There are in Germany 2,508 co-operative stores societies, having a membership of over 1,200,000. The value of goods sold by them increased from 147,000,000 marks (mark 23.8 cents) in 1903 to 230,000,000 in 1905. The profits realized (which accrue to the benefit of the members) were 12,000,000 and 18,000,000, respectively, for the years mentioned. Many of these various retail co-operative stores have their wholesale purchasing companies which supply them at original cost; they are thereby enabled to secure lowest wholesale prices.

PAT CROWE MEETS BOY HE KIDNAPPED

Young Cudahy Gives Him Warm Greeting and Orders Up Refreshments.

New York, Jan. 30.—With the easy nonchalance of a man of the world, "Pat" Crowe, not wholly unknown to the police of the country, and who is soon to line up with "Pat" Sheedy as a connoisseur and patron of the fine arts, visited the Knickerbocker Hotel on a recent afternoon and sent his card to Edward A. Cudahy, jun., heir to the great Cudahy fortune in Omaha. Some years ago the country rang with the report of Crowe's daring abduction of the Cudahy boy, whom he held in ransom and for whose release he said he was paid $25,000 by the lad's father.

If young Cudahy was surprised by the call he kept it well concealed, and he returned his erstwhile kidnapper's greeting with a well-simulated warmth. The news of the meeting drifted through the corridors of the hotel, and the two were the objects of close attention on the part of those who crowded into the cafe, where they had adjourned to talk over the adventure they had in common.

Those who know Pat Crowe will not be at all astonished by his action, for he is known as one of the "nerviest" men who ever came out of the west, but that he maintained such cordial relations with the boy whose kidnapping caused such an international sensation on account of the wealth and position of his parents was rather more than the most credulous were ready to believe.

With young Cudahy when the visit was paid was Mason Peters, formerly theatrical manager, and now real estate operator, who is a close friend of the elder Cudahy. He could scarcely credit it when he heard that Pat Crowe was the name given by the visitor, and awaited with interest the young man's attitude.

But if Crowe was game, so was Cudahy, and he gave his former captor a warm clasp of the hand when he met him. More than that, he asked as to his welfare, as if he were inquiring after an old and dear friend, and made it clear that he would be glad to serve him in any way in his power.

At first the report of the meeting of the two was garbled, and a certain portion of Broadway was excited by the story that the one-time bandit had attempted a second abduction of Cudahy, jun. As a matter of fact, this would be a rather difficult deed to accomplish, for he is a strapping young fellow, who seems well able to take care of himself.

When the two were seen together in interested conversation, laughing and joking as they talked, the tale on its face was proved baseless, and those familiar with the details could only stand around in amazement, the whole thing seemed so incongruous.

Then they parted on the best of terms after partaking of some liquid refreshment, which Crowe observed that the younger man hadn't indulged in on an earlier occasion. Cudahy was then about 13 years old. He is a fully grown man now and has taken an important position with his father. Crowe is in the city, "doing the best he can," as a friend phrased it, which doesn't seem to be half-bad.

CRUSHED UNDER WAGON

St. Thomas, Jan. 30.—There was a distressing fatality on the London and Port Stanley road last evening, when George S., the young son of Cyrus Hartsell, who lives in the old toll-gate house, was run over by a wagon loaded with wood, driven by Jameson Jackson, of Southwold, and the little fellow died this morning.

The wheels passed over the child's abdomen, inflicting fatal injuries. He and another boy went under the vehicle to catch hold of the reach, and the child got in front of the hind wheel, which knocked him down and terribly crushed him.

SHOULD BE NIPPED IN THE EARLY BUD

Thus Preventing Very Serious Trouble That May Be Hard to Eradicate.

A very eminent authority in matters of health says: "If people, when they find a cold or la grippe taking hold of them, or who have a cough, catarrh or bronchitis, would take proper precautionary measures instead of allowing these apparently slight troubles to develop into decline and consumption, much could be done to save individual suffering and stamp out tuberculosis, otherwise known as the Canadian white plague. They should, upon the first symptoms showing themselves, consult a doctor, or, better still, take some thoroughly reliable home remedy, the virtues of which have been tested and found to be a specific in such cases, such as Psychine or Oxomulsion, and thus avert the dangers of this blighting scourge, which is as insidious as it is terrible." Writing in this connection, Mr. Alex. Matheson, of Braemar, Oxford County, says:

"In the winter of 1900 I was a sufferer with catarrh, asthma and bronchitis. Mine was a most complicated case. My physician advised me to go to another climate. He told me my lungs were seriously affected, and that I could only live a short time.

