Canada and Newfoundland.

An important conference between representatives of the governments of Newfoundland and Canada has just been brought to a close in the city of Halifax. The primary object of the conference was to settle and re-adjust on a permanent basis, certain long-standing matters in dispute between the two countries. It is, however, generally supposed that out of it, and as a much more important result than the settlement of certain fishery matters, may come the entrance of Newfoundland into the Canadian dominion, and the final consolidation of all the provinces of British North America. Whatever opinion the people of this province may entertain as to the advisability of taking Newfoundland into the Dominion, all will, we feel assured, admit that there ought not to be any war of tariffs between the two countries. A year ago there was a sort of commercial and industrial war between us, each country doing that which would most cripple and injure the trade of the other. In this quarrel there seems little doubt but that Newfoundland was wholly in the wrong. In the one matter of modus vivendi licenses she certainly was. An understanding was entered into between the two governments that each country was to issue these licenses to American fishing vessels; that licenses issued by the one country were to be recognized by the other; and that the fees collected for them were to be divided equally between the two countries. After this agreement had been observed for some time, Newfoundland began the quarrel by refusing at first to divide the proceeds, and afterwards refusing either to recognize Canadian licenses granted to American vessels, or to permit Canadian vessels to enjoy any of privileges whatever in Newfoundland waters. Then began the war of tariffs, which for a time bade fair to exterminate all commercial intercourse between us, when at the suggestion of the home government a truce was declared and a temporary arrangement made. It is to settle all these matters in dispute on a permanent and mutually satisfactory basis that the Halifax conference has recently taken place.

Newspapers have published the statement that the question of confederation was also up for consideration; but if so this was not the primary object of the convention. It is questionable if we of the dominion have anything to gain by taking Newfoundland in with us. Our sister province has still an ugly "French shore" question to be settled before she will be entirely free to contract a union with us. The government of France has a sort of mortgage or bill of sale on certain portions of the west shore, which must be satisfied or released before, this can be done. No man wants to buy or marry a lawsuit, and the Dominion certainly cannot afford to contract an alliance if it is to be coupled with a dispute which may lead to serious complications and entanglements with the French nation. However, it is too early to borrow trouble on that point at this time.

—William E. Russell, the young democratic governor of Massachusetts must be a wonderful man. He has just been re-elected for the third time when all his political associates have been buried under majorities of from twenty to thirty thousand. The republicans carried the state for Harrison by a majority of 30,000, and elected the entire state ticket, except the governor. This being the year of a presidential election, when a full vote is usually polled, they hoped to carry the entire ticket, and with this object in view made desperate efforts to defeat Russell. But they did not succeed, as the clever young governor again heads by a majority of over two thousand. A man who can carry a state with an adverse majority of 30,000 against his party, must have something to recommend him to the good graces of the electors of the state. Although yet a young man of but 35, he has for two years filled the highest office in the state with such credit to himself and satisfaction to the people that he has again been elected for the third time in the face of almost insuperable odds. He has given the state what we believe the people of every civilized country under the sun, if left to themselves by the politicians, would prefer to have—an honest and clean administration. We frequently hear it argued that a public man is compelled to resort to the tricks of a politician in order to win votes and avoid defeat; that if he did not at times resort to rather questionable means, the other fellow would do so, and by some catching cry or feat of political jugglery, gain the popular ear and would accomplish his defeat. The case of Governor Russell fully proves the fallacy of such arguments. He has won solely on his own merits, when probably not another man in the state on the democratic side could have done it. Already he is being talked of as the democratic candidate for president in 1896.

—This province has but little or no trade in live stock with the mother country, so the recent action of the home authorities in requiring all Canadian cattle to be slaughtered immediately on arrival, will affect us but little. The upper provinces, however, have for several years carried on a large and profitable trade in this line, so the new state of things will seriously cripple, if it does not entirely wipe out the trade in live stock between Canada and Great Britian.

This rule has long been enforced against cattle from the United States and certain other countries, but Canadian cattle have been exempt from its operations. Now, however, it is to be applied to Canadian cattle as well, under the plea that pleuro-pneumonia has appeared in certain parts of western Ontario, and steps have to be taken to prevent its introduction into England. This is really but an excuse. The true inwardness of the whole matter is that the agricultural interests of Great Britain have urged the authorities to take this step as a protection against foreign competition. The farmers of England are in a condition by no means prosperous. They have but the home market to sell to, and even there they have to compete with all the rest of the world, for nearly every country under the sun sends more or less of its surplus agricultural products to Britain. Any change, therefore, which would stop the importation of live stock would be of immense benefit to the agricultural interest of the country. Hence the recent change.

