Miscellaneous.

MULLEIN CURES CONSUMPTION.—A correspondent of the Lexington Press writes as follows about the well known plant. 'I have descovered a remedy for consumption. It has cured a number of cases after they have commenced bleeding at the lungs and the hectic flush was already on the cheek. After trying this remedy to my own satisfaction, I thought, philanthropy required that I should let it be known to the world. It is common mullein steeped strongly, and sweetened with coffee sugar and drank freely. Young and old plants are good dried in the shade and kept in clean bags. The medicines must be continued from three to six months, according to the nature of the disease. It is good for the blood vessels also. It strengthens and builds up the system instead of taking away the strength, it makes good blood and takes inflammation away from the lungs.' It is the wish of the writer that every periodical in the United States, Canada and Europe should publish this receipt for the benefit of the human family. Lay this by and keep in the house ready for use.

WHAT WIVES DO.—This is the way Fannie Field in the Prairie Farmer answers the question, 'Are wives supported? Who cooked your meals; made, washed and mended your clothes all these years? Who made the butter and cheese that you sold and pocketed the money for? Who took care of your chidren, nursed you when you were sick, and bore with your outrageous fault-finding when things didn't go to suit you? Who patched, and darned, and contrived and made every dollar do the work of three? And what has she had to pay for all this? Just her board and clothes as she went along, and if you were to die to-morrow all that she could claim of the property that she worked so hard to help you save, would be the use of one-third of the real estate, and in nine cases out of ten that is literally worse than nothing. If it had not been for your wife's help, would you have been worth so much to-day as you are now? If you had been obliged to hire a woman to do the work that your wife has done for her board and clothes, do you imagine that you could have done much more than made both ends meet.

ANTIMONY IN NOVA SCOTIA.—About three months ago, what is proving to be a valuable lead of this mineral was discovered at West Gore, Hants county, by Joshua Bryson, a returned Californian. Subsequent operations showed the metal occuring in a vertical vein varying in width from six inches to two and a half feet. The formation is Lower Silurian slate. This promises to be one of the most profitable mines in our province. The ore finds a ready market in London and sells at from £10 to £16 stg., per ton, according to quality. The mine is controlled by Mr. B. M. Davidson, of the firm of Davidson Bros., Halifax, an enterprising gentleman interested also in the Mt. Uniacke gold mines.—Acadian Science Monthly.

Regarding a statement recently made that antimony had lately been discovered elsewhere in Hants county by Mr. Ralph and others, a correspondent writes contradicting the rumor and stating that the parties supposed to have discovered the mineral are his authorities for denial.—Hx. Herald.

Egypt.

London, May 7.—The Standard this morning says it has reason for belief that the Government will meet the proposal for censure by an official announcement that an expedition is to be sent to the relief of General Gordon as soon as the climate will permit.

It is stated that Zebehr Pasha has declared he will not rest until he has killed General Gordon. It is rumored here that General Gordon had under consideration the propriety of abandoning Khartoum on the 9th of last month. Osman Digna has received an order from El Mahdi directing him to capture Dongola and then march into Upper Egypt.

Cairo, May 5.—An Arab journal El Bayou affirms that El Mahdi demands fifty thousand pounds ransom for General Gordon, to be paid within three months.

OTTAWA, May 6.—It now turns out that the cartridges found beneath the Toronto parliament buildings contained dualin, and had they exploded would have occasioned very little damage.

Ottawa, April 29.—A burglar named Richardson who is in jail in Quebec for robbing a broker's office, has made a confession in which he states that he came to Quebec at the request of a well known bank manager, arranged with him to rob his bank of $150,000, which was to be shared between them. The confession has caused a sensation.

Washington, May 7.—A despatch from St. Joseph, La., to Congressman King, states that the water in that locality is higher than before and that government aid is necessary to ward off starvation. Ten thousand peoples in that parish are reported in need of relief.

