HOPED TO GET A REWARD.

ARREST OF THE BOSTON & MAINE TRACK OBSTRUCTOR.

None Other Than William F. Murdock, Who Waved the Signal Lantern—Under Pressure He Confesses to the Deed—His Statement, Made in a Lynn Cell, Discredited.

[Boston Herald.]

The man who placed the obstruction on the tracks of the Boston & Maine railroad near West Lynn, with the evident intention to wreck the train, as described in yesterday morning's Herald, has been arrested, and is no other than William F. Murdock, the young man whose graphic story of heroism in stopping with a red light the train rushing to its destruction, was read with so much interest and concern by the travelling public. The arrest was made yesterday afternoon and through the agency of Detectives Wood and Ham of this city and officer Hanscomb of the Lynn police.

It seems that yesterday morning Supt. Furber of the Boston & Maine road sent for Mr. Wood, and directed him to go to Lynn and make an investigation. Mr. Mr. Wood went directly to the electric light works, where Murdock claimed to be employed. He there learned that the young man had been in the company's employ, but left it about a week ago, and nothing was known of his whereabouts. Mr. Wood then visited Murdock's boarding house, 24 Light street, but was told by the landlady that her boarder had received a telegram to come to Boston from Supt. Furber, and he would probably be found at the Boston & Main office in this city. As Mr. Wood's mission, acting under the instruction of Mr. Furber was to see Murdock and have him explain all about the obstruction he claimed to have found on the track, the detective did not take much stock in the telegram story. He further learned that Murdock had been in Lynn but about three months, having come there from Malden, where his father is a currier and very respectably connected. Murdock had always had the reputation of being a pretty good boy till just before he got into trouble with an Italian, and it was said that a warrant was in the hands of the Malden police charging him with having struck the Italian in the head with a stone. Mr. Wood also learned that, since the alleged discovery of the obstruction, Murdock had said that all the reward he wanted for his vigilance and heroism was a job as brakeman on the Boston & Maine and a pass over the road. After obtaining this information the examination was made of the obstruction itself, which proved to be of a kind that could have easily been put on the track by the young man himself. Mr. Wood sent a telegram to Supt. Furber, asking if Murdock was at the office. The reply was in the affirmative, and that he would be held till the arrival of the detective. When Mr. Wood reached Boston he found Murdock in custody of Officer Hanscomb of Lynn on the charge of attempted train wrecking. The officers talked the matter over, and it was decided to try and obtain a confession. They took their prisoner into the directors' room at the Lowell station, and cautioned him that any statement of guilt he might make would be used against him, but advised him to tell the truth. He at first insisted that he had told nothing but the truth, but was evidently very nervous and weakening. Mr. Wood then said: "If I call in Mr. Furber will you tell him the truth?" Murdock said he would. When Mr. Furbur came in Mr. Wood said to the lad: "Now, we don't believe you had any malicious intent in putting the rail on the track, or that you intended to injure anyone. You only did it in the hope of getting something from the road—is not that so?" "Yes," was the reply. "I put it on myself last night, after the through train going down had passed, and before the West Lynn train had time to arrive. I did not intend to do any harm, but I hoped to get a reward." Then turning to Mr. Furber he said; "I did not intend to wreck the train, and I hope you won't prosecute me." Mr. Furber said there was nothing he could do to stop the prosecution even if he so desired. "It is a duty we owe to the public," he continued, "that acts of this kind should be punished, and it is right these officers should take you and bring you before the court."

Officer Hanscomb took his prisoner to Lynn and he now occupies a cell in the police station of that city. He was interviewed last evening by a Herald representative and made the following statement: "I was walking down the track when I was seized with an uncontrollable impulse to place the rail on the track and then flag the train with the switch lantern. I did not do it in the hope of receiving a reward or achieving notoriety. I acted entirely alone, and am the only one responsible for my actions. I did not think at the time that I was committing a serious offence, but now realize the enormity of my crime. I was never in trouble of this nature before, but was arrested three years ago in Everett for breaking and entering. My parents reside in Malden, and I am sorry I have brought this disgrace upon them. I wish to be understood that no one prompted me to do the act." Murdock is 20 years of age though he looks younger.

The police discredit the statement that he was "promted by a sudden impulse," as he went out of the way to get on the railroad tracks. Murdock will be arraigned in court this morning.

A TRIANGULAR FIGHT.

AN ARTIST, EDITOR AND A MANAGER EXCHANGE BLOWS.

