offences; under the coercion act 350 persons have been tried and sentenced. He demanded that the government produce official data in support of the alleged decreased offences. The returns showed while the administration of common law was easier in Ireland than Great Britain, the administration of law relating to agrarian crime had been transferred from the judges and juries to magistrates dependent upon the executive government. The coercion act in no wise strengthened the government in regard to the prevention of crime as distinguished from combinations. After declaring that he would oppose all attempts to increase the number of Irish proprietors by direct dealings between the treasury and individual cultivators, Gladstone reviewed the legislative proposals of the government and concluded by promising that the opposition would assist in forwarding the local government bill and other measures and in making the session fruitful of beneficial legislation.

Mr. William Henry Smith thanked Gladstone for his remarks concerning the foreign policy of the government, and said no great change was contemplated in the procedure rules. The government did not desire to secure a party triumph through such means, but desired for both sides of the house full liberty of discussion. At the same time it was necessary to stop obstruction to enable the house to transact its business in reasonable hours.

Parnell will move an amendment to the address censuring the Irish administration praying that the operation of the coercion act be stopped. An amendment will also be moved for the certain exclusion of Ireland from the local government bill.

Parnell's amendment will probably be reached Monday.

The new procedure rules will be laid on the tables Monday. It will be proposed to meet at 3 p. m and adjourn at 1 a. m., with automatic closure on controversy business at 12.30. The majority necessary to apply cloture rules will be reduced. The speakers power over disorderly members will be increased.

Mr. Smith's bill to create the office of under secretary for Ireland will provide for the payment of £1,000 salary.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

In the house of lords, Lord Crawford moved the address in reply to the queen's speech. The motion was seconded by Lord Armstrong. Lord Salisbury referred to the crown prince of Germany and said it was sad to learn that the heir of the great empire, so closely united with us in the bonds of sympathy, stood in a situation of peril everywhere exciting deep solicitude. Regarding the great issues of peace or war, now pending in Europe, Salisbury said he would not pretend to give fuller information than conveyed in the recent masterly speech of Bismarck. The Berlin treaty, as Bismarck showed, was in the nature of a compromise, highly acceptable at the time it was concluded to the English government and remained so still. England long had a policy in the east from which the government did not intend to depart, which they would consistently uphold. They had interested themselves four generations in the fate of southeastern Europe, and would not allow themselves more indifferent to those interests than generations before them. [Cheers.] He entirely shared the views of Bismarck in favor of peace.

LONDON, Feb. 9. At a meeting of Parnellites to-day Biggar, Deasy, Shiel and Carr were appointed whips. It was decided that Parnell should formulate an amendment to the Queen's address raising the question as to the administration of the crimes act. Parnell stated that the object of the land bill was to reduce the term of judicial revision of rents from 15 to 7 years; to give tenants further rights over improvement.

Parnell has given notice in parliament that he will introduce a bill to amend the Irish land law amendment act.

THE NEW VICEROY OF INDIA.

The appointment of our Governor General to the vice-royalty of India, the highest position in the gift of the British government, is a matter of congratulation to Canada. It shows the importance which is attached to the greatest of the colonies, in the mother country. It must also be a matter of great satisfaction to Lord Lansdowne to feel that he has been chosen to preside over the great Indian Empire, that he has been called to the position which Lord Dufferin, one of the greatest statesmen of his generation, has so ably filled. Lord Lansdowne will bring to his elevated position a comprehensive knowledge of the politics of his time, an unbiassed and cultured mind, and though perhaps lacking that degree of affability which his distinguished predecessor possessed, will yet win for himself in his eastern home, that love and affection of his people which has gone out towards him during his stay in this western land.

BAIRDED QUEENS.

Our valued contemporary The Sun appears to be very much alarmed in view of the probability of an expose being made respecting the means employed by Baird and his friends to steal Mr. King's seat. It has discovered, apparently with much surprise and indignation, that a large number of Queen's liberals, disappointed with the result of the voting in their parishes, and positive that there had been a manipulation of ballots, are making solemn declaration that they voted for Mr. King, and the number who make these declarations is far in excess of the number of votes recorded for Mr. King Our contemporary foresees a very awkward position of affairs for Baird and its friends. It is not unnatural, therefore, for it to feel alarmed, and affect indignation over the course now being pursued by the liberals of Queens.

