Patient to his doctor.—"And it is really true that I shall recover?" "Infallibly," answered the doctor, after taking from his pocket a square foot of Sprout's Patent Corn Plaster, and fixing it on the ball of the patient's great toe. "Only one per cent. of cases resist its magic power," says the sick man, in an undertone. "Well," said the doctor, "and the patient always belongs to that one per cent." "Why, I thought you said you never lost a patient!" "Of course I never lost one; I always cured him at last."

Lay Evangelist.—Some valuable medical work, recently published by the Publication Committee, Boston, entitled "Life for Both Worlds; Physiological Purity," is specially praised, convince the most skeptical reader that it is common sense easy to avoid the ills which are the penalty of the violation of the laws of health, and that the weakened forces of manhood may be re-established—that health and the conditions may be restored to those whose constitutions have been ruined by early errors. "Sexual Physiology of Women," one of the publications of the Institute, is filled with matter of vital importance to females. And in this day, when so many are prematurely broken down, the work on "Diseases of the Nerves and Nervous Malpractice" is timely one. The author of these popular works has recently been presented with a Gold Medal by the National Medical Association. The advertisement of the Institute, headed with a true likeness of the great benefactor, George Peabody, may be found in another column.

☞ Is your throat sore, and are you annoyed by a constant tickling? Is your breath offensive? Do you frequently hawk and spit? Do you find the symptoms of catarrh? If so, you should at once procure a bottle of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. By its mild, soothing, healing properties, it relieves the most severe cases of catarrh in from five to ten minutes. Sold by all druggists and dealers in medicine.

Apparitions and Hallucinations.

Shams.—We have, this season, tried vegetable seeds from all the leading Canadian seedsmen, and some of the best houses in the States, and we do not hesitate to say that, as a rule, and in justice toward the public to Messrs. D. M. Ferry & Co., of Detroit. This firm appears to have their business thoroughly, and look carefully to it, for out of a very large number we have not found one instance of "running," "scattered stunting" or failure to grow. These seeds are evidently fresh, growing, and true to the garden bin is valuable.

It is a most remarkable fact, but fact nevertheless, that the vile trashy quality of garden vegetables is frequently to be observed in leading dispensaries. Large cities are always well supplied with the best qualities, while the rural districts are often suffering for them. This is probably owing to ignorance of the manner of their cultivation among our farmers generally, and is but a sorry commentary upon the intelligence of our rural population. Let us change all this! Horticulturist & Agriculturist.

A writer in the Dunfermline Journal makes his experience by way of using castline oil for repelling insects in the following language:

My garden is overrun with rats and mice. In consequence I had always to sow double the quantity of peas and beans necessary, and even then I had to sow them twice over. This year I put twenty-one pounds of peas and six pounds of beans into the ground without any manure, previously soaking the beans, and the peas in paraffine oil, and I thought I was for a good crop. My crop of onions has every year been attacked with maggots and my turnips with fly. For the last eight years, as soon as the vermin made their appearance, I was used between the rows two ounces of paraffine oil to six gallons of water. Both maggot and fly disappeared, and crops and quality have always been astounding. I believe the seed sprinkled with the oil before sowing, or a certain portion of paraffine poured over dry earth and sown as guano, would answer fully as well, and I am satisfied it is a very powerful manure, besides an effectual remedy against grub, wireworm and all garden pests. Seed sprinkled with the oil is quite safe from all feather and longer vermin. The proportion of two wine glassfuls of paraffine oil to six gallons of rain water (imperial measure) is what can be applied to all kinds of green vegetables without injury. The growth succeeding its application is something wonderful.

Drinking among Women.

It is undoubtedly true that many of our women who indulge in the dissipation of fashionable society are given to drinking champagne and even spirituous liquors. The practice also is growing, and its baleful results are apparent to any who is well acquainted with the lovely creatures who adorn our gay saloons of fashion. Not long ago a young girl who had developed a charming capacity for music and a happy social tact, became so hopeless a victim of diipsomania that she was taken to an asylum, where her appetite could be restrained, and she became a shattered wreck at the opening of manhood. This is only one case out of many. The habit starts with the experience of the stimulating effects of liquor after the exhaustion of fashionable dissipation, or when it is desired to start a gayety that does not come spontaneously. The stimulant soon and easily becomes a necessity, and before she herself is aware of it the woman becomes a toper. Within the last twenty years, the freedom with which women drink wines and other liquors has become greater and greater. There are some of them in fashionable life who really seem to have stronger heads than a man, and to be able to carry their wines, brandy and liquors with a steady gait and a tongue in no wise thickened; but the more delicate nervous organization of a woman causes the effects of the strain to be more serious than in the case of a man. A woman, too, who once acquires the habit of drinking is apt to consume an enormous amount of liquor of all sorts. If our physicians who practice among the fashionable people of the city could reveal their knowledge on this subject, it would astound the public. Of course we do not bring this charge of dipsomania against our ladies generally. It is in truth only in exceptional case that it exists; but we do bore the circumstance that more or less of drinking is growing to be looked on as a venial offence in fashionable women. It is a dangerous vice, and in its train are likely to follow others still more dangerous.—New York Sun.
