MY SOLDIER HUSBAND

ADELE GARRISON'S CONTINUATION OF

REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

How Madge Managed to Unmask Cousin Agatha.

Through the open transom of my room I heard Cousin Agatha's footsteps ascending the stairs. She entered my mother-in-law's room, closing the door behind her, and for a few moments there was silence, for the transom above my mother-in-law's room was closed, and ordinary conversational tones were not audible. Then I heard Agatha's voice raised in sharp exclamation, and the next moment the door flew open violently.

"I will not endure another thing at Margaret's hands!" Agatha said spitefully. "I have taken care of the house and the baby so that she could keep her position, and here she brings back that sly, snooping girl, when she knows the very sight of her sets my teeth on edge. Well, she'll not stay, that's all! I'll give her her walking papers this instant!"

"Agatha, come back there!" my mother-in-law shapped. "Margaret had nothing to do with bringing Katie back. I sent for her myself, because I am getting so feeble that I shall need you a great deal more than before, and we shall have to have Katie to help with the house, especially as you will have the care of Richard Second. Now what have you got to say?"

Mother Graham Aids.

Her voice had the whiplash quality which, I have noticed, always reduces Agatha to sniffling docility. I shivered in uncontrollable repulsion against the woman as I heard her whimpering in acquiescence to my mother-in-law's dictum.

"I wish you had said that at first, Harriet," she said, her voice lachrymose. "You know I'm always willing to carry out your wishes. If you had chosen anybody else but that animal."

"Oh, quit the snivelling, Agatha!" my mother-in-law's voice answered wearily, "and take this child for awhile. He is so fretful, poor little chap. I am quite worn out with him."

"He's probably hungry," Agatha returned practically. "I'll sponge his face and hands, put on his little kimono, and get his botte. These frilly little white dresses are a nuisance anyway."

I knew this was a gratuitous fling at me, for I insisted upon keeping the baby in white slips from the time of his midmorning bath to his early-afternoon bedtime, reserving the less attractive but more comfortable kimonos for morning and evening. Mother Graham wisely took no notice of the remark, and her next words gave me the chance I wanted to get downstairs.

"If you're going to change Richard Second's clothes shut that door first," she said crossly, and the next moment the door had closed. I wasted not even a second in getting downstairs to my vantage point behind the swinging doors leading to the pantry, from where I had once watched the mysterious actions of the man with the scarred hand.

What Madge Saw.

I hadn't long to wait before I heard Cousin Agatha accosting Katie in the nagging, supercilious manner which she always used.

"So you're back again," she said in a tone that made me yearn to box her ears.

"Oh, yes. I back!" Katie chortled gleefully.

"Well, just remember I'll take no nonsense from you. What is this milk on the floor?"

"I start to feex bottle for leetle Dicky-bird, break bottle, speel milk. I so sorree." Katie's humility was beautifully done.

"Hereafter you leave the milk alone. I don't allow anyone to touch the baby's bottles but myself. Wipe up that mess there. I want to heat the baby's milk, and I certainly don't want to get my skirts all milk."

"All right, I feex," Katie returned meekly, and in a few minutes more Agatha came into the pantry bearing a handled saucepan, evidently containing warm milk, and one of the baby's bottles.

"Katie," she called, "go out to the woodshed and bring me some chips for a fire in Mother Graham's room."

She waited only until she heard the kitchen door close after Katie. Then she whipped from the bosom of her dress a small vial, let a single drop fall from it into the basin of milk, stirred the milk, filled the bottle, and put out her hand for the vial which she had set down on the shelf beside her.

But that instant had given me the chance to steal up behind her, and my hand snatched the vial from her fingers just as they touched it.

"You needn't trouble yourself to take that bottle to my baby!" I said, and I could scarcely control my voice for the rage that consumed me. "At last I have the proof I have wanted against you. Go to your room now and remain there until Mother Graham and I have decided what is best to do with you."

She made one convulsive effort to snatch the bottle from my hands, realized her impotency to do so, gave me one venomous yet cowed look, and, turning, passed through the door.

Jimmy Coon and His Friends

The Adventures of the Little People of the Great Forest.

THE VICTOR.

It was a very exciting fight between Cousin Bruin and the old mother pig, but the two naughty little pigs stopped the fight very suddenly by coming very near to Cousin Bruin and their mother —and Cousin Bruin turned around like lightning and he took one under each arm, and he squeezed them so hard that they didn't utter a single squeal, and he climbed right out of the pig-pen with them and started for the Great Forest.

Now, really, these two bad little pigs deserved to have this happen to them. For, they had come so near the two fighters for the purpose of poking tun at their mother. Of course they did not know that there was any danger hanging over them, and that their mother was fighting so that Cousin Bruin should not carry them off; but when they saw their mother fighting, they should have been on her side and should not have laughed at her for trying to fight a bear.

But, as I have said before, they were very naughty little pigs and were very mean, too. And they loved to tease their poor mother—and really their mother would be happier without them, and so would all their little brothers and sisters. And it just served them right to have Cousin Bruin catch them —when they came close to the fighters just to laugh and sing: "Oh, see mother! She thinks she can fight a bear and win!"

Yes, it was just right that such naughty children should be carried off into the Great Forest by Cousin Bruin. Father Coon followed close behind Cousin Bruin and so did Teddy Possum and Jimmy Coon.

Chatterbox, the Red Squirrel, ran along with them, and Cousin Bruin said, "Come along, Jimmy and Father Coon. I am going back to my big stone house and I would like to have you come too, now that I have such a good warm dinner. I will have more time to entertain guests." And so this procession trailed through the woods.

A beautiful ruffled grouse was drumming a war-like time "Thump, thump-rup-rup-rrr" and Cousin Bruin felt like a returning warrior. But pretty Mrs. Redvest, sitting on the branch of a sycamore tree, called out: "Butcher, butcher!" and Cousin Bruin just held his head high, and Jimmy Coon said to Teddy Possum, "Well, what do you know about that? Mrs. Redvest eats yards and yards of angle worms, and what is the difference between cold wiggling angle worms, and warm pink-and-white pigs? That is too much like people for me: what they like they think is all right, and what they don't like they think is wrong!"

Soon this great procession of warriors came to the ploughed field of Farmer Jones, and there was Jake, the Farmer's man sitting on a log with his rifle across his knees, and Farmer Jones was talking to him, and what was he saying? Well, that is another story.

Tomorrow—Cousin Bruin's Home.

WIVES AND MOTHERS NEED NOT HAVE SORE BACKACHES

Constantly on their feet, attending to the wants of a large and exacting family, women often break down with nervous exhaustion.

In the stores, factories, and on a farm are weak, ailing women, dragged down with torturing backache and bearing-down pains.

Such suffering isn't natural, but it's dangerous, because due to diseased kidneys.

The dizziness, insomnia, and other symptoms of Kidney complaint can't cure themselves, they require the assistance of Dr. Hamilton's Pills which go direct to the seat of the trouble.

To give vitality and power to the kidneys, to lend aid to the bladder and liver, to free the blood of poisons, probably there is no remedy so successful as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. For all womanly irregularities their merit is well-known.

Because of their mild soothing and healing effect, Dr. Hamilton's Pills are safe, and are recommended for girls and women of all ages; 25c per box at all dealers. Refuse any substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut.
