On Wednesday evening there will be an entertainment in the hall under the directorship of J. Lahey.

EVERYTHING HUMMING AT MARYSVILLE.—Everything is on the hum at Marysville just now. Since the saw mill started again an extra force has been employed, and work has been carried on day and night, the night force quitting at twelve o'clock. An immense quantity of lumber is being handled in this way. The lath mill is also running full blast; and the cotton mill employes are putting in extra time. The factory for some days has been running until nine o'clock p. m., and will continue to do so for a while longer. The extra work is all on colored goods.—Gleaner.

THE ST. PIERRE'S PURSER MISSING.—A young man named Fordham, belonging to St. Pierre, who has been acting as purser of the steamer St. Pierre for some time, is said to be among the missing. On Wednesday evening he was seen around town and last evening he was trying to sell a pair of opera glasses for $6. Fordham, who is only about seventeen years of age, is said to have managed to become indebted to a number of individuals in this city, and to one the amount due is placed at $200 or $300. They now mourn his departure.—Halifax Echo.

HALIFAX NEWS VIA LONDON AND NEW YORK.—A New York paper prints a despatch from Halifax dated Oct. 9th, containing the statement that a very prominent resident of that city had been granted a divorce from his wife. The news is alleged to have come from London. The gentleman, whose name is given, holds a lofty and distinguished position and occupies a foremost place in society. It is further stated that the causes leading to the separation have long been a source of scandal in certain circles, and the despatch winds up with the assertion that the gentleman who has secured the divorce is soon to marry the beautiful daughter of a magistrate at Pictou, N. S.

NOTHING LIKE LEATHER.—On Saturday last John Wallace, of Kingsville was struck on the right side by a fourteen foot edging that was sent flying back by coming in contact with the saw. Mr Wallace was standing fifteen feet away from the saw when struck with the butt end of the edging and the force of the blow sent him ten feet from where he was standing. The edging fell on the floor. When picked up by his mates Mr. Wallace was senseless but soon returned to consciousness. Mr. Baker had him conveyed to his home where it was found that he was seriously bruised in the right groin and severely bruised about the right hip. Mr. Wallace thinks the edging would have gone through his body if he had not been wearing an apron made of thick belting leather, under which was another made of two thickness of heavy canvass.

Death of Rev. George Mortimer Armstrong.

The Rev. George Mortimer Armstrong, M. A., died at his late residence, 30 Wellington Row, in this city, on Saturday night He was born the 24th July, 1817, in Belize, Bay of Honduras, and was the younger son of the Rev. John Armstrong, who at that time was British chaplain at Honduras, and who afterwards was first rector of St. John's church, St. John, and then first rector of St. Jude's church, Carleton.

He was educated at King's college, London, and St. John's college, Cambridge university. Mr. Armstrong was ordained deacon by Bishop Strachan, of Toronto, Ont., in 1840, and in the same year was appointed curate of Louth, Ont. In 1842 he was made priest, and afterwards appointed rector of Louth. In November, 1844, he married Octavia, eighth daughter of Charles Bowman, of Hertfordshire, England. In 1847 he was appointed rector of Christieville, Quebec. 1851 Mr. Armstrong received the ad eundum degree of M. A. from Trinity College, Hartford, Conn. In 1852 the present parish of St. Mark was legally set off from the parish of St. John, and Mr. Armstrong was appointed the first rector of the new parish, which position he held until 1st October, 1887, when through declining health, he was compelled to resign and on doing so he received a flattering and warm expression of the opinion of his congregation in the shape of a testimonial signed by nearly three hundred of the pew-holders and church attendants, and also a retiring life annuity. He was succeeded by the Rev. John de Soyres, for whom he had the warmest affection and regard. His widow survives him, as do two sons, John Simeon Armstrong, C. E., and William H. Armstrong.

His funeral will take place from the Stone church tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock.

The services at St. John's church, yesterday, were conducted by the rector, Rev. Mr. de Soyres. The church was draped in black; in the morning the bell tolled, announcing the death of its beloved pastor of thirty-four years, who breathed his last on Saturday night at nine o'clock.

Mr. de Soyers was deeply affected; he took his text from Isaiah 26 chap. 3 v., "Thou shalt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed upon Thee, because he trusteth in Thee." In the course of his sermon, which was most touching, he referred to the closing scene of his life, when his voice, paralysed, unable to utter the words, he wrote, "Well and happy;" the last he used before he entered into rest.

At the evening service, the rector continued his course of sermons on the Old Testament Prophets, taking his text from Ezekiel 37 chap. 3 verse, "Son of man can these bones live? And I answered, O Lord God Thou knowest."

