PROF. LOUDON TESTIFIES

PRINCIPAL OF VARSITY HEARD BY THE COMMISSION.

It Looks Now As If the Complaining Students Would Have Shown More Judgment Had They Taken Davy Crockett's Advise and Been Sure They Were Right Before Going Ahead.

President Loudon was put on the stand to answer his accusers at yesterday's sitting of the University Commission, and his testimony will be continued to-day.

When the commission opened objection was again raised that the charges against the faculty were not specific enough, and Mr. Riddell responded to the effect that it was well known that the students had been refused a commission until they were prepared to lay specific charges, and when the commission was granted at President Loudon's request the students had again declined to furnish specific charges, but he had finally been instructed by one undergraduate to frame the charges as he had done. His clients still took the view that the charges as made against Prof. Mavor were sufficiently specific, and he was instructed to refuse to frame them in any different or more explicit form than as at present laid. He was, however, prepared to continue the other two branches of the enquiry, in case the commission should find against him on the charges made with reference to Prof. Mavor.

Mr. Scott replied that it was quite impossible for him to deal with these charges as at present made. His clients were constantly asking him what steps they should take to refute the charges, and he was placed in a rather embarrassing position by absence of more definite allegations than those now before the commission. As there had, however, been references made at various times since the investigation commenced to certain members of the staff, he desired to call a gentleman who could give a valuable opinion as to the ability and standing of the persons thus affected.

Prof. Ashley Testifies.

Prof. W. J. Ashley was then sworn. He said he had considerable experience in educational matters. He had been a fellow in Lincoln College, Oxford, and Professor of Political Economy in the University of Toronto from 1888 to 1892. He was now Professor of Economic History in Harvard University. He had been present during the progress of the present investigation, and had heard the references to Prof. Mavor, a gentleman whom he knew well.

"What is the position and standing of Prof. Mavor in the economic world?"

"Prof. Mavor is certainly among the ten or twelve most distinguished English economists, and on two very difficult subjects, namely, the relief of the poor, and the subject of railway administration, he is one of the three or four most eminent English writers. If the commission will permit me I will make a statement of my opinions and of the grounds upon which those opinions are based."

Permission having been given Prof. Ashley made the following statement: "I was in England in the summer of 1892, after I resigned the professorship here, and I made it my business to consult economists as to the persons best qualified to fill the position then vacant. I consulted especially Mr. James Bonner, one of the most distinguished economists of the day, and he mentioned Mr. Mavor's name as a man of ability and growing reputation. I had already been very favorably impressed by an article in The Economic Review, on the Scotch railway strike of the previous year. The article struck me as being extremely well arranged, and as showing a great amount of business and financial knowledge. Accordingly I wrote to him and had an interview with him and discussed his academic career. Upon the impression so formed I gave a high opinion of his attainments to the Ontario Government. In the year of which I speak, 1892, Mr. Mavor was entrusted by the British Board of Trade with an inquiry into the methods of dealing with the poor in vogue on the Continent, and he prepared a report which was subsequently printed and pronounced of great value.

A Learned, Careful and Original Economist.

"Last year, by request, he contributed to The Harvard Quarterly Journal of Economics a paper upon the English railway rates question, and that article proved to be substantial and well arranged and contains an entirely original application of certain well-known principles of economics to railway administration. I have read these articles myself, and they have without doubt increased the reputation of Mr. Mavor as a learned, careful and original economist. If it is in order I would like to make a similar statement as to my knowledge of Prof. Wrong."

The witness also expressed a high personal opinion of Prof. Mavor's ability, and considered him fully qualified to fill the chair he at present occupies. Of Prof. Wrong he gave a hight opinion as well. He had directed his studies at Oxford in 1892. Prof. Wrong was engaged at that time in original research in the Bodleian Library, where witness was engaged in connection with a book he was then writing. He was with him for weeks and then formed a very high opinion of his originality and judgment. He had also read the earlier chapters of a work on Canadian history, which Prof. Wrong is writing, and this had given him warrant for writing a second testimonial on Prof. Wrong's ability.

To Mr. Riddell witness said he had never heard Prof. Mavor lecture and admitted that the opinion of the students was one important test of a man's ability as a professor. He thought the council had acted too leniently in passing over the earlier writings of Mr. Tucker, and that it did well to recognize the official responsibility for what appeared in Varsity. He thought Tucker, from what he could learn, had wilfully made himself a scapegoat. He was, however, of the general opinion that it was best to leave the college press to itself and rely on the judgment and honor of the students.

