Geo. Washington Parker Again.

Mr. G. W. Parker, noted in the last POST as a speculator and capitalist, has been favoring Moncton with some of his proposed outlays. He visited that city last week and was engaged in looking around to purchase horses and make investments. He arranged then to place some of his surplus thousands in a saw mill, but before he got his draft—the same old draft—cashed and the interest secured, he had mysteriously disappeared, and with a forgetfulness that was painful (at least to the hotel keeper) he omitted the preliminary of meeting his liabilities for board. This was on Wednesday. The same day, he appeared at Painsec, in the character of a detective! Here he remained till Friday, making himself very agreeable for a detective, and in fact mixing up that business with arranging to buy horses, investing in lands and such like, when the POST containing a complimentary notice of him came, and he "folded his tent like the Arab," and quickly skipped.

Foot Light Flashes.

—Sackville has a fine Music Hall and now wants a band or orchestra of some sort. Where are our musicians?

—Baird's Minstrels on Saturday night, at the Music Hall, presented a very good show—that is as far as the bills went that illuminated the fences and dead walls. The singing was voted only so—so; the jokes somewhat decayed; the instrumental music good and the clog dancing admirable. The next disciples of burnt cork that come along will have to put up with a slim house.

—The name of the barque that was in collision with the steamer "State of Florida" was the "Ponema," Capt. Heyburn. The only survivors of the barque's crew are Capt. Heyburn, of Liverpool, Angelo Rose and Thomas Nicholson. The captain states that he was in his bed when the collison took place, and three minutes afterwards he found himself in the sea without a ship; all hands being washed clear off the deck while trying to lower the boats. He did not see the steamer at all, and can give no information as to the cause of the accident. The "Ponema" was owned by Messrs. Jardine, of Richibucto.

—Our fishermen are catching large quantities of good herring. Times are brisk about the landing place when the boats arrive and it is amusing to notice with what avidity the "Baie Verte Turkies" are made to disappear in the mouths of Point de Bute and Jolicure sacks.

Cumberland Items.

—Mr. D. Bell, of Hants County, practical bridge builder, is here superintending the repairing of the Palmerston Bridge, which had one of its piers removed by the ice. They will build a new pier where the former one stood, leaving the old one where it now stands and then move the bridge back to its place on the new pier without taking down the spans or superstructure.

—A vagrant youth about seventeen years of age, apparently idiotic, arrived in Pugwash two or three days ago. He strolls about the streets calling at houses for food, and looks very filthy. He says his name is Archibald, from Salmon River. He is of light complexion and shows large front teeth. If he has any home or friends they should know of his whereabouts and look after him.

FROM AMHERST.

—Mr. N. A. Rhodes left on Monday for Boston for the benefit of his health,

—Sir Charles and Lady Tupper arrived at Amherst on Tuesday morning. In the afternoon Sir Charles left for Parrsboro' en route for Halifax, on Wednesday, he returns to Amherst and on Friday evening joins Sir Leonard Tilley at Moncton, for Rimouski, to take the English steamer.

—Messrs. J. Edward Page & Sons, who are among the most progressive farmers of Cumberland, have recently purchased a Holstein bull and heifer from Messrs. Lord, Cook & Son, of Aultsville, Ont., who import this breed direct from Holland. The pair obtained by Messrs. Page are fine animals, and cost nearly a thousand dollars.

—Mr. Frank Layton's house, at Amherst Point, was destroyed by fire Tuesday night last, with part of his furniture. The fire is supposed to have started near the kitchen stove, and had made such progress before being discovered that it was impossible to save the house. Mr. Layton was away from home at the time, and the rest of the family had been in bed some time. Insured partially.

—The air is surcharged with politics. Who is to be the Conservative candidate? Who the Liberal? It is rumored the latter party are eager for a compromise man to avoid contest. The fighting element in the Tory party on the contrary want a straight party man, and sing out for Townshend. On the other hand many of Townshend's friends do not want to have him give up his Local seat, where he is a very useful and influential member.

—A young man, by the name of James Ackles, was placed in jail here on Tuesday for safe keeping, previous to his being sent to the insane asylum at Halifax. Previous to the past six months he had been steady and industrious, but lately has exhibited signs of insanity; threatening to shoot his father and brothers, and refusing to go out of the house or to do any work. A disease in the head, from which he has been suffering, is supposed to be the cause.

—Now that the "Scott Act" is in force, without doubt, the temperance party are preparing to enforce the "Act" vigorously in this county. The general meeting of "The Cumberland County Temperance Alliance" meets here on the first of June next, when a public prosecutor will be appointed to conduct prosecutions. A fund of one thousand dollars will be raised, part of which has already been subscribed, and placed in the hands of the prosecutor to carry out the provisions of the "Act." Some of the hotel keepers have promised to stop selling, and those who do not do so quietly, will be forced to quit the nefarious business by law.

