet we in this Bill have a treatment of these industries which represents completely the same kind of very tough and strict definition of injury which is to apply to all industries across the country, despite the fact, as I say, that there is a difference recognized at the international level and a difference applied there.

It is for this reason that I have moved these amendments. They have some relationship to some other amendments about which I will be talking later. However, with respect to the various motions, if I can go through them in order, Motion No. 5 is an attempt to loosen up and perhaps clarify also for companies the information which they have to provide to this new Canadian international trade tribunal in order to have a hearing in front of that tribunal. An industry is asked to provide certain information and the information for this complaint, as in the present Clause 22, left it very much to the tribunal to decide if it is satisfied that it has been presented with the material required by Clause 22.

My amendment to the motion suggests that it is not up to the tribunal to make this decision but simply that if the details which are outlined in Clause 23 are in fact provided to the tribunal, then the complaint must be heard. In short, it opens up access to the tribunal itself so that our industries across the country, which are affected by import pressure, can put their complaints before this tribunal successfully.

With respect to Motion No. 6, what we are attempting to do is to set forth a somewhat looser definition of what constitutes import pressure or import damage. The key point in comparing the two clauses, the existing Clause 23 and the suggested amendment, is that we have to take account, in analysing what import damage is, not just of the quantities and the conditions which might cause or threaten serious injury to domestic producers, but the prices at which these imports are coming into the country. If these prices are, for instance, such as to themselves constitute a threat which could cost us thousands of jobs, even if there has been no change in the quantities or in the basic competitive conditions which exist within the industry, the difference which is constituted by such prices is something which should be taken into account by the tribunal.

I should indicate that a number of these amendments have been directly influenced by the testimony put before our trade tribunal hearings on Bill C-110 by the various witnesses who made presentations from industry, from the existing textile and clothing board chairperson and from certain testimony written and provided by trade unions.

With respect to Motion No. 7, the suggestion here refers to Clause 26. Again there is an attempt to introduce into Clause 26 this same notion of prices as an important consideration in considering the potential impact of imports coming into the country. I think, if I may say so, that to ignore the price at which imports are coming into the country is really a serious gap in this present Bill.

With respect to the other motion which is grouped here, which is Motion No. 10, precisely the same point is being made with respect to Clause 27. Clause No. 27 in this case also leaves out the question of price.

• (1630)

As economists would want to point out, price and the potential undercutting of price which exists with respect to those items which are produced here in Canada are important considerations. One really cannot determine what is supposed to be determined by each of these clauses, which is the potential to cause or threaten to cause serious or other injury to domestic production of like or directly competitive goods.

If I can conclude, Madam Speaker, these are minor amendments but ones which I believe will improve significantly this Bill with respect to the benefits which Canadian industry may expect to receive from the Bill in the future.

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Madam Speaker, I would like to respond to my hon. friend's proposed amendments to this Bill. I commend him for the close interest he has taken in this piece of legislation. I have to disagree with him when he says that these are minor amendments. In fact, they add up to a major attack on the whole concept of the GATT. His Party has often suggested that the GATT be appealed to in the place of, for example, the free trade agreement. In this particular set of amendments, and in others which I think he will propose later, he is attacking in essence fundamental standards behind the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. I want to address myself to those amendments in order to make this clear to the House.

I would also like to say that there may be a misunderstanding in his close study of the Bill in terms of the wider context in which this Bill is placed. He began his comments—and this may be the source of his troubles—with reference to some of the powers that the present Textile and Clothing Board has, in particular its authority to self-initiate an inquiry about injury. I remind the Hon. Member that the Textile and Clothing Board has only used this authority in the past to self-initiate an inquiry about injury in the context of reviews of existing textile and clothing import quotas to determine whether or not they should be continued or varied. One would have to be pretty conversant with the board to know that. But that in fact has been the history.

Inquiries into new product areas, something which may be at the heart of the Hon. Member's concern, which can be initiated at the request of industry or the Minister, are different. The provisions of this Bill, Bill C-110, will continue to let industry petition the tribunal for inquiries into new product areas or to let the Government request an inquiry.

That is not being blocked. There is no power that the Textile and Clothing Board has today that would not be available with regard to new product areas under Bill C-110 for the new trade tribunal that we are establishing.

I think the Hon. Member is concerned about where the restraints come from to prevent us from having a flood of imports, textiles and so on into Canada. That is part of the broader context, too, that I want to point out to him. These broader restraints imposed on textile and clothing imports into Canada come from the negotiation of bilateral agreements with exporting countries under the multi-fibre arrangement. This arrangement, known as the MFA, which is a derogation from the GATT in that it provides for border actions on the basis of bilateral agreements rather than on a global basis against imports from all sources, is still in place. I made that point in committee. However, I do not know whether or not the Hon. Member was there that day. Nothing will change that. The MFA only requires evidence that textile and clothing imports are causing what is called market disruption. No compensation is required to be paid when these arrangements are worked out.

In comparison, a safeguard action, which is what we are talking about this afternoon, is totally different. So that whole process, the non-safeguard part of the textile and clothing arrangement, those bilateral agreements under the MFA, remain. It is business as usual for them.

During the past 10 years, and more particularly since 1981, the Government has used bilateral restraint agreements to protect the textile and clothing industry. These restraint agreements permitted under the multi-fibre arrangement are very flexible and much less costly than taking safeguard actions. That is not the way to deal with this matter. The way to go is to work on those bilateral restraint agreements if flexibility is wanted.

It is important for me also to tell the House that External Affairs officials are responsible for the bilateral negotiations and deals with industry problems. They deal with these problems as requests arise. It is a very flexible system. The industry is well aware of the process in that area. I gather the industry said that during the committee hearings that were held on the morning of May 19. This is a broad context to deal with all of these amendments which have been suggested.

Let me deal precisely with the motions. I gather Motions Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4, if I heard the Speaker properly, are out of order. I will speak now to Motions Nos. 5, 6, 7 and 10, which I believe are to be debated at this time.

Motion No. 5 deals with Clause 22. The basis of the Hon. Member's amendment would seriously weaken the requirement that a complaint be documented properly. As a matter of fact, if one starts to attack the concept of proper documentation, one can find the whole evidence of safeguard actions tumbling down.

I understand the desire that the Hon. Member has expressed to avoid imposing an undue information requirement on producers petitioning the new tribunal. However, for the tribunal to undertake an inquiry and to examine for serious injury it is absolutely indispensable that the tribunal be satisfied that the documentation it has before it is adequate at the outset and thus later avoid no injury findings because of inadequate initial information.

Because of the lower standard in the proposed amendment, the complaint may be deemed to be properly documented, even if the tribunal is not able to satisfy itself that the complaint contains the necessary information. This is a very awkward posture for the tribunal to be put into. However, once a complaint is accepted as properly documented the tribunal has only 30 days to decide whether or not to initiate a safeguard inquiry. In such cases the tribunal may not be able to initiate an investigation because the complaint may not have disclosed an acceptable indication of increased imports causing serious injury. Because of the documentation problem this amendment is flawed.

With respect to Motion No. 6, in essence, it would put Canada ultra vires with respect to our obligations to the GATT. The changes embodied in this proposed amendment to Clause 23 and the corresponding change to Clause 26 would put Canada ultra vires with respect to its GATT obligations for Article 19, safeguard actions. These are obligations for everybody and not just for Canada under the GATT. The Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon) is proposing that there be a right of direct access in the case of a threat of increased imports, whereas GATT requires an increase in imports, not a threat, not a dark cloud, but actual empirical proof that there is an increase in imports.

Aside from the amendment being inconsistent with GATT, opening up the system in this manner would have a very chilling effect on trade. If this process were used in this manner, we would cause reverberations with our trading partners. Similarly, allowing for direct access where only injury rather than serious injury has occurred would also be inconsistent with the GATT safeguard provisions. Injury is not consistent with GATT; serious injury is consistent with GATT.

The amendment of the Hon. Member makes its case on injury rather than on serious injury. The Hon. Member may be attempting to alter the basic purpose of the legislation to allow the tribunal to undertake direct access inquiries for non-safeguard purposes. That may be what the Hon. Member's attempt is. However, the legislation is not designed for non-safeguard purposes. It is there for the whole safeguard process. That amendment is a serious mistake.

I now want to speak to Motion No. 7 which speaks to Clause 26. It is the same problem, and I already spelled out my concerns with this motion when I addressed the amendment proposed to Clause 23 in Motion No. 6. GATT does not permit

Article 19 safeguard action on the basis of a threat of imports, or on the basis of any other type of injury funding other than "serious injury". Therefore, there has to be serious injury to put this process in place under Article 19 of GATT. My argument for Motion No. 7 is the same as my argument for Motion No. 6.

Finally, Motion No. 10 speaks to Clause 27. The amendment proposed in Motion No. 10 to Clause 27 would radically change the concept of the legislation in its entirety. This clause was discussed at great length in committee. The committee endorsed the concept that increased imports must be the principal cause of serious injury. The amendment set out in Motion No. 10 eliminates this concept, and at the same time introduces the notion of other injury. This is contrary to Article 19 of the GATT provisions which only provide for safeguard injury in the case of serious injury. The revised language also contains the concept of threat of imports which, as I have already stated, is not permitted under GATT.

I commend the Hon. Member for following this Bill carefully, but for those reasons the amendments are not minor. They are quite major mistakes, and I say that the House must not support those amendments.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon) has already had the floor on this grouping. I would need unanimous consent to recognize the Hon. Member.

Mr. Langdon: I rise on a point of order, Madam Speaker. If I am not mistaken, it is my understanding that at report stage it is possible to speak a number of times, within the constraints of time; is that not correct?

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): That would apply to Committee of the Whole. At report stage normally an Hon. Member can speak for 10 minutes on each of the groupings, unless there is unanimous consent. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): There is not unanimous consent so I cannot recognize the Hon. Member at this time.

Is the House ready for the question on the first grouping? The first question is on Motion No. 5. I should remind Hon. Members that the vote on Motion No. 5 will also apply to Motions Nos. 6, 7, and 10.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

I declare the motions negatived.

Motions Nos. 5, 6, 7, and 10 negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The next grouping is for Motions Nos. 8 and 9.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Madam Speaker, I think that if you ask for unanimous consent you will find that the House is disposed to allow the Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) to introduce the motion of the Member for Trinity (Ms. Nicholson).

[English]

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor) moved:

Motion No. 9.

That Bill C-110 be amended in Clause 26 by adding immediately after line 27 at page 9 the following:

"(c) that what constitutes total domestic production under subparagraph (b) excludes the production of those domestic producers who are related to any exporter or importer of the like or directly competitive goods or are themselves importers of such products; and".

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion? On debate the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau).

[Translation]

Mr. Raymond Garneau (for Ms. Nicholson (Trinity)) moved:

Motion No. 8.

—That Bill C-110 be amended in Clause 26 by striking out lines 24 and 25 at page 9 and substituting the following therefor:

"behalf of any domestic producer".

Madam Speaker, I would like to say a few words on Motion No. 8. Essentially, the Bill proposes to allow groups of domestic producers who are responsible for or represent an important part or the major proportion of a given production to file a complaint with the Tribunal asking it to conduct an inquiry to determine whether or not they have been the victims of an injustice.

The amendment I am moving on behalf of my colleague the Member for Trinity (Ms. Nicholson) is to the effect that a producer who feels that certain circumstances have caused him injury could himself file a complaint with the Tribunal to ask it to conduct an inquiry to determine whether or not Canadian industry has been adversely affected by massive quantities of imported goods that might suddenly flow into the country at a certain point.

Madam Speaker, when the Legislative Committee debated the Bill we broadened the clause somewhat, because the original text of the Bill used the following expression, in English: "a major proportion of domestic production". "A part or a proportion of more than 50 per cent" . . . and an amendment was made to modify the clause somewhat, and to say "an important part".

But there are several types of industries in Canada where large producers may represent 55, 60, or 65 per cent of production, and very often those major producers are controlled by national interests or, quite frequently, by non-resident shareholders. And for all sorts of reasons related to international ramifications, those large producers might object to complaints being filed with the Tribunal to ask that Tribunal to conduct an inquiry on the import of unreasonable quantities of goods or the sale of goods at unjustifiably low prices.

The result would be that domestic producers, or the smaller ones at least, would find it impossible to file their complaints with the Tribunal to ask it to investigate massive imports affecting them.

The Government claims that this would be an excessive simplification and might increase the complaints. In any case, small producers or producers representing 5, 6 or 7 per cent of a given production are often represented by associations that could make representations on their behalf to the Tribunal and file a complaint asking that an inquiry be conducted into the massive imports of goods being sold at overly competitive prices in the light of production costs in Canada.

It is nice to think that things might happen that way, but here again, there are several types of production where the number of producers is so small that the associations, even though they represent everyone, may have different objectives and perspectives, especially if one producer is totally dominant for a given product.

Thus, the purpose of the amendment is to make the inquiry process accessible to a domestic producer who feels that he has really been wronged. Pursuant to the clauses that precede clause 26, he would have to provide sufficient information to show that an inquiry is justified, but the amendment would allow a producer to file a complaint and initiate the process on his own.

The need is obvious if one looks at what has been done in other countries; I believe that in some recent cases in the United States, concerning potash particularly, the major producers were not the ones to file the complaint that was judged to be in order and that triggered the whole inquiry process which led to the result you are familiar with.

If American producers are protected in that way, I don't see why we on the Canadian side could not offer the same possibility to a producer who feels that the survival of his business is threatened, as well as the jobs he offers to a certain number of Canadians; he should be able to benefit from the advantages of complaining to the Tribunal which could analyze the exaggerated increase in imports which might have occurred.

• (1650)

[English]

Mr. Langdon: On a point of order, Madam Speaker, on your ruling with respect to the grouping of these two motions together for debate, while I have no objections to that it does raise for me a very serious problem. I do not support, and my Party would not support, Motion No. 8, while of course I have moved and my Party would support Motion No. 9. So I would ask if, for purposes of voting, these two could be divided, even if you would wish to carry on the debate.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I think I can certainly ask for two separate votes on these two motions.

Mr. Hockin: Madam Speaker, I would certainly agree to splitting these two votes. The Hon. Member does not support Motion No. 8. I would like to speak to Motion No. 8 before we go to the Hon. Member's comments on Motion No. 9.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Would the Hon. Member allow the Minister to—

Mr. Langdon: Since we are debating the two motions together and then voting separately, it might make sense for the Hon. Minister to respond to both motions.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It will allow the Chair to make life easier for every Member this afternoon.

Mr. Hockin: Madam Speaker, I would be happy to respond, after hearing the Hon. Member's comments, on Motion No. 9.

Mr. Langdon: Madam Speaker, these models of politeness are what the House should be all about.

I would like to say why I think the motion by my colleague, the Hon. Member from Trinity (Miss Nicholson), moved by the Hon. Member from Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau), is not something that makes sense. With many of our industries in this country, as all Members of this House know, we have vast numbers of extremely small producers. This is certainly the case with respect to the auto parts industry, which is prevalent in my constituency. It is certainly the case with respect to the clothing industry. I think it does make sense to insist that there be some proportion of the industry which has to bring a complaint. I have some concern about the existing level which has been established. It represents a compromise on the Government's part which it took in committee, and I am therefore pleased to live with that compromise.

With respect, however, to my motion, in attempting to assess the proportion of the industry which brings its complaint before the tribunal, it is important that domestic production include or be considered to be production, leaving aside those firms which are, as my amendment suggests, related to exporters or importers of the like or directly competitive goods, or are themselves importers of such products.

We could certainly see a situation in this country where the great bulk of domestic producers were related to importers and would therefore have no interest in bringing a complaint before the tribunal. So, to leave out of the analysis what constitutes a major proportion of the domestic production of this particular good, it seems to me absolutely critical that we exclude those firms which are themselves associated with importers. Otherwise, we will be in a situation where true domestic producers are not going to be able to go before this tribunal to ask for safeguard or for other action.

I want to make a point with respect to this entire section which deals with complaints by domestic producers. This section does not, through any definition or statement in the Bill itself, limit itself to safeguard actions. It may well have been the Minister's intention that it should have been limited to safeguard actions. If that is the case, there is a major mistake in drafting because there is no indication whatever within the Bill that that is the point. This is very important, Madam Speaker. At the present time domestic producers in the textile and clothing industry have the right to go to the Textile and Clothing Board and to take to that board complaints which are non-safeguard action complaints. If the Minister intends to apply this safeguard action test, that will, in fact, take away from our domestic textile and clothing firms the right to be able to take complaints, as they have always done in the past to the Textile and Clothing Board, to this new international trade tribunal.

If that is the case, Madam Speaker, then the textile and clothing producers will not just have lost the right to see the Textile and Clothing Board initiate inquiries, they will not just have seen the Textile and Clothing Board lose the right to make recommendations, but they themselves will have lost the right to be able to take anything before this new international trade tribunal except those matters which are related to safeguard actions. Of course, safeguard actions are themselves only one sub-set of the kinds of activities which, as a result of injury, textile and clothing firms might wish to carry forward to this trade tribunal.

I recognize that these are technical issues which are difficult to deal with especially at this stage of the session, but I hope very much that the Minister will recognize, for the textile and clothing producers particularly, that this right to take their complaints to the new international trade tribunal is an important right which they have always had with respect to the Textile and Clothing Board. If we wipe it out, it will be an unfortunate and sad result for the textile and clothing manufacturers and workers of this country.

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Madam Speaker, let me speak to these two motions. The first one was originally in the name of the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) and is now moved by the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau). The second one is in the name of the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon).

The first one astonished me. The second I think is unnecessary. I know it is unnecessary but I think the best way to summarize my complaint is that it is redundant and not needed to accomplish the purpose to which the Hon. Member is speaking.

Let me speak to the first motion. In terms of a single producer having trouble with imports and wanting inquiries to be conducted, to argue that no inquiry could ever be conducted, of course, will not necessarily be the case at all. The new tribunal will be able to do general economic inquiries, conduct tariff-related inquiries and injury inquiries. It will have the responsibility for all injury inquiries, as the House knows.

In addition, the Government will be able to direct the tribunal to inquire into the injurious impact of imports which are not dumped or subsidized. The Government currently has the authority to request such inquiries under the Special Import Measures Act and in the case of textile and clothing products, under the Textile and Clothing Board Act.

The key problem with Motion No. 8 is that one sole producer could trigger what the Hon. Member is asking for. That is as protectionist a device as I have ever heard in this House from a Party which purports to believe in liberalized trade around the world. Just one producer, Madam Speaker. GATT, decades ago, threw out that standard as being nothing more than a standard of harassment, and is this the Liberal Party's position on this trade tribunal? I find that astonishing and I am very surprised—I have great respect for the Hon. Member for Trinity—that she would bring that motion forward.

This amendment would allow direct access to the tribunal by a single producer. I know why the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor does not support it, because it is so dangerously protectionist that it would hurt our reputation as supporters for liberalized trade around the world. For a Party to propose this amendment that says it does not believe in the free trade agreement with the United States but does believe in GATT and liberalized free trade, I find, is inconceivable and I will remind Liberal Members of it in the future.

Members who participated in the committee know that there was extensive discussion about what proportion of the industry should be represented in a petition. That was a serious question and we had a good discussion. I think everybody learned from it. The Government agreed to what it believed was a consensus on the concept. Instead of saying "a majority of producers" we agreed that "a major proportion of producers" should be able to have direct access to the tribunal, and the Bill before the House has been so amended.

I must ask the House, in the name of GATT as well as in the name of liberalized trade around the world, to defeat that proposed amendment. I think I am supported by members of the New Democratic Party on that.

Motion No. 9 is only about safeguard actions. I hasten to tell my hon. friend that that is what this Bill is about and that is what this particular clause is about.

Mr. Langdon: It doesn't say so.

Mr. Hockin: Therefore, I am making that clear in my remarks now. The Hon. Member says it does not say so. The whole Bill is about this kind of safeguarding inquiries, and that is what it is meant to be.

The amendment set out is intended to exclude from the definition of industry those producers who are related to importers or exporters of the goods in question. I know what is behind this question. We had a good example from Windsor with the auto parts industry and so on. I also asked these questions during my work on this Bill.

Motion No. 14 proposes a related amendment to Clause 40 which would eliminate the authority of the Government to make regulations defining what is domestic production. The legislation deals with the definition of industry and related definitions through regulations because the definitions cannot be put into a piece of legislation. We would have to put that in regulations because we are negotiating it with GATT now. The draft regulations—and this is why I feel the Hon. Member's motion is unnecessary—will be put through the accepted regulatory process, including pre-publication, and will contain a detailed definition covering the concept which is included in the amendment of the Hon. Member from Essex—Windsor. That is why I called the motion unnecessary.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

• (1710)

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The question is on Motion No. 8 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson).

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

I declare the motion negatived.

Motion No. 8 negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The next question is on Motion No. 9.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

I declare the motion negatived.

Motion No. 9 negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The next motion before the House is Motion No. 11.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor) moved:

Motion No. 11.

That Bill C-110 be amended in Clause 27 by striking out lines 43 to 49 at page 11 and 1 to 4 at page 12 and substituting the following therefor:

"(2) In determining the question of injury under subsection (1), the Tribunal shall consider

(a) all relevant economic factors and indices having a bearing on the state of the industry, including actual or potential decline in output, sales, market share, profits, productivity, return on investments, utilization of capacity, production, employment, wages and volume of other imports; and

(b) Canada's obligations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and, in the case of textiles and apparel, under the Arrangement Regarding International Trade in Textiles."

He said: Madam Speaker, there are two key points which are made in this motion which I think should be taken seriously by the Government and adopted in this legislation. The first is that the question of injury itself to a domestic producer here within Canada should not be some kind of narrow, restricted formula but, instead, should take into account, as I suggest, all relevant economic factors and indices having a bearing on the state of the industry, including actual or potential decline in output, sales, market share, profits, productivity, return on investments, utilization of capacity, production, employment, wages and volume of other imports.

This would give us a framework within which it would be possible for the new International Trade Tribunal to deal with some of the pressures and threats which we will face in the future. It would not be a protectionist framework in itself. Rather, it would require the tribunal, in analysing what it is undertaking, to assess very broadly the state of the industry and the impact that imports are having on it and, in considerable detail, to analyse the points which bear on the state of that industry itself. It seems to me that the narrow formulations of the past have not in fact given to our industries a sufficient safeguard against sudden thrusts from low-wage countries which undercut the jobs of Canadians and affect their families and communities.

Second, the amendment recognizes what the Bill does not recognize. The Bill has made a serious mistake in not recognizing that, for most industries, GATT and the GATT regime is what constitutes the framework within which there are certain obligations. There are also certain other goods which are outside GATT obligations, as, for instance, those goods which we used in our retaliation against the United States on the shakes and shingles case.

Most important, there is a class of very important goods in Canada which is not subject to GATT obligations but is, instead, a subject of the Arrangement Regarding International Trade in Textiles. In Canada, over 100,000 employees work in the clothing industry. I would venture to guess that close to 90,000 employees are working in the textile industry. These industries are located in small communities.

The potential impact on those firms is very serious. That is why we have seen at the international level the establishment of a completely separate regime with respect to textiles. It is why, in the trade tribunal and the clause which deals with domestic complaints, we should also recognize that some of those complaints may be brought by the textile and clothing industries, complaints which should be analysed with consideration, not to our obligations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, but instead with respect to our obligations under the Arrangement Regarding International Trade in Textiles.

If this amendment is accepted, we will see before us a much better Bill, a Bill which, first, does consider all economic factors which are important for an industry, and also recognizes the significant distinction which exists in the case of trade between those obligations we have under GATT and those obligations which affect the textile industry producers, workers, communities and people.

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Madam Speaker, the amendment to Clause 27 in Motion No. 11 would, quite frankly, further twist the intent of the legislation. This was the import of what the Hon. Member was doing with the two previous motions as well. There would not be a requirement any longer that increased imports be the principal cause of serious injury. However, that is what this whole Bill is about.

Increased imports is the principal cause of serious injury. With any lower test than that, the system would degenerate into one used for nothing more than harassment, and Canada could quickly be called to explain itself by our major trading partners. It is a chauvinistic kind of approach.

We are members of GATT and this totally undercuts GATT. The Hon. Member opposite is proposing that the injury criteria be embodied in the legislation. The injury criteria are similar to those used in dumping and countervail inquiries and are incorporated in the rules of the Canadian Import Tribunal. Because injury criteria are not exhaustive and never can be, and are subject to constant multilateral negotiations, it is the Government's intention to include them in the rules of the tribunal.

I do not think I need say more. Those are the fundamental reasons why this amendment is not acceptable.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The question is on Motion No. 11 (Mr. Langdon).

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11) the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next group of motions is Motion No. 12 and Motion No. 13.

Motion No. 12 is in the name of Miss Nicholson (Trinity). Do I have unanimous consent for the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) to move the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Garneau (for Miss Nicholson (Trinity) moved:

Motion No. 12.

That Bill C-110 be amended in Clause 29 by adding immediately after line 18 at page 13 the following:

"(2) Where, as a result of an inquiry, the Tribunal determines that the goods that are the subject matter of the inquiry are being imported in such increased quantities and under such conditions as to cause or threaten serious injury to domestic producers of like or directly competitive goods, the tribunal shall make a written report to the Minister setting out the results of the inquiry and containing a recommendation as to whether, in its opinion, special measures of protection should be implemented.

(3) The report of the Tribunal made pursuant to subsection (2) shall specify the recommended scope and duration of the special measures and shall be published in the Canada Gazette."

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor) moved:

Motion No. 13.

That Bill C-110 be amended in Clause 29

(a) by adding immediately after line 18 at page 13 the following:

"(2) The Tribunal's report shall set out

(a) whether the goods that are the subject matter of the complaint are being imported at such prices, in such quantities and under such conditions as to cause or threaten to cause serious or other injury to domestic production of like or directly competitive goods;

(b) in cases where the Tribunal determines that the goods that are the subject of the complaint are causing or threatening to cause serious injury to the domestic production of like or directly competitive goods, a recommendation as to such special measures of protection, if any, that in the opinion of the Tribunal appear necessary or prudent to remedy or prevent such injury;

(c) in cases where the Tribunal determines that the injury to domestic production is other than serious, a recommendation as to the removal of any applicable preferential tariff or concession granted by Canada in respect of the goods or the country of export that is not an obligation of Canada under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade;

(d) nothing in this Act shall be taken as limiting any provision or power under the Special Import Measures Act."

"(6) In making recommendations under this section the Tribunal shall consider Canada's obligations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade."

Mr. Garneau: Madam Speaker, Motion No. 10 deals with the reporting powers of the tribunal. As the Bill presently stands, the new tribunal will not have the right to make recommendations to the Government for action in light of a finding of serious injury. Members of Parliament suggested during the course of the meeting of the legislative committee that the tribunal should have the right to make recommendations. However, to give the tribunal an automatic power to make recommendations would, the Minister stated, be tantamount to an abdication of the Government's policy-making responsibilities.

This is a strange fear. Even if the tribunal makes a recommendation, the Government will still have the power to reject or act upon it. Recommendations are essential. At least they provide some guidance to officials and the Government. One questions why the Government is opposed to even hearing a recommendation on an injury finding from an expert body like the proposed tribunal. The amendment would ensure that recommendations are reported by the tribunal and published in The Canada Gazette.

Mr. Langdon: Madam Speaker, with respect to Motion No. 13, I want to point out to the Minister that, contrary to his constant refrain that we are trying to escape from our GATT obligations, we make quite clear in Motion No. 13 that we wish to add something to the Bill which will in turn make it quite clear that in making recommendations under this section, the tribunal shall consider Canada's obligations under GATT. We are making it quite clear that we are, have been and will continue to be a committed member of GATT.

The point that the Minister continues to miss is that these domestic complaints are not simply complaints brought under GATT. They will be brought by textile and clothing producers who are not subject to GATT, except for the special set of considerations established by GATT under its textile regime. These are separate and distinct from the obligations Canada has under GATT.

We have recommended that the tribunal, in making recommendations, shall consider Canada's obligations under GATT. We make it absolutely clear, but there are other parts of what will be undertaken by this tribunal which the Minister and his Department will recognize. Certainly some witnesses who testified before us in committee recognized them. The textile and clothing producers came before us, and the clothing workers communicated with us in writing, and indicated that they expect that, just as with the Textile and Clothing Board which is being amalgamated into this new tribunal, they will continue to have the right to bring forward complaints as domestic producers which will not fall under our GATT obligations but instead under our obligations under the various multi-fibre arrangements which have affected textiles, as I said, for 26 years.

As I pointed out to the Minister, there are a number of goods which he knows are not covered by GATT. Yet producers of those goods will also have the right to bring complaints before this tribunal. In those cases where they are not covered by GATT, surely the Minister is not saying he is going to impose GATT obligations on them? Surely he is not saying the same thing with respect to textiles and clothing? Despite the fact that they are not covered by GATT, he will, through this Bill, cover them under GATT. I think it is sheer nonsense for the Minister to put that into effect.

I would point out to him again that we are not talking about a single board, a special board which existed in the past, the Canadian Import Tribunal. We are talking about three tribunals, one of which, the Textile and Clothing Board, permitted domestic complaints from textile and clothing producers. Surely they will continue to have that right in the future. In doing so, it is simply inconceivable that they will be bound by GATT obligations when no other country forces its textile and clothing producers to be bound by GATT obligations. Surely the Minister is not trying to put our textile and clothing industries in much tighter strait-jackets than American, British, French and Italian textile producers. That does not make sense.

Mr. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Madam Speaker, I hasten to respond to the Hon. Member on Motion No. 13. I think I have good news for him if he will listen carefully. The amendment set out in Motion No. 13 amplifies the provisions on the issue of recommendations and whether or not the tribunal should be making recommendations. The amendment goes further and requires the tribunal, in case of non-serious injury, to recommend the removal of preferential tariff concessions which are not obligations of Canada under the GATT.

We know that this amendment is targeting the general preferential tariff regime which Canada has in place. That is the concern of the Hon. Member. In the Government's view this provision is entirely unnecessary. The good news is that that Government now has a standing general reference to the Tariff Board on the GPT which will be given to the new CITT. This regime has operated satisfactorily in the past and there is no reason why it should not operate satisfactorily in the future.

The advantage of this is that if offers flexibility, given the future MTN negotiations and, more important, is less offensive to developing countries than would be a legislated obligation to remove the GPT. I would not want to have to go with our developing country friends with that legislative obligation. It should be part of a more flexible MTN negotiation. I ask the House again to reject these amendments.

That Bill C-110 be amended in Clause 40 by striking out lines 43 to 45 at page 16 and 1 and 2 at page 17.

He said: Madam Speaker, I am mostly provoked to speak briefly because of the last intervention of the Minister which, so far as I could see, had absolutely nothing to do with the section which was being analysed. Section 29, which was being analysed with Motion No. 13, simply suggested the various ways of defining the nature of the report which the tribunal would itself put forward. It had absolutely nothing to do with developing country partners of Canada, with the GPT, or with anything else.

Mr. Hockin: The implication of what you were saying.

Mr. Langdon: Well, if the implication of what I was saying was that, then that simply proves that the section which the Minister has claimed all along dealt only with safeguards deals with much more than safeguards, which I do not think follows logically from the positions he has taken previously.

In any event, the motion to which I am speaking now is Motion No. 14 which deals with Clause 40 and attempts to take out the power of the Governor in Council to make recommendations with respect to domestic producer and domestic production and, therefore, is a companion piece to a motion which was ruled out of order earlier. I would assume, therefore, that if this motion were in fact carried, the original motion which I wished to move, Motion No. 1, which defined domestic producers of goods as "any firm employing, or any trade union representing, workers producing the goods involved", would conceivably be in order.

I will speak very briefly to that principle which I think the House should take seriously since our neighbour to the south, the United States, is among a number of countries which permit trade unions to carry complaints to their various trade tribunals in order to ensure that the trade unions can ensure that their workers benefit from the improved protection of either safeguard action or action for textile and clothing workers under the regime which applies to them.

I think that we as a Parliament are about 20 years behind the times in recognizing the important, positive role which trade unions can play in our economy. One of the studies which I undertook as an economist before my election to the House examined the restructuring of the textile industry in the Netherlands and found that the trade union movement had in fact played a major constructive role in helping to restructure that industry so that much more in the way of Third World imports could come into the country and, at the same time, workers were able to transfer successfully to other jobs at higher wages and were able to restructure their own firms in such a way as to make them viable in the new context which they faced.

For some reason we in this country seem to believe that the trade union movement should be treated as some kind of pariah to be left out of major economic decision-making except in cases of propaganda value such as the national economic conference of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) some years ago.

• (1740)

I hope that we can carry Motion No. 14 so that it will then be possible to look once more at the advisability of permitting debate on Motion No. 1.

Mr. Lewis: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There have been discussions among the Parties. I think you will find agreement to the following proposition: That the House complete report stage debate on Bill C-110, with all motions being put and any recorded divisions that are requested deferred until 6 p.m. tomorrow evening; that the House then proceed to all stages of Bill S-17; that the House would not see the clock at 6 p.m. in order to allow for all stages of Bill S-17 to be completed today, and that during that time there would be no quorum calls and,naturally, no further business called.

Mr. Gauthier: Madam Speaker, I want to confirm that indeed there have been negotiations with the Deputy Government House Leader. The Official Opposition, in its usual co-operative mood, will tell him again that we are achieving a lot of work in the House even though we are in the middle of July.

Mr. de Jong: Madam Speaker, I want to confirm that negotiations have taken place. I believe it was my suggestion to one of his Members that the House proceed in this way so that Bill S-17 can be dealt with in all stages today. We are happy to see the type of co-operation being exhibited here. Hopefully the Government will take note of how co-operative we have been to pass legislation.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Being a servant of the House and in a co-operative mood as well, the Chair will stay as long as is necessary. The Hon. Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) has the floor.

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Madam Speaker, in a spirit of brevity and co-operation, I will make a brief comment on the Hon. Member's motion. His amendment would remove the authority of the Government to make regulations defining domestic production. When I addressed Motion No. 9, I gave the reasons why this power must be retained by the Government and why the amendment should be rejected. I call upon the House to reject this amendment.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The question is on Motion No. 14 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion, the nays have it.

I declare the motion negatived.

Motion No. 14 negatived.

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides) (for Miss Nicholson) moved:

Motion No. 15

That Bill C-110 be amended in Clause 59 by adding immediately after line 21 at page 27, the following:

"(5) A person appointed to hold office as a member of a former authority shall be entitled to be given or paid by Her Majesty in right of Canada such compensation, damages or indemnity for ceasing to hold office under this Act or for the abolition of that office by this Act as may be agreed by such person or such amount as may be determined by the Federal Court under paragraph 17(3)(a) of the Federal Court Act, and, for the purpose of that paragraph, Her Majesty shall be deemed to have agreed in writing to pay the amount so determined."

He said: Madam Speaker, since three tribunals will be abolished, this motion deals with compensating board members who will not be hired to sit on the new tribunal. This Bill originally contained a clause explicitly stating that former members had no right to compensation. This clause was removed.

