SPECIAL SERVICES IN FAIRVILLE CHURCHES

Three Fairville churches held special services yesterday, the Anglican, Methodist and Baptist and owing to the summer-like weather congregations were larger than usual.

In the Church of The Good Shepherd Harvest Home was celebrated both morning and evening. The church was specially decorated. Large bundles of wheat testified to bountiful crops, the reading desk was banked with fruit and flowers while the rear pillars were hidden beneath stalks of corn. Other vegetables, and bright flowers nicely arranged, added to the attractiveness of the interior. Rev. W. P. Dunham preached a thanksgiving sermon in the morning emphazing phases of the war as affecting us but little while Europe suffered agony. He also alluded to the local effort to assist stricken Belgium and asked his congregation to answer the appeal. At the evening service Rev. G. F. Scovil of Carleton officiated.

The Fairville Methodist church observed "Brotherhood Sunday" yesterday. The first meeting of that organization will be this evening to plan the winter's work.

Rev. Gilbert Earle in the morning preached impressively making special mention of the place of sacrifice in human life and bringing the question down to the war where our representatives of liberty and justice were undergoing trials almost beyond physical endurance. Contrasting their intense attitude toward life with that of the people round about us Mr. Earle asked if we were really worth the herculean task of the battles of the Mons and Aisne. Today very little change was noticeable in the general demeanor of the populace when such sacrifices were being made for them on French soil.

In the evening, Rev. Mr. Lane, chaplain to the first Canadian contingent in the Boer war, spoke specially to the brotherhood and was attentively followed during a very practical discourse.

The Baptist Sunday school held a rally service last evening before a very large gathering. Walter C. Ross, superintendent, presided and Misses Helen Camp and Grace Sime were on the committee. Printed programmes were circulated and announced the following order of service:

Processional, Marching to Victory; invocation and Lord's prayer; address of welcome, Mary Reed; song, "A Child's Thanksgiving," primary; recitation, "The Robin's Sermon," James Splane; recitation, "Mr. Squirrel's Complaint," Silas Splane; dialogue, "Two Little Men," Jack Gunter and Roland Hamilton; solo, "God, Make My Life a Little Light," Edith Beardsley; "Mrs. Bunnie's Housekeeping." Lily Schofield; "Regret," Stanley Ross; chorus, "Join the Reaper's Band." The order of the smiling face, Ernest Huestis; "Two Points of View," Wm. Harris; cantata, "The Songs of the Flowers"; Summer, Elizabeth Sime; Autumn, Helen Masson; "Our Flag," 6 boys; 23rd Psalm by Olive McCormick; response, beginners; exercise, "Earth's Harvest Time, eight girls; duet, "Once There was a Birdie," Enid Schofield and Audrey Hamilton; "The Frown's Companion," Gordon Ross; "A Persevering Student," Ida Howard; pastor's address, "The Parent's Place in Sunday School Work"; presentation of pins and diplomas; primary valedictory by James Estrabrooks; junior welcome, Gladys Sweet; exercise "The Choice"; solo, Miss Sime; benediction and vesper hymn.

The collection which was substantial will go towards the funds of the Young People's League which is fitting up a barn in rear of church as gymnasium and game room.

The British Postmaster General's report for 1912-13 states that the net postal revenue was £5,993,613—an increase of £448,761 over the previous year's figures.

General Sir James Macleod Fraser-Tytler, G. C. B. who has just celebrated his 92nd birthday, is probably the oldest Indian Mutiny officer still alive.

WAR HAS BROUGHT WAVE OF SOBRIETY TO RUSSIAN PEOPLE

A feature of the world struggle is the serious and exalted temper of the Russian people—an utter contrast to the indifference or aversion with which they regarded the war with Japan. That was an adventure into which the government blundered in carrying out a policy in which the people took no interest; this is a fight of the people. The wonderful scene at Moscow at the opening of hostilities showed that "the most religious people in Europe" entered upon the war as upon an act of religion. After the war had been in progress about three weeks the well-informed Petrograd correspondent of the London Morning Post made some striking remarks:—

A Wave of Sobriety.

The term during which all the drink shops of every class in Russia were closed under mobilization orders expires a week today. The extraordinary sobriety witnessed throughout this period inspires reformers with the hopes that the people may be brought to realize its advantages. It must be understood that this sobriety is less due to the mere closing of the drink shops, which has always been done before without materially affecting drunkenness, than to the sudden consciousness of the people themselves that in the face of a great national crisis the sacrifice is just and right. Upon this consciousness the reformers build, and the government proposes to extend the absolute prohibition of the sale of alcohol for another month. The new police orders forbid the serving of drink even in restaurants except as an accompaniment to food, and absolutely prohibits its sale in bottles for taking away or the supply of persons who have had enough already. All places trading in alcohol in any form are shut and sealed, and new supplies can be got only on the production of a police certificate.