He referred at the outset to the fact that one idea must be uppermost with them all in that church today; but as this text came in the ordinary course of his services, he continued them, especially as they had been undertaken at the request, and with the approbation of his friend and brother now at rest. He then entered into an exposition of the text, deducing from central ideas, which it taught, closing with a description of that great receptacle of the mighty dead, Westminster Abbey, its national character and importance, in language powerful, as it was touching, and especially eloquent, when in closing he referred to our honored dead, and him whose memory would be long cherished in this community, on which his holy life had made so deep an impression.

The further consideration of his life and work he proposed taking up on another occasion.

The hymns and music were peculiarly appropriate, and rendered by the choir and large congregations on both occasions as befitted the services.

It is hoped that the former curates of St. Marks will be present to assist the Rev. Mr. de Soyres at the funeral service; these being Revs. Messrs. Raymond, Dobbs and Newnham. Arrangements have been made by the vestry, which held a meeting this morning, for the large congregation which will be present; the galleries will be open so that ladies need not fear want of accommodation.

The Late Captain Prichard.

At a special meeting of the St. John Anti-Tobacco association, held Oct. 11, 1889, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Whereas it has pleased Divine Providence to remove from us by death, our much esteemed president, the late Capt. Joseph Prichard, this association hereby places on record its high appreciation of the warm interest ever shown by him in its objects and purposes, an interest endorsed and strengthened by an irreproachable Christan character, and while deeply sympathizing with the widow and family of the deceased in the irreparable loss they have sustained, yet feel assured that though dead his influence will continue to speak on behalf of the many moral and religious institutions with which he was so long identified.

It was further resolved that copies of of the above be sent to each of the city papers for publication therein.

Signed on behalf and by order of the association.

A. J. MCFARLAND,
President pro tem.

A CONTEMPLATION OF THE GREAT AND MARVELLOUS WORKS OF GOD.

Rev. Dr. Macrae's Sermon in Saint Stephen's Church Yesterday Morning.

Rev. Dr. Macrae preached in St. Stephen's church yesterday morning, it being his first appearance in the pulpit since his sad affliction in the death of Mrs. Macrae by poison, the recent tragedy which has so moved the people of St. John. There was a large congregation present whose sympathy with the bereaved minister was expressed in the tears which welled from many eyes, and in the deeper emotions which filled the heart of every one in the church.

Dr. Macrae took for his text Revelations the 15th chapter and the 3rd verse, "And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints."

In beginning his discourse the preacher said: God makes what portions of his word he pleases a lamp unto his servant's feet and a light unto his path. What particular passage or passages they shall at one time or another find to be profitable to them for doctrine or reproof or correction depends upon his gracious spirit. My text seemed to come in this way to my mind and ear. The past few days it seemed to lay hold of me, as if it had peculiar claims to be meditated upon and possessed a special virtue to soothe and support me in my present situation. Over and over the words would ring to the inner ear, amid my desolation, "Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty." And along with this reiteration was also remembered this is what the inspired Seer was commanded and empowered to declare to be the song of the unseen. My hearers will bear with me in venturing these remarks of a personal matter to-day. I am not wrong in regarding all present as one family in feeling, a company or portion of the family in heaven and earth, named after the name of Christ. And it will not offend you if the words uttered should be less methodical in their strain than those customarily delivered from this pulpit, if they should partake more of the character of free meditation that of formal discourse.

In our ordinary moods and circumstances, my brethern, engaged each in his lawful calling, we may not have pressing upon our minds the thought of the working of God. We do not and we cannot be considering the Mighty One under the aspect in which he is here presented. We enjoy or use what of the resources of His Providence are placed, in a sense, at our disposal, without concious connexion of these resources with reflection on the universe as a whole, or with the Being by whose will and unceasing agency that universe is maintained in orderly progress. Trouble comes, comes suddenly, unexpectedly, like a thunder clap from a sky of noonday brightness, and instantly it is as if a veil were rent in twain and the hand of the Mighty One were seen visibly present. These moments in life carry concentrated in them the experiences of ages, and it is significant how, in such moments, the hearts of human beings, in all the ages are led to like themes and find consolation in what helps to calm in like directions. Thus in connexion with the suggestion of my text occurred thoughts of the writer of the noble psalm read in your hearing this morning, and you see how he was constrained in the day of his trouble to remember the works of the Lord, to remember his wonders of old. And you see how the remembrance emboldened him. His words read like these of a man thinking aloud. We can observe how his mind was insensibly carried away from the stress of the trouble, whatever it was, which for a time overwhelmed his spirit to spread itself over the facts known to him, among the wonderous doings of God in the past. In the light of that contemplation of the Lord's manifestations of his strength among the people and of his redemptive mercy to the sons of Jacob and Joseph, the particular trouble that afflicted the Psalmist's soul was dissipated, or seen in something like its true proportions, and his sense of tribulation, his temporary conviction that God had forgotten to be gracious, gave place to another of our order entirely different, to the renewed assurance of God's tender mercies. The cloud rolled away from his soul; the darkness was dispelled by the clear shining after the rain, the storm was succeded by a senseof infinite calm, and the God who appeared for a while to be a God in anger and who had forgotten to be gracious, was seen once more, and with more than former distinctness in the aspect of a good shepherd leading his people like a flock amid scenes of pastoral plenty and loveliness.

