NOTES AND NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

Geo. Francis Train was declared perfectly sane by the jury summoned in his case. The jury were out for deliberation only five minutes. He will now be tried on the indictments against him for publishing an obscene paper.

The city marshals and constables of Chicago are rejoicing in the prospect of a raid upon all the saloons of that city to ascertain whether the liquors sold are pure. We only fear that their tastes have become so vitiated that they cannot tell.

Londonderry, Vt., is mystified by the cantrips of a young girl of eleven years who goes into a trance and dances for hours in the most graceful and approved manner without effort or weariness, and yet she never learned to dance in her life. She is presumed to have been possessed by the spirit of the maiden about whom the poet raves, whose

"Footstep gleams
In what etc al dances
By what eternal streams."

The discipline of St. Mary's Catholic Institute at Dayton, O., appears to be somewhat severe. A monk of that institution having occasion lately to administer some wholesome correction to a boy of ten years, took him into the hall and kicked him until he succeeded in breaking a leg—the boy's. and not his own, unfortunately. St. Mary ought to disown that Institute without delay.

Corporal chastisement is sometimes good for a school boy, and if he can be induced to take it without a fuss so much the better. There are various ways of bringing this about. A school ma'am in Haverhill, Mass., finding a boy one more than she could handle, persuaded him to take a deserved flogging without resistance by arranging that he should have his choice from a litter of bran new puppies. That teacher is a woman of expedients, and will get along with the school if the supply of puppies holds out.

An old peddler more than four-score years of age lately returned to Bath, Me., after an absence of many years, during which he had travelled all over the continent in company with a peculiar gnarled and twisted cane. And yet with all his travel and experience he has not learned wisdom, for he wants to get married and settle in the West to raise locust trees. Better stick to this old twisted cane. It has always been faithful and he can depend on it. If he makes the proposed change of companionship he may regret it so long as he lives.

A wonder has been discovered in San Francisco—a dressmaker who will keep her word at any price. She had promised a new dress to be worn at a party in San Jose on a certain evening. It was finished on the day, but the person who was to take it had gone, the train by which it was to go had also departed when the depot was reached, and no fast horse could be had on account of the epizootic. Rising with the emergency, the energetic dressmaker hired an engine and tender, and took that dress to San Jose in time for the party.

Why is it that people in all parts of the world will persist in thinking that the milkman everywhere is in partnership with the pump? Thus we read in a Maine newspaper: "April showers being at hand, Belfast milkmen have reduced their price to five cents a quart." These little jokes may be very unjust, but they have become part and parcel of the popular humor, and it would be vain to try to suppress them. Sausages and dogs, coffee and beans, veal pies and kittens, are in the same category.

We are not sure that suicide is to be justified under any provication, but when one groans and sweats under too weary a life to endure it any longer, we can afford to overlook this little slip in their conduct for once. For instance, a girl in the village of Eureka, Wis., lately took a fatal dose of strychnine under the pressure of such a terrible misfortune that we are constrained to believe that she could not have done a better thing. She wanted to go to a party, and her mother wouldn't let her; so she put strychnine in a cup of cold tea and drank the deadly poison.

GENERAL.

Several bankers and railroad men from England, who arrived at New York per steamer a few days ago, left for San Francisco Thursday. Their object is to examine the American system of palace cars, with the intention of introducing certain improvements in the English railroad system.

For the benefit of those contemplating snicide, we would remark that a pint of laudanum is either too much or not enough, we are not quite sure which. A Fall River man lately tried that amount, and failed to accomplish his purpose, which proves that the quantity was not exactly right, or else the quality was bad.

We read that the bell ringer of Brixlegg, Tyrol, after operating at the bell rope for forty years has swung himself off from the cross at the top of the spire. It would be quite interesting, if one had time, to conjure up the feelings of that man while the fatal fascination of that cross as a convenient place to dangle from has grown upon him from year to year until he could not resist it.

One of the sad effects of the "epizootic" has been the contracting of intemperate habits by horses. One of these noble animals in Middletown, Conn., having been doctered with whiskey, acquired such a taste for the seductive liquid that he steals it at every opportunity. We are sorry to note this evidence that the horse's superiority to man in the matter of drinking habits has been due to lack of knowledge and opportunity.

We always feel a pity for the deluded mortals who go exploring in the Arctic regions, similar to that inspired by a foolish moth which runs head foremost into a candle blaze. If they must do it we are sorry, but they must take the consequences. It is said that two expeditions are to start from England ere long in search of the opposite poles of the earth, or as a morning paper grandly expresses it, "to coast the icy palisades of the circumpolar ocean." We hope they may enjoy their coasting and return in safety, but if they do not they must remember that we never encouraged the idea of their going.

English Methodism.

An English correspondent says: Another wealthy Lancashire layman has died, leaving, it is said, £60,000 to connexional funds. His name was Turnbull. His legacies ~~and Mr.~~ Fernley's will make, perhaps, £120,000. The Metropolitan Church Building Fund has realized £110,000, including £50,000 from Sir Francis Lycett. If money can insure success, the success of modern English Methodism ought to exceed anything previously known. The following somewhat curious piece of intelligence is given in the same letter: The subject of a secondary and subsidiary circle of Church-fellowship, designed to be not a substitute for, but in subordination and often introductory to, the class-meeting, and admitting to the Lord's Supper and love-feasts and chapel stewardship and treasurership, but not to leader's meeting officers (society officers) nor to a place in the quarterly meeting, is engaging at present the earnest attention of some of the leading minds in Methodism. The subject will come up at the next Conference.
