IRISH NEWS.

IRISH NEWS AGENCY,
Palace Chambers,
London, June 21st.

The Irish News Agency sends the following:—

Once more all Ireland is swept across with indignation, because of the employment by a Court of Justice of the unscrupulousness of the worst form of political partisanship. Judge Lawson has again justified the feeling that he is an excellent Irish representative of the judicial methods which in England went out with the lamented Judge Jeffries. The history of the fine inflicted on Mr. O'Brien is as follows.

Some months ago the editor of United Ireland was informed that Mr. James Ellis French, the head of the detective force in Ireland, had been dismissed from the service on account of the commission of nameless offences. He at once called attention to the matter in his paper, and challenged the Government to deny his assertions. At last French was goaded into taking an action; but he feared to face the court, and after many delays the judges themselves were compelled to remove the case from the list. Meantime the Government was called upon day after day and in issue after issue of United Ireland to prosecute French, and the only reply of the Government was to egg on French to proceed against United Ireland, in the hope that in this way an obnoxious newspaper would be got rid of. Vice of the worst description did not offend Dublin Castle, the thing to be put down was a fearless National organ.

The next step was in the House of Commons. Here again every obstacle was put in the way of Mr. O'Brien. The Speaker and the Clerk at the table exhausted all their efforts to render it impossible to bring the question forward. Mr. O'Brien was anxious to make a general motion to the effect that he would call attention to the conduct of the Government towards "certain officials" in Ireland. The Speaker refused to accept this motion as too general in terms, and compelled Mr. O'Brien to mention a number of names. Here came a grave difficulty. Mr. O'Brien desired to charge French and Cornwall—the secretary of the Post Office—with one class of crime—but he also wished to attack the Government for their toleration of Mr. George Bolton for quite a different kind of offence. The history of Bolton is that of an official who would not be tolerated in any other country in the world but Ireland. He was found guilty in a public court of swindling a lady of large fortune, whom he married, by a fraudulent marriage settlement which he drew up himself, and he was denounced by an English Judge in the severest terms, and yet he is retained as a prosecuting attorney by the Dublin Castle because of his great services in the packing of juries. Mr. O'Brien was compelled by the ruling of the Speaker to lump Bolton with French and Cornwall in the motion, he publicly protested in the House of Commons against being compelled to take this course, but he had no choice but to drop his motion or submit to this form of bringing it forward. Then in his newspaper he coupled the three men together in a paragraph and styled them all "felons." Bolton took advantage of the step to which Mr. O'Brien was driven by the Speaker; and brought an action for libel against Mr. O'Brien—not be it remembered, for calling him a swindler, a forger, a defrauder of his wife—but for classing him in the same category as French and Cornwall. In other words Mr. O'Brien is charged for calling Bolton that which he always protested he never intended to call him. The defence of the Government is even more miserable; they declare that Bolton is justified in misinterpreting the article of United Ireland because he is accused of being a "felon," whereas the swindling charged against Bolton amounts only to a "misdemeanour!" Meantime the Government are exhausting every means to make the case of United Ireland a failure. The witnesses to the infamies of these Crown officials whom Mr. O'Brien obtained after infinite effort and at great expense—are being got out of the country where possible—and Mr. O'Brien's detectives and Solicitor have to watch every boat going from Dublin to England lest some of these witnesses should be spirited away.

The last stage of the transaction is this. Last week Mr. O'Brien published an article which, while repeating and repeating in no measured language the real charges brought against Bolton, altogether repudiated the charges being the same as those brought against French and Cornwall. This article Bolton brought before the Court of Queen's Bench as a contempt of Court. Another motion was tried at the same time. Bolton had adopted the skillful expedient of fixing the trial of his case in Belfast before a county jury. In other words he has laid his case before a jury that would probably be only too glad to hang Mr. O'Brien and to confiscate his newspaper without trial at all. Be it remarked that it is a County Antrim jury and not a Belfast jury that is to try the case; it is more than probable that a Belfast Town Jury would entirely consist of Orangemen, but a Catholic might have some chance of slipping in; but, of course, the County Jury will be taken exclusively from the Orange landlords who dread United Ireland as their most dangerous enemy in the press. Mr. O'Brien applied to have the case tried in Dublin; and it was the most natural thing that the trial should take place in Dublin. It was there that the libel was published—it is there that both Mr. Bolton and Mr. O'Brien ordinarily live; it is there that the witnesses on both sides live. Yet the Court decided that the trial should take place in Belfast. In dealing with this part of the case Judge Lawson went out of his way to attack the personal character of Mr. O'Brien in a manner that has created the fiercest indignation throughout Ireland, and that has caused dismay and disgust even in official circles in England. The counsel of Mr. O'Brien was arguing that Mr. O'Brien's life might be in danger in Belfast. Lawson professed not to believe a word of this, and declared that Mr. O'Brien would be quite as safe in Belfast, as in a church, "if he ever goes to church," added the judge with a sneer. This observation has excited keen feelings of rage, because it was meant to prejudice the jury against Mr. O'Brien by representing him as an irreligious man, and because the charge is so grotesquely untrue. Though no man in Ireland is more tolerant, though in political life he is distinguished if possible above his colleagues by his admiration for the Protestant Irishmen who have worked and died for Ireland, it is well known that Mr. O'Brien is a devout and constant member of his own church. This indecency by Lawson is not, however, to pass unnoticed. Mr. Sexton gave prompt notice of his intention to raise the question in the House of Commons last Thursday, and there will certainly be a lively debate.

