CLERGYMAN IN DISGRACE

Parishioners Inclined to Think His Mind is Unsound

New York, May 2.—Members of the fashionable St. George's church, Episcopal, at Hampstead, Long Island, were astonished today when they learned that their pastor, Rev. John Knode Cooke, had departed from Hampstead, and that Miss Floretta Whaley had also left her home and had written letters saying that she would not return. Rev. Mr. Cooke is married.

"The vestry is overwhelmed by the unexpected calamity," said Bishop Burgess, "and is at a loss to account for it. It is inclined to the belief that Dr. Cooke cannot be of sound mind. Three years ago with Mrs. Cooke and a party of Sunday school children he was in a trolley car collision, and he has been a nervous wreck ever since."

TO PUNISH NATIVES

Lisbon, May 2.—A military expedition has left here for Mossamedes for the purpose of repressing native uprisings. Mossamedes is a district of the Portuguese colony of Ambola, West Africa. The capital, bearing the same name, has a population of about 4,500. The population of the district is in the neighborhood of 200,000.

NO MAY DAY LABOR TROUBLES IN VICTORIA

Relations Between Employer and Employe in Highly Satisfactory Condition

It is no exaggeration to say that never before has the month of May opened with such promise of a bright and prosperous year for all classes in Victoria. As was pointed out yesterday the increase in the bank clearings for April, over those of the same period last year, demonstrate clearly that the talk of prosperity is founded on solid fact and that there is every prospect that the same will continue indefinitely. While industries are flourishing and those with money invested in almost any line of commerce are multiplying their capital with marked rapidity, the laboring man also is enjoying conditions which it would be hard to improve. And, moreover, the relationship of employer and employee is one of perfect understanding, as there has been only in rare instances any signs of discord between these two elements, both of which are essential to the advancement of a community.

No Discord

Nowhere in Canada, it is safe to say, is labor better organized than in Victoria. Each trade has its union and those who are competent in their respective lines or who have served the apprenticeship necessary to entitle them to be considered efficient, carry cards of membership. Therefore the workingman may be deemed thoroughly equipped to repel any endeavor on the part of the employer to take advantage of the fact that he has control of the strings of the money bag. But, despite this, it cannot be stated that the peace which now prevails between the two classes mentioned in Victoria is only an armed neutrality. Rather, as it was put by a laborer yesterday, it is attributable to the fair and reasonable attitude which the average Victoria employer displays in the consideration of the demands of those who are in his service. The one it is asserted, understands that the other is essential to the carrying on of business, that both are directly interested in the commercial success of the concern with which they are immediately identified and, on that account, they work together with the object in view of making whatever enterprise they have undertaken worthy of themselves.

This is the spirit which, for the most part, is noticeable in Victoria at present. Employer and employee are working together for their own common good and for the advancement of the community. The one is not constantly at loggerheads with the other. This fact, taken in conjunction with the evidence which was put forward in an article published in these columns yesterday of the roseate outlook Victoria and Vancouver Island generally, speaks volumes for the progress which may be achieved during the next few years providing the same desirable conditions continue. Discussing the question yesterday a prominent merchant said that the pleasant relations existing between the capitalist, so called, and the workingman would be a most important factor in the future of the city. The value of the continuance of amicable feelings between the two classes, he thought, could not be under-estimated. And he could see no reason why the present gratifying conditions of affairs should not be maintained. There could be no hitch as long as the employer shows a disposition to meet his men half way in what they considered fair remuneration and also while the unions remembered the situation of the employer, who had the success of the business in general to make provision for. While such an attitude was assumed by both parties it was assured that the present industrial movement would go on unabated.

Members of the trades union are one in the expression of the opinion that the condition among the laborers of Victoria was never better than at present. While living is higher than in the past wages have taken a corresponding increase. In fact it is asserted that salaries have advanced to a greater extent than has the cost of the necessities of life. This is accepted by those directly interested in the workingman to be another indication of the wisdom of the latter, as long as their treatment renders it possible, to perform their duties in the same way as they would do if the profits accruing were to be entirely for their benefit. Only by such a spirit could factories and other commercial enterprises hope to prosper.