—The greatest rain storm of the fall season was that which occurred on Saturday last, continuing from early in the morning till late in the evening. At times during the day the wind blew a hurricane, carrying with it almost sheets of water. Business was much retarded, and only those who were compelled to go out were to be seen. It is estimated that upwards of two inches of rain fell during the day. All swamps, brooks and rivers were rapidly filled, and much of the debris which had accumulated along the banks of streams, went rapidly coursing its way toward the Bay of Fundy.

—The notorious "Jim," now undergoing confinement in the Dorchester penitentiary, has made a confession setting forth that he and not Buck, did the killing of Joseph E. Steadman on August 1st last. His action is generally supposed to be a ruse with the object of delaying the execution of Buck. Many however still sustain the opinion that the prisoner, Buck, was convicted upon insufficient evidence, and a petition is now being circulated for the commutation of his death sentence.

—The condition of agriculture in England is so seriously depressed by competition with the cheaply-grown wheat of America that it is suggested seriously to give a bonus to wheat growers to make up to them the losses sustained by the culture of this crop. A proposition has been made to effect that an income tax should be levied on those persons whose incomes are derived from rents, for the purpose of paying this bonus to the farmers.

—A boy in Andover, N. B., has died under unusual circumstances. He was six years old and hard to waken. His father roused him the other morning by pulling him out of bed by the feet. The lad fell on the floor and immediately expired. On the post mortem the doctor discovered some indications which led him to conclude that the boy died from that effect of the sudden shock.

The Valley Telephone Co., Limited.

An adjourned meeting of the directors of this company was held in Dr. Sponagle's office, Middleton, on the 11th inst. Much business of importance was transacted.

When the organization of the company was projected a prospectus was issued estimating the cost of construction and equipment at $10,000, or less. This estimate provided for an ordinary line constructed from ordinary material. When the provisional directors were elected and came together they determined to build a line that would be a credit to the country, as well as to the stock-holders—such a line as would justify them in guaranteeing good service to their patrons. With this end in view, instead of limiting their capital to $10,000 as stated in the prospectus, they applied for and obtained a charter authorizing the issuing of stock to the extent of $20,000, with power to increase to $40,000, when the necessity for such increase arose and the stockholders took the usual steps to demand it,—yet the amount of stock hitherto put on the market was limited to $10,000. The main line is now practically completed, and everything used in its construction and equipment is the very best that could be obtained of its kind, and no pains nor expense were spared in making the line a first-class one.

The cost, so far, is between $12,000 and $13,000, including the purchase of the old line in use in and about Middleton before the present company was incorporated. At the meeting above referred to, the board authorized the issuing of stock aggregating $15,000. This amount is in excess of present necessities, but the excess will be needed in constructing branch lines and furnishing additional equipment, for which there are pressing demands.

The manager reports one hundred and thirteen instruments now in use, with daily applications for more. The business outlook for the company is excellent.

The first annual meeting of stockholders will take place at Middleton on the last Wednesday of January, 1893.

Torbrook Iron Mines.

(Correspondent to the Chronicle.)

This place, which has always been a good farming section, is now becoming noted for its mining. It is situated a mile west of the line dividing Kings and Annapolis counties, and three miles south of Wilmot station. About two years ago prospecting began, which located a rich vein of red hematite ore, yielding sixty per cent. of iron. The lead was traced for three miles, showing it to be from five to seven feet in width, and of unknown depth. It was situated upon the farms of Messrs. Bertaux and Woodbury. In Annapolis and Colchester, unlike the other counties of Nova Scotia, the iron mines belong to the owners of the land. Mr. Woodbury not having much faith in the prospects for iron mining, sold his farm to Burns and Barss for $3,000. This firm, as well as Mr. Bertaux, are now drawing $100 per month royalty.

The Torbrook Iron company, limited, was formed which began operations in earnest. R. E. G. Leckie is manager for the company, K. M. Solomon bookkeeper, and G. L. Romans, engineer. A branch line was built to Wilmot station, and the first ore shipped eighteen months ago. There are now four shafts from 100 to 160 feet deep. The ore is raised by two hoisting engines the friction ropes running to the shafts. Two Cornish plunger pumps and four Blake steam pumps are used. There are three locomotive boilers and one upright one. A reservoir has been built to supply them. The drilling is done by an air compressor. One hundred men are employed whose wages amount to $4,000 per month. the output is about 120 tons per day. It all goes to the Londonderry Iron company, which now depends chiefly upon this mine for its ore. These operations are proving of great benefit to the vicinity, putting something like $5,000 in circulation every month, and starting a building boom. A dozen houses have already been built. Six months ago a parallel vein was discovered a mile to the south upon the South Mountain. In Annapolis county it is upon the farms of Messrs. Burns and Messenger who are holding it for big money. It also extends into Kings Co., where Mr. Romans has leased five square miles from the government. From the course of the lead the formation of the rock some prospectors believe this the same one which crops out near Canning, some twenty miles away.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a meeting of the employees of J. S. Cushing & Co., Boston, held Nov. 14th, to take action in sympathy with the relatives and friends of Mr. William H. Sancton, who died recently at his home in Bridgetown, N.S., Mr. C. E. Hippisley presided, and the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

