TORIES SAY TRADE PACT AIMS AT LIVING COSTS

Robb Points Out Canadian Consumer Will Benefit As Result.

PARTISAN BATTLE

Sutherland, Stansell, Tolmie and Others Line Up in Opposition.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Ottawa, June 22.—Reductions in the duties on raisins and dried currants will not make much difference to the industry in Canada, Hon. J. A. Robb, acting minister of finance, told the House of Commons this afternoon. The house is considering the Canada-Australia trade treaty, under which raisins and dried currants would enter Canada free of duty. The wiping out of the duty on these commodities will make some slight reductions in revenue in Canada, Mr. Robb said, but that is the only effect it will have.

Mr. Robb was asked questions from every part of the house, the opposition concentrating on the reduction of the duty on Australian butter. Mr. Robb steadily maintained that the reductions had been made solely with the object of reducing the cost of some of the necessities of life in Canada.

Nothing to Fear.

Mr. Robb pointed out that he represented one of the largest dairy constituencies in Canada. If he considered that the treaty would not be beneficial to the people of Chateguay-Huntingdon, he would certainly have hesitated to introduce it. A country such as Canada, however, which exported so much cheese and butter, had nothing to fear from any country in the world in this respect.

Coming to the question of sugar, Mr. Robb said the reduction of the duty on sugar from Australia would make a reduction in Canadian revenue, which estimated on the 1924 imports would be onl y$2,950 per annum.

Canada was negotiating with Australia, said Mr. Robb, to get more favorable consideration for other Canadian products. There was an embargo in Australia against British Columbia apples, because of alleged fire blight in British Columbia, but British Columbia put an embargo on Australian apples because that province feared the codling moth; the government was trying to overcome difficulties like this in its effort to secure for Canadian products a wider market.

Sutherland Opposed.

Donald Sutherland (Conservative, South Oxford) regretted that he could not congratulate Mr. Robb on the treaty because it was hard to see where it could be pointed out that any material advantage would accrue to Canada.

Mr. Sutherland declared the government had been misleading the people of Canada in regard to trade conditions. He questioned also why changes had been made in the new agreement as compared with the one made last fall, with respect to the tariff rate on Australian goods coming into Canada, which increased the advantage to Australia.

Mr. Sutherland did not believe that anyone would pretend that Canada was unable to produce sufficient butter and eggs and dairy produce generally for home consumption.

Herbert Marler (Liberal, St. Lawrence-St. George) believed that there were many advantages to be derived from close trade co-operation with Australia.

Sees Free Trade.

R. K. Anderson (Conservative, Halton) believed that agriculture in Canada required protection, but under the proposed treaty it would be laboring under practically a free trade policy, in so far as these goods coming from Australia were concerned.

E. J. Garland (Progressive, Bow River) said that Canada stood to gain so little by the treaty that he was amazed that the acting minister of finance had introduced it to parliament. The consumers of Canada would stand to lose under the treaty $1,250,000 a year in the increase in raising alone. The Australian government had "put it all over Canada."

Hon. F. S. Tolmie (Conservative, Victoria) admitted that there were benefits in the treaty, but they had been obtained at the cost of sacrifices of a $7,000,000,000 investment.

W. B. Snowball (Liberal, Northumberland, N.B.) declared that the treaty was one of the most far-reaching and beneficial concluded by the government. The disappointment expressed by the Conservatives was due to the fact that it was "another feather in the cap of the Liberal government."

Forke Opposed.

Robert Forke, Progressive leader, expressed his intention of voting against the treaty, which he described as "a mixture of good and evil." There was much in the treaty that was good in it, and much that was "not very good" in it. He was not afraid, however, that eggs and butter coming to Canada would work any harm.

J. L. Stansell (Conservative, East Elgin) was glad to encourage trade within the empire, but he did not see that this treaty was a fair or good bargain for Canada. His idea of protection was protection for all classes and not a few. The farming industry in this country was entitled to protection. He was strongly opposed to the agreement as it was imposing a burden on the farming industry.

Forty-One Judges In Three Years

Canadian Press Despatch.
