Police Have Opportunity To Help Food Production

An effort is being made to induce the police to participate in the production campaign by giving their day off each week during the summer for agricultural purposes at the golf links, Lambton, 200 acres of which, it is understood, is to be plowed and put into crop. There are, reckoning both detectives and uniformed men, approximately 600 men on the force. The uniformed man walks the beat for eight hours each day, and gets one day's holiday each week, while the detectives come on duty at 8.30 in the morning and work until 10 at night, with intervals for meals. When their weekly holiday comes around they are forced to remain on duty 24 hours to secure it.

A petition is being circulated thruout the police divisions of the city for the men to sign if they are in favor of the scheme.

CHARGED WITH THEFT.

Harry Madill, 11 McMurrich street, was arrested last night by Detective McConnell on a charge of stealing $50. The charge is preferred by the Burlington, Ont., police.

WAR SUMMARY

THE DAY'S EVENTS REVIEWED

On the British front yesterday, except the fighting south of the Souchez River and near Bullecourt, the proceedings were without incident. The Canadians south of the Souchez River maintained their positions against a third counter-attack, and the Australians at Bullecourt caught a strong body of Germans in the open and decimated its ranks with artillery and machine gun fire. The British aerial service continued its task of driving the Germans from the air. British machines brought down six enemy machines and drove another down out of control.

* * * * * *

Lack of reserves, owing to the rough handling of those sent to counter-attack the French, most probably prevented the renewal of the conflict along the Chemin-des-Dames and the area north of the Moulin de Laffaux yesterday. The French soldiers cut down like corn the hapless Germans who were driven to the assault. A local attack enlarged the French gains south of Sapigneul, near Rheims. They took 100 prisoners in this fighting. The French have consolidated their positions on the Californie Plateau in the sector of Craonne. A violent artillery action is proceeding near Craonne and Hurtebise.

* * * * * *

The Germans are sacrificing so many men to stay the British and French advance, because their position on the Hindenburg line has already become precarious. If previous writings on warfare are accurate guides to future developments in this campaign, the time for the military decision is rapidly arriving. The Germans betook themselves to trenches, because, defeated in the open field, they could not continue mobile warfare, for they would have been destroyed. They were able to hold their own in the trenches so long because they had a superiority of heavy guns. The allies have now that superiority, and it has rendered trenches useless to the enemy as a defence. The Germans now are fighting a defensive battle in the open field in a manner that in the past has led to the most rapid decisions. Their rate of wastage is now many times as great as in ordinary trench warfare. Estimates of respective losses, however, have not received official verification.

* * * * * *

An important objective of the allies is the Lille-Douai-Cambrai-St. Quentin Railway and the present heavy fighting arises from the attempts of the enemy to defend this great avenue of communication. He probably intended to base his defence on the same principles as the Grand Duke Nicholas based his brilliant defence of Warsaw in the first eight months of the war, that is, by a system of thrust and parry in a deep zone in the open field. This German plan depended upon the retention of the Vimy ridge as a pivot, and by carrying that ridge the Canadians, of course, ruined the plan. The British have now advanced within seven miles of the trunk railway at Douai and the enemy has been struggling to prevent them from getting that line under range of their artillery. If the British succeed in advancing a few miles further east of their present front before Arras the enemy will probably have to go back a long distance again.

* * * * * *

The Germans have sent some of their aerial craft to aid the Turks in Armenia. The Russians shot one down near Gouragoumoura. The Turks have also opened attacks on the Russians northeast of Kighi and northwest of Ognott. In Mesopotamia the British have reported no further developments in the past few days. They have been consolidating their position in Bagdad in the past few weeks. The operations up the Diala, the Tigris and the Euphrates have really had as their purpose the occupying of strategic positions to defend the British tenure of Bagdad. On the Euphrates River they have probably occupied Hit to prevent the Turks from sending a force across the desert from Syria to attack them. On the Tigris they are probably secure, once they now hold Samara. Along the Diala they are linked with the Russians thru Persia. Before feeling secure to embark on a large expedition to recover Bagdad the Germans and the Turks feel it necessary to shake the Russian position in Armenia. General Judenich still holds command in this theatre of the war, and he will probably have surprises in store for the foe, provided that he receives adequate support from the provisional government.

* * * * * *

Venizelist troops have gone into action for the first time in the Balkans when contingents of these and some French troops captured advanced Bulgarian positions on a front of three miles in the Lymnitsa region of Serbia. They also repulsed a Bulgarian attack, launched the next day for the purpose of regaining the lost positions. The French official communication says that in these two actions the Venizelist troops conducted themselves brilliantly. Outside of the allied higher command, no person knows the exact number of Venizelist volunteers at Salonica.

