ANDOVER NOTES.

Personal.—Railway Works.—The Press Excursion.—Fishing on the Tobique.

The New Brunswick Railway company have a large crew of men at work on the Andover railway bridge.

Mrs. J. A. Perley leaves for Appleton, Wisconsin, in a few a days, where she is going to visit her relatives.

Honorable John Costigan and daughter are rusticating at Grand Falls. His son Harry Costigan, has returned to Winnipeg.

Mr. G. S. Baird, M. P. P. and wife left Friday in a birch canoe, intending to go clear through to St. John.

Secretary Lugrin's proposed press excursion is looked forward to with a great deal of interest by some of our farmers and merchants.

Major Howes and a party of six gentlemen with ten canoes returned Saturday from a three weeks cruise on the Tobique. They went by Babbitt and McNeirs overland route to Trousers Lake, where they met their Indians and canoes. They then carried across to Long Lake, and thence to Portage Lake, and thence to Serpentine Lake, and down the Serpentine to Tobique and St. Johns. They speak highly of the scenery around Tobique lakes, and they had some very good trout fishing, but they did not catch any salmon, which was chiefly the kind of sport they were looking for. Major Howes says that there was not a salmon in any of the noted salmon holes on the right hand branch of the Tobique. He says that the river is not properly protected, and that while it remains so there is nothing to induce American anglers to visit our rivers. The major is now resting at Newcomb House, Andover. His friends went west Monday morning, among whom was a gentleman who is superintendent of a railway in Indianapolis. They were all jolly good fellows and expressed themselves as being delighted with our scenery.

SPORTING NEWS.

The Shamrocks Again Defeated.

The Shamrocks of St. John suffered a crushing defeat in Halifax on Tuesday at the hands of the Literarys of that place, the score standing 25 to 5. Callighan, the catcher of the St. John team, was so badly injured in the second innings that he had to retire. Tole acted as his substitute. The Shamrocks played another game with the Socials yesterday; and were again defeated in an 11 inning game by a score of 4 to 2.

Jumping.

Messrs. D. J. Stockford and H. Atherton, who made arrangements some time ago for a jumping match, will contest some time next week. The jumping will take place in the race course.

He Wanted a Marriage License.

A few days ago a very happy looking countryman dropped into a city alderman's drug store, and approaching one of the clerks, asked: "Do you think that I could get a license here so as I could get married?" The clerk, wishing to see a little fun, replied that he didn't know, and referred him to the head clerk, who was standing in the other end of the store. The happy fellow approached him and asked the same question, and received the answer—"No, sir, but you will be able to get one by calling at the store two doors above here." He immediately turned about and went off to call where he was told. He didn't get a license there, and, after calling at a few more places, ultimately brought up at the proper office, where he willingly paid his money and received "the license so as he could get married."

The Killarney House.

The Killarney House, on account of its beautiful situation and excellent management on the part of the proprietor, has proved a great attraction for tourists. Few Americans who come to the city leave without visiting this grand hotel. On Sunday last there were no less than eighty who took their meals there, and yesterday the arrivals numbered thirty-five. The fishing in the lake is grand, and the boating on it fine. Some new canoes and boats arrived yesterday, and more are expected to-day.

THE TOURNAMENT AT HALIFAX.

The Hose Cart Race Won by the Windsor Team with St. Stephen a Good Second.

The much-talked-about tournament opened at Halifax on Tuesday under the most favorable circumstances. The weather could not have been finer. The festivities were began by a grand firemen's procession through the principal streets of the city in the morning. The hose carts and engines in the procession were most handsomely decorated, and the turn-out is conceded by all to have been the most gorgeous ever seen in Halifax. After marching over eight miles the procession arrived at the exhibition building, where more than a thousand firemen and their guests sat down to the corporation dinner. The sports were commenced yesterday.

The programme of sports opened yesterday with the hose cart race, in which so much interest centred. The Windsor N. S., team carried off the first prize, making the run in 2 min. 43¾ secs., the St. Stephen team coming in for second in 2 min. 43¾ secs., beating Yarmouth, Halifax, Charlottetown, Dartmouth, St. John, Portland and Bangor. The sports were continued to-day.

FRAMINGHAM NOTES.

A Russian Fin Has Two of His Fingers Blown off—New Brunswickers Attacked With Malaria.