—The police court: John Brace came from Spring Hill and visited around amongst his Scott Act friends, got braced up, clowed back, missed stays and collided with a window in the Gazette office. On the invitation of Stipendiary Cutten he donated $1.00 to the County funds.—Henry Ross had a little rush of blood to the head, made him a little top-heavy and the Stipendiary gave him relief by bleeding his pocket $2.—John Dowd, in a fit of hilarity, unbecoming to a member of the Reform Club, undertook to have a little fun with his wife. He started to make kindling wood of the furniture, to destroy the food, and knock down his wife, who catching the humor of the thing and a fire-shovel at the same time, playfully beat him about the head. Stipendiary Cutten thought the atmosphere of his home was too much for Johnney's weak nerves and extended him an invitation to take a rest and vacation in the County Jail for three months, and Johnny daily stands on his tip-toes and straining his neck to catch a glimpse outside of the Paradise Lost.

In Defence of two Young Men.

MR. EDITOR:—While looking over the columns of the POST of last week I noticed in the Baie Verte Items an article stating that Mr. Netis McKay was assaulted in a violent manner at the Albion House a short time ago by a rough, as he is termed, named Robert Jones, and Thomas Townshend, another of the same stamp. Now, Mr. Editor, a great many readers of the POST would think no doubt that those young men were dreadful characters, according to what appeared in the Baie Verte items of last week's POST; but I will state they are decent respectable young men. They were only acting in behalf of some young ladies that McKay had been scandalizing to a dreadful extent. It is true Mr. Editor, that McKay got thumped pretty badly but it was only what he deserved, and if there had been any justice in Baie Verte, which there was not, those young men would not have had to pay one cent. But when there is a justice of the peace that is one-sided, of course the opposite party has a poor chance. It would seem as though this McKay was some great lord not to be reproached or insulted, let him do or say what he likes. But he is not a lord nor yet a gentleman, but keeps one of the lowest rum holes in the country and probably the person writing from Baie Verte in his behalf is one of his customers. Now, Mr. Editor, hoping your readers will be convinced that those young men are not roughs but decent respectable young men, and thanking you for your space, I remain, A CITIZEN.

Westmorland, April 28, 1884.

NOTE.—The above communication has been inserted on the principle of giving both sides a hearing, but the controversy must now end as far as this paper is concerned.—ED.

That Baie Verte Row.

MR. EDITOR:—If the writer of the Baie Verte items was named, it would be sufficient proof to those who know him that his tongue and pen are no scandal, as he is not, an explanation is due the public in reference to that "disgraceful row" I noticed in your last issue.

The correspondent is not a well-wisher of this village, but hails with delight any scandal that lowers the standard of the people to his level, as can be plainly seen by his writings for the last year. He would wish the public to infer that the combatants were on the same social standing, he being an intimate friend and associate of the lawless Malakoff, who left the Baie in woman's attire to avoid a writ of the officers. He wells up in his might, and in welling the dignity of the profession is lowered. Casey was assaulted without a cause, and gave Chappell what he most richly deserved, one of the soundest beatings ever a man got in this place, putting him (with a change of clothes) beyond recognition by his most intimate friends. FAIR PLAY.

The Liquor Warfare.

—In the Stipendiary's court at Charlottetown May F. Donnely and Stephen Carroll were recently fined $50 each for violation of the Scott Act.

—The liquor licenses granted to druggists in the County of Halton, Ont., have been revoked on account of the revelations made in the recently published parliamentary returns from that County.

Drowning Accident on the Pollet River.

A sad accident happened at the "Gordon Falls" on the Pollet River last Thursday. As usual at this season, Mr. McLaughlan has a large number of men driving logs down the river, which in many places is made dangerous by the rugged channel and steep, rocky banks. On the day mentioned the drivers were attempting to break a jam, which had formed just above the falls. "The head" of water from the driving dam above had been put on and the men remained on the jam after the head had struck it, in order to loosen the timber. When the jam started, they ran for the shore, but one unfortunate man, John Wilson, slipped and fell, and was quickly borne along with the logs. He was grasped by one of his companions as he passed but, his feet being entangled in the rolling timber, it was impossible to drag him out, and in a few seconds, before the eyes of his horrified brother and comrades, he was drawn with the current, the logs rushed over him and the whole mass with their victim plunged over the falls into the chasm below. Search was immediately made for the body, but it was not discovered until the next day, when it was found about a half mile below the scene of the accident. A jury was empanneled by Coroner Steeves who, after hearing the evidence, which was substantially as above, and examining the body, rendered a verdict that the deceased came to his death by being crushed between the logs and the rocks. His head was much bruised, the skull being broken in several places. The unfortunate man leaves a large and unproductive family. It is said that the reason he slipped in attempting to leave the jam was that he had no spikes in his boots. It is hoped his fate will be a warning to others not to venture in such dangerous places without necessary precautions. The Pollet River has become a veritable Scylla, claiming fresh victims every few years. In 1867 a man named McDole was drowned while stream driving, and his body was not discovered for a month after. About the same time, Mr. Geldert, who still resides in the village, was carried over the falls, but, mirabile dictu, got safely to shore by seizing upon a log which had accompanied him in his subaqueous voyage. Again in 1871, Mr. Whelpley, then a blacksmith of this village, was carried over a brow by a rolling log and precipitated into the river and his remains were never recovered. In 1873 Mr. Stiles, while sluicing logs over a driving dam, was carried over the roll and was found shortly afterwards still clutching his peevie with the tenacity of death. A few years ago two girls while bathing were carried beyond their depth and drowned; and thus the death roll grows as the years roll on. Who will be the next victim?