—Vernon Smith has been sent by the Dominion Government and instructed to secure the best possible short line from Montreal to the seaboard and to report to the Government as early as convenient. Mr. Smith, who came here last year in connection with the Ottawa & Gatineau Valley Railway, and who has been considerably disappointed since his arrival, owing to the failure of the enterprise, is well known in engineering circles in the old country as well as Canada.

DRAWBACK ON CUT NAILS.—An Order-in-Council has been issued allowing a drawback on the export of cut nails manufactured in Canada, not finer than two-thirds of 90 per cent. of duty paid on iron imported to make them. When any trouble arises in establishing that value, a specific duty of 16 cents per 100 pounds, will be allowed on bar iron, nail strips or steel, or 8 cents on puddled bars used with scrap, or other duty free material, the latter not to exceed 25 per cent. of the quartity.

—The Canada Gazette contains an order in council declaring the value for duty on sugars, molasses, etc., to include all exported duties levied by the country from which they are imported, cost of packages, packing, cartage and all other expenses up to the time of the goods being placed on board ship, inclusive of drawback, except that 2½ per cent. commission taken off sugars not over 14 Dutch standard and imported by refiners in Canada.

—There is something very sensible in the impromptu remark of a pretty young girl: 'If our Maker thought it wrong for Adam to live single, when there was not a woman on earth, how criminally guilty are the old bachelors, with the world full of pretty girls.'

Agricultural.

—Many pastures which dry up during the extreme heat of summer will be fitted, after the fall rains come, to carry an additional amount of stock for several weeks. The farmer who has such pastures, and a little spare cash, can often attend the market at this season, and buy young cattle at prices which will enable him to fatten them at a profit, by letting them have the run of such fall pastures and plenty of grain at the stables. Liberal grain feeding until October or November will fit them for market. Sheep should be preferred, if the farmer is a sufficiently good judge of them to select good stock, as they will fatten more readily, and they enrich the land they feed upon in proportion to the amount of extra feed given them. Then from a large flock a farmer can often select some that it will pay to keep over winter to breed from. The lambs and wool in the spring will pay expenses of buying and feeding, and more, if they are well bought. Fattening cattle always enriches the farm, if not the farmer, and the richer the food the greater the value of the manure, while the food is being eaten. But sheep produce more manure, and that richer in nitrogen—the most expensive element of plant food when bought—than cattle, or even hogs, in proportion to the food consumed.—P. E. I. Agriculturist.

HOW TO PLANT RASPBERRIES.—For the best results hills of raspberries should stand four feet apart each way. The raspberry does best in deep, rich, moist well drained, soil. It will not thrive in hard, dry ground. Partial shade is often beneficial. Make all the land rich and mellow if you can. If one or two shovelfuls of old, rotten manure can be dropped and forked in deeply, just where the hills are to be made, it will give young plants a vigorous start. If only fresh, unfermented manure is to be had, scatter it on the surface, just around the plants after setting them out, or fork and cultivate it slightly under the surface, and the rains will carry the richness down. Hot green manure the should never be placed near plants or roots of trees. Set two or three plants in a hill according to their size. Cut them down to six or eight inches.

RELIEVING CHOKED CATTLE.—I read articles under this title in a late Rural and thought, if I was only an old grandmoter, I knew a better way than any yet given; better because it is quicker, easier, and dosn't hurt the poor creatures in the least. I remember when I was a little girl that our cow got choked with a potatoe, and father hired me to run my hand and arm down Bossy's throat and pull out the potato. It was not a bit pleasant. We have a better way now. If a creature gets choked, take some cold water and and a rubber syringe and squirt a stream of cold water into one of his ears. It gives the animal a surprise, and it shakes its head with a vengeance, that starts the obstacle from its throat with a jerk. I have seen it tried lots of times, even after the hoe handles and broomsticks and divers other plans had been tried ineffectually, and I never knew the cold water stream to fail on cattle or horses, or even hogs.—Grandmother, in Rural New Yorker.

