In the Queen vs. Munro, a motion was made at Osgoode Hall by Mr. Douglas Armour, on behalf of the defendant, for a certiorari to remove a summary conviction of the defendant for refusing to pay toll upon the London and Port Stanley road. The judgment was, however, appealed against, and the appeal has been heard and is standing for judgment before the court of appeal. Mr. Meek, for the lessees of the road, opposed the motion, but the learned judge thought the conviction should be removed, and granted a certiorari accordingly.
