CONFER DEGREES ON 91 STUDENTS OF UNIVERSITY

Chancellor Roche and Other Officials Conduct Ceremony At Majestic Theatre.

THOUSANDS ATTEND

New Brunswick Minister of Health Praises Dr. Hill For Brilliant Work.

With the applause of a thousand friends ringing in their ears, 91 graduates of the University of Western Ontario stepped forth into the world of opportunity last night through the doors of convocation.

All available space at the Majestic Theatre was crowded by a colorful throng of admirers, who had gathered long before the exercises had begun, to pay tribute to the successful students, upon whom various degrees were conferred by Hon. W. J. Roche, M.D., L.L.D., the chancellor, who was assisted by other officials of the University.

In addition to the conferring of degrees, gold medals, scholarships and prizes were presented by Dr. Roche to a long list of winners, representing every class year at the University.

The impressive ceremony was opened with a parade of all those who were taking part in the exercises.

Headed by Dr. Wallace Crawford and Dr. A. J. Slack, who later in the evening were presented with diplomas of public health, the procession marched from the Y. M. C. A. building on Wellington street to the Majestic Theatre. In the line were first, the students who were to receive prizes and other awards, then the members of the graduating classes, who were followed by members of the faculty and the board of governors. Dr. Roche and Hon. William F. Roberts, minister of public health in New Brunswick, who delivered the convocation address, brought up the rear.

The entrance to the theatre reached, the prize-winning students stood aside until the chancellor and the speaker, followed by the members of the board of governors, and the faculty entered the building to take their allotted places on the platform. A section of the theatre was reserved for the students who were to take part.

The exercises were carried out without mishap. So efficient was the organization that only ninety minutes were required for the conferring of the degrees, the presentation of medals, prizes and scholarships, and the two splendid addresses of the evening.

Kneel Before Chancellor.

As the names of the candidates for the various degrees were read by the officials who presented them to the chancellor, they took their place in a line in the orchestra pit, and then one at a time they knelt before Dr. Roche who, while grasping their hands, conferred upon them the honors for which they had striven through long years.

In this ceremony the chancellor was assisted by Professor Nelson C. Hart, who placed the hood upon the shoulders of those awarded arts degrees; by Dean W. Sherwood Fox, who introduced the students of Univeristy College and those awarded the degrees of Master of Arts; Rev. Father Mahoney, introducing the students from Ursuline College; Rev. Father Dillon, introducing the students of Assumption College; Professor F. Anderson, introducing the candidates from Huron College; Dr. J. Campbell, M. A., who presented the medical students, and Dr. Hibbert W. Hill, Ph.I.D., the candidates for diplomas of public health and the certificates of public health nursing.

All except two of these who were to receive degrees were present, Alberta Jean Hanna Rowell, a member of the graduating class of University College, was awarded the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and William S. Hodgins, the degree of Doctor of Medicine, "in absentia."

As the name of each student was announced it was greeted with tremendous applause. This was true of the prize winners as well as the candidates for degrees. It was even more pronounced when G. A. Wright and Miss Helen Battle, both of University College, were announced as double medal winners.

Co-eds Receive Flowers.

With the exercises at the theatre completed those who had taken part returned to the Y. M. C. A. where the co-eds found banks of flowers awaiting them. Their friends had taken but another way of showing their appreciation. Following the custom established two years ago, flowers were banned from the theatre building.

In his convocation address, the Hon. William F. Roberts, M.D., who proved an excellent speaker, dealt chiefly with public health work, a subject which is dear to his heart as minister of health in the legislature of New Brunswick.

Interested as he was in this subject, however, he did not neglect to make an appeal for a closer relationship between the Maritime Provinces and the other portions of Canada; in fact, he believed that in solving the national problem of health, Canada would create a bond which would bring the various provinces closer together.

"It is with great pleasure," said Dr. Robert, "that I respond to the invitation of your university to attempt to say a few words to you upon this occasion, so notable to the student graduates of this university, and also as notable to myself, because of the honor done me in meeting you. This pleasure and honor I do not take in a personal way, but I understand it as reflecting honor and regard upon that section of Canada from which I come, and more especially upon the province of new Brunswick which I have the honor to represent.

"It is not necessary to tell you where New Brunswick is, or the exact situation of the city of Saint John, which has been my home since birth. I am sure you are acquainted with the chief winter port of Canada, the gateway through which flows a large proportion of the agricultural products of this great province of Ontario, and of the prairie provinces beyond.