However, changes to the Tariff Board Act, the Textile and Clothing Board Act and the Special Import Measures Act have the effect on the coming law of depriving the former board members of any rights to compensation or damages for breach of contract. Therefore, the purpose of this amendment is to add the subclause that explicitly grants former board members the right to compensation.

The Canadian Bar Association made representations to the committee and stated that the discharge of former members without compensation was arbitrary, fundamentally unfair, and contrary to the Charter. Many of these former authorities are distinguished citizens who have interrupted or indeed have ended their careers in order to add their expertise and experience to these boards.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Madam Speaker, we support this amendment. It seems unfortunate that the pushing and shoving in the legislative committee which succeeded in persuading the Government to drop its prohibition of any such compensation should not have ultimately led to a more open and generous spirit and the incorporation of a clause that committed the Government to make such compensation available in the future.

When people serve their country, as has been the case with those on these three tribunals, it is very important that they not simply be shoved out the door without some promise of compensation in the future.

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Madam Speaker, I think it would be absolutely exceptional to have a compensation obligation written into a statute. As as general rule, compensation issues are handled without statutory requirement. It was agreed in the committee to remove clause 39(5), to remove any potential conflict of interest situation. I see no reason for this proposed amendment which, in essence, would prejudge the nature and scope of any court action on the matter. I ask the House to defeat this amendment.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The question is on Motion No. 15 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion, the nays have it.

I declare the motion negatived.

Motion No. 15 negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Normally at this time the House would proceed to the taking of the deferred divisions at the report stage of the Bill now before the House. However, pursuant to the agreement reached earlier this day, the recorded divisions on the proposed motions will stand deferred until 6 p.m., Wednesday, July 13, 1988.

ACT TO AUTHORIZE THE CONTINUATION OF THE MONTREAL TRUST COMPAGNY OF CANADA

MEASURE TO ENSURE CONTINUATION UNDER THE LAWS OF THE PROVINCE OF QUÉBEC

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Mr. Lanthier moved that Bill S-17, an Act to authorize the Montreal Trust Company of Canada to be continued as a corporation under the laws of the Province of Quebec, be read the second time and, by unanimous consent, referred to Committee of the Whole. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and, by unanimous consent, the House went into committee thereon, Mrs. Champagne in the chair.

On Clause 1—authorization

Mr. Garneau: Madam Speaker, to expedite debate, I did not intend to speak at the second reading stage of this Bill. However, after some conversations with the Minister, during which I had a few questions for him about financial institutions, I had the impression he would agree to respond to some of these questions which are related, though indirectly, to the Bill before the House. The Bill before the House today constitutes a request by a private company for a change in jurisdiction, that is, to have part of its operations, which were under federal jurisdiction, transferred to that section of the same group that was under the provincial jurisdiction of Quebec, and which in fact represented the majority of the assets of Montreal Trust.

After my conversations with the Minister and after reading the comments made by the President of Montreal Trust, Mr. Gratton, before the other honourable Chamber of this Parliament which examined the Bill in committee and heard witnesses, I was generally satisfied with what was said by the President of Montreal Trust, and I have no real problem with the Bill itself and its wording, so that as far as I was concerned, once the Minister answered some of my questions, clause-by-clause consideration could be done very quickly.

Madam Speaker, without being a cause for concern, and I am sure there are reasons, one does wonder why this is the third company that, for practical reasons, has expressed the desire to be transferred from a federal to a provincial charter. We had Les Coopérants in December 1987, l'Alliance Industrielle a little earlier, and today, there are also rumours about La Sauvegarde and of course we have Montreal Trust.

When we look at how our financial institutions are evolving, we can say there have been various developments. First of all, we had a Green Paper, I think in April 1985, tabled by the former Minister responsible for financial institutions, which was examined by the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs, under the distinguished chairmanship of the Hon. Member for Mississauga—South (Mr. Blencarn). This Committee did a considerable amount of work. It heard witnesses and reported to the House on developments in our financial institutions and on their ties outside the financial sector, with commercial and industrial sectors. The report also touched on issues such as the ownership of these institutions. Who may own or own shares in a bank or trust company or insurance company, and what percentage of the total share capital?

How many shares are in foreign hands? What are we supposed to do about issues such as selling insurance, and so forth? Quite a few quesitons were raised, especially in the subsequent document, the Blue Paper which was tabled, if I am not mistaken, in 1986. We had a report by the Commons Committee and the Senate Committee. We had a number of documents published by the Economic Council of Canada. All this goes back to 1985 and 1986.

The Minister tabled a Bill on financial institutions, which dealt with the restructuring of the role of the inspector of insurance companies, trust companies and banks, consolidating all these responsibilities under the same person. The Minister also tabled a Bill on certain conflicts of interest. Basically, however, there are a number of points that have yet to be dealt with, and which to a certain extent may lead financial institutions to consider a change to a federal or a provincial charter. I would like to ask the Minister whether the Government intends to table its Bill on ownership very shortly. We were informed some time ago that the Government felt that non-financial businesses should not be major shareholders in new financial firms. I am thinking of industrial and commercial groups that acquire a controlling interest in financial institutions or vice versa. I would like to ask the Minister whether the Government has reached a final decision in this respect. Will it be possible, in future, for financial institutions to be owned by commercial groups? I understand it was always agreed there would be a grandfather clause for existing groups.

Could the Minister inform the House what the Government's policy will be in this respect and when we can expect the appropiate legislation to be tabled?

[English]

Mr. Hockin: Madam Chairman, this particular set of questions does not relate directly to Bill S-17, but I will be happy to help the Hon. Member with his questions. As he knows, in December the Government released a draft Trust and Loans Companies Act which is really a boiler-plate or new model of legislation for insurance companies, banks, the Canadian Co-operative Credit Society, as well as trust and loans companies.

The reason we had the legislation released in draft form was to ensure that we had very intense consultations with the industry, not on hypothetical things but on the practicalities of the Bill. As a result of the consultations which have been very widespread with the provinces and industries, we have put ourselves into a position whereby we can hasten the process of putting in place a new regime when the Bill comes into the House.

Frankly, this is the most important legislation ever in the history of Canada for restructuring our financial institutions and our financial system. Sweeping changes for the industry are proposed in it. I placed a great deal of importance on consultation. Because of the strategic importance of the financial institution industry in the country, we have to get it right and rather than present a Bill that was flawed and that had not had the benefit of proper consultation. We put forward a draft piece of legislation and encouraged consultation. During the period of talking to both industry and the provinces, numerous representations and many helpful suggestions were made upon which I am now acting.

As I noted in my press release on June 15, 1988, one of the constant themes throughout the consultations with both industry and the provinces was that the Government's over-all financial sector policy goals were applauded and supported, but it was felt that it could be accomplished with a lesser degree of reliance on the policy in that draft trust and loan legislation of separation of financial and commercial enterprises. It relied very heavily on that separation.

I am now investigating, as I said in that press release, whether any modifications in ownership policies should be made and whether the changes would require a strengthening of prudential rules. If we move back somewhat in our reliance upon the separation between commercial and financial links, then we should ask the question whether more prudential requirements are needed in the over-all legislation.

That is what we are examining now. We have virtually completed that examination. I expect to be in a position shortly to announce any changes. I remain committed to the notion and the commitment of moving the legislation ahead as quickly as possible while ensuring that the policy serves consumers and the industry well.

Introduction of the trust and loan legislation will be followed by changes to the Bank Act. After that the new insurance companies Bill and the Canadian Co-operative Credit Associations Bill will follow. That is a huge set of legislative changes. They will follow quickly because the thinking will have been done and the principles will have been revealed in the first Bill that is brought before the House.

We are resolved to move quickly. The new legislation will look different from the draft legislation because it will have less reliance on commercial financial links.

Mr. Garneau: I am all for consultation. I agree that it is very important, particularly in this very sensitive field of activity. Nevertheless, this consultation process has been ongoing since 1984, if not before that time. The Government was sworn in in September of 1984. We have had the Green Paper from the former Minister. There has been the report from the House of Commons and the report from the Senate. There has also been the report of the Economic Council of Canada. There have been long, long discussions.

When the Minister says that it is not linked with the actual piece of legislation that we are studying, I agree that it is not linked; but it could be linked. When there are a great many financial institutions federally chartered and they cannot see and know exactly in what context they will develop in the future, then they will look for other ways and means to achieve their goals.

Thus there is a link with the raison d'être of this Bill. However, no chief executive officer would tell that to anyone. Certainly, ownership is a very important situation. I am not very pleased with the answer that we should wait and see, or that we may have an answer in legislation that will be tabled soon. We have been told that for the last two or three years. We even studied one piece of legislation. Under pressure from the Finance Committee and members of the Opposition—in fact from everybody—the Minister stripped the Bill and introduced a new one. If I recall correctly it was entitled Bill C-56. We are now being told that the measures will come as early as possible.

A great many people are talking about elections. You may have heard about it, or perhaps read about it in the papers, Madam Speaker. If we have an election this fall, as a great many people suggest, it will take at least another six months for the new Minister from a new Party to organize another piece of legislation and have it adopted. In the meantime the financial world will be in a difficult situation.

I am asking the Minister to be more precise, if not with respect to the timing of the legislation then at least will he tell the financial institutions, as well as the Members of this House, when the legislation will be tabled. Will it be before the election? Will commercial and financial links be acceptable in the new legislation?

Mr. Hockin: I am very pleased to answer those questions. Since I do not know when the election will be called, I cannot make a prediction on whether or not the legislation will be before the election or after. Is that not logical? If I knew when the election would be called, I could answer the Hon. Member's question.

Mr. Layton: Give us a hint.

Mr. Hockin: Elections aside, the legislation itself will be tabled very soon. The Hon. Member will not have to wait very long at all.

[Translation]

Mr. Garneau: Madam Speaker, in the same context, the legislation will have to settle a certain number of questions. Among others, I was reading articles in the papers published following the annual meeting of Montreal Trustco, such as the one published in The Globe and Mail, and another written by

Montreal Trust Company of Canada

François Shalom and published in The Gazette last March 17, which said that the president had held a press conference and that Mr. Gratton said the following:

[English]

> This company, which has a federal charter, is eager to get into insurance, as a distributor of home insurance against fire and theft as well as car insurance.
> But Gratton said Montreal Trust does not want to penetrate the life insurance market.
> If the government does not scrap its regulations on trusts, Montreal Trust could be restructured to fall within provincial jurisdiction, he said, which has fewer restrictions.

[Translation]

Similar comments were reported in The Globe and Mail. I would like to ask the Minister this: will future legislation allow trust companies to penetrate the insurance field? I would also like to know what will happen in the area of automobile leasing. There has been intensive lobbying, and the member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn) and my colleague from Regina East will certainly remember all of the testimony we heard at our Committee in 1986. Even though the Bill we have before us is not directly related to those issues it has ramifications that might affect other financial institutions.

[English]

Mr. Hockin: I am very anxious to respond to those two questions. As far as Mr. Gratton's comments are concerned, I think that the Hon. Member has read the testimony which was given before the Senate committee. In Mr. Gratton's own press release and comments he has made it clear that even if the federal rules were the very same as the provincial rules, he would still be moving his charter provincially. The content of our Blue Paper has in no way been part of his thinking in this respect. It was a business decision. It was based on Quebec being the home of that institution for a long time. When the two companies were amalgamated it made sense for them to find one home, and Quebec seemed to be the natural place.

As for possibilities for Montreal Trust, or any trust company in the future, I suggest that the Hon. Member read my Blue Paper. In it I made it very clear that this is a magnificent new opportunity to have—a removal of barriers among the various financial institutions.

[English]

As a result of that, and following on the Blue Paper, we can have trust companies buying an insurance company, a property and casualty insurance company or a life insurance company. We can have a bank buying an insurance company or a trust company. This opening up of ownership is provided for in the Blue Paper. In no way was it mooted in my press release of June 15 that that would be changed.

The second question has to do with a more technical aspect concerning the leasing of cars. I would be very interested to know the Hon. Member's position with respect to that. My view, and I have stated it publicly a number of times recently, as well as when I brought the draft trust and loan Bill forward, is that I do not believe that banks should be allowed to lease cars.

Mr. Garneau: I am not sure if I understood the Minister well. As long as I am in the Opposition I will ask the questions. If he wants to change sides, then I may answer his questions. I am prepared to do that if his boss calls an election. Nevertheless, on many occasions I have been public on that issue.

• (1810)

I am not sure if the Minister understood my question. I am asking if the trust company will be able to sell insurance in its branches. That is what my question was. Mr. Gratton said in his press conference on March 17, 1988 that he wanted to sell car insurance and home insurance.

The other part of my question dealt with the other financial activity, and in French we say "le crédit bail". I would like to receive an answer from the Minister on those two points.

Mr. Hockin: I think the Hon. Member knows that my position is clear that the retailing of insurance in bank and trust company branches under federal jurisdiction will not be allowed. I have made that clear on a number of occasions, and I have reiterated that since my press release on June 15.

Mr. Garneau: What will the Minister do if provinces make it possible to retail insurance under provincial charter, be it Ontario, Quebec, or any other province? Is the Minister going to defend the transfer of federal charter to provincial charter in the future, or will he change his mind? How will the federal chartered financial institutions be able to compete with provincial chartered institutions in the field of insurance and other financial activities that some of the companies are asking for?

Mr. Hockin: I am very interested that the Hon. Member put on the record that he would like federal financial institutions, banks, and trust companies to retail insurance in the branches. That is his position.

Some Hon. Members: Shame.

An Hon. Member: That's not going to sell in western Canada.

Mrs. Finestone: That's not what he said.

Mr. Garneau: That is not what I said. If the Minister wants to debate that, he should bring in a piece of legislation. That is what I am asking for. That is what the Hon. Member for Mississauga South has been asking for for many months.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Hon. Member and the Minister have entered into debate. The Chair is quite willing to allow them to debate, but one person at a time will make it a lot easier. The Hon. Minister had the floor.

Mr. Hockin: I look forward to the debate on this question, Madam Chairman.

The fact is that the provinces will have to make their own determination on this question. They will make their own determination as they see fit. We have made our determination.

Mr. de Jong: That is exactly the point that disturbs me. I have no problem with Bill S-17. In reviewing the testimony made before the Senate committee we see that it is a move by Montreal Trust that is based on sound business reasons. The fact remains that $4 billion worth of assets presently under federal jurisdiction will be moved to provincial jurisdiction. Out of this we will get a trust company with some $8 billion in assets.

What disturbs me is that policy is being made on the run. The Government has promised some action. Certainly it has been obvious from the types of failures of various trust companies we have seen in the 1980s that co-ordinated action was necessary. Basic agreements with the provinces were needed, in order that there was some sense of security in this country by depositors about where the financial institutions were going. I am afraid that there is still not a coherent set of policies nor a coherent set of federal-provincial agreements in order that depositors will know what is happening with our financial institutions.

The Minister stated that he is opposed to financial institutions such as trust companies selling insurance, and so are we. What the provinces are going to do nobody knows. We have moved $4 billion in assets with Bill S-17 from under federal jurisdiction to provincial jurisdiction that at some stage might allow—

An Hon. Member: Will allow.

Mr. de Jong: The Chairman of the Finance Committee is more certain and he states "will allow" the selling of insurance in branch offices.

Mr. Hockin: It might.

Mr. de Jong: And that might change. There is confusion. What we are doing today is making policy on the run. As John Lennon said, "Life is what happens to you while you are busy making other plans". The Government is busy making other plans, but life is going on, another $4 billion of assets are being moved over to a provincial jurisdiction, and we have no idea where that will lead to.

We have co-operated by allowing Bill S-17 to pass today in all stages in an easy manner. I wish to tell the Government that this is the last time. We will not allow other pieces of legislation like this one to go through as smoothly, without having the promised legislation from the Government and without having a coherent policy in this country. As we move to financial deregulation, having 10 or 11 different policies with the federal Government not knowing quite where to go is not responsible government.

Mr. Hockin: I am not too sure whether there is a question in all of that, but I am very anxious to reply. First, I do not think a federal Government has ever presented a more coherent or more comprehensive new set of principles for financial institutional reform than has this Government. The Blue Paper, the draft trust and loans legislation, is a blueprint the Hon. Member and the provinces can read if they want to know where the principals are going, and the provinces can also read. We would also like to do some fine tuning to maximize harmonization with the provinces.

I am very proud of the principles that we have laid down: to remove the barriers as much as possible among financial institutions, to allow capital to move, to allow ownership across the pillars, and to allow a great deal of one stop shopping. I am very proud of the new supervisory organization and procedures that have been put in place since Bill C-56 and Bill C-42. The reconstitution of the CDIC is all in place now and is off and running. Quite frankly the financial institutions in this country know where they stand. They never knew where they stood before. We want to maximize harmonization with the provinces. That is why we took a couple of extra months to do it, and I am very proud that we have.

Mr. Taylor: I could not follow the thinking of the Hon. Member of the New Democratic Party, because the Hon. Minister had made it abundantly clear that insurance would not be sold by banks and trust companies, and properly so. Let the banks carry out their financial matters, and let the insurance companies carry out theirs. The Minister has been absolutely definite on that throughout the years. There is nothing wishy-washy about it. I commend the Minister on it, and I hope that he sticks to that policy, because it is a sound policy.

Since this comes under the Trust Companies Act, will there be any adverse effect at all on people in other provinces who have deposited money in the Montreal Trust Company?

Mr. Hockin: I am very happy to respond to my hon. friend, and it is a responsible question. We have no reason to believe that in any way there would be any negative effect on depositors. As a matter of fact, they might find that life is clarified. Now there is an amalgamated institution that they are dealing with, and some of the overhead costs that were involved in running two institutions will be gone. Therefore they will probably have a slightly stronger institution that they are part of because they do not have to operate in two different jurisdictions. Depositors should feel confident, not the opposite.

Mr. de Jong: The government Member took issue on the point I was attempting to make, that provincial Governments can have their own regulations dealing with trusts which might allow the sale of insurance. What we have done here is move $4 billion worth of assets under federal control to provincial control. What the Province of Québec will do in terms of its regulations we do not know. I am not certain what influence this Government will have on it.

I want to ask the Minister about another point. I think it is fair to say that Québec has a pretty stringent and competent regulatory agency. We have not heard of too many financial institutions going under in Québec because of negligence in their regulatory agencies. Certainly we have seen this in other provinces.

Would the Government have facilitated this Bill had the request been, for example, to have it incorporated in Alberta or in Saskatchewan? In other words, what is your opinion of the Alberta regulatory agency?

Mr. Hockin: Madam Chairman, I think it is a first rule of Parliament that one does not ask hypothetical questions, let alone answer them. In fact, that question is not really appropriate. We have a situation in front of us with a good jurisdiction, which can do more than an adequate job with depositors' funds, and that is our concern.

[Translation]

Mr. Garneau: Madam Speaker, I would like to come back to the question that was raised by the Member for Bow River concerning depositors. I agree with the Minister when he says that this should in no way affect the quality of the financial institution, all the more so since a financial institution that is under provincial jurisdiction still has the obligation of reporting to each of the provinces from which it obtains a licence to operate. Because a company that is registered or incorporated under the laws of Ontario, Quebec, or Alberta, and wants to do business in another province, must obtain a licence to operate in that field of provincial jurisdiction and present quite lengthy reports to each of those provincial jurisdictions. This does not in any way, I think, affect the quality of deposits, it may even improve it, because transfers are now allowed, and the consolidated assets will be greater and will protect all depositors.

I would like to raise another point. I do not think the Minister answered me. Of coure I understand the need for a little electoral bombast, the urge to say that one will protect banks and insurance salesmen. I understand that. I can appreciate the Minister's objections and comments, and I agree that the distribution of insurance by specialized agents is a valid service for consumers, and that to a certain extent, if all of these agents were private businesses, it might affect that service. I have no quarrel with the Minister's objective, but by not acting and by not solving the problem, as my colleague for Regina East just said, we will see businesses moving to the jurisdiction of Ontario or Québec or other Provinces where those activities are permitted. Then the Minister will swell his chest and say: we have prevented the sale of insurance in our federal institutions, in banks, but finally this will be done everywhere else under other jurisdictions and the situation the Minister hoped for will not even last as long as the election.

But I would like to go back to the financing of fleets of automobiles, to car leasing. Does the Minister intend to allow federally chartered financial institutions to take part in such activities, because it is important to them to know what the Minister thinks and what he intends to do. If we want to avoid having to study other Bills on these issues eventually, Bill S-18, S-20, it would be desirable that the Minister indicate the Government's intention on this issue of automobile leasing. He answered earlier on insurance, but I do not think that he answered the question on automobile leasing.

[English]

Mr. Hockin: I thought clarity came through brevity, Madam Chairman. I said that in no way would I support the leasing of cars through banks. I do not know how I can be more clear on that subject. We have in Canada close to 5,000 independent car dealers and hundreds of employees in each institution. They make very important contributions to their communities, and I do not want to see them disappear from the landscape. I want to see them stronger, not weaker.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Mr. Lanthier: Madam Speaker, as a Quebecer and a Montrealer, I wish to thank our Government as well as the Opposition parties for their exemplary cooperation in presenting this Bill.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I thank the Hon. Member for his remarks.

Clauses 1 and 2 agreed to.

Preamble agreed to.

Title agreed to.

Bill reported, read the third time and passed.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It being six o'clock, according to the agreement reached earlier today, this House stands adjourned until two o'clock tomorrow afternoon, pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

WILDLIFE

ENDANGERED SPECIES RECOVERY FUND

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, in June of last year the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) pledged $1 million to the Endangered Species Recovery Fund, a joint project with the World Wildlife Fund to protect endangered species in Canada.

In May of this year the Minister told the Standing Committee on Environment and Forestry that he thought the money could be found in this year's Estimates.

In June of this year departmental officials told our committee that in fact the funds were not in this year's Estimates, but that Treasury Board was considering the request. Today, 13 months after the Minister announced the Endangered Species Recovery Fund, the money is still not available.

Monte Hummel, Canadian President of the World Wildlife Fund, says: "The stalling couldn't have come at a worse time. This year 26 more species were added by the Committee on the Status of Endangered Wildlife in Canada". The Minister of the Environment should do his duty and deliver now the funds he promised a year ago. This an an urgent matter.

POLITICAL RIGHTS OF EMPLOYEES

Mr. Bill Tupper (Nepean—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, Bill C-273, an Act respecting the political rights of public employees, was reported to the House on June 21, 1988, by the legislative committee which dealt with it. Bill C-273 is good legislation. It proposes a twofold classification whereby the political rights of most public employees will be greatly enhanced while the political rights of those who have policy responsibilities will remain restricted.

Bill C-273 has an appeal process for both the employer and employee, and maintains the principle of the impartiality of the Public Service. The process by which politically restricted employees will be distinguished from politically unrestricted employees is simple. Moreover, there is an all-Party agreement to encourage passage of the Bill at third reading.

Bill C-273 will harmonize the long-standing requests of public service staff associations with the requirements of our Charter of Rights. I would like to encourage this House to make the passage of Bill C-273 a priority. I would further ask that if any Members of this House have concerns about the Bill, they raise them with myself or the sponsor of the Bill, the Hon. Member for Ottawa West (Mr. Daubney), or their House Leader.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

PROPOSED ACQUISITION OF NUCLEAR PROPELLED SUBMARINES

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, the appearance yesterday of the Committee for a Sovereign and Effective Naval Defence, as it calls itself, to promote the purchase by the Conservative Government of nuclear powered submarines is a recognition of decline in public support the purchase. This alliance of business leaders and defence experts wants to marshal support for a program that is strategically dubious, fiscally irresponsible, environmentally unsound, and politically misguided.

Patrolling under the ice of the Arctic Archipelago is not a defence priority. Canada's Ambassador to the United States recently assured Americans that these submarines will not assert Canada's sovereignty. It is surely a waste of taxpayers' money to put Canadian submarines into the U.S. Navy's forward maritime strategy. Canada can hardly maintain its peace loving reputation with nuclear powered submarines. The decommissioning of nuclear powered submarines also adds to our nuclear waste disposal problems.

The oddest aspect of this new committee is the presence of former Liberal Defence Minister, Jean-Jacques Blais. Surely, Mr. Blais, we can encourage shipbuilding in Canada without building nuclear powered submarines. It is time for the Conservative Government to forget about the purchase of nuclear powered submarines. Our big boys don't need these big toys.

VULCAN, ALTA.—INVESTIGATION OF SAY STINK BUGS

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, the farmers in the county of Vulcan in Alberta have been subjected to drought, frost, hail, grasshoppers, and so on. Now they face another attack. This time it is from the Say Stink Bug, a green colored sap feeding insect that feeds upon the developing kernels in the wheat head. The crops in 60 sections of good farm land have already been completely destroyed and it is estimated that there are billions of young bugs rapidly approaching adult stage when they will swarm and fly to other crops.

The farmers affected by this infestation have spent $100,000 in spraying their fields and they need help. No time can be lost or hundreds of other farms will be affected. I urge the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) and the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. McKnight) to co-operate with the Government of Alberta to stop this infestation and to provide compensation to the farmers who have so far been fighting the battle alone.

The Say Stink Bug must be stopped.

THE ELDERLY

GOVERNMENT'S PERFORMANCE

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montréal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, we are a few weeks or perhaps a few days away from an election call and I hope it comes as quickly as possible so that we can get rid of this Conservative Government.

But as these 4 years draw to a close, it is important that we look at this Government's record on an issue of particular concern to me, the lot of senior citizens. We note that elderly people have been neglected and ignored by this Government and its Conservative Members. We remember that the Government turned its back on senior citizens of 60 to 64 years of age and chose to discriminate against them as far as spousal allowances were concerned. We remember the de-indexation of old age security pensions. We know that the government promised and continues to promise an early retirement program. That program does not exist.

Mr. Speaker, senior citizens and Mrs. Solange Denis remember that this Prime Minister deceived them during the previous electoral campaign. Not one single senior citizen in Canada will want to vote Conservative in the next election.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

THE FAMILY OF THE YEAR

Mr. Guy St-Julien (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, at the 89th provincial Convention of the Knights of Columbus of Quebec, an eminent and respected Quebecer, Mr. Marcel Gignac, introduced the family of the year in Quebec, the Masseau family of Fort-Coulonge, to the thousands of persons who had gathered for the occasion.

The family's story is simple: Léonette and Sylvio Masseau are two Catholics who were joined in holy matrimony on August 4th, 1962 and had two children, Jacques and Angèle. All four were involved in numerous activities in Fort-Coulonge.

The couple had finished raising their two children and were at last free to travel as much as they liked when a dreadful catastrophe struck a young family from the same small area. A young couple returning from a business trip was involved in a terrible car crash. Neither spouse survived the tragedy. Their sudden and unexpected death orphaned five little girls from 8 months to 11 years of age.

When Léonette and Sylvio Masseau heard the sad news, they agreed that they both wanted to prevent the five aggrieved little sisters from being separated: Chantelle, Sharon, Léanne, Christine and Kimberly. They wanted to give them a home, love, and the headstart needed to make something of themselves.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of all the Knights of Columbus of Quebec and their families, I want to congratulate the Masseau family of Fort-Coulonge for this distinction.

MASTER AGREEMENT BARGAINING PROCESS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I wish to draw the attention of the House to a letter sent to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) dated July 6, signed by Iris Craig, the President of the Professional Institute of the Public Service. In the letter she points out that bargaining for a new master agreement has been under way with the Treasury Board for 11 months without a single government salary offer. She also points out that meaningful discussions on job classification, career development, and employment prospects are absent in discussions with Treasury Board officials. She also stated that the present Treasury Board Minister after many calls and written requests by the union has said she is either "too busy" or "too tired" to meet with the union.

The President of PIPS has been forced to ask the Prime Minister publicly to intervene because of what she calls complete frustration.

When the responsible Cabinet Minister is "too busy" or "too tired" to meet with the groups she has responsibility for in bargaining, I believe she is also too tired to hold her job in Cabinet.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

OTTAWA—BUS TRANSPORT DURING RUSH HOURS

Mr. W. R. Bud Jardine (Northumberland—Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, the Ontario provincial Environment Minister advised that he would consider introducing emergency powers to deal with future pollution crises, including restricting the use of vehicles, because of the extremely high ozone pollution level last week in Toronto.

I raise this as a national concern because as Canadians from coast to coast visit their national showcase—our capital—the City of Ottawa should consider the example of the capital city of Turkey, Ankara, which, in an effort to reduce vehicle pollution, provides free bus transportation during the morning and evening rush hours. Ottawa appears to have reversed this approach by doubling its fares during the same period.

I believe that the capital city could show real leadership and concern for the health of Canadians by following the Turkish example.

PARLIAMENT

TRIBUTE TO RETIRED LIBRARY EMPLOYEE

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I rise today on behalf of all Members of Parliament on all sides of the House to pay tribute to Peggy Moxon, a 20-year veteran employee of the House of Commons, who retired several weeks ago. She was an employee in the Confederation Branch of the Library of Parliament.

As Members on all sides can attribute, she was unfailingly courteous, helpful, gave a great deal of advice, and did a great deal of research on behalf of all Members and served this House, and therefore through the House the people of Canada, well. She has left the employment of the Parliament of Canada but I know that all Members would want to join me and indeed, Sir, join you, in congratulating her upon her retirement, wishing her the very best in the years ahead, and giving her our sincere thanks for a job well done.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

NATIONAL DEFENCE

PROPOSED ACQUISITION OF NUCLEAR POWERED SUBMARINES

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, "each nuclear powered submarine can do the work of three destroyers or three conventionally propelled submarines . . . They can be completed on time and within the Government's $8 billion budget."

This ringing endorsement of the Conservative Government's naval procurement policy comes from none other than the Hon. J. J. Blais, former Liberal Minister of National Defence.

It is refreshing to see that at least one Liberal is capable of seeing the obvious, and we wish him every success in his battle to see that common sense prevails over the mindless opposition of his former colleagues in the Liberal Party.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

NISHNAWBE-ASKI NATION HEALTH SERVICES

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, the Nishnawbe-Aski Nation of northern Ontario has expressed concern over the way in which its submissions to the Medical Services Branch of the Department of National Health and Welfare for health programs are being treated. Its submission of this year of $875,000 has been approved only in the amount of $240,000. No new programs have been authorized, and all existing programs have been flat-lined.

However, when it comes to Medical Services Branch approving contracts from other health care providers it seems that a different regime prevails.

The Nishnawbe-Aski people state that they are incensed that there have been no consultations with the people who actually consume the health care services provided, that there has been no serious attempt to address the concerns and needs raised by this First Nation organization, and finally that large increases are going to other contractor organizations while submissions from the First Nations themselves are treated in this very stringent fashion.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—WATER RESOURCES LEGISLATION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my question to the Deputy Prime Minister, and welcome him back to the House from his trip down under.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Axworthy: I take it that we will not see him appearing in any beer ads in the near future as a result of his experience!

Yesterday the Acting Deputy Prime Minister, after two or three weeks of stonewalling by her colleagues concerning the serious problem of water exports to the United States, finally admitted that there is a serious and grave problem facing this country, and suggested that the Government may introduce legislation, but was totally vague on the specifics as to when, where, or how.

The problem with the answer of the Acting Prime Minister is that it missed the point. We are concerned about the major loophole created as a result of the Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement which no legislation can properly fill.

In making a commitment now to bring in legislation, will the Government be bringing in that legislation before final determination or judgment is made on the Canada-U.S. trade agreement in order that we can determine its effectiveness or its application to that agreement, and whether in fact it is able to close that loophole?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the Hon. Member's kind remarks on my return from Australia and New Zealand. Quite a topic of discussion while I was down there was whatever happened to the Liberal Party—

Ms. Copps: Issue the writ and you will find out.

Mr. Mazankowski: —that they find it so difficult in accepting a position on free trade. Whatever happened to that great Liberal Party that once supported free trade? I said that perhaps they would have to come up here and see for themselves and maybe they could talk some sense into them.

• (1420)

The Minister of Communications in her role as Acting Prime Minister yesterday admitted nothing of the sort. There is no loophole. The policy is clearly stated that the free trade agreement provides for no large-scale export of water or no diversion of water.

The policy of the Government with respect to water is very clearly stated as outlined in the November declaration. As a matter of fact, if the Hon. Member took the time to read the document he would find at page 24 that legislation was in the process of being drafted to implement such policy, which is consistent with the way in which we have followed up on things such as transportation, tax reform, copyright, film and video, and all important issues that face Canadians.

REQUEST THAT AGREEMENT BE AMENDED

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I hope the Deputy Prime Minister responding to those thoughtful inquiries by Australians about the future of the Liberal Party told them that we will become the next Government of Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: I must have said something that interested members of the Government, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Prime Minister has said that we should read the agreement. I want to quote to him the comments made by the Deputy Minister of the Environment who last night agreed that natural water is included within the tariff classification as part of the Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement. That was a senior official of the Department of the Environment. She went on to say that her own departmental officials had been advising trade officials on the possibility of having an exclusion written into the agreement.

Mr. McDermid: She did not say that.

Mr. Axworthy: When you have that kind of examination in the process by officials, a clear admission that it is part of the agreement, doesn't the Government realize that any unilateral action by the Government itself is not enough, it is too late—you have already signed an agreement—and the only way to get out of it is to amend the agreement to provide an exclusion to protect Canadian waters against the kind of vulnerability that the Minister's own negotiators and colleagues put us into?

Why will the Government not come down to the real solution to the problem, that is, to exclude water from the Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I hate to disappoint the Hon. Member but his suggestion that the Liberals may form the next Government was certainly not a view shared optimistically by the people down under. They see it a little differently.

In so far as the Member's legitimate question is concerned, I can only rely on the evidence of Mr. Ritchie when he appeared before the committee which is currently studying the Bill. He said:

> that negotiators from both countries agreed that flowing water was not covered by the agreement, so there was no need to write in an exemption.

That has been very clear and has been clearly stated by all parties.

He also indicated:

—there is no precedent for flowing river or lake water to be considered as a commodity covered by any international trade agreements.

He went on further to say that to suggest that flowing water is covered, through diversions or even large-scale pipelines, "took a Canadian exercise in creativity".

It is perfectly consistent with what has been said in the House by the Minister for International Trade and the Minister of Communications. The policy clearly stands, and the suggestion that the free trade agreement provides for the large-scale export or diversion of water is simply not true.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, just to complete the report on the Minister's trip to Australia, I would suggest to him that it is not important what the people down under think, it is what the Canadian people think, and all opinion polls show that they are prepared to have an election and elect Liberals. That is what they show.

Miss MacDonald: They showed that in Lac-Saint-Jean too.

Mr. Axworthy: The Deputy Prime Minister referred to Mr. Ritchie. Mr. Ritchie in a statement before the committee clearly acknowledged that the right of amending the Act is still there, contrary to the kind of assertions made by the Minister for International Trade. Mr. Ritchie said that we still have the right to amend the Bill.

What we are seeking is clearly a correction to a mistake made by the Minister's colleagues when they negotiated this agreement, signing an agreement that opens up Canadian water to access by the United States both by Clause 409 and by the tariff classification which clearly includes it and makes it part of tradeable goods and services.