Nocturne Whistler Opens the Ball on Editor Moore's Head but Comes Off Second Best—Then William Horace Lingard Takes a Hand.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—A most disgraceful and exciting fist fight took place to-night between James McNeil Whistler, the artist, Augustus M. Moore, the proprietor and editor of the Hawk, and Williams Horace Lingard, the theatical manager, in the foyer of Drury Lane Theatre. The place was crowded with people who were all-more or less acquainted, for it was the occasion of the opening of the Autumn season and the production of the new drama, "A Million of Money." During the interval between the third and fourth acts, Mr. Augustus M. Moore was standing in a circle of his friends, discussing the play, when Whistler, with his huge eye-glass in his right eye and his flat-brimmed stovepipe hat on his head, entered the foyer, talking with a friend named Butterfield. He carried in his hand a blackthorn stick, which, with a peculiarity that belongs to the artist of the butterfly signature, is much longer than is generally used. Catching sight of Moore Whistler raised the heavy stick he carried and rushed at the editor of the Hawk, whose hat was smashed with the first blow he received. Before he could recover from the surprise of the attack Whistler began to beat him about the head with the stick, and at the same time shouted at the top of his voice and in contemptuous tones, "Hawk! Hawk! Hawk!"

Moore's temper was at once aroused and he struck Whistler one blow between the eyes straight from the shoulder which felled the artist to the floor. The noise of this row had drawn several people to the scene and some of Whistler's friends joined in the fracas, amid a great uproar, which threatened to assume serious proportions. Eventually Moore was pushed into the American bar and kept there by force while the acting manager of the theatre, Mr. Fletcher, seized the erratic artist, who was kicked out of the house without further ceremony. All was quiet for a moment, then a fresh scene occurred. While the various groups in the lobby, in one of which was August Moore, were discussing the late fracas and its summary termination, William Horace Lingard entered the foyer and rushed straight at Moore and smashed him in the face. The attack was so sudden and unexpected that Moore did not even see him coming, nor did any one else notice him till the blow was heard, and immediately the two men were locked in a fierce tussle before it was possible for any of their friends to interfere.

Mr. Moore was seen after the performance and said that he was quite at a loss to account for Whistler's conduct, since the Hawk had not published anything about him for several weeks. Mr. Whistler vanished immediately after his summary ejectment from the theatre and it was impossible to find him to learn his version of the affair. Mr. Lingard, who was seen after the affray, said he had heard in the theatre that Whistler had tried to thrash Moore in the lobby, and that fact had reminded him that he also had a grudge against the editor, who had made many nasty remarks about him in the Hawk. He added, however, that he was sorry he had allowed his temper to get the better of him.

THE TARIFF BILL.

A Republican View of its Effects.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—The Tribune says "great fear has been professed by importers and bankers, that the new tariff bill might cause a financial convulsion if imported goods had to be withdrawn from the warehouse immediately after the passage of the bill in order to secure its advantages.

Rash statements about the amount of duties have been made ranging from 25 to 40 millions of dollars.

The head of a prominent importing house in this city sought an official estimate from Auditor Comstock of the naval office who replies that his maximum estimate of the duties on goods specially drawn in October in anticipation of the new tariff is ten millions of dollars. These figures explode the exaggerated stories afloat and they are not large enough to produce any financial disorder.

Telegraphic Flashes.

The senate at Washington, passed the tariff bill yesterday; yeas 40, nays 29.

The island of Schnett at Pressburg in Hungary has been inundated. The bodies of 21 persons drowned during the floods have been found floating in the Elbe.

The department of public works for Canada, have stipulated that soft coal required for the Ottawa government buildings this year must be supplied from Nova Scotia mines.

The general conference of the Methodist church in Canada opened in Montreal yesterday. Dr. Carman, who presided, delivered a lengthy address on the questions coming up for discussion. Rev. Mr. Henstis of Halifax was elected secretary on the second ballot. About 285 delegates are present and much interest is manifested.

The directors of the Knox & Lincoln railroad, Maine, yesterday voted to convey to the Penobscot Shore line their stock on terms before made public. The vote was 2,862 for and 139 against. Waldoboro voted no, and filed a protest to the sale. The hearing on the case of Waldoboro v. the Knox & Lincoln was adjourned by Judge Haskell to 15th inst. at Rockland.

