On 279 Special Trains, C. G. Railways

Up to March 1st 757,400 Troops have travelled over Government Railways.

Thousands arrive each week at Halifax and are sent forward to Disperal Areas.

Since the war began in 1914 up to March 1st, when S.S. Belgic disembarked her returned soldier passengers at Halifax 757,400 troops have been carried on special trains over the Canadian Government Railways.

The first train which carried troops over the Government Railways the year the war was declared was numbered one and all special troop trains to and from Halifax since that time have been numbered consecutively. The last train from the Belgic on Saturday was No. 1279. Each train averages about twelve cars with an average of 50 men to a car, which figures up a total of 767,400 men carried. Of course in addition to this thousands of soldiers have journeyed between Montreal and Halifax by regular trains during the past furo years.

The movement of troops back to Canada is now approaching its greatest activity. Last Sunday 5000 arrived at Halifax by the transports Lapland and Belgic, and fifteen special trains were despatched westward inside of fourteen hours.

S. S. Megantic with soldiers and dependents arrived Wednesday and S.S. Adriatic is due Sunday. The movement of returning men is to be kept up actively all summer.

The process of disembarkation at Halifax is being carried on without a hitch, and there is a fine system of co-operation between the Military and the Railway officials.

Sacred Music

(Rev. J. E. Bourget, Musical Director of the Archdiocese of Chicago.)

"Nil innovetur nisi quod traditum est."

The traditions of our Holy Mother the Church are sacred to all and worthy of all respect due to them, not only as regards the dogmas of faith, but also those traditions pertaining to things liturgical. It is impossible that abuses creep in regarding the dogmas, because they are so well defined. Still, abuses may creep in as regards things pertaining to the liturgical practices of the Church, and especially the Music at Church services. Having travelled extensively in Europe, Asia and the Orient, I became acquainted with people of different nationalities and creeds. In visiting so many cities, towns and villages, I have had the good fortune to be present at the pious singing of Holy Mass in several Catholic Churches.

I have highly appreciated and admired several choirs of men and boys, as in Westminster Abbey in London, St. Sulpice in Paris and the Sistine Chapel in Rome, but I cannot forget the impression I felt on hearing the most perfect rendition of the Gregorian Chant and Palestrina Music by the young orphans under the care of the good and zealous Franciscan Fathers, in the Holy Sepulchre Church in Jerusalem during the long and difficult services of Holy Week Another instance where I was most edified and astonished at singing was one Sunday in March, 1916, in the Cathedral of Canton, China. Neither my companion priest nor myself could believe that Chinese boys, trained by the Christian Brothers, could attain to such a perfection in Church singing. Of all things seen or heard whilst travelling abroad in those countries so different from ours, nothing is so apt to produce a greater impression than attending and following the sacred rites of the Church. A Catholic will always keep the fondest remembrances of his visit in a place where he heard Mass sung as he was accustomed to hear it at home in his native parish. He forgets for a few moments distances and separation from the dear ones left at home. It was, then, in hearing Mass sung in Australia, China, Japan and the Philippines, that I understood better the importance of having all over the world uniformity in liturgical matters.

People wonder why in one place this is done and in another the contrary. We are asked often why in this church we hear only singing and music according to the order given by Pope Pius and his successor, when in several others they do not seem to know that such a rule exists in the Catholic world. It is a well known fact and proved often that the choir plays in the Church an integral part in the liturgy; hence, to neglect its duties means indifference towards the worship due to Almighty God, who desires to be served with certain rules preserved by His Church in His name. Therefore, it should be the duty of all to instill this principle into the hearts of the faiehful. Church music which does not serve to raise the hearts to God is not true Church music. As a matter of fact, in liturgical services—such as Mass, Vespers, Benediction, etc—nothing is left to the discretion, taste or preference of pastors and people, or to the caprice of the organist and singer. The rubrics clearly define in detail what is to be done and how Pope Pius X of blessed memory lamented deeply the abuse of disregarding the matter of Church music, and to reform it promulgated the much needed "motu proprio," on the feast of St. Cecilia, November 22, 1903. It is to be understood, then, that all pastors, communities and choir masters should at length take to heart the earnest and strong appeal of the immortal Pius X, who, after all, only echoed all the earlier recommendations of his predecessors.

In this "motu proprio" the rules and rubrics for choirs are clearly explained, and as such can be understood by any one. To emphasize the importance of this reform in our church choirs, I cannot refrain from mentioning in this letter a few instances where the greatest abuses have crept into the most sacred services of our Churches. I have heard (and many others also) the most religious motets of Benediction sung to the tunes of Puccini's La Boheme, Verdi's Attilla, Wagner's Lohengrin or Taunhaseur, and still more pitiable, Alma Redemptoris Mater. to the tune of the popular song, "The End of a Perfect Day." Recently, I witnessed the most distressing scene and abuse of regulations regarding funerals At the entrance of the remains of a good Catholic man, instead of the "Miserere" which should be sung, a certain lady friend appeared in front of the balcony or choir loft and lamentably rendered the song "Face to Face." It is to be deeply deplored that parties interested in Church services and who understand the strict rules exacted by the Church, should allow such performances in their churches.