• (1425)

I want to ask the Minister the question I think all Canadians are asking. Why is the Government stonewalling? Why has it refused to take the simple, proper, easy way out, and simply say that it wants to amend the legislation to make sure that Canadian water will not be sold at the expense of Canada?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, of course we have had evidence from the Canadian people as to what they think about us. Just look at the result of the Lac-Saint-Jean by-election to get a pretty good reading of it.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mazankowski: There is no mistake, there is no loophole. The statements that have been made by the Minister for International Trade and by the Minister of Communications are clear and categorical. The only legislative body in Canada that is proposing or is interested in the export of water is the Government of Ontario which brought in legislation on June 29 that would set up an approval process and a pricing mechanism for water transfers out of the province.

What is the Liberal policy? Do the Liberals have one policy in the Province of Ontario and another policy here? Do they have a different policy every day? Why doesn't someone stand up and clarify it? Or is it the policy that was enunciated by the now Leader of the Liberal Party in his book back in 1968?

DAY CARE

INCREASE OF SPACES IN DAY CARE CENTRES—MINISTER'S POSITION

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I wish to put my question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare.

The Minister's announcement this morning about day care is an insult to Canadian families that have problems with child care in Canada. It is a mirage and a smokescreen that the Government is putting forward to Canadian families.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mrs. Pépin: In February, the Minister said that he would increase the number of day care spaces by only 15 per cent over the next seven years, when we know that there is now a shortage of 1.4 million spaces in Canada. That is a fact.

This morning, the Minister led parents to believe that they would have more day care spaces, but we know that this morning's announcement will not result in a single space more than what he said in February.

So how can the Minister justify such a falsehood and have parents believe that there will be more child care spaces, when not a single additional space will be created?

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I was very pleased, on behalf of the Government, to be able to announce today an additional $1 billion for spaces.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Epp (Provencher): I was also pleased that, as part of that program, there was an inclusion for spaces for day care on reserves for Canada's native people.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Epp (Provencher): I think it was also important that in our consultation with the provinces we always said we wanted quality day care spaces, and in our discussions we also looked at additional subsidies and increases that day care workers needed.

I take it from the Hon. Member's comments that the increase that is proposed in some provinces for child care workers, and Statistics Canada has recently said the wage averages $8,900 per year per worker, is something she does not support. It is those types of increases that will obviously be benefiting in the delivery of the 200,000 target, plus the increase in quality and salaries which were also needed, and which, under the proposal she puts forward, would not be achieved.

CHILD CARE STANDARDS

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, will the Government of Canada ensure that all provinces meet reasonable objectives and standards so that comparable and equitable child care will be available to all families in Canada?

• (1430)

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, in the preamble to her first question the Hon. Member said there was a need for 1.4 million daycare spaces. That is not correct. She keeps repeating those figures but she knows that the committee did not verify that.

I am saying to the Hon. Member and all Canadians that the federal Government made a commitment back in 1984 to give leadership on child care. It is a program of $6.4 billion over seven years, a boost of 200,000 spaces, and an opportunity to increase the quality of child care and the wages of those who work in the field, as well as helping native people. I am pleased we have shown that leadership. It is regrettable that the Opposition does not recognize it.

TRADE

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister who, I see, has returned in his customary good humour from Australia.

Yesterday the Acting Prime Minister said in the strongest possible terms that there was a need for legislation to see to it that large quantities of fresh water were not diverted to the United States. Given that, will the Deputy Prime Minister confirm it is the intention of his Government to bring forward such legislation on an urgent basis as quickly as possible?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as I indicated in response to an earlier question, there is a federal water policy which was developed by this Government and announced in November. It naturally follows that the legislation and regulations required to implement that policy will be followed up. I am advised that the legislative process is in a well advanced stage. As is customary and consistent with what we have done on numerous issues in the past, be it transportation, child care, broadcasting, film and video, or tax reform, we have announced a policy and followed it up with legislation. Such is the same in this particular case.

TERMS OF TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, Section 8 of the trade Bill indicates that Bill will override any legislation, any Act of the Parliament of Canada.

Miss MacDonald: You know better.

Mr. Langdon: How does the Deputy Prime Minister intend to get around that fact and actually see to it that there is full and secure protection of the fresh water of Canadians for the future?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I am sorry the Hon. Member was not in the House yesterday for Question Period because the Hon. Member for Davenport asked an identical question, and I am going to give an identical answer.

First, the preamble to the Hon. Member's question was wrong. Section 8 of the free trade agreement does not cover all legislation in Canada. It covers legislation pertaining to the free trade agreement. Because large-scale water exports are outside the free trade agreement, Section 8 does not pertain. So the Hon. Member is absolutely wrong.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, can the Deputy Prime Minister tell me why, if this trade deal has no connection with water, the trade negotiator's office formally initiated discussions with the Department of the Environment on precisely that subject, export of water to the U.S. and how to get an exemption? That was admitted last night in testimony in committee.

Why is the Government not prepared to face this country directly and admit there is a connection between the trade deal and water exports, and that there must be protection in the trade deal to prevent those exports from going forward?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, as is his habit, the Hon. Member is being very selective in talking about the testimony given in committee. Unlike the Hon. Member, I have attended every minute of the sittings of the committee and heard exactly what has gone on there.

The Hon. Member knows full well that what he has related to the House is not factual. In fact, formal discussions did not go on between the trade negotiation office and the Ministry of the Environment There was discussion in the lower ranks of the Ministry but it never reached the negotiating table. Both Clayton Yeutter, and Mr. Ritchie on our side, said it is outside the agreement. When both negotiators say that, why can the Hon. Member not accept it?

ENERGY

HIBERNIA OILFIELD DEVELOPMENT

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. It concerns the reports both in national newspapers and on national television regarding the proposed start-up of the Hibernia project. It has been reported there will be $2 billion in federal government financial support, and a shameful agreement by the—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Tobin: —Government of Newfoundland and Labrador to forgo all royalties. Members of the Conservative Party may find it funny that Newfoundlanders would be required to give up royalties on Hibernia oil as a precondition to this project, but Newfoundlanders do not find it funny.

Mr. McDermid: Have you seen the agreement?

Mr. Tobin: They find it very similar to what happened on Churchill Falls and they do not want it repeated.

Miss MacDonald: That was a Liberal Government.

Mr. Tobin: Can the Deputy Prime Minister give Members of this House and, through them, the people of Newfoundland and Labrador the assurance today that the Province of Newfoundland will not be required to forgo royalties on the production of Hibernia oil as a precondition to a start-up of that project?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I find it rather strange that the Hon. Member would be condemning an agreement which he has not seen and which has not yet been ratified. I can tell him that the discussions have been going on between the federal Government and the Government of Newfoundland as well as members of the sponsoring consortium who are interested in advancing the Hibernia project. It is a major project, one that is important to Newfoundland and Canada. I hope the tone of his question would not signify his opposition to the development of this important resource for the people of Canada, and in particular the people of Newfoundland.

REQUEST FOR ASSURANCE ON PAYMENT OF ROYALTIES

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Lest there be any doubt about it let me tell the Deputy Prime Minister, and I am sure I speak for many Newfoundlanders when I say this, that if developing the project arises out of desperate measures employed by political Parties in desperate trouble in Newfoundland, that is forgoing royalties to the province in order to get this project going, then we do not want it.

This is an important project and can be beneficial. I ask the Deputy Prime Minister again can he give this House and, through this House, the people of Newfoundland and Labrador, an assurance that that province, the poorest in the country, will not be required to forgo royalties on Hibernia oil in any way, shape or form, as a precondition to the start-up of this project?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the Government of Canada and the Government of Newfoundland are both interested in developing this very important resource, as I indicated earlier, for the security of energy supply and for the tremendous spin-off benefits that will accrue. The negotiations have been taking place in very close consultation with the Government of Newfoundland, and I say to the Hon. Member that any agreement that will be reached will be reached on the basis of complete concurrence with the Government of Newfoundland.

Mr. Tobin: Will they forgo royalties?

• (1440)

Mr. Mazankowski: Will they forgo royalties? Mr. Speaker, it was this Government which brought forth the Atlantic Accord which recognized that resources belong to the province. It will be fully consistent with that, something the former Liberal Government denied the province. That is an important element.

CHILD CARE

GOVERNMENT PROGRAM—REQUEST FOR REDRAFTING

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare, if he is in the House. I see him rapidly running to his seat. I must say I do not blame him for hiding behind the curtains.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss MacDonald: That is totally uncalled for.

Mr. Boudria: Were you having a cigarette behind the curtains?

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member will put her question.

Ms. Mitchell: The Minister's announcement today confirms our predictions and the predictions of many others that this policy to spend $2.3 billion on tax measures rather than using it for quality child care services was ill-conceived, ignored the real need for working parents in this country, and is a misuse of child care dollars.

Will the Minister now listen to child care experts? Will he go back to the drawing board and redraft an adequate plan which guarantees affordable access to child care for the many thousands, if not millions, of children across the country whose parents are working? They desperately need this.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, as I have indicated to the House already, it is an adequate plan. The Member's points must be analysed. She and her Party believe that stay-at-home parents, who make that choice, should get no benefit from a child care package. The Government believes that they should get some benefits from a child care package.

Additionally, the NDP is against parents who have decided not to access the formal child care system but have made the personal choice to access a system which they feel is valid for them. In order that they are able to have the same deductions for child care expenses, the $2.3 billion package has been put in place.

Obviously NDP Members are against it. They want everything driven by government and do not want parents to have a choice.

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether the Minister has asked any mothers who are homemakers whether $200 a year is giving them a choice. I hardly think so.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MEET PROVINCIAL COUNTERPARTS

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, the Minister has pretty well admitted that the additional $1 billion for child care only corrects the Government's miscalculations. This is a badly conceived plan altogether. It provides for only a very small percentage of the badly needed spaces.

Since the Minister has not yet tabled legislation will he agree to meet with provincial and territorial Ministers, take a new look at this plan, and draft a plan which meets the real child care needs of kids and working parents across the country?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I have consulted with the provinces as recently as this morning. This is a good plan. In terms of the extra $1 billion she should remember that when the provincial and federal Governments looked at the cost per space they saw a need to raise both the subsidies per space for families as well as the abominably low salaries of people working in day care, the average being, as I said, about $8,900.

Those were the kinds of calculations we made with regard to the $1 billion. I hope the Member will support at least that if nothing else.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

SYDNEY, N.S., MAIN POST OFFICE

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. I have here an internal document from Canada Post which—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Did they deliver it?

Mr. Gagliano: Don't laugh, it's a serious matter.

Mr. Gauthier: The Tories are all laughing.

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, I want it noted that the Conservatives find what I am going to say very funny.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: No, we'll be the judge of that.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member.

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, the document states that Canada Post is going to be closing the main post office in Sydney, Nova Scotia.

Some Hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Boudria: Hardly a laughing matter.

Mr. MacLellan: A post office which serves 22,000 people is going to be replaced by a privatized counter-type service. It is an outrage that the Government would act so arbitrarily and without any consultation with the community.

Will the Deputy Prime Minister use his authority to tell Canada Post to abandon all plans to close the Sydney post office?

[Translation]

Mrs. Lise Bourgault (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, in 1981, it was the Liberal Government at the time that, with the consent of all three parties in this House, wanted to create a Crown corporation to avoid political interference.

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, the post office to which the Hon. Member is referring has not been closed. It has been transferred to the private sector, and service has been increased. I am sure, Mr. Speaker, that when residents are asked their opinion in the months to come, they will express their complete satisfaction with the new service being offered by Canada Post.

CONSTRUCTION OF REGIONAL DISTRIBUTION CENTRE

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, the Government said last month that it would not be closing these post offices.

Ms. Copps: Right on!

Mr. Boudria: We'll see how funny it is when you're turfed out of office for closing post offices.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member is not getting very much help from his colleagues.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: I am referring to colleagues on both sides of the House. Would the Hon. Member please put his question.

Mr. MacLellan: Once again, Mr. Speaker, it is interesting that the Conservatives find this so funny.

Public Works has confirmed that this post office has to be moved by February of 1989 and that a new distribution centre will be in place by then.

My question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. If it is not that all the post offices in Cape Breton are going to be privatized, why would a distribution centre for the region be built?

[Translation]

Mrs. Lise Bourgault (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, once again, I wonder why Opposition Members insist on having the Government intervene in housekeeping decisions by Canada Post.

Mr. Speaker, I can assure residents of The Sydneys and the Hon. Member's riding that contrary to what he just said, we are not closing the post office. That is just not true.

Canada Post has transferred the service to the private sector which will offer residents a better service and longer hours, and I repeat that residents will find everything to their complete satisfaction.

I hope that the Hon. Member, in the months to come, will come back to the House to revise his statement.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—NATIONAL ENERGY PROGRAM

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I want to return to the trade deal. Most people in my new riding of Port Moody—Coquitlam—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

• (1450)

Mr. Speaker: The wish is further to the thought. Would the Hon. Member please put his question.

Mr. Waddell: We Scots are optimistic, Mr. Speaker.

Most people in this suburban area near Vancouver drive their cars to work. Therefore, they need secure supplies of oil at reasonable prices. I want to direct a question on their behalf to the Deputy Prime Minister. Does this trade deal with the United States mean that never again can the federal Government enact a National Energy Program—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Waddell: —that would mean lower than market prices for gasoline at the time of an energy crisis? In other words, could the federal Government enact legislation after this deal that would hold Canadian gasoline prices lower than American prices?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I am sorry that the Hon. Member was not at committee last night because the Deputy Minister of Energy gave a very fine explanation of the energy situation within the free trade agreement.

By the way, your riding does not come into being until tomorrow, so you are a day early.

An Hon. Member: Do not give it to him yet.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary could finish his answer.

Mr. McDermid: As the Deputy Minister explained last night, the short answer was yes, it was difficult, but yes it could be done.

PRICE OF GASOLINE

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, this in direct contradiction to what the previous Minister for International Trade said, that there could be no more national energy programs.

Mr. McDermid: That was not the question.

Miss MacDonald: That was not the question.

Mr. Waddell: I will rephrase my question. Can there ever again be a National Energy Program which, while criticized, saved billions of dollars for Canadian motorists? Forget the oil company line. At the time of an energy crisis will the federal Government be able to enact a national energy program which would accomplish the same as the previous energy program, which was to have a different made-in-Canada price for Canadian consumers?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I would hope not. I hope we never have to put up with a National Energy Program like that.

The Hon. Member stands up and talks about saving money for the drivers of this country. He does not talk about the unemployment insurance costs for all those people in the West who were put out of work by the National Energy Program, or the people who lost homes and businesses. He does not talk about that loss.

WATER RESOURCES LEGISLATION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. As recently as 1985 the Prime Minister of Canada stated in an interview with Fortune magazine, when asked about water exports from Canada: "Why not, if it is economically desirable?" Yesterday the Minister of Communications indicated outside the House that a piece of legislation on the federal water policy would be forthcoming. Today the Deputy Prime Minister indicated that the legislation is in a well advanced stage. Given these facts, will the Deputy Prime Minister indicate when this legislation will be introduced in the House?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there is certainly nothing new in what has been said today and what was said yesterday. It was contained in the water policy statement of November, 1987, at page 24. I would ask the Hon. Member to consider reading it.

The fact is that the legislative and regulatory measures that are required to implement the federal water policy are in an advanced stage. I will certainly check with the Minister of the Environment as soon as he returns to see what particular time it may be introduced. Work is proceeding, consistent with what we have done on many other important issues, be it child care, tax reform, broadcast policy, film and video, or transportation. All of these things have been done in the same consistent manner.

Mr. Caccia: We may have to wait some time, judging from the record of attendance of the Minister of the Environment.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member is a very experienced Member and has made a great contribution to this place. He knows that that is not an appropriate observation. Will the Hon. Member please put his question.

TIMING OF LEGISLATION'S INTRODUCTION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Considering the importance of the matter and considering that the preparation of the legislation is in a well advanced stage as he says, and considering the deadline of January, 1989, when will this legislation be introduced in the House? It is a very reasonable question.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, we have always considered this water policy and the accompanying legislation as being very important. We have been working at it. It is amazing to me that just in the last week or so it has attracted the attention of the opposition Parties. It has always been a priority of this Government and will continue to be a priority.

I will take the Hon. Member's representation and make his views known, to see whether we can expedite the process. I give him that assurance.

AGRICULTURE

ALBERTA—SAY STINK BUG INFESTATION

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Hon. Minister of State for Grains and Oilseeds. The Say Stink Bug is threatening the crops of hundreds of farmers in Alberta and the bugs have already completely destroyed the wheat crops on some 60 sections of land. Millions of these green bugs will reach maturity within days and swarm to other areas.

Will the Minister co-operate with the Government of Alberta, take immediate steps to stop this infestation, and assist the farmers who have already spent about $100,000 trying to stop these bugs?

Hon. Charles Mayer (Minister of State (Grains and Oilseeds)): Mr. Speaker, this is a serious problem for the farmers affected. The federal Department of Agriculture is aware of the problem and has been working through the research station at Lethbridge with the Province of Alberta. It is my understanding that some spraying has already been carried out.

We are prepared to spray again if there is a reinfestation. Fortunately, this is a rather rare occurrence. I am told that the last infestation goes back to the early 1950's. The bugs thrive on weeds, which have done particularly well this year.

We are aware of the problem and have been co-operating with the province in doing some spraying. We will certainly monitor the situation, and are prepared to spray again if the situation warrants it.

HOUSING

USE OF TORONTO RAILWAY LANDS

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. It concerns the decision of the Toronto City Council to approve a major housing plan which will provide thousands of new units, particularly very badly needed affordable housing units in Toronto. The Minister will know that co-operation from the federal Government is required for the land. Will the federal Government co-operate, particularly to ensure that the railway lands needed for this new housing project will be made available at reasonable, or, better still, at no cost, to help solve the Toronto housing crisis?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I must apologize to the Hon. Member. I am not fully briefed on this particular issue. However, I will certainly look into it and get back to the Hon. Member as soon as I possibly can.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, will the Deputy Prime Minister agree with the principle that since the railway lands were either given or highly subsidized it would be very reasonable for a return to be given to the people by making them available at a very low, reasonable cost or, better still, simply give them back to the people, to help solve the Toronto housing crisis?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I will take the Hon. Member's statement as a representation, and when we consider the matter I will get back to her as soon as I can.

FISHERIES

CHUM SALMON CATCH—SAANICH TRIBAL FISHERIES COUNCIL PROPOSAL

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans and I have given him notice of it. It concerns a proposal from the Saanich Tribal Fisheries Council of southeast Vancouver Island to harvest the excess Chum salmon returning to the Goldstream River system. As the Minister knows, this particular fish is not generally regarded as being a sports fish.

Last year the Department rejected that proposal and as a result the stock overspawned and the five Indian bands of the council lost about $2 million and 45 jobs.

The Department has judged the proposal to be technically feasible and sound. Is the Minister personally aware of the proposal? Has he taken an interest in it? And has a decision been made, or is it about to be made?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for the courtesy he has shown by giving me notice of this question. I am certainly aware of the proposal which poses a very difficult policy question for the Department and for myself.

As the Hon. Member knows, wild stocks of salmon which are not the product of our hatchery but of natural runs, are known as a common property resource. We generally manage the quotas of the commercial fishing fleet to ensure there is no surplus, or a very small surplus of this stock. We have for a long time adhered to the policy that wild stocks of salmon are a common property resource, not to be privatized or turned to the benefit of any group, native or non-native, for commercial gain.

The native communities, of course, have their traditional food fishing rights, and this proposal would violate this long-standing policy. I have it under consideration. The concept has been before my Pacific Area Regional Council for the last several months and I will be making a decision in the next few weeks on this proposal.

REQUEST FOR EARLY DECISION

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Minister for that answer. The proposal will create jobs and provide economic development for the bands. It will prevent the wastage of fish which is now happening because of overspawning, and there is a treaty right involved.

Will the Minister carefully consider using the authority of his office and the Fisheries Act, especially Sections 4 and 7, and get behind this proposal from the Saanich Tribal Fisheries Council? And can he tell the House he will make every effort possible to render a favourable decision before the end of this month?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member has pointed out, there may well be a treaty right and long established policy giving native bands and communities first access to returning stocks for food fish requirements, but there is also a long-standing principle that all user groups should have equal opportunity to harvest this common property resource, so that the jobs and economic gains about which the Hon. Member speaks, to the Saanich Tribal Fisheries Council, could well be at the expense of other sectors of the commercial fishery. Good management should dictate that we give all sectors an opportunity to harvest this surplus resource.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

POSTAL FRANCHISE OUTLETS

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for the Post Office. The Government has been saying that it is improving service and increasing the number of outlets with its franchising program at the Post Office. The confidential planning document we have indicates that what is happening in Sydney and Yorkton is quite the opposite. It indicates Canada Post is going to relocate a downsized corporate outlet in a secondary market area and establish a franchise in the business core, which is the area in which it gains the most money.

Will the Government now admit that what it is doing is gutting the Post Office, destroying the post offices which exist, in order to establish franchises, that it is in no way increasing service but is simply replacing one post office with another so it has contracts to hand out to its friends?

[Translation]

Mrs. Lise Bourgault (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member realizes that the charge he is making is entirely frivolous and that he has not checked his facts. Once again, I can assure Hon. Members that the Canada Post Corporation, contrary to what is claimed by the New Democratic Party, ensures that service and access to service is enhanced. Today, most people work, and customer demand has changed, and Canada Post has adjusted to this change. I can assure the Hon. Member that Canada Post is taking good care of customer service.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: A short supplemental—very short.

PLANNING DOCUMENTS—REQUEST FOR DISCLOSURE

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, these post offices that are being closed are post offices which have revenues seven and ten times the salary costs of maintaining them. It should be possible to improve service at these post offices without closing them down in order to open a post office in a drugstore. Will the Minister make public the planning documents of Canada Post so that Canadians can make a decision about what the Government is doing about service at the Post Office?

Mrs. Lise Bourgault (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, parliamentarians made a decision in 1981 when they decided unanimously in the House to transfer the service to a Crown Corporation. Again, they are not closing the Post Office, they are expanding the service.

Mr. Speaker: This will be the last question. The Hon. Member for Ottawa West (Mr. Daubney).

HEALTH

AIDS—PROTECTION OF FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

Mr. David Daubney (Ottawa West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Given the fact that thousands of federal government employees working in laboratories and health care facilities and elsewhere in the Government have understandable concerns about AIDS in the workplace, would the Minister advise the House if his Department is doing anything to inform employees of the federal Government how to protect themselves from AIDS while at work?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, with respect to federal employees and AIDS in the workplace, I remind the Hon. Member and the House that quite some time ago kits were provided, for example, for our employees who work abroad, especially plasma kits, for postings in countries where health facilities might not be up to the standards we expect in Canada.

Second, I should tell the Hon. Member and all Members of the House that a video has been completed with respect to protection in the workplace. It is directed to federal employees. I believe it is going to be aired tomorrow in both official languages. I can get the information to the House. I believe it is helpful and instructive to our federal employees so they can protect themselves and yet render the services the Hon. Member mentioned.

REQUEST FOR AUTHORIZATION FOR LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE TO TRAVEL—SPEAKER'S RULING

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members will know that I heard an important argument two days ago with respect to the use of motions of instruction relating to Bills. I undertook to Hon. Members to do everything I could to return as quickly as possible with a ruling. The ruling is now complete.

The Chair has considered the procedural arguments raised on the admissibility of the motion of instruction moved by the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon). Since the motion concerns the legislative committee on Bill C-130, which is, of course, the committee studying the Canada—U.S. Trade Agreement and whose deliberations have already begun, I wanted to proceed expeditiously in rendering this decision. I just want to say to Hon. Members and to the public that this is a technical ruling, but it is of importance and I ask all Hon. Members to bear with me.

In his point of order, the Hon. Minister of State argued that this type of motion should not be moved under the rubric "Motions"—which is one of the items we go through each day under Routine Proceedings—but should rather be taken up as an item of Private Members' Business. In reply, the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) and the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray), presented arguments for allowing it to be moved under the heading of "Motions". After listening to the points made by all Parties, I wish to proceed as follows.

As most Hon. Members know, after second reading, a Bill is normally sent to a legislative committee for detailed consideration, as it was in this case. It is this stage when the Bill has been referred to committee that motions of instructions are to be moved. A motion of instruction is nothing more than a motion passed by this House sending a message to a committee that is already in place empowering it to do something and, in some cases, if one wants to go back through the history, perhaps to instruct it. I say for the record that this motion moved by the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor was a motion to empower the committee to travel both in Canada and abroad, if the committee so decided to do.

It is at this stage, when the Bill has been referred to committee, that motions of instruction are to be moved. The purpose of such an instruction is to empower a committee to do something which it could not otherwise do. In this case, the committee studying the trade agreement does not have on its own, nor does any other committee, the automatic right to travel. It would have to seek that right or else the House could, on the motion of the Hon. Member, or on the motion of the Government, or on the motion of any other Hon. Member for that matter, empower the committee to decide whether it wanted to travel or not—but at least empower it to do so.

What the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor has done is he has tried to move under "Motions" during Routine Proceedings to have this House consider sending to the committee an instruction empowering it to travel if it so wishes. I think I see the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor nodding. I think I have put the situation as clearly as I can.

Practically all existing Canadian precedents dealing with motions of instruction relating to Bills took place in a period when the practices and procedures of the House were quite different from those used today. During this period Bills were referred to Committee of the Whole, that is to say a committee of the whole House. The Speaker goes out of the chair and the Deputy Speaker takes the table. The entire House sits here in this Chamber as if it were in committee. That is what Committee of the Whole means.

As I said, during this period Bills were referred to Committee of the Whole following second reading after the adoption of a motion: "That the Speaker do now leave the chair". This procedure is no longer applicable. Consequently, our rules on motions of instruction to committees studying Bills need to be reviewed in a new context.

Citation 759(1) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition reads in part:

> The time for moving an Instruction is immediately after the committal of the bill, or, subsequently, as an independent motion. The Instruction should not be given while the bill is still in the possession of the House, but rather after it has come into the possession of the committee.

While the above citation is accurate, it leaves a considerable number of questions unanswered. An examination of precedents and citations in Beauchesne's Third Edition and Bourinot's Fourth Edition reveals that under previous practice a motion of instruction could be moved after second reading under one of three different conditions. The first is immediately after second reading, without notice or debate, but prior to the Speaker leaving the chair. The second is as an amendment to the motion "That the Speaker do now leave the chair". The third is at some point following second reading as an independent motion, after notice.

In the first situation the Speaker accepted the motion without notice immediately after second reading because it was a privileged motion intrinsic to the progress of the Bill to committee stage. If this approach is taken, and logically it can only be taken in instances where a referral has been made to Committee of the Whole, the motion is not debatable or amendable according to Standing Order 56(2). This is in keeping with precedents found on March 19, 1948, at page 269 of Journals, and on July 30, 1956, at page 942 of Journals.

In the present case, the opportunity to move a motion of instruction at that particular time has not been available since Bill C-130 has been referred to a legislative committee.

[Translation]

The second approach, that of moving a motion of instruction as an amendment to the motion that the Speaker do now leave the Chair no longer applies because Standing Order 78 now provides for the Speaker to leave the Chair without question put.

[English]

The third option, that of proposing an independent motion with notice, is in keeping with the authorities cited, and at least one known precedent which occurred on March 26, 1888, found at page 136 of Journals.

[Translation]

The Hon. Minister of State (Mr. Lewis) argued that this particular motion should be moved more properly under Private Members' Business. The dilemma that the Chair faces is that the precedents to which I have just referred date back to a period when the Notice Paper was much different from the one used today. In addition, new procedures have been introduced and this complicates the situation still further.

If Members wish to pursue this avenue and move a motion of instruction under Private Members' Business, this option is of course open to them.

[English]

The Chair would certainly have no objection to this approach. However, the Chair, and I suspect most Hon. Members, might share the practical concerns about this approach raised by the Hon. Members for Kamloops—Shuswap and Windsor West namely, that the likelihood of such a motion debated, let alone voted upon, is now quite remote, because of the new rules governing Private Members' Business.

[Translation]

The Chair, however, fails to see why the Hon. Member for Essex Windsor (Mr. Langdon) could not propose his motion under the rubric "Motions". The Hon. Member for Windson West (Mr. Gray), cited Standing Order 56(1)(p). This Standing Order lists as debatable items usually raised under Routine Proceedings "motions . . . [concerning] the management of [House] business [and] the arrangement of its proceedings."

[English]

The rubric "Motions" usually encompasses matters related to the management of the business of the House and its committees, but it is not the exclusive purview of the Government, despite the Government's unquestioned prerogative to determine the agenda of business before the House. For example, an individual Member's motion for concurrence in a committee report is properly moved under this rubric. Similarly, the Chair judges that, if a Member wishes to give notice of a motion of instruction to a committee on a Bill, it can be filed under "Motions" on the Notice Paper. Once called, the motion is debatable and amendable pursuant to Standing Order 56(1) and, if the motion has not come to a vote by the end of the day, as in the analogous case of concurrence in a report, the motion is transferred to Government Orders where debate will resume only at the pleasure of the Government.

Before our rules pertaining to the referral of Bills to Committee of the Whole were changed, any Member could move a motion of instruction to a committee on a Bill. Were the Chair to rule today that this can now only be done under Private Members' Business, then this would in fact mean that only the Government, under Government Notices of Motion, could move instructions to committees studying legislation in a timely and effective manner.

Another important point in the discussion, and one on which the Chair sought clarification from Hon. Members, was whether the proposed motion of instruction is permissive or mandatory.

Generally speaking, a permissive instruction confers on a committee the authority to do something it otherwise would have no power to do. Citation 761 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition lists some examples, among them, the permission to travel, to consolidate Bills or to divide a Bill.

According to Citation 757 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, if such a motion is adopted, it is then left to the committee to decide whether or not it will exercise this power. As Citation 409 of Beauchesne's Third Edition explains:

> An instruction which is generally made when a Bill is committed is not mandatory, and it is therefore customary to state explicity in the motion that the Committee "have power" to make the provision acquired. The intention is to give a Committee power to do a certain thing if they think proper, not to command them to do it. The committee is not bound to obey the instruction.

Precedents relating to Bills have been examined and all of these respected this permissive approach.

● (1520)

In the case before us, the Chair has closely examined the text of the motion proposed by the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor and has concluded that it rests squarely within the definition of a permissive instruction.

Finally, at the risk of venturing into highly technical matters, the Chair would like to point out to Hon. Members, although no reference was made to it when the matter was argued, the last sentence of Citation 759(1) of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition states: "If the Bill has been partly considered in committee, it is not competent to propose an Instruction".

The Chair wishes to avoid possible confusion on this point and I would ask the House to bear with me as I briefly explain its intent to Hon. Members. In early House practice, as I discussed earlier, there were specific procedures for moving motions of instruction to a Committee of the Whole considering a Bill.

Citation 412 of Beauchesne's Third Edition states:

> All instructions must be moved on the first occasion when the order for the Committee [of the Whole] on a Bill has been read. If the Bill has been partly considered in Committee at a previous sitting, it is not competent to propose an instruction when the order is read for the House "again in Committee," as the rules require that the Speaker leave the Chair (without putting the question) as soon as that order has been taken up.

The same explanation occurs on page 517 of Bourinot's Fourth Edition. Simply put, the passage means only that when the House entered Committee of the Whole for a second or subsequent time, it did so automatically without a motion for the Speaker to leave the chair. A motion of instruction without notice could not be put at that time because this was not immediately after second reading. Further, an amendment to the question "That the Speaker do now leave the chair" could not be put because the Speaker automatically left the chair without the question being put. The only viable option would be for a Member to propose an independent motion of instruction with notice to be taken up under "Motions". Although this is not expressly stated in Citation 412 of Beauchesne's Third Edition, it is in keeping with Citations 409 to 411 of the same volume.

However, the idea that a motion of instruction could be moved with notice after a committee commenced its deliberations is not addressed in Beauchesne's Fifth Edition where, instead, the early practice appears to have been transmogrified into a categorical injunction against committees being given an instruction after they began their deliberations on a Bill. If Members think that this is difficult to follow, wait until the end.

The Chair raises this issue only as a cautionary measure to clarify the concept before the House.

In summary, the Chair, after carefully examining and analysing the relevant precedents and authorities, rules that the motion proposed by the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor is in order and may be moved under the rubric "Motions" and that until the House chooses to clarify its rules relating to instructions, the Chair will continue to accept such motions, after due notice, on condition that they are directed only at committees reviewing legislation. I hope that that is clearly understood. That does not go to standing committees.

The Chair again wishes to thank all Hon. Members for their valuable contributions to this discussion, and I thank all Hon. Members for patiently hearing me through a complex procedural matter which is made more complex because there have been changes throughout the history of our rules which make it somewhat difficult to completely understand what some of the citations mean. I have tried to meet that problem. I am sorry that I could not come into the House earlier, but with the help of the Table Officers I have brought this ruling back as soon as I could.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the thoughtful commentary that preceded the ruling and it assisted us in understanding these particular points. I seek two points of clarification, Mr. Speaker. First, in relation to you commented that this would apply to motions that referred to legislation being studied by committees, and then you made the point that that usually refers to a legislative committee, but on occasion there has been a decision to send a piece of legislation to a standing committee if it requires a particular amount of expertise. Therefore, presumably under those conditions one would understand your ruling to include a standing committee if it is dealing with a piece of legislation.

Second, you indicated that there are two types of instructions, permissive instructions and mandatory instructions. Are we to assume that your ruling would refer to both permissive and mandatory motions giving permissive and mandatory instructions?

Mr. Speaker: I can assist the Hon. Member. First, as Hon. Members know, under the new procedure most Bills now go to a legislative committee. This is in fact the situation that we have in front of us. However, there are a number of standing committees that cover various aspects of government activity, sometimes a single Department, and sometimes several Departments. Those standing committees are empowered now to do many things on their own.

As the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap has pointed out, it is absolutely correct that sometimes rather than send a Bill to a legislative committee after second reading, in some instances it has been the practice to send the Bill to the standing committee. Before we changed the rules all Bills went to standing committees, unless a special committee was struck.

As is being used in this present instance, a motion cannot be used to send instructions to a standing committee unless that standing committee has received a Bill after second reading, and in that case it would be acting in the capacity of a legislative committee. I can assure the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap that if a Bill was sent to a standing committee after second reading to be dealt with in the same way as it would be dealt with before a legislative committee, then what I have ruled in order today would be applicable. I hope that that is helpful.

The second question is on the distinction between mandatory motions and permissive motions. Without going into a lot of detail, if one goes back into history, the reality is that those motions have been for a long time permissive not mandatory. Until I receive some instruction from the House or until I can be persuaded that it would be appropriate to allow the effect of this ruling to include a mandatory motion, this ruling says that these motions must be permissive. That is in keeping with many years of practice. At least at the moment I can find no tradition or practice which contradicts that.

What I have ordered is that a motion as put by the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor can be moved after notice on motions by any Member of the House, that that motion must be permissive in nature, and that it must of course go to a legislative committee that is studying the Bill in question after second reading. It could also go to a standing committee if that standing committee had received a Bill after second reading and is acting as a legislative committee.