Now with regard to the other part of the case. Mr. O'Brien has been fined £500 for contempt of court. His friends at once offered to pay the fine, and the money would have been subscribed in a few hours if that were necessary; but Mr. O'Brien resolutely refused to allow this course to be taken. He had two reasons—the first was that of fines were paid in this manner, it gave judges like Lawson the power to levy a new tax on the Nationalists of Ireland. The second reason is that Mr. O'Brien believes the judges have placed themselves in a difficulty by their precipitate conduct. It does not seem so far as one can see at present that there is any power of levying the money. Mr. O'Brien has no property in Dublin, United Ireland being the property—not of himself—but of a Company. Nor does it seem possible for the Court to obtain his arrest in London while he is attending Parliament in the discharge of his duty. Thus there seems no way for the judges out of their difficulty at the present moment—until at least the prorogation of Parliament absolves Mr. O'Brien from his Parliamentary duties—but that is not till the middle of August and a great deal may happen between this and then.

Such are the facts of the case. If any Irish Nationalist requires stimulus to help Mr. Parnell and his colleagues in the work of getting rid of the unholy rule of Dublin Castle, it is given by the record of these transactions. Loathsome beasts are employed in some of the highest and most important offices of the country, are cherished, and screened and protected, find zealous partisans in the judges; while insult, fine and imprisonment, are the reward of one of the noblest, most self-sacrificing, and high-minded Irishmen alive to day.

In a speech delivered at North Wellington, Ont., a few days ago, Mr. Blake gave expression to his views of what the Senate ought to be. He said:—

"He believed that we had no right to be legislated for except by men chosen by the popular voice directly or indirectly. He believed that the people were entitled to have it said that their wishes should not be capable of being thwarted by anybody except a body which sprang from and was accountable to themselves. As at present constituted the members of the Senate were there for life. They might lose their intellect, they might be so infirm as to be unable to come to their seats more than one day in the session, but they were still Senators of Canada, entitled to a potential voice in making and unmaking the laws of Canada. They should abolish all that. He did not object to the principles upon which the constitution of the Senate was founded—the representation of the Provinces in proportion different from population; he was willing that there should be a second legislative body and that the federal principle should be carried out, but this mode of nomination was destructive of that principle—the principle that Provincial rights might require to be guarded against encroachments by the House of Commons. He compared the idea of a Senate, appointed by the leader of the House of Commons, being supposed to guard Provincial rights against the Federal Parliament, to a wolf guarding the sheep-pen, or a thief to guard the pantry. The Senate should be smaller than it was; it should be elective—and we would then have a capable, useful, and sensible body, less expensive than the present one."

The "Freedom" Allowed to Catholics and the Pope in Italy.

(Philadelphia Catholic Standard.)

Non-Catholic and anti-Catholic newspapers are constantly sneering at the fact that the Sovereign Pontiff of the Church is a prisoner. They speak of him as a "voluntary" prisoner, and assert or insinuate that he and the Catholics of Italy are entirely free to exercise all religious rights. How outrageously false these representations are, is shewn by a recent occurrence in Rome, in the titular church of Cardinal McCloskey, Archbishop of New York, as detailed in a letter to the New York Sun from its correspondent in Rome.

The Sun's correspondent says that recently the Capitale, a vile and infidel sheet edited by Jews, published a scandalous article against the sanctuary of Loretto, and filled with obscene references to the Blessed Virgin and blasphemous ridicule of the divinity of Christ. To make reparation for these horrid blasphemies the ecclesiastical authorities encouraged the faithful to make a special triduum in the Church of the Minerva, the titular church of Cardinal McCloskey.

