Matthew Arnold's Argument.

Whatever be the merits or demerits of Mr. Gladstone's present Irish policy—and it is one that naturally admits of much honest difference of opinion—it is in every sense desirable that the parties to the controversy should not wrench facts from their proper bearing, or create strained and false analogies. Arguments conducted upon such lines must ultimately fail. There is no perfect parallel between the cases of Ireland and those of Canada, Australia, the United States, and those of Austro-Hungary, which are so frequently mentioned by both sides in the Home Rule debate, though the basic principle upon which Gladstone proposes to build is the principle in operation, to a greater or less extent, in the latter countries. The Provincial Legislatures of Canada, and notably the Legislature of our own Province, have to do with the local interests of large and wealthy areas of territory. Measured by the Canadian standard, the provinces of Ireland are veritable kingdoms of Lilliput, and one does not need to study the Dean of St. Patrick's to understand that the laws and customs of the Lilliputians would not suit the Brobdignagians. Nations are like individuals in so far as tastes, temperaments and circumstances are concerned. What is chalk to one may be cheese to another. In fact it is one of Mr. Gladstone's arguments that English-made laws do not fully accommodate themselves to the genius of the Irish people. Therefore when we couple Ireland and Canada in the argument for Home Rule we should be careful to enter the proviso that the argument proceeds only so far as the analogy goes—that is, so far as the right and benefit of autonomy are applicable to all people, irrespective of race or creed.

Nor do the British Premier's opponents always state the case fairly. An illustration of this is found in Mr. Matthew Arnold's letter to the Times, on the eve of his second visit to those whom he calls his "American kinsmen," among whom he does not appear to count Canadians. He says that his kinsmen aforesaid abstained from "setting up a southern parliament, although they are so anxious that we set up an Irish one." He will find in the Southern States not one "parliament," as he expresses it—some such Parliament as is proposed for Ireland—but a dozen. The Confederate Congress was quite a different thing. It was an assertion of Imperial authority, the corner stone of which was not the principle of Home Rule, but the practice of slavery. No one has proposed to elect a President of Ireland, as the South elected Jefferson Davis. It may or may not be true that such is Parnell's desire or object, but we cannot draw conclusions from suspicions. Mr. Arnold is equally unfair in his allusions to Austro-Hungary. Austria would concede nothing to her Italian Provinces, and the result was the loss of them. She conceded nothing to Hungary until stricken to her knees at Sadowa. Hungarian autonomy is not the cause of Austria's loss of prestige, but the result of it. A weak position cannot be strengthened by perversions of history, and a strong position ought not to be burdened with them. The objections to Irish autonomy must be sought in the character and position of Ireland herself, and not in the political institutions and relations of America, Australia, or Austro-Hungary.

The Mail's Misfortunes.

Good citizens of every class unite in deploring the Mail's many mishaps from fire, if such mild language correctly describes the situation. Three fires within two years have created the suspicion that the splendid building which the late John Riordon left as a monument of his liberality and enterprise, and also as an ornament and a pride to this city, has been made the object of the senseless malice of some destructive vandal. None of the fires have been satisfactorily accounted for up to the present writing. This of itself lends color to the widespread suspicion mentioned above—a suspicion which the authorities should spare neither time nor expense in probing to the bottom. If there be among us a scoundrel capable of such things, the sooner he is ferretted out the better. We have no hesitation in saying that the law has no penalty too bitter for such an one. The World begs to extend to the Mail its unfeigned sympathy under the circumstances, coupled with the hope that in this case there may be truth in the proverb that "the third time is the charm!"

A Great Day To-morrow.

To-morrow is to be a great day for the Knights of Labor. General Master Workman Powderly, acting under the authority vested in him by the General Executive Board, issued a call some time since to the various assemblies of the Order for a special session of the General Assembly to be held in Cleveland, O., Tuesday, May 25. The causes leading to the calling of the session are given as follows:

1. The rapidly increasing membership of the Order requires changes in the laws which the General Executive Board has no authority to make.

2. The laws in relation to the government of boycotting are wholly inadequate to compel obedience on the part of assemblies that believe in boycotting for every offence, whether great or small.

3. The laws in relation to strikes do not give the General Executive Board power to interfere in such matters until after the strike has been inaugurated.