Praises Dr. H. W. Hill.

"But it is not to dilate upon the merits of Saint John that I come here before you.

"It is rather to talk to you for a few minutes upon a subject which has closely engaged my attention for the past six or seven years, a subject I fain would bring to your attention, in the hope that you may carry away with you, perhaps, an enhanced opinion of the importance of public health.

"That this is no new subject to you I am well aware. For a good many years, as I understand, you have had in connection with this university, a department specially devoted to this interest, and conducted by that widely-known and justly celebrated sanitarian, Dr. H. W. Hill. It is not without good reason that I so refer to Dr. Hill. Upon my own public health staff in New Brunswick is a gentleman not entirely unskilled in sanitation and in diagnosis of communicable disease, who has often commented to me upon Dr. Hill's illuminating article upon smallpox. He himself has had extended experience with that disease, and he has frequently assured me that he learned more from that article as regards the diagnosis and management of that disease than from all other authorities combined."

Shows Work Grows.

To illustrate the rapid growth and spread of public health work, Dr. Roberts described in detail what had been done in the Province of New Brunswick since he had become the minister of health.

In former days, not very far removed, public health was a rather feeble plant. It was, and in many places is yet, planted within the shadow of some great department of government, often quite alien or foreign to preventive medicine. Nothing used to be much more common than to find public health administration attached to the incongruous subject of agriculture.

"In 1917, happening to be asked to stand as candidate in Saint John for the local legislature, I covenanted, before agreeing to do so, that in case of my election, I should have a free hand in initiating a new public health service for my native province. This was agreed to."

Attacks Old System.

Dr. Roberts showed how little could be expected from a department of public health, even if the chief medical officer of the civil service department was efficient, if the direction was in the hands of a minister who had "more than one iron in the fire."

The chief medical officer is not in or of the cabinet. He cannot bring his personality to bear directly upon the government. He may clearly see the necessity and expediency of an increased expenditure or the creation of further legislation, which is coercive in character, but his only resource is to try and impress such necessity upon his own minister, who, perhaps, has two or three other branches under his control.

"With an individual minister presiding over a health portfolio, it is otherwise. He has only one iron in the fire. His interests and ambitions are centered upon it, and it alone. He brings to bear his personal influence very directly, and his colleagues must recognize it. It is for this reason, among others, that in New Brunswick, I made this matter, of a separate ministership, an essential, without which, I resolved not to go on. In this connection it is pleasant to observe that similar action has been taken since its institution in New Brunswick, in various places and countries, England being the most notable example.

Dr. Roberts then proceeded to give in detail an account of the wonderful organization he has built up in New Brunswick. It had worked out so successfully in combating and preventing disease, especially during the epidemic of 1918, he would very much like to see public health taken up in every province of the Dominion.

Wants Federal Action.

"I shall, therefore, not be satisfied until the Dominion of Canada views public health as its greatest economic problem, and I think this problem can only be solved by each province having a ministry of health as a distinct and separate entity by itself. The health edifice thus founded could very well have as its keystone a like separate health ministry for the Dominion.

"Thus the federal minister, with the nine provincial ministers, each with his chief medical officer or deputy, would fittingly form the strongest possible series of executives. The former group would supply that political pressure, so necessary in our for mof government to all efficient administration, while the latter group would furnish the technical knowledge and skill equally necessary to decisive and beneficent results."

"The establishment of a ministry of public health with portfolio and organization as I have just outlined, was followed by one, if not equal to in importance, certainly resembled it in logic.

"Almost in every country and almost since the numbering of births, marriages and deaths began to be the duty of the state, that service was delegated to some relatively obscure position or official, connected as was public health itself, only in the slightest way, with some department of government, often alien, and sometimes indifferent or even hostile. No more unfortunate connection than this can hardly be conceived. Think of it: The three most important events in human life—birth, marriage and death placed, say under the consideration of a minister of woods, lands and mines.

Found Condition Absurd.

"We found it to be in an absolutely decayed condition—a condition so absurd and so inefficient, that may years ago the government of that day had wisely ordered that no returns of it should be published, as they were simply absurd and would bring public services into ridicule. Some three years have elapsed since the change was made, and I can safely aver that New Brunswick has got as complete and exhaustive account of the births, marriages and deaths of its people, as has any province in Canada, and far better than that of many states of the union.

"There is another activity, purely relating to public health, indeed in some respects too, standing at the very foundation. For years medical school inspection was administered by the educational authorities, but now it has also become an integral part of the health administration.