As soon as this became known a meeting was called of the students of the Royal University, and it was resolved that some of them should go to the church, disturb the congregation and break up the devotional exercises. Accordingly on each of the three days a band of the students of the State University entered the church during the closing exercises, (which consisted of the recitation of the Holy Rosary and the Benediction of the Most Holy Sacrament), marching up and down the aisles noisily and defiantly. On the second day they entered with lighted cigars and hooted. On the third day, learning that complaint had been made to the civil authorities, they gathered in greater force but refrained from further demonstrations until the prayers having been chanted, Cardinal Parocchi, the Vicar of Rome, had put on the humeral veil and was ascending the altar to take the monstrance and impart the Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament. At this most solemn moment these pupils of "light and liberty" rushed into the church through the three front doors, and up the aisles. As soon as the Cardinal elevated the Blessed Sacrament they raised a "tremendous roar," yelling at the top of their voices, "Live Garribaldi," "Down with the Pope," "Death to the Priests." The sudden outburst completely drowned the organ, and sounded like the explosion of fire-arms in the body of the church. Many of the congregation rushed towards the altar, and in the panic several women and children were trampled upon. The confusion was speedily quelled by the calmness of the Cardinal, who went on with the sacred function till its close.

The police then entered the church and drove both the congregation and the students from it. On the piazza the execrable rioters again mustered, and, forming in two lines, insulted the congregation as they passed and struck them with their sticks. Some of the Catholics, who up to this time had not attempted to touch even a hair of the heads of their assailants, then resisted. Thereupon the police again interfered, making a few arrests and plainly evincing their anxiety to protect the blasphemous rioters, rather than the Catholic worshipers.

This is a plain, "unvarnished" statement of the facts as detailed by the Sun's Roman correspondent. It speaks for itself. It shows what kind of freedom to practice their religion, to worship God even in His own consecrated temples, is allowed to Catholics in Italy by the "Liberal" Italian Government. It shows, too, what kind of treatment the Sovereign Pontiff of the Church would receive should he appear out side the walls of his "palace-prison," not the less a prison because it happens to be a palace.

The Sun's correspondent pertinently says:

"You may also easily judge whether the Pope is right or not in remaining, as he does within the walls of the Vatican.

"Should the Pope dare to appear, a dozen of the University students would be able to insult him undisturbed and unchecked by the police, who would merely arrest whoever would dare to protest against the offenders. Such was the case in the riot on Sunday. The notorious disturbers of the ceremony were left free. Only half a dozen boys were arrested, and they offered the most ridiculous excuses. Their defendants described with black colors the impudence of the Catholics, who gave a provocation by their prayers, and the Court, having delivered very mild sentences, left them all free that they might appeal against the sentence. They were received with an ovation while leaving the Court-room. The Vatican has already prepared a note for his Nuncios abroad, in order to inform the Catholic rulers of Europe, who have acquiesced as to the actual position of the Pope in Rome, what kind of liberty he is enjoying under the protection and tutorship of the Kings of Savoy."

BELMONT, July 6.—A terrible cyclone passed near Belmont, at noon to-day, tearing down houses and barns and uprooting trees. Only one casualty is reported so far.

CAIRO, July 5.—The Governor of Dongola now telegraphs from Debbah that he has fought a great battle with the rebels and killed four thousand, himself losing two thousand men. The news is not believed. Later on the same day the Governor telegraphed for arms and ammunition.

LONDON, July 6.—Advices from Suakin report that the British gunboat Condor has gone to Agig to shell the Arabs who are cutting off the supply of friendly tribes.

NEW YORK, July 6.—Over 100 people, including men, women and children living in the vicinity of Carleton avenue and Fulton street, Brooklyn, were taken violently ill yesterday after eating ice cream, all of which came from the same dealer. As yet none of the sufferers have died, but several are very low. The symptoms are those of copper poisoning.

PATENTS
obtained for Inventors, in the United States, Canada and Europe, at reduced rates. With our principal office located in Washington, directly opposite the United States Patent Office, we are able to attend to Patent Business with greater promptness and despatch and less cost than other patent attorneys, who are at a distance from Washington, and who have, therefore, to employ "associate attorneys." We make preliminary examinations and furnish opinions as to patentability, free of charge, and all who are interested in new inventions and Patents are invited to send for a copy of our 'Guide for obtaining Patents,' which is sent free to any address, and contains complete instructions how to obtain Patents, and other valuable matter. We refer to the German American National Bank, Washington, D. C.; the Royal Swedish, Norwegian, and Danish Legations, at Washington; Hon. Joseph Casey, late Chief Justice U. S. Court of Claims, to the Officials of the U. S. Patent Office, and to Senators and Members of Congress from every State.

UNIVERSAL
NOVELTY
CLOTHES WRINGERS.
ON account of the Wringer Manufacturing Co's not being able to form a new combination to keep up the prices (the old combination having expired Jan. 1, 1883), there has been a very keen competition since and the result is that we can sell Wringers at less than it formerly cost to import them. Now is the time to buy, as a combination may be formed again at any time and prices advanced. Orders from the country promptly filled and delivered at the trains or boats without any charge for cartage or packing
