Real Estate Sales.

At McFarlane's on Saturday an important piece of property situated on the south east corner of York and Queen streets, with frontage on the latter of 85 by 64 on the former. In connection with the above were a roughcast dwelling and lot on the north side of Richmond street. The two went for $4150, being knocked down for that sum to Jacob Singer. There are, however a mortgage on the property for $5000, which accounts for the apparent cheapness of the land. Labor Injunction Granted

A matter which will have an important effect on the relations between employed and employer, and will, no doubt, considerably alter the aspect of future strikes, was decided Saturday morning by Chief Justice Wilson at Osgoode hall. The plasterers, who for the last three or four weeks have been on strike in this city, have been indefatigable in their endeavors to prevent the masters from securing outside help. The latter applied for an injunction against the several members of the union to prevent them from interfering with or intimidating men who may be employed by them. The injunction was granted until to-morrow.

She Saw Robert Burns.

And heard him talk. The place was near the town of Dumfries. On Thursday, October 8, 1883, she died at Ralston hill, near Kilmarnock, Ayrshire, aged 97 years. Her family cabled intelligence of the event to her son-in-law, Mr. James Osborne, a long established merchant in Hamilton, Ont. From him information came to the aged lady's nephew, Aid. David Walker of the Walker house, Toronto; whose mother, sister of the deceased, died when he was a child. Two years ago Mr. Walker and family resided a winter in England, and in the summer of 1882 he visited Scotland and at Ralston hill saw his aunt, then aged 96. In conversation she was lively and intelligent, overflowing with olden reminiscences. To some, Mr. Walker inquired: "Who did you say made that remark?" And the brisk reply came: "It was Robert." Thus the girl, aged 10, spoke through the memory of the matron aged ten times ten, less four years. And all the while the fame of the name of Robert Burns has been spreading wider and wider among mankind. So has the sentiment, "A man is a man for all that." Twenty-three years ago the writer of this note, Alexander Somerville, became acquainted, very agreeably, with the late Hon. Adam Ferrie in Hamilton. In youthful years Mr. Ferrie was a worker in the same premises where Robert Burns was a heckler of flax. Mr. Ferrie has long since departed. And now that the venerable dame of Ralston hill is away, it is not likely that anyone is left who ever heard the voice, or saw the man of genius—Robert Burns.