The preacher went on to enlarge on this theme and in applying it to the sad circumstances of the case, which was in the minds of every one, said:—

"There are aspects of those works which do constrain all wise and thoughtful human beings to meditate in silence, sometimes to long that the agony of suspense were over and that the day did dawn when the mystery shall be unfolded; that promised hereafter when we shal know what we know not now.

"Why any brother mortal should be so given over to himself as to be capable, sane or insane, of deeds that curdle the blood and thrill communities with a dismay of excitement? Why there should be substances created which afford the means of achieving tragedies more dire than those wrought by the pestilence that walketh in darkness, or the distruction that wasteth at noonday? Why the plans leading to such tragedies should be suffered to mature in poor misguided minds, and homes should be desolated and spectators should be summoned to gaze aghast at the spectacle of innocent victims? Why there should roll waves of fearful suspicion through human breasts and men should look askance upon whole classes of their brother men, for even a passing instant? Why frames fearfully and wonderfully made should be surrendered to even minutes of nameless and horrible agony? Why happy and useful lives should through this gateway of agony, be withdrawn from happiness and usefulness on earth? On what principle, if principle there be discoverable, suffering is distributed? We ask these questions in vain. God giveth not account of his matters. But we consider for a moment: The infant of yesterday; what knows he of the plans and purposes of his busy parent? And we, who are of yesterday, presume to review the dispensations of the ancient of days, beyond what he has been pleased to unfold: "Though he slay me," said the stricken patriarch of Uz, "yet will I trust in him." And we have what he could see only very far off, far off even when inspired to utter the great word, "I know that my Redeemer liveth," "God in Christ," "the song of the Lamb," the glory of the mystery of the cross.

In the music of that great anthem of love, the harshest discords of the present become inaudible and one day we feel assured even they too will be resolved into harmony with the song of the Unseen. It may be in any given instance, that the sacrifice of one may have been the means of averting desolation and anguish from may homes, and this being so, if it has been so, who are we that should reply against that God who spared not his own son but delivered him up for us all!

Brethern, the brief break in my ministry among you so abruptly and sadly terminated in renewing that ministry, it is with the feeling that more than heretofore your forbearance may be often put to the proof, the rough lack of acounsel of whose value the measure is thus supplied. Duty remains to incite to work all the difficulties of which were for so many years lightened by love. But he lives, our ever living Head to whom, as the departed trusted, so was it her desire and prayer that all should look in simple loyalty of confidence. And this is the work—the great and marvellous work—which it is my heart's desire and prayer that God may accomplish in you.

Then shall we stand before the Lamb, when earth and sense are fled and hear the Judge pronounce our name with blessings on our heads. Then shall we be able with full voice and with unfaltering tongue amid the glad reunions of the eternal mansions not only to sing with all God's redeemed ones, "Great and marvellous are thy works Lord God Almighty," but also, "Just and true are thy ways, thou King of Saints.

A Plea for Morning Shopping

Now that the Days are Shortening and it becomes necessary to resort to artificial light so early in the afternoon, we beg most respectfully to impress upon the minds of Ladies who have shopping to do (and what Lady has not?) the great advantages that the morning possesses over the afternoon for purchasing DRY GOODS, and submit the following as a few of our reasons for so doing:

The light is invariably better in the forenoon.

The stores are not so crowded.

The salesmen are not so rushed and consequently customers get better attention.

The Goods are in better condition and more accessible so that Ladies can get what they want and not waste their valuable time in waiting.

We always have something of special interest to show to the Ladies who come in the morning, when our salesmen have spare time to introduce the various novelties that are daily arriving for our autumn sales.

Our Establishment is open at seven o'clock in the morning and all salesmen are in their respective departments by eight, arranging the Goods for the day's trade, and bringing forward fresh Stock from the Wholesale Departments of our Warehouse, which must be done every day in order to keep the assortments of the various lines of Goods unbroken, and fill up the vacancies made by the previous day's sales.