Losses on the Farm.

The following from the pen of a practical farmer, should receive the careful attention of farmers in this County. There is too much to waste on our farms, and were the leaks stopped, the farmers would be in a much more prosperous condition:—

The keeping of old cows long past their prime, is another thing which largely reduces the profits of the farmer. We have found quite a large percentage of cows whose wrinkled horns and generally run down condition, show that they have long since passed the point of profit. A few years ago, those cows would have sold at full prices for beef; now they will only sell for bologna at two cents a pound. Such cows have, in a majority of cases, been kept, not because they are favorites, or even because they were profitable, but from sheer carelessness and want of fore-thought. Another fruitful cause of loss to the farmer, is attempting to winter more stock than he has feed for. Instead of estimating his resources in the fall, and knowing that he has enough feed even for a hard winter, he gives the matter no thought and March finds him with the choice of two evils—either to sell stock or buy feed. If he chooses the former he will often sell for much less than the animal would have brought four months earlier, and if the latter, will usually pay a much higher price for feed than if he had bought in autumn. Too often he scrimps the feed hoping for an early spring, and as soon as he can see the grass showing a shade of green around the fence rows or in some sheltered ravine, turns his stock out to make their own living. This being one of the most potent causes of unprofitable cattle raising—namely, short pastures. The farmer who is overstocked in winter is almost sure to turn his cattle on his pasture too early in the spring, and this results in short pasture generally all summer, and consequently the stock do not thrive as they ought; and in addition, the land which should be greatly benefited and enriched is injured, for the developements of the roots in the soil must correspond to that of the tops, and if the latter are constantly cropped short the roots must be small. The benefit of shade is lost and the land is trampled by the cattle in their wandering to fill themselves, so that it is in worse condition than if a crop of grain had been grown on it. From all these causes combined there is a large aggregate of loss, and it is the exception to find a farm on which one or more of them does not exist, and yet without exception they may be classed as 'preventable' if thought and practical common sense are brought to bear in the management.

For the Ladies.

Useful Hints.

Soapsuds, a valuable fertilizer for all forms of vegetation, is especially serviceable for small fruits.

A carpet, especially a dark one, often looks dusty when it does not need sweeping; wet a sponge in water [a few drops of ammonia helps to brighten the color] wring it dry, and wipe off the dust.

FOR FELON.—Take equal parts of gum camphor, gum opium, castile soap, and brown sugar; wet to a paste with spirits of turpentine. Prepare it, and apply a thick plaster.

There is no use in cleaning your poultry houses unless you burn the old nests. They will harbor more of the various kinds of poultry parasites than you can ever exterminate with a white-wash brush.

RELIEF FOR A COLD.—An exchange says that a small piece of rosin, put into the water, in a vessel on the stove will add a peculiar property to the atmosphere of the room, which will give great relief to persons troubled with a cough.

SPOILING COFFEE.—The fragrant aroma of coffee coming from the breakfast room may be very delightful, but it tells that the coffee is being spoiled by too much boiling in an unclosed vessel. Coffee is best, just to 'come to a boil,' then served promptly.

Burns and scalds are soonest relieved by an application of cold water. Dry carbonate of soda, or baking soda, sprinkled over the burned spot, is the latest remedy and it is said to be very effectual. These means are only temporary. In severe cases a physician should be sent for.

CHOCOLATE PUDDING.—One quart of milk, four tablespoonfuls of cornstarch dissolved in one cup of milk, to which add two tablespoonfuls of grated chocolate. Boil the remainder of the milk with two-thirds of a cup of sugar, add the cornstarch and chocolate, boil three minutes, add one teaspoonful of salt. To be eaten cold with sugar and cream flavored with vanilla.

A correspondent sends the following to an exchange:—Ladies, I have something to tell you that [if you dislike picking a chicken as much as I do] you will be delighted to hear. A lady told me that a fried chicken is just as good if skinned as it is picked. I tried it and was delighted. As soon as the chicken is killed, skin it, beginning at the craw. After it is floured over and fried, you cannot tell the difference.

