FIRE IN LYNN.

A TERRIBLE FIRE STARTS THERE AT NOON TO-DAY.

All Telegraph Communication with the Town is Cut off—Fire Engines from Boston and other Cities Helping—Loss One Million Dollars.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE.

LYNN, Nov, 26.—A disastrous fire started here at noon in Mower & Bros. building on Almont street. In ten minutes the whole building was in flames from top to bottom. There is only a space of 20 feet between this building and the six story brick block known as Mower's block and in a short time this building was on fire.

Fifteen minutes after the fire started it was beyond control.

A heavy wind is blowing and the fire spreading rapidly. The flames have reached Bennett & Barnard's big factory and a large wooden building facing it on Central square, in which the Daily Bee is located. Cinders crossed Central square and ignited the four-story brick Fuller block in which are the Western Union Telegraph Office and C. D. Pecker & Co., shoe manufacturers.

12.40 p. m.—The flames communicated to George O. Fall's wooden building, occupied by him as a candy store. Here is also located the Sunday News and Morning News the first number of which was issued to-day.

There is no telling where the flames will stop. It is beyond all power to it. The four story brick block owned by the Daily Item 600 feet from where the fire started caught fire on the wooden cornice but it is believed will not be lost.

12.45 p. m.—The building occupied by the Daily Press is on fire and the flames are rapidly burning their way to Railroad Avenue. The wind has shifted and the flames have reached Currier & Co.'s block. Ten teams are removing their large stock of clothing.

BOSTON, Nov. 26.—Engines from Boston and other neighboring cities have been sent to Lynn on special trains to assist the local department. It is estimated, from reports so far received, that the loss will reach one million dollars.

All telegraphic communication with Lynn is suspended, doubtless by the burning of the wires in the streets.

Shaw, while Mr. Charles Drury officiated as groomsman. The church was filled to overflowing with the friends and acquaintances of the young couple. The choir rendered some very excellent music prepared for the occasion of the departure of one of their most popular members in the person of the bride. The bridal party came to the city by the 8 o'clock train and were entertained at a wedding supper at the residence of Dr. March.

DOG DAYS AT THE CO

Many Intelligent Defendants Before Magistrate Ritchie this Morning—The list of Delinquents.

This was a great day at the Police Court. A very large number were present to answer the charge of keeping unlicensed dogs, and fully as many were there to hear what the others had to say. Some had much to tell the magistrate, and many personal and family grievances were well aired. However matters were disposed of as quickly and quietly as possible. But few fines were imposed, delinquents in most instances being allowed to go on paying for a license and the summons. According to the statements of three fourths of the defendants present, dogs during the past month have been having a hard time of it, being shot, drowned, given and made away with generally.

Charles Colwell, a West End store keeper was asked to contribute the price of a summons to the City treasury, but he got riled, and swore he had killed the dog which didn't belong to him, and would contribute nothing to this fund. A threat to put him down below completed his case.

"Patrick Gallery," said the court, "You have been keeping a dog without a license; what have you to say?"

"To say, yer honor: I have'nt been kaping a dog, he was only a timporal acquaintance."

"And you, James Brennan, what is your answer to the same charge?"

"Sure enough, yer honor, the dog is there. Av I knowed whose he was I'd give him away. He's no good av a dog at all, at all, and part av his tail is off—another dog ate it."

"A dollar, fifty," murmured the magistrate.

"But I don't know naything about the dog," cried James, "I can't pay it, I've got no money to pay it.",

"All right" smiled the court, "on confession fined four dollars."

Several of the policemen who had reported unlicensed dog owners, were sworn.

Officer Rowley said that it was he who had reported one Beck for the above mentioned offence. Beck stated the dog was now dead.

"What about that, officer," interrogated His Honor.

"Well," replied officer Rowley, "he was well enough when I saw him, but the woman afterwards told me he had taken sick and they shot him to save his life."

Of these Wm. Fitzgerald and Augustus Matheson were fined $4 each.

The following appeared from the South end:—Charles Melick; Samuel Orr; Albert Kirkpatrick; John Moran; Dennis McCarthy; D. M. Hooper; Charles E. Raymond; Edward Higgins; James Bain; Patrick Gallery; Michael Manning; Mary Holmes; Samuel Masters; Charles Fletcher, David Maher, James McCullough; John Walker; John Sullivan; Francis McCafferty.

Of this number John Moran and Michael Manning were fined $4 each.

The following appeared from the West end, Charles Colwell, Henry Glos Joseph Fitzgerald, John B. Quilty, David Ferguson. Of these Henry Gloss was fined $4.

