The Comic Element in the Partisan Press.

The failure that has so often overtaken the projectors of comic papers in Canada is accounted for by the semi-comic character of all our purely partisan papers, a class to which the greatest number of our journals belong. These sheets, in their eulogies of friends and denunciations of opponents, afford the reasoning and laughter-loving general public journalistic subjects enough for mirth, and the professedly comic papers have no chance.

The treatment of the Huntington charges against the Government, and the reception of the evidence that has effectually exploded them, is the latest illustration of this feature of Canadian journalism. The pertinacity with which the truth of the charges was asserted before a tittle of evidence had been produced, the "hip, hip hurrah" with which the Allan letters, in not one of which was any proof of the charges produced, and the desperate energy and blatent reiteration with which it is attempted to make a case against the Government in the face of a mass of evidence every particle of which refutes the charges—this is all more amusing than Punch or any other comic literature. We are not sure whether the conductors of the journals really imagine that they are convincing their readers, or whether they know they are laughed at, and, as the power of exciting laughter is one of the most profitable accomplishments of the age, continue the farce with an eye to profits. The frenzied ravings in double leaded leaders; the misleading headlines in capitals; the free use of italics, full face type, and exclamation points; the firm convictions expressed on the strength of the utterances of a man whose oath they treat as valueless: all these are exciting the risibilities of the general reader to a degree that might arouse the jealousy of a circus clown or a court fool.

Our Railway Scandal and the American Press.

The ignorant commentaries of the United States press on the Pacific Railway Scandal are disgraceful to journalism. They are, in every instance that has come to our knowledge, superficial, flippant and misleading. The articles show that they have been written without any previous knowledge of Canadian affairs, and without any study of the question treated. Every writer—even editorial writers of the leading New York and Boston papers that claim to lead the world in journalistic enterprise—has evidently based his article on some partisan statement. In no paper is there the slightest evidence of a study of the subject and a desire to treat it on its merits. The chief idea running through all of them is joy at the discovery of a Canadian Credit Mobilier, as Allan's Company is termed. Railway jobbers "assisting" their friends to seats in Parliament, and "placing stock where it would do most good," have all been discovered, and our friends are happy to learn that all the political rascality on the continent is not confined to the Republic. They are flattered at our imitation of their style, as they were flattered at the promptitude with which Parliament imitated Congress in voting its members an increase of pay last session. We are sorry to see the flippancy and ignorance with which the great journals discuss this question of ours. It seems to us to be of importance enough to be treated sensibly and conscienriously, even by New York dailies.

The investigation that has been ordered to take place in reference to the City of Washington will disclose more criminal carelessness and inefficiency on the part of steamship officers. Rushing through the fog, at a rapid rate, right on a rock-bound coast, 100 miles out of her proper position, is a situation not at all flattering to the officers who kept the reckoning and directed the course to be steered. Any of our coasting skippers would have calculated his position more accurately by dead reckoning.

One of the kindliest of critics is the N. Y. Mail, and yet it becomes caustic at times, as witness the following from a flattering notice of Miss Kate Field's new book, "Hap-Hazard":

One piece of sentimentalism is pure bosh. She comes out of the Houses of Parliament, and meets a beggar woman who cries out that she is starving, whereupon Miss Field "Thanks God for America." Numberless beggars in America will cry out to Miss Field that they are starving with quite as much truth possibly as her English acquaintance, and this little rhetorical flourish of national self-satisfaction is very small business indeed.

The world is very much disappointed to learn that the wound received by Paul de Cassagnac, the journalistic bravo of Paris, in his duel with M. Ranc, is not likely to prove fatal. The weapons were swords, not pistols, as at first reported, a weapon with which Cassagnac has killed a dozen or so and wounded a score in single combat.

The Carleton Brass Band and the Corporation Cow Pasture.

To the Editor of the Tribune.

You will confer a favor by giving space to the following. The members of the Carleton Serenade Brass Band, a few weeks ago, offered to play two nights in the week on the Queen's Square, provided the Common Council would erect a band stage for their use. The cost of building a platform would be about $15 or $20. But the offer, as yet, has not been accepted. Councillor O'Brien stated to some members of the band that he would furnish the material if the members would put the stage up themselves. What a philanthropist this worthy man is! Just imagine these young men, who at great expense have purchased a fine lot of instruments, and have given their time and money for the past two years in getting musical instruction and are now a first class Band,—think of them building a place for the public benefit and giving two evenings in the week for the amusement of the people! This is too much. The public can't expect anything of the kind. The only reason I can assign for the conduct of Mr. O'Brien and the rest of the committee, in this matter, is that the music might annoy the cows pasturing on the Square. I presume the public are aware the Square is now used as pasture grounds. Yours, &c.,

A LOVER OF MUSIC.