"I was so bad I could not go out of the house for months at a time. I procured PSYCHINE, using about $50 00 worth, and it was money well spent, as I am now hearty and strong, and free from taking medicine of any kind."

ALEX. MATHESON.

Mr. Matheson has for the past five years been the wonder of Oxford County. Those who know him consider that little less than a miracle has been performed in saving his life. Psychine has many such cases to its credit. For sale at all druggists at 50c, and $1, or at Dr. T. A. Slocum's, Limited, Toronto.

NEW LAND OF MILK AND HONEY

Voliva Tells of the Zion Which He Will Establish on the Pacific Coast.

Chicago, Jan. 30. — Speaking of the new Zion, which he purposes founding somewhere on the Pacific Coast, Leader Voliva today said:

"We are going," he said, "to the new land of Canaan, the land flowing with milk and honey. There every man will earn an honest living, for no drones may enter the new Zion. There will be no rich or poor in the new Zion; there will be no $40,000 Shiloh house on one corner and a miserable paper shack on the other. The citizens will be equal and their homes will be similar. To each family will be given its quota of acres, and these will be made as fruitful as modern agriculture can make them.

"There are few who now know how near John Alexander Dowie came to the accomplishment of a great work. The foundation of Zion City was right, and so long as the leader, who I hold was once the greatest man in the world, held to the teachings of his God, Zion prospered. It was the devil who came in to John Alexander Dowie; it was the devil who stole away his wits. Had satan not done this the world would have seen the fulfillment of great things, and the great change would have been near."

Many people in Zion City are said to be heartily in sympathy with the movement, and it is believed that with a new colony many of those who deserted to Parham and Piper, whose proselyting and desertion have reduced the number of the faithful, would return to the fold.

In the present condition in Zion City there is little hope that the debts ever will be cleared away. The creditors hold everything save the little furniture in the tabernacle and in the ecclesiastical offices. This is not to the liking of Voliva, who longs for the power that once was Dowie's. Moreover, he believes that starting with a new community, many of the ideas originated by Dr. Dowie can be enlarged upon and the mistakes avoided.

The history of Zion begins with the birth of John Alexander Dowie, a son of Scotch parents who, a few years ago, declared that the man he called father is not his father.

John Murray Dowie was a Congregational minister of comfortable fortune, and young Dowie received a fair foundation for his education under him and in the board schools of his native town. In 1860 the family removed to Adelaide, Australia, and for seven years young Dowie served as a clerk in a mercantile establishment. He even then displayed remarkable aptitude for business. Also he displayed religious tendencies, and at the age of 16 declared that he had been cured of dyspepsia by divine aid.

In 1867, when he was 20 years old, Dowie returned to Scotland and, on the money he had saved while working in Australia, took a five-year course in the university. The records show that he was a remarkable student, especially of languages and of religious history, which seemed to be his chief delight.

Dowie, on graduation from the divinity school, at once took orders in the Congregational Church, and in 1872 returned to Australia and began preaching at a Congregational Church in Newtown, a suburb of Sydney. He continued in his work with success, his magnetic oratorical powers drawing large crowds wherever he preached.

Dowie landed in San Francisco in 1880. He started his divine healing crusade, but after a long but not successful effort he was driven from that city.

It was in 1890 that Dowie dawned upon Chicago. It was a long time before Chicago heard of it. Out in Western Springs, a little prairie suburb at that time, Dowie started in "to fight sin" in Chicago. By and by some correspondent found him out there preaching to a handful of followers wrote a story about him. That was the first Chicago heard of Dowie, but in the spring of the following year Dowie moved upon Evanston, and there he remained until the spring of the world's fair, when, with a dozen followers, he rented a house down near the Midway, and, almost with his own hands, he built Zion tabernacle No. 1, and later Zion City.