The following persons in the North end were summoned and have since taken out licenses but have not paid the costs incident to the prosecution:—James Rodgers; Thos. Beamish; Geo. Shannon; Ed. PERJURY GALORE.

THOSE WHO DENIED THE EXISTENCE OF AN "INNER CIRCLE" MAY SUFFER.

The State Sure of Convicting Coughlin, Burke and Sullivan, and Perhaps Beggs and Kunze Also.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—The defence in the Cronin case did not finish to-day because there are a few alibi witnesses Kunze wants summoned. Besides, Lynch, the distiller, is still sick and could not come into court. After talking the matter over with the attorneys, Judge McConnell decided to take a recess until Monday, much to the disgust of the poor jurymen, who want the thing over with as soon as possible.

The state has not yet determined as to the time it will take with its rebuttal testimony. It may be half a day and it may be three days. It is the understanding that several witnesses will be put upon the stand to refut the statements of those members of Camp No. 20 who swore they never heard of an "inner circle," and the claim is even made that one of the witnesses who swore he never knew of such a thing as an "inner circle," was one time the circle's presiding officer.

There has been a fearful amount of perjury in this case, but not more than the prosecution expected. In fact, the State's Attorney has the names of some members of this "inner circle," and the claim is made that to this "circle" the fate of poor Cronin was left instead of the Secret Committee, which Beggs so strongly insists was never appointed. However that may be, the senior guardian of every camp knows the name of nearly every member of the "inner circle," and it was with great joy, therefore, that Judge Longenecker heard that the defence proposed to put Beggs upon the stand in his own defence.

But that would never have done in the world, and Beggs himself protested again that. He is enough of a lawyer to know that he would have put his neck into the noose the moment he took the stand, for the prosecution would have asked him questions it would have been death to answer. Had he refused to answer them the jury would have at once drawn their own conclusions, and these would not have been at all favorable to Beggs and the Clan-na-Gael. There was the utmost consternation in the ranks of the clan when it was understood that Beggs was to take the stand, and the attorney for the ex-Senior Guardian was warned that if he wanted to hang his client and alienate all his friends the best thing to do was to let Beggs appear as a witness in his own behalf. Then again, Beggs might let slip some facts the Clan-na-Gael folks do not want told, for the members of the clan are very jealous regarding their secrets. It would be better, and perferable, in their opinion, to hang a few men than permit even a small secret to get out.

The fact that Kunze wants to pile up alibi testimony in his behalf doesn't seem to help him any with the jury, and it is conceded now that this was a mistake. Kunze has made a rather good impression because his manner has not been that of a man who had the weight of a murder on his mind. He has betrayed the utmost indifference and selfishness, too, for not long ago he announced that he wished "some of de odder boys would gonfess, so as to end dis ting."

Burke, the man who is supposed to possess the greatest amount of nerve of any of the prisoners, is becoming very restless. His glance is quicker and furtive and he smiles appealingly at his lawyers when they come near him and looks for sympathy from any one who will take notice of him. His hands are continually on the move and he shifts his head around like a muzzled dog. A timid demeanor has succeeded his early air of nonchalance and confidence.

The sleeping, half closed eyes of Sullivan betray nothing of the thoughts that may be surging within. Coughlin sits and stares at space, like a man in idleness, while Beggs seeme to think his liberation only a matter of a few days.

The lawyers for the defence seem to be very well satisfied with their work, while the State's attorneys are confident of convicting Coughlin, Burke and Sullivan without doubt, and probably Beggs and Kunze. To a man the attorneys for the State feel that Burke, Coughlin and Sullivan have no show, but they are not betting on hanging Beggs and Kunze.

It will be nearly two weeks before the case is finally given to the jury, provided the work so far accomplished is not turned over by the discovery that some member of the jury has been tampered with.

From what can be learned the State is not so fearful that a juryman has been "seen" as it is that the defence succeeded in getting a sympathizer in the box. One juryman on examination was so positive he had no sympathy with the defendants or anything pretaining to them that the State would not take him. To the State's surprise the defence accepted him and the prosecution made no objection. It is said the juryman's record has been more carefully looked into of late and the discovery made that previous to being called for examination he had frequently expressed sympathy with the defendants in no uncertain or equivocal way. This juryman is being closely observed.

The Sun's Mistake.

[Chatham World.]