THE SHAH AT GUILDHALL.

DIRECT COMMUNICATION WITH TEHERAN,

and already the Minister left by the Shah in charge of his capital is roused up—it is three o'clock in the morning with him—to read the address of congratulation which has been sent nearly four thousand miles over the wire. Near to Mr. Scudamore stands his chief, the Postmaster General, Mansell, a man with a soft, shaven face, a stealthy giance and a general Jesuitical aspect, and near him, a tall, pompous, bald-headed person, "empty and fine," as Mr. Browning has it—consequential, fussy and inane in the highest degree. This is Viscount Sydney, the Lord Chamberlain, the man who ordered and who, in his character of censor of our plays, forbids "Patrie" and only just permits "Frou Frou," while he licenses the grossest indecencies of the Palais Royal. He moves now, as do all the rest at the sound of the blare of trumpets which announces the approach of the Shah. The Lord Mayor and the Corporation have long since bustled away to the ancient porch of the Hall to welcome their visitors, and to the sound of martial music the procession enters.

THE BALLET GIRLS TO LENGTHEN THEIR SKIRTS,

FIRST COMES THE SHAH,

leading the Princess of Wales. I have already described the Persian monarch as I saw him at the Brussels Railway station on the occasion of his departure, and there is nothing to add to that description. He is still dressed in the black tunic, this time covered with a dark green riband across his breast, bordered by rows of priceless jewels. His bands of diamonds he has left at home, but retains his jewelled scimitar and his black pointed cap, within it, on this occasion, the "Sea of Light," a diamond which Mr. Moses Isaacs would exactly appreciate and envy. The solemnity of his face is rather detracted from by the pair of gold spectacles, which give him a somewhat comic appearance; and by his side walks the Princess of Wales, perhaps, strictly speaking, not the loveliest, but with her tall, graceful figure, her sweet earnest face and her thoroughly high-bred air, certainly the most attractive woman in our land. She has her hair rather tightly knotted in a coronet on the top of her head, thus let us hope setting the fashion for the abolition of those enormous, hideous chignons, which so disfigure our English women, and she is dressed in in blue and white satin, ornamented with diamonds. Led by the Shah and the Princess, the procession, composed of royalties and other notabilities, advances to the dais, and after the great creatures have seated themselves on their golden chairs, the one notable and impossible to be avoided English affliction—the presentation of an address. The Corporation gathering themselves in front of their visitors, a dried, withered up chip of a little man, who is Sir Thomas Chambers, the Deputy Recorder of London, in a hard, grating voice proceeds to read out a preposterous composition of complimentary jargon. This is translated by the interpreter into Persian and replied to in a few short and decisive sentences by the Shah, which sentences are again translated into English by Sir Henry Rawlinson, of whom I have already made mention. Then occurs a never failing civic institution on such occasions—the presentation to the visitor of the freedom of the city, of which he will no doubt make a great deal of use. The casket in which this document was enclosed was, however, very handsome, being a huge gold box, enamelled on all sides and supported on each corner by a kneeling camel.

THE FIRST QUADRILLE.

Time was getting on, and if the King of Kings was to be introduced to any more of the customs of the West the ceremonies must begin at once. So evidently the Princess thought. After a look around she gave the signal for retiring to the body of the hall, where, after the Shah had taken up his position, a quadrille was commenced, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Lord and Lady Mayoress, the Czarowitch and the Princess Dagmar and the Duke and Duchess of Teck being among the dancers. Settling his spectacles firmly on his nose, the Eastern potentate reclined comfortably back on his seat and watched the performance with half shut eyes. What, I wondered, as I gazed at him, were his thoughts as he looked on at it? Did they go back to his native land and the last Terpsichorean evolutions he had witnessed there?