—Who is there who has been so unfortunate as not to have a grandmother on a country farm, who used to make rye pancakes as a great treat to the visiting grandchildren from town? No maiden dish, whether of muffin or biscuit or roll, has ever had such a delicious taste, and no cook can be found who knows how to make them. To the surprise and delight of a large number of her class under the new name of 'fried muffins,' and this is the way she made them: Mix together three-quarters of a cup of rye meal, three-quarters of a cup of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one tablespoonful of sugar and one saltspoonful of salt. Beat one egg, and add to it one-half a cup of milk; pour this on the dry mixture, and make a batter that will easily be taken up on a spoon and dropped. If the egg and milk do not make the batter soft enough, add more milk until the batter is of the proper consistency, then take a little on the spoon, what would be about half a teaspoonful, and slip it into the fat, making no attempt to smooth the mixture, for the rough surface is characteristic of the pancakes. Fry them until a fork can be thrust into them and brought out without any of the mixture adhering to it. It usually takes about 10 minutes to accomplish this. It is great fun to watch them cooking, as when one side gets thoroughly cooked the muffin will turn itself without waiting for the assistance of the cook. They are never known in their full glory, however, until they are served with fresh maple syrup. When you go to a 'sugaring off'' in the country—one of the genuine old-time affairs—you will be treated to rye pancakes, 'cornbits,' a fresh wheat muffin, butternut meats, pickles and maple syrup in all stages from sap to wax and even to the grained sugar itself, but the rye pancakes will have the place of honor.

Curing a Cold.

A recent medical writer says: 'Sleep whenever you can—anywhere when you can get a chance; the great want of the age is sleep.' This is not always safe advice to follow, as a friend of ours knows to his sorrow. He was recently afflicted with a bad cold, and to cure himself of it resorted to the remedy of putting his feet in hot water, and drinking a tumblerful of strong whiskey toddy, prescribed by an aged and respected friend of the family. Having got everything in order for carrying out the prescription, he sat down by the fire, his feet immersed in warm water, and a tumbler of smoking toddy by his side. In this condition a sense of enjoyment stole over him as he sipped the exhilarating liquid, and he fell asleep. His wife had gone to bed, and, on awakening about three o'clock in the morning, wondered why she was alone. Going down, she was horrified to find her liege lord asleep in his chair the fire out, his feet still immersed in the water, over which a cake of ice was foaming, and an empty tumbler on the chair beside him. His cold isn't a bit better.

CLAM PIE.—One can of clams and bits of meat of any kind; line the dish with paste, as for chicken pie, cover the bottom with cooked sliced potatoes; salt, pepper and butter; put in the clams and meat, add one or two cans of warm water, according to size of dish; the more water the more salt; dust over it flour sufficient to thicken, the juice; cover with crust and bake.

HARD GINGERBREAD.—One pound flour two tablespoonfuls ginger, one-half pound sugar, one-third pound butter, three eggs, a small teaspoon soda; roll very thin. This gingerbread will keep a long time.

Joker's Corner.

The Pretty Girl and the Masher.

AN OLD GENTLEMAN, A POLICEMAN AND A CONDUCTOR VERY ANGRY.

A very pretty girl, attired in a long seal dolman and carrying an alligator skin bag with initials in silver on the outside, stood at Vesey street and Broadway, yesterday, waiting for a Sixth street car. A youth of about twenty-one or twenty-two years was also awaiting the car, and he occasionally glanced at the pretty girl, who turned indignantly away from him. When the car stopped the youth stood on the back step to assist the maiden to enter, but she wheeled about when she noticed his gallant intention and went in by the front door. The youth smiled languidly, entered the car and sat down opposite the pretty girl, at the front window, whereupon she angrily turned and looked out at the horses.

