RALLY FOR HOWLAND!

watching Centre Toronto, and he believed that Mr. Howland would carry the riding.

Mr. Bertram said he wanted a stable tariff, but Mr. Bertram, he did not think, would have much influence in the Cabinet, as Mr. Tarte or Mr. Fielding. The one had said in Toronto that Mr. Bertram should be elected to continue the tariff remodeling, while the other had said about the same thing in England. If the people wanted a stable tariff, they should send Mr. Howland to Ottawa. If Mr. Bertram went to Parliament he would merely support Sir Wilfrid Laurier. [A voice: "He won't get there."]

Mr. Bertram could not be elected except by Conservatives being fooled by Mr. Bertram's pretences. [A voice: "Rutter and McGuire will vote for him."]

Turning to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Craig recalled how he in Opposition had decried Canada, which was created by the Conservative party, led by Sir John A. Macdonald. He prophesied the quick turning out of power of the Liberals at Ottawa.

Clarke Wallace's Splendid Address.

Hon. N. Clarke Wallace was given a good reception. The Liberals had counted on turning over Centre Toronto to Mr. Bertram, without so much as saying, "by your leave" to the electorate, but the latter thought differently. He was surprised to see a statement from Sir Wilfrid Laurier to the effect that he knew nothing of Mr. Lount's resignation until it was handed him by the Clerk in Chancery. According to this, Mr. Lount had been unfaithful to his leader. But he (the speaker) did not credit the statement. He prophesied that a judgeship or some ober good position awaited him.

The ex-Controller thought the present stampede looked ominous for the Liberal party. Here was Mr. Lount getting out, without even notifying his chief. And now, six months after he went down to Ottawa, Sir Oliver Mowat was occupying Government House in Toronto. When he found such a hard gang to deal with in Ottawa he had given up his hopes for reforms and fled. Thus were Liberal members of Parliament scurrying in all directions.

Ontario should have, according to population, ten members in the Government, but it had four, as compared with Quebec's seven. No wonder that thousands of dollars were being handed over to Quebec, while neglected Ontario got never a cent. He referred to the Drummond County Railway as useless, as a second cill to a dog, and to the subsidy promised for a fourth railroad from Montreal to Quebec. But Quebec had nearly a majority in the Cabinet, and she could get what she liked. Sir Oliver had smelled a rat, and had got out, and Mr. Lount had smelled a rat or a judgeship, and gotten out.

The Crow's Nest Deal.

When Mr. Wallace took up the Crow's Nest deal, a voice in the crowd cried "Jaffray!" The Government, instead of subsidizing the railway to the extent of $5000, as the previous Government would have done, allowed the line $11,000 a mile, besides big holdings of lands and coal fields. Of course a slice of this was to go to "the boys."

The people, the speaker went on, are asked to approve this sort of thing, but he hoped Centre Toronto would rise in its might and call a halt on the Governments. Mr. Lount had helped put the Drummond County and the Crow's Nest deals through the House, and the Liberals wanted Mr. Bertram there to help other deals through, but he would not get there.

A Representative of Labor.

Mr. Andrew McCormack, the able labor leader, next spoke. He was glad to see many workingmen in the audience. He was a Conservative, and the Conservatives could never be as bad as the other party. It was a mistake for any man to pledge the labor party to a certain vote, as some had done in this riding. The present Government at Ottawa were a set of humbugs, and he hoped Centre Toronto would not have the wool pulled over its eyes again. He saw no Molly McGuires here. They were with the Grits, but when they crossed the stream it was only to get better grass.

What had the Laurier Government done for the workingman? There was some job about mail bags, but our very postage stamps and the money we carry about were made in the United States. Laurier said he was going to make Ottawa the Washington of Canada. The next thing he would be flying the Stars and Stripes there.

Concluding an able address, Mr. McCormack called on his hearers to help elect Mr. Howland.

The Candidate's Speech.