SPIRIT AS TRUSTEE

On Condition It Is on Board $50,000 Is Left Dead Man's Church.

Komoko, Ind., Jan. 30.—Probably the most peculiar will ever filed for probate in this state is that of the late George W. Deffenbaugh, who left the church of his faith $50,000 on condition that his spirit be elected a member of the board of trustees of the church and consulted at every meeting.

The money is left to the Swedenburg church here. In his will Deffenbaugh also provided liberally for his wife and children.

The will is a long involved document. It stipulates that Deffenbaugh shall be a member of the board of trustees after his death and shall be consulted in all things relating to the church. A plan for the government of the church is contained in the will. The trustees are to meet often and consult with Deffenbaugh's spirit regarding details. In the event that the trustees appointed by the will fail or refuse to act, then a convention of church members is to be held, and they are to select a board of trustees and proceed as though the parties selected had accepted the trust. Children of Deffenbaugh are contesting the will on the ground that their father was insane.

It is easy to see the finish of the easy going individual who is dead certain that the Lord will provide.

FOREIGN CAPITAL IN BIG BEEF MART

Has Plan to Use Canadian and Argentine Meats for Germany and England.

Chicago Jan. 30.—Information has just reached this country of some negotiations now in progress in England for dealing with the meat industry in a way that may have a good deal of interest both for American producers and for packers. While they involve foreign capital and management, the result, if secured, will certainly broaden the market. It is no less than a proposed combination of experienced and successful men in Canada, Argentina, Germany and England, for the purpose of using the supplies of the two countries first named, in order to meet the demands of the two latter.

It is well known that the irritation in Germany and the consequent prohibition of our meat products has been largely due to certain methods of handling in vogue in this country long before the exposure was made at home, while in England there has been developed a great deal of suspicion of the same methods as the result of the investigations made last year.

May Find Ready Property.

All these various interests now bid fair to find, ready made to their hands, a property which may be utilized for quick, effective, and profitable operation. A few years ago a company foreseeing the trend of the meat trade and its sure and rapid growth, entered into independent negotiations with the London and Southwestern Railway and also with the local authorities and the various commercial organizations of Southampton, with a view of providing first-class facilities for handling this trade. As a result the company procured a large area of land on the water front, upon which it has erected, at an expenditure of $4,000,000, an abattoir which is, perhaps, the most perfect to be found anywhere in the world. Everything that can conduce to cleanliness and economy, both in slaughtering and in keeping the carcasses until ready for market, has been devised and installed. This great work has only been completed within the last year so that it has not got fairly to work.

Few Parliamentary Licenses.

How important this position is can be understood when it is known that only four or five parliamentary licenses have been issued in England permitting slaughter at landing places of foreign-bred animals, and of these only three or four are situated at points where they can hope to develop into large proportions. One of these is in Deptford, just outside London, down the Thames. Here the facilities for slaughtering cattle are of a primitive order; the sanitary arrangements are much behind the times and the methods that have long been in vogue are still more antiquated. But the conservative character of English business has made it difficult to transfer the slaughtering business to another port.

It is this condition, however, that has encouraged the company to develop at Southampton the facilities which have just been briefly described. A license, like that issued for the latter place, costs from $150,000 to $200,000 for parliamentary expenses, actual fee for the license, and other charges; so that this, in and of itself, almost furnishes a foundation for a great trade. When to this is added the fact that Southampton is better situated, geographically, for taking up and carrying through this work, the advantages which it presents will be evident.

Change in Port Evident.

For many years it has been recognized that it was only a question of time when the great foreign trade in live animals, carried on in London, must be transferred to some other port. An element that enters into account is the high price of the land upon which the Deptford slaughtering houses are situated. As it is now owned by the corporation of the city of London, and can be made available at any time for development, the removal is likely to be hastened.

It is only natural that something like a united effort should be made by the countries mentioned. They have long resented the fact that both as consumers and as the owners of capital seeking investments they have seemed to be in the hands of a combination situated in another country. This condition has been the more galling when it relates to a prime necessity of life, for which the demand, in both Germany and England, has been growing by leaps and bounds.

Canadians Restive.