The government of Canada have received a copy of the imperial act passed this summer abolishing vice-admiralty courts and empowering all superior courts in British possessions to exercise the powers of admiralty courts. The effect in Canada will be that after July next all superior courts will have jurisdiction as admiralty courts unless the Dominion government avail itself of the provision by which it may designate the court or courts so empowered. The act provides that the present judges of such must be recompensed by pension or otherwise for loss of salary consequent on the change.

SHOT DEAD.

A MAN FIRES INTO A CROWD WITH FATAL EFFECT.

Died from being Scalded with a Pot of Boiling Soup—A Stage held up by a Highwayman.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE.

NEWMILFORD, Conn., Sept. 11.—John J. Waters, aged 45 was shot dead last night by George Knowles aged 21, at Lanesville, 3 miles from here. George Knowles father, David Knowles, had locked up his house and put George on guard to prevent a brother, Jay Knowles, from occupying the property. Jay arrived with a party and proceeded to batter in the door when George fired into the crowd killing Waters, who leaves a widow and six children.

THE EIGHT-HOUR QUESTION.

The Absorbing Labor Topic in England To-day.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—The great subject of discussion in all labor papers throughout the country is the eight-hour question. Lloyd's Weekly News, one of the few papers published on Sunday, and one of the chief organs of the workingmen, says in a leading article to-day:

"It by no means follows that the majority of votes represents a majority of the Unionists, for at the present time the Unionists are about equally divided on the question, while 7,000,000 non-unionists have not made any sign as to which side they intend to take. It is certain that the vote will not convert a single member of the Unionist party who is engaged in any of the textile trades and who dreads competition, unless, indeed, the bill which is to be drawn up hereafter should prove to be of a merely ornamental character, like some of the eight-hour laws which have been passed in America and Australia. The experience derived from these countries proves that it is quite possible to have an eight-hour law while work goes on for nine, ten or even eleven hours. To get employment for the surplus laborers of the country which is the goal at which John Burns aims, we must provide that nobody shall work longer than eight hours and must punish any one who infringes this provision. Does the majority which voted in favor of making eight hours a legal working day want such a bill as this? Such a bill would inevitably divide the ranks of labor, and would be strenously resisted whenever the men had reason to fear that their trades would be injured by its operation."

THE MAIL CARRIAGE.

A Speedier Service for the Upper St. John Arranged for by Hon. John Costigan.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE.

LEWISTON, Me., Sept. 11.—The Lewiston Journal has lately been criticising the action of the Canadian minister of Inland revenue for allowing the mails for the upper St. John to be carried for years by stage instead of by railroad.

Hon. John Costigan has just written McDaigle at St. David saying that he has arranged a service by rail expediting the mails about 24 hours.

He describes the long delay and repeated refusals to the hostility between the Temiscouata and New Brunswick railways preventing arrangements for a continuous service.

HER BLACK LOVERS.

A FASCINATING BRUNETTE WITH ELEVEN BROTHERS AND SISTERS

Has Two Black Men Paying Court to Her—They Quarrel and One of the Negroes Gets a Bullet in his Brain.

READING, Sept. 6.—A fight with pistols in the street at 9.30 last night, resulting in the death of one of the negro participants, has developed a scandal involving the reputation of a white girl, whose parents and eleven brothers and sisters have lived in Reading for years. Up to this morning Katie Kunkel, aged 23, a bright-eyed and fascinating brunette, was one of the dining-room girls in the Grand Central Hotel here. She was well behaved and had the respect of all who knew her. No one for a moment ever dreamed that she had two black men paying court to her and that one of them had threatened her with death.

John Brown, aged 24, was at one time a porter in the hotel. He became the secret lover of Miss Kunkel a few years ago, and, unknown to anyone, frequently met the girl away from the hotel. Five weeks ago another colored man named James Arbegus, aged 24, was employed as day porter at the hotel. He gained the affections of Miss Kunkel, and thereupon Brown vowed vengeance, and threatened the girl that if she did not cast off Arbegus he'd expose her to the world. She replied: "You dare not; no one would believe you.

Last night Brown followed the girl, and traced her to the house of a white woman named Sutter. Shortly afterward Brown saw Arbegus also enter the house. Brown then rushed in and saw the pair seated in Mrs. Sutter's parlor. He threatened to shoot both, and drew a revolver. Mrs. Sutter rushed in, put Brown out, and he walked to the next corner and stood in the middle of the street.