Dr. I. H. Cameron of the medical faculty testified as to President Loudon's integrity and ability.

President Loudon.

President Loudon was put on the stand at 12 o'clock, and continued under examination by his counsel, Mr. Blake, until 5. He related the fact that he had entered the University in 1858, and had taken his degree in 1862. In 1863 he was appointed mathematical tutor, in 1864 classical tutor as well; in 1865, adding to his other duties those of dean of residence; in 1875 he was made professor of mathematics and philosophy, and resigned the post of dean in 1876; in 1887 he became professor of physics, and in 1892 succeeded to the late Sir Daniel Wilson as President of the University. There were 9 or 10 affiliated institutions and four federated colleges in connection with Toronto University, the vast majority of the students being from 16 to 19 years of age, with a number of all ages, up to 48.

The Suppression of Hazing.

Mr. Blake then went on to question the witness on the matter of the suppression of hazing. To this Mr. Riddell made strenuous objection, stating that his clients did not pretend for one moment that the council had been otherwise than right in suppressing hazing. The commission maintained, however, that as one of the student witnesses had seemed to feel aggrieved on the matter, the evidence should be heard. President Loudon testified that Sir Daniel Wilson had had great trouble with the students on this account, and had once been obliged to call out the police. It was a vice peculiar to residence. Since he had taken the leadership, his principal difficulty had been in the suppression of "hustles," organized to "eliminate the cheek of the first-year men." On one occasion he had turned the hose on the hustlers and they retreated.

"They'd read about the flood," commented Mr. Blake.

A vast number of details were gone into and a great number of other matters, already familiar to the public, were taken up and related, but nothing new was elicited. He gave the history of the council's dealing with Tucker, and said he had informed him that he could not write on his exams, whereupon Mr. Tucker said it was an injustice, and questioned the accuracy of his opinion. Witness swore that he acted entirely on behalf of the council in the matter.

"What was your own reason for dealing with Varsity and the editor as you did?"

"I considered that it was not in the interest of the University that such articles should be published. I thought it disastrous, both to the institution and to the formation of student character."

Witness further characterized the suggestion that he was a party to the destruction of the shed on Varsity Lawn as absurd.

The Political Science Club Difficulty.

With regard to the Political Science Club difficulty, the President said the council thought they had been made responsible for the club's program by the submission of it to them. The faculty felt that it would give offence to the University's supporters. Prof. Mavor struck off the names on learning of these objections.

Relative to the Jury matter the witness explained that until it became a question of discipline, it was his opinion that it was not in the interest of the University that he should lecture within its walls, and that he had had the same opinion eight years ago. His basis for such a view was the fact that Jury was not acceptable to the related institutions. The college council was bound by law and honor to respect the feelings of those related institutions. There was a larger general body whose feelings must be considered before those of the arts students. Several other members of the council had taken the same view.

As to his statement that he objected to Jury because he was a notorious Grit and agitator, he said that he would have objected to a Conservative politician on the same grounds. There was extreme danger of a politician's dragging in politics in Addressing the students. It was, however, not on that ground that the matter was dealt with in the council, but on no other ground whatever than that the Political Science Club had published a program different from that approved by the council.

Prof. Dale's Dismissal.

"Had you anything to do with the dismissal of Prof. Dale?" asked Mr. Blake.

Witness replied that his attention had first been called to Prof. Dale's letter by the Government, but was not pressed for the details of the conference. Later he swore that he had nothing whatever to do with his dismissal.

With regard to the alleged threat he had made to suppress Varsity, the witness said he had left the students at perfect liberty to publish it down town. He had first become aware that the students lacked confidence in him and that he lacked powers of conciliation since the investigation began.

"What do you say of the causes which led to this friction, Mr. President?"

"The dissatisfaction with the action of the council with regard to the gymnasium, the refusal to approve the program of the Political Science Club and the suspension of Mr. Tucker."

"Is that all?"

"Nothing, except perhaps similar actions of the council in previous years, the residence matter, the shed matter and the suppression of hazing and hustling."

Residence Difficulty of 1892.

The residence difficulty of 1892 was taken up. The witness related that when he became president of 39 gentlemen resident there only 16 were undergraduates; he swept all the outsiders out and filled residence with the undergraduates, for whom it was originally intended.

On the matter of the locking up of the medical students, witness emphatically swore that he had given no orders to lock up the biological building; he had simply stationed servants at the doors to prevent Tucker entering it.

He had always believed himself desirous of smoothing over difficulties, and had never desired to entrap students; furthermore, he had never made wittingly a misstatement in connection with the matters at issue between the students and himself. He had never had anything to do with the editorials in Toronto newspapers.

