Beaver Hats and Broad Flat Furs the Rage

Hats That Are Being Now Shown in Paris

Color Effects a Feature of the Worth Millinery---Smaller Sizes in Sight--Graceful and Picturesque Models Shown--Rolling Brims Replacing the Mushroom Lines.

"If early indications are to be trusted this is to be a season of beautiful winter hats. Absurdities there will be of course. Caricaturists will never lack material so long as the great Parisian milliner struggles to achieve originality, the humbler milliner tries to make exaggeration atone for want of skill or inspiration, and women of certain types continue to cherish the mistaken idea that the spectacular is necessarily the chic.

Already visions of the Cossack turban as it will be developed in unskilled hands and exploited by the sensationalists are to be seen. Already cumbrous, awkward handling of velvet and silk and fur is noticeable. Already trimming adjusted at the back of that hat brings forth ridiculous models.

Real Beauty.

But on the other hand the hats from the artist milliners show a high percentage of real beauty—beauty due largely to color effects and materials rather than to line, though many of the new models can boast of beauty of line as well.

That the medium hat so called, is to have the innings it has so insistently demanded seems a fact assured. We prophesied this last spring after observing the earnest efforts which several authoritative milliners bent toward that result. Summer millinery swung back to extreme sizes and there is the chance that winter millinery may do the same, a chance, but not a probability. One can never count definitely upon feminine whim, but the winter hats offer so much that is attractive that women may well be contented.

Not All Becoming.

To be sure not every woman can successfully wear the new turbans and close fitting hats of heavily draped crown and narrow brim, but if these are unbecoming one may choose a small hat of lighter proportions or a hat which might be called large, though compared with some of last season's immensities it appears modest.

Most graceful and picturesque are many of these large hats, of velvet, felt, beaver, moire, taffeta, faille or what you will. Made shapes covered with silk or velvet are more smart than the blocked shapes, yet charming things are found in the blocked shapes of silk beaver and felt.

A Velvet Facing.

A velvet facing is very likely to appear on either of these and that is, as always, vastly becoming. Delightful large hats, with some version of the rolling brim which has generally replaced the drooping mushroom lines, are covered in moire and faced with velvet of the same shade or a shade slightly darker. Large roll brim hats of hairy silk beaver are sometimes faced with moire, satin or faille instead of velvet, or are finished only by a narrow band of velvet or moire at the edge of the brim, or are altogether without facings.

The cavalier hat, rolling high at one side and almost invariably trimmed with plumes of some kind, is repeating its success of the late summer, but there are innumerable variations upon the rolling brim idea, a tendency toward modified Napoleonic lines showing in some of the very smartest models, while in others the most pronounced upward roll of the brim has crept around well toward the back.

ENGLAND IS TO HAVE A REAL OLD GUARD

London, Sept. 20.—The authorities, understand, are considering the question of forming two battalions of the Guards as a real "old guard." The Guards at present are recruited from the whole country, and naturally take the cream of the recruits. The two proposed battalions will be composed of long service soldiers drafted from the "corps d'elite" will be considered a reward for good and soldierly conduct, and only those men who have exemplary characters will be eligible. It is understood that great opposition is being made by the Brigade of Guards to the scheme, mainly on the ground that the proposed battalions, if formed, will be below the standard of height and physique, which is the pride of the brigade. The uestion therefore, is still in the "suggestion" stage.

LURE OF GOLDEN NORTH TOO MUCH FOR LADY SYBIL

Daughter of Governor-General Has started a Klondyke claim and Is Now a Full Fledged Miner.

Vancouver, Sept. 20.—Lady Sybil Grey, has been added to the number of patriotic Canadians who have felt and yielded to the lure of the golden north. Lady Sybil, during her recent visit to the Yukon with her father, the Governor General, staked a mining claim in the vicinity of the Dome, Dawson, which will be called the Sybil. On the day following Lady Sybil's venture into the mining arena, The Dawson News, under the headings "Millions In It" commented as follows:—

Staked Claim.

"As previously reported in the news columns of this newspaper, Lady Sybil Grey staked a claim on or near the Dome, and since she left a grant has been issued to her. On Saturday, before this grant was issued, she was shown some of the fine white quartz from the Lone Star, bearing gold visible to the naked eye and in sufficient quantity that a hired man could figure out its value from the rock itself.

"'This is not from your claim, Lady Sybil, but it is from a claim adjoining and yours might prove to be just as rich.'

"'Of course it will,' was the immediate optimistic reply of the new miner. And it was a thoroughly womanly reply. The gentlemen who presented these small specimens of the rock from the Lone Star had known Earl Grey when the Governor General was British Administrator of Matabeleland, and it was therefore some enjoyment to him, as it was to those around Lady Sybil, to share the confidence of the lady in the stakes she had placed in the Klondyke.