I hope this has been helpful to the Hon. Member.

Mr. Riis: This has been extremely helpful to us all in terms of understanding what has become perhaps a new initiative as of late. I am certainly accepting your ruling, but would request that you consider Citation 756 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition which states:

> An Instruction is a motion empowering a committee to do something which it could not otherwise do . . .

On that point, I think your ruling is perfectly clear and one that we all would agree with. However, it then goes on to say,

> . . . or to direct it to do something which it might otherwise not do. It directs the order and course of the committee's proceedings . . .

And so on and so forth. While your decision obviously clarifies the point in terms of the permissive instruction in the case that is before us, it seems to me to leave a part of it still somewhat unclear, in that Citation 736 indicates that an instruction per se can include the direction to do something which a committee might otherwise not do. I emphasize the term "to direct". That seems to me to move it beyond the permissive realm.

• (1530)

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, perhaps you would be good enough to hear me on this point, because this was the one I was going to raise. Your ruling is very thoughtful and helpful as it is, and it will certainly do much to advance the growing importance of the committee system before our House of Commons. However, I would very respectfully suggest to you, since the motion by the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon), which led to the point of order on which you have ruled, is clearly only a permissive motion and not a mandatory motion, that you would be willing to limit your ruling today within the four corners of the motion which has given rise to it, and leave open the opportunity for us to argue the course of action which the House can follow if a motion is presented to give a mandatory instruction to a committee. I make the suggestion with the utmost respect. Your comments on the entire question have been most helpful, but I do submit that the only issue before you is with respect to a permissive motion rather than a mandatory motion.

Mr. Speaker: I have the point of both the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap and the Hon. Member for Windsor West Certainly, at the moment, my ruling applies to the motion of the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor. Since omniscience is seldom given to any of us here on earth and certainly not to Speakers, it might be that at some other occasion I might be persuaded by the procedural knowledge of Hon. Members, who I know would want to assist me, that another view might be taken of a mandatory motion. Naturally, what I am saying here today would not preclude an Hon. Member from rising and arguing that at some other point, at some other time.

At the moment, at least, it is my view that that argument would not prevail. It does not mean for one minute that I would not hear it. I am indicating pretty clearly, I think, at least at the moment, that until I can be persuaded otherwise—despite the citation in Beauchesne's that the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap has quoted—if that is put into context and into history, at least I feel today that the appropriate inference to be drawn is that the proper practice is permissive motions only. If Hon. Members wanted to raise that matter at another time, I would most certainly hear them.

If I could be persuaded that I have misinterpreted the tangled history of this particular matter, then of course I would act accordingly. The Hon. Minister of State (Mr. Lewis).

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Chair for its ruling and clarification of the instruction motion. I want to indicate on behalf of the Government that I think the ruling makes good sense in terms of today's existing practices and Standing Orders. I am sure we can understand the opposition Members' interest in pursuing matters in this way, and I want to indicate that we will consider each case and each motion moved on its merits and act accordingly.

Mr. Axworthy: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. I apologize. I had to step out of the Chamber for a few short moments to attend to a piece of business, but I was wondering if the Speaker, in providing a ruling about the permissive nature of a motion, would indicate whether that still incorporates or encompasses a certain judgment from the House that is in effect advice to the committee.

Aside from just providing authorization, it also incorporates a certain will or set of advice to the committee to act upon, as a result of that motion being presented which, I think, in terms of the role of the committee vis-à-vis the entire Chamber, it is a very important distinction to make. It certainly has great relevance in this case, where there was major dispute in the committee about the advisability of travelling and whether in fact if there was a motion in the House, to express the will of the House in this case, it might affect the judgment or decision of the committee within the realm or parameters of that permission.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) is very persuasive. However, I think it is important that this ruling be taken in the context in which it has been argued and given. It is not for the Chair to go beyond what is clearly the practice and the precedents. That is, it is quite clear in our practice that whatever effect a permissive motion given to a committee may have on the committee, it is for the committee to decide what it is to do with it.

As the Hon. Member will have noticed in listening to my reasons as I read them, I have made it very clear that the committee does not have to necessarily act. What went on in that committee is not for the Chair to speculate upon. I am trying as much as possible to meet the appropriate concerns of the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor and other Hon. Members who have raised this matter, to ensure that all Hon. Members, as can the Government, can move a permissive motion.

If the motion was, for example, passed on some occasion by the House and sent to the committee, what effect that might have on the committee is not for the Speaker to say. It certainly is open to the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry to perhaps approach individual members of the committee—as is of course the right of any Member—and say; "Look, in view of this, don't you think you should do something?" That is not something upon which the Chair can speculate. I know that the Hon. Member would understand that.

What moral weight may be given to a permissive motion is something for the committee itself, and other Hon. Members who may be in conversation with committee members, to measure. It is not for the Chair to say.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to prolong this discussion. Again, I appreciate and accept the guidance that you have given us as a result of your decision. I am encouraged by the words you used, that you would at some appropriate time entertain further debate and discussion on this matter in terms of the difference between a permissive and a mandatory instruction.

I simply ask Members to cast their minds back to not long ago when another important committee was meeting on the Constitution in 1982. As a result of that special order, the House of Commons decided that televised hearings would be appropriate for such an important committee. We then passed such an order, and a very clear requirement was passed along for the committee to carry out.

If the day ever came when the House of Commons through a mandatory motion providing mandatory instruction to a committee were to decide in its wisdom for a particular course of action for the committee to take, it would be in our interests to pursue that so that the House of Commons could send a very clear and definitive instruction to the appropriate committee to follow a particular course of action.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker, for allowing us to carry on this discussion if the event ever arose in the future.

Mr. Speaker: I want to assure the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap that I do not think it would ever be appropriate for a Speaker to say that he or she would not hear argument on a procedural matter. After all, because we have had arguments on procedural matters over centuries, that is why we have the body of procedural law that we do have.

I have to say to the Hon. Member also that I would have to deal with it when a case arose. I am also indicating to Hon. Members that at least for today I am of the view that the practice, the tradition and the history indicates that these matters are permissive. If I can be persuaded to the contrary, of course I would change my position. But that is for another day, not today.

In the meantime, I hope this has been helpful because as the Hon. Minister of State has said—and I am appreciative to the Hon. Minister for his generous reaction because I think it is important, we all think it is important— that private Members not be placed in a position where they are more limited in their ability to take part in the dealings of this House than they might otherwise be. What has happened as a consequence of this argument I think has clarified the matter.

The second question is still there, and I understand perfectly well why some Hon. Members may want to pursue it further at another time, and if they do, then of course I will hear them.

REQUEST FOR AUTHORIZATION FOR LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE TO TRAVEL

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I would like to move the motion that I put on the Order Paper on July 6:

> That the legislative committee on Bill C-130 be empowered to adjourn from place to place in Canada and the United States for the purpose of hearing witnesses on the proposed trade agreement with the United States.

Mr. Speaker: Just so that all Hon. Members and everybody else who is watching or listening understand where we are, this is the motion upon which there has been procedural debate and upon which I have just ruled.

This motion is now in order. I will put it to the House.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Langdon: Mr. Speaker, there is a stage at which issues confronting us as parliamentarians become something more than just the issues themselves. When we face, for instance, debate on questions of water exports to the United States, with respect to new trade tribunals or with respect to the trade Bill, Bill C-130, that is one level of debate, one level of concern.

There is a second level of concern which we in this House must at all times be conscious of and responsible to, namely, the responsibility which we have as Members of the House of Commons to respect, to reflect and to practise the commitments to democratic debate and democratic consideration, especially of major issues which confront our country and which would profoundly change our country. That is why I have moved this motion.

It a motion to set, as the Speaker himself put it, some moral weight on the committee which is considering this Bill and which has rejected the possibility of going across the country to hear Canadians from coast to coast; to hear Canadians in their small towns and in their small cities speak out in favour or against provisions in the trade Bill. The Minister of State (Mr. Lewis), the Deputy House Leader, when he made a speech on Bill C-130 said that the Government spoke for big Canada. It spoke for the big Canada which is, as I see it, the Canada made up of national elites, of powerful corporations and of dominant groups which have run this country for years and years throughout our history. Now this group of dominant individuals, of dominant corporations, of dominant cities, wants to take us and weave us into the United States. That is what Bill C-130 is all about.

Despite the tremendous significance of that move, the betrayal of hundreds of years of settlement, of development, of building and of history which has gone into making this country, this Government wants, nevertheless, on behalf of big Canada to proceed.

It is possible for this Government with its massive majority, despite the fact it has no mandate from the people from the past election, to force that kind of project through the House, though we shall see how far it goes beyond that.

What is completely unacceptable because it is undemocratic, unresponsive, insensitive and because it does not listen to the people of Canada is to take this action on behalf of big Canada. It does not permit small Canada, the small towns, the small cities, the groups which have fought for social justice against those large corporations and dominant elites, to have the chance, through hearings across the country, to put their point of view forward with respect of this betrayal of hundreds of years of history.

In taking that decision, the committee which is looking at Bill C-130 has in fact betrayed our democratic traditions, and I regret this very deeply. I do not say this simply as a reflection of my own thinking on this. I reflect instead the hundreds of telegrams and letters which have poured into my office and into the committee indicating that right across Canada, a broad cross-section of people want a chance to speak. They want a chance to be heard and they want that chance through cross-country hearings on the part of the committee.

There have been telegrams from groups like the National Federation of Nurses, the National Council of Playwrights, the Canadian Teachers Federation, the Saskatchewan Pro-Canada Network, the Little Mountain District Public Housing Tenants Association, the Toronto Workers Health and Safety Legal Clinic, the Diocese of Victoria of Social Justice Commission in Victoria, B.C., Oxfam Canada, the Association of Canadian Publishers, the United Church of Canada, the Social Planning Council of Metropolitan Toronto, the Executive Secretary of the United Church in Winnipeg, the Jesuit Centre, the Health Coalition of Cape Breton—

[Translation]

The Quebec coalition opposed to free trade, groups that have said it is necessary for democracy and for the future of our country that there be hearings across the country so that the people of Canada can be heard.

[English]

There have been groups like the Catholic Family Services Bureau in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops, the Conference Program staff of the United Church in Saskatchewan, the B.C. and Yukon Women's Centre Association, Co-op Atlantic, the Northwest Territories Federation of Labour—

[Translation]

. . . spokespersons for la Solidarité populaire du Québec . . .

[English]

—the Archdiocese of Regina and its Social Action Committee, the Federation of Women Teachers Associations of Canada, the Toronto Theatre Alliance—

[Translation]

Groups like CIAFT from Montreal have said that throughout this country, where French and English are spoken, are groups that want to make presentations and that it is not possible unless the Committee decides to travel and visit cities in all provinces of this country.

[English]

There have been groups like Lawyers Against the Trade Agreement from Edmonton, Alberta, so I speak on behalf of these groups but not just on behalf of these groups. I speak on behalf of thousands, hundreds of thousands, millions of Canadians who do not accept this trade deal and believe by an overwhelming majority that it is essential that an election take place before this trade deal is put into effect.

This is a permissive motion but it is a permissive motion which I hope will take the moral weight of this democratic House of Commons to the committee which is looking at Bill C-130 by sending it a very simple message which says that the committee must listen to the people of Canada and it must cross this country so that the people of Canada can speak to it. It must see to it that there is fairness practised in the consideration of this Bill.

There is before this country a profound choice. It is a choice as to whether this country will continue independently as it has for the past 121 years, an event just recently celebrated here on Parliament Hill, or whether it will take steps which will weave it into a continental relationship dependent on the United States, a relationship which makes Canada no more than a colony of that country. That is the profound choice which is before us.

Some people in this House are on one side of that choice and other people are on the other. Some people in Canada wish that they had been born Americans and want to see this trade deal go forward in order to see that come into effect. Other people are proud of the fact that they are Canadians and want to see to it that Canada is preserved independent in the future.

Regardless of where we stand on this profound choice, regardless of which direction we would like to see our country take, we have a democratic responsibility as a House of Commons to see to it that across Canada, the small people, in their cities and in their towns, get the chance to speak out as powerfully and as passionately as they possibly can.

• (1600)

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Questions or comments?

Mr. Hawkes: Madam Speaker, I thought we were rising on debate but if there is a question or comment period, I would just ask the Hon. Member one simple question. Has the House pronounced itself with respect to support for the agreement? What does a vote at second reading represent?

What the Member seems to be saying is that we should revisit the issue of whether free trade is a good idea for Canada or not. The Hon. Member knows that the Standing Committee on External Affairs and International Trade travelled across the country. He knows that many millions of dollars were spent by a commission on the economy which studied this country for three years and recommended to the Canadian people and this chamber that we seek a free trade agreement with the U.S.

You may notice that the Hon. Member talked very little about the legislative process, about the need to hear witnesses. That is peculiar. People who are listening may want to examine the "blues" to see whether or not he talked about the need to travel the country for the purpose of examining the fine print of the legislation and having technical experts tell us whether the words in the legislation reflect the agreement. He forgot, or maybe he does not know, that most of those people with that kind of expertise live here in Ottawa. That is where most of the witnesses with respect to fine print and the law come from at the legislative stage of most Bills.

Is he talking about trying to take the House backwards in time to some day when the House was not committed to this agreement? Or, is he simply seeking to filibuster the House, frustrate the House, frustrate the democratic process, by suggesting that the issue is not resolved?

This House has spoken and spoken clearly. This House wants this free trade agreement, and the job of the committee is to examine the fine print and make sure it is this agreement in the fine print. That is its job. Travelling the country is not its job.

Mr. Langdon: Madam Speaker, frankly, I can hardly believe what I just heard from the Parliamentary Secretary. First, unlike the Parliamentary Secretary, I was a member of that committee which crossed the country very rapidly. It heard a fair number of people speak with respect not to the trade deal itself but to a short, preliminary document which bore very little relationship to the details in the trade deal itself.

With respect to the Macdonald Commission, one of the major features of this trade deal is that it includes services for the first time in any significant trade deal in the world. Lest you think that services are a small part of our economy, they make up 72 per cent of the economic activity in Canada. The Macdonald Commission did not do any study whatsoever of the impact of a free trade arrangement with respect to services because it did not expect services would ever be part of a deal. Therefore, to refer to that document is also false.

With respect to the final comment of the Parliamentary Secretary, to say that all the expertise that needs to be consulted with respect to this Bill is in Ottawa is perhaps the most amazing statement which I have ever heard in this House.

Mr. Hawkes: Why don't you repeat the quote accurately instead of lying once again? You say "all". I never said "all". I said "most".

Mr. Langdon: I think there is cause for withdrawal on the part of the Hon. Member.

Mr. Hawkes: A little honesty in this debate would go a long way.

Mr. Langdon: He has accused me—

Mr. Riis: Point of order, Madam Speaker. I do not know if it was audible to you but it seemed to be audible to the rest of the House, and I suspect even to the gallery, when the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary called the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon) a liar. He said that he was lying. He called him a liar. As a respected and longstanding member of this House he ought to do the honourable thing and stand in his place and withdraw that unparliamentary remark.

Mr. Hawkes: Madam Speaker, I never hesitate, if I have offended the rules of the House, to withdraw any remark. What I am asking the Hon. Member to do is, if he is going to quote me, to quote me accurately and not present a distortion to the House and the nation about what I said. I never said, and the record will bear me out, that all the expertise is in Ottawa. I said most of the legal expertise around the fine print in legislation is to be found in Ottawa, and that is a fact.

Mr. Riis: Perhaps the Hon. Member did not understand the point I was making. He hurled the ultimate insult by saying my hon. colleague from Essex—Windsor was lying. I do not know how you would interpret that. I know the "blues" will certainly reflect that. It was audible here and I suspect audible to people in the gallery. It is what we have come to expect from the Hon. Member but it is strictly unparliamentary.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Chair must admit to not having heard such words, otherwise the Chair would have intervened right away. On the other hand, when he rose the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary did say that if he said anything unparliamentary, he was withdrawing. That I did hear very well so I think that should settle the matter for the time being. The Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor has the floor.

Mr. Riis: Until we see the "blues" at least.

Mr. Langdon: Regardless of whether or not the Parliamentary Secretary said "most" or "all", and I certainly heard him say "all", I want to make a very important point. The Government used to say this was a country of small communities. Now it says this is a country where expertise, by and large, rests in Ottawa. I say precisely the opposite. The expertise with respect to the fish processing and what will happen to it as a consequence of this trade deal, and therefore the details of the legislation as it deals with fish processing, rests with people who are involved in that industry in British Columbia, Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, and the rest of Atlantic Canada.

The same is true when we talk about the agricultural parts of this deal. It is absolutely bizarre to hear the Conservative Party, which at one stage went off to Prince Albert because it felt that was where it should seek expertise with respect to agricultural concerns, now says no, it is not necessary.

• (1610)

This is a deal which will profoundly change the nature of agriculture in this country in the future. Yet, is the Conservative Government now prepared to go to Prince Albert? Is it prepared to go to Regina? Is it prepared to go to Calgary? Is it prepared to go to Winnipeg? No, the expertise is centred here in Ottawa. That is the Conservative view which indicates very clearly that after four years in power the arrogance of Ottawa has taken over what used to be at least some clear thinking in some parts of the Conservative Party.

It is regrettable that that last perspective should have been put forward, not by a back-bencher who somehow got caught up in the great enjoyments of the capital city, but by a Parliamentary Secretary, in fact one from the West, who is supposed to be able to reflect the Government's views.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member but the time for questions and comments has expired.

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, we are debating a motion that the committee be allowed to travel. The Member brings up the issue of democracy. We have witnessed for several months now continued attempts by the tyranny of the minority. The Member talks about visiting the country and representing constituents. Every single Member sitting across the way comes from a riding in which the majority of the people say yes to free trade.

Mr. Riis: False, absolutely false.

Mr. Hawkes: The New Democratic Party represents union bosses from a few very strong unions in this country. They do not represent the people of this country.

Mr. Riis: That's false, it's not true.

Mr. Hawkes: When the election comes they will find out. We should have a going away party for the NDP Members in this Chamber because they are not coming back, and that is because they are not playing square with the Canadian people.

Mr. Riis: Absolutely false.

Mr. Hawkes: They have lost their roots, those Prairie roots in which the movement began which was in touch with the small people of this nation. Now they represent the rich union bosses who drive Cadillacs. That is the view they express in this Chamber day after day.

They talk about dinosaurs.

Mr. Riis: You're one.

Mr. Hawkes: A lot of people in this caucus are proud to be dinosaurs. That is the emblem for the football team of the university where I come from. Dinosaurs are important to our history. Dinosaurs died on behalf of the oil industry a long time ago. Without the dinosaurs we would not have the oil and the energy potential we do have.

The New Democratic Party reminds me of another animal. It is spelled s-l-o-t-h. A sloth sleeps a lot and hangs upside down by its tail. It looks at the world from an upside down point of view. That is what the NDP is all about. It looks at the world upside down. The modern world is passing it by.

Mr. Riis: Have you checked the polls recently, Jim?

Mr. Hawkes: This House has approved, in two separate ways and on two separate occasions, the idea of the trade deal. After four years we need to explain it to them. The vote in favour on second reading is agreement in principle with the proposed legislation.

Mr. Orlikow: Be honest for a change. Tell us how you closed up the House by ringing the bells for 16 days.

Mr. Hawkes: That is behind us, Madam Speaker. This House and the elected people, of whom I am one, have approved the free trade agreement and approved this legislation in principle. The committee's job is to examine the fine print.

Mr. Orlikow: Tell the truth.

Mr. Hawkes: Does the fine print accord with the agreement?

Mr. Riis: You're afraid of the people, Jim. Admit it.

Mr. Hawkes: That is the job of the committee. New Democratic Members want it to go visiting. It would be lovely for committee members to visit Victoria, it is beautiful in Victoria. Let's go to P.E.I. and eat lobster. Let's go to Newfoundland and take a tour on a boat.

We were sent here to do a job, not to fly around the country in airplanes spending taxpayers' dollars on fancy meals, but to sit here, eat our sandwiches at suppertime, and do the job. That is what we were sent here to do and this Party will make sure that we do it.

Mr. Riis: Fifty million dollars on Conservative propaganda on the trade deal.

Mr. Hawkes: You can't have a vacation 365 days a year travelling around the world. You have to settle down and do some work from time to time.

The Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) moved the motion that the committee travel on July 7, six days ago. Overwhelmingly the committee members said no.

Mr. Gauthier: Of course, they're all Tories. Tories don't move.

Mr. Hawkes: If I spend eight hours flying to Calgary and back I cannot hear witnesses, pay attention to the fine print, and make the decisions which have to be made. If I fly off to Newfoundland it will take another day or two. The NDP wants to stop the Government from implementing the will of the Canadian people.

Mr. Riis: You couldn't be further from the truth.

Mr. Hawkes: Canadians want jobs and better paying jobs.

Mr. Riis: Prime Minister Mulroney campaigned against the trade deal.

Mr. Hawkes: We were elected four years ago on a platform of jobs, jobs, jobs. One and a quarter million jobs later they are telling us that everything we do is wrong.

Mr. Riis: You can't trust the Tories.

Mr. Hawkes: They have been saying it ever since the first Budget.

Mr. Riis: You can't trust the Prime Minister.

Mr. Hawkes: The people in the gallery should know that when they say we are wrong it is the best evidence that we are right. Every time they say we are wrong more jobs are created in the Canadian economy and more people have money to spend to put better food on the table and obtain better accommodation, better transportation, and a chance to take a vacation.

Mr. Riis: You're a joke, Jim.

Mr. Hawkes: This Party stands for equality for all Canadians.

Mr. Riis: The people of Canada know you can't trust the Prime Minister. He was against the trade deal.

Mr. Hawkes: This Party stands for equality for all Canadians. The government Members in this House are sick and tired of the filibuster tactics which is what the motion was today is. The legislation is in committee and members are working on it this very moment while this House is debating whether they should go on a jaunt to Victoria or maybe up to the Yukon. There is a lot of good fishing up in the Yukon.

Mr. Riis: You're a whiner.

Mr. Hawkes: Our Members say that we should do the job which Canadians sent us here to do, that we should get through the legislation on the Table. We want to get those kinds of things done on behalf of the Canadian people and then go to the Canadian people and seek a mandate.

Mr. Riis: You're scared to go to the people now, Jim. Admit it.

Mr. Hawkes: Madam Speaker, when the Opposition looks at the world upside down it comes to the conclusion that we are scared.

Mr. Riis: If you stood upside down you'd look a lot better.

Mr. Hawkes: Their behaviour tells us that they are scared. Every moment of delay is because they are afraid of the voters' judgment.

Mr. Orlikow: Call the election tomorrow.

Mr. Hawkes: They are afraid by how satisfied Canadian people are with the work of the Government.

Mr. Riis: Have you not read a single poll in the last four years?

Mr. Hawkes: They know how much it has meant to the standard of living of Canadians. They would like to keep us here forever. They would like to filibuster forever.

Therefore, Madam Speaker, it gives to me great pleasure to tell this House in the clearest terms possible that it is time to get on with the business of the nation. I ask for the support of all Members of this House and their approval of the following motion:

That this House do now proceed to Orders of the Day.

The filibuster has to end.

• (1620)

Mr. Langdon: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. If the Hon. Member was speaking in the same debate in which I was speaking, and it seemed unlikely at some stages, it seems that the same requirement to answer questions at the end of his speech should exist, whether or not he moves a motion.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I listened carefully to the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor. However, the Hon. Member for Calgary West has put a motion before the House. I must put the question to the House immediately, as it is not debatable. Therefore, is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Hawkes), which was agreed to on the following division:

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

AIR CANADA PUBLIC PARTICIPATION ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. Robert de Cotret (for the President of the Privy Council) moved that Bill C-129, an Act to provide for the continuance of Air Canada under the Canada Business Corporations Act and for the issuance and sale of shares thereof to the public, be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, it is indeed a pleasure to be able to speak on behalf of the Government, in particular the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski), the Hon. Member from Vegreville, Alberta.

Some Hon. Members: Filibuster.

Mr. Hawkes: It is a subject close to his heart and I think it is a feather in his cap that we have come this far through the process. It is also the first time in my nine years in the Parliament of Canada that I have been the recipient of one of our Standing Order rules.

An Hon. Member: Nine is too long.

Mr. Hawkes: That rule allows me unlimited time. The temptation is absolutely enormous. There are so many things that I would like to say, but I will attempt to keep my comments relatively brief, and hopefully the House will see its way clear to follow that example and move along—

An Hon. Member: It won't. I guarantee that.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order. It is really impossible for the Chair to hear the Hon. Member. The Chair would appreciate it if the House were to quieten down. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary.

Mr. Hawkes: Thank you for the intervention, Madam Speaker. I could get louder, as Members know, but I would much prefer your solution of a quieter House so that we could have perhaps more of a reasonable debate.

Members will know that this Government has made a lot of changes in Canada in the last four years, and not the least of those was the passage of the new National Transportation Act which we passed in 1987 in this House. That Act eased the economic regulation of the industry and permitted greater reliance on market forces as the context in which airlines should operate.

It is true that that kind of increased opportunity system for the private sector is of great benefit to consumers. Those of us who fly back and forth to Ottawa from western points with some frequency can indeed attest to the reality that the service today is better and more frequent. We have more options, and prices indeed are competitive.

[Translation]

These changes lead to a restructuring of the air transportation industry, which consisted of a single national airline, a few regional carriers and several local carriers.

Hon. Members are well aware that today, our country enjoys the services of two national carriers, Air Canada and Canadian Airlines International. The two airlines operate on the same principle: they both have regional and local partners and alliance carriers that provide small communities with greater frequency of service.

In addition, Wardair, a company from Alberta, is becoming a strong competitor, both on the domestic market and on international routes.

As for those who maintained that regulatory reform and changes in ownership would bring about a drop in both quality and quantity of service, I would merely refer them to some very revealing statistics. Between 1984 and 1987, for example, weekly scheduled domestic departures across Canada rose from 6,200 to 9,300, an increase of 50 per cent.

[English]

In today's modern world—and earlier this day I spoke about the Opposition and their inability sometimes to comprehend a modern world—there are 17 major national carriers, and I say major national carriers in terms of their fleet size. I think we can proudly say that Air Canada is one of those 17 national carriers. In that group, only three of the major carriers in the world today are totally state-owned. What are the three? Before we pass this Bill, Air Canada is one of them. The second one is Aeroflot, the Russian state-owned airline. The third one is CAAC, the airline of the People's Republic of China.

It is time that we got out of the business, as other nations have done before us, of having a major airline carrier totally state-owned. It is time to join the modern world, as other nations such as Great Britain, Japan, Sweden, Switzerland, France, Italy, New Zealand, Spain and Australia have done or are in the process of doing. In the commitment to safety, which some suggest may have been compromised or may be compromised by this Bill, that kind of complaint simply does not hold water.

The Aeronautics Act, 1985, is another major achievement of this Government. It is further demonstrated that expenditures on air transportation infrastructure, including safety equipment and program expenditures have almost tripled over the last decade in response to initiatives of that kind.

Public participation in the ownership of Air Canada will have no effect—may I repeat that, Madam Speaker, no effect—on the framework of safety laws and regulations which apply with equal force to all air carriers operating in this country, whether we are talking about major air carriers or small air carriers.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker, since the last Liberal Government passed the Air Canada Act, 1977, under which Air Canada was to operate on a commercial basis, the Corporation has always been guided by this principle in purchasing equipment. In fact, from its early beginnings fifty-one years ago, Air Canada has always purchased the kind of aircraft that was best suited to the type of work it was asked to do.

Initially, Madam Speaker, privatization will give Air Canada the freedom it needs to respond quickly and effectively to market demand, without being subject to the constraints and formalities of the Financial Administration Act. Furthermore, the Corporation will have access to the same venture capital markets as its competitors.

Public participation means that Air Canada will be able to compete with other carriers on an equal footing. According to the Canadian Consumers Association, this can only enhance the quality of service offered to Canadian travellers.

[English]

Air Canada's employees have indicated their support for this initiative too. It will give them the opportunity to share in the ownership of their own company. The interest on their part is probably the best assurance Canadians have that the people who work for the company, who believe in the company, would like to participate in the ownership of it.

According to studies carried out both by Air Canada management and the Air Canada employee ownership committee, representative of a broad cross-section of employees all the way from the machine shop floor to the executive suite, employees support the opportunity to buy shares in the company. It is not something that just executives are interested in—

Mr. Orlikow: No membership, no list, no organization.

Mr. Hawkes: —it is something in which every employee of Air Canada at every level is interested. They would like to be part of the ownership element and therefore, through their votes, part of the management element of the company. Perhaps the greatest strength of privatization is that Canadians have a real chance to participate in the affairs of these companies which so dramatically affect their lives. It is not a time for politicians to tell them how to run their companies, it is a time for employees to participate in that way.

It is also important to reassure Canadians and this House that the provisions of the Canada Labour Code and some of the advances that we have made in worker safety and so on will continue to apply to the privatized company. Nothing in that area is changed. The collective agreements that have been negotiated historically remain in force. The safeguards under the strengthened Pension Benefit Standards Act will ensure that employees' interests in Air Canada's pension plans will not be jeopardized. The workplace that employees have enjoyed, their benefits and the future they are looking forward to is all ensured with the additional opportunity to buy shares and participate in that fashion.

Air Canada is committed to meeting its pension obligations under the Act and in relation to the contractual obligations it has with employees. The legislation also clearly specifies that Montreal's status as the headquarters of Air Canada is fully protected—we are not into a regional fight here—as are the operational and overhaul facilities in Montreal, Mississauga and Winnipeg. Those facilities exist in those locations because it makes sense. The legislation is helpful in making sure that that situation remains. The President of Air Canada himself has said that the Winnipeg base, something dear to the heart of western Canadians, is very efficient, it is doing good work and it is doing it in a location where it needs to be done. It makes common sense to have that facility in that location, and it will continue there. It makes a profit. With worker participation at the ownership level, perhaps profits will go up.

The legislation offers the opportunity for all Canadians to participate directly in the future of the airline. It is every individual's right to make an individual investment decision, the right to buy and sell shares and the right to vote on decisions affecting Air Canada as long as shares are held. They have that right with Wardair and Canadian Airlines International. Now they will have that right with Air Canada, a desirable consequence.

We want as a Government to make sure that the shares are widely held, that they do not fall into the hands of a small group of people, and that they stay in Canadian hands. This legislation specifies restrictions on the ownership of shares, and I think that makes sense. No one can own more than 10 per cent of the shares. Total non-resident ownership is being restricted to no more than 25 per cent of issued voting shares.

We talked earlier this day about the committee on free trade. Committees do good work in this Chamber. We have had many amendments to the language Bill, many amendments to the environmental protection Bill and many amendments to the refugee Bill. The committee on this Bill chose to amend Clause 6 for greater certainty to make that condition apply explicitly to each and every meeting of Air Canada's shareholders. In the future, non-residents will never be able to out-vote Canadian interests or Canadian shareholders. Their votes would be cast on a prorated basis and can never represent more than 25 per cent of votes cast. That is quite an achievement, and we thank the committee for that good work.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker, public participation in the growth and development of Air Canada is in the interests of the Corporation, its employees, the air transportation industry and the entire country.

Madam Speaker and Hon. Members, I want to thank you for your attention.

[English]

It is time to pass the Bill and get it to the Senate. I hope Members will be brief.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Debate. The Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia)

Mr. Caccia: Madam Speaker, I would like to reply to the comments just made by the Parliamentary Secretary with his mellifluous voice and following a prepared text he was trying—

Mr. MacLellan: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Because the first speaker in the Opposition has unlimited time, and as I am the critic—although I do not want to forgo the time of my hon. friend., the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia)—I am sure that he would want me to have the floor.

Mr. Caccia: Madam Speaker, I am glad to defer to my colleague and follow him in debate.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I thank the Hon. Member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia) for making life a lot easier for the Speaker. The Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys.

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Madam Speaker, I just want to reply to a couple of the comments made by the Parliamentary Secretary. He welcomed to the modern world the privatization of Air Canada. If that welcome to the modern world and that privatization put us in the position of other countries dealing with totally privatized and deregulated airline services, then that is not the modern world. That is a regressive world.

If welcome to the modern world of privatization and deregulation means seats closer together, planes not maintained to the standard to which we have been accustomed in Canada, flights cancelled at the last minute, flight delays, crew lay-offs, improperly trained crews, no services on the flights, if that is the modern world to which the Parliamentary Secretary refers, then I do not think Canadians would want that modern world. But that is the world that will be created in air transportation if this government Bill gets through.

We have in Canada an outstanding airline service. Why do we have such good service? It is because we have three major airlines, Air Canada, Canadian Airlines International and Wardair. Two of them are private companies. Only Air Canada is a public company. Because Air Canada is a public company, it is regulated by the Government of Canada. It is told to be fair to the travelling public of Canada, and it provides a good service.

It may cost a little more to provide this good service. It may cost a little more to make sure that the maintenance is at the level to which the Government feels Canadians are entitled. At least the former Liberal Government felt that that was the level of maintenance to which Canadians were entitled. It is obvious that this Government does not feel the same way.

If the regulations that are now imposed on Air Canada because it is a public company are taken away, then Air Canada will not only diminish its standards in maintenance, service, employment and training but the other airlines will do so as well. They will then all have a free ticket to reduce service. They will all give equally poor service and will be able to save money. That is what has happened in other countries.

We do not have to imagine what will happen, we need only look at what has happened in other countries to see what it is the Canadian public will have to bear in the years to come if we privatize Air Canada in a deregulated airline industry. The terrible two, privatization and deregulation, will scuttle the ideas, objectives and standards Canadians want to maintain and believe they are entitled to.

The Parliamentary Secretary also referred to the committee doing good work. I have been a Member of Parliament for nine years and I have never been part of such a disgraceful exhibition on the part of the Government as was the case with the legislative committee which studied this particular Bill. We told the witnesses who wanted to be heard that they all had to appear on one day. The people of Canada were restricted to one day to voice their objections to this Bill.

Is this not a transportation Bill? Is it not a Bill dealing with Air Canada? Was Air Canada not brought into being 51 years ago because Canada is a wide, diverse country with people living thousands of miles apart? We thought that only a public airline could provide the level of transportation service to which we felt the Canadian public was entitled. Is this not why Air Canada was brought in? Yet the committee did not travel. The people in the metropolitan corridors will certainly suffer, but it is the people from the smaller regions of Canada who will really suffer as a result of this privatization, yet the committee did not travel. It did not allow these people to testify before it.

We finished debating the Bill on a Thursday and the committee hearings started on Monday. The hearings were over within eight days and only one day was given for the people of Canada to testify before the committee. If a witness could not be there that one day, that witness could not testify.

This is fine for Members of Parliament. I suppose we were inconvenienced a great deal, but we had second and third reading stages for speeches and we had report stage for amendments. However, the people of Canada had no other opportunity to speak to this regressive legislation than in the legislative committee. The legislative committee provided their one opportunity to speak to Members of Parliament and to testify to how they disagree with this Bill. Yet the Government told the people of Canada from Sydney, from Vancouver Island, and from Cape Breton Island that one day is all they had if they wanted to testify.