Mr. O. A. Howland, the candidate, was given a tremendous reception as he rose to speak. He said that there had been a great change since Saturday last. The change had been brought about by the magnificent enthusiasm of his supporters, and by the splendid work done by the Conservative workers, who had turned out on the shortest possible notice to help him. The importance of the situation had been recognized by the people of Ontario, and every constituency looked to see Centre Toronto, the heart of Canada, redeemed. The good news had sprung like an army from the ground ready for battle.

This was an emergency. In 16 months the Government had proposed to spend $18,000,000. If this was done in the green tree, what would be done in the dry? What would the Government do if it remained in power for the next three years? In view of this expenditure of $18,000,000, if the people voted at this election for Bertram, they would vote for an extra burden of $4 per person or $20 per family. And $11,000,000 of this would come out of Ontario, mostly to be spent outside of Ontario.

Then Mr. Bertram threatened that a railway would not be built to James Bay unless he were elected.

As a sort of referendum, these expenditures came back to be condemned or approved by the people of Centre Toronto, representing the Dominion of Canada.

The candidate prophesied, in conclusion, that a victory in Centre Toronto meant the turn of the tide which would sweep a bad Government from power.

Mr. E. F. Clarke, M.P., wound up the meeting with a rattling speech in favor of the candidate. Mr. Bertram expected the workingmen to vote for him because his convention had passed an anti-sweating resolution. The Conservative party, however, had done all that had been done for labor. The present Government submitted to an alien labor law in the United States and put miserable, ineffective contra-legislation in the statute books. The Liberals showed no sympathy with the workingmen, who should not be led astray, but who should pile up the votes for Mr. Howland.

Here Mr. Clarke asked what had become of Mr. Bertram's island railway scheme. Before Mr. Bertram should be sent to Ottawa he should make a satisfactory job of the Island railway scheme. One thing at a time. If he succeeded in the one he might appeal to the people for their votes for a seat in Parliament.

This new James Bay Railway scheme was an old one, for which, to his own knowledge, a charter had existed for years. And Mr. Bertram acknowledged that the people of Ontario would have to pay for it, any way.

Mr. Clarke pooh-poohed Mr. Bertram's two-faced preferential trade scheme, and recalled the fact that he (Bertram) had for years stumped against protection and for free trade. He appealed to the electors to put their veto upon such double-dealing and shuffling.

Three resounding cheers for the Queen and the candidate closed a grand rally.

BERTRAM'S MEETINGS.

He Spoke to Workingmen and North Enders—What He Had to Say.

The workingmen's meeting held at the corner of Mission-avenue and Hayter-street last night, in Mr. Bertram's interest, was a successful affair. Mr. Henry de Lamburgh was in the chair and eulogized Mr. Bertram. Michael Basso denounced the unauthorized use of his name as a Howland supporter, after which Mr. Lount spoke. He said that the present Government had settled the Manitoba school question, which the previous Government had been unable to do. It had taken up public works which Conservatives had neglected, so that Mr. Foster might make a good financial statement, had deepened canals and rivers for the benefit of the farmers and manufacturers. It had established a fast service for $250,000 per annum less than its predecessors had offered to contractors, and had brought the Intercolonial Railway to Montreal.

Mr. Bertram's Address.

Mr. Bertram followed. He took up Mr. Howland's alleged remark about his want of education and stated that he had commenced to earn his living when he was 15 years old. He spoke of the hard fight he had had since he took hold of the old Doty Engine Works, and declared that no employe had ever complained of being underpaid, no employe had ever been reduced in pay. To be successful in business a man needed the hearty co-operation of his employes. He had it and meant to keep it. He again denied being tied up by corporations and condemned the sweating system.

In St. Paul's Hall.

St. Paul's Hall was well filled last night when George E. Bertram entered the building with his supporters, and he received a warm welcome. J. B. Mackenzie took the chair and on the platform besides the candidate were: D. E. Thomson, T. O. Anderson, W. B. Rogers, Dr. J. J. Cassidy, H. R. Frankland, Wallace Millichamp, A. Wheeler, G. D. Hay, Ald. Hallam, Ald. Spence, D. Kelly, John Bertram, R. M. McDowell and ex-Ald. Carlyle.

