INTERVIEW WITH GRANT DEVINE

CTV: The four western premiers have emerged from their annual conference calling for free trade with the United States and for reforms to the federal tax system. This morning from our Regina studio we are joined by the premier of Saskatchewan, Grant Devine. Good morning Mr. Premier.

DEVINE: Good morning Linda.

CTV: In your communique yesterday you were calling for a common market. That is the same thing, in your estimation as free trade, is it not?

DEVINE: It is. We're using the word common market because there is an active model in the world today, the European Common Market and people understand that. And they know that the identity of the nationalities within that market is very, very strong, but there is some definitive advantages. So we're using the terminology and we threw it out so people could feel