Even if we had applications for a large number of witnesses, that did not matter. We pruned the list to the extent that if it had been a tree, all we would have had left was a stump. The leaves, the branches and everything would have gone. The people of Canada were denied their opportunity to speak.

I would like to give an example of the sentiment that exists on this particular issue. Transport 2000 said in a letter to the Chairman of the legislative committee the following:

> I am gravely disappointed by the decision of the Legislative Committee on Bill C-129 to schedule only one day to receive and hear witnesses on a subject of national significance: the issue and sale of Air Canada shares. With its distinguished contribution to national development and prominent position in the transportation industry, Air Canada is clearly the most notable crown corporation in the current parliamentary session to be slated for privatization. By selecting witnesses from exclusive airline management, organized labor and academic circles, the Legislative Committee overlooked Air Canada's most important constituency—the travelling public.

Indeed, the legislative committee did overlook the most important source, the Canadian travelling public. Yet it was the Government's decision to hear witnesses on only one day. As a result, Canadians did not have the opportunity to make their presentation.

Why are we here? Why are we debating this Bill? Why do we want to mess around with our airline industry? What is the big need to privatize Air Canada? What will be achieved?

We are allowing some executives and others to increase their salaries, perhaps. We are allowing the private sector to invest in Air Canada. The Bill provides that 75 per cent of the shares to be purchased have to be purchased by Canadians since only 25 per cent of the shares can be held by non-residents. Is that what we are trying to achieve? No, it cannot possibly be because Canadians already own Air Canada. Canadians from coast to coast own Air Canada. We are not giving shares of Air Canada to the public because the public already owns it.

Why are we doing this? Is it because we want to reduce the number of Air Canada's domestic flights? Do we want to do that? Why would we want to do that? Why would we want to reduce the number of Air Canada's domestic flights and increase international flights? I am sure the pilots would certainly be interested in that. Air Canada has excellent pilots, but they can demand a higher salary if there are more international flights and fewer domestic flights. However, do members of the Canadian public want that? Why would anyone want flights cancelled?

What happens when flights are cancelled? One of two things happens. If Air Canada cancels a flight, it might not be replaced. Perhaps it will be replaced by one of the feeder airlines which fly Dash-8s, very nice planes which give a great frequency of service. Of course, however, they will not be run by Air Canada employees, and the employees who work for the feeder airlines will certainly not get the same kind of salaries as Air Canada employees. That is part of the plan: take away Air Canada service, put on feeder airline service, hire new employees and pay them less. That is the idea. Save money.

What about service to the public? If that is the idea, what about Halifax? There are no gates for the feeder airlines there. You have to walk downstairs and the planes are lined up like ducks on a pond. You do not know which plane is which because they all look alike, but someone gratuitously tells you which flight is yours. Then when you are going out the door, you are told to wait, a flight somewhere else is going to be leaving now and you cannot go. You have to go and sit down. However, the catch is that there are only four seats at that end of the terminal in Halifax. Four seats.

Atlantic Canada, as you probably know, has its health services centred mainly in the City of Halifax. Most of the major hospitals in Atlantic Canada are located there. Many people from my area of Cape Breton go to the Victoria General Hospital and others for whatever reason. When they are well enough to go home they book an airline flight. There they are, ready at the gate to take their flight, and what are they told? They have to go and sit down. Yet there are no seats. Someone may have been in the hospital for two weeks or a month, but they have to stand there for 15 or 20 minutes sometimes while the other plane taxis away and their plane starts to board. Is that why we do not want Air Canada's service? Is that why we want to privatize Air Canada?

To make it very simple and not belabour the point, there is no reason to privatize Air Canada. There may be a few people with vested interests who have reasons to privatize Air Canada, but the Canadian public does not have a reason. Once it is privatized, its standards will drop. Standards in other countries where privatization has taken place have dropped and once it happens to Air Canada, it will happen to other airlines. It will be the equivalent to sawing the legs off a table. Air Canada's standards drop, those of other airlines drop, and gradually all the legs on the table are gone. That is what is going to happen.

Yet the Government tells us we must have privatization. Air Canada needs a mandate. This Party believes that Air Canada should remain a wholly government-owned airline. In 1977 the Liberal Government proposed and Parliament approved the Air Canada Act under which the corporation now operates. That was in response to the recommendations made by the Estey Commission of Inquiry. That special inquiry was set up to deal with this question. One of the most prominent jurists in the history of Canada headed the commission. The commission's recommendation was the Air Canada Act, not privatization.

In essence, the commission proposed that Air Canada be given the legal and corporate structure, the flexibility and financing to operate on a commercial basis and on the same footing as its competitors in Canada and abroad. That is perfectly reasonable. As a result, Air Canada was refinanced with a debt/equity ratio equivalent to other North American airlines. It was split off from Canadian National and given its own Act. The Government used the Canada Business Corporations Act as a model.

The new Act admonished directors and officers to conduct the business affairs of Air Canada with prudence, diligence and in the contemplation of profit. The Government would have us believe that the directors and officers are not operating the company in that way. We are told it has to be privatized and in a position where it can compete with other airlines. Yet in 1977 Air Canada was placed on a commercial footing with a clear arm's length relationship to the Government. We do not need privatization to obtain that situation because it exists at present.

Let me turn once again to something else that has transpired. In 1984 the Liberal Government brought forward Bill C-24. It was passed by Parliament and now forms Part XII of the Financial Administration Act. One of the changes made through that Bill was a requirement that any acquisition or divestiture of a Crown corporation had to be approved explicitly by Parliament. In reviewing the committee's testimony and the debates on this matter there is no question in my mind that this requirement was imposed not only to ensure that Parliament's approval for privatization was sought, but also for the method, structure and detail of the privatization.

That being the case, we find Bill C-129 lacking. It is a travesty. The information we need is just not there. This Bill is just a few pages long. To say that we should amend the Act is a very nice thought, but when we go to amend it, it is not the equivalent of putting your finger in the dike, it is the equivalent of trying to keep out the tide. That is how big the gaping hole is with respect to the information we should have.

We do not know how the privatization is going to take place. We do not know who is going to make the decisions. The Minister responsible told us in his press release that only 45 per cent of the shares of Air Canada were going to be sold. The Government was going to hold the other 55 per cent. Yet there is nothing in this Act that tells us that that will be the case. It is ludicrous for us to deal with a Bill which contains so little information on such a very important subject.

Now I go to some of the amendments that we want to put forward. The Parliamentary Secretary mentioned an amendment to Clause 6 which this Party proposed and which was adopted in committee. I am very pleased about that. It takes the question of the ownership of Air Canada one step further. The Act did contain a provision that only 25 per cent of the shares of Air Canada could be owned by non-residents. This Party was concerned about what would happen if there was an annual or general meeting of the company and the 25 per cent non-residents formed over 50 per cent of the shareholders present. That would mean that non-residents would have a majority and their thinking would prevail.

This is not a precedent because the Government put this in Bill C-121, the Bill to provide for the eventual privatization of Eldorado Nuclear and its merger with the Saskatchewan Mining Development Corporation. The provision is that of the non-resident shares voted, a maximum of 25 per cent could be applied to non-residents. That protects the residents of Canada at meetings of the corporation.

A couple of other amendments were proposed to Section 6 which are very important and which the Government should have brought forward but, unfortunately, did not. One had to do with competition. There are so many things about this Bill which concern me.

One of the things which concerns me the most is that if we privatize Air Canada we will have three private companies. We look to the situation in Great Britain where there was more than one national airline. Before the privatization of British Airways, it reduced its staff by 23,000. After British Airways was privatized, it purchased British Caledonia Airways. There is now in Britain one national airline, British Airways. In Canada we have three.

If we privatize Air Canada, we are protected, of course, by certain sections of the National Transportation Act, to a certain degree, because it contains a great deal of discretion. One of the competitors of Air Canada is Canadian Airlines International. Canadian Airlines International was formed because Pacific Western Airlines purchased Canadian Pacific. That was done because Canadian Pacific could not purchase Pacific Western Airlines due to the fact that Pacific Western Airlines was formed under the statutes of the Province of Alberta which require a certain share structure in Pacific Western Airlines. Therefore, Pacific Western Airlines was required to purchase Canadian Pacific. That is how Canadian Airlines International was formed.

What happens if that statute in Alberta is amended at the request of Canadian Airlines International? That is conceivable. Alberta is a separate jurisdiction and has the right to make whatever decisions its wants. It can change that statute at any time. In addition, there are no restrictions on Wardair.

Therefore, even with the protection which exists to some extent in the statutes of Alberta and under the National Transportation Act, there is still a strong possibility that through mergers and buy-outs we could end up with only one airline in this country. If that happens the service will be closer to standing in the aisle holding on to a strap than to the level of service we enjoy from our airlines at this time. This must be protected.

This Party presented only two amendments, but they zeroed in on this particular subject. We wanted changes in this, but the Government would not agree to the amendment. I leave it to the Canadian public and to the other place which will be debating this Bill to deal with this shortfall on this very important issue.

Second, Section 6 says that a maintenance base is to be maintained in Winnipeg and that the head office is to be maintained in Montreal. However, there is nothing which actually requires that. This is supposedly looked after by the Canada Business Corporations Act. I do not think it is. The Government states that it is satisfied that the protection continues to exist.

The Government has not only made a very drastic error in privatization but absolutely refuses to modify its mistakes, even upon suggestion. That indicates to me that this is a headlong desire by the Government to plunge the national airline into privatization for none other than political reasons and to meet the strange doctrine of the Progressive Conservative Party.

What other reasons have we heard for this? The Government tells us that Air Canada needs privatization in order to have the flexibility its competitors enjoy. What better flexibility for an airline than to be a Crown corporation, to have the Government looking after the airline and being concerned about the travelling public? It may not be better for some vested interests, but how could it be better for the Canadian public than to have the Government looking after the airline? Because of the competition in this country, which may not continue if the privatization goes through, the Canadian public knows when it flies that we have airline standards and service as good as any in the world. Yet the Government says that Air Canada needs more flexibility. What is needed, of course, is for the Government to have some flexibility and some consideration in looking at the problem it will be creating.

On the other hand, the Government says that if it retains Air Canada it will give an unfair advantage to Air Canada's competitors. That is incredible. Air Canada has been in operation for 51 years. It was the first major airline to operate in Canada. Its competitors came afterward. The competitors which entered the field in competition with Air Canada knew what they were getting themselves into when they went into business. Air Canada was here first with the interests of the Canadian travelling public at heart.

The Government says that Air Canada will not be able to raise money on the open market if it is not privatized. Since 1973 Canada has only had a deficit in two years. It made $40 million last year while maintaining the standards of convenience and safety for the travelling public expected by the Government of Canada.

From the time the Government was elected in September of 1984 it intended to privatize Air Canada. It has not put one cent back into the airline. It has allowed Air Canada's fleet to deteriorate for four years hoping that the need for aircraft would convince the travelling public that the private sector should look after this cost. Much of the problem has been created because the Government was trying to pull the wool over the eyes of the Canadian public by not looking after the state of the airline during its four-year mandate.

I admit that for every year that goes by it becomes more necessary for Air Canada to acquire new planes. We agree with its statement that new planes are required and that it needs a downpayment of $300 million. Is it not strange that the sale price of the 45 per cent of the shares announced by the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) was just about $300 million? It is incredible to think that the reason the Government is selling Air Canada is to acquire the downpayment for new airplanes.

The Government is not listening to Canadians. It was not following the amendments of the Financial Administration Act, 1984. It is not following the recommendations of the Estey Commission, or reading the provisions of the Air Canada Act.

The Air Canada Act was brought into effect in 1977 to recapitalize Air Canada. Air Canada can certainly buy new planes with some government assistance, part of its equity and part of its borrowing capacity. If public utilities like Ontario Hydro and Québec Hydro can raise money when they have a total debt of $50 billion, why can Air Canada not do the same? The Government would rather privatize Air Canada in order to raise the $300 million the company needs for a downpayment on airplanes.

Air Canada has made the industry as good as it is today because it set the standard. A reduction in those standards will be a great loss to this country.

This privatization does not make sense. Last year, the priorities and planning committee of Cabinet decided, after meeting in western Canada, that Air Canada would be privatized. Air Canada was prepared for the decree, but at the last minute Cabinet decided not to privatize. The market was stronger last year than it is right now, yet Air Canada was not privatized. This year, when the market is lower, the Government decides to privatize Air Canada. We will not get the same amount for the shares. In whose interest is the Government operating?

According to the Deputy Prime Minister's statement, the Government will sell 45 per cent of the shares of Air Canada, while its 55 per cent majority shareholding will be voted in accordance with the majority of the 45 per cent. This means that rather than a majority in public shares, 23 per cent of the private shares of Air Canada will be the majority.

It is purely a question of the Government's following its own political ideology. That should not be its priority. Should not the priority of the Government be the interest of Canadians, the interest of the smaller areas in the vast regions of this country?

Once Air Canada cuts back its jet service to those communities, the level of competition will decrease so that other airlines will reduce their service as well. The over-all standard of service in this country will decline.

I have already talked about the maintenance base in Winnipeg. While it is protected, we do not know how many people will be working there after privatization.

However, there is no assurance that the financial base in Winnipeg will be maintained. Hundreds of jobs may be lost in the financial centre if it is left unprotected. A private company would not have to give any consideration to public opinion.

There are six centres in Canada where the crews are based. They are Vancouver, Calgary, Winnipeg, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax. Many of the crews have families in those centres and have lived there for much if not all of their working lives. We do not know whether those six bases will be maintained.

If one of those bases is closed, those crews will have to move to other centres. While it is true that other people have had to move from their jobs, this is an example of the callousness of the Government in its lack of consideration about these questions.

One of the most irritating aspects that Canadians will feel about this privatization is that there may be only one reservation centre in Canada. Air Canada has already consolidated its reservation centres on a provincial basis and has only one reservation centre in the United States. With the computer technology available today, it is possible for Air Canada to establish one reservation centre in Canada so that no matter where one lives, one would have to call Toronto to make a reservation. We would not be able to speak to someone in our own area who may understand the problems related to flying from that region.

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Tuesday, July 12, consideration of Bill C-110, an Act to establish the Canadian International Trade Tribunal and to amend or repeal other Acts in consequence thereof, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative commitee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It being six o'clock, the House will now proceed to the deferred recorded division on the report stage of Bill C-110, an Act to establish the Canadian International Trade Tribunal and to amend or repeal other Acts in consequence thereof.

Call in the Members.

The question is on Motion No. 11 in the name of Mr. Langdon:

That Bill C-110 be amended in Clause 27 by striking out lines 43 to 49 at page 11 and 1 to 4 at page 12 and substituting the following therefor:

"(2) In determining the question of injury under subsection (1), the Tribunal shall consider

(a) all relevant economic factors and indices having a bearing on the state of the industry, including actual or potential decline in output, sales, market share, profits, productivity, return on investments, utilization of capacity, production, employment, wages and volume of other imports; and

(b) Canada's obligations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade and, in the case of textiles and apparel, under the Arrangement Regarding International Trade in Textiles."

The House divided on Motion No. 11, which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 475)

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I declare the motion lost.

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)) moved that the Bill, as amended, be concurred in.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Riis: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There seems to have been a slight error of judgment on my part. When you called for support on this motion we in this Party certainly meant to oppose the motion, and we are prepared to do so on division.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Bill is carried on division.

Motion agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It being 6.26 p.m., pursuant to Order made June 20, 1988, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m. pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 6.26 p.m.

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106(8), I have the honour to table, in both official languages, the Government's response to petitions Nos. 332-4703, 332-4706, to 332-4708 inclusive, 332-4710, 332-4712, 332-4715, 332-4823, 332-4824, 332-4833 and 332-4895.

POINT OF ORDER

REQUEST FOR WITHDRAWAL OF UNPARLIAMENTARY LANGUAGE

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, this is really the first opportunity I have had to raise this point of order. I do so to get today's business off on a most positive and parliamentary note. I have just had a chance to review Hansard for yesterday. At page 17511, the Hon. Member for Calgary West (Mr. Hawkes), referred to the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon) as lying. I just make the point that this is unparliamentary language, and I would ask the Hon. Member to do the honourable thing and withdraw that remark.

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I thought I had withdrawn any unparliamentary reference yesterday. I am pleased to be able to do so again. I would point out that the same page of Hansard shows that I did use the word "most". The Hon. Member kept insisting I used the word "all". I was correct. The statement made by the Hon. Member opposite was totally incorrect. He would not correct it. He was wrong. If I slipped into using the term "lying", an unparliamentary term, I am sorry, but I hope he might stand later this day and apologize for misrepresenting what I said.

Mr. Speaker: I think all Hon. Members know that there are times in this place when in the heat of debate, or what passes for debate, people say things that on quiet reflection they perhaps would not have said. I appreciate very much the Parliamentary Secretary withdrawing that remark and I appreciate the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap drawing it to the Chair's attention.

COMMITTEES OF THE HOUSE

REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION—PRESENTATION OF THIRD REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Bill Tupper (Nepean—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour this morning to present the third report of the Standing Committee on Regional Industrial Expansion, in both official languages. Furthermore, in accordance with Standing Order 99(2), the committee requests a comprehensive response from the Government.

This committee report deals with a study of an industrial policy for Canada. The committee heard from a great variety of witnesses from a great variety of backgrounds and from all regions of Canada.

The report provides an historical overview of the industrial development of Canada, the policies that have been in place over the years and how they have enhanced and, at times, impeded our industrial development.

Primarily, the report recommends that our industrial initiatives in Canada be market-driven, all the while having respect for our regional needs and programs, as well as having respect for our cultural and social priorities. Further, it recommends that there be a strong linkage always between our industrial initiatives and our research and development initiatives. Finally, it recommends with equal strength that there be good government-sponsored retraining programs in Canada to help those workers who are part of sunset industries to move to emerging industries.

GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS—PRESENTATION OF SEVENTH AND EIGHTH REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Felix Holtmann (Selkirk—Interlake): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to present from the Standing Committee on Government Operations the seventh and eighth reports to the House, in both official languages.

The seventh report deals with the National Capital Commission. With respect to statues on the Hill, it recommends that the NCC also consider erecting other statues as well as those of former Prime Ministers. Our main concern was with respect to monarchs.

In the eighth report we have entertained the Prince Edward Island Truckers Association in that consideration be given to it in terms of federal government tendering in that province and that it be treated the same way federally as it is provincially.

PETITIONS

CANADA-U.S. FREE TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure and honour to present a petition on behalf of a number of petitioners from the great City of Kamloops, British Columbia. They believe that the federal Government still lacks a mandate from the people of Canada to conclude a trade deal with the United States. They believe that in the course of the negotiations Canadian sovereignty was compromised. They also feel that this deal would deny Canada the policy freedom to determine its own economic future and would undermine Canada's ability to build a society distinct from that of the U.S.

Therefore, they call upon Parliament to dissolve now to allow the people of Canada an opportunity to accept or reject the proposed trade deal during a national general election.

PROHIBITION WITH RESPECT TO KNIVES

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to rise once again to present some 14 petitions containing several hundred names concerning the whole question of the danger of knives in public places.

The many people who have signed these petitions which I have been presenting for some time now are concerned that the high incidence of crimes, including murder, robbery and sexual assault, committed with knives is on the increase. In fact, there was an incident in Ottawa yesterday.

The petitioners call once again—and I hope that the Government and the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) will take note—for amendments to the federal Criminal Code to prohibit the carrying of knives by citizens in public places. The exceptions to this ban include activities in which the use of a knife is integral to legitimate work, such as the fishing industry, or for a religious reason as in the case of the Sikhs.

Mr. Bill Tupper (Nepean—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure this morning to present a petition signed by several tens of persons from eastern Canada. This petition addresses the striking down of Section 251 of the Criminal Code of Canada, which has left Canadians without any law restricting abortions.

The petition addresses the fact that nothing in the Supreme Court decision has established abortion as a right. Furthermore, it addresses the fact that human life is a continuum from the moment of conception to the moment of death and that there is no point in time between conception and the birth of an infant at which point we could say that this is not a human life.

The petitioners call upon Parliament to pass into law legislation that will protect the life of the unborn child from conception and at all stages of development, with the exception of the extremely rare situation in which an abortion is performed in order to save the life of the mother.

REQUEST FOR INSTALLATION OF SUPPLEMENTARY SAFETY DEVICES IN AUTOMOBILES

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel—Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure and duty to table a petition signed by 214 residents of Gatineau, Hull, Maniwaki, Shawville, Campbells Bay, Cantley, and Buckingham.

The highway safety campaign continues. The petitioners hope that car manufacturers will soon incorporate their requests into the production of future cars. Since 1974 highway safety regulations have allowed the installation of air bags for drivers of passenger cars. The petitioners believe that this device would reduce the number of serious injuries on the roads.

For these reasons the petitioners humbly ask Parliament to order car manufacturers to install air bags in the front seat of cars, and to install adjustable seat-belts with shoulder straps for the rear passengers.

CANADA-U.S. FREE TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present three petitions signed by residents of the City of Winnipeg, as well as residents of Lauret, Selkirk and Tourond.

The petitioners say that the trade agreement negotiated by the Mulroney Government threatens the very fabric of Canadian political and economic sovereignty by removing the power of the Canadian Government to control effectively foreign ownership, to develop Canadian resources in the best interests of Canadians, and to equalize opportunities between regions.

Therefore they humbly pray and call upon Parliament to dissolve to allow the people of Canada the opportunity to accept or reject the proposed free trade agreement during a national general election.

PROTECTION OF RIGHTS OF THE UNBORN

Mr. Jim Jepson (London East): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106, it is my pleasure and duty to present a petition from some 500 constituents of London. They state that many thousands of Canadian unborn children are killed by elective abortion, whereas medical science has provided ample evidence of the unborn child's membership in the human species, and whereas Canadian law does not provide sufficient protection for the unborn child. They call on the Government of Canada to take the necessary steps to ensure that unborn children are protected by the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

[Translation]

CANADA-U.S. FREE TRADE AGREEMENT

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa-Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have 20 petitions to table on behalf of Canadians who are strongly opposed to the signing of the Mulroney-Reagan free-trade agreement, and who respectfully argue that the Mulroney government has sent Canada down the river without getting anything in exchange; that Canadian industries are still not protected against American trade laws; that the United States got everything it wanted in the sectors that count, particularly agriculture, energy, the automobile industry, financial services and investments; that thousands of Canadian jobs are threatened; and that the Conservative government has not provided for any form of assistance to Canadian workers while they adjust to the new conditions.

For these reasons your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to censure the Canadian government for having signed the Mulroney-Reagan trade ageement.

CPP—EARLY RETIREMENT OPTION

Question No. 364—Mr. Angus:

Order Paper Questions

Since the early retirement option of the Canada Pension Plan was enacted, have individuals in the (a) community of Thunder Bay, Ontario, (b) community of Atikokan, Ontario (c) constituency of Thunder Bay—Atikokan (d) area made up of the constituencies of Thunder Bay—Atikokan, Thunder Bay—Nipigon and Kenora—Rainy River applied for early retirement under this option and, if so, (i) in what numbers (ii) what number of these applications have been granted?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): (i) (a) Thunder Bay, 1,791; (b) Atikokan, 56; (c) Thunder Bay—Atikokan, 968; (d) Thunder Bay—Atikokan, 968, (excluding Thunder Bay, part (a) above); Thunder Bay—Nipigon, 923 (excluding Thunder Bay, part (a) above); Kenora—Rainy River, 906.

(ii) The number of granted applications is not available. Once an early retirement benefit has been granted, the CPP system does not distinguish between early and regular retirement benefits. All eligible applicants should have had their applications granted. Only ineligible applicants (for example those which had never contributed to the CPP) would be refused.

WATER QUALITY IN RIDEAU RIVER

Question No. 376—Mr. Turner (Ottawa—Carleton):

1. Does the Department of the Environment have any plans to work, through the Canadian Parks Service (Canals), with the National Capital Commission, the Regional Municipality of Ottawa—Carleton, the Ontario Ministry of the Environment and the cities of Gloucester, Ottawa and Nepean, in a collective effort to lower pollution levels and to improve the water quality in the Rideau River?

2. Is it possible for the Department of the Environment to allocate funds within the new national water policy in a co-operative context with the other concerned authorities, in an effort to locate and deal with sources of pollution flowing into the Rideau River?

Mrs. Pauline Browes (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of the Environment): 1. The Canadian Parks Service works co-operatively with all levels of government to improve water quality on the Rideau and other heritage canal systems. The main responsibility for the control of water pollution and water quality along the Rideau River, however, rests with the Ontario Ministry of the Environment working in consultation with the various municipalities. It is the Canadian Parks Service's continuing role, while working with others, to improve and maintain water quality through the wise management of water levels and flows within the system of heritage canals.

2. No. There are no funds associated with the Federal Water Policy. However, under this policy, the federal Government will continue its water quality monitoring programs but in a more integrated manner with the provinces than heretofore so that the respective responsibilities of the two levels of Government are clearly delineated. The federal and Ontario Governments are continuing their negotiations towards reaching a federal-provincial agreement on water quality monitoring.

CANADA HEALTH ACT

Question No. 381—Ms. Copps:

Air Canada

1. To the knowledge of the Government, for each of Canada's ten provinces and two territories (a) what is, at present, the complete list of medical procedures and practices that are covered by provincial health insurance plans to ensure compliance with the Canada Health Act (b) what additions or deletions to the list of medical procedures and practices covered by provincial health insurance plans to ensure compliance with the Canada Health Act have been made since it became law?

2. Does the Department of National Health and Welfare (a) have an active bureau which ensures provincial and territorial compliance with the provisions of the Canada Health Act (b) use particular procedures to ensure that provinces and territories are complying with the provisions of this Act and, if so, what are they?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): 1. (a) Instead of a list of medical procedures and practices that are covered by provincial health insurance plans to ensure compliance with the Canada Health Act, the Act difines physician services as being insured health services. The Act goes on to define physician services as any medically required services rendered by medical practitioners, and medical practitioners as persons lawfully entitled to practise medicine in the place in which the practice is carried on by that person.

Thus, insured coverage for medical services is linked to and governed by the principle of medical necessity. In practical terms, this principle in the Act is given operational application by provincial governments and professional medical organizations which are responsible for and provide medical services.

An item by item, province by province list does not exist. The closest to such a list would be the individual province's schedule of benefits with details on specific medical services and provincial plan payments for these services. These schedules list thousands of services which are provincial benefits. The information is in minute detail and uses medical terminology throughout.

(b) Provincial health insurance plans have not had to make additions or deletions to insured medical procedures and practices to ensure compliance with the Canada Health Act. Provincial coverage has always proceeded from, and functioned on the basis of medical necessity. Provincial plan coverage that has evolved since the passage of the Canada Health Act is a combination of medically necessary and not medically necessary services.

The much publicized de-insurance of certain health services in Alberta in 1987 overlooked a fundamental fact—that the medical procedures continued to be insured in cases of medical necessity. This provincial government policy was verified by NHW officials to ensure that requirements of the Canada Health Act continued to be met. In any instance where some question exists about insured coverage of medically required health services, the matter is clarified with the province to ensure that non-compliance does not exist or occur.

2. (a) The Health Insurance Directorate of the Department of National Health and Welfare monitors and assesses provincial and territorial compliance with the provisions of the Canada Health Act.

(b) The Health Insurance Directorate monitors developments in provincial and territorial health insurance plans through a combination of sources including: provincial and territorial legislation and regulations, print and electronic media, provincial information submitted for the Canada Health Act Annual Report, and contacts with provincial officials.

AIR CANADA PUBLIC PARTICIPATION ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Wednesday, July 13, consideration of the motion of Mr. de Cotret that Bill C-129, an Act to provide for the continuance of Air Canada under the Canada Business Corporations Act and for the issuance and sale of shares thereof to the public, be read the third time and passed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) had the floor.

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, when we adjourned yesterday I was speaking about the retrogressive policies that will be undertaken by Air Canada when or if this privatization takes place. The major losers of these retrogressive steps will be the Canadian public, and they are not being taken into consideration. Yesterday I was mentioning that what was likely to happen is that there will be one central reservations area in this country. This is what Air Canada has done in the United States. It has provided one reservation area and if one calls for a reservation or information, the call goes to one city in the United States. That is possible in Canada with the technology that is in place at the present time. There is no reason, technologically speaking, that this cannot be done. This is what the Government and the management of Air Canada are saying can be done.

What is not being considered are the feelings of the people of Canada having to call to a special telephone line, for example, to some person in Toronto that perhaps has never been to the area in which the caller lives, or experienced the difficulties that the caller has experienced in arranging flights from that area, or the weather conditions. These are things that were not conceivable a few years ago, but now with privatization on top of deregulation, not only is it conceivable, but it is very possible.

In the one day of committee hearings held we asked what questions we could within that one day time frame. We asked the management of Air Canada about maintenance and contracting out maintenance and flight attendants' times. The management said: "No, that was not going to be done". But what we heard from the unions that appeared before the committee was totally different. The unions stated that contracting out has very definitely been considered and discussed by the management of Air Canada. They said that they have openly considered the possibility on their flight from London to Singapore through Bombay of actually contracting out flight attendants in the portion between Bombay and Singapore, and that that is now being actively considered.

What about maintenance? Maintenance has been at a high standard in this country. We have always boarded our airplanes in Canada and felt that they were maintained as well as any airplanes in the world could be maintained. Now, what about contracting out of maintenance and doing maintenance outside Canada? This is something that most Canadians would not even consider being possible, but it is something that is and has been talked about.

The management of Air Canada has stated that it is not considering that, but in a statement before the committee by the National Automobile, Aerospace and Agricultural Implement Workers Union of Canada they stated: "More recently, in an issue of Air Canada's in-flight magazine, EnRoute, Mr. Jeanniot sang the praises of contracting-out work to other countries". They went on to state: "What is hailed by the company as global generosity is a mean-spirited attempt to find cheap labour. When a government does nothing to prevent the possibility of such business practices, it gives its consent." I think that says it as well as anyone can say it.

Obviously the Government knows that contracting out is being considered, and the Government is going along with the practices that Air Canada will be undertaking if privatization takes place. That is not only a mean-spirited attitude on the part of the Government, but it is an irresponsible attitude.

In committee we heard from the executive of Air Canada that employees of Air Canada will share in the largess that will occur as a result of privatization of this Crown corporation, and they will be able to buy shares. Nothing was said about whether some employees of Air Canada can afford more shares than other lower paid employees. Nothing was indicated about whether employees with more seniority would be offered the shares at a reduced price. There were questions along those lines, but no assurances were given.

What happens if the employees of Air Canada are successful in being able to buy the shares of Air Canada? The Government will have us believe that this would give the employees a voice in the operation of the airline. That path has been trodden many times, particularly in the United States with airlines that were in difficulty. Employees were told that the company could not afford to pay the salaries that they were asking for, and were even telling employees that they would have to take a cut in salary, but in exchange the company was going to give the employees shares in the airline. The employees were not pleased about this and did not want their salaries reduced, but the shares in the airline would at least give them an opportunity to have some say in what the airline would be doing. Well, it meant absolutely nothing. The employees had such a small number of shares that they were insignificant in comparison to the number of shares held by the rest of the private sector that the employees were not even contemplated. When their actual in depth knowledge and experience in the airline was brought up, it was not listened to. All that was considered was the bottom line. That is exactly what the situation will be with respect to Air Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, Canada is a very large country. We need a service such as Air Canada currently provides, because it is a public company and only a public company can provide such a service in a country as large as Canada.

If there is no public company to provide this service, the citizens of Canada will feel the difference, because the service will be completely different. The service will be less regular, with fewer flights, less comfort and fewer in-flight services.

There is no doubt that this will happen. That is because if Air Canada is not a public company, there is no need for a service of that sort because that service costs money. It is expensive! But if it is possible to provide the same service at a lower cost than Air Canada does now, Air Canada will cut its expenditures. When Air Canada cuts its expenditures, other airlines—Air Canada's competitors—will do likewise. This will not result in good service for Canadians.

• (1130)

Mr. Speaker, Air Canada has been a Crown corporation in this country for 51 years. Fifty-one years. We have a company on which all Canadians can rely. We are going to destroy it because the Government finds this offensive to its political ideology. Air Canada has not received a government subsidy in 25 years.

It is interesting to hear that one of the Conservative Members complaining is from the Northwest Territories. If anybody in Canada should know the importance of the servicing of our regions, it would be that Hon. Member. We are not going to help the employees if we privatize the airline, because whether the employees gain shares or not is insignificant. They are not going to be heard. In addition, the employees already have shares in Air Canada, as does the public of Canada right now.

Why the erratic behaviour on the part of the Government in not really coming clean and telling us why it wants this privatization? Why has the Government denied the public of Canada the right to be heard to the extent that they should have been heard? We had one day of hearings—and that was on June 22—yet a couple of weeks went by before we actually got to report stage. We could have heard many more Canadians, many more groups, without delaying this Bill one day. In fact, in testimony before the committee, the member of the Canadian Labour Congress said that when she called to find out why there was not more time allowed for witnesses, she was told that this Bill had to be passed by June 30. We knew, when she made the call, that the House was going to be sitting in the month of July. They could not use the excuse that the House was going to be closing. This is the irresponsible, clandestine, derogatory nature and atmosphere in which this Government has forced the Canadian public to consider the privatization of this very valuable asset.

Yesterday I mentioned that there will be a reduction of flights, that more communities will cease to be serviced by Air Canada. What Air Canada and the other major airlines would like is to just fly between and among the large centres of this country, the metropolises of this country, where the big volumes are. They do not want to go to Sydney, Nova Scotia, to St. John's, Newfoundland or Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, or areas like that. They may have a token presence in Halifax, but that would be all that they really would have.

We will have to serve the feeder aircraft with people coming out of hospitals having to stand and wait until each airline gets its engine started and backs away. The major airlines want to reduce service in Canada, to reduce the number of cities and centres in this country between which they have to fly and, of course, to broaden their international activity. That is something they really want to do.

They are going to be competing against other international airlines. They feel that Canadians should be proud. This is something that is supposed to fulfil and gratify Canadians, that their former national airline is going to be playing with the big boys internationally. How can a Canadian feel proud when that same Canadian is being rejected by their own Crown corporation? The service in Canada is going to be diminished. Why should we feel proud about increasing foreign flights when our own service in Canada is being diminished? We are not going to have the same service, and Air Canada does not deny that.

I referred yesterday to Great Britain, which privatized British Airways, and then British Airways proceeded to purchase British Caledonian. There is now only one airline in Britain. It is one thing to deregulate because you are going to lose services. It is even worse if you add privatization to deregulation. Then you have Air Canada not forced to keep a certain standard, and the standard of all of the airlines is going to suffer.

If you only have one airline in Canada, it is open season on the Canadian public, not to mention the employees of Air Canada. When British Airways was getting ready for privatization, they laid off 23,000 employees. What is the value? How will the value of Air Canada be determined? We are going into the privatization for two reasons: first to satisfy the ideology of this Government; second, to provide a down payment for new planes.