"'Look at this!' she exclaimed. 'I panned this from the dump, and wiggled the pan all by myself.' It was true, and there was about $20 in gold that Lady Sybil takes outside with her to show how easily gold is picked up by the miners of the Klondike. Lady Sybil did really pan out the amount stated from a dump, but she probably did not have any idea of the amount of labor and expense in getting out that dump. That her quartz claim on the Dome is bound to be a good producer one can accept as a prophecy, and many a rich mine has been based in the first instance on less than the optimistic ideas of a woman; they have been based upon mere dreams and have had those dreams come true. Those having claims next to the Sybil claim may consider themselves fortunate, as the lady says she is going to work it next year.

Lord Minto.

"When Lord Minto came here he was persuaded to take a pan on 42 Bonanza, then being operated by Johnny Anderson. Johnny was getting as good as 30 to 60 cents to the pan, and that was really great pay even in those days. But Johnny wished Lord Minto to make a phenomenal pan so he 'salted' the ground.

"Lord Minto was given a pan and a shovel and invited to take any dirt in sight from the dump. There was a crowd close to him that was in on the secret, and he took the ground right in front of him as a matter of course. He shoveled in a panful and started to wash it out in a barrel that had been placed there for that purpose, so that he could dip up the water from the barrel as he proceeded. The Earl showed himself quite an expert in whirling the pan, and when he had washed off and drained off everything except the gold he was found to have 37 cents. He was told that was a good pan.

Kicked Himself.

"But Johnny Anderson went behind the cabin and kicked himself, and when the party had departed he carefully panned the barrel in order to get back his $6 odd of 'salt.'

"That was not half as bad, however, as the trick the boys played on Commissioner Ogilvie, when he paid a visit up the creek. They were just about cleaning up and took a pan from the sluices and asked the Governor to wash it out himself, so that he might know what a pan of gravel from the creek was really worth. That pan ran about $2,000 and some of the Governor's subsequent actions in regard to mining were no doubt largely influenced, for a time, by what he believed to be the marvellous richness of the Klondike gravels. Of course, he has learned more of mining since he has floated his Stewart River proposition.

"But as to Lady Sybil and what she got out by panning from the dump there is no question. There are no more gallant set of men the world over than the Klondikers, and they would not for a moment think of tricking a lady—and especially one who made herself so universally popular with them."

NEW SEA ROUTE TO ALASKA IS CHARTED

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—To guard against repetition of the steamer Ohio tragedy off the Pacific coast American steamers will completely change the inside route to Alaska.

The passages have been carefully sounded, charted and buoyed by the Dominion Government, as it has been shown conclusively that the passage used by the Ohio is too treacherous for large vessels.

GERMANY MEDDLING WITH SPAIN'S OPERATIONS

Paris, Sept. 20.—L'Humanite claims to have good authority for the statement that Germany has reuested Spain not to undertake a regular expedition in Morocco by virtue of the Algeciras agreement.

On With the Play

LILLIAN RUSSELL.

Who but airy, fairy Lillian possesses the secret of perennial youth? Only the other day we heard she was going to retire, but is she? Well, hardly! Miss Russell, with the same queenly beauty and stage presence that made her a favorite with the Weberfieldian cohorts, is not a real legitimate actress.

THE ESKIMO CRAZE IS NOW ON IN EUROPE

One Succeeds Another in Paris and London and Aviation is Now Given Second Place to Polemics.

London, Sept. 20.—The aviation craze in London and in Paris has been succeeded by the Eskimo craze. Last week there was a moral certainty that hats were to be large, in fact larger than ever before. Milliners were drawing inspiration from the broad wings of the aeroplanes and the aero hat was to be a feature of winter headgear. Now comes all the north pole excitement, and who can think of aeroplanes?

Eskimo Everything.

The very latest of everything is Eskimo. There are Eskimo caps and Eskimo gloves, and before long shop windows will have goods labelled "recherche Eskimo coats" etc. At one hotel the day after the news of Peary's achievement arrived an Eskimo luncheon was served. The menu was as follows:

Hors d'oeuvres.
Saumon fume Scandinave.
Eufs de penguin a l'Eskimo.
Poularde casserole Nobluff.
Cuisson d'oursin a la Nansen.
Haricots panaches. Pommes croquettes.
Grouse a la gelee.
Salade Alaska.
Cook's mer de glace.
Fruits du nord.

Apropos of the fondness of Eskimos for gumdrops and the sustaining properties of sugar, of which a substantial ration is now supplied regularly to soldiers in the German Army, there seems to be a distinct increase in the consumption of candies of all sorts in England of late. The enhanced value of the shares of the big sweetmeat selling companies is one indication. Another is that everywhere in the city of London an increase is seen in the number of itinerant nougat sellers and other curbstone candy hawkers, who are all doing a good business.

Automatic candy supplying machines have to be refilled oftener and workingmen may now be seen frequently buying a pennyworth of sweet stuff and eating it as they go. This probably affects the tobacco trade adversely; at all events in the poorer quarters of London tobacconists are complaining while confectioners rejoice.

