Hue, Cochin China, May 2. — French dispatch boats arriving here in quick succession with official advices for the foreign office in Paris, report sighting Rojestvensky's squadron in the South China Sea, off a point 43 miles north of the Kamranh Bay, on Saturday last. The Russian ships were between Cape Aurelia and Perforated Rock and were standing out to sea, but going at half speed. It was evident the admiral was pursuing his recent policy of cruising up and down the Cochin China coast, possibly awaiting Nebogatoff at the head of the Red Sea squadron.

CHOLERA and all summer complaints are so quick in their action that the cold hand of death is upon the victims before they are aware that danger is near. If attacked do not delay in getting the proper medicine. Try a dose of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, and you will get immediate relief. It acts with wonderful rapidity, and never fails to effect a cure.

It is believed the mystery surrounding Togo's movements is confining the Russians to their short beat up and down the coast. The Japanese admiral has not shown his hand in any particular. It is not even known where Kamamura's cruiser squadron is, although there is a growing impression it is almost within striking distance of Rojestvensky, and that Kamamura awaits only opportunity for a dash at the Russians and a rapid retirement after as much damage as possible to the weaker vessels of Rojestvensky's fleet. That Vice-Admiral Togo has massed a strong force at Formosa to co-operate with Kamamura is the most widely accepted opinion as to his present disposition.

NO DEARTH OF FUN IN OLD BOY WEEK

Sports Committee Has Already Partly Arranged Programme for Reunion.

The sports committee of the local Old Boys' Association held a very largely attended meeting in the city hall last night. Representatives from nearly all the societies in the city were present, and these, together with representatives from other organizations, were appointed on the several sub-committees named. Chairman Walter Bartlett presided, and Mr. Ed. Struthers acted as secretary.

The chairman explained that it is the intention of the committee that Monday of Old Boys' week shall be given over to the procession committee, which will make arrangements for a monster procession to Queen's Park, in which each and every society and organization will be represented. LATE INSPECTOR DID HIS DUTY

The Toronto News Finds His Removal a Cause for Complaint.

Mr. H. C. Hocken, representing the Toronto News, recently visited this city, and inquired into the license situation. In an article in the News, Mr. Hocken pays the following compliment to Mr. James Brown, who was deposed from the inspectorate to make room for a Conservative:

"Where there is complaint, however, is in the change of license inspector. Mr. James Brown, who has been dismissed, is conceded to have been an excellent official. He had the warmest support the temperance people could give him, because of his efficiency during the year he held office. Also I was told the new commissioners passed a complimentary resolution when he was retired. Mr. Brown is a man of means, so that he was not depending upon the salary for a livelihood. It made him independent in discharging his duties. That he did so in a thorough way is gathered from the cordial dislike of the hotelkeepers and the confidence of the prohibitionists.

"As the policy of the Government is strict enforcement of the law, it would seem to have been a good plan to retain the services of such an official. But his services to the Liberal party had been too well known to be allowed to pass. Since his appointment as inspector he has kept out of politics, but prior to that time he was a very active, fearless and effective party worker, but always fighting fair. That is all there was against him.

"His successor is a Mr. Galpin, a painter by trade, who had to run the gauntlet of an adverse petition from the temperance element. They were extremely disappointed at the change. They appealed to Mr. Beck, who denied responsibility for the appointment, and they could not get any satisfaction. Their attitude now is to wait and watch. They have been assured that Mr. Galpin will enforce the law or be promptly retired. As the prohibitionists are united and militant in this city, the new inspector can count upon them taking a deep interest in his work. He is under suspicion from the beginning."

MODERN MOSES IN HARD LUCK

Claiming To Be Father of New Messiah, Is Banished From Native Town.

New York, May 3.—In a dingy little justice of the peace court in Cornwall there appeared today Edwin Luther Powell, to answer the technical charge of vagrancy, a new Moses, self proclaimed, who declares he is to be the father of the New Messiah. In the evolution of the case there was unfolded a tale of religious fanaticism that included defiance of the laws of the land and the morals of the community, and the fall of the two principal factors, husband and wife, from wealth and affluence to squalor.

Names that loom largely throughout the country were inimately connected with the matter, for a close business connection was alleged to have existed between the prisoner and Andrew Carnegie, to whom the woman—a member of the Negley family of Pittsburg—is declared to be related.

As near to the venerable prisoner as they were permitted to approach, stood two woman, the wife in the eyes of the law and the wife in the "eyes of the spirit."

The first was old and few traces remained of her former beauty, but her appearance reflected her birth and former station; the second was young and phnically attractive. In her arms was a child who had been announced as the coming Saviour, but was born a girl, and through this trick of fate brought added misfortune to the family into which she came.

Striking was the presence of the "anointed leader." Tall, erect, his flowing white hair gathered with a broad black ribbon, and his patriarchal beard gave to his fact an expression of benignity that made it difficult to credit the accusations made. At least two of those present who heard the charges that the aged defendant was little better than a charlatan, and that under the guise of religion he had cloaked vile designs, wept with joy when, under conditions, he was permitted to depart.