Whereas, The great Ruler of the universe has, in his infinite wisdom, removed from our midst, in Mr. Sancton, a companion, a friend, and for many years a fellow-workman; and

Whereas, The high esteem with which we all held him, and the intimate relation and ties of friendship which so long bound us, makes it fitting that we record our appreciation of him;

Therefore resolved, That the sudden removal of one of such a pure character and amiable and loving disposition, leaves a vacancy and shadow that will be deeply realized by us all, and prove a grievous loss to all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance.

Resolved, That our heart-felt sympathies are hereby tendered to his parents and immediate relatives in their sad bereavement, and we express our earnest hope that even so great a loss may be overruled for their highest good.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the afflicted parents, and for publication to the Bridgetown MONITOR, with which he was so long connected as correspondent, and to the Hyde Park Times, of which he was former proprietor.

Honoring His Municipal Anniversary.

At the invitation of Councillor Vidito, quite a large number of his personal friends and supporters gathered at his residence on Monday evening last in honor of his recent municipal election, it being the anniversary of his twelfth year since he was chosen a candidate for the responsible office of councillor, and which he has enjoyed almost uninterruptedly since the municipal law came into force in this county. In addition to the other guests, the 69th band—formerly known as the Bridgetown Brass Band—were in attendance, rendering from time to time during the evening some of their choice and varied selections, which were interspersed by vocal music in both solo and chorus by those present. After an hour or two of social conversation, music, and other amusements had been indulged in, the worthy host and hostess requested the company to proceed to the dining-room, where a sumptuous spread in the way of a turkey supper awaited them, and which was most tastily arranged and thoroughly enjoyed. Ample justice having been done the "inner man," some of the more prominent gentlemen were called upon for speeches, which request was cheerfully complied with, and all expressive of the high esteem and respect in which the worthy Councillor was held, and to which he replied in an able and feeling manner, thanking all his past supporters for their uniform kindness. Music again followed, and at a late hour, the company dispersed, bearing away with them most pleasant reminiscences of a delightful and well-spent evening.

Cranberry Culture in Aylesford.

A correspondent of the Halifax Chronicle, in writing of the new industries in the western portion of Kings county, has the following to say respecting cranberries:—

"Of late years a use has been found for the bog lands in Aylesford. Large areas have been stripped of turf, covered with sand and planted with cranberries. Over one hundred acres have been planted thus in the township of Aylesford. One company owns 25 acres, and private individuals have as high as twelve acres. If possible the patch is flooded every year. But beyond this there is little labor after the vines have once been set out. The yield is immense, one hundred barrels to the acre being only a moderate return. The price received is six or seven dollars per barrel. So it is easy to make an acre bring $600."

LOST HIS BRIDE.—Something quite amusing to everyone but the parties interested took place at Peticodiac station one day last week. C. where he is now residing. PRESENTATION.—Miss Emma Brown, who has been teaching at Centreville for the last year or more, upon retiring from the position she has so acceptably filled, was presented with a very handsome album as an expression of appreciation by her numerous friends. Miss Brown's services have been very valuable both in the day and Sabbath school, and she is followed by the regrets of all who came within the circle of her influence.

—BEAUTIFUL APPLES.—Last week we were the recipients of a small box of nicely packed apples generously presented by one of our best known orchardists—Captain S. D. James of Tupperville. The collection, carefully wrapped in paper, includes King Tompkins, Gravensteins, Gloria Mundi and Bishop Pippins, and we must unhesitatingly announce that the lot surpasses anything in that line yet brought to our notice this season. Quite a number measure upwards of twelve inches in circumference, and are as handsomely shaped and beautifully-colored as can be possible. Capt. James, who has just returned from St. John, where he has been disposing of a portion of the yield of his prolific orchard, informs us that his fruit commanded the attention of all purchasers, was quickly disposed of, and gave most satisfactory returns.

Drifting in the Bay of Funday.

The schr. Temple Bar, Capt. Longmire, which arrived here on Monday, reports having passed the wrecked schooner Arbutus,—particulars of which appeared in our last issue,—on Thursday afternoon, 17 inst., at 4 o'clock, when about twelve miles S. by W. from Partridge Island. Although within a few feet of the wreck, owing to the rough weather, Capt. Longmire could not take the vessel in tow. From appearance, all rigging, sails, anchors, etc., were still attached, though the hull was badly cracked and separated about the centre.
