Fun and Fancy.

The most unpopular petty officer in the army—Corporal Punishment.

Why are seeds, when sown, like gate posts?—Because they are planted in the earth to propagate.

When may a man be said to be thoroughly 'sewn-up?' When he has pins and needles in his foot and a stitch in his side.

'Pat, remember you owe me a shilling.' Pat—'I will never forget it, your honor; and may your honor live in health till I pay you.

$1, 'thief!' $50,000, 'defaulter!' $100,000, 'shortage!' $500,000, 'Canadian tourist!' $1,000,000, 'brilliant financier.'

In ancient days the precept was 'Know thyself.' In modern times it has been supplanted by the more fashionable maxim, 'Know thy neighbor and everything about him.'

'What is your fortune my pretty maide?'
'My face is my fortune, sir,' she saide.
'Then you have no taxes my pretty maide,
Homestead exemption saves you,' he saide.

A lady complains that she is not getting educational value for her money. Her husband asked their boy six questions on his last return from school. To five he replied correctly. The answer was: 'I don't know.'

A counsel had mimicked a witness, to his annoyance, and when the witness, who was a north countryman, pronounced the word 'waters' as if it had been watters, inquired of him whether in his part of the country, they spelt 'waters' with two t's. 'No,' said the witness; 'but they spell 'manners' with two n's.'

A Tennessee druggist gave a darkey two quarts of whiskey, under the impression that he had been bitten by a snake. The snake made its appearance shortly after the whiskey had disappeared.

Now everywhere
The trusty air
And chilly winds that blow,
With one accord
Breath forth the word,
"The straw hat soon must go."

An old minister in Ohio seemed rather opposed to an educated ministry. Said he, 'Why, my brethren, every young man who is going to preach thinks he must go to some college and study a lot of Greek and Latin. All nonsense. All wrong. What did Peter and Paul know about Greek? Why, not a word, my brethering. No, Peter and Paul preached in the plain old English, and so'll I.'

'Could the men who are going up the Nile be called Nile-ists?' asked a man on Monday evening. 'Yes,' responded the man in dark clothes, 'because they are going to an-Nile-ate the False Prophet and his rebels.' 'There is no use of attempting a de-Nile of that,' replied a third. 'Oh, such see-Nile puns!' exclaimed a fourth, putting his fingers in his ears.' 'Well,' said the man who had first spoken, 'if you are going to get Mad-I—.' The crowd could stand it no longer; they dispersed rapidly.

Trade Mottoes.

In the recent Gladstone demonstrations at Glasgow the workmen employed in the great manufacturing establishments of the district bore a conspicuous part. A feature of the occasion was the carrying of banners bearing mottoes appropriate to the various trades, some of which we copy:

The brush-makers:

The lords the people tried to crush:
We'll see who best can stand the brush.

An old brush was shown with the inscription attached to it—"I am like the house of lords—used up."

Joiners:

We are planing off the obstructions to the people's bill.

Hydraulic press-makers:

We are pressing the bill upon the house of lords.

Bolt-machine men:

To make bolts of freedom to join right and might together.

Nut-machine men:

Hard nuts for Salisbury to crack. We make fifty per minute.

Boiler-makers:

Public opinion—dangerous if highly pressed.

Bridge iron men:

The reform bridge to span the gulf between the peers and the people.

Steam-hammer men:

Down on Salisbury.

Rivetters:

This is where they will burn their fingers.

Wood screw men:

We will put the screw on the house of lords.

City engine works men:

The lords threw water on the bill,
We'll pump it dry and save it still.

Warpers:

Their web is warped,
Their lease is ta'en,
The house of lords
Shall not remain.

Glass works men:

It seems to us as clear as glass,
That the franchise bill the lords must pass

Thread makers:

My lords, beware, the franchise bill
Must thread its way, oppose who will.

The bricklayers:

The grand old man is just the brick,
That won't allow the bill to stick

A Startling Discovery.

Wm. Johnson, of Huron, Dak., writes that his wife had been troubled with acute Bronchitis for many years, and that all remedies tried gave no permanent relief, until he procured a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which had a magical effect, and produced a permanent cure. It is guaranteed to cure all diseases of Throat, Lungs or Bronchial Tubes.

Words of Wisdom.

A man's ruling passion is the key to his character.