How is the value of Air Canada going to be determined? We have not been told that. We have not been told how the value of this very valuable national resource is going to be determined. Are we are giving up carte blanche in this House of Commons to an underwriting syndicate decision-making on the value of Air Canada? We are giving up, without any parliamentary review, to an underwriting syndicate the right to determine the value of Air Canada. That is incredible, particularly in view of the changes that were made in 1984 to the Financial Administration Act.

Under the Financial Administration Act, Parliament should be provided the opportunity to review that very vital aspect of a privatization of our national airline. We are not being given any consideration on that. Not only that, but both the Government and Air Canada have hired separate advisers on how they are going to handle the privatization. It is difficult to arrive at a fair price. It seems that the Government and Air Canada have no idea as to how they are going to arrive at that fair price. The people who are continually going to be left in the dark and in the lurch are the public of Canada.

What consideration should the people of Canada be given? One thing that should not be happening is the public of Canada being treated with indifference in the attempt by this Government to privatize Air Canada with obscene haste. That is exactly what is happening. The Government does not want public scrutiny of this privatization. That is the reason why it is pushing the Bill through so quickly. That is the reason why it only allowed one day of hearings, without opportunity for the people in the regions to be heard. Air Canada has not only been a service; it has been a builder of Canada. It has had a binding effect and it has been a source of bilingualism in Canada. It has been in existence for 51 years.

• (1140)

[Translation]

It was a reason and a force for bilingualism in Canada. Now bilingualism is no different from any other subject, and it is not very important to this Government.

It is incredible! But thinking about public issues, about the needs of the public, about the future of bilingualism, is not very important to this Government.

[English]

The privatization of Air Canada is giving us a tremendous insight into this Government. Along that same vein, the Government does not want Air Canada to be a window on the commercial airline practices of this country. The Government says it knows what is going on in the airline industry because it has a Crown corporation that is a player. The Government says: "Let's get rid of it and turn it over to the private sector. The people of Canada have no reason to know about what is going on in the airline industry in Canada or internationally."

What about prices, Mr. Speaker? We have been told by the Government that prices will go down with privatization. We were told that airline fares would go down with deregulation. Prices are not going down in the United States. They are going down on some select sexy routes people may want to take for winter vacations or routes between certain large cities. You see the rates advertised in the various newspapers and magazines. But if you ask people in the smaller towns and smaller cities, they tell you prices are going up because there is no regulation on what airlines can do or charge. If one company raises prices, you will certainly not get a reduction in price by another airline, Mr. Speaker. You will most probably get an increase and maybe competing airlines will hold on to the prices they had before. When one airline increases its prices, they all increase their prices. That is the way things have worked. We saw that happen at the gasoline pumps and with drug prices. There is no reason to think that this sort of thing will not happen with airline fares.

I would like to speak about some of the witnesses who came before our committee, particularly the unions who I thought gave excellent testimony. They were very sincere and pointed out an awful lot about the inside workings of Air Canada and the airline industry about which the people of Canada have a right to know. I am referring to the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers who complained, as did all unions, about the way the Government was rushing this Bill through committee without adequate debate and the hearing of sufficient witnesses. That was a position taken by all unions which appeared before the committee. With respect to the Canadian Union of Public Employees, CUPE, it said:

> New owners can contract out the work to foreign nationals possibly creating a lay-off situation. Air Canada threatened this in 1985 but backed off under political pressure. Once privatized, they will try again.

That is the word before a committee of a very important and significant union in this country which obviously knows what Air Canada tried to do in 1985. Although we were told that contracting out is not being contemplated, the union knows that contracting out was contemplated. CUPE is concerned not only about jobs but the level of service.

Air Canada wants more international routes—

Mr. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. At this time I would like to give the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) an opportunity to make a correction to something he said in his speech. I heard the Hon. Member say that he had questioned as many people as possible during the committee hearing. I was a member of the committee and I am sure the Hon. Member will recall that when the Air Canada Employees Ownership Committee appeared before us the Hon. Member refused to question its witnesses. That is on the record of the committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): That is not a point of order.

Mr. Orlikow: On the same point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): If the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North is going to elaborate on the same statement, it will not be a point of order either. It is debate. But I will listen to the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, as you have already pointed out the Member's intervention was not a point of order. The Member will remember that I did question that so-called committee and it had very few answers about its membership, its constitution—

Mr. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I made reference only to the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys has the floor.

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, I do not recall having said what has been attributed to me by the Hon. Member for Bonavista—Trinity—Conception (Mr. Johnson) because we could not have possibly questioned all the witnesses, so few came before the committee on that one day that we were allowed to hear witnesses. I will certainly mention the group to which the Hon. Member referred. I have not left that out by any means. I am coming to that and I will be doing it very shortly.

Mr. Orlikow: A group of phoneys.

Mr. MacLellan: I want to refer now to the National Automobile, Aerospace and Agricultural Implement Workers Union of Canada, the CAW. I have referred to its statement about contracting out. In the statement other good points were made which I think bear mentioning. These people reminded the committee that at least three criteria were identified by the former Minister of State for Privatization, now the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mrs. McDougall), as prerequisites for a Crown corporation to be turned over to the private sector.

The first of these criteria is that the Crown corporation in question no longer serves a public policy purpose. Air Canada certainly continues to serve a public policy purpose. It is serving the needs of the public of Canada. Air Canada is serving the Canadian public and is looking after the interests of Canadians with respect to the expected level of maintenance as well as competition. If we do not have that public policy purpose, then, of course, it is the Government that is throwing away the public policy purpose. Certainly one is there if the Government is to recognize its responsibility.

The second criteria governing the sale of Crown corporations is that the corporation adds to the national debt. Air Canada does not add to the national debt. Air Canada has not been granted any funding for a great many years. Since 1973, I think, there have been only two years when Air Canada had a deficit. But the Government will ignore that. In 1986, Air Canada reported a profit of $40.4 million. In 1987, Air Canada reported a $45.7 million profit, a 13 per cent increase over the profit in 1986.

The third criteria stated by the previous Minister of State for Privatization for a change from public to private status is that the Crown corporation is unable to compete effectively. Air Canada has shown that it is perfectly able to compete effectively. The Government sets out these three criteria and has proceeded to ignore them. How many times have we seen that happen not only with respect to Air Canada but with respect to so many other things? The Government tries to set out policy, then does not like the results of the policy it set out and proceeds to ignore it. Perhaps it is because the Government has become bored trying to act in the public's interest or because it offends some of the vested interests to which this Government tries so hard to be nice.

In the same brief it is quoted by the CAW that:

> Air Canada workers in Atlantic Canada, Quebec, northern Ontario, Saskatchewan and British Columbia can look forward to a choice between leaving their homes and communities or accepting a $6 an hour job with a commuter carrier or being out of a job altogether.

That is a sad commentary if that is what is going on in this country. We were assured that that is exactly what is going on in this country today.

• (1150)

The major airlines are dropping services to many communities and some of these services are being picked up by feeder airlines which pay their employees considerably less than the major airlines. The alternative is that service is not being provided at all.

We were told something very interesting by the executive of Air Canada. We were told that there was no surplus in the Air Canada pension plan. Yet, the presentation made to us by the CAW states:

> As of December 31, 1987, according to the company's annual report, the Air Canada pension fund had a market value of $2.35 billion (this was after the October 1987 stock market crash), compared to liabilities of $1.87 billion, for a surplus of $485 million. This pension piggy bank will be a very tempting target for a private corporation.

The company told us that there was no surplus in the pension plan. I refer this very important question to the other place when it gives consideration to this Bill, as it undoubtedly will shortly.

I want to refer to the group that the Hon. Member from Newfoundland mentioned just a few minutes ago. This is a group called the Air Canada Employee Ownership Committee.

Mr. Orlikow: Who are they?

Mr. MacLellan: Who are they indeed. That is probably one of the best kept secrets in Canada.

We have to take this in the context of the situation in which it occurred. We have to consider first that the Government only allowed one day for witnesses in committee, and the pilots were our first witnesses. Then all the other unions were lumped together in one group. Then as our third set of witnesses we heard two people from the private sector. The fifth group, the executives of Air Canada, followed in the evening, but the fourth group of witnesses was this group called Air Canada Employee Ownership Committee.

This is a group with no constitution, no executive, no standing before the law whatsoever—

Mr. Orlikow: No membership list.

Mr. MacLellan: No membership list whatsoever. It is one of the most clandestine organizations, evidently, in Canada. This group was brought in even though public consumer groups such as Transportation 2000 were denied access to the committee. This group was brought in to refute the testimony of the unions. It was the equivalent of union busting.

The Government flatly denied that the unions had the right to speak on behalf of the workers of Air Canada so it brought forward this group comprised of employees of Air Canada. The only criteria for being a member of this committee is to send in $2.

The Hon. Member from Newfoundland is correct. I refused to question this group because I refused to be a part of what the Government was trying to do. I took this as an affront. Even if the union executive did not have any members who agreed with it, the union executive still, constitutionally, has the right to speak for its membership. The Government did not recognize that and it agreed to let the union speak only to try to overturn its testimony by having members of the government side put the same questions to this bogus group as were put to the unions in the morning.

I have no objections to the members of this committee. They are good people. I do not want to be condescending to them, but I do not—

Mr. Blenkarn: You wouldn't even question them. You wouldn't even talk to them.

Mr. MacLellan: That's right, because they don't have any standing. It was trumped up by the Government to override what the unions were saying.

Mr. Blenkarn: You're so high-handed, you wouldn't even talk to them. God, you think a lot of yourself.

Mr. MacLellan: It just goes to show the inferiority and insecurity of this Government, with 208 Members—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. This is only Thursday. I would hope that the Hon. Member would allow the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys to finish his speech.

Mr. MacLellan: This is another example of government Members not wanting to hear the truth. The truth stings their little eardrums. I will simply continue as if I had not been rudely interrupted by the Hon. Member.

In its presentation, the Air Canada Employee Ownership Committee said:

> In the early summer of 1984 our committee started a campaign in Air Canada to develop awareness and interest from our fellow employees. We focused this campaign on the benefits and opportunities that privatization would present. Two years later we had received donations from over 7,500 employees.

However, the committee does not have a membership list. There could be 7,500, 750, 75 or 7 members of this committee. It is obvious that the committee was set up primarily and exclusively to try to push through the privatization of Air Canada. It is incredible that it was allotted standing by the Government before a committee when so many people in Canada were denied access to the committee.

I think the whole situation is a travesty. We are privatizing a public corporation that is already owned by the people of Canada. We are telling them how great it is that they will be able to buy shares in a company they already own. However, 25 per cent of the shares they already own will be held by non-residents. We are trying to tell Canadians that they will have lower fares when actually the experience in other countries has shown that fares have increased.

We are telling Canadians that they are going into a brave new world, probably the same brave new world that George Orwell described. The new world of deregulation and privatization is a world in which aircraft will be late, flights will be cancelled, seats will be jammed in closer to allow for more passengers, food services will be worse, there will be overbooking and maintenance will be pushed way down on the priority list of the airline. Perhaps there will even be contracting out of maintenance, as the unions warned would happen.

Canada is a large country that needs a public airline. Air Canada has set the standard for airline services in Canada. If Air Canada is allowed to reduce its services, then of course the others will follow suit and all of them will make more money. That is what the Government thinks is great. It does not matter that the services to the public will be reduced and that the consumers will be inconvenienced. It is important, though, that some people make more money.

We have heard that most of the airlines in the world are now privatized. Why is this Government following like a bunch of lemmings, taking the Canadian public over the cliff with it, by privatizing this asset just because it has been done in other countries? This will be a day that Canadians will remember, along with the day this Bill gets Royal Assent, because this is the day the Government of Canada has disregarded the interests and jeopardized the safety of the Canadian public by throwing away the standard of airline services we have had in Canada for 51 years.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, members of the New Democratic Party have opposed this Bill from the day it was introduced. Everything we have seen and heard since then has convinced us more than ever that we were right.

We saw the spectacle of the Government imposing closure at second reading stage. We saw the spectacle of the Conservative majority members of the committee ramming through a motion that provided that all witnesses would be heard on one day. That meant the committee could not travel. That meant the number of witnesses that could be heard was very limited. That meant those witnesses who were heard were given a very short period of time.

I am sorry that the Parliamentary Secretary is not here because yesterday I heard him make one of the most unfair, dishonest and partisan speeches I have ever heard. He accused members of the Opposition, who wanted a longer debate on another Bill, of filibustering. He was a member of the Conservative gang who stormed the Speaker's chair, disrupted this House, kept the bells ringing for 16 days, and he has the gall to accuse Members on this side of perverting the parliamentary process and being undemocratic. He was a member of the parliamentary task force in 1980 which travelled this country from the Atlantic to the Pacific, visited almost every major city and many towns, looking into the problems of employment in the 1980s, and he has the gall to accuse Members who want the free trade committee to travel of wanting to travel so they can go fishing and have fancy meals. It takes an awful lot of gall and a big set of blinders so that he can see only what he wants to see.

The facts are that we are dealing with a situation of tremendous importance to this country. I remind Hon. Members that it was the first Prime Minister of Canada who realized that the economic lines of this continent run north and south. He realized that without a railway there would be no Canada. He got the people and Government of Canada to give hundreds of millions in loans, grants and land so a railway would be built. Today that would amount to tens of billions of dollars.

It was a Liberal Government, more than 50 years ago, on the instigation of the best businessman in that Government, C. D. Howe, who realized that we needed a national airline and that the private sector was not ready to participate because they could not see a profit, and who set up a national, publicly-owned airline. That company, first called Trans-Canada Air Lines, now Air Canada, has been a major success in every way. It has provided service to the people of Canada. It has made a profit in almost every one of the 51 years it has been in operation. It already belongs to all the people of Canada, so to suggest that we privatize it in order to give the people of Canada the right to participate in ownership is, to say the least, misrepresenting the facts.

I remind Hon. Members that the current Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) said on January 15, 1985, that Air Canada was not for sale at that time. He said: "There may be some persuasive arguments in the case of Air Canada some people can make in regard to the disposition of equity. I will take a look at it. But Canada needs a national airline". Yet what we have is a proposal to sell 45 per cent of Air Canada. Not only that, when the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) gave notice of this he said: "The legislation will permit the transfer of all Air Canada shares to the public". In other words, this is just the first bite.

How do the people of Canada feel about this? On March 31 of this year The Toronto Star published the results of a poll taken by Angus Reid. The question was: Should the Government sell any of the following Crown corporations to the private sector? Air Canada: Not sell, 53 per cent of the people. Sell, 35 per cent of the people. On March 5, 1988, The Globe and Mail published the results of a similar poll taken by Environics. The question was: Do you think the Government should or should not sell Air Canada? Should, 31 per cent. Should not, 51 per cent.

Why is the Government doing it? There is no reason. It does not have to do it because Air Canada is not operating efficiently. It does not have to do it because the people of Canada want Air Canada sold. It is doing it because of its commitment to the idea that the private sector can do anything better than the private sector. Therefore, sell off everything that can be sold off.

This ignores the history and experience of Canada. Our experience is that Governments, federal and provincial, Conservative, Liberal, Social Credit, PQ, CCF or NDP have at various times realized that there was a need for a certain service which the private sector was not prepared to provide. Therefore, the Government of the day, federal or provincial, set up a Crown corporation to do what was necessary.

The Liberal Member who led off this debate talked about how the committee was restricted in its hearings. Yet we heard some very potent points made by some of those who appeared. The unions pointed out that the share price which will be set for the 45 per cent of the company that will be sold would be low because it is only a minority of the shares and therefore the private sector would be loathe to buy it. Besides that, since last October the value of shares has plummeted. That view was expressed not just by the unions, it was expressed by representatives in the industry who market shares. It was shared and expressed by the head of British Airways, which is privately owned.

We are seeing a Government so determined to do what its ideology tells it to do that it is going to sell a controlling interest in the company for $300 million. Yet the company has assets worth close to $3 billion.

Let me just take a moment to talk about this so-called Air Canada employees group which came forward to argue for the privatization. This group has ostensibly been in operation for four years or more, yet when I asked them who they were, they admitted they had no officers, they had no membership lists, they had no executive, they had no constitution, and in fact had no real organization. So much for that organization.

We are told that the Government is proposing in this Bill to sell only 45 per cent of the company and 55 per cent of the shares will still belong to the people of Canada. The Government says they will be handled in a passive way. That means that the government shares will not be voted when any questions are discussed. That means that the owners of the 45 per cent of the shares will decide on issues important to Air Canada. The Government says that no one person can own more than 10 per cent of the shares. The Government is not saying that one person will own one-tenth of the shares but that one person or one group of people can own 10 per cent of the 45 per cent which will be voting on decisions the company has to make. That means that if two groups have 10 per cent each they will in fact control the company, they will make the decisions about company operations, company purchases of planes, and everything else.

We moved an amendment on the issue of foreign ownership because this Bill says that the foreign ownership of Air Canada shares will be limited to 25 per cent. We moved an amendment which, of course, was defeated, that foreign ownership be limited to 5 per cent. We did that because a 5 per cent foreign ownership restriction would prevent Air Canada from falling into foreign hands.

As I have said, the Government has indicated that 45 per cent of Air Canada shares will be sold and that the remaining 55 per cent will be voted passively. In other words, the 45 per cent tail will wag the 55 per cent dog. The foreign-held 25 per cent could well constitute a majority of the 45 per cent total of privately held shares. Clearly the people of Canada do not want Air Canada controlled by foreign interests because Air Canada is Canada's national airline.

We should also realize that the 25 per cent limitation exists because that is the limitation the United States places on foreign ownership of its airlines. If and when the United States changes that proportion, as it is widely expected to do in the next two years, as a result of free trade Canada will be under tremendous pressure to harmonize. When that occurs partnership arrangements will be extended when, for example, American Airlines buys out Canadian Airlines as a partner in the building of the third terminal building of Toronto.

These were warnings given to the committee by Professor Fred Lazar, a transport economist at York University which, of course, the Conservative majority on the committee ignored completely.

We moved an amendment which would limit the number of shares that the Minister could sell or otherwise dispose of to 45 per cent. Nowhere in this Bill is there a limit on the amount of Air Canada shares that can be sold. The Government says it will sell only 45 per cent of the shares but Clause 8 leaves the percentage figure entirely open. It could be 1 per cent, 100 per cent, or anywhere in between.

This amendment takes the Government at its word that it wants to keep a majority share and inserts 45 per cent which would still give the Government majority control. We believe, of course, that Air Canada should be 100 per cent publicly owned and the Government, if it meant what it said, should have supported our amendment which, of course, it did not do.

Clauses in this Bill supposedly guarantee that Air Canada will maintain its maintenance and overhaul bases in Winnipeg, Montreal, and Mississauga. Very significantly, this Bill says nothing about the finance office located in Winnipeg which employs about 500. It was very clearly stated at committee that the Air Canada workforce, particularly the machinists, have no confidence in the maintenance bases being kept in the cities of Winnipeg and Montreal.

The major base and most of the major offices of Air Canada were in Winnipeg from the day the company was formed. Without the approval of the then Government the officers of the then company, step by step, moved more and more of the company's operations, including the main overhaul base, from Winnipeg to Montreal. We say, as do the unions, that there is nothing in this Bill which guarantees that the workforce in the bases in Winnipeg or Toronto will remain at the numbers which they have at the present time.

The amendment we moved extended the guarantees to those cities by adding that the workforce at each would equal those attained in the 1987-88 financial year. In this way Air Canada management will guarantee jobs in these cities. That amendment was rejected out of hand by the government Members of this House. Of course, nothing has been said about the finance office.

We moved an amendment which would guarantee that flight attendants would also be considered to have permanent bases in these cities where Air Canada now has bases; Montreal, Halifax, Calgary, Winnipeg, Toronto, and Vancouver. Air Canada now has six bases. The flight attendants' union, CUPE, wants these bases maintained for the same reasons that the machinists want bases maintained. They believe that Air Canada is a national airline and should represent the entire country, not only the largest cities. They see Air Canada heading toward only two bases; Vancouver with its international focus, and Toronto. Smaller regional centres will be squeezed out.

What this will do to the staff is simply horrendous. They will have to move, which will create tremendous problems, work for one of the feeder lines at a fraction of the wages they now get, or lose their jobs. That amendment was rejected by the Government.

We moved amendments which would require Air Canada to maintain its existing standards in respect to safety, maintenance, and customer service. That amendment would require the Commissioner of Official Languages to monitor the bilingual nature of Air Canada because we understand that Air Canada management has been lobbying to have Clause 10, which supposedly guarantees that, removed. However, we failed in all these amendments.

As I said at the beginning of my remarks, Mr. Speaker, there is no legitimate reason for this proposal by the Government. The company is efficient. It is providing service for the people of Canada. Where it has cut back on its service to smaller centres, this has been done because of deregulation and because it is cheaper for feeder lines, which do not have the same standards of wages and safety which Air Canada has, to service these areas. It has been a financial success.

We are dealing with a Bill brought forward specifically to meet the very right-wing, pro-enterprise ideology of this Conservative Government. We say that this Bill is wrong. We said that at the beginning and will continue to say it. I hope that in the not-too-distant future we will have a government which is not Conservative, a government which will reinstate Air Canada as a publicly-owned corporation.

Mr. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few brief comments. When opposition Members talk about the need for the Government of Canada to have a national airline or a national railway, I believe they are forgetting that the first railway across this great country was built by private enterprise.

• (1220)

It was built by Canadian Pacific and is still operating and providing good service. I doubt anyone in the Opposition can deny that Canadian Airlines International is presently serving more cities and towns than our national airline, Air Canada, is serving.

The Opposition talks about contracting out of services and the fear that aircraft would be serviced overseas. Certainly no one in their right mind would think that an aircraft that needs servicing would not be serviced in another country but flown back to Canada. If it requires servicing in another country overseas, I am sure no pilot would take his plane off the ground to fly it back to Canada. Pilots have the greatest respect for safety and we should be proud that all Canadian airlines operate with a good safety record. We know that there will be accidents. Some of them will be a result of mechanical problems and some will be from human error. I do not think we will ever erase that possibility.

The airline employees who appeared before the committee were received quite favourably by the Liberal Government in 1981 when it was looking at the possibility of privatizing Air Canada. That is how that group of 7,500 came about.

Members have said that they did not have a chance for questioning enough people. The Canadian Air Line Pilots Association appeared. All of the unions representing the employees appeared, and there were two from the private sector. I might add, they were on the list of witnesses which the Opposition wanted to appear.

As far as I know, the Conservative majority on the committee willingly gave approval for the appearances of witnesses that the Opposition put forward.

I do not know why they did not want to have a group of people representing some 7,500 who voluntarily contributed to that association to appear before the committee and add their views on what was being said.

Of course, Air Canada management appeared. I was somewhat taken back when the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) refused to question the airline ownership committee witnesses. I was astonished because I thought he would have wanted to get another view from the employees.

I do not know why the opposition Members want to travel across Canada. This matter has been discussed for some time and contrary to their view that people who appeared before the committee did not have enough time to prepare briefs, I suggest that they had months to prepare their briefs. They knew what they were doing. I was somewhat surprised that they could not put up stronger arguments against privatization.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, this supposed Air Canada group that believes in privatization has been in existence, they say, for more than four years. They have no formal organization, no membership list, no officers and no constitution. They certainly did not present us with a list of the 7,500 employees who have contributed. That is why we are skeptical about them.

The Hon. Member says that the railway was built by private interests. Of course it was, but surely the Member knows that the CPR promoters were encouraged to build the railway because they were given loans and grants, which were never repaid, in the form of hundreds of millions of acres of land which were worth hundreds of millions of dollars at that time and probably worth hundreds of billions of dollars now.

The Member suggests that our airlines are safe. I remind the Member that a royal commission led by Mr. Justice Dubin looked into airline safety and procedures in northern Ontario. His report was scathing.

I remind the Member from Newfoundland that the former Leader of the NDP in Alberta, Grant Notley, was killed in the crash of a small feeder airline plane which, according to reports, should never have travelled. The pilot travelled because the company was so determined to make a profit that it told him he either fly or be fired. This was not once, but many times.

We have very legitimate reasons for being very suspicious about the downgrading of safety standards in the airline industry in this country because of deregulation and because of privatization. The Member comes from Newfoundland, which has a very small and sparse population. He should be much more interested in safety than he seemed to be in his remarks today.

Mr. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member will take the time to read Hansard, he will recognize that I did not say that airlines in Canada never have accidents. I said that we should be proud of the fact that our airlines have such a high standard of safety as they do.

I am concerned about safety, whether it is in Newfoundland or any part of Canada. To try to put fear into the people of Canada, as some members of the Opposition are doing, to say that our standard of safety will decrease, is hypocritical, I suggest. They should not do that. They are putting fear into the minds of people that it is not safe to travel on any airline except the one owned by the people of Canada, Air Canada.

Other airlines in this country have a good safety margin. I am not afraid to travel on any of them. We all realize that even if you walk down the street there is a certain element of danger. When one takes into consideration the number of people driving automobiles and the number of people who travel by air, it is safer to travel on an aircraft than it is to drive a motor car. Why do they not admit that?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Does the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North wish to respond?

Mr. Orlikow: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments are now terminated. Debate.

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton—Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, I would be remiss if I did not stand up and express my opposition to Bill C-129 in its present unamended form.

There are problems with this Bill from the most basic point of view, which is the question of the Government's responsibilities. We are certainly aware that there are many Crown corporations which outlive their usefulness as Crown corporations. Sometimes the private sector can be more effective and efficient.

Some Crown corporations need to be reviewed and undoubtedly, where there seems to be evidence that they can be run as well or better by private enterprise, there is no need for the Government to be in that particular business. I do not think that such a review should be criticized offhand. When the Government looks at Crown corporations to see whether they deserve to be turned over to the private sector, I think it is to be commended not criticized. However, having said that, the question has more to do with the rights of the Canadian people as such. The Government is supposed to be representing the people of Canada. It is supposed to be looking after our best interests, all of us throughout the entire country. When the Government undertakes in a philosophical way to decide all Crown corporations should be privatized, that is carrying the question from one extreme to the other. It is a most regrettable philosophical approach.

Obviously, there are some things that are much in the public interest. No government has the right to turn over to the private sector, out of its hands, those instruments which are essential to public safety, public welfare. That is what this debate really turns on. The issues of the Post Office, Air Canada and Petro-Canada are issues about which we have fundamental differences of opinion with the Government. We can see that the public interest is endangered by privatizing some of these organizations which we see will be lost to the best interests of the total public. Why do I say that? I say it for the simple reason that it is obvious that the objective of any private organization is to render a profit. The more competitive the issues are, the more important it is to render that profit. The more competitive the forces against you, the more is the temptation to try to cut service and cut safety, those things which are in the best interests of the public and you will do that in order to be more competitive. That is very obvious in the area of the airlines. We have seen what has happened in the United States and in other countries.

It is quite obvious that such corridors as Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, and, perhaps, Québec City, are very lucrative. That is true for the Post Office, for Air Canada and for any corporation looking at the Canadian scene. Where we have a concentration of population, we can very well afford to utilize and exploit it for profit and operate on a relatively narrow margin. But when it comes to the wider areas of this vast nation, the Government has a responsibility to the people, to the public interests, not just at the moment but in case something happens.

We do not privatize the Armed Forces in case there is an emergency. We feel it is important that the country itself govern its own safety, protection and well-being. The same thing should apply to security of supplies of fossil fuels. It is imperative that this country retain enough control of the resources of this country so that in times of crisis or in war, it is not going to be compromised in terms of its lines of supply. The same thing applies, I suggest, to the whole question of the well-being of our people in the more remote areas. When we talk about their well-being, we can give lots of lip-service, as political parties sometimes do, to the concern of making Canada more accessible in the other regions and about regional development. It is nice to give lip service to this but we should also take action.

I suggest that our actions in terms of moving to the privatization of, for example, Air Canada, will inevitably lead to questions being raised by those concerned about efficiency and profit as to whether some of the flights should be reduced because they are not profitable and because they do not carry as many people as in the Toronto-Ottawa-Montreal corridors. These corridors are profitable because they have enough people and the airlines can have full scheduling. But we can see that the private sector might be tempted to cut some of these flights in areas which are not exactly lucrative.

I suggest the Government of Canada has a responsibility to look after the remote parts of Canada where there will be in fact a loss of service, and that is true of the Post Office, Air Canada and even of the railroads. This is a responsibility we have as a nation to those who are trying to live in the more remote parts of this country. They already pay a premium. People who live in the Northwest Territories, in Newfoundland which is remote to some of the heartland of our industry, or northern British Columbia and northern Ontario must be serviced. But it will not be profitable to give these people service. That is why the Government had to encourage the transportation industry in terms of the vast area of our country.

I was absolutely stunned by comments of the Hon. Member for Bonavista—Trinity—Conception (Mr. Johnson) when he was talking about Canadian Pacific. It was, if I may be forgiven, Mr. Speaker, an ignorant statement, an ignorant comparison. We know perfectly well that in fact it was the stimulation of the Government of Canada that made CP Rail a possibility, the giving of lands and property and the Government's encouragement by way of loans. That was not an example of how private enterprise in fact brought about transportation links in this country. It was an example of how the co-operation between Government and private enterprise can work to advance such causes.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Bonavista—Trinity—Conception.

Mr. Johnson: First, Mr. Speaker, I want to say that I am not ignorant of the fact—

Mr. de Corneille: Mr. Speaker, I protest. This is not a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I will make that decision, and I will listen to the Hon. Member for Bonavista—Trinity—Conception.

Mr. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I want to declare that I am not ignorant of the fact that the railway that was built by Canadian Pacific was financed in part through grants and loans to Canadian Pacific. Neither am I ignorant of the fact that it was a Progressive Conservative Government that made those loans.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member will have an opportunity to put that question to the Hon. Member for Eglinton—Lawrence after his speech.

Mr. de Corneille: Yes, Mr. Speaker, in listening, I noticed we were entering into a debate from the very beginning. I am sure you now notice that as well.

Continuing with my observations about the objectives of the Government in serving the people of Canada, I think we are all concerned, if we have any kind of sincerity at all, about service to people in remote areas of this country. If we are going to allow our public services to be governed by motives of profits, we are going to betray the development possibilities of the remote parts of Canada. They must be, as they were with the CPR, given some advance Government encouragement. That is what the people of Canada have always felt. That is how our country has been governed. That is why I suggest that this Bill in itself threatens the well-being of the people of Canada as a totality because when our remote areas are threatened, our future is threatened. We want to encourage people to go to the remote areas and feel they are Canadians with an equal chance. That is where the future of Canada may indeed exist.

First, I am opposed in principle to this Bill because it tends to move us from national concern in the field of air transport towards the realm of profit motives which may not necessarily be in the national interest.

The next point I wish to make is that we must examine the Bill itself. Where does the mandate come for the privatization of Air Canada? Was this the platform of the Conservative Government in the last election campaign? I do not recall hearing that and I guess I would have noticed it if it had been there. I do not remember that the people of Canada were told that if the Conservative Party was elected to become the Government of Canada that it would move to privatize Air Canada. In fact, I think there were some comments from the present Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to the effect that Air Canada was not for sale.

I object to this because I do not believe the Government has a mandate to proceed with this Bill. Yet, with its heavy majority, it is proceeding nonetheless to put this Bill through the House at third reading. I do not believe that the public wants this. When I say that I understand that not long ago polls were conducted which asked Canadians whether they wanted to see Air Canada made a privatized institution. My understanding is that that poll indicated a rather strong opinion against privatizing Air Canada.

I understand that another poll was conducted later, a poll which asked about some of the company being privatized in order to give Canadians an opportunity to share in terms of giving capitalization to Air Canada. There were various reasons given as to why Air Canada might be privatized partially. Canadians are not conservative but careful. They thought that this proposal might be all right. They thought that to bring more capital into the situation in order to make the airline even more successful for the future was a good idea. The poll indicated that Canadians might be willing to go along with a partial and not a full privatization.

If we were to follow the wishes of the public, then we would see that this Bill does not achieve that. The Bill does not stipulate that the Government will stop at a partial sale of Air Canada. The Bill allows a large percentage of the company to be sold. While the Government may make announcements at the present time that it intends to sell 45 per cent of the shares, it might decide tomorrow that it would rather sell 90 per cent of it.

It is unfair for the Government to bring in a Bill which is as inaccurate as this Bill. It lacks in detail in that it asks the Parliament of Canada to pass a law which allows total carte blanche to Orders in Council or to decisions of a Prime Minister with respect to what he will do with something as important to the people of Canada as Air Canada.

It is tragic that in this Bill which I have in my hand one sees so little detail that protects the public, the workers and the future of the company. There is no statement about how much will be turned over finally. It is simply a press release. It is an opinion at the moment which considers how much right now the Government thinks should be sold. We have not been given proof that the sale of the shares that it does intend to sell is really going to bring about fair value to the people of Canada for what it is sold for. If 45 per cent is sold for $300 million, is it really worth it? Are not the company's goodwill and potential and present assets worth a lot more than that? Is it a good deal for the Canadian people? There are no figures, no commitments in the Bill put forward by the Government as to how much it will restrict itself to the selling off of Air Canada. Nor in this Bill are there any details relating to what the Government also promises verbally but which it refuses to put down on paper. There is nothing in the Bill about salaries.

What does the Bill say about salaries of employees in the future? What does it say about the pensions of people in Air

Canada who have devoted their lives and careers to this company and to the people of Canada, those people who chose Air Canada instead of some other carrier? What does it say in this Bill about their pensions? What does it say in the Bill about the pension fund that exists? I see nothing in the Bill about salaries, pensions or pension funds.

In the Standing Committee on Human Rights we have been studying the issue of older workers and their pensions. We have been worrying about what may be unfair to people who are older. We then find the Government turning around and not putting one word into this Bill to protect the human rights of these people. If some private group takes over and it has some power to exert its issues and views, some 22 per cent of the shareholders of the company can decide to eliminate, reduce or divert funds that belong to the workers, as we have seen in other corporations. There is nothing here in the Bill to protect them.

What is there in the Bill to consider the benefits of the workers? Where in the Bill is there a single word about their benefits? Where is there anything in the Bill about the relationship between unionized workers and the airline? Where is there protection about the agreements and understandings that usually take place between Crown corporations and their workers, the unions and their rights? Where are the human rights looked after? I also ask about employment equity. Mr. Speaker, can you find one word in this Bill which protects their rights or looks after these concerns?

I have spoken about the rights of Canadians. I am now talking about the rights of those workers who work for Air Canada. Their rights are not being protected. I suggest that efforts should be made to look at the Bill again in order to make it a decent Bill, a Bill that is worthy of being brought forward before the House of Commons. This Bill is simply in the loosest terms giving carte blanche to whomever may be sitting in power to be able to rule over the future of Air Canada on the one hand in terms of the percentage of shares or, on the other hand turning over to some unseen group of private people what has been over the decades built up as an equity by the employees in terms of the years they have worked. Not a word of protection has been put in the Bill by the Government because it is not concerned about the fate of these people.