Clerks' Amicable Attitude

The amicable feeling existing between the employer and the employee has been evidenced by the exceedingly fair attitude assumed by the retail clerks of Victoria towards the proprietors of the establishments employing them in regard to the much desired weekly half holiday. Last summer the clerks were allowed every Wednesday off and this year they are endeavoring to obtain Saturday afternoon. They have circulated a petition asking for such concession. While practically all the commercial houses have agreed to the proposal with the exception of the grocers and the butchers, the employees do not despair of ultimately reaching an agreement satisfactory to all parties concerned. When they approached the grocers and the butchers, the latter pointed out the difficulties which would have to be overcome before they could consider closing their stores on Saturday afternoon. The arguments which were advanced were forceful and the petitioners recognized this, with the result that it has been decided that while the efforts being made will continue, the clerks will unite with the employers in the endeavor to educate the public to make their week-end purchases earlier than is now the custom. This way take some time, but the employees have determined to be patient. Though the outcome, it is possible, will be that they will be unable to obtain a weekly half holiday this summer, they are willing to concede the point in the hope that a permanent arrangement may be reached in 1908. Therefore, it is apparent that the clerks have considered the position of those by whom they are employed, that they do not intend to force matters to an issue by forming a union and insisting upon a holiday. This serves as an excellent illustration of the proper feeling existing between the Victoria business man and his employee.

Wants Men

J. B. Hobson, manager of the Cariboo Consolidated Gold Mining company, was in the city when the action of the Salvation Army in bringing immigrants to Victoria under such an arrangement was being discussed by the Socialist members of the provincial legislature. "I'll give them work," he remarked, "and they can enter my employ right away at the wage for which it is asserted they contracted with the Army. They can leave for the interior right away. I want them badly. I've had a man in Vancouver trying to obtain employees for two weeks and all that he has been able to secure is eleven and we need large numbers." This, he thought, was sufficient evidence that there was plenty of work available. There was no need of any one in British Columbia being destitute.

As stated, business men and employers are of the opinion that seldom have all classes of Victorians enjoyed such general prosperity as prevails at present, and they are one in the belief that this satisfactory state may continue so long as all work together as much as possible for the general advancement of the community in which they reside.

ROOM FOR LOCATION OF MANY INDUSTRIES

Esquimalt Harbor's Shores Well Fitted for Manufacturing Enterprises

"Esquimalt offers unrivalled advantages for the establishment of all kinds of industries," said a well known business man to a reporter for the Colonist yesterday. "It is eminently fitted for large shipbuilding works, for lumber mills and woodworking industries of all kinds, for salmon canneries and in fact, for almost any line of manufacture. Now that trap fishing is allowed and salmon are being caught in large quantities along the south coast of the island, Esquimalt is particularly fitted to become a large canning centre. From there the canned salmon could be forwarded by boat to any point on the coast, while the railway would also be available for shipments by rail. The cars could be loaded right at the works and forwarded to Sidney, from where they could be taken over to the mainland by ferry, without unloading. At present most of the salmon caught along the island coast is sent across to the Fraser river canneries for preparation for the market. There is no reason why this should continue.

"There is bound sooner or later to be a big industrial development at Esquimalt. As the city grows and expands it is bound to push out in that direction. First of all, of course, spread to Victoria West, and from there the progress will be continued until Esquimalt is reached. The building of the proposed bridge at Johnson street would hasten the development of Victoria West, and incidentally that of Esquimalt. But even before this development occurs, there should, and I expect will, be many industries established at the latter point."

FARMER FOUND DEAD

Woodstock, May 2.—Richard Moisey, a prominent East Zorra farmer, was found dead in a ditch on his farm. Mr. Moisey was subject to fainting spells, and it is supposed that while crossing the ditch he was seized with one of the spells, dying either from the effects or by drowning.
