CANADA'S DAIRY PRACTICE

HOW THE GULLELESS STOREKEEPER IS VICTIMIZED.

By the Guileful Butter Maker—The Storekeeper and What he Would Like to See—Prof. Maran Compliments the World.

I indeed took a higher interest in the reading of the above mentioned articles, and fully favor the opinions expressed in them. This important question shall be, I hope, the matter of a better consideration and discussion at the next meeting of the Dairymen's Association of the Province of Quebec in this town.

This is what Mr. L. J. A. Maran, Professor of Agriculture, L'Assumption, Quebec, says after talking at some space about The World's endeavor to reform Canadian dairy practice. It is pleasant to have the full favor of eminent men and the distinguished commendation of The Hamilton Spectator; but it is so much better to know that one is doing one's duty. When The World came to the conclusion that the country was losing a great deal of money by the present system of making and handling butter it could not refrain from speaking. It was its duty to speak out; and if it had not spoken its esteemed constituency, the farmers of Canada, would have had just cause to arise and sternly give forth a rebuke. As it is, The World's conscience is satisfied and the farmers of Canada cannot say that their welfare is not being looked after.

The Storekeeper.

But besides looking after the interests of its esteemed constituents, the farmers of Canada, the storekeepers are to be defended. When the phrase, "store packed butter" is mentioned consumers look upon country storekeepers as exceedingly wicked and vicious persons, having no thought for the well being of their neighbors. The country storekeeper is not that kind of a man. He does not harbor sinister designs upon luckless consumers. Instead of that he himself is the victim of circumstances and the conceit of some women. A woman brings him a basket of good butter. He looks at it and says it is worth 20 cents a pound. He pays her in goods. The next arrival is very bad, but the lady who manufactured it has a very high opinion of its excellence. If the storekeeper said it was bad and worth only 15 cents a pound it would shock her. Oh, my! Mrs. Smith got 20 cents a pound for hers, and she is quite certain that her butter is even better than Mrs. Smith's. The storekeeper does not say it is bad. This lady is a patron of his and deals largely with him. He is politic.

His Mental Reservation.

He tastes it and with a secret pang assures her that it is excellent. He pays 20 cents a pound in goods. Good and bad go on calmly accumulating until packing day comes and then a good deal of it goes together. Very often the storekeeper cannot realize what he pays for it, but the system by which the butter trade is carried on compels him to make sacrifices to keep his trade. The evil is aggravated by competition among the storekeepers in every village and town. The storekeepers would gladly hail a change in the mode of carrying on the butter trade. They would be willing to make sacrifices to have it brought about. A system that will do away with the troublesome barter business and bring more money into the locality will be greeted with pleasure by nine-tenths of the storekeepers in the country.

It is Not Business.

The way the trade is carried on is not in accordance with Canada's commercial ways and means. Every trade has been subjected to remodelling so as to suit it to the times, except the butter trade. The system of "every man for himself and the devil catch the hindmost" which the Canadian butter makers are adhering to has been a source of great loss to them as a whole. It has put bad butter on the Canadian market and bad butter on the foreign market, and such has been the effect of the Canadian article on the foreign market that it is totally unsaleable. One of the shippers in Toronto recently tried to sell some of the store packed butter in England, offering it at 11 cents, but he could not get an order. Canadian creamery in the British market, however, exceeded expectations last season, considering that it is very hard to gain a reputation in any commodity cheese keen is the competition. The effect of placing bad butter in the Canadian market is, that people have to eat it or eat none. Listen to the wail of the eater! Everybody cannot get good butter because there is not enough made for all. What most affects the producer is that low prices prevail. It costs just as much to make bad butter as good butter, and fully one-half of the butter sold in Canada sells at low prices. It means a loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars to the producers and a great strain on the palate of the consumer.

Takes a Hand in.

The following letter from the ex-secretary of the Ontario Creamery Association is valuable and interesting. The absurdity of the present system of carrying on Canada's butter trade is clearly pointed out:

"Although at present not engaged in the butter business, but having spent a good many years in handling store butter, and also about ten years in operating creameries, I cannot allow The World's butter campaign to go on without taking a hand in it. I always advocated the creamery system as the only salvation to our butter trade, and I am still of that opinion. No storekeeper that has any conscience can feel satisfied with the butter he is handling, knowing the loss the country sustains, and thinking about those whose misfortune it would be to eat what he would not think of eating himself. He knows the system is wrong, feels perfectly sick and disgusted with it, and yet powerless to make a change. It is very common to hear people say that the whole trouble was with the merchants for paying the same price for all qualities. It is only fair to suppose that men engaged in any line of business understand their interests better than outsiders, and therefore it is useless to offer advice to them. Their business is to sell goods, and in order to do this they must attract custom and not drive it away by finding fault with the butter. Every storekeeper knows that if he finds fault with the butter of one of his customers he will try the other store next time. That storekeeper, having the qualities of what is called a sharp business man,

Anxious to Secure the New Customer.

Will look at the butter, and, with a wonderful smile of sincerity, call it the nicest and sweetest and most delicious butter he had seen for a long time, and that he would keep it for his own use or for some special friend. He has now gained a new customer on whom he expects to make more than he loses on the butter, even if he has to sell it for soap grease. The customer will go away more than ever satisfied that she is the best butter maker in that neighborhood, and that the other storekeeper is a scoundrel who grossly insulted her concerning her butter. It is all very well to let the farmer down a little easy, by putting the blame on the merchant for allowing the butter to spoil on his own hands, but nobody knows better than he does, that a great deal of it is unfit to eat, and like Joseph's coat in color, when it reaches him. It is not my purpose in this letter to point out where, or how, this butter is spoiled, but may do so before this campaign is ended. My object at present is to point out the absurdity of the system, and get the farmers to stop this unnatural, deceptive and unprofitable truck, store butter business. When a man has worked as long as I did to improve our butter industry, he knows what it is to get people out of such a terrible bad habit. They get into the habit of trading their butter on store goods, and to this they stick, but would think it absurd and unreasonable to trade wheat, oats, cattle, etc., on store goods. Why is this so? Simply because of the poor quality that was made, which had to be sold for more than it was worth to a man whose mouth was muzzled and who dared not say anything of the quality for fear that he could not sell the dresses.

A Pernicious System.

This pernicious system is one of the greatest hinderances to the process of the creameries, and also to the improvement of our butter. Storekeepers as a rule pay more for the butter in trade than they expect to get for it, and the farmer imagines that he is getting a certain value for his butter, when in reality he pays so much more for his goods. It is much easier to see one cent on a pound of butter than ten cents on a yard of tweed. The creamery has therefore to compete in cash against store trade. Merchants are sick of this unfair business and have tried in different places to agree among themselves to pay cash value for the butter and also to pay according to quality, but in every case it has failed. There is, therefore, no use for the farmer to hope for improvement from that source, and in order to save them from the serious losses they now sustain, which we all feel, they must make up their minds to patronize the creamery. I will in my next show why the creameries were, so far, not a greater success. The fault is not as one of your correspondents thought, on the part of the creamery men. M. MOYER."

It is not Unlawful.

Congress has enacted no law to restrain a person from going about in a badly constipated condition, or with a distressing sick headache, rush of blood to the head, bad taste in the mouth, bilious complaint, or any kindred difficulty; but the laws of health and comfort will suggest to any one so afflicted, the wisdom of hastening to the nearest druggist for a 25-cent vial of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets—the most potent of remedies for all disorders of the liver, stomach and bowels. Purely vegetable, pleasant to take, and perfectly harmless. 26
