AS POLICE ENTER HUSBAND SHOOTS HIS WIFE DEAD

Refused to Leave Service of Restaurant at His Request

Paris, Sep. 29.—A very swell-appearing youth was strolling along the Champs Elysees. In his buttonhole was the rosette of the Legion of Honor. Two policemen approached, clanking their swords.

"You're too young to be a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor," said one. "It's a punishable offence to wear a Legion of Honor decoration unless you 'belong.'"

"I'm not a Chevalier, I'm higher than that," replied the youth.

"An officer, maybe?" sneered the cop.

"Higher than that, too," quoth the youth.

"Ah, a Commander," observed the policeman, contorting his face in an effort to multiply his sneer.

"I'm higher than a Commander" said the youth blandly.

"Oh, I see," responded the policeman. "You've got the Grand Cross. This is a little bit too much. You come along to the station with us."

The youth went. At the station as handed the Commissary of Police his card. He was ex-King Manuel of Portugal, that was al. He established his identity, too. Laughing, he left the station. The two policemen are still worrying, however, lest the laugh concealed a yearning for revenge. This happened last night.

GIPSY DIDN'T KNOW COUNT SANS RAIMENT

When Austrian Nobleman Slapped Him He Threw Assailant Through Door

Vienna, Sept. 27—The leveling influence of nakedness has had a serious and, at the same time, comic result in the Hungarian baths at Budapest. Count Karl Esterhazy, returning from a dip, was entering his dressing cabin when he collided with Ladislaus Racz, thirty-sixth son of a so-called 'gipsy king."

Both the men were undressed and there was nothing to differentiate their social positions. The count, angry with Racz for bumping him, slapped his face. The gipsey thereupon seized him and hurled him through a glass door. The nobleman was so severely cut that he was taken to a hospital.

Racz was horrified when he learned of his victim's identity, and Count Esterhazy was furion on hearing that his assailant was a gipsy, as the count's social rank makes it impossible for him to fight a duel with his bathing opponent.

CLOSE OF YUKON NAVIGATION IS NEAR

Exodus Not as Heavy as Usual; Many Remaining to Mine and Prospect

Dawson, Yukon Territory, Sept 28 and Dawson, Y. T., Sept. 29 (via Ashcroft, B. C.)—The close of Yukon navigation is near. The last steamer from Dawson for Fairbanks will be the St. Michael, sailing Wednesday. A few more boats are to arrive from the lower Yukon. Boats from Dawson for the south are now leaving with a large number of passengers. However, the exodus from the district this season is not as heavy as usual, many remaining through the winter to engage in mining and prospecting.

Miners who engaged in operations at the head of the White river have arrived with good reports.

H. B. Morgan, of the Scotia Mining company, is taking out a ton and a half of copper glance and native copper. Although the river navigation south of Dawson probably will close by October 10, gold dredges will continue operations two or three months.

Hydraulic companies will shut down within the next few days.
