May next. We have much satisfaction in making this announcement, and trust that such encouragement will be afforded to the undertaking as will amply reward the proprietor in establishing a manufactory which must be much needed in so extensive a shipping port as Saint John, while, at the same time, a great inducement will be held out to our farmers to grow Hemp and Flax, for which the soil and climate of this Province are said to be admirably adapted. Much good might be done at the present time by the Agricultural Societies, or others familiar with the subject, throwing out a few useful hints on the cultivation of these articles.—Cour.

BERMUDA, Oct. 28.

Explosion of Gunpowder on board the Convict Hulk Coromandel.—One life lost!—One of those events which unexpectedly occur, and bring, too frequently fatal consequences, happened on Saturday last on board the Coromandel Convict-Hulk at Ireland Island. John Hunt, Quarter Master, was occupied in purifying the ship for fumigation; the preparation used for the purpose was gunpowder mixed with vinegar. One pound had been consumed, and a barrel containing about 300lbs. of the mixture was resorted to, for another supply.—While in the act of refilling his pan, the entire contents of the barrel exploded, and poor Hunt received the full force of the discharge. Mr. F. B. Black, also an officer of the ship, and another individual, were in the apartment at the time, and received very serious injury. The agony of the unfortunate Quarter-Master, from his wounds, was indescribable; he died next day. Mr. Black, and the other men, though severely hurt, are we learn, in the way of recovery. It is conjectured that a concealed spark in the pan caused the explosion. According to an existing regulation, an inquest was held next day on the body of the deceased when a suitable verdict was returned. The late Mr. Hunt was a native of England—his age, about 53 years.

A BEREAVED WIDOW.—Among the passengers in the packet from Bermuda, which arrived here last Saturday, was the lady of Captain Wentworth, of the Royal Engineers. She returns to our shores bowed down by affliction—having since her departure from these shores four months since, had her cup of sorrow filled to overflowing, by the loss of her husband, and two promising children. The circumstances must awaken a feeling of deep and mournful sympathy in every heart susceptible of the finer chords of human emotion.

We copy the following notice on her departure for this city, from the Bermuda Royal Gazette of the 7th inst.

"MRS. WENTWORTH landed on our shores about 12 weeks since, with her Husband and four Children, all in the enjoyment of the first of blessings,—health, and seeming promise of many years of happiness. Her visit unfortunately occurred at a period when our usually healthy Island was heavily chastened by a baneful epidemic; and severely has she felt its due effects. She returns to her friends in Halifax, a deeply afflicted widow, and with but two of her children; the mortal remains of her husband and the other two now occupy one chamel house—the same disease having proved fatal to the parent and the children.—" How inscrutable are the ways of Providence."

"The Youngest Child, whose obituary appears in our paper to-day was named in commemoration of an important occurrence, the preservation of the Parents, Brother and Sisters from the wreck of the R. M. steamer Solway, at Corunna, in the month of April last. On which occasion much heroism was evinced by Mrs. Wentworth, and letters highly commendatory of her conduct, as well as that of her late Husband, were subsequently transmitted by the British Consul at Corunna, to the Secretary of State—and from the Lords of the Admiralty to the Board of Ordnance—an extract of which we copied into our Gazette about three months since.

"We trust, however, that the severe bereavements which Mrs. W. has experienced will not alone cause her to remember Bermuda; but that she has the gratifying conviction of leaving here many friends, who sincerely sympathised in her afflictions. Among them, we hope we are not taking an unwarrantable liberty in naming Charles Heslington, Esq., Collector of H. M. Customs, and his Lady, who immediately on the death of Captain Wentworth, invited Mrs. W. and family to take up their residence with them during their stay here.—Halifax Post.

(From the Montreal Courier, Nov. 20.)

We feel it quite a relief to be able to turn from the stormy path of politics to put on record our feeble testimony to the heroic conduct of those gallant fellows the Royals, during the disastrous shipwreck, which was so near depriving the country of their services. Many of our readers can form but a poor idea of the terrific scene of confusion and dismay, which must inevitably occur in the event of such an accident as this, on board a ship crowded with men, and many of them with their wives and families accompanying them. To say that the British soldier always behaves well in whatever trying circumstances he may be placed is, but to "repeat a thrice told tale!" still when a circumstance occurs like the present, we deem it the duty of those whose task it is to record the event, to make a few passing comments, in justice to the noble hearted men themselves, that they may see that their conduct is appreciated by their non-military fellow subjects; and that the public at large may know the character of those to whose arms the defence of the Empire is entrusted. We took on the danger of a pitched battle as trifling compared with that in which the Royals were placed under the iron bound coast of Cape Chat; in an engagement the soldier practices his own calling, that to which he has been trained with which he is familiar; he is on the land, his own element as it were; his officers are near him, in whose skill he has confidence, and whose orders he has been used to obey; but in an event of this kind, he feels out of his place; all is in confusion, orders are unheard amidst the wild tumult of the elements; and more than all this many of them are distressed and embarrassed by the presence of the females.—Our only wonder is how the officers are in any way able to preserve even the appearance of discipline. And to our minds nothing can present a clearer proof of the good spirit and exact discipline that prevails in our Service than the ready obedience yielded to the commands of their Officers on this occasion. We well remember a similar expression of public feeling on the occasion of the burning of the Kent, Indiaman, in the Bay of Biscay, when the soldiers on board behaved in as gallant and steady a way as these splendid fellows of the Royals have done. There are people who are quite ready enough to seize on every little instance of misconduct that the mauvais sujets in a regiment are very few, compared with the well behaved,—and a reference to the defaulters' books of the different companies will show that the same few "hard bargains" are perpetually running the round of the drill-ground and the guard room; this is a systematic mode of vilifying the army, whose loyalty they dread, resorted to by English Chartists; and we in our turn think it but right that the good deeds of the many shall be as well known as the evil deeds of a few.