The young are slaves to novelty; the old to custom.

He that is master of himself will soon be master of others.

Choose such pleasures as recreate much and cost little.

Make method your slave, but be not a slave to method.

It is living twice to be able to enjoy the past portion of life.

Precipitation is the ruin of the young, delay, the ruin of the old.

Every good deed that we do is not only a pleasure, but a drop for the future.

Lay by a good store of patience, but be sure to put it where you can find it

Even genius itself is but fine observation strengthened by fixity of purpose.

Truth, like the sun, submits to be obscured, but like the sun, only for a time.

No man can be happy without a friend, nor sure of a friend till he is unfortunate.

Good men are sometimes in greater danger for saying the truth than evil men for speaking falsely.

Never ridicule sacred things or what others may esteem as such, however absurd they may appear to you.

Speak with calmness and deliberation on all occasions, especially of circumstances which tend to irritate.

Always take the part of an absent person, who is consured in company, so far as truth and propriety will allow.

The being that is master of himself bendeth events to his will, but a slave to selfish passion is the wavering creature of circumstances.

As the tree is fertilized by its own broken branches and falling leaves, and grows out of its decay, so men and nations are bettered and improved by trials, and refined out of broken hopes and blighted expectations.

A simple Scotchwoman's description of McCheyne's preaching told the secret of his effective appeals. "He preached as if he was dyin' a'most to have ye converted." What an increase of pulpit power there would be if all preachers spoke with a like earnest desire and purpose.

The fact must be learned sooner or later, that it is an utter impossibility to oblige everyone. No matter how a person chooses to conduct himself he will find that his conduct will not meet the approbation of all who are cognizant of his actions. The temperaments of men are so variously constructed that no particular disposition will be acceptable to all. The practice of a certain set of virtues will find admirers in a portion of mankind, while another and large portion will be antagonistic or indifferent. More than half of the world cannot be pleased with a particular line of conduct, for all experience has indisputably demonstrated and confirmed the fact.

Scott Act Advocates.

Of Judge McDonald and Mr. Deacon, who are speaking at the Scott Act meetings, the Gananoque Reporter says:—

"Since the Scott Act agitation commenced in these two counties, two gentlemen who have devoted considerable time, and put themselves to inconvenience, in aiding the movement, are Judge McDonald and Mr. Jos. Deacon, Police Magistrate of Brockville. To say their assistance is valuable would only be to state what is evident to all, and would by no means express the real power and influence exerted by them in a good cause. No other two gentlemen in the counties could so effectively do the work they have voluntarily assumed. The people know them to be men of intelligence, eminently practical in their ideas, with not a taint of fanaticism or "crank" about them; they know further, that both the Judge and the Police Magistrate, have by their official position, special advantage for obtaining accurate information in regard to the causes and consequences of immorality and crime. And when they see those men, with no hope or expectation of reward, with nothing to gain in any way, personally, and with a certainty of being criticised and misrepresented, come out as advocates of a measure which their experience and observation convince them is calculated to produce good results, the people know that the measure must be a good one and worthy of their support."

A Word About Babies.

Speaking of babies, how would you like to be a baby? A few hours ago I crossed Fulton ferry, and the boat was packed with people and children. The people I don't care about, the children I do. Possibly the children without the people would have been a pronounced nuisance; but as it was, I had my temper sorely tried and my patience too, as I watched the idiotic way in which tender, thoughtful, kind-hearted woman treated their babies—babies who in thirty years from new will know more in a minute than I know in all my lifetime. Whenever I see a woman throw her baby in the air, making a little "cuss" pale with fear, breathless and as red and white as the American flag, I feel like breaking a commandment, saying "cuss" words and braining her on the spot, yet they all do it. Do you ever think what a baby has to put up with? The father rumples its clothes and pitches it up to the ceiling. The mother smothers it, hugs it and squeezes it until its little face is as red as a berry, and the nurse—well, the nurse, especially if she's fat and wheezy, sticks her finger in its mouth, jams her thumb down its throat and "tootsey-wootseys" in its face, till the poor thing must wish it had never been born.

Household Hints.

If you dip your broom in clean, hot suds, once a week, then shake it until it is almost dry, and then hang it up, or stand it with the handle down, it will last twice as long as it would without this operation.

