NOTES AND NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

So extensive a Roman Catholic revival is under way in Holyoke, Mass., that several additional confessionals have been opened, and confessions are heard through the entire day.

Judge C. C. Cole, of the Iowa Supreme Court, is charged with having had a pecuniary interest in a lottery, and the Keokuk bar have passed resolutions requesting the Legislature to order an investigation.

The Supreme Court of Louisiana has decided that the law prohibits any one save the master and wardens of the port of New Orleans from making surveys of vessels or cargoes in that port, and that they may enjoin any one else from doing so.

Three little boys, eight to ten years old were found the other night in a backyard in Newburyport, dead drunk and perishing with cold. One of them was barely saved by strenuous efforts of the physician. They stated that they drank three half pints of rum.

Shehee is a duplex-elliptic, back-action sort of name, and belongs to an Illinois brute, who, having got his wife used to being beaten with his fist, undertook to persuade her with an axe. But Mrs. Shehee rejected his love thus manifested, and now Shehee has a month's time to sharpen his axe in the Owasso jail.

A committee of fifteen has been appointed by a St. Louis meeting of merchants, elevator men and others, to devise means for correcting what the St. Louis Democrat speaks of as "the excessive shortages that occur in the bringing of bulk grain to this market, an evil which has grown to such a magnitude that it seriously threatens to cripple, if not destroy altogether, our bulk grain trade."

A young man who was married in Detroit six months ago has joined in the discussion of the question of family economy, but his little contribution is far from satisfactory. "I do not," he says, "understand how it is. I used to figure it out, as I sat with my arm round her waist on Sunday nights, and all it would then cost to live would be $2.75 a week, and now I spend $15 and am hungry half the time."

Gen. Beauregard, President of a street railway company in New Orleans, bears testimony to the efficiency of the fireless street-car locomotive engines, which he says have been in use on his road for two months. By their use a gain of time is accomplished over horses of twenty minutes per round trip of six miles. They start with a pressure of 125 pounds, and at the end of the trip still have a pressure of forty pounds.

In New York city—arrests last week, 1,588; marriages, 143; births, 459; deaths, 479; loss from 29 fires, $38,401; insurance, $167,500; lodgers in station-houses, 5,413 men and 1,417 women; receipts received by the Board of Excise from 61 applications for licenses to sell liquor, $4,382; received by Commissioner Van Nort for water rents and sales of sewer pipes, $11,040; payments of taxes received by Controller Green, $72,503.13; warrants and pay-rolls paid, $151,749.70.

The Toledo City Bank, a savings bank, failed last fall, with liabilities amounting to nearly a million of dollars and with assets that it is now estimated will realize but about twenty-five per cent of that amount. The depositors have been in great concern into bankruptcy. An investigation by an expert has already shown such malappropriation of the moneys of the institution that an indictment for embezzlement has been found against one of the parties, who, in default of bail, has been committed to jail.

The Georgia House of Representatives has passed a bill to tax State railway companies, although, as the Augusta Chronicle remarks, the State has made a solemn contract with these corporations, in which it agreed that upon condition the roads were built they should be exempt from taxation for a certain number of years. Upon the faith of this agreement the railroads were constructed, and their bonds and stock have passed into the hands of third parties. Now, the Legislature arbitrarily attempts to render this contract void. But its attempts will be futile. The courts will promptly pronounce such legislation a nullity.

The timeworn anecdote of a person's being so deceived by a theatrical representation as to believe it to be a scene of actual life was verified at one of the New York theatres on Saturday night. In the play, which portrayed the life of a drunkard, the chief actor, when in great destitution, exclaims: "Alas! alas! no one in this wide world will give me even a crust of bread to eat." These words had hardly been pronounced by the actor before the audience saw a tall man arise in the parquette, who, in a voice trembling with emotion, said: "Gentlemen, I am a poor man, but I will give that man a dollar."

The New Orleans Picayune complains that fraudulent northern-made syrups "flood our markets, underselling the genuine article, discouraging the home trade and home consumption, as well as attacking health by the most deadly and insidious agents." A correspondent adds: "Short crops and high taxes have used the planter up; fraud is now dealing him the finishing blow." The Picayune also publishes the result of an analysis of the fraudulent article, which it is certified, "contains no sugar at all, but is produced by the the destructive action of strong sulphuric acid (oil of vitriol) upon starch."

The Young Men's Christian Association of Baltimore had a special meeting on Thursday evening, to decide whether money donated by Col. Sinn, a well-known gambler, should be returned to him. The executive committee of the Association had instructed the Financial Secretary to return the money, and a resolution was introduced to rescind the action of the committee. One member said that the money came accompanied by the tears of women who were worse than widows and of children who were worse than orphans. Another thought that taking money from gamblers was to bring them a step nearer to Christ. Mr. J. D. Johnson argued that gambling was not forbidden in the Bible. The Association voted to return the money to Sinn.

At Washington, one day lately, at the breakfast table, Senator Sprague said to his son, "You must understand, my boy, that you are the son of a poor man, and will have your own way to make in the world. I have fifty cents in my pocket, not a cent more; so after breakfast I think I'll take you out and get a boot-blacking apparatus for you. You must learn to black your own boots like a poor man's son, you know." The little fellow listened intently, then said: "Well, papa, can't I black your boots and save you something?" "Oh, certainly, if you wish," his father answered. After breakfast the investment was made. The next morning the enterprising youngster rose at daylight, and before anybody was up and could interfere, had blacked every boot and shoe in the Sprague mansion, including a pair of his mother's, which had been bought recently for nineteen dollars, and which, of course, were utterly ruined.

