The Supreme Court of New Brunswick.

FREDERICTON, Oct. 28, 1872.

The Court is now sitting at Fredericton, the full bench, consisting of the five Judges, being present. The Supreme Court is the highest in the Province and is the final court of appeal, from whose decision, if erroneous, there is no redress, except to the House of Lords or Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. A short sketch of its constitution and powers will, therefore, probably be interesting to those of your readers not of the long robe.

The judges are five in number and are appointed and paid by the Dominion Government, the Chief Justice being at the head of the bench, and receiving a higher salary than the puisne judges.

The jurisdiction of the court is the growth of the common law, and corresponds to that of the Queen's Bench in England and is practically without limit.

Every offence, from the simplest assault up to the crime of murder, every action from the smallest debt to questions of property or account involving thousands of pounds, comes alike within its cognizance and is subject to its control.

It is true, courts of inferior jurisdiction are established by statute, for the trial of smaller civil actions, and the punishment of minor offences. As, for instance, the Justices Courts, which, throughout the country, have jurisdiction up to twenty dollars, in actions of debt and eight dollars in matters of tort, and the City Court of St. John, and Civil Court of Portland, whose jurisdiction is up to eighty dollars in debt and twenty dollars in tort. Besides these there are the County Courts having cognizance over matters of assumpsit up to two hundred dollars, and of tort to one hundred dollars. Through the Police Magistrates and Justices of the Peace also, a summary method is provided of trying offenders who are guilty of the smaller crimes.

There is, however, no crime too insignificant, no civil wrong of too little importance to be taken notice of by the Supreme Court wheresoever the interests of justice seem to require. The proceedings of the inferior courts are always subject to its supervision and direction. But the power of the Supreme Court over small debts does not consist alone in a supervision of the actions of the inferior courts which the Statutes have created. It has a concurrent jurisdiction, which is however seldom invoked, there being a salutary provision in the law that if any action is brought in the Supreme Court which could have been brought in an inferior tribunal, the plaintiff shall not be entitled to costs.

Even in this case, though, the Judge before whom the case is tried can remove the disadvantage, having the power to certify for costs, if he thinks there was reasonable grounds for bringing the action in the Supreme Court.

This Court may therefore well be named "Supreme," and this brief summary of its powers will show how deeply interested the people are in having its bench composed of persons, at once able and broad-minded lawyers, and pure and unsullied men.

A Magistrate may be corrupt and one-sided in his decisions. The remedy is simple and comparatively inexpensive. A Judge of a County Court may have erroneous views of the law, and commit wrongs against justice. An appeal is provided that is speedy and effective. But let the Supreme Court err, and the only remedy lies three thousand miles away, to a tribunal difficult of approach, and only to be resorted to when interests of tremendous magnitude are at stake.

Circuits of the Court are held in the different counties at stated periods for the hearing of civil causes, and trial of criminals. At these one judge presides. The decisions which he may gives a to the admissibility of evidence, or as to the right to non suit, or on such other points as may arise, as well as his direction to the jury, are all subject to the supervision of the full court, sitting at Fredericton. Even the verdicts of jurors are not altogether free from the control of the bench, and, though on pure matters of fact the court is loth to interfere to disturb a verdict, yet it will do so when it is against the weight of evidence, or is perverse, or generally unsatisfactory to the judge who tried the cause, or the damages are excessive, or the jury have been guilty of improper conduct, etc. The full court, or court en banc, sits at the court room in Fredericton four times a year: at Michaelmas term, commencing on the second Tuesday in October; at Hilary, on the first Tuesday in February; at Easter, on the second Tuesday in April; and at Trinity on the second Tuesday in June. The sittings usually last from the second Tuesday to the third Saturday of the term.

The present judiciary consists of Hon. Wm. J. Ritchie, Chief Justice, and Hons. Allan, Weldon, Fisher and Wetmore, Puisne Judges. Each of these gentlemen has had a large and important share in the politics of the country, and their achievements in the forum and the Senate are well known to the people of New Brunswick. Selected, no doubt, all of them for political reasons, and on account of their views being in harmony with those of the dominant party of the day, our province is peculiarly fortunate in having on its Supreme Court bench a body of men so universally esteemed for their public and private worth, and so honored for the ability they bring to the discharge of the arduous duties of their positions. It is no flattery to say that never perhaps has there been a period in the history of the province, and never probably will there again be a time, when the decisions of the court were or will be looked to by the bar with a greater confidence than at the present time.

The officers of the court, who materially assist, the one to the currying on of its proceedings with system and regularity, and the other to giving publicity to its decisions, are the Clerk of the Pleas, Wm. Carman, Esquire, who has been a long time at the bar, and discharges his duties with much satisfaction, and the reporter of the court, Wm. Pugsley, Esquire, who has been lately appointed, and whose reports there is reason to believe will be all that can be desired.

The previous reporters of the court were Berton, the present judge Allen, D. S. Kerr, Esquire, and James Hannay, Esquire.

The business of the court is conducted with much regularity and decorum.

The first day of term is specially devoted to common motions which are continued until finished. Next is taken up the motion paper, that is, the paper on which the causes are set down, when notice of motion is required. Then follows the crown paper, and Equity, Probate and County Court appeals.

The first Friday and Saturday of the term, however, are set apart for motions for new trials, and in addition to the first day of the term, the second Tuesday and Saturday are for Common motions.

The causes are taken up in their order on the docket and are pushed through as rapidly as possible.

Occasionally a cause is reached when one of the counsel appears not to be present, as occurs when there is a run on the docket. His brethren of the bar, knowing that they may be placed in the same position soon themselves, rise to offer excuses for the absent member. But the reason for his not being present must be a good one indeed to induce the Court to waive from the rule, often laid down and lately repeated with more than ordinary force, to prevent the cause from being struck off.

The lawyers, however, are rather good fellows, and when a brother has been so unfortunate, he is usually allowed, by consent, to enter the cause again next term, which makes it all right, the client attributing the unfortunate delay to the crowded state of the docket.

It is well, perhaps, that there is this courtesy among the members of the legal profession, because, were it not so, and were the members generally to exercise "sharp practice" upon each other, there would be a great amount of bitterness and ill-feeling, instead of, as now, the great good will with which the interests of unfortunate suitors are disposed of.

Besides the common law jurisdiction of the Court, it has equity jurisdiction as well, the Court for this purpose, being called "The Supreme Court in Equity," or "The Supreme Court, Equity side."

The equity sittings are held before a single Judge once a month at Fredericton, where cases are heard either on viva voce testimony or by affidavit. The judgment of the judge on the matter before him is not final but is like the judgments of the other courts I have mentioned, subject to be reviewed on appeal to the full bench.