Cranberry Jelly.—Put one quart of cranberries, which have been carefully picked over, to boil in one pint of cold water; have ready in a bowl one pint of white sugar; when the cranberries are perfectly soft mash them while hot through a colander into the bowl which contains the sugar, and stir until the sugar is dissolved; then pour into moulds and set in a cool place for at least 24 hours. If the cranberries are good and no more water is used than the receipt calls for, this way of cooking them makes beautiful moulds for the table.

Currant Jelly.—Scald the currants and let simmer until quite soft; then strain (without squeezing) through a flannel jelly-bag; when the juice no longer runs squeeze what is left into a separate vessel, and finish separately, as it does not make as pretty jelly, though it is equally good-tasted. Put the juice again on the fire and let boil four or five minutes, removing any scum that may rise to the top. Have ready in a bowl one pint of white sugar to every pint of juice, pour the boiling juice over it, stir it till it is dissolved, and pour at once into the moulds. In 24 hours it will be ready to paste up. This is an easy way to make currant jelly of a very pretty color and excellent quality.

How to use the pieces that are left from dinner is a question of interest to most cooks, and the way in which many of them settle the matter is not always very satisfactory. A little cold meat chopped and warmed over in fat is not always an appetizing dish. But before deciding upon throwing away your cold bits try this way of warming them: Put into a saucepan any gravy you may have left, one tablespoonful of tomato catsup, one tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce one onion chopped very fine, and pepper and salt to taste. Let them all simmer gently. Then remove the saucepan from the fire, and let the gravy cool, Skim off the fat. Then cut your cold bits of meat into very thin slices, dip them into flour, and lay them in the gravy. Let this simmer gently for five minutes, but do not let it boil, for the boiling of cold well-cooked meats make it tough; thicken with a little flour, and serve with baked or mashed potatoes.

Stick to Your Business.

There may be a few instances in which a man who is diligent in business does not stand before kings, but that may be a consequence of living under republican institutions. The man who was diligent in business in Jamaica, N.Y., has been honored with a permanent position on the police force and the way he obtained it was this: A party of clever young bloods in that town met a rustic-looking fellow who was in from the country looking for a job and engaged him to act as private watchman on a dark street, promising him $50 for the first month, and an increase after that if he proved efficient. If he threw up his situation within thirty days he was to lose what he had earned. The first night all was quiet. The second night a rough-looking customer threatened to smash his jaw if he didn't quit patroling that beat. In about one minute the countryman was mopping the street with the ill-mannered fellow. After letting him up, he discovered that it was one of the men who had hired him.

A little latter he was called upon to blacken the eye and break the nose of a ghost, which, when taken out of its winding sheet, proved to be another of his employers. Next day an attempt was made to buy him off, but he refused to quit until the month was up. Then he sued and got his wages. The civil authorities of Jamaica, with a true appreciation of such staying powers, offered him the position above referred to, and he will no doubt move his family into town.—[Detroit Free Press.

Pleasant Manners.

Brusque people underrate the importance of pleasant manners. Look beneath the surface, they say, to the roots of character; pay no attention to outward appearances, to voice or gesture, tone or manners; they may be all superficial; it is not what is said or done, and how it is said or done, that is alone deserving of notice. On the other hand, there are those to whom manner is everything. Each new acquaintance has to pass the ordeal of their criticism. Is he polished, courteous, graceful, dignified? Then they are ready to receive him without further question; he bears the stamp of their order. Is he rough, crude, awkward, or shy? Then they care not to examine the kernel that may be hidden under so unattractive a shell. Both these views are mistaken and imperfect, though each contains enough of truth to make it plausible.

Bottled Tears.

In Persia they bottle up their tears as of old. This is done in the following manner: As the mourners are sitting around and weeping, the master of the ceremonies presents each one with a piece of cotton-wool, with which he wipes off his tears. This cotton is afterwards squeezed into a bottle, and the tears are preserved as a powerful and efficacious remedy for reviving a dying man after every other means have failed. It is also employed as a charm against evil influences. This custom is probably alluded to in Psalm lvi. 8: "Put thou my tears into thy bottle.

A Marvelous Story

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 28, 1882.

"Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Yours truly, W. M. Phillips."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the Sarsaparilla in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1882. Yours gratefully,

Hiram Phillips."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.