The conduct of the officers has been above all praise; it is quite the fashion to sneer at them; and accuse them of idleness, pave strutting, and dissipation; but we should like to see any of the sneerers, swim, like Lieut. Lysons, through the ice cold breakers of the shores of the Gulf in a November night, and then start off all wet and freezing, to walk through the woods on the commencement of a journey of three hundred miles, to bring assistance to his suffering comrades.

Such conduct will not, we think, be lost on the soldier who now presides at the Horse Guards.—We are aware that no exact reward can be given for what is, strictly speaking, only a performance of duty, but even to be thanked in General Orders, is gratifying to men's feelings; and such an Order read at the head of every Regiment in the service is an incitement to others to follow so noble an example.

NIAGARA, Nov. 10th.—On Tuesday night last the citizens of Toronto marked their sense of the merits of the Hon. Robert Baldwin and the Hon. Francis Hincks, by burning these "eminent individuals" in effigy. Whether this conflagration is attributable to some particular interference with the rights and liberties of the whole or a portion of the people of Canada West, or to general misconduct, by the burners, we are not informed; but we understand that the citizens walked in procession, cheered lustily for Hon. Henry Sherwood, and groaned heartily for the brace of officials.—Chronicle.

TORONTO, Nov. 14th.—The sentence of Grace Marks, for the murder of Mr. Thomas Kinnear, has been commuted to imprisonment in the Penitentiary for life.—Colonist.

KINGSTON, Nov. 13th.—The secession of the fourteen members of the Legislative Council who protested against the re-introduction of the Seat of Government question, is likely to be productive of some inconvenience. There is barely a sufficient number of Legislative Councillors present to constitute a quorum (ten.) Sometimes there have been thirteen, sometimes twelve, and on one occasion, only eleven in the Council Chamber. In consequence of this, it is apprehended that the upper House may be compelled to suspend business, in which case the Parliament will be prorogued about the end of this month. It is, I suppose, in anticipation of this, that the Ministry are hurrying on Government measures as fast as possible. I heard it said that as soon as the house has been prorogued, Sir Charles Metcalfe will return to England. The cause assigned for this is, that a cancer in his face, which was supposed to have been eradicated, has broken out afresh. This may possibly be an additional reason for the anxiety of Ministers to get their measures through Parliament as soon as possible.

APPREHENSION OF A GANG OF FORGERS.—One of the most extensive gangs of coiners that ever infested any country and whose connections extend, it is feared, to persons in the most respectable classes of society, has just been broken up at Farnham, in the Townships, by the strenuous exertions of Messrs. John Jones, Chas. Starnes, Jas. M'Auly, and Simeon Marchessault. Four of the parties connected with this gang are now in Montreal Gaol, and several others escaped after being arrested, or absconded on hearing that their associates were taken. The names of the men in Gaol are William H. Clough, John M'Garty, Charles Jasmin, and William Fortan. It is ascertained that a regular company for the purpose of coining bad money, has for a long time existed in the Townships, and that it has been known and encouraged by some of the wealthiest persons in that part of the country. A forge and workshop for the manufacture of spurious money have been discovered in the woods near Farnham, and is supposed that immense quantities of this base metal have been circulated. The coin imitated is the Mexican dollar, and the resemblance is so close that it is said that a considerable quantity of the money has been received at the Banks.—Montreal Transcript.

SIR WALTER SCOTT ON BEAUTY.—In one of the delightful descriptions of Female Loveliness which adorn the pages of this interesting writer, alludes to a fragrant and balmy mouth and pearly set of teeth, as ranking among the first attributes of Feminine Beauty. The care and conservation therefore of ornaments, so precious and important, cannot fail to become objects of high interest, and our own experience induces us unhesitatingly to recommend "ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE" as an indispensible appendage of the Toilet of Beauty, and as calculated to heighten and preserve the advantages of "Balmy Breath," and "Pearly Teeth," in all their beauty and perfection.