Temperance advocates also welcome the signs of increased consumption of sweets among the working classes as it tends to counteract the desire for intoxicants.

SIR THOMAS BENT IS DEAD IN MELBOURNE

Premier of Victoria Succumbs ---Was the Uncompromising Foe of the Boers, Fighting Against Botha's Reception.

Melbourne, Sept. 20.—Sir Thomas Bent, Premier of Victoria is dead.

Sir Thomas Bent, an Australian by birth, has been Premier, Treasurer and Minister of Railways of Victoria since 1904. He was created a K. C. M. G. in 1908. In 1907 he was authorized to visit England with a view to arranging for cheap transportation of emigrants to Victoria, and while on that mission attracted attention by a speech at Ealing in which he bitterly protested against England's welcome to Gen. Botha.

INFLUENCE OF NAMES ON LIVES OF BEARERS

Onomatology is the New Science That is Travelling the Rounds of Europe---How Names determine characte

London, Sept. 20.—Onomatology is a science or game exploited of late by a Frenchman of scientific leanings, M. de Rochetal. Onomatology deals with the effect of names on characters.

M. de Rochetal's idea is that Shakespeare, notwithstanding, there is a good deal in a name, and that the name given to a child at birth in some measure determines his or her character. Calling your offspring Abel, for instance, means that the child will develop into a bandit. Emile, Armand, Pierre, Rene, Louis, Jean are excellent names. The Jules have a special aptitude for politics, the Henris are chivalrous and generous, the Edouards energetic and perserving.

There are names of evil augury, such as Alice, which denotes a sensual temperament, subject to gloomy ideas and suicide. Helen is another. From her of Troy onward the Helens have generally ended badly, says M. de Rochetal. His studies, he thinks, will be useful to parents and also to those about to marry, for as the inventor seeks to prove in his pamphlet, whereas Juliette and Pierre will do well in double harness, Albert will inevitably fall out with Suzanne or Blanche and Marguerite will not get on well with Henri.

SAYS SHE IS DEPUTED TO SUCCEED MRS. EDDY

Baltimore, Sept. 20.—Declaring that in a divine revelation she was designated as the successor of Mrs. Eddy in the leadership of Christian Science, Mrs. Erskine has laid claim to the leadership.

Mrs. Erskine, who is a Baltimore woman, has been attendin gChristian Science meetings for about four months, it is said, but is not a member of the church.

Several days she went to W. C. Williams, chairman of the state commission on publication, and told him of her vision. She said that in the revelation she had been told that Mrs. Eddy was dead and that she was to be her successor. She also told Mr. Williams that a young man whom she knew and who is not a Christian Scientist was designated as a sort of deputy leader.

Williams said that no Christian Scientist believes that there can be a successor to Mrs. Eddy, who is the founder and the virtual head of the faith. Hhe said that even though Mrs. Erskine's vision announced that Mrs. Eddy is dead the leader the church is still living and working.

SITUATION IN GREECE WORRIES DIPLOMATISTS

Athens, Sept. 20.—The political situation in Greece, while calmer, continues to cause grave anxiety in diplomatic circles. There are not wanting careful, prudent men who predict that King George will still be forced to abdicate, although there is no personal feeling against him.

The choice of the military party, which is now really in power, is Prince George, grandson of the present King and son of Crown Prince Constantine. He is 19 years old.

An English fleet is lying off the Piraeus.

Mrs. Isaac L. Rice of New York was chosen at the recent conference in London of the Interiational Society for the Suppression of Street Noises to have charge of the second congress of the society, which is to be held in New York in 1912. The first congress is to meet in Berlin in June, 1910.

KING THE GUEST OF REAL ENOUGH HIELAND CHIEF

His Majesty Returns from Cure and is Now Off On Round of Country House Visits--MacIntosh of MacIntosh.

London, Sept. 20.—King Edward, having returned from his cure at Marienbad, will now start on his round of country house visits for shooting. His various hosts and hostesses are making all the preparations which the royal visit necessitates and the next few weeks the royal motor will be much used to convey the King to his destinations.

The most interesting of all the King's hosts is The Mackintosh of Mackintosh, whom he goes to visit shortly at Moy Hall. The Mackintosh's ancestry is like a page of "Scottish Chiefs," so closely connected is it with the history of Scotland in ancient days. The Mackintosh is one of the few genuine Highland chiefs of purely Celtic descent in the male line. His ancestry goes back to the invasion of Irish Scots, from the north of Ireland, which destroyed the original inhabitants of the Highlands—the Picti, the Romans called them, because they painted their bodies—and altered the name of the whole country north of the Tweed.

He is the chief of the Clan Chattan, which ruled for centuries over the greater part of Inverness-shire and Aberdeenshire, including the great forest of Badenoch. As befits his ancestry, The Mackintosh is very tall, with long, aquiline features and a drooping yellow mustache. He wears the kilt and sperran of his clan, a skenedhu (knife), a dirk and a Highland cap. In this costume he will greet the King.