"Standing out, therefore, with these three leading activities, general sanitation, vital statistics, and medical inspection of schools, we in New Brunswick have pressed forward, full of hope, meeting with many obstacles, rarely or ever coming near to our ideals, but never losing faith that right will succeed."

Dr. Roberts closed with a plea for aid in spreading the gospel of public health.

Dr. Roche Optimistic.

Dr. Roche gave an address flavored throughout with optimism and good cheer. He dealt almost entirely with the University of Western Ontario and the cause of education.

"At each convocation," he said, "Western University had the same story to tell: a story of increased efficiency and larger classes. This is due, I think, to realization on the part of the public regarding the value of the university to the community. Certainly generous assistance has come from the people of this city, the surrounding communities and the provincial government. Their aid has given heart to all those who are working to make the institution a success."

He believed also that a great deal of the success was due to the loyalty of the graduates to their Alma Mater.

Dr. Roche stated there was no longer any basis for the argument that the university was a place only for rich men's sons. "The doors are open to all," he said, "and the conditions are made so attractive that anyone desiring an education may secure a university training.

"Men are entering universities from all walks of life. A recent census taken in a certain medical school showed that the students were the sons of fathers who were following 22 occupations, and the majority were the sons of farmers."

The speaker did not think there was very much in the claim that the universities were educating the boys to desert the farms. If this were true it did not speak very well for rural districts.

He looked upon education as a great medium to break down class barriers. Bonds of sympathy were established when men of all stations in life rubbed shoulders in securing university training.

The civilized world realized that the competition of the future will be the competition of intellects. The nation that did not train the rising generations would become a nation of hewers of wood and drawers of water.

There should not be any aristocracy in life, he said. Higher education must be inexpensive, and we must not under-estimate the value of our schools.

As far as London was concerned, he believed the people could look confidently into the future.

ABSENT CITY FATHERS CAUSE POSTPONEMENT

Consideration of $180,000 Debenture Issue Is Laid Over By City Council.

Those members of the city council who showed their keenness for the city's business by turning up for the council meeting called for yesterday afternoon, and consisting of the mayor and Aldermen Burdick, McKay, Watt, Colbert and Hayden, voiced a strongly-worded protest at the dilatoriness of the absent members.

As there were only six members present, which is one less than the number required to form a council quorum, the business for which the meeting was called, which was to pass the bylaw dealing with the issue of the $180,000 debentures for the Western Fair, was perforce postponed to another date.

"I'll tell you what," said Ald. P. J. Watt at the end of half an hour, and when by the constitution of the council the meeting had to be adjourned, "let's get the press to publish the names of those who were too busy to come. Perhaps that will shame them. I doubt it, though," he added.

The remaining aldermen, though not so vehement, were just as peeved with the recalcitrant city fathers. They telephoned to all the truants they could reach, only to be met with various forms of excuses and reasons. They scoured the city hall from top to bottom. They donned a figurative pair of gumshoes and searched every nook and corner of the picturesque old ruin on Dundas street in a vain endeavor to "dig up" an alderman.

Finally the hands of the clock on the wall of the committee-room pointed to 5:30. "That settles it," declared Ald. Burdick. "Half an hour is all the time we are allowed. You've got to adjourn the meeting now, and I'm going home."

So ended a specially-called meeting of the London City Council, and according to all the rules of the game there should have been a few burning ears in the old town last night.

Or do you have headaches? If so, call and have your eyes examined by Mr. F. Steele, 210 Dundas street. He will give you his personal attention, and the benefit of his eighteen years' experience in eye examinations.—Advt.

FORD RUNS 57 MILES ON GALLON OF GASOLINE.

A new automatic Vaporizer and Decarbonizer, which in actual test has increased the power and mileage of Fords from 25 to 50 per cent, and at the same time removed every particle of carbon from the cylinders, is the proud achievement of John A. Stransky, 3983 South Main street, Pukwana, South Dakota. A remarkable feature of this simple and inexpensive device is that its action is governed entirely by the motor. It is slipped between the carburetor and intake manifold, and can be installed by anyone in five minutes without drilling or tapping. With it attached, Ford cars have made from 40 to 57 miles on one gallon of gasoline. Mr. Stransky wants to place a few of these devices on cars in this territory, and has a very liberal offer to make to anyone who is able to handle the business which is sure to be created wherever this marvelous little device is demonstrated. If you want to try one entirely at his risk, send him your name and address today.—Advt.