Chairman Mackenzie set the ball rolling and spoke of the business interests of the city.

Mr. Bertram plunged straight into business by denying that he was in any way tied up with any company outside his own engine works, and characterized as false and malicious the story that Mr. Wm. Mackenzie of the Street Railway Company had given $5000 towards his election funds, as well as that he had made derogatory statements concerning the late W. H. Howland. His antagonist had hinted at the nomination meeting that he was only a half-educated man. He was not ashamed to say that he began life as a workman. So had the late Hon. Alexander Mackenzie, who nevertheless became Prime Minister of Canada.

Ald. Spence, D. E. Thomson, J. J. Cassidy, John Bertram and Wallace Millichamp spoke briefly.

HAPPENINGS OF A DAY.

The congregation of South Side Presbyterian Church will hold their anniversary social on Friday evening, when Rev. John Neil, B.A., of Westminster Church will give his lecture on "Killarney to Edinburgh via Belgium."

William Speedwell, a local bicyclist, was riding on the path behind a car on Lake Shore-road on Tuesday night, when he ran into the trestle work at Mimico Creek bridge. His escape from serious injury was miraculous. As it is, he is badly bruised.

The bachelors and benedicts of Berkeley-street Methodist Church hold their fourth annual tea and concert to-night. Tea will be served from 6 to 8, after which a choice musical program will be given by Messrs. Coatsworth, Roden, Jackman, Wilkinson and others.

The funeral of Sister Mary Legouri (Miss Murphy) of the House of Providence took place yesterday morning. A large number attended solemn high mass, among them being many priests. Dean O'Connell was the celebrant, while Rev. Father Hand was the master of ceremonies. Six sisters acted as pallbearers.

Those who were not at the concert in Dundas Hall last night missed a great treat. The lecture on "England, Ireland and Scotland," given by Mr. H. Maughan, and illustrated by stereopticon views, was very interesting and instructive. The other parts of the program by Mr. Fisher, Miss Thorn and others, also the phonograph selections by the Messrs. Maughan, were very good.

A quarterly service was held last evening in St. Stephen's Church, the principal features of which were an anthem, "O Lord, How Manifold Are Thy Works," and addresses by Dr. Parkin, Principal of Upper Canada College, on "Missions," and Rev. A. H. Baldwin on the "Widows' and Orphans' Fund." Next Sabbath, being the thirty-ninth anniversary of St. Stephen's Church, special services will be held.

East Toronto.

George Coyne, a Grand Trunk Railway fireman, who resides in East Toronto, underwent a painful operation yesterday at the General Hospital in the removal of one eye. The injury was sustained by the bursting of a locomotive steam gauge. A small piece of glass was driven into Mr. Coyne's eye.

A vacant store at the corner of Queen-street and Coxwell-avenue was almost completely destroyed by fire on Tuesday night about 12 o'clock. The fire was discovered by Mr. William Hitch, who rang the alarm for the Kew Beach Volunteer Brigade, but the flames had made much headway before it was possible for the firemen to arrive at the place.

About 30 boys who have acted as caddies for some time at the golf grounds will play a match to-day. They will be given a dinner by the club after the match.

Yesterday William Salisbury, a brakeman on the Grand Trunk Railway, fell from the top of a car and broke one of his ribs. He was also very badly jarred by the fall.

In reference to an alleged charge of horse stealing preferred against Mr. Harvey of East Toronto village, the facts as disclosed at the Police Court yesterday went to show that Mr. Harvey had simply loaned Mr. Goldstein the horse in question on the understanding that the latter was to return it if the horse didn't suit him, or to keep him on paying $25 in cash and giving another horse to boot. Instead of returning the horse, as agreed, Mr. Goldstein kept the animal, stating that he wouldn't give him up until he (Harvey) had returned him the money for another horse that he (Goldstein) had purchased three months previously. Harvey refused to do this and took away his horse. The magistrate held it was not a case of theft and dismissed the matter.