Is this not incredible? I find it tragic that the Conservative Members do not want to protect the people. On the one hand we talk about human rights and all these fine pious ways in the committee on human rights and then turn around to see that the Government itself is not carrying out a protection of those people.

From the point of view of the people of Canada in general, or from the point of view of the people who are working for this corporation, I find this Bill to be unacceptable.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Are there questions or comments? The Hon. Member for Bonavista—Trinity—Conception.

Mr. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, with regard to the statement the Hon. Member made in regard to salary protection, I have to ask him if it is not true that in the event of an economic slowdown and a severe recession that Crown corporations in the past have used large scale lay-offs as cost-cutting measures. Is it not also true that salaries and wages in major private couriers are indeed higher than the Government's own counterparts? Is it not true that after this Bill passes that out of the 17 major airlines in the world there will be only two that will be wholly state owned, that in is Russia and in China.

• (1250)

With regard to protection of the employees, how come the Opposition did not have any amendments to put forward to that effect in the clause by clause debate? The Official Opposition had one amendment to make, and did not even make it. A government Member had to introduce it after the Member of the Liberal Party sitting on the committee left the room. I do not know why he left, Mr. Speaker. I do not know if he was sulky or what it was. He said it was because we had already started. The opposition Member had the same notice as government Members that the committee meeting was convening at a certain time and we were there, but members of the Opposition left without even introducing their own amendment.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): On a point of order the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys.

Mr. MacLellan: Such drivel, my God!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Eglinton—Lawrence.

Mr. de Corneille: First, it is generally the ruling of the Speaker that comments about a person's presence or absence are regarded as being out of order. This has been a most impolite comment that has been made about whether or not the Member was present.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I do not know what happened in committee. This is the House of Commons. What happens in committee has nothing to do with the House of Commons. A committee is an arm of the House of Commons. Therefore, I hope that Hon. Members will keep their questions to what happens here. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Eglinton—Lawrence to complete his rebuttal to the Hon. Member for Bonavista—Trinity—Conception.

Mr. de Corneille: I am glad you said that, Mr. Speaker, because I agree with you that it is most inappropriate to make comments about people's attendance in committee or in the House of Commons.

In terms of what was said about what other countries have, the thing that has to be said is what Canada has may be peculiar to a nation which has a very large geographical area and a very small population. What may apply to France does not apply to Canada.

Second, it is quite obvious, if there is nothing wrong then why fix it. For the reasons that I have cited one does not try to change something if there is nothing wrong with it. Over the years Air Canada has shown itself to be very competent and efficient.

I was asked about the salaries of employees and whether they would be dropped if there were some type of recession. As I pointed out, Crown corporations are less prone to start cutting because they would be cutting off routes if it were less efficient and less profitable than would be companies that do not have that mandate from the Government to perform. The whole point is that the Government of Canada has to mandate a protection of the remote parts of Canada whether or not those routes are always profitable. That is the Government's responsibility. The purpose of having a government is to look after the well being of the total population, not only those who are rich or happen to live in affluent areas.

This Government is not prepared to share the wealth with those areas that are less profitable. All this does is encourage Canadians in remote parts of the country to pour into the few cities, and that is not a direction that Canadian people want to have. That is why in this particular Bill there is another step in this direction. It is a negative direction and gives the message that the Government is not going to look after, encourage, and uphold the people in more remote parts of the country. Air Canada and Crown corporations will be less inclined to dismiss employees if their profits are threatened than companies that have to make it no matter what and have to survive because profit is their sole reason for existence.

Mr. MacLellan: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker, and on a point of misinformation brought forward by the Member for Bonavista—Trinity—Conception (Mr. Johnson). There was more than one amendment presented. The amendment that the Government accepted was the one that it thought it could take credit for, which is the snivelling attitude that prevailed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): That is not a point of order. I do not know what happened in committee. I would like to recognize the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Deputy Prime Minister for a question or comment.

Mr. Hawkes: I found the Member's opening remarks rather outstanding in identifying a basic difference between the Government and the Opposition. Yesterday I talked about the Opposition being sloths—sleeping a lot, hanging upside down, and looking at the world upside down.

The Member said that an airline company that provided bad service and a bad safety record would produce maximum profit for shareholders. As someone who flies a lot, I would like to say to the employees of Air Canada, Canadian Airlines International, Wardair, and the other airlines that, as a customer of airlines, the better your service, the better your safety record, the more likely I am to pick you to fly on.

I suggest that it is the view of the Government that the move in the direction of privatization of Air Canada and leaving it unfettered in the competitive world of the airlines is already producing for Canadian airline travellers lower prices, better service, more frequent service, and a better safety record. In a competitive world it matters that an airline serves its customers well. That is the consequence. Profits will flow if an airline serves its customers well. Profits will not flow if it does not.

I wanted to put on the record the clarity of the two views: the Opposition states that bad service and a bad safety record produces profits. I say that it does not. Good service and a good safety record produces profits for airlines.

Mr. de Corneille: Indeed that would fit the philosophy of Adam Smith. That is a nice theoretical concept which is not borne out by the facts. It is tragic that the Hon. Member is unable and unwilling to look at the fact that cutting corners in order to be more competitive is an inevitable by-product that also comes from competition. Perhaps, in some cases there is cheaper service, but there is not safer service.

Those who are wealthy are in a position to be able to buy seats on airlines that have good records and will provide the service that they want in a nice, comfortable corridor between Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, and Québec. But it does not guarantee and does not provide that safety for companies that are operating on a shoe-string budget that want to provide minimum service in order to be profitable in areas that are more remote.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Comments are now terminated. Is the House ready for the question? The Hon. Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong) will have the floor when the debate resumes.

It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this day.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

CARMANAH VALLEY SPRUCE TREE HERITAGE

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton—Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, recently all Members of Parliament were sent a spectacular poster depicting the giant Sitka spruce trees which grow in the Carmanah Valley of British Columbia. Unfortunately, the fate of these trees is very much in doubt.

MacMillan Bloedel has been granted a tree-farming licence for the area. To its credit, MacMillan Bloedel has placed a self-imposed moratorium on any logging or road-building operations. However, that moratorium will expire as of June 18.

Various conservation groups from divergent parts of Canada such as the Western Canada Wilderness Committee of Vancouver, B.C., and Nature Action of St. Bruno, Québec, have requested assistance from Members of Parliament in their fight to save the valley and these magnificent trees. At present, consultations are going on between MacMillan Bloedel and interested groups on how many hectares of this part of Canada's ecological heritage can be saved from the loggers' chainsaws.

I would like to add my voice to the campaign to have the Carmanah Valley preserved, and I ask and invite other Members of this House to lend their support. Hopefully, the Government will see fit to step in and add the valley to the Pacific Rim National Park before it is too late.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

ANNUAL SOFTBALL GAME BETWEEN MEMBERS AND PAGES

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, "It's one, two, three and you're out at the old ball game"! And that is the way it was at the annual softball game last night between the all-Party "Expo" MPs and the "Blue Jay" Pages, played on the front lawn through the courtesy of our Hon. Speaker, with equipment secured and loaned by our co-operating security staff.

The game featured two home runs by Expos: The Hon. Member for Pontiac—Gatineau—Labelle (Mr. Moore) and the Hon. Member for Westmorland—Kent (Mr. Robichaud), while Page Stephen Cassivi walloped the ball into the tulip patch. An outstanding pick-up by Page Suh Won Kim of a hard hit grounder brought applause from all sides as did a magnificent catch by Page Byron Horner. Every Page and every MP played magnificently.

The game featured happiness, goodwill and sportsmanship. Our esteemed Pages demonstrated that they not only perform with excellence in this Chamber but are able to carry the same expertise into all phases of their lives. Three cheers for our Pages!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY

LAY-OFFS AMONG GRAIN HANDLERS

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, seasonal lay-offs in the Seaway grain trade threaten to become long-term lay-offs this summer. Five hundred of Thunder Bay's 1,300 grain handlers are laid off at the moment. So are 200 rail workers, nearly 100 seafarers, and 35 grain commission employees. About 500 seafarers in other Seaway communities are also laid off.

There are fears that one-third of Canada's inland fleet will be tied up throughout the coming crop year. The prairie drought is reducing yields sharply and special efforts will be required to keep the Seaway grain trade functioning.

The Wheat Board has always sent most of the grain bound for Atlantic markets down the St. Lawrence Seaway. The West Coast capacity limit of 18 to 19 million tonnes requires export via Thunder Bay in any good year. It is in the interest of the farmers as well as grain handlers, seafarers, and others involved in the Seaway trade to maintain the effectiveness of this most efficient system.

I urge the Minister responsible for the grain trade and the Minister of Transport (Mr. Bouchard) to ensure that Thunder Bay and the other Seaway ports have enough grain in the coming year to keep the system in good shape.

ABORTION

SUPREME COURT CASE—OPPOSITION TO POSTPONEMENT

Mr. Jim Jepson (London East): Mr. Speaker, it was with a great deal of distress that I learned, through the press unfortunately, that officials in the Justice Department have asked to defer the Borowski trial indefinitely. This trial is long overdue and many Canadians are awaiting the outcome to see if the court will indeed recognize that the innocent unborn child in the mother's womb has legal status and protection under the Charter.

I urge the Minister to allow this trial to proceed and that the justice system be allowed to follow its due course. I, for one Member, do not appreciate the intervention of Justice officials, and hope that the Borowski trial will proceed this October, as scheduled.

MULTICULTURALISM

THE CANADA OF TOMORROW

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, we have talked a lot about multiculturalism this week, and so I thought that today, we would give a concrete example of what multiculturalism means, and that is why I decided to invite, from Montreal, people like Father Saitanis, Father Salatellis, Mr. Crilis and a number of youngsters who, at age 10, 12 and 14 speak excellent French and excellent English and who, above all, have the greatest respect for their culture and traditions—the culture and traditions of Greece. This is more or less the speech I wanted to make on multiculturalism, the speech I didn't have time to make. It is this concrete example we see today which is a symbol of the Canada we are building together, the Canada of tomorrow.

THE PRIME MINISTER

TRIBUTE TO PRINCIPAL SECRETARY

Mr. Guy St-Julien (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, today I would like to pay tribute to Bernard Roy, Principal Secretary of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) since 1984, who is leaving us this week to go back to Montreal. Quebecers and Canadians are aware of the fundamental role played by Mr. Roy in this Government, and we have all been able to appreciate his integrity, wisdom and strength of character, and his exemplary performance.

Mr. Speaker, we are sad to see Mr. Roy leave us, but I am sure that his wife Madeleine and his son Philippe will agree that our loss is their gain. Thank you, Bernard!

GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS

MINIMUM WAGE RATES

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, when a federal government contract is announced for some region of the country, most people generally react as though the region has been given a gift, or a little bit of pork, if we want to use the vernacular, but this is not true for everybody who is at the receiving end of those contracts.

The P.E.I. Dump Truck Association was before the Government Operations Committee and pointed out to us that it is the experience of its members that they get ripped off. While money is included in the original contract bid to cover the cost of hauling by dump truck, the wages and fees they are paid are bid downward and they work at a very marginal rate.

In response to this, the Government Operations Committee has recommended that the Minister of Public Works (Mr. McInnes) take action to adopt the minimum fees that provinces put in place for the same sort of work, and that a little bit of justice be extended to these small independent entrepreneurs.

VOLUNTARY ORGANIZATIONS

TRIBUTE TO 4-H CLUB MOVEMENT

Mr. Felix Holtmann (Selkirk—Interlake): Mr. Speaker, "I pledge my head to clear thinking, my heart to greater loyalty, my hands to larger service, my health to better living, for my club, my community and my country".

With those chosen words, Mr. Speaker, tens of thousands of Canadians have become members of 4-H clubs, broadened their horizons and enhanced their lives.

The 4-H movement was founded 75 years ago by Mr. E. Ward Jones, Director of Extension Services in Agriculture at the University of Manitoba. The very first clubs were known as Boys and Girls Clubs and were formed in the towns of Roland, Starbuck, Warren, Darlingford, Manitou, Stonewall, Oak Lake, and Neepawa in the Province of Manitoba. In 1952, clubs became known as 4-H clubs.

I would ask this House to congratulate with me and acknowledge the tremendous benefit this great organization has provided for Canada's youth over the past 75 years.

ENVIRONMENT CANADA

CLOSURE OF ATMOSPHERIC ENVIRONMENTAL OFFICES

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring to the attention of the House Environment Canada's plan to close up to 50 Environment Canada atmospheric environmental offices across the country.

These offices are being closed due to technological and scientific improvements in the atmospheric environmental service, according to environmental officials. I applaud any move by Environment Canada to improve our weather forecasting service. However, I would like to caution the Minister that technology and machines should only be used to help augment the human capacity, not to replace it.

The Minister will know that many farmers, fishermen and other primary producers rely heavily on their local weather stations for accurate weather reporting. To remove this service from these people would be a great disservice to their particular industries. I urge the Minister and the Government of the day to refrain from closing any of these offices at this time.

YOUTH

"STREET KID" SYNDROME—CALL FOR STUDY

Hon. J. Robert Howie (York—Sunbury): Mr. Speaker, there is a growing phenomenon in Canada which has become known as the "street kid" syndrome. It involves an increasing number of young people who are living in a variety of unoccupied spaces near our streets. They have very limited means and are subject to all the dangers and indignities which that implies. It is a growing problem which is no longer restricted to our largest cities. For run-aways, the problem runs much deeper than simply tracing their whereabouts.

I feel the federal Government should initiate an in-depth study of this problem, identify the causative factors, and blueprint the responsibilities of all three levels of government and the private sector, and propose remedial measures. We may discover an erosion of traditional family support resources.

These kids come to the streets for many different reasons but they do have one thing in common, they all need our help.

FORESTRY

RENEWAL OF FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL AGREEMENTS

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, for more than a decade the federal Government has supported forest management activities in all provinces through federal-provincial forestry agreements. The agreements with Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia are set to expire early next year.

The federal Cabinet must get its act together and direct the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) to start renegotiating these agreements immediately. There is no time to delay. The federal Government's foot-dragging in this matter draws the question, is it not going to renew the agreements? This has already led to the Government of Ontario unwisely cutting back on reforestation.

The inaction of the federal PC Government and the actions of the Ontario Liberal Government could hurt the forestry sector in our province for years to come. As the forestry spokesperson for the New Democratic Party, I call upon the federal Government to move quickly to renew the agreements, and on the Government of Ontario to scrap its plans to reduce tree planting and, instead, increase its reforestation budget.

CHILD CARE

INCREASED FEDERAL FUNDING

Mr. Albert Girard (Restigouche): Mr. Speaker, I rise today to say that sincere congratulations are in order for the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp). With the announcement yesterday of an extra $1 billion, the total federal funding for day care will exceed $4 billion.

The objective to double the amount of day care spaces will be achieved, and I am pleased to note that my home Province of New Brunswick was the first to go on record as stating that this plan will work and we will achieve this goal.

Clearly the Progressive Conservative Government has listened to the Canadian people and has responded reasonably.

This program is the biggest infusion of public funds for child care that this country has ever known. Yet the Liberals say that it is not enough. It is easy for them to sit in opposition and criticize, but the real question is, what did they do for day care in the 20 years they were in power? We all know the answer to that question.

Again, hats off to the Hon. Minister of National Health and Welfare.

NATURAL RESOURCES

INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF GREAT LAKES PORTS—OPPOSITION TO WATER DIVERSION PROPOSALS

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, earlier this week the International Association of Great Lakes Ports held its annual conference in Valleyfield, Québec. One of the items dealt with at that conference was the diversion or possible diversion of water from the Great Lakes anywhere out of the basin.

This morning a resolution was passed which I would like to read into the record:

> WHEREAS, the Great Lakes represent a precious, God-given natural resource directly serving some 90 million residents of the United States and Canada, and
> WHEREAS, the Great Lakes region encompasses ports, cities, counties, states and provinces whose business, industry, recreation and ecology are in large measure dependent on the Great Lakes and their tributaries, and
> WHEREAS, the Great Lakes hold 20 per cent of the fresh waster in a world whose supply of fresh water is being rapidly depleted, and
> WHEREAS, maintenance of the fresh water supply in the Great Lakes is critical for the present and future well-being of the region, and
> WHEREAS, every inch of available water in the Great Lakes is essential for purposes of safe navigation for the carriage of agricultural, mineral and manufactured cargo through ports served by the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Seaway system,
> NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that the International Association of Great Lakes Ports hereby goes on record as unequivocally opposing any proposals to divert water from the Great Lakes for any purpose whatsoever.

I think it is time that this House pass legislation that would do the same thing.

SUPPLY AND SERVICES

FEDERAL PROCUREMENT CONTRACTS—INCREASED OPPORTUNITIES FOR SMALL BUSINESSES

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Jelinek) has recently announced a program that will improve the access of small business to federal government procurement. The program will increase the number of contracts awarded on a competitive basis and will increase the number of bidding opportunities.

As a result of these changes the most dynamic sector of the Canadian economy, which today accounts for 80 per cent of new jobs, will be able to benefit fully from government procurement. It also means that western business will have a much better chance to compete for federal contracts. In Saskatchewan, this will provide an additional source of diversification and will further stimulate small business growth.

As a small businessman I am proud to be part of a Government which is helping to make our small business community a better place in which to work and provide greater opportunities for employment.

ROAD SAFETY

OPPORTUNITY TO INSTALL SUPPLEMENTARY SAFETY DEVICES IN AUTOMOBILES

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel—Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, I read in the papers that 1988 Chryslers are equipped with air bags for drivers of private cars. This additional protection for the driver is now standard equipment on the 1988 Chrysler Fifth Avenue manufactured since June 1988. It was, in fact, a Chrysler Fifth Avenue that my husband was driving when we had a head-on collision in September 1985, as result of which he suffered severe lacerations to his face, requiring intensive plastic surgery.

We all survived the accident because we had buckled our seat belts. However, the two passengers in the back suffered very serious spinal injuries because the back seat was not equipped with shoulder seat belts.

Since the accident, I have tabled petitions signed by 33,168 Canadians who are asking the Government to take immediate action and make the installation of air bags in the front and shoulder seat belts in the back of the car compulsory. I would urge all other automobile manufacturers to follow Chrysler's example and install the same safety devices.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

Mr. Brian White (Dauphin—Swan River): Mr. Speaker, if there is one thing the NDP cannot be accused of, it is letting the facts get in the way of good propaganda. A prime example is the Government's plan to build nuclear propelled submarines. The NDP's motto is: Where there is confusion, there is concern".

Here are some facts. The program will create 55,000 person years of work for Canadians. It is not a violation of the non-proliferation treaty. Nuclear propelled subs are the only ones that can control our Arctic.

The cost is $8 billion spread over a quarter of a century. The NDP, with its usual economic logic, has promised to reallocate that money many times over. However, the NDP defence policy will cost $1.9 billion more than that of the Government. That does not even include the cost of NORAD and NATO withdrawal.

Should Canada defend itself? Should we rebuild our navy? The Government says yes. What does the NDP say?

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

GOVERNMENT RESULTS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montréal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, we are a few weeks or a few days from an election, and I hope that Monday the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) will call a general election so that we can rid the country of the Conservatives as quickly as posible.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Malépart: As the election draws near, it is important to remind everyone of this government's record with regard to families. It de-indexed family allowances and the child tax credit, and lowered the triggering income threshold, making fewer families eligible for the child tax credit. Insofar as daycare is concerned, this government has deceived the population because the number one problem, as my colleague the Member for Outrement (Mrs. Pépin) has said, is the number of daycare spaces, and the fact that they need to be increased.

Mr. Speaker, the Canadian people will remember this Conservative Government. Today I had the honour and the privilege of having lunch with Mrs. Solange Denis, the woman who buttonholed our very own Charlie Brown, and rest assured that she will not be voting Conservative.

NATIONAL SECURITY

BENEFITS OF EMERGENCY MEASURES ACT

Mr. Vincent Della Noce (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State and Minister Responsible for Multiculturalism): Mr. Speaker, allow me to share with you the content of a telegram I received yesterday from a constituent, following the passage of Bill C-77. It reads as follows:

"I write to you as leader and spokesperson for the Italian-Canadian businessmen of Québec and as a native citizen of Canada, incarcerated and interned at Camp Petawawa, Ontario, in 1940, in the name of hundreds of family members of Italian origin and speaking also for those from the City of Toronto who were arrested and interned in the middle of the night, without arrest warrants, detained without charges being laid against them, and denied the right to consult a lawyer, and were then incarcerated for four years like common criminals and kept apart from their families. In the light of these facts, please congratulate the Right Honourable Prime Minister, Brian Mulroney, and his Minister, the Honourable Perrin Beatty, and the Government for having brought in and passed Bill C-77.

This is a very positive day for Canadians whatever their origin or religion. The new law will prevent the repetition of events such as the ones that occurred in Montréal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver and other cities in Canada during the Second World War when Italians, Germans, and Japanese Canadians were interned because of their ethnic origin.

Your Government will by this gesture go down in the history of our country as an honourable defender of the rights and the respect due to individuals, as opposed to the Liberal Government of 1940 that claimed to be the protector of minorities and ethnic groups."

I will conclude by saying this: the greatest honesty will lead to the greatest safety.

Signed: A wounded Canadian, Antonio Capobianco.

DAY CARE

NUMBER OF SPACES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. This Minister's statement yesterday in the House is a fraud, misrepresentation and completely unacceptable. Mr. Speaker, the more one studies the statement, the closer one looks at it, the more one finds it is trickery.

With the dishonest statement he made yesterday, the Minister gave Canadian families the illusion that he was adding more day care spaces, when in fact . . .

Mr. Speaker: Order! I hesitate to interrupt the Hon. Member, but such a comment is unparliamentary and I would ask the Hon. Member to withdraw the word "dishonest."

Mrs. Pépin: I withdraw the word "dishonest."

What I mean is that he was giving families the illusion that he was adding day care spaces, when in fact he has decreased the number of spaces promised in 1987.

What the Minister announced in December was mediocre. What he announced yesterday is worse. Why?

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, obviously not associating myself with any of the comments the Hon. Member makes, the Hon. Member must realize that the amount of money the Government of Canada put forward in December was based on the cost of a day care space at that time and the target of 200,000 spaces.

I was very clear in the announcement I made yesterday. I was not trying to create an illusion of anything other than the 200,000 space target. I said that the costs of spaces, our negotiations with the provinces, and the plans that had been submitted had come to a certain amount of money about which I have been very public. After some refinement and critical analysis of those plans the announcement was made of an additional $1 billion to be put into the child care package.

I find it interesting that the Member was wrong in her analysis yesterday and is wrong in her analysis today. She is leaving the impression that there were to be more than the 200,000 spaces created. That is not what I said and that is not what the statement says. She should go back to the drawing board, not only to read what I said but to understand exactly what was said.

Mrs. Pépin: Mr. Speaker, I did go back. I do not think that with $102 per child per year we can have more spaces.

Oral Questions

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister admit today in this House that he is recycling child care spaces and toying with the expectations of Canadians? Will he admit that after four years of empty promises there will be no access to child care for at least one million children? What games are the Conservatives playing? Do they think that the parents of this country are so stupid that they cannot see through this?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I do not believe Canadian parents are that at all, but I think the Hon. Member is just as stupid as is her question.

Let us look at the Liberal record.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Epp (Provencher): They don't want to hear. In 1982-83 the Liberal Government of the day spent $83.3 million on day care. Its share was 39 per cent of the total costs. In 1983-84 it became very generous. Its expenditure went up to $87.2 million, and its share was reduced to 36 per cent.

The plan which we have brought in puts $6.4 billion into child care. It is an expenditure plan which, for the seven-year period, provides for almost $1 billion a year. At the end of the plan there will be $800 million a year to support it, that being the federal share only.

Only a Liberal could say that the expenditure in their last year in office of $96.9 million is more than our expenditure of $800 million per year.

• (1425)

PRIME MINISTER'S PROMISE

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, during his election campaign in 1984 the Prime Minister promised us a daycare program and national standards which would guarantee that the parents of Canadian children in cities, suburbs and rural areas would not have to worry about the quality of services their little children would receive. However, the Prime Minister broke his promises. There are no national standards and the provinces can do whatever they want.

Why did the Prime Minister break his promise to provide child care to everyone who needs it, and why did he break his promise to provide national standards? Why is he subjecting the children of this country to a lottery when it comes to child care?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister did not break his promise. He kept it.

The Prime Minister and my Cabinet colleagues have come forward with $6.4 billion and a comprehensive child care plan.

They may say it is not enough. The plan they want is one in which the state will have a space for everyone whether parents want it or not. The cost of it under the Katie Cook study is $11 billion a year. That is almost equal to the health care costs of the federal Government for running the entire health care system and the medical system.

Talk about smoke and mirrors. That is what she is doing. That is exactly the illusion she is trying to create in the House. There are $6.4 billion over seven years, 200,000 spaces, a program for native people, a program for initiatives, a program for stay-at-home mothers. The Prime Minister has kept his promise. They are the ones who have not.

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES FREE TRADE AGREEMENT—PROCEEDINGS IN U.S. SENATE COMMITTEE

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. A few weeks ago the Prime Minister sent his Principal Secretary to Washington to try to get removed from the draft American bill to implement the trade deal a provision that would allow the American Government to set up a new system of investigating and monitoring Canadian imports. We have just learned that the Finance Committee of the Senate has approved a version of the bill that continues to contain this provision.

Why is the Government continuing to try to force its trade deal through Parliament when it is becoming increasingly clear that all this deal will do is expose Canada and its exports to even more trade harassment than was possible before? Why is the Government continuing with this foolish and harmful deal?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the Senate Finance Committee in the United States has just voted 11 to 0 in support of the free trade agreement.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McDermid: It is fascinating to see how the opposition Members represent progress in this regard as failure.

The Hon. Member knows full well that a number of issues were discussed both in the House of Representatives and in the Senate that we felt did not belong in the free trade agreement legislation. The recommendations which, I might say, are recommendations to the administration, contain no new powers, and do not single out Canada at all. The Hon. Member is absolutely wrong in his preamble.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. The Government does not seem to realize that the United States Senate and its committees are there to serve American interests, not Canadian interests. I do not know why the Government does not have the guts to serve Canadian interests as strongly as the Senate is ready to serve American interests.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Does the Deputy Prime Minister not realize that the harmful provision that the Prime Minister sent Mr. Burney specifically to Washington to have removed is still in there, with one small change, that it will also apply to any other country foolish enough to enter into the same kind of free trade deal with the United States?

Why is the Government continuing with this deal in the face of this continued commitment of the United States to harass our exports?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, existing U.S. law allows United States industry to request of Government the investigation and monitoring of subsidy practices. That is allowed now. There are no new powers whatsoever in this suggested recommendation from the Senate. There are no new powers at all and it does not single out Canada. Nevertheless, we don't like it. We will be examining the final Bill very carefully to ensure that the free trade agreement benefits are not impaired. That is our responsibility and we will carry it out for all Canadians.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

TASK FORCE REPORT—NATIONAL BOUNDARIES RECOMMENDATION

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Last week Southam News in Washington broke the story of a June 1987 task force report by officials in DND, External Affairs, and International Trade, who recommended in an executive summary the elimination of national boundaries in the area of defence between Canada and the United States.

The implications of this suppressed report are far-reaching insofar as they spell total Canadian defence industrial integration into the U.S. military industrial complex, and also imply a unified continental approach to defence planning itself.

Will the Government make this document public and clarify for the Canadian people whether it is government policy, and I quote from the document, to "eliminate national boundaries" in the area of defence?

Hon. Paul Dick (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I noticed a report appeared in one of the newspapers last week. It was unfortunately inaccurate because this report summary has been known to the public for about six months. It has been released and available to people. It was well known that this committee was sitting for a period of two years to look into the defence infrastructure of this country to see whether or not we were duplicating what the Americans have, or if we were doing something differently and how we could best co-ordinate, as we have done over many, many years.

CANADIAN SECURITY AND PRIORITIES

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether the Associate Defence Minister is prepared to name the report and those who are responsible for writing the report, or whether he would table the report as I have just requested. The perspective of this report is continentalist. Canadian sovereignty receives no mention and is in fact viewed as detrimental to the defence relationship which should not be evaluated "in terms of costs and benefits to a single state".

Does the Minister acknowledge that Canadian security interests and priorities are in fact very different from those of the United States and that these very different perspectives cannot simply be rolled into one view of North American security?

Hon. Paul Dick (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, it is obvious that Canada's interests are different from the interests of United States. If the Hon. Member would read the White Paper he would find out that we want to protect Canadian sovereignty, we have suggested ways of doing that, whereas the New Democratic Party would like to give up Canadian sovereignty.

Mr. Rodriguez: Get serious!

Mr. Dick: It wants to withdraw from certain areas.

This is an ongoing process which looks at the infrastructure in Canada so we can be sovereign and independent in this country. Rather than quoting from some newspaper, why does the Hon. Member not read the White Paper?

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Obviously the Associate Defence Minister is pretty desperate if he has to resort to that kind of childish rhetoric on the eve of an election.

INDUSTRIAL PLANNING—MILITARY PERSPECTIVE

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): This report also advocates the militarization of the Canadian economy and recommends that Canada:

> Incorporate a military perspective when considering industrial planning.

Is the Government going to follow the U.S. model of militarizing industry, which has undermined that country's productivity and competitiveness, and which some American economists argue very forcefully is destroying the American economy? Is that what the Canadian Government, the Conservative Government, wants to do to the Canadian economy?

Hon. Paul Dick (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I think all Parties in this House agreed at the time of the White Paper that we had to do something to refurbish the Canadian Armed Forces. We decided we had to buy some new equipment. Instead of buying equipment overseas and off the shelf, we are trying to make it in Canada. We are trying to spread it around within the regions of Canada to have the best industrial benefits for the various regions. That is Canadian, that is sovereignty, and that is common sense. He should try it sometime.

DISASTERS

1985 GANDER AIR CRASH—REQUEST FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF JUDICIAL INQUIRY

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister and concerns the Gander air crash of December 12, 1985, which resulted in the unfortunate deaths of 256 people. Four members of the Canadian Aviation Safety Board, a former member of the board, several respected members of the aviation community, and Mrs. Theresa Griffin, the widow of the pilot who perished in the Gander tragedy, called earlier today for a judicial inquiry into all the circumstances surrounding the crash.

Given that the Deputy Prime Minister himself repeatedly called for such an inquiry into the 1978 crash at Cranbrook, British Columbia, which resulted in 43 deaths, and given that he himself later commissioned the Dubin inquiry, can he give his commitment here and now that he will ask for a judicial commission of inquiry into the Gander air crash?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the Act requires that a draft report be issued and that is exactly what we did with respect to the Gander crash in 1985. The Act also proposed that we could receive any representation by any concerned party in terms of the conclusions of the draft report. I think it would be more than irrelevant that the Minister or any government party could call any kind of inquiry without waiting for the final report.

My friend will admit that we could not reach a conclusion on a preliminary report. I think the Act is structured that way and I hope that my friend will respect an Act which was introduced by his Government.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, that response is totally inadequate. The Minister knows perfectly well there has been conflicting evidence, that there has been testimony which has been ignored, and that there has been information kept from the Canadian Aviation Safety Board. He will know that he himself sent a letter to the new chairman asking members of the board to obey the new chairman. Given that kind of interference already by this Government, is it not reasonable to expect that justice be done? Isn't the only way to do that to call for a Royal Commission of Inquiry into this accident? Otherwise justice will never be done and Canadians, Americans, and everyone else will never know the truth concerning this crash.

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, it is always the same. Any kind of regular proceeding is decided by an Act, not by me, but by an Act of this House. This Act has decided we have to provide a preliminary report, and as I said before, we did, and any concerned party, including those who appeared yesterday, have the right to make a proposal, or to criticize, and then we will have a final report. At that time the Minister will consider the recommendations.

Once again, this Act was passed by your Party and I have to work within the rules. This was decided by you and I hope that you understand that, and will respect the Act that decided that I have to play the game by those rules.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

PROPOSED ACQUISITION OF NUCLEAR-POWERED SUBMARINES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister who will know that with each passing day more and more Canadians are speaking out against the Government's decision to spend billions of dollars of taxpayers' money on nuclear-powered hunter-killer submarines.

Mr. Siddon: Look at the Gallup polls, Nelson.

Mr. Riis: One defence analyst recently stated that "if the subs are really meant to scare anyone, the threat is surely half hearted. What would one of our new subs do if it came across a Russian or American sub in our waters? Sink it? Hardly . . . I believe that a fleet of icebreakers, along with super sophisticated underwater monitoring systems would do a better job of protecting our Canadian shores". Would the Deputy Prime Minister agree that this defence analyst is correct and that these submarines are in fact not only wasteful but a dangerous way to spend taxpayers' money?

Hon. Paul Dick (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, an analysis has been done and the proposal to use nuclear-powered submarines is $1.9 billion less then the proposal of the New Democratic Party. It gives a more effective coverage in the Atlantic, in the Pacific, and in the Arctic. If the Member felt he was going to protect the lives of sailors by having them on an icebreaker going at four knots, and maybe being stuck in the ice and perhaps getting bombed, I think he was crazy, compared to what you can do by being under the ice.

• (1440)

COST OF ACQUISITION

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): This is somewhat perplexing, Mr. Speaker. I took these quotes from a document, a copy of which I have in my hand, which was sent out by the Conservative Member of Parliament for Nanaimo—Alberni, to individuals in his own riding. The document is entitled: "The Schellenberg Report".

The Minister will also know if he read Maclean's magazine that the Conservative Member of Parliament for Don Valley East commented on the nuclear submarines and stated: "The cost of these things boggles the mind". In the same article the Conservative Member of Parliament for Duvernay stated: "The problem that I have is to explain the $8 billion".

Is it not time for the Minister now to admit that not only are the people of Canada becoming disenchanted with this initiative by the Government but his own back-benchers are now starting to inform their own constituents that they too are against this expenditure?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Paul Dick (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, it is interesting to see how the New Democratic Party likes to propagate misinformation.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Dick: The fact is that the nuclear-powered submarines are a cheaper method of defending this country than what the New Democratic Party has suggested.

Mr. Riis: Better tell that to some of your Members, then.

Mr. Dick: The fact is that the average cost per year is $300 million, which is less than one-half of one per cent of what the social programs in this country cost on an annual basis.

The fact is that it is less than 3 per cent of the annual budget of the Department of National Defence.

If Hon. Members opposite would deal with facts they might even show that they had some common sense and knowledge, but they do not.

Oral Questions

CANADA POST CORPORATION

SYDNEY, N.S., POST OFFICE

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister responsible for Canada Post I direct my question to the Deputy Prime Minister. On June 17, 1988, in the House the Minister responsible said in response to a question from my colleague from Hamilton East with respect to the closure of post offices in 66 cities in Canada, including Sydney, Nova Scotia: "—post offices will be increased in number, not decreased, not closed."

Yesterday it was confirmed in the House that the post office in Sydney, Nova Scotia, which serves some 22,000 Canadians, would be closed, and some of its operations transferred to the private sector.

I would like to ask the Deputy Prime Minister why the Minister responsible for Canada Post on June 17, 1988, deliberately and wantonly left the impression with this House and those Canadians in those 66 communities, including Sydney, that there would be no closure of their post offices, nor would there be any privatizations of the facilities in those communities.