A few minutes later Arbegus and the white girl left the house. Miss Kunkel walked in Second street toward the hotel, and Arbegus walked up to where Brown stood. As soon as Arbegus got near enough Brown opened fire on him where he stood and Arbegus returned it. Brown fired twice and missed and Arbegus fired once Brown dropping into the street with a bullet in his brain. He died shortly afterward. Arbegus and the young women were taken to jail.

The hotel people were thunderstruck at the news this morning, and the girl's parents and friends are overcome with grief. She made a full confession.

Sir Leonard Tilley and G. R. Ketchum M. P. P. were among the Barker House arrivals yesterday.

On Wednesday evening next at the firemen's procession, halts will be made on Smythe and Sunbury streets where will be set off meteoric balloons, asteroid and parachute rockets with floating lights, changing colors repeatedly while sailing through the air, colored sky rockets, colored fires, floral bombshells and floral fountains. During the march the firemen will use between four hundred and five hundred Roman candles, and sixty colored torches, red, blue and green, all of which will make a brilliant illumination. At the close of the procession another and larger display of fireworks will be set off on Phœnix square.

The annual fair of Stanley agricultural society will be held at the above named place on Wednesday, the 8th day of October next.

OTTAWA GLEANINGS.

Meeting of the Privy Council Committee—The Dispute Between the C. P. R. and Corporation of Toronto being heard—Other Matter.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—The writs for the election at Napierville and Port Neuf will be issued shortly.

Post office Inspector Fletcher of the Pacific Coast Division was married this morning to Seney, second daughter of Senator Scott.

The railway committee of the privy council held a session to-day, hearing several petitions from Manitoba corporations. It was postponed owing to the incompleteness of the plans. The dispute between the C. P. R. and the corporation of Toronto with regard to the appropriation along the lake front is being heard this afternoon.

Ottawa has the latest church trouble. Father McGovern a popular parish priest, at New St. Bridget's parish here, was confirmed in his appointment Sunday. Since then he received a notice of his immediate transfer to a remote country parish. His parishioners are indignant and will take action at a public meeting to-morrow. Both Bishop Duhamel and Father McGovern refuse to speak.

York Election Petition.

To-day, His Honor Mr. Justice Palmer entertained an argument for the fixing of a date for the trial of the York election petition.

Messrs. Geo. F. Gregory, and Daniel Jordan appeared for the Petitioner and Hon. Attorney General appeared in person on his own behalf, the other York representatives being unrepresented by counsel.

The circuits come on in such relation to dates that there is difficulty about fixing a date for the trial and though the 4th of November was suggested, it appears that Stenographer Frye is assigned to the York adjourned circuit and as under the law the stenographer of that court is the stenographer of the election court, the difficulty does not seem to be lessened so far as an early date is concerned.

His Honor will take the matter into consideration, however, and do the best he can.

The marriage was a quiet one, and after the ceremony the happy couple left by the western train for the States.

THE BOARD OF TRADE AND THE ULUNDA.—The Globe is not well informed in regard to the dealings of the Board of Trade with the Ulunda matter. WEDDED AT ROTHESAY.

A Brilliant Social Event Celebrated at the Rothesay Episcopal Church last Evening.

The marriage of Mr. Herbert Hall, son of Mr. Stephen S. Hall, of the firm of Hall & Fairweather, to Miss Laura Parks, daughter of the late Thomas Parks, which was celebrated at Rothesay last evening was the most brilliant and interesting social event that has taken place at that pretty suburb for a long time. A large number of guests were present and with them and many others who were interested the episcopal church was filled. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers, and a handsome floral wedding bell was suspended over the aisle so that the bridal party had to pass under it. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Lloyd at 7.30 o'clock, the bride being given away by her cousin Mr. John H. Parks. Miss Ida Parks, the brides, sister acted as her maid, while Mr. Harry Gilbert did the honors as best man. The music rendered by the choir was very fine, and after the interesting ceremony was concluded, the guests drove to the residence of the bride's mother where a grand wedding supper was partaken of and where congratulations and pleasant greetings made the time most enjoyable The array of presents received by the bride was one of the most handsome that most of those present had ever seen and, included among them, were tributes from the choir and other bodies connected with the church.

Among those present at the wedding supper were; Mr. S. S. Hall and family, Mr. C. H Fairweather and family, Mrs. G. S. DeForest, Mr. S. S. DeForest and wife, Mrs. Wm. Pugsley, Dr. and Mrs. D. A.