There the harem's inmates smile,
Maids from the West with sun bright hair;
And, from the gardens of the Nile,
Delicate as the roses there,
Daughters of love from Cyprus' rocks,
With Parthian diamonds in their locks,
Light Peri forms, such as there are
On the gold meads of Candahar,
And they before whose sleepy eyes,
In their own bright Kathaun bowers,
Sparkle such rainbow butterflies
That they might fancy the rich flowers
That round them in the sun lay sighing
Had been by magic all set flying.

Or was he thinking that he had a very long day, that he was extremely tired and would like to go to bed?

Probably the latter, for, after witnessing one or two dances, the Shah intimated his desire for supper, and, after taking a very slight refreshment, retired from the Guildhall about midnight.

The Carleton Schools were examined in the City Hall yesterday, about six hundred pupils being present.

The strawberry festival in the basement of Exmouth street Church, last evening, was a very enjoyable affair. Music was supplied by the choir of the church.

Prof. Hilton, the ventriloquist, who exhibited his three talking heads at Lee's Opera House three weeks ago, died very suddenly at the New England House, Boston, this week.

A young woman named Gildard, who worked in Mr. Jones's clothing establishment, died suddenly yesterday morning, an inquest was held in the afternoon and "Died from natural causes" was the verdict.

The New Brunswick Grand Lodge of British Templars meets in Sackville next Tuesday. Delegates will be carried by rail and steamer for one fare, and the Sackville temperance people are preparing to entertain them.

Yesterday some considerate person attached a tin vessel by a piece of wire to the hydrant in front of Messrs. Allan's store, Water street. This is a good hint to the Corporation of St. John to place an iron or tin vessel, secured by a chain, to each of the hydrants in our principal thoroughfares, so that the thirsty wayfarer might drink of the pure element "without money and without price." If this were carried out, in the warm weather, it would no doubt be a great boon to many a thirsty soul.

The net proceeds of the Carleton Presbyterian Sunday School festival were $100.

Messrs. Fleming & Sons, of this city, are making a new boiler, thirty feet long, for the Spring Hill Mining Company. It will probably be ready to ship on Tuesday next. A new engine and other material will also be ready to send forward soon after.

Maine Press Association Coming.

The Maine Editors' and Publishers' Association will be here next Tuesday. They are to meet in Bangor on Monday, remain there all night, and will arrive in St. John Tuesday evening. Arrangements are made for their accommodation at the Victoria Hotel for a few days. The gentlemen of the Press set a good example to other excursionists, as they will be accompanied by their wives and lady friends. Newspaper men, generous fellows, knowing that ladies enjoy a pleasure trip, bring them along with them. What a good example they set to Masons, Odd Fellows and others, who travel in parties, and never think of bringing their wives with them, as if they went off from home to have a good time, and get rid of their wives. Perhaps, however, it may be that their wives, as they can't be let into all the mysteries connected with these orders, refuse to recognize them by travelling in their company. It is hoped that the stay of the visitors will be made pleasant, and that they will leave with favorable impressions of our city. The editors of St. John should meet at once and take the initiatory steps to properly receive the visitors.

Stream Driving.

The water in the River St. John rose about two feet on Sunday and Monday last. The steamer Andover, which had discontinued her trips, was enabled to make three trips as far as Tobique. The last lumber drives for this season from the Upper St. John and tributaries arrived below Woodstock on Wednesday, but the rapid fall of water again hung a large amount up. Hundreds of men and horses are now engaged in sacking between Woodstock and Fredericton. The probability is that most of the logs will be got to market soon, but at a great expense. One American firm had, on Wednesday, about one hundred and fifty men and seventy horses engaged on the drive below Woodstock.

Shipping Notes.

The bark Sarah B. Cam, Eldridge, master, which arrived at Hamburg on the 25th May from New York, fouled the steamer Madagascar, of Hamburg, while going into that harbor, and sustained some slight damage.

The schooner Momento, Oakley, master, from St. Johns, N. F., 26th ult., for the Western Shore with fishery supplies, was totally wrecked on the same night and all hands lost.