[Translation]

Mrs. Lise Bourgault (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, once again, with respect to the Sydney Post Office, those in charge were advised to move. So what Canada Post is doing now is to transfer the existing service to another building.

The Hon. Member is not informed if he asks such a question.

[English]

REQUEST THAT CORPORATION BE DIRECTED NOT TO CLOSE POST OFFICES

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, we on this side of the House are very much aware of the distortion and misleading statements coming from the Government concerning Canada Post.

Will the individual responding to the question give a clear and unequivocal undertaking to the House concerning the postal facilities named in those 66 communities, particularly in Sydney, Nova Scotia, that a directive will be given pursuant to the Financial Administration Act to Canada Post that there be no closures, none whatsoever, in those communities, and no privatization of the operations in those communities? Then maybe Canadians might believe.

Mrs. Lise Bourgault (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, it is absolutely unbelievable to hear such a question. No, there is no closure of post offices. Again, no.

Oral Questions

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY

MOVEMENT OF GRAIN THROUGH THUNDER BAY

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. As the Minister will know, there are over 800 workers in Thunder Bay who are involved in the grain industry lay-off, another 500 elsewhere in the Seaway system, and the suggestion by the lake carriers that up to one-third of the fleet will be tied up for more than a year. I want to ask the Minister of Transport what steps his Government will take to ensure that Thunder Bay gets it fair share of the movement of grain.

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question. I believe that everyone will admit that the drought that we have in western Canada is something which is extremely unfortunate.

At the present time the Canadian Wheat Board has not yet decided the levels of grain that will be transported. I believe that we are very sensitive to the issue that my friend has raised in terms of Thunder Bay. We are monitoring the situation very closely. We hope to be able, with the collaboration of the Canadian Wheat Board, to consider what the Hon. Member called a fair share of the transportation of grain.

LAID-OFF WORKERS ELIGIBILITY FOR UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is to the Acting Minister for Employment and Immigration, whoever may be responding for the Minister today.

Thunder Bay is in a situation in which, because of the variable entrance requirements, 17 work weeks are required to be eligible for unemployment insurance. In addition, these individuals who are losing their jobs because of the drought situation should be treated in the same way that the prairie producers are being treated.

Is the Government prepared to waive the normal requirements of variable entrance so that those workers who only have 10 or 12 work weeks will now be eligible for unemployment insurance?

[Translation]

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister of State (Employment and Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, I think that I can remind this House that unemployment insurance is to compensate workers who have lost their jobs; it is not a supplementary income program. We asked for a report on the situation that now exists in Thunder Bay. Our Department is studying it and I am convinced that with the Jobs Strategy and the number of programs we have in place, we can provide these workers with alternate income to help them through this difficult period of unemployment.

[English]

ABORTION

SUPREME COURT CASE—REQUEST THAT HEARING NOT BE POSTPONED

Mr. John Reimer (Kitchener): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Justice. I was shocked and angered to learn through the media that the Minister was intervening to defer indefinitely the Borowski case scheduled to be heard by the Supreme Court in October.

Surely in light of the Morgentaler decision that left the rights of the unborn in a vacuum, and given the Minister's own words to the press that he does not want to go through trials and appeals wondering if the new abortion law Parliament might pass would be constitutional, why doesn't the Minister stop allowing his Department's bias to prejudge the case, withdraw his intervention, and allow the case to be heard?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I should correct the Hon. Member. There is no bias within the Department of Justice. I take full responsibility for any advice that I give to the Government. Indeed, in this particular case I am sure the Hon. Member, on reflection, will agree with me that we would want to have the case brought forward by Mr. Borowski considered in a legislative context.

The court has generally not wanted to talk in abstract terms but, rather, to have legislation or the opinion of Parliament with respect to a particular issue upon which to base its decision. Rather than being negative, I think I have taken an action which is supportive of having the Borowski case heard at an appropriate time in the future when Parliament has spoken on this very important and sensitive issue.

Mr. Belsher: Supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

ABORTION DEBATE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Ross Belsher (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, in today's article in which that news was reported there is also a quotation attributed to the Minister that the Government has a preferred option in the abortion debate. Will the Minister clarify if that is fact, or whether or not he is being quoted out of context?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I was questioned fairly extensively in the Standing Committee on Justice and Solicitor General. If the Hon. Member were to ask his colleagues, the Hon. Member for London East and the Hon. Member for Kitchener, who were there, with respect to this particular issue he will find out what I actually did say and be able to draw his own conclusions.

TIMING OF COURT HEARING—MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the same Minister. I want to challenge his assertion that he has responsibility to stage-manage the agenda of the Supreme Court of Canada. He indicated that the Supreme Court of Canada has a preference for not hearing cases in the abstract. I remind him that the Supreme Court of Canada agreed to hear this case. His opinion about preferences is his opinion.

What right and what authority does the Minister have to ask the Supreme Court of Canada to fall into line with the Government's legislative, and election timetable, since that is a factor, too?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1450)

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, this application as made will be decided by the court. We have received the factum of the appellant with respect to this issue in which he acknowledges that three of the issues before the court were not valid because the Morgentaler decision had indeed determined that Section 251 was unconstitutional.

We are not doing anything except taking our position, and we can make application to the court. We are not prejudging what the court will do. We are making an application, which I am entitled to do on behalf of the Government.

Mr. Nunziata: It's politically motivated, and you know it.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: It has nothing whatsoever to do with politics. Only a Liberal would say that. You should be ashamed of yourself.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the Minister the following question. It is not a question about House business, it is a question about government policy.

What is the Government's policy on abortion? Six months ago the Supreme Court of Canada invalidated the law. My Leader called on the Government to act promptly to ensure that women received fair and equal treatment across Canada. The opposite has happened.

A three-headed resolution was put forward. It is on the Order Paper. It has been withdrawn, or has it been withdrawn? Where does the Government stand on abortion, and when will we have some action in the House?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the people of Canada want us to deal with this issue.

Mr. Kaplan: Well, deal with it.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: They do not want the Liberal Party and the New Democratic Party making it a partisan political issue. They want Members of Parliament to speak with their own conviction on a matter of conscience.

Our policy is quite clear. We want a free vote on the floor of the House of Commons. The Opposition has been obstructing us in every respect to bring this matter to a resolution. The Government House Leader will be moving very quickly to make sure that we do move and have a chance to debate this issue. I hope there will not be obstructionist tactics on the part of the Opposition with respect to a very complex and sensitive issue that the women of Canada and all people of Canada want resolved by us as parliamentarians.

REFUGEES

UKRAINIAN REFUGEES—ADMISSION TO CANADA

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Immigration I would like to direct my question to the Deputy Prime Minister. There are now more than 200 refugees from Poland, all of Ukrainian origin, in Vienna. They have applied for permission to come to Canada as refugees. They have been receiving support from the Department of External Affairs, but there seems to be some difficulties with the Department of Immigration.

Would the Deputy Prime Minister use his influence to speed up approval of those applications?

[Translation]

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister of State for Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, if you allow me, I will take as notice the question that has just been asked and I will ask my colleague to pursue the matter with the Hon. Member.

[English]

REQUEST FOR EARLY APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, these applications have the support of the Ukrainian-Canadian Committee, and of the Ukrainian-Canadian Immigrant Aid Society. I have been told that the Department has a quota for refugees from eastern Europe of 3,400 per year. Virtually no Ukrainians have come in under this quota.

I would ask the Minister to ask the Minister of Immigration to use that quota to approve these applications as soon as possible.

[Translation]

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister of State (Employment and Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, we have a level of immigration that we accept every year and of course, as a Government, we respect it. As I just said, with respect to this particular case that was just mentioned, I will ask my colleague to follow up.

Oral Questions

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

SPACE AGENCY—MONTREAL—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion or to the Minister responsible for Science and Technology. It concerns the awarding of research and development contracts to Quebec. As months go by, it becomes increasingly clear that Quebec is the federal Government's poor relation. We get the leftovers!

Some Hon. Members: Question!

Mr. Malépart: If we consider the figures for April, only $190,000 out of $13 million; in May, $788,000 out of $14 million. The Quebec Government and even the Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Parizeau, have said that Quebec was not being treated fairly by the federal Government. And we are still waiting for a decision on the space agency.

My question for the two Ministers is this: Is the Government waiting to announce that the space agency will go to Quebec until all contracts have been awarded, which would mean the space agency would only administer contracts being carried out outside Quebec, or is the Government simply waiting for an election to be called so it can put this to political advantage?

[English]

Hon. Frank Oberle (Minister of State (Science and Technology)): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is simply repeating what he has done in the past, and that is to quote selectively the performance of one Department, that is, the Department of Supply and Services. I can tell the Hon. Member that, in terms of contracts for the Province of Québec, in the term that we have been in power Québec has received in the grants area 49 per cent of the total national performance.

It is true that on the contract side it is somewhat less, but the average was 34 per cent. I can tell the Hon. Member that in one month the Department of Supply and Services issued 47 per cent of its total allocations for science and technology to the Province of Québec. It is quite true that in other months the performance has not been as high, but Québec has been treated very well by the federal Government in terms of science and technology.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT MONTREAL BE CHOSEN AS SPACE AGENCY SITE

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, Quebec wants to know who is telling the truth. The Minister has certainly put himself in an awkward situation. Yesterday, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources said at a press conference in Quebec that it was true Quebec was not getting its fair share. And the Hon. Minister just told us we were getting more than we deserve. Quebecers would like to know who is telling the truth. I am convinced that Parizeau, Bourassa, the Mayor of Montreal and the Official Opposition are all telling the truth—that Quebec is not getting its fair share. Why don't you announce right now that the space agency will go to Montreal, with contracts?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, there are certainly a lot of people who are telling the truth, especially the Government. However, sometimes I have my doubts about the Opposition.

If we look at the published statistics, my colleague was quite right. Monthly figures on contributions and contracts for research and development in science and technology across the country vary enormously. I think the Hon. Member will have to admit that according to statistics published in recent years, percentages have varied from very low in certain months to as high as nearly 50 per cent.

If we look at the average federal contributions for research and development to industry, we see that in 1986-87, and the latest figures we have are for that year, Quebec received 34.3 per cent of federal contributions, while Ontario received 28.8 per cent, the Atlantic provinces 8 per cent and the rest 14.3 per cent. For the benefit of the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie, I would like to say that these statistics were provided by Statistics Canada in a report called: Federal Government Science Expenditures by Region 81-82 to 86-87. So I think that the distribution is fair and equitable, and that using monthly statistics only distorts the picture for Canadians.

HOUSING

PUBLIC WORKS—TRANSFER OF LAND TO VAUGHAN MUNICIPALITY

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Minister of Public Works. Public Works Canada is about to transfer 100 acres of land to the municipality of Vaughan just north of Metro Toronto.

In view of the critical shortage of affordable housing in the entire Metro region, I ask the Minister if the Government will reconsider this matter to see if a town of 57,000 people needs 100 acres for its institutions, and if the Government can arrange that a majority of this land will be devoted to affordable housing?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am advised that the land to which the Hon. Member has referred has not yet been sold. As a condition of any sale Public Works is seeking a commitment from the Town of Vaughan that part of those lands will be used for affordable and conventional housing, and an answer is expected from the municipal authority very soon.

PATENTS

PULP AND PAPER MAKING—DE LONG PROCESS

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Hon. Minister of State for Science and Technology. It concerns the patent for the de Long process which has been owned by Canadian Patents and Developments Limited for some seven years now. It has the potential to revolutionize pulp and paper making by making possible, through the process of breaking down cellular fibres, the use of the hardwood so-called weed species.

Since Canadian Patents and Development Limited has held this patent for some seven years, could the Minister explain why no licences have ever been granted to commercialize it?

Hon. Frank Oberle (Minister of State (Science and Technology)): Mr. Speaker, I am familiar with this dossier and I am also familiar with the fact that the inventor has had a licence to commercialize the technology for some time. However, there were some unfulfilled obligations which the inventor had to CPDL which put certain encumbrances upon the transfer of the technology to the private sector.

In any case, we are very much concerned that this technology should be utilized particularly in Canada, since it appears to be revolutionary and beneficial. CPDL, I am informed, has engaged a consultant to give it the advice it needs to bring this matter to a satisfactory conclusion. The consultant's report has now been received and CPDL will act accordingly on the advice.

USE OF TECHNOLOGY

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, since this country has a deficit in pulp and paper machinery and processes, and since we have had expressions of interest in this technology from the U.S.S.R., Italy, and China, will the Minister assure this House that everything will be done to clear away the administrative obstructions to enable the marketing of this technology by Canadians for the benefit of Canadians?

Hon. Frank Oberle (Minister of State (Science and Technology)): Mr. Speaker, I can assure the Hon. Member that whatever we are able to do, that is the Government particularly in the sense of dealing with CPDL, will be done. However, should the case have to be resolved in the courts we would encourage the Crown agency to proceed in that fashion as well.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

TREATMENT OF OBSCENE VIDEO MAKERS

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Solicitor General I would like to ask my question of the Acting Prime Minister.

A year and a half ago the Liberal Party asked the Government to convene an independent inquiry into allegations of sexual harassment in the RCMP. The Government refused and we now see the results of that refusal.

Reports today confirm that almost one year after a female RCMP officer was the subject of a pornographic and an obscene video while she slept, the so-called punishment meted out at this point to her colleagues involved only "a fine and/or counselling". There was not a single day of work lost, nor a single suspension. Does the Government feel that that is an appropriate reaction and response for the activities of sexual harassment existing in the RCMP?

Mr. Murray Cardiff (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows full well a thorough and full investigation was completed by the Commissioner of the RCMP. It was decided that charges were not warranted at this time and the matter, we feel, has been cleared up.

REQUEST FOR INDEPENDENT ASSESSMENT OF SITUATION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, we have a situation where the female officer involved has been forced to transfer out of the Musical Ride. Obviously if she were in that kind of a situation she would not feel too comfortable staying there. Her colleagues haven't had a fine and haven't had a single day lost at work. They have not been suspended.

I want to ask the Government once again whether it feels the response to the obscene video that was prepared by officers in the RCMP, which is basically a fine or counselling, is an appropriate response. If not, will the Government do what the Liberal Party suggested a year and a half ago, and that is to have an independent assessment of the situation of sexual harassment which has been ongoing in the RCMP?

Mr. Murray Cardiff (Parliamentary Secretary to Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, as I indicated previously, an investigation has been completed. There is still the possibility of disciplinary action being taken against the individuals involved. That will be taken care of.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Windsor-Walkerville, a single question.

THE ECONOMY

EXCHANGE VALUE OF DOLLAR—INTEREST RATE LEVELS

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of Finance.

Yesterday in Windsor the Commissioner of Development indicated that several auto parts firms are seriously considering moving to the United States because of the appreciation of the value of the Canadian dollar, presaging the kind of thing that can happen particularly under free trade arrangements.

When will the Minister of Finance take action to do something about the interests rates which are elevating the value of the dollar, disadvantaging Canadian manufacturers in continuing their operations in Canada, and encouraging them to move to the United States at the cost of Canadian jobs?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think that if the Hon. Member would look at the level of interest rates today relative to the United States and compare that interest rate spread to any time during the past eight or nine years, he will find that that is not out of line. My understanding is that the average for that period was about 1.40 per cent. The spread now is between 1.50 per cent and 1.60 per cent for the last number of months. We are in the same sort of ballpark as we have been.

I think that if people are looking at moving out of the country, there are other reasons. I would also caution the Hon. Member that, in the discussions that I have had with a number of manufacturers, they feel that they can be quite competitive at this level of the Canadian dollar because there are number of other considerations in the competitive position besides simply the level of the Canadian dollar.

Mr. McCurdy: Why should they have to?

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the House Leader for a statement of the business he intends to call for the coming week.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as the Order Paper as of today has outlined, we will again be proceeding this afternoon with Bill C-129, the Air Canada Act, followed by Bill C-121, the reorganization and divestiture of Eldorado Nuclear and certain Acts in consequence thereof; followed by Bill C-110, third reading of the Canadian International Trade Tribunal; followed by Bill C-103, the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency; followed by Bill C-126, consideration of report stage of the Bretton Woods Bill; followed by Bill C-82, the lobbyists Bill; followed by Bill C-30, report stage of the National Parks Act and Bill C-73, an Act to provide for the implementation of an agreement respecting Indian lands in Ontario.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I note the Government said nothing about whether it intends to deal with the question of abortion either through the motion it has on the Order Paper or otherwise. I ask this not in any confrontational way but to seek clarification in terms of the operation of the House and because of the great interest in the how the Government will deal with this subject on the part of the public.

As the Government House Leader will recall, the Deputy Government House Leader said last week when I asked this question that he intended to call the Government's motion on abortion on Monday with a view to enabling any procedural issues to be argued and ruled on by the Speaker. Then it was well known and understood that the Government would call a motion for formal debate, if I am not mistaken Thursday of this week, today. Then on Monday morning I, and I presume my NDP counterpart, received a telephone message hours before the House was to open saying that the Government was not going to call the motion. The Deputy Government House Leader later said to the press and to myself that, in effect, the matter was going back to the government caucus.

I go through this because I want to provide an explanation as to why I am asking the question and also to make clear that contrary to what was said by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) in Question Period, there was no obstruction on the part of the Official Opposition preventing the Government from calling this matter for debate or bringing this matter for debate. In fact, we do not have the authority or ability to obstruct even if we wanted to because the Government controls absolutely the use of government time and designates what measures will be discussed.

I repeat, I am not raising this in a confrontational way. I think, however, that I should try to clear the air on this subject so as to give the Government a chance to clear the air because of the perplexity on the part of many people over what has happened on this subject this week as well as the interest of the public at large in having some clarification.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to respond.

Clearly it had been our intention, and it still is our intention, to bring forth the resolution to have the abortion issue debated. One of the reasons there was reluctance to proceed was that clearly both opposition Parties served notice that they would fight this issue on procedural grounds. That is a fact because in a preliminary way they clearly served notice that this would be fought on procedural grounds.

• (1510)

Having regard to that fact, the Deputy Government House Leader is in the process of organizing a meeting with House

Leaders. He is out of Ottawa today, but he will be around tomorrow. He hopes to meet with House Leaders to talk about this issue in more detail, to see if once again we can get some consensus and some understanding as to how we might proceed so that we do not have to get involved in a procedural wrangle. Quite frankly, we have always tried to approach important issues of this nature on a consensus point of view, particularly if there has to be some modification of the Standing Orders. We would hope that we could illicit that same kind of co-operation from both opposition Parties. That is the spirit in which the Deputy House Leader will be approaching, once again, the House Leaders of the two opposition Parties.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I want to say to the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) that when the motion was first put on the Order Paper, it was very clearly a highly irregular motion. I think it is the first time in history that it has ever been put on the Order Paper in that form.

Naturally, all Parliamentarians want to ensure that it would be procedurally acceptable. In our humble evaluation, since it had no precedent, since it went against the Standing Orders in so many different ways, we felt that this was an inappropriate way for the Government to deal with this issue. If the Government wants to deal with the issue in the form of a motion, I suggest that motions can be put that are procedurally acceptable, or legislation can be introduced that is also procedurally acceptable.

I want to make it very clear that the Opposition does not control the business in the House of Commons. The Government introduces Bills or motions and proceeds, and we respond. I want to make that point, because the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) is trying to give the impression that we are somehow stopping this advance.

While I am on my feet, I want to ask the Deputy Prime Minister this. Earlier in the week the Deputy House Leader indicated that tax reform was now being considered for debate prior to the summer recess. I noticed that the Deputy Prime Minister did not mention that in his outline presented today. Can he either confirm that that is on the agenda or indicate whether that is off the list of legislation that the Government wishes passed prior to the summer recess?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, to respond to the first part of the NDP House Leader's remarks, if I could take his remarks as an invitation to once again seek a consensus as to how we might proceed with an abortion resolution, I would be very pleased about that. I am sure the Deputy Government House Leader will want to explore that with him and with the opposition House Leader of the Liberal Party.

Second, with regards to the tax reform measures, I have simply outlined what I consider to be the order of business until next Thursday. I understand that there have been some discussions between the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and/or his representatives, and representatives of the critics of the other two Parties, about the prospect of moving the tax reform legislation ahead. Hopefully, if we could arrive at some parameters of time to move it into committee so that the committee study could be proceeded with, that would be in the best interests of all Members of this House. Naturally, we will be exploring that, and I suspect that the Deputy Government House Leader will be exploring that with his counterparts when they meet, hopefully tomorrow.

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw to the attention of the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) what has been a surprise to many, and that is the disappearance from the Order Paper of Bill C-79. I am talking about amendments to the Elections Act. There is an understanding between Parties that we want to plug the loopholes that allow one to drive a truckload of unreported election expenses—

An Hon. Member: All expenses have to be reported.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): I thought there was an agreement. There is already a proposal that has been arrived at by an ad hoc committee of the three Parties. There is a letter that has been sent by the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Atikokan (Mr. Angus) to which this Party also subscribes. Can we have the assurance that these loopholes in the Elections Act will be plugged before we go into a national election? We would like to know what is happening with Bill C-79.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I am glad that the Hon. Member has raised that. On May 3 I wrote to both House Leaders of the two opposition Parties and I set out a proposal, including a new definition of election expenses which would be incorporated consistent with the recommendations of the Chief Electoral Officer. This proposition was turned down by the other two Parties. We are still prepared. I outlined eight different conditions, and I refer the Hon. Member to the letter.

An Hon. Member: Make it public.

Mr. Mazankowski: Because there was no agreement with regard to the definition of election expenses, I said fine, let us withdraw that for the time being but let us move on the other items with which we agree and then we can deal with the election expenses at that particular time.

Mr. Cassidy: Do you want to leave a loophole for the election?

Mr. Mazankowski: That is totally incorrect, and you should not say that. The Hon. Member from Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) takes great pride in speaking from his seat without any knowledge of the facts. The facts are here. I am prepared to table the letter, which clearly outlines our willingness to deal with the new definition of election expenses which would clarify the loophole to which the Hon. Member refers. If the Hon. Member is suggesting that we should open up the election expenses to include office equipment, rental expenses, after the close of polls, and advertising taking place after the closing of the polls and transfers between registered Parties, candidates and local associations, and expenses incurred by candidates seeking nomination, which would have the effect of driving up election expenses and thereby asking the public Treasury to fund more of the election expenses, if he wants to create more of a boondoggle and a haven for people seeking office at the expense of the taxpayer, we are not going to accept that. We are prepared to debate it in committee and we are prepared to debate it on the floor of the House.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I would like to come back to the letter of eight points that the Deputy Prime Minister has just referred to, and remind him that a subsequent letter by the Hon. Deputy House Leader for the Government asked us to pass Bill C-79 and offered only seven conditions this time. It was seven concessions and not eight, which is a new definition of election expenses. Why do we not deal with a new definition of election expenses, or have the Government clearly admit that it wants to be able to overspend as it wants in the coming election?

Mr. Mazankowski: Because you were not prepared to deal with it.

Mr. Speaker: I will hear the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister in a moment. I do want to say to Hon. Members that this exchange, which has followed the usual Thursday afternoon question concerning the Government's intentions for the next few days, is getting far beyond that usual point of order. I will hear the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister, but I am not going to hear Hon. Members debate endlessly on matters which have really nothing to do with the appropriate question that was put to the Government and to the reply of the Government. The Hon. Deputy Prime Minister.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I want to clarify only two points, and that is clearly that the letter of May 3 included a proposal to incorporate a new definition of election expenses pursuant to the recommendations of the Chief Electoral Officer. Because there was disagreement with regard to that, I again sought the co-operation of both opposition Parties to see if there could be a consideration given with regard to moving on all of those elements which we agreed on, with the exception of the election expenses.

It was only in an attempt to move it ahead. There was no agreement with regard to the proposal on election expenses. We are prepared to move in either direction and I am prepared to put in the legislation, either in the form of amendment or in the form of a new Bill, a new definition for election expenses, which I hope would be supported by all Parties.

Mr. Speaker: I am inviting Hon. Members to meet in the lobby to carry on this discussion. There are other Hon. Members with important matters. I would recognize the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Revenue (Mrs. Mailly) on a question of privilege.

• (1520)

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: I would prefer to hear this question of privilege. I have delayed it for some time.

PRIVILEGE

ALLEGED INTIMIDATION ATTEMPT WITH REGARD TO THE HON. MEMBER FOR GATINEAU

Ms. Claudy Mailly (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I wish to raise today the question of privilege I gave you notice of, and I quote Beauchesne, the Compendium of Canadian Parliamentary Practice, Fourth Edition, citation 110, page 100.

> On the 26 of February 1701, the House of Commons of the United Kingdom resolved that to print or publish any libels reflecting upon any member of the House for or relating to his service therein was a high violation of the rights and privileges of the House. But to constitute a breach of privilege a libel upon a member must concern his character or conduct in his capacity as a member and the conduct or language on which the libel is based must be actions performed or words uttered in the actual transaction of the business of the House.

And further, Mr. Speaker, citation 111, paragraph (1), states that one of those breaches of privilege is the following:

> (1) Wilful misrepresentation of the proceedings of members is an offence of the same character as a libel.

And further on, citation 113 states that:

> An attack in a newspaper article is not a breach of privilege, unless it comes within the definition of privileges above given, and then . . .

. . . and further on it is said:

> . . . a member is bound to lay on the Table the newspaper in which the article complained of appears.

. . . and a bit further, Mr. Speaker, in citation 114, one reads:

> Sir Robert Atkyns, sometime Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, says that "the Commons' right and privilege so far extends, that not only what is done in the very House, sitting the Parliament, but whatever is done relating to them, during the Parliament and sitting the Parliament . . .

And the following is mentioned among others:

> . . . where a member sends to a minister the draft of a question . . .

or there is a communication between a member and a minister.

So, basing my argument on these articles of our practice, Mr. Speaker, I want to ask you to bring your judgment to bear on a question which affects me. The Public Service Alliance of Canada delivered a press release to my House of Commons office on July 7, 1988 which it distributed to all the media in the region and which bears the heading: "Memorandum to reporters/Editors". The title: "Language teachers are pressuring a Conservative Member." The by-line is: Ottawa. "federal government language teachers will personally deliver hundreds of postcards signed by supporters to Claudy Mailly, federal Conservative Member for the riding of Gatineau. The postcards are addressed to Ms. Mailly and bear the following message: "Yes, I support federal government language teachers in their negotiations with Treasury Board to maintain their preparation time and I ask you to intervene in their favour."

The text continues, and I now come to the purpose of my intervention:

"Ms. Mailly is a Federal Conservative Member in the National Capital Region who has not supported the teachers." The text then states that the language teachers will be holding their demonstration on July 6, on the eve, then, of the day this press release was delivered to me—at 2 o'clock pm, at 300 Notre-Dame Street, Gatineau, at Claudy Mailly's riding office, and there follows a phone number where additional information could be obtained.

So I would like to submit this document. First, not only do I find it an act of intimidation directed at me, but they want me to intervene, Mr. Speaker, in a collective agreement and to take sides with one of the parties.

Second, Mr. Speaker, what is even more serious is that it is false. Not only did I support the teachers when they called me during this demonstration, but CHOT Television filmed and broadcast it. I supported the teachers then, not as an intervenor in the collective agreement, because I know that it is my duty not to intervene in such matters, but as a Member of Parliament, by telling them that I was going to speak on their behalf to the President of the Treasury Board (Miss Carney) regarding their demands for preparation time and language of negotiations.

We were told that the negotiations were held entirely in English. So I interceded with the President of the Treasury Board. The Alliance was aware of this because I told the Alliance representative who was in my office. Television and radio reported these facts, but the weekly newspaper Le Dimanche Outaouais, of which I will table a copy, published a photo under which it says, "Demonstration at Claudy Mailly's Office: About thirty teachers of French as a second language working for the federal Government demonstrated in front of MP Claudy Mailly's office last Wednesday. Ms. Mailly is the only Member of Parliament who has not supported this group of 700 teachers who have been without a collective agreement for two years. The demonstrators gave 1,200 post cards of support from the people of Gatineau to Ms. Mailly's executive assistant in her absence." It does not mention at all that I spoke to them . . . Furthermore, I was away, Mr. Speaker, because I was in the House to vote on Bill C-72, which was really my duty as I saw it.

They took advantage of it, knowing very well that I fully supported Bill C-72, and that I would earn a reputation as a defender of French language rights. They chose that time to demonstrate in front of my office, without warning me. But despite that, I took the trouble to telephone the representative. They still distributed the erroneous communiqué and left it at my office.

I later wrote, Mr. Speaker, to the Public Service Alliance, to tell them that if they did not publicly apologize in a press release, because they knew they were wrong and admitted it, I would have to raise a question of privilege because I find it terrible that one would want to intimidate a Member of Parliament in the exercise of her duties in that way.

So I submit the case to you, Mr. Speaker, because I know that election fever is in the air and I would not want irresponsible journalists who do not check their sources to use what the Public Service Alliance has said with other unions, that they have blacklisted me to defeat me in my riding and that they have already begun to work at it. I find that is intimidation against me and besides, Mr. Speaker, if anyone defends francophones well, I do!

Mr. Della Noce: Mr. Speaker, during Question Period, the House Leader of the NDP—

Mr. Speaker: Is it another point of order?

Mr. Della Noce: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: Later. I listened with interest to the Hon. Member's statement and of course I will consider all comments and reserve my decision until perhaps next week.

Ms. Mailly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I confess myself a bit frustrated. I had hoped as a private Member to be able to raise a question about a private Member's Bill, Bill C-273, during the course of the House business question which took place a few minutes ago. I was on my feet on two or three occasions and was unable to raise the question.

I did send a note to the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) who is handling the House business question today. Unless he is in the government lobby, it will be a bit difficult to put the question to him. Perhaps the Parliamentary Secretary who is here can respond.

Perhaps the Parliamentary Secretary could say what is now the Government's intention with respect to the request which has been made jointly by the Hon. Member for Ottawa West (Mr. Daubney) as the sponsor of the Bill, the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) and myself and which was communicated to the House Leader and Deputy Prime Minister last week by letter offering co-operation so that this Bill could be brought forward as a Government Order or so that some other means be found in order to ensure that it would be debated and pass third reading before the possibility of an adjournment leading to a summer or fall election.

• (1530)

Is it now the Government's intention to expedite the Bill so that action on political rights, which the Conservative Party promised in 1984, as well as my Party and I think the Liberals, will be taken and the Bill will be passed on third reading and into the Senate prior to the adjournment which may take place at almost any time?

Mr. Speaker: Just before I call on the Parliamentary Secretary, I want to say to the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre that I apologize for not having seen him earlier. My concern was that the exchange that was taking place was going well beyond its normal purpose and I do ask the Hon. Member to accept my apologies.

Mr. Jim Hawkes (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, this is a subject dear to my heart. I served on the committee that dealt with the Private Members' Bill and I have great confidence that the committee worked well in a non-partisan fashion and came up with a piece of legislation that has a lot to commend itself to this House and to the nation.

I think the Government has made its position quite clear historically and perhaps I could repeat it. The Government is reluctant to intrude on the privileges of the House and of Members. There have been some very substantial advances in the handling of Private Members' Business which came about as a consequence of parliamentary reform in 1984-85. The Government would not want to be seen as dictating to the House in any fashion what the House should do about an initiative from a Member through Private Members' Hour. I think that has been explained before and the best I can do with respect to this particular intervention is to repeat it.

If the Hon. Member wants me to seek further clarification from the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski), I would be glad to do that. However, the House must remain master of its own destiny and procedures, in particular when it comes to Private Members' Hour.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I will be brief. I find that a little bit frustrating as well given that the Government chose not to present its own legislation over the course of the last three or four years and then let it be known it felt it was fulfilling its commitment through the Private Members' Bill which, as the Parliamentary Secretary said, was dealt with in a very responsible and co-operative way by all three Parties.

Could I have an assurance from the Parliamentary Secretary, speaking on behalf of the Government, that the Government, that is the Ministry and the Parliamentary Secretaries, will not deny unanimous consent if the Hon. Member for Ottawa West (Mr. Daubney) or some other Member were to seek unanimous consent for this matter to come forward through whatever procedural device is required so that it can be debated and pass third reading next week? Can that assurance be given so we will not have a situation where, in its anxiety to respect Private Members' Business, the Government winds up frustrating an initiative which is important to a lot of people and which is just on the brink of being adopted by this House, being threatened only by the clock.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, I thought the Hon. Member went a little outside the line of questioning when he referred to the Government not bringing forward a Bill of its own. I would like to put that in context.

The country was in a great deal of trouble in September, 1984. This Government brought forward more legislation and dealt with it more efficiently than any Parliament in the history of this country. In June, 1988, alone we faced 19 dilatory motions which resulted in the wasting of the House's time with votes and so on. Those motions were put by his Party. With a little more co-operation we might have been able to deal with even more legislation.

I just wanted that on the record. To blame the Government for not solving all the nation's problems in four years is a bit much. With a little more co-operation and fewer dilatory motions and filibusters, we could have solved a few more. However, we will go to the people and see who gets to solve them for the next four years.

On the specific comment concerning this Bill and the Government's intentions, I repeat: The Government has not interfered with Private Members' Business in this Parliament, that is, the notion of Private Members' Business. To ask whether the Government will refuse unanimous consent is to imply something that simply does not need dealing with. The Government does not intend to interfere with Private Members' Business. The nature of this House, the precedents, and principles related to Private Members' Business are very important.

Mr. Cassidy: And you are killing the Bill.

Mr. Hawkes: The Member says "You are killing the Bill". The Government will not interfere with Private Members' Business.

Mr. David Daubney (Ottawa West): Mr. Speaker, it might be helpful if I were to advise the House of some developments relating to this Bill which stands in my name since the matter was raised, I guess, a week ago today.

As I understand it, there have been discussions in the caucuses of all three Parties and it would appear there might very well be unanimous consent to have this matter dealt with as if it were a Government order. However, I have also had discussions today with the Government House Leader, and understanding that this is a somewhat unprecedented request, at least under parliamentary reform, and also understanding that he would like a period of time to discuss it with his Cabinet colleagues, I would like to take this opportunity of indicating in a friendly and informal way, give notice really, that I intend, perhaps on Monday of next week, to seek unanimous consent, after the Ministry has had an opportunity to examine my Bill and determine whether or not it would be in the public interest, to have it adopted as a government item.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Don Valley East on a point of order.

POINTS OF ORDER

ALLEGED MISQUOTE IN MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) attributed a comment to me in this week's Maclean's magazine. He said it as though I had said the cost of the submarines would boggle the mind. I want to put the record straight. That is not a quote of what I said. I did say that some of my constituents have some genuine concerns about the cost. I did say that some of my constituents have some concerns about whether or not these submarines might be armed some day. I also went on to say that what we really need as a government is better education and more information for the public. I would use a word of caution at this stage about this program as well, and I am supportive of it, but that we do proceed but not too quickly. The public needs to be well informed on this as we proceed.

ALLEGED INCOMPLETE QUOTE IN MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE
