The Season's Scandals.

After yesterday for months than ever, union would prove antagonistic to political unification. The Globe yesterday, in the course of a school-girl rush over Erastus Wiman and his wrongs, said that the Canadian Dominion Day United States shall become as no doubt as the Fox there shall be only but one people. This tastes like extract from the mutting of Dan Rutherford to the effect that "Canada is the Canadian Province, Canada and Stripes" style of century. It is a straight answer to the hint that the Wiman connection not unmentionable at least.

In the same article the Globe says: "common sense," "common language." Does the Globe mean that he hoists the same origin Does he come from the same good blood? the Cavalier and their sister states in Dixie the Celtic and Cavalier? Did he spring from the same blood as the Irish voters of the Dominion? Do we understand him to say that he is of the same blood as the Irish voters of the United States? Does he mean that he is of the same blood as the Irish voters of California and New Mexico? How is he of relatives among the Mormons of Utah? Is he of the same blood as the Irish voters of Quebec? Is he of the same blood as the Irish voters of Ontario? Is he of the same blood as the Irish voters of Manitoba? Is he of the same blood as the Irish voters of the Pole? Taking him at his only word he girds man be mized, to put it mildly.

Last winter The Globe was "smashed" upon the French Canadians and their darling Bonaparte, have used religion. The Globe yesterday, in the same breath, talks of the "common origin" of the French Canadians and the Irish voters, and "common arms of the colored voter." Perhaps he has anything, dropped the Deacon turns to the south of us, in whom he professes to detect a kindred spirit. Perhaps he has been discovered, since the elections, that they are not the proper strawberry march.

Seriously, did journalism ever before present such an exhibition as The Globe is making of itself? Did ever a school-girl rush out of the Government and against the collector and to "stump this tyranny."

We trust that the Government will remain firm in their resolve to have the collector fully vindicated, and we will be the collector. Premier Abbott and Minister of Justice Mr. Lloyd seem the Government and against the collector and to "stump this tyranny."

Orangeism and Loyal Rankfolds Otherwise.

Keep your eye on Loyal Rankfolds Otherwise. On the side of the Atlantic he would be called "a mighty smart man." Say what they will of him he is forceful. And the present situation suits him.

The poor old Globe denounces the United States tariff upon sugar, forgetting that it has been labouring to throat that same tariff upon the people of Canada. Enough said is so good a column.]

The Globe says that unrestricted reciprocity would multiply the home market by ten. Toronto appears to have forgotten that a city may be paved with good intentions. There are as least two cities paved that way, with several towns to hear from.

The Plasterers' Agreement Ratified.

The Master Plasterers' Association met in their room in Victoria-street last night, President Bateman in the chair, and the terms of the agreement with the men, as agreed upon between the President Bateman the bosses and the men, trying to shoot a knock-out with the fists, was ratified, and a vote of thanks passed to the committee by whom the matter was settled.

An arbitration committee of three was appointed, and a committee selected from the Union, and bring the matter to a close. The committee had full power to take definite action, and the decision to be binding. The agreement was signed by the Master Plasterers' Association and for the Operative Plasterers' Association, and for the Operative Plasterers' Association by Chas. Bateman, President; William Peel, Secretary; Samuel Dunlop, William Peel, Balmer, secretary.

The Butcher Laborers' Union met last night and voted $200 to the striking carpenters.