We entirely agree with the Farmer in thinking that the St. John Sun, in assailing Conservatives who support the Local Government, is injuring its party. The Local Government is not formed on Dominion party lines nor run on Dominion party lines. Dominion party issues do not, enter into the discussion of the Legislature. There is no reason whatever to prevent a loyal supporter of Sir John Macdonald from sitting with Mr. Blair in the Executive Council or supporting him in the House. The Sun ought to have seen long ago, the futility of endeavoring to get provincial politicians to divide on Dominion party lines. It may, doubtless does, believe that it would be in the public interest to have provincial questions merged in Dominion issues, but it should have seen before this that the people are not so devoted to party gods and influenced by party cries as to support or oppose Local Governments without regard to local interests. Education, roads and bridges, stumpage, etc, and not Protection or Commercial Union, are the questions with which local legislators have to deal. The Sun, as the leading Liberal Conservative paper of the province, and as an acknowledged party organ, ought not to injure its party, and weaken the hands of its candidates, by assailing Conservatives who, in the exercise of their judgment, support the Blair Government.

But we have no respect for the manner in which the Farmer expresses its disapproval of the Sun's policy. Coarse epithets were not called for. It should have remembered that the Sun is of its own family, that it is its elder brother in a sense and dealt with it in a courteous manner. We are astonished to hear it assail the good Conservatives who own the Sun as boodlers because some of them have contracts with the Government or supply stores for public services. These gentlemen, no doubt, give full value for what they get, or, at least, just as good value as others would do in their places. The Farmer assails the Sun because it does some public printing. And yet the Farmer, we believe, is in the enjoyment of a pretty liberal printing patronage, the size of its establishment considered, from the Local Government. It does good work, we presume, and gets no more than the usual price, one that leaves a fair profit, and its portly editor would not like to be considered a boodler in consequence. He is not a boodler, nor are the members of the St. John Sun company, simply because they receive public money for services performed.

Mr. McLeod does not love Mr Blair, who ousted him from the position of Attorney General without giving him a chance to show his governing abilities, but he should be too good a Conservative to allow this feeling to vent itself through the Sun in such a way as to injure his party. His co-directors on the Sun ought not to permit it. The Sun ought to be taken seriously in hand by the party leaders, and warned against assailing Liberal Conservatives because they support Mr. Blair. We speak as Conservatives, not as supporters of the Local Government.

The Exhibition of 1890.

The committee appointed at the last meeting of the exhibition association met the directors of the St. John Agricultural society yesterday afternoon. A large number of the directors was present. The committee present from the exhibition association consisted of Chas. A. Everett, James Reynolds, W. W. Clark and the secretary, Ira Cornwall

Mr. Everett, of the committee, stated the object of the meeting to be to ascertain if the society would join the association in the show to be held next fall. The scope of the society's show he understood to be local while that of the association would be provincial or embrace a wider range.

Mr. S.S. Hall explained that the exhibition of the agricultural society next year would have to be provincial in some respects. They would receive the provincial grant, for which prizes the whole province would compete. The object which the exhibition association had was to see if the two bodies could not join in one exhibition.

The subject was discussed in all its bearings by Messrs. W. W. Clark, James Reynolds, Ira Cornwall, Dr. Walker, Ald. Law, Dr. Steeves, and others and at last Mr. Hall moved that a committee of three, with the president, be appointed to confer with the committee from the exhibition association with a view to the formulation of a scheme to be submitted to the society and association.

This was passed, and Dr. Walker, J. A. S. Mott and Ald. Law were appointed such committee.

THE MORMON QUESTION.

A Strong Argument by U. S. Atty. Varian against Admission of Mormons to Citizenship.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE.

SALT LAKE, Nov. 26.—The arguments in the Mormon eligibility cases occupied the entire day yesterday.

United States Attorney Varian in objecting to the admission of the Mormon applicants to citizenship said that the whole history of the Mormon people was one of antagonism to the government, and its laws; that during the rebellion not a single man was enlisted from Utah who did active service and that Utah never paid the war tax assessed against her and that to admit a man to citizenship who believed polygamy was a divine institution would be a farce.

Judge Anderson will file his opinion on Friday or Saturday.

STANLEY'S RETURN.

HE IS NOT EXPECTED HOME TILL JANUARY.

The London Times Suggests Stanley May Become a British Subject and Administer East African Affairs.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Times says it is assured by a high authority that Stanley is not likely to reach home until the end of January, and that he will probably stay some time at Mombassi to give the benefit of his experience to Mackenzie, who is organizing the government in British East Africa.

"It is to be hoped," says the Times, "that Stanley may be induced to undertake the administration of the East African government. We believe he might be quite willing to become a British subject."