The Canadians have long been restive because so many of their products must find their way to market through American ports, and because their prices were fixed almost entirely by their strongest competitors. While live cattle from Argentina are not now admitted to England, the trade in chilled meat has increased so rapidly that new facilities must be provided for handling it. Here again Southampton stands as the gateway to an important trade. There ought also to be a great advantage at Southampton, for cattle from Canada may be slaughtered there; and, owing to political and economic conditions, the product is far more likely to find a market in Germany than if it came from the United States. It is universally recognized that it is only a question of time when the present German regulations must be repealed or so modified as to admit foreign meat, especially that from Canada and Argentina; so that if the interests of large groups of financiers in England and Germany unite in promoting this object many of the difficulties inherent in so large a movement ought to be removed.

TITLED LOVER PUT OFF

But Declares He Will Win in the End Despite All the Smiths.

London, Jan. 30.—"If she will have me I will marry her in spite of all the Smiths in the universe," swears Lord Alistair, Robert Innes-Ker, brother and heir-presumptive of the Duke of Roxburghe.

So, if Miss Anita Stewart, that pretty and winsome girl, is equally determined to marry Lord Alistair, she can comfort herself during her separation from him.

Her mother, Mrs. James Henry Smith, nipped in the bud Miss Anita's first love romance.

Miss Stewart, whose new stepfather, "Silent" Smith," is so immensely wealthy, met in Scotland Lord Alistair, 26 years old, a lieutenant in the Royal Horse Guards, who served bravely in the Boer war.

The young people immediately were attracted toward each other, according to two members of the Innes-Ker family. The ardent Englishman proposed marriage and would have been accepted had not Miss Anita's mother immediately taken her away on a yachting trip.

"I myself have the best reason to disapprove of early marriages, even if the suitor belongs to a ducal house of England," was the only explanation Mrs. Smith vouchsafed.

Lord Alistair's opportunity to further his suit will come this season, when Miss Anita will be presented at court and appear in society under the Duchess of Manchester's chaperonage.

The Duchess of Roxburghe, who was Miss May Goelet, of New York, is spending $500,000 in anticipation of the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to Floors Castle next summer.

The duchess is determined that her royal visitors shall enjoy the very height of luxurious comfort. She is having the whole enormous mansion turned inside out and made new. She called to her from Paris Boulanger, the famous decorator, and after studying every detail of the castle with her, he drew a color scheme for the fresh decorations, in which he largely followed the duchess' own ideas.

The bedrooms which the prince and princess and their suite will occupy will have hangings of chintzes, copies of those of 120 years ago. Wall paper to match is being made, the beds are being manufactured in Paris. The ballrooms and drawing-rooms are being stripped of their wall coverings and exquisite brocades are being woven to fill the panels. Even new gates are being put on the main entrance of the park.

BRAVE PERIL IN AFRICA

Chicago Woman Hunter Has Thrilling Experience With the Rhinos.

New York, Jan. 30.—After fourteen months in the interior of Africa, during thirteen of which they lived under canvas, Carl E. Akeley, of the Field Columbian Museum, Chicago, and Mrs. Akeley, have arrived in this city on their way home. On a steamship today there came 84 cases of skins and skeletons, weighing seventeen tons, the results of their expedition, which will be added to the museum collection.

Intending to be gone only a few months, Mrs. Akeley remained with the expedition to the end, it being the longest African hunting trip ever taken by a woman. She took an active part in all the hunting, and two of the eight elephants and one of the four rhinoceroses were shot by her.

During the last eight months of the trip she and the rest of the party traveled entirely by foot, and for months at a time Mr. and Mrs. Akeley saw no white persons.

"Using the Uganda Railroad as our base," Mr. Akeley said tonight, "we traveled through British East Africa to within about 100 miles of Lake Victoria. We trekked north of the road mostly, and part of the time were within ten miles of the most savage tribes of that region.

"We were accompanied on the trip by Vernon Shaw Kennedy, a Chicago sportsman, and Edmund Heller, of the museum staff. They remained with us six months, and after that Mrs. Akeley and I went alone, with only the natives of our caravan, from 75 to 150 of them. During all of that time no one of the party was ever ill. There was not an accident, and the most thrilling experiences were when we were in a 'rhino' country and the big animals charged us."