* * * * * *

In London it is believed that Von Bethmann-Hollweg has postponed the making of the next German peace offer and the announcing of the official abandonment of Germany's annexation policy for three reasons. One is to await further developments in the submarine campaign against Britain. The other two are to see the results of the coming summer's fighting, and to learn whether anything advantageous for Germany will happen in Russia. The chancellor, it is thought, is therefore playing for time. He probably is also waiting for pointers on the coming harvest; and, besides, the German general staff has probably evolved a scheme of attempting the invasion of southwestern Russia and an advance on Odessa in order to secure the great quantities of grain believed to be stored in that port. Altho the Russian commanders express fears of an advance on Petrograd, it is to be noticed that they are particularly careful in watching the enemy south of the Pripet Marshes. It is in that region that the Russian soldiers appear the strongest and most energetic. The Germans in the north have, however, been displaying some activity along the Beresina River.

BIG INCREASE FOR HAMILTON ROYALS

Thirteenth Regiment to Add Over Three Hundred to Its Strength.

HUNDRED VOLUNTEER

Toronto Active Service Units Will Shortly Be Transferred to Borden.

The 13th Royal Regiment of Hamilton received authority yesterday to increase its strength from its present complement of 548 to 876. This puts it on the same basis as the 10th Royal Grenadiers and 48th Highlanders of Toronto. The increase means an adding of 82 privates to each of the four double companies in the unit. It already has a substantial number of men in excess of the old establishment, and also enough officers to meet the new requirements without appointing additional ones. The 13th is commanded by Lt.-Col. R. A. Robertson.

Major-General Logie is to inspect the 255th Q.O.R. Battalion and the 248th Grey County Battalion this week. The 255th will be reviewed in Toronto on Thursday, and the 248th in Owen Sound tomorrow.

Out of 100 recruits examined yesterday at the Toronto mobilization centre 37 were accepted and credited as follows: 71st Battery, 6; No. 7 Forestry, 69th Battery, 5; 109th Regiment Service Battalion, C.A.S.C., No. 3 Forestry, each 4; Mounted Rifles, 3; Signalers, Dental Corps, Ammunition Column, Medical Corps, 70th Battery, 48th Highlanders C.D.F., and 67th Battery, each one.

It is planned to have all the Toronto active service units transferred to Camp Borden by the time the district headquarters staff goes there, which means these units will all have moved north by May 29. No combatant corps will be included in the 2,000 men first to occupy Borden. The principal units will be forestry, C.A.S.C., and A.M.C. depots.

The physical standard for the Canadian Army Dental Corps has been reduced, and will be the same as laid down for members of construction and forestry battalions.

The new service battalion of the 10th Royal Grenadiers paraded 32 strong at the armories last night. Several new applicants came forward for duty with the C.E.F. section of the battalion. A large proportion of the applicants are boys just turned eighteen years old.

General Biggar, chief transport officer, Ottawa, was at the Exhibition Camp yesterday afternoon looking into the matter of accommodation for the summer ordnance stores.

Hon. Lieut. M. A. Chadwick, C.M., is promoted to the rank of hon. captain in the C.E.F. while holding the appointment of paymaster "D" unit, M.H.C.C. Lieut. W. V. Oke has been transferred from the 235th Battalion to No. 2 Railway Construction Draft.

The eight surplus officers of the 220th York County Battalion who were not taken east with the unit have been posted to be taken off the strength on May 24. Their names are: P.M. and Hon. Capt. John Dunbar, and Lieuts. E. C. Johnstone, H. G. Wookey, J. B. Unsworth, J. W. Pickup, A. K. Griffin, C. A. Bishop and J. H. Johnson.

NO SPORTING EVENTS UNTIL AFTER THE WAR

Y.M.C.A. Will Withdraw All Teams—To Enable Men to Get Busy on Food Production.

The Toronto Young Men's Christian Association have decided, in view of all the circumstances, to withdraw all athletic teams, including baseball teams, and to eliminate competitive sport of all kind until the end of the war. They have also decided to do away with the regular camps, which have been conducted from year to year, in order that the members may be available to cooperate with the movements for the increase of food production.

WEEKLY MEATLESS DAYS WOULD BE WELCOMED

"Toronto hotelkeepers would welcome one or two meatless days a week," said one of the leading hotel proprietors to a reporter for The World last night. The public generally, he thought, would be better off for less meat.

Omelets, fish and eggs would take the place of the meat, which would be conserved for the empire, but the cost would not be decreased, as with a greater demand for the substitutes their price would increase.

Tactics in Queen's Park by Hundred-and-Ninth Regiment

Under command of Lt.-Col. W. S. Dinnick the 109th Regiment paraded 507 strong last night to Queen's Park where tactical exercises were carried out in accordance with the new syllabus of training arranged for militia regiments. The 109th was supposed to be defending the parliament buildings from an attack of an enemy force advancing from the north. At first the enemy proved too strong and forced the 109th advance lines back. On being reinforced by reserve companies the front-line forces were successful in making a rush which regained the lost ground and routed the enemy.

The 109th Cadet Corps gained 50 more recruits last night. This brings the corps' strength up to the 150 mark and makes it one of the strongest cadet units in the city.