GENERAL.

A pair of lovers will sit up half the night and not burn as much kerosene as the family uses in an hour during the evening.

The Times of India says a woman at Bhownuggur gave her husband permission to cut her head off if he found her unfaithful to him. Having, it is supposed, convinced himself, the husband took his wife at her word, and nearly decapitated her in the market-place by broad daylight.

The organization of a new company to lay a light cable from the coast of Great Britain to Halifax, via the Azores Islands, is announced. The capital is £380,000, and the prospectus, which was issued on Saturday, says it is the intention of the company to convey messages over its cable at the rate of one shilling per word.

Until recently the Japanese have found it expedient to conceal the actual condition of their financial affairs, on account of both foreign and internal complications. It has now been determined to publish statements of their resources, the first of which will be issued in about two months from this time. It will appear that the amount in the national treasury is no less than $25,000,000, including the last English loan, and that the surplus revenue of 1873 was nearly $5,000,000.

The Times, speaking of the changes in Parliament, has this cleverly sharp allusion to the champion "sea lawyer" of Christendom: Mr. Fawcett, we regret to hear, has lost his seat, and we are equally sorry to learn that Mr. Ashbury, the wrangling yachtsman—Mr. Bennett's old antagonist—has gained it. Mr. Fawcett was a Radical, a man of great ability, a high-minded and honorable politician, and in every respect deserving of better treatment than that which he has now received. Mr. Ashbury is a man of great wealth, and that is all there is of him. Why a constituency should turn out an eminent man for a rich dolt is not very clear, except upon the theory that Ashbury is nearer the level of their own intellects than Professor Fawcett.

Arrest of the Murderers of Limours.

In the early days of the new year, while the public officers of the criminal court at Bamboullet in France were conducting a searching inquiry into all the facts connected with the mysterious series of seven murders in the canton of Limours, the terror of the country people was increased by the reports of new crimes added to the list.

Robbery in these as in the former cases was the evident object. On one Sunday evening a granary situated directly opposite the parish church in the village of Vaugrigneuse was fired by incendiaries. Two hours later at Norville, not far distant, another building, in which straw and grain were stored, was burned. Sacks of grain were carried away by the robbers.

An old married couple named Berard were living in an isolated cottage a place where two roads crossed near the forest of Charbonnieres. The husband worked at the estate of that name, while his wife sold refreshments to travellers.

On Jan. 8 Berard, on returning from his day's toil, found the cottage door locked, and upon entering through a window saw the dead body of his wife extended upon the hearthstone. A blow with some blunt instrument had broken the skull and inflicted a rectangular wound. Five hundred francs had been stolen. The press in which this sum of money had been kept was the only piece of furniture disturbed. The conductor of a stage who knocked at the door about half past four that afternoon was surprised that old Madame Berard did not appear. After repeated knocks a hoarse voice asked what was wanted. The conductor replied that he was in a hurry, and wished for a drop to drink. To this there was no answer. On looking through the window he saw Madame Berard sitting on a chair and leaning against the wall, with her head down on her bosom. He concluded she had been drinking too much, and left. She had been killed half an hour before.

At Dingy, some sixty miles from the scene of the other tragedies, three days before this murder an old woman named Leburn was killed in the evening at her home. Notwithstanding the intervening distance the manner of inflicting death by crushing in the skull tended to show that the Limours assassins had extended their operations to Dingy.

The most singular of the story, however, is that of the murder of two itinerant herring dealers who were wont to peddle their fish about the little villages in the district of Limours. These two men had disappeared. One evening a peasant saw an ox cart rapidly driven by a man in a white blouse pass rapidly along the river road which leads to Vertle-Petit. It was a moonlight night, and the peasant saw protruding from the back of the cart the heads of the two fish dealers. Their throats were cut and the skulls had been crushed.

On Jan. 20 people in the town of Limours were disturbed by the disappearance of Desire, a postman, who had left his home on the previous morning. The police found him after a long search dead on his knees at the foot of a fir tree. He had strangled himself with his own handkerchief. This letter was found in his sack:

"I die innocent: but I can make those guilty of the assassination known.
"These are their names:
"Lebœuf, formerly a butcher apprentice of Aiton, now at Paris, where he works in the slaughter house of La Villette.
"Girard d'Limours, his father-in-law.
"Guillemard, nephew of Madame Vivance, called the Forrester of Bois-Dardot.
"Froque of Angervilliers.
"The Wine Seller of Angervilliers."

The letter concluded with an appeal in behalf of his children who are left orphans.

On Wednesday the four accused last named were arrested. A despatch was sent to Paris, and Lebœuf was taken into custody by seven officers who went to his room at 8 Rue de Flandre. Lebœuf is of gigantic stature and great strength, and bears a strong resemblance to Victor Emanuel. He quietly succumbed, however, in the presence of such a force. It is said that a club belonging to him has been found at the slaughter house of La Villette with pieces of human hair adhering to it. On Thursday Lebœuf was taken to Rambouillet, where he is now in prison. It seems probable that these five men are the real criminals, judging from the character of their employments and the improbability of the suicide Desire's falsely accusing the innocent in his last moments. As in many other cases, confession has done what the keenness of detectives failed to accomplish. The burden of his secret was too heavy for the postman to bear; whether he was a guilty accomplice, or stumbled unwittingly on a knowledge of the criminals, will be known on the trial, which is likely to be one of most extraordinary interest.