Abandoned.—The Aylestone, Brett, master, at Liverpool 24th ult., from Old Calabar, reports:—

June 5, in lat. 36 N., lon. 36 W., at 7 a. m., blowing fresh from S.W. and thick, saw a vessel apparently at anchor eight or ten cables off. Closed and passed under the stern of an American-built schooner of about 200 tons, waterlogged, riding head to the wind, perfectly upright, her deck two feet above the water. Her hatches were off, and as her bulwarks were very much broken the sea washed over her occasionally. Her mainmast was broken short off above the rigging, main boom 10 feet from the jaws, foremast 7 or 8 feet from the deck, with the hoops and remains of sail snugly coiled on the top; the remains of her mainmast stowed; bowsprit and jibboom gone, port anchor catted and fished, and chains ready; cabin half-house with windows nailed over with canvas, and door open; the steering wheel and gear lay on the quarter deck, the rudder not being visible—I think gone. Had it not been that three of her upper planks on the port side were washed away and the rudder gone, she might have been worth taking into the Azores. We could have towed her into Flores easily; she was riding by her starboard anchor and chain (not, of course, on the ground). June 7, lat. 38 N., lon. 33 W., passed the wreck of a spar, part of it painted white, and quite clean, probably a schooner's foremast.

Died at Sea.—The bark Minnie Cameron, which arrived at Pictou, N. S., on the 26th ult., from Rio Janeiro, reports that Captain Logan died of yellow fever when 9 days out, and was buried at sea.

The schooner Charles O. Warren, (of Gloucester, Mass.), is ashore on Bald Tusket, N. S.

The bark J. T. Smith (of Parrsboro, N. S.) Howard, master, for Liverpool, E., went ashore on Mud Island during a fog on the 5th inst. She afterwards came off, and was towed into Yarmouth on the 8th.

The Lumber Business.—The bark New Brunswick has completed her loading of deal at Shediac for Liverpool, and sails on the 13th inst. J. L. Black, Esq., her shipper, has over 2,000,000 feet of lumber at that place awaiting shipment. R. A. Chapman's new bark, now building at Rockland, has been chartered by Mr. Black to load lumber at Sackville for Liverpool.

New Vessel Burnt on the Stocks.—On the morning of the 27th ult., the brigantine Josephine, lying on the stocks at Ball's Bridge, C. B., was totally destroyed by fire. The vessel was nearly completed and ready for launching. Her estimated value was about £1,450. When the fire was discovered it had made too much headway to be extinguished. She was insured for about half her value.

The brigantine Mary J. Wilber, Leary, master, which arrived at Liverpool from this port on the 19th ult., while at anchor in the Mersey, fouled with another vessel, sustaining damage to the amount of about £20. The M. J. W. is owned by D. J. McLaughlin, Jr., of this port.

The new ship Governor Wilmot, Cruickshank, master, which sailed hence on the 10th ult. for Liverpool, arrived at that port, all well, on the 10th inst., after a fine run of 23 days.

BRAIN WORRY.—Many of us pray to be delivered from sudden death, and do we not worry ourselves into it? And if we do can we not help it?

"Men do not really die of Heart disease as often as it is supposed, but of apoplexy, or congestion of the lungs, so they do not die of brain work but Brain Worry. Scott died of it, Southey, Swift, Horace Greeley, and probably Thackeray."—London Times.

As Brain worry induces premature dissolution by its depressing influence upon the general nervous health, by eating the brain faster than the waste is repaired, and as the means of sustaining and increasing nervous health is no longer impossible; those who suffer the debilitating influence of mental anguish or extreme mental fatigue, need only resort to the preparation of Hypophosphites invented by Mr. Fellows, as that will conduct the subject safely over the rapids of despair, and create in him strength to grapple with every difficulty.

This is no idle assertion but an established fact.

THE BLOOD owes its red color to minute globules which float in that fluid, and contain, in a healthy person, a large amount of iron, which gives vitality to the blood. The Peruvian Sprup supplies the blood with this vital element, and gives strength and vigor to the whole system. july4 dw1w

Case of Sun Stroke.

Miss Eleanor Dowling, teacher of the school at Moore's Mills, was taken very ill on Sunday. Dr. Dibblee, we understand, pronounced it a severe case of sun stroke. We are glad to learn that Miss Dowling is rapidly recovering.—Courier.

This young lady is a niece of the widow Samuel Reeds and, previous to her location at Moore's Mills, a resident of this city. Her many friends will be pleased to know of her recovery.

Quick Work.

The Waterous portable steam saw mill, lately put up at the Spring Hill mines, for the cutting of the lumber for the erection of the dwelling houses and other buildings to be put up there, cut up a large hemlock log into 390 superficial feet of square edged boards in the short space of thirteen minutes.