FRAMINGHAM, Aug. 9th.—A Russian Fin here, in handling a dynamite cap, had two of his fingers blown off. Another man who stood looking on, received a bad splinter over the eye. The injured man was employed by W. Bruce, of Fredericton, at the Boston water works. While handling the cartridge out of curiosity, he attached the fuse and lighted it. He then held it in his hand calmly awaiting the result. He had not long to wait.

Several of the New Brunswickers at the works have had a touch of malaria but are again getting round all right. The water is one of the causes of it.

The affair is in charge of an excellent committee, who will spare no pains to make everything pass off agreeably.

My Little Man.

I know a little hero, whose face is brown with tan,
But through it shines the spirit that makes the boy a man,
A spirit strong and sturdy, a will to win its way,
It does me good to look at him and watch him day by day.

He tells me that his mother is poor and sews for bread,
"She's such a dear, good mother!" the little fellow said;
And then his eyes shone brighter — God bless the little man!—
And he added: "'Cause I love her I help her all I can."

Ah! that's the thing to do, boys, to prove the love you bear
To the mother who has kept you in long and loving care;
Make all her burdens lighter; help her every way you can
To pay the debt you owe her, as does my little man.

The Firemen's Prizes.

To the Editor of THE GLEANER:—

SIR,—I was glad to see in your Saturday's issue the note you made about the firemen's prizes for their picnic. It was well called for. The idea of able bodied men, such as the members of the hook and ladder company and the protection company, running around to our merchants begging a stick of candy here, an envelope box there, a necktie some other place and so on. It is simply children's work. If these young men have not the means to purchase decent prizes, and by that means materially aid in making their picnic a success, let them keep out of the picnic business altogether. As for soliciting prizes from our merchants let me tell these young men that the merchants of this place have charities enough to support without giving to every little thing that comes along. People have no idea what most of our merchants contribute to charity in the run of a year. They do more than anyother class of citizens in this way. These firemen may say we get nothing for our services. Very true in a sense. They get nothing directly from the city, but the people that suffer loss by fire always do something for them. Again there are always plenty of men ready to do their work on the same terms. As you said in your paper "a picnic should be run on enterprise and not on charity."

Yours, &c.,
A CITIZEN.

Fredericton, Aug. 20th, 1886.

[Since the above was handed into this office, "A Fireman" publishes a letter in the Farmer about our remarks on the prizes, and imputes improper motives to us for expressing an opinion about the firemen's mean exhibition — motives which alone seem to actuate such men as "Firemen." THE GLEANER in expressing its opinion about the prizes, likewise expressed public opinion. Probably the young men in charge of the affair will be wise enough next year to make their picnic first-class.—Ed. GLEANER.]

Texas Siftings.

Husband—Let us go to Niagara Falls next week. I should like very much for you and I to spend a week there. I think I should enjoy it very much.

Husband—Smith took his wife there last week, and he said she was speechless with awe, and I just thought perhaps—Ouch! let go my hair. Can't you take a joke? Ouch! let go, I say. I'll get you that new bonnet.

Taking Down a Pompous Young Man

The People's Paper.

A merchant traveller was sitting in the Stanton house parlor the other evening, when a pompous young man with a blazing solitaire pin stuck in his scarf and an immensely brilliant cluster ring on his finger, walked in and took a seat. The travelling man, true to his instincts, opened up a conversation. "What house do you travel for?" he asked of the lordly personage; "None, sir," replied the jewel-bedecked, haughtily and contemptuously. "I don't do that kind of business. "Beg pardon," said the other, "I thought you were a drummer for some glass works."

MURDER IN ST. SYLVESTER, QUE.

A Man 77 Years Old Murders Another in a Dispute about Land.