Statistics were afterwards put in to show that the number of students in arts, medicine and engineering had increased in five years from 813 to 1317. Letters to show that the standing of students in their post-graduate courses at other institutions was unusually high were also laid before the commission.

Mr. Riddell will cross-examine the President to-day.

German in Five Weeks.

Attention is directed to the lectures on German by Fraulein Pauline Holtermann, who comes to Toronto crowned with the laurels won by her most successful work throughout the province. Fraulein Holtermann remains in the city for one course only, so that those desirous of learning German in five weeks under her efficient and entertaining instruction should not fail to attend her illustrative lectures daily in the Y.M.C.A. library at 4.30 and 8 p.m., beginning Wednesday, April 24, at 8 p.m. Lectures free to all.

There is danger in neglecting a cold. Many who have died of consumption dated their troubles from exposure, followed by a cold which settled on their lungs, and in a short time they were beyond the skill of the best physician. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been spared. This medicine has no equal for curing coughs, colds and all affections of the throat and lungs.

Henderson & Co.'s Auction Sales.

Attention is called to the list of important sales under the management of Messrs. Charles M. Henderson & Co. Parties requiring the services of this firm would do well to give early notice.

WORST KIND OF DYSPEPSIA.

Gentlemen,—I write to inform you that for years I had been troubled with dyspepsia, and having tried other medicines which entirely failed, I at last found relief and cure in Burdock Blood Bitters, of which I took two bottles, the result being a perfect cure. Although only a young lad I had been troubled with dyspepsia for four or five years, but I can say now that B.B.B. does its work faithfully in the worst kind of dyspepsia, and has proved itself the only cure for me.

SATURDAY HALF HOLIDAY

Bill Will Be Introduced in Dominion House—Female Factory Inspector Recommended.

The Trades and Labor Council, with President Tweed in the chair, instructed the secretary to urge on the Mayor, full work at the new Court House. They endorsed the potato patch project and recommended Miss JessieHebburn as female inspector of factories.

Condemns the Assessment Amendment.

The Legislation Committee drew attention to the many acts of special interest to working men, passed in the recent session. The committee recorded their opinion that if the Mayor and corporation had been equal to their duty the assessment act would not have been passed in its present shape. The action of Messrs. Ryerson, Crawford and Howland was not creditable to them. The committee had prepared a draft bill respecting union labels, trade marks, etc. Mr. Emerson Coatsworth will introduce it in the Dominion House. It contemplates protection of trade marks from infringment.

The Label Committee reported that nine unions now using the label would hold a meeting on April 25 for the purpose of organizing a Label League.

Educational Report.

This was a long document read by Secretary Sam Jones. It took a general newspaper survey, eulogized The Women's Globe, gave a word of encouragement to The World, for the plucky stand it has recently taken in reference to assessment and tax reform, and said in reference to Saturday Night that it was evident that Henry Georgism is making progress.

Saturday Half Holiday.

Several delegates wished to know what progress was made in this proposal which has several times received the endorsation of the Trades and Labor Council. Sam Jones and other delegates thought that perhaps legal effect would sooner be given to a Saturday half-holiday, if a bill were introduced into the Dominion Parliament, rather than in the Ontario Legislature. It was suggested, and favorably received, that W. F. Maclean, M.P., engineer the bill when prepared.

The Potato Patch Project.

Delegate Geronfoky reported the progress which is being made with this scheme, the meetings in respect to which have been reported in The World. Many questions were asked and answered, and on motion the Council endorsed the project.

Female Factory Inspector.

Delegate Robert Glockling moved, seconded by Delegate D. A. Carey, that Miss Jessie Hopburn, who has done good services to the labor cause, be recommended to the Ontario Government for the position of female inspector of factories. Many of the delegates spoke in the highest terms of Miss Hepburn, her faculty of organization and her literary ability.

The motion carried and it was ordered that the secretary of the Council ask the co-operation of Trades Councils throughout Ontario in support of this lady's appointment.

A committee was appointed to arrange preliminaries for a fitting demonstration on Labor Day—the first Monday in September.

Hanged By a Falling Window Sash.

Ottawa, Ont., April 19.—Little Emma Thomas, the 7-year-old and only child of Mr. Fred Thomas, painter, of 416 Clarence-street, met a shocking death last evening. She became separated from her mother up town, and, going home, tried to get into the house through a window. The sash fell on her neck and choked her to death. A companion first discovered the body hanging out of the window, and gave the alarm.