Dr. Leary cures Dyspepsia and Bilious affections. May be found at Secord's Hotel, Germain street, near Union. The Dr.'s Albion Liniment cures corns, bunions and fevers. His Speedy Relief will cure Diarrhœa and Cholera. His Oriental Nerve Toothache cure is instantaneous and permanent. For sale by all Druggists and respectable Grocers.

St. John, July 1873.

Personal.

The Hon. Henry Washburn, a Professor in Harvard University, is to be entertained this evening at a dinner in the Victoria, given by the bar.

A Lively Fight in Carleton between a Grocer and a Barkeeper.

A prosperous grocer in Carleton has been trying for some time to collect a little bill from the keeper of a liquor saloon, but, either because the temperate habits of the Carletonians make liquor selling unprofitable, or because the debtor is prejudiced in favor of long credits, the account has not been settled. At the grocer's boy's last call, the barkeeper told him to tell his employer to take his bill to—a warm country where the bill would burn and the creditor be envious of its combustible character. The grocer was indignant, and took the first opportunity that was presented for declining the invitation. That opportunity was a street meeting with his creditor yesterday. The liquor dealer, instead of respecting the grocer's disinclination to carry his bill to a warm climate, emphatically repeated his injunction, and the wordy contest soon resulted in blows. As the story is told to us the grocer knocked the liquor dealer down in the first round. The vender of drinks then arose, closed with the grocer and a desperate rough-and-tumble scratch ensued. The father of the liquor dealer and the brother of the grocer were first on the scene, and, after attempting to separate the combatants, closed with each other in wrathful mood. A crowd collected, the fight was stopped, and the rest of the day was spent in Carleton discussing the probable result of the contest in case there had been no interference. The grocer was acknowledged to be the hardest hitter—striking straight from the shoulder—but many claimed that the mixer of cold punches would have triumphed in the end.

SKATING CARNIVAL.—Mr. Notman has completed the CARNIVAL CARTOON, and photographic copies in cabinet and larger sizes are now ready for sale.

The School Examination—High Schools and Grammar School—Presentation of Prizes.

The Institute was crowded this morning with those who wished to hear the exercises of the highest branches of the Common Schools. There were eight schools present. The schools that have been examined were dismissed yesterday, and there was, consequently, a large attendance of the pupils and teachers of the other schools as spectators. The large audience present took the deepest interest in all the exercises.

A touching sight was the card and staff, by which the position of the late Mr. Hartt's classes was indicated, draped with crape. The young ladies were also dressed in black.

The following schools were present this morning:

Grammar School—grade 1, Mr. McDonald; grade 2, Mr. Manning; grade 3, G. Costor, Ph. D.

High School—grade 1, Miss Treadwell and Miss Wetmore; grade 2, Miss J. P. Robertson and Miss A. A. Theal; grade 3, the late Mr. J. W. Hartt's.

The examinations in the different branches were conducted by the teachers. The reading by the late Mr. Hartt's class, and the recitation by Miss Alexander, were very fine. The French students were examined by Prof. Vochel McKenzie. Dr. Coster examined a class of six in Latin. The boys read fluently, and translated readily and correctly.

The young ladies of the High School sang "Home Sweet Home" very sweetly. Four young ladies of Mrs. Parkin's school repeated their dialogue, "The Country Cousin," which they recited yesterday. It was better done than before, Miss Young, especially, throwing more vim into her part, as well as several little originalities.

At ten minutes of one the presentation of prizes was commenced. Those for the Grammar school were presented first His Worship the Mayor, in a short speech, presented Frank Millidge with the Corporation Gold Medal, as the first classical prize.

The Rev. N. Scovil presented the Parker Gold Medal to Frank Allison, for having the highest general standing in the school, making a few appropriate remarks.

Other prizes were won by the following: C. Lordly, F. Whittaker, W. Collins, F. Sulis, C. Marter, F. W. Frith, Frederick Coster, A. Holden, W. Thomson, J. S. Trueman, A. Gilmour, C. Weldon, F. Travis, W. Stewart, W. Simson, J. Steen, J. Dudley, W. Marter, Edw. P. Winslow, Adam A. Rankine, Leveret Skinner, A. Coster, Horace Manks, Geo. Fisher, J. R. Mace, Walter Anderson, Wm. Ewing, Henry Pope, John Frazer, Twining Hartt, Fred'k McMillan, Hubert Everett, Hedley McLaughlin.
