PLAIN TALK BY A FARMER'S WIFE.

I am a farmer's wife and proud to say so. My husband is the possessor of one of the best farms to be found near the beautiful "Island city," better known as Brockville. I have quite a family of boys and girls, and although we are known by our neighbors and friends to be "well fixed" from a financial point of view and have every convenience at hand to make farm life happy and agreeable, still we are all economical and thrifty.

My husband and myself believe in true economy, and we have so inoculated these principles into our children that they are all growing up animated with like desires of their own, and fitted in every way for the great battle of life.

In this short article my great aim is to engage the attention of farmers' wives and farmers, in the hope that I may be able to benefit them in some way; and here I will freely give my own experience in one line of family economy. I refer to Home Dyeing. My daughters and myself always dress well, but at a very small cost, and this we have been doing with great success for the last eight years all through the introduction of Diamond Dyes into our happy home.

I find that at the end of the summer season many of my summer dresses can be recolored, some beautiful dark shade, and fit for autumn wear. I do the same with my daughters' dresses, and at a very small cost we are provided with what outsiders call the latest goods and new dress.

Shawls, wraps, clouds, hose, ribbons, sashes and even gloves are renewed in the same way, and in so doing I effect a saving that season, sufficient to purchase it into new curtains and carpet for my parlor, or a handsome set of bedroom furniture.

It seems to me that there are hundreds of farmers' wives who might follow my example this season, and test the truth of my statements. Let me ask them to do it, for the benefit thereby husband and children.

With Diamond Dyes, the wife's favorite, Christmas gatherings can be accomplished, money and labor saved and the knowledge that economy is; and as a consequence they will be noble wives and mothers.