The conductor observed this pantomime, and regarded the youth with a scowl. When he began to collect fares at the front end the young lady got out her purse, while the youth was feeling in his pocket, and paid her transportation fee. The youth handed the conductor a dime, without noticing that the pretty girl had paid, and said: 'two.' The conductor handed him five cents with an ugly glance, and the girl looked harder at the horses than ever, whereat the youth smiled with a great deal of amusement. An old gentleman got into the car and sat down near the girl, and the conductor kept his eyes upon the youth. Other passengers entered and a policeman stood on the platform with the conductor.

Presently the old gentleman noticed that the youth kept his eyes on the pretty girl and smiled when ever she dared to turn her glance away from the window, and that her eyes fairly blazed with anger as she turned from him. The conductor spoke to the policeman, and policeman, conductor, old gentlelan and all the rest of the passengers began to glare at the youth. The old gentleman was the first to interfere.

'What do you mean, sir,' said he, "by annoying this young lady in that outrageous manner?'

The youth stopped smiling and said softly: 'If it isn't to much trouble, I'd be much obliged to you if you'd mind your own business.'

'You young puppy!' roared the old gentleman, 'I'll see to you! I'll make an example of you!'

'Oh, don't; please don't do any thing!' said the pretty girl, imploringly.

'Please don't make a scene!'

'My dear young lady,' said the old gentleman, gallantly, 'you shall not be embarrassed, I assure you, for I have daughters myself, and it is a duty I owe to the public to make an example of this scamp. Conductor!'

The conductor advanced very willingly into the car, followed by the policeman, and all the passengers gazed at the youth, who only smiled more broadly than ever.

'Put this little puppy off the car,' said the old gentleman to the conductor

The conductor rung the bell and said to the youth: 'Come, now! git off the kyar.'

'What for?' asked the youth

'For mashin;' replied the conductor.

'Come, now! start, or I'll throw yer off!'

'If you touch me,' said the youth, very quietly, 'I'll break your thick head.'

The policeman had been anxiously watching his opportunity, and now saw his chance.

'Well, you won't break my head,' taking out his club and elbowing the conductor, the old gentleman and the excited passengers aside, while a crowd collected in the street and looked in the car windows.

'Stop, stop' screamed the pretty girl throwing herself between the youth and the officer. 'Ah, please, please don't hurt him. He's my brother!'

'What!' shouted the policeman in a tone of intense disgust.

'What!' echoed the conductor, the old gentleman, the driver and the rest of the passengers.

'Yes, she's my sister,' asserted the youth, seating himself beside her. 'And you're all a pack of infernal idiots,' he added.

'I don't believe it,' the old gentleman replied, after a breathless pause. 'What were you treating each other in that manner for if you are brother and sister?'

'She's a little mad because I wouldn't take her to a circus this afternoon, that's all,' replied the youth.

'And I'm awfully ashamed of it, too,' said the pretty girl, beginning to cry. 'And I think you're an awful stupid old thing to make such a fuss,' she added, passionately, to the old gentleman.

'Perhaps,' suggested the youth to the conductor, who, with the policeman, still gazed speechlessly upon them: 'perhaps, as you've stopped about a dozen cars behind you, if you should ring the bell and start the procession, the funeral may get up to Eleventh street in the couse of the afternoon.'

The conductor utterly crushed, rang the bell. The policeman looked foolish. The old gentleman seemed hopelessly cast down, and the other passengers have not yet ceased to congratulate themselves that they did not get an opportunity to take part in the controversy.

ONE FAVOR.—'Now, darling, will you grant me one favor before I go?'

'Yes, George, I will,' she said, drooping her eyelashes and getting her lips in shape. 'What is the favor I can grant you.'

'Only a little song at the piano, love. I am afraid there is a dog outside waiting for me, and I want to scare him away.'

—An Irish Gentleman having purchased an alarm clock, an acquaintance asked him what he intended to do with it. 'Oh,' said he, It's the most convenient thing in the world, for I've nothing to do but to pull the string and wake myself.
