THE RUBY AND THE ROSE.

He was the lord of Merlintower,
And I was but of low degree;
She had her beauty for her dower,
Nor other treasure needed she;
He came when hawthorns were a-flower,
And strove to steal my love from me.

Oh! she was sweeter than the wind
That ploweth over Indian isles;
As April bright, than June more kind,
Fawn-wild, and full of winsome wiles;
And I, alas! had learnt to find
My only life beneath her smiles.

He sent my love a ruby rare,
That might have graced imperial brows,
No gem had I. To deck her hair
I sent her—but a simple rose;
And prayed her, on a night, to wear
The gift of him whose love she chose.

"Come, queen of all my heart's desire!
Crown me or slay! My soul is stirred
To challenge fate. My pulses tire
Of fear's chill tremors. Sings the bird
Of hope for him who dares aspire?"
A lover's scroll, and wild of word.

We watched her coming, he and I,
With utter dread my heart stood still.
The moon's wan crescent waned on high,
The nightingale had sung his fill,
In the dim distance seemed to die
The echo of his latest thrill.

The newer-trelliced gate, our tryst of old,
Gleamed whitely 'neath the clustering bloom
Of the flask-starring jasmine. Cold
His shadow fell, a ghastly gloom
Lurked where it lay. Oh heart o'er bold!
Hast thou but hastened utter doom?

A still cold smile slept on his face,
That all my hope to anguish froze:
Then, in the silence of the place,
We heard her flower-pied perch unclose,
And—in her hair's silk-soft embrace,
There nestled warm a ripe-red rose!

NOTES AND NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

San Francisco has a first-class murder every Sunday. They seem to prefer them to long sermons.

A female bill poster is doing an extensive business in New York. The sex was always good at running up bills.

When the boys in Virginia City wish to raise their kites, they tie the string to a dog's tail and make the animal run.

"Bertha," pathetically observed an Ohio saloon-keeper to his wife, "these crusaders are just like the dog in the manger, they won't drink themselves, and they won't let anybody else drink."

A gentleman of Louisville has a dog—a pointer. The dog ran up the steps of a house and refused to come down. His master followed, and found "A. Partridge" on the door plate. This illustrates the force of instinct.

There was a fire in Detroit, the other day, and one man in the vicinity was assisted by the neighbors in removing his things, and all the goods that he can find now are three legs of a table and a singed straw bed.

Three of the detectives who undertook the job of arresting the Younger brothers of Missouri, dead or alive, have died by their hands already. Their chance of completing the work dead, seems to be better than of accomplishing it while living.

One of the leading attractions at White Mountain hotels to bachelors are the waiter girls, who, in many instances are New England school ma'ams and very pretty. They teach during the winter and wait on the table during the season.

There is more shipbuilding going on at the present time on the Connecticut River than in any previous year since 1861. Every yard from Hartford to Saybrook has one, and some of them two or three vessels in process of construction.

Last Sunday evening at Atchison, during the stampede from the Baptist church in the middle of the sermon, caused by an alarm of fire, the pastor said: "I never talk against a fire-bell or a steamboat whistle," and pronounced the benediction.

The town of Fair Play, Colorado, is in a bad condition and cries for cap-loads of marriageable girls to be sent there. The local paper says there is only one there now and she has been reduced to a skeleton courting the army of good-looking bachelors. This not fair play.

A farmer reading a journal to his wife, in which was the sentence: "The President was received with three huzzas," pronounced the last word "hussies." "More shame for him," exclaimed the indignant and scandalized lady.

A Detroit gentleman prides himself on his fine fowls, and his neighbor is equally vain of a fine coach dog. The dog worries the life out of the chickens. A few days ago the owner of the dog received the following note. Friend: You keep dogs, I keep chickens. If my chickens worry your dogs, shoot 'em.

Dubuque, Iowa, had a boy and girl at work in a livery-stable for quite a time, who represented themselves as brothers, and who, when found out, stated that they were forced to assume the disguise, as the boy was unable to support his sister unaided and did not like to trust her away from his care.

A newspaper writer in Mississippi, who had a difficulty with a man and killed him, wrote a gushing tribute to the memory of his victim, which was published in the next issue of his paper, laying special stress upon the gallantry with which he met his fate and fought to the last.

Brooklyn has a new $10,000 breach of promise case, because Hermen Bertram soured on Helena Lassar, whom he promised to marry while on the voyage from Sweden. The parties ought to heal their breaches peaceably, for it is admitted that they did their spooneying when both were half seas over.

Put your number on your door, if you must do it in charcoal. Though you are the idlest drone in the hive, have a number. Nobody can find you without a number—not even a policeman. As well might you undertake to live on a number without a street as live on a street without a number.