QUEBEC, Aug. 9.—Full particulars of the St. Sylvester murder reached town, on Saturday night, with the district coroner, who returned from holding the inquest, bringing with him as prisoners Francois, Jean Nappert, Simon Nappert and Jean Nappert, jr., who were at once lodged in gaol on his warrant charging them with wilful murder and complicity therewith, in accordance with the jury's verdict, which was rendered on Saturday at noon. The jury was composed of six English speaking members and six French Canadians, and the inquest was held at the house of Mr. McCutcheon, the murdered man's next neighbor, opening on Friday at nine a. m., in the presence of Fortier, the murderer, whose arrest had been made previously, effected by order of a local magistrate, named Letourneau, to prevent the possibility of his escape to the United States. The evidence adduced showed that the killing of Keenan was not only attended with circumstances indicating premeditation and preparation, but aggravated by even greater brutality than at first reported. Six witnesses were examined, among whom the most important were the deceased's two sisters, Julia and Anne, and Drs. Hume and Paquin. Anne Keenan swore that on Thursday morning her brother went out before breakfast to work at his hay, at a distance of about an acre from his house. After breakfast, seeing Fortier mowing on the land in dispute between himself and Fortier's son-in-law, young Nappert, and which is situated on the opposite side of the road only a few yards from Keenan's house, Keenan crossed over to order him to desist and to read a document to him purporting to be a certificate from Registrar Lambly declaring that Fortier and the Napperts had no title to the land. She and her sister followed him. He had hardly finished reading the document when Fortier swung back his scythe and aimed a blow at Keenan with it, the point of the terrible weapon entering the lower part of his abdomen and thigh. The wounded man, still holding the paper in his hand, fell to the ground, exclaiming, "Oh, my God, I'm murdered. My God, have pity on me. I'm murdered." After he fell Fortier again threw himself upon his victim and would have cut off his head with his scythe but that the witness seized the handle of the weapon, receiving in doing so, cuts from it on her head and left forearm. Just at this moment she heard her sister Julia, who was distracted with grief and fright, cry out to her to take care as there was old Johnny Nappert coming out of the bush behind her armed with a gun to shoot them. Almost simultaneously, too, young Nappert appeared on the scene, coming by the road and armed with a pitchfork, with which he struck Julia Keenan on the head, cutting her deeply, knocking her down and striking her again repeatedly with the same instrument while she lay on the ground and the blood flowed profusely from her wound. The poor girl cried piteously, and witness sought to save her by interposing her own person and begging young Nappert not to kill her, when she herself was struck by him violently on the head and other parts of the body with the iron portion of the fork. When old Nappert saw that her brother was dead he told his son to stop. The three men, Fortier and Nappert, father and son, then coolly returned to their haying operations, leaving she body where it had fallen and where it lay until the doctors arrived. Julia Keenan's evidence fully corroborated that of her sister, with the addition that when her brother was lying on the ground Nappert kept the muzzle of his gun aimed at him. Edward Colter, a neighbor, testified to subsequently finding and helping to remove Keenan's body, and Sergeant Harpe, of the Provincial Police, deposed to receiving the prisoner Fortier from the hands of the local constable, and to finding the fatal scythe, with its edge turned and blunted, at the house of old Nappert, which, with that of his son, was 4½ miles distant from that of Keenan. Drs. Hume and Paquin, who made the post mortem, established that they found the deceased's organs in a healthy condition; and that his death had been caused by the severing of the femoral artery. Dr. Humes further deposed that on Thursday afternoon he was at the Presbytery of St. Sylvester speaking with the Rev. Mr. Neville, cure of the parish, on the subject, when the prisoner Fortier entered and told the priest that he had wounded Keenan with his scythe, and that he would like the priest to go to him, as he was either dying or dead. In reply to Mr. Neville, Mr. Fortier said that Keenan had no weapon, only a paper in his hands. Dr. Paquin also further testified that the spot where the murder took place showed, except for the blood, but slight indications of a struggle, and that among other things found there by him, on examining it, was an envelope covered with blood, and bearing the address, "W. H. Lambley, Registrar, Inverness," with "Beland, N. P.," marked on the corner.

The verdict returned was one of "wilful murder" against Fortier, as principal and the two Napperts as accomplices.

Fortier, who is an old man of 77 years, but strong, though somewhat crippled with rheumatism, did not at first appear at all disconcerted by his terrible position, but at latest accounts he was realizing it more fully and giving way to fits of weeping. The two Napperts are ordinary, quiet-looking habitants, and certainly seem the last persons to commit a great crime of the kind. The murdered man, Keenan, on the other hand, though respectable and well conducted in other respects, is reported to have been of a very litigious character and somewhat of a crank with regard to the land in dispute, which he always claimed to be not the same as the land purchased by the Napperts at the sheriff's sale. His funeral took place yesterday at St. Sylvester, where his murder has created a most painful sensation. Fortier is said to have attempted to shoot the Keenan sisters about a year ago. He and the Napperts have already engaged Mr. F. X. Lemeux as their counsel.