These were the women whose lives have been closely bound up with his, who have for four years dwelt with him under one roof, one as wife and the other as the mother of his child, both firm in the belief that they were aiding the world work, that they were the chosen instruments in the regeneration of the human race through a new Christ.

It was with joy rather than sorrow that this strange trio saw the tragedy reach its culmination when the old man was practically given a limit of hours to leave town. They welcomed the martyrdom, and if a recollection for her former life of wealth and ease caused regret to the wife, she failed to show it, when she announced that in good time they would return to Cornwall to lead its inhabitants to redemption, the Lord's manifestation to indicate the proper period.

Then this woman, who had once boasted one of the finest homes in Pittsburg, to which it is declared she may return tomorrow if she renounced the leadership of her fanatic husband, fastened her tattered coat with a curtain pin, and, gathering under her arm a picture and a few poor household trifles which she had saved from the wreck which followed their eviction, prepared to follow her Moses, who had been taken away by the son of a former marriage.

When the good wives of Cornwall heard that the "prophet" had departed they breathed a sigh of relief. They were far less free in expressing sympathy for the women in the case than were the men, for they regarded him as a menace to their homes, and often during the last two or three years had discussed the advisability of taking summary action.

Powell had always enjoyed an influence over women with whom he came into contact, and through a leaning toward spiritualism he met Mrs. Isabelle Sargent, widow of a wealthy steel manufacturer, whose first husband had been a prominent physician in Philadelphia. She was a Negley, a family name to conjure with in Pittsburg, and was also said to be related to Andrew Carnegie. In spite of opposition, she married him in 1886.

He was enabled to begin the manufacture of a patent furnace, and interested men of great means in his enterprise, including, it is declared, Mr. Carnegie. He prospered, and under the influence of his success his religion was for the time forgotten.

About four years ago he had taken into his family an orphan born in Cornwall, Margaret Cobb, whom he afterward adopted. He chose her for the "divine" motherhood, and with great solemnity the spiritual marriage was performed, his wife being zealous in the observance of the ceremony. Last August the long-heralded child was born. The fact that it was a girl was smoothed over by another "vision," in which the new Moses was told that he was to be the father of a family of prophets, who were to aid the Saviour in his appointed work.

CARNEGIE RAPPED BY MANCHESTER

Duke Says Ironmaster's Gifts Are Hardships to the English Towns.

New York, May 3. — The Duke of Manchester, who is staying here a few days before returning to England, was asked whether he had noticed Mr. Andrew Carnegie's comparison of dukes and coachmen in connection with the marriage of Carnegie's niece, Miss Nancy Carnegie, to James Hever, formerly a groom in the family.

"I was much edified by Mr. Carnegie's announcement that he preferred a coachman to a duke as a nephew-in-law," replied the duke. "Perhaps, all things considered, it is more appropriate. For once I am able to compliment Mr. Carnegie on his sense of fitness."

"Do you mean that Mr. Carnegie is not sincere in his protestations of democracy?"

"Please do not get such an idea as that," hastily corrected his grace. "On the contrary, Mr. Carnegie's utterances have convinced me that he is at heart a thorough democrat. It is, I suppose, the conditions in Great Britain that have compelled him to attempt to reconcile a democratic mind with a body living in a feudal castle, surrounded by more than feudal luxury.

"I wonder that he has not carried out the feuadl idea of presiding at a common table for his whole household, for surely one cannot wish one's relations to marry a class of people whom one is not willing to ask to one's own table.

"Do not misunderstand me. I thoroughly appreciate Mrs. Hever's position. She apparently has married the man she loves, which is the only right marriage for a girl to make."

"Is not Mr. Carnegie in his feudal life at Skibo Castle distributing an enormous fortune in a philanthropic manner?"

"I have seen the working of some of Mr. Carnegie's free libraries in Great Britain," replied the duke. "The idea is grand.

"But alas, some of the land owners, on the other side, at least, are perverted enough not to appreciate the privilege of being allowed to subscribe anonymously to Mr. Carnegie's extensive scheme of advertising.

"In some cases of bequests in England by Mr. Carnegie of smaller sums, ranging from $5000 to $15,000, the town to which the grant is made is practically owned by one or two men. As the grant is only conditional on the provision of a free site and the imposing of the highest possible tax, this, as a rule, means that the local land owner gives more in cash, besides paying all the maintenance of the library which is to bear Mr. Carnegie's name.

"In other cases the burden of conditions falls on the population, in many instances poor people, who find the gift almost impossible of acceptance, because they cannot afford the extra twopence on the rates besides the cost of the site."

To Make Pure

Biscuit, cake, rolls, muffins, dumplings, etc., a pure leavening agent is indispensable.

While the Royal Baking Powder is reported absolutely pure and healthful, the official reports show most other baking powders, as well as the cream of tartar of the market depended upon by many housekeepers for raising biscuit and cake, to contain either alum, ammonia or sulphuric acid.

The Government Analyst of Ontario says:

"As a result of my investigation, I find the Royal Baking Powder far superior to the others. It is pure, contains none but wholesome ingredients, and is of greatest strength."