GENERAL.

Too late for the fair—An old bachelor.

Pious flirts are said to succeed best. A heavenly smile will tell on a man be he never so irreligious.

It is a wonder scarf-pins don't get seasick—they often ride on the bosom of such heavy swells.

A kind word spoken to a husband will go farther than a broomstick or a flat-iron, says a woman of experience.

This is good. An English exchange says Americans are so rich that they can afford mismanagement of the Treasury.

Sir Garnet Wolseley has stepped over the heads of 165 seniors to the rank of Major-General. What long legs he must have.

Grace is a modest girl and refuses to wear low dresses. "Mamma," she remarks to her maternal, "that is more than I can bare."

"Don't you mean to marry again, my dear, sir?" said a buxom widow to her neighbor—"No, my dear widow," said the old crusty; "I'd rather lose all the ribs I've got, than take another."

"Superintendicide" has just been coined to express a justifiable line of conduct when a Sunday-school finds it impossible to get rid of an imbecile and highly respectable, inane and amiable, good and good for nothing superintendant.

So sweet! The female toadies at Chislehurst are going to give that little fraud, "Prince" Napoleon, an inkstand, shaped like a beehive. Is the youth calculating to "sling ink" for a living? No doubt his pen will be mightier than his sword—but that is saying mighty little for the pen.

Apartments are being fitted up in Windsor Castle for the reception of the Czar, who will arrive the first week in May. His Imperial Majesty will occupy the same rooms used by the Emperor and Empress of the French on their visit to the Queen in Windsor Castle in April, 1855.

Cremation Fagots.

We object to cremation on another ground. When a widow would weep over an editor's ashes some fiendish paragraphist would remark, "How natural he looks—all lye."

Among the most modern conveniences in the latest dwelling-houses is the cremation cellar, with self-rotating roaster, odor-escape flues and comfortable seats for the mourners.

We had a cremation under our boiler, the other day. Pussy came to an untimely end, and she was lodged in our cremation chamber, on a sort of catafalque. It took about three minutes. Persons wishing to experiment, should wait until the decease of the animal, and be sure there is a strong draught.

Henry Laurens, the South Carolina Revolutionary patriot, was, perhaps, the first American to adopt incremation. He was impelled to do so by a narrow escape of an infant child of his from being buried alive, and left directions in his will to have his body burned, making a provision for alienating his estate of over three hundred thousand dollars from his son if the request was disregarded.

A cremation society has just been formed in London. It is constituted on the basis of the following declaration, which is said to have been influentially signed: "We disprove of the present custom of burying the dead, and desire to substitute some mode which shall rapidly resolve the body into its component elements by a process which cannot offend the living and shall render the remains absolutely innocuous. Until some better method is devised, we desire to adopt that usually known as cremation." Mr. Wm. Cassie, C. E., acts as secretary of the society.

Popular Science.

Prof. Huxley, in his inaugural address as Lord Rector of the University of Aberdeen, published in the May Popular Science Monthly, sketches in brief outline the history and present condition of the English and Scotch Universities, and then rapidly portrays his ideal of what the future university should be and what he shall endeavor to make Aberdeen. Of his own efforts alone, however, he is not sanguine of much present result: "If your annals take any notice of my incumbency, I shall probably go down to posterity as the rector who was always beaten. But if they add, as I think they will, that my efforts became victories in the hands of my successors, I shall be well content." Science, taught by observation, he naturally thinks should be the great study of the future, book-knowledge he has no faith in, for paraphrasing Hobbes, he formulates "books are the money of literature but only the counters of science."

A decidedly theoretical but very elaborate and interesting article by Prof. Emil De Bois Reymond discusses the "Limits of our Knowledge of Nature," the limits being our want of understanding matter and force, towards which we have made no progress for the past two thousand years. If we could comprehend these, we should know all; for—

"a mind," says Laplace, "which, at a given instant, should know all the forces acting in Nature, as also the respective situations of the beings of which it consists, provided its powers were sufficiently vast to analyze all these data, could embrace in one formula the movements of the largest bodies in the universe, and those of the smallest atom; nothing would be uncertain for such a mind, and the future, like the past, would be present to its eyes. The human intellect offers, in the perfection to which it has brought astronomy, a faint idea of what such a mind would be."

The history of "Law and Insanity" is touched upon, and the present court rulings in England and America treated of by Dr. Maudsley. There is an illustrated anonymous article on reflection and refraction, entitled "The Crooked Courses of Light." Professor Langley has an article on "Synthetic Chemistry," C. V. Riley treats of "The Grape Phylloxera," etc.