4. The Order has become involved in difficulties with trade societies, and an effort is being made to create a rupture between these societies and the Knights of Labor.

The above is straight from the G. M. W., and may be depended upon. Some things are coming up for reconsideration.

There is a grim legend of a man who was so utterly unfortunate through life that he had neither friends nor enemies. When he died St. Peter declared him a perfect stranger, who could not come in. Below decks Old Nick protested that, although he was a most cordial old party, and sorry to hurt anybody's feelings, his hotel was full—not a bed to spare—and the gentlemanly clerk and genial barkeeper were doubling up on a billiard table. "But I'll tell you what I'll do," said the courteous Beelzebub, "I'll let you have a stock of pitch and sulphur, and you can start a fire of your own." Without in the least underrating or rejoicing in our contemporary's misfortunes, it may be said that the Mail must have a "friend" of this sort.

The Globe's assumption that were Mr. Blake at the head of our affairs this fishery embroglio would not have arisen, is the rottenest kind of rot. Nobody questions Mr. Blake's ability and industry, but neither he nor any other man, though it were Socrates and Pitt rolled into one, could have prevented our neighbors from taking their own wilful way, and the harder he tried the more wilful they would have become. The only way in which this dispute could have been prevented would have been by giving our neighbors all their own way, and we think too highly of Mr. Blake to conceive him capable of that. The Deacon ought to be content in making himself ridiculous without emptying his malodorous glue pot over his friends.

It is with a sense of relief that we read that the late skirmish on the Grecian frontier was "a mistake," and that "there is an entire cessation of firing everywhere." The opposing forces begin to suspect that some of their guns may be loaded. Serious accidents often occur under such circumstances.

The Swiss Bundesrath is organizing a landstrum for defensive purposes. Between her landstrum and her landslides any power that attacks Switzerland will have uphill work.

Our Rochester friends have learned that Torontonians improve upon acquaintance.

It's a cold day when the Mail can't raise a fire.

The Central Prison is one lap behind on the record. A Grit institution can't afford to take second place after a Tory organ.

Mount Etna and Senator Frye are both in a state of eruption, but the latter's crater emits nothing more tangible than wind.

The Portland pirates have planted upon their wharf an old cannon of the vintage of 1812-14 labelled: "Fishermen—attention! Arm and protect yourselves. This cannon for sale. Inquire within." Unserviceable guns are the proper weapons for a lot of fellows who would sooner steal than give any return for value received. By persistently making themselves ridiculous in this way the New England fishermen do Canada a good turn. They wound the self-respect of their fellow-citizens in other sections, and show the Washington Government the kind of cattle Canada has to deal with in her waters.

From the rate at which the Home Rule debate is progressing it should soon be time for the Grand Old Man to publish another grand old manifesto.

The Tale of "Fallen."

Editor World: I notice a letter inserted in two at least of our city papers signed Fallen and addressed to His Worship the Mayor, and presumably sent by him for insertion in the city papers. It is evidently a bogus production. As it is not the first sham that I have seen addressed to the present Mayor, it is well to call attention to the fact, for we have quite enough real wickedness and misery in the city without having ideal cases foisted off on us. It will be noticed that this poor innocent girl, 17 years of age, knew all about the sleeping apartments over boat houses and offices, and asks the Mayor to put them down. The story of her going up two flights of stairs in a strange house to deliver a letter, while on her way hurrying to the station to catch the train, and that her betrayer must have hurried still faster to get there before her is altogether too thin and clumsy. Besides that if she, an innocent girl, had been treated in the outrageous way mentioned we would have had no anonymous letter about an anonymous man whom she apparently hates; but she would have told her tale of woe at once on regaining her liberty, and we would have heard of a criminal information. His Worship is no more likely to hear the name of this girl or her alleged betrayer than he is the name of Distressed Mother who wrote him a harassing letter a couple of months ago.

SCRUTATOR.

Yankee Sharpness.

—A Yankee pedler in his buggie overtaking another of his class was addressed, "Hello, what do you carry?" "Drugs and medicines," was the reply. "Go ahead," was the rejoinder. "I carry gravestones." The Linen Thread Co. carry the largest and best assorted stock of teas in the Dominion. You ought to come today just to satisfy yourselves. Geo. Mann is booming this company by real value. 295 Yonge street. edx