When I mention all these abuses and points of importance to shed light on the question of suitable modern music for our services, I only intend to help organists and choir leaders in making the selections of Church music to be rendered by their choirs in Catholic Churchas. I have often heard people having charge of choirs say that they believe it impracticable to organize and keep together male choirs, children or mixed choruses that will be interested in true and real Church music. To this assertion let me relate my experience obtained in Canada. It is a well-known fact that Church singing, i. e. plain chant, has always been inseparable from Church services in Canada, but wishing to submit and be in comformity with Rome in all rubrics and liturgy, they at once, after receiving the motu proprio, established in every large city. a "Schola Cantorum," and adopted exclusively the new Vatican Edition of Gregorian Chant We are inclined sometimes to criticize the idea of discarding their former ways of singing plain chant, which had been greatly praised and admired by His Holiness, Pope Pius X, when he had heard "Dumont's Messe Royale 1er Ton," sung by 1,000 voices at the beatification of Joan of Arc in St. Peter's Basilica in Rome. If such submission to the orders and rules demanded by the "motu proprio" could be observed in one part of this continent, what could prevent us from obtaining the same result in our great Catholic city of Chicago? Already great changes and improvements have taken place in the archdioceses of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, St. Paul and several other dioceses. We are highly gratified at reading the interesting programme and important information regarding Church music in the interesting monthly magazine, "The Catholic Choirmaster," the official bulletin of the Society of St Gregory in America.

In the last number we read that His Holiness Benedict XV received recently in audience the professors, officers and Alumni of the Pontifical Superior School of Sacred Music, The Pope paid special tribute to the generosity of the auxiliary committee of the Pontifical School established in America. His Holiness recommended that all Bishops, even in far off lands, would select worthy and talented students to pursue the study of Sacred Music, either in Rome or at other well established and competent places where such teaching is given, in order that they may spread love and appreciation of true Sacred Music throughout the entire world, and thus realize the admirable ideas of Pope Pius X in every diocese. The ideal to keep before one at all times, the Holy Father added, was that Sacred Music should be prayer. Our good and generous Archbishop, who has so much at heart the perfection of the Church services, has spared nothing to help and improve singing in the Churches of his diocese, and he recently proved once more his ambition and desire of strict conformity to the motu proprio, by encouraging and directing that all the boys of his Preparatory Seminary should be taught and should sing plaint chant, and by so doing greatly aid in rendering Church music more attractive and inciting the faithful to fervent prayer.

Reading Good Fiction.

Says "S." in the Catholic Register: Do you ever read classical literature or do you confine yourself to the writers of the present day? Most persons who rarely read the worth while books handed down to us from past generations think that these are dry. A taste for good reading must be cultivated, but, once it is obtained, the reader will take a classic every time in preference to a modern novel.

We have met well educated men who considered it a waste of time to read fiction, even of the classical type. There are so many splendid histories and books of science in the world—many of them every bit as interesting as fiction—that some persons consider it a waste of time to prefer good stories to them.

But a knowledge of the best fiction is essential if we are to become facile writers. The best English is not found in scientific and historical works. As a rule, the English in these works is not better than that in the daily newspaper. The writer pays more attention to the facts portrayed than to their manner of presentation. But the classical novelist's work generally represents the best there is in the English language.

No man can write clear and forceful English unless he habitually reads it. Composition is not a gift. It comes as a result of hard study. One must have a certain foundation of natural talent, but it needs constant development. A thorough knowledge of the rhetorical forms and vocabularies in the works of Thackeray will make a good writer of any intellectual person.

HAD BOILS

All Over Back, Legs and Body For 39 Months.

Ex-Gnr. F. Plumridge, 156 Curzon St., Toronto, Ont., writes:—"I am writing these few lines to let you know how wonderful is the effect of Burdock Blood Bitters. For thirty-nine months, overseas, I had boils all over my back, legs and body, in fact I was simply covered with them. I tried several different remedies, and while in France had medicines sent from England, but all to no avail.

On reaching Canada, July 12th, 1918, I was told to try your B. B. B. and on taking six bottles I had not even a scar left."

The only way to rid yourself of boils, pimples and all skin blotches and blemishes, so that they will never return to bother you again, is to have the blood thoroughly cleansed of all of its impurities, and there is no remedy on the market to-day to equal Burdock Blood Bitters.

This old and reliable preparation has been on the market for the past 40 years.