The enormous revenue from the drink monopoly, which amounted in 1913 to $40,000,000, is by far the largest item in the Russian budget, but it is recognized that even its total sacrifice would be rapidly compensated by the increased earning power of the whole nation. During the whole period only eight cases of drunkenness have been detained. The hospitals alone usually have several score of cases of derilium tremens. While the ordinary cases of drunkenness are beyond estimation, as they are merely flung into the cells and released when sobered. During the prohibition there have been only five cases in the Hospital of the Incurables, who made themselves mad by drinking methylated spirits, furniture polish, etc.

The General says:
If your dealer offers you an unknown brand of roofing, ask him who stands behind it and whether the manufacturer is a responsible concern. If he doesn't know, or if he refuses to give you the information, you are justified in buying elsewhere. Dealers who handle

PUBLICITY
Sure Cure for Corporate Diseases.
The startling disclosures of corporate mismanagement in the last ten years have brought about a general feeling that publicity of corporation affairs is both necessary and desirable for the future well-being of all corporations. This publicity may be affected in many ways and should give the public as well as the stockholders such information as will eliminate all possible chance for corruption and mismanagement.
In the past, managers of some corporations have operated their business in a more or less arrogant fashion, persistently refusing to make their acts known to the public or even to their stockholders. In most instances if these operations had been made public at the time, many of the ills from which they are now suffering would not have occurred, and millions of dollars of investment would have been saved.
The effect of corporate mismanagement is greatly magnified, however, when its discovery comes too late by governmental investigation. Generally speaking, if the facts were voluntarily made public, or if they were made known through established methods of publicity, in the regular course of business, the mismanagement of the corporation would never occur or it could be remedied immediately and the bad effect of it would be comparatively small.
And so it is with many houses of business—in the field of commerce and manufacture. They are afraid of publicity—afraid to have their factories examined and to let purchasers verify statements or facts concerning the goods. The only conclusion to be reached in such case is that the manufacturer has something to conceal, which, if discovered, would not bear out his assertions.
Publicity in relation to all business matters is the best cure for their evils, just as light and air kill the germs of disease.

RHEIMS

One can hardly think of Rheims without recalling St. Remi (Remigius) and his "mitis depone colla, Sicamber!" The city was old, indeed, in the time of Clovis. It was a Gallic capital of an important district, before the Romans had become masters in Gaul and for five centuries at least had been a thriving centre of industrial, commercial and political life. But it was as one of the most notable ecclesiastical cities of the fifth century, ruled by an illustrious and venerated bishop, that it had been selected for the ceremony in which Clovis was the central figure. It was when he strode up to the front in all his panoply as a Frankish warrior that Bishop Remi reminded him of the demeanor and the spirit in which he should approach a rite so solemn. So he was clad in a long white garment and his mail and casque were laid aside. Then the warrior bowed his head in submission to an authority which he had hitherto denied, undertook new duties and was admitted to new privileges.

It will be recalled that it was for the baptism of Clovis that the celestial dove brought the sacred phial containng the oil with which the Kings of France were wont to be consecrated. One of the prerogatives of the archbishops of Rheims was the consecration of France's kings and they exercised it in due course from the time of Philip Augustus to that of Charles X. Of the cathedral Taine says: "It is a pile absolutely out of the common; in richness and elegance far above the cathedrals of Paris, Tours and Strasbourg. It blossoms and flourishes like Lante's luxuriant tree of mystic flowers." Of St. Remi's church he says that the main part of it is about half a century older than the cathedral. In his characterization of the people of Champagne, Taine indulges in one of those exaggerations in which his History of English Literature abounds. He then deals generally with French provincial life, and closes the chapter on Rheims by a quotation from Karl Hillebrand. In his "Frankreich und die Franzosen" Hillebrand says: "France is superior to Germany in its aptitude for association . . . France has more traditions and codes of honor, politeness and good breeding. . . It is the same in England, thanks to the antiquity of their culture and political existence." And all this comes under the heading of "Rheims."

Following a cow which had developed a habit of disappearing every morning and coming home in the evening without her usual supply of milk, James Wilson of Greensburg, Penn., discovered that the cow was raising a motherless fawn.

Ceilings that look very rough and manifest a tendency to peel should be gone over with a solution of one ounce of alum to one quart of water. This will remove the superfluous lime, and render the ceiling white.
