A Disputed Point

Unless the decision is protested the victory in the Simms-McAvity game in the industrial league on the Nashwaak park last night will go to the Simms team by the score of 9 to 7.

Argument over the claims which the Simms team laid to two runs in the last inning was still in progress when the remaining two minutes of the time allotted for the game expired.

The score was a 6 to 6 tie at the end of the eight. In the first half of the ninth the McAvity boys got one run across the rubber, making the score 7 to 6 in their favor.

When Simms came to bat in the second half of the ninth, Pugh, the first man up, got to first on an error and eventually scored, thus tieing the score, 7 to 7. Pirie was put out going to first and Allen went out going to third. With two Ross and O'Toole, the next two men up, got to first safely and were on second and third respectively when Ritchie tipped out a grounder to Noel, the McAvity pitcher, on which Ritchie reached first safely and both Ross and O'Toole crossed the plate.

The McAvity team disputed these last two runs on the ground that the umpire did not see the play at the plate in which the first baseman threw to home to catch the runners.

Rovers Victors

CANADIAN TO SWIM CHANNEL

(Toronto Telegram)

As thousands of citizens have been enjoying a daily swim in the now thoroughly warm waters of Lake Ontario, the attempt that young Omar Perrault, the French-Canadian, will make in August to swim the English channel is of more than usual interest. When the average Toronto swimmer thinks how hard he or se finds it to swim 150 yards, the test of strength and endurance demanded by the 21-mile swim from Dover to Calais can be appreciated. Of course Perrault will get the benefit of swimming in salt water, which is far more buoyant than fresh water, but then the temperature of the English Channel is about 56 degrees, while a thermometer immersed in Lake Ontario today near the shore would register about 72. Besides, there are strong currents and tides in the Channel, and even in the finest weather the surface of this treacherous link between the North Sea and the Atlantic may get choppy. Perrault on Saturday swam 25 miles in the St. Lawrence down stream with the strong current to Boucherville. Carpentier, a good swimmer himself, and pitted to swim against Dempsey in a friendly match, gave Perrault $200 to help towards his expenses in England. Four people only claim to have swum the English Channel. They are Captain Matthew Webb, D. Dalton, F. Cavill and T. W. Burgess. But only the swim of Capt. Webb and Burgess have been accepted as genuine. The first recorded attempt to cross the Channel was made on August 24, 1872, by J. B. Johnson, from Dover, who only remained in the water 65 minutes.

Capt. Webb's Record Still Stands.

Captain Matthew Webb, who has perhaps never been equalled as a long-distance salt water swimmer, made his first attempt to cross the Channel in August, 1875, starting from Dover and remaining in the water 6 hours and 49 minutes until the sea became too rough for him. It was estimated that he was about 13½ miles across when he had to give up. On 24-25th August, 1875, diving from the Admiralty pier at Dover he touched the sands at Calais after swimming for 21 hours, 45 minutes, and covering by reason of the adverse tides, a distance of an estimated 89½ statute miles. This is still the greatest swim on record. Since its achievement many futile attempts have been made to swim the Channel, the best being those of Montague Holbein and Jabez Wolff.

Capt. Webb had been an officer in the British mercantile marine, and first distinguished himself in April, 1873, by leaping from the Cunard liner Russia into a heavy sea on the Atlantic in an unsuccessful attempt to save a young sailor who had fallen overboard. Webb was in the water 37 minutes before the lifeboat picked him up, and received the Royal Humane Society Medal, the Stanhope Gold Medal and a purse of $500 from the passengers, for his brave deed. A few older Torontonians remain who were among the crowd that watched Webb trying to swim the Whirlpool Rapids in the Niagara River on that tragic day of July 24th, 1888, when the brave swimmer was engulfed by the raging waters and battered to death against the rocks.

Women Swimmers.

Miss Agnes Beckwith, of London Eng. in July, 1878, performed a great feat for either man or woman in swimming 20 miles in the Thames without any assistance whatever, in 6 hours and 25 minutes. She was more fortunate than the last swimmer to essay the English Channel—a woman, too—who after swimming the greater part of the 21 miles, rested in the sea by treading water and floating so that she could get some food and drink from the boat which accompanied her. As was to have been expected under the circumstances, the food made her violently ill, and she had to be taken aboard the boat, thus losing the contest.

THE SPIRIT OF PEACE.

(Contemporary Review.)

The world longs for peace and we have just won a victory that was thought to secure peace. And yet, two and a half years after that victory, real peace seems as far away as ever. It is no exaggeration to say that the relations between the different peoples of the world are more strained than they were in the years preceding the war. And this, not only as between ex-belligerents, where it were reasonable to expect a slow resumption of normal conditions, but between nations who, in the war, fought shoulder to shoulder and forged bonds of friendship that it was hoped would be indestructible. For whatever may be said by statesmen, who are, in any case, bound to comply with the ordinary form of international courtesy, or by the few responsible journalists who see the need of encouraging better international relations, no one who watches the trend of thought and speech in Europe can fail to realize that there hangs over almost every land an evil humor of jealousy and distrust replete with the germs of anger and of war.

It is quite evident that the only basis on which international peace can be founded is international friendship. Policies of "Defence, not Defiance," or of "Armed Neutrality," and such like, do not bring peace. On the contrary, they bring, sooner or later, war. True peace will spring from positive, not negative, action, and those who wish to abolish war must do more than merely destroy its weapons — helpful though that in itself will be, they must build up in its place conditions of active friendship and mutual interest.