We trust that our friends in Queens will push the charges against Baird and his friends to their extreme end. They have made a good beginning. They have taken the proper preliminary steps for a thorough investigation, and therefore a fitting expose. Fraud must be exposed and the perpetrators punished, no matter what the cost. Until this is done we need not expect purity in election, nor success to liberalism. The Queens liberals have an important case. A just verdict has been stolen from them and a fradulent one substituted They know the agencies and the very creatures that brought this about. The country looks to them to protect their rights, and to do service to their cause, and provincial friends are prepared to assist them.

A SPURIOUS COGNAC.

Many of the youths who frequent the open bars of the city will feel somewhat chesp when they find that after all their efforts to show their friends that they can drink brandy without making a face over it, that they have been drinking an abominable liquid distilled from potatoes in Germany and imposed upon them as pure cognac. An exposure has recently been made of the frauds which have so long been successfully practised. It has been shown that the so called pure cognac is merely the product of the potato fields owned by the distillers in Hamburg and that to give the fluid a proper flavor a small percentage of grape alcohol has been added. We don't know that the spurious article is any more injurious than the pure cognac, but it is a pity that youths should have lost all their pains in their struggles to show their chums and those more advanced in age, that they were drinking a delicious beverage instead of an abominable spirit. It is of course fair to suppose that what has been imposed upon British dealers has been forced upon Fredericton sellers.

The authorities in France and Germany appear to have been as unsuccessful in putting a stop to this species of fraud as have been the authorities in Fredericton to suppress the liquor traffic. The French officers have not yet been able for the ingenuity of the cheats, and appear very little concerned as to whether they are successful or not. The London Standard, referring to the matter, says: "Prosecutions in France are rare, while the frauds are continuous. The dealers in brandy districts do as they please, for the authorities are in no way concerned in the prevention of swindles on the British purchaser." There seem after all, unfortunately, to be other places than Fredericton where the law with regard to the sale of liquors is not enforced.

FAIR TRADE GETS A SET BACK.

The Restrictionists of England, who had thought that the present was a most opportune time for springing their Fair Trade movement have got a set back from which they will not soon recover. The London Times in dealing with the movement, says:—

"Not only have the leaders of the Liberal Unionists, Lord Hartington, Mr. Bright and Mr. Goschen, entered a protest, promptly and energetically, against a mischievous delusion, but Lord Salisbury and the principal members of his Ministry, including Mr. Chaplin, the peculiar champion of British agriculture have disavowed the movement set on foot by some ambitious mediocrities at Oxford. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, addressing his constituents at Bristol on Tuesday night as an independent Conservative, declared that in his opinion the adoption of Fair trade and Protectionist theories, 'if this were possible, would only aggravate our present difficulties.' What is to be feared, indeed, is not the deliberate acceptance of Protection by any body of well informed and reflecting public men, but the adoption of it, without conviction, and in the teeth of the most solemn declarations, by politicians in pursuit of a majority. It is when the masses of the people are suffering from such depression as that which has weighed on the country of late years that they are open to the influences of political and economical quakery and in such a condition of the popular mind it requires a certain rigidity of virtue on the part of the leaders of parties to refrain from offering what is believed to be pernicious, but is known to be pleasing to many.

"To resort to the nostrums of Fair Trade and Protection would only obstruct the process of relief by restricting our intercourse with the markets of the world. In economics as well as mechanics, to increase freedom of action and abate friction are the conditions of effective working."

THEY LEAVE THE COUNTRY,

Two of the members of Norquay's government, Mr. Hamilton who was attorney general, and Dr. Wilson, who held the portfolio of Board of Works, have decided to leave Winnipeg and reside in St. Paul. Thus it ever is. As soon as a tory is deprived of the emoluments of office, he shakes the dust of the place which formerly supported him, from off his feet, and seeks out another where monied positions may perhaps be found for him. There is no chance now for an easy time of it in Manitoba. Men must work for what they get. That intense love of country which the typical tory is so fond of parading is seen in its true light when he is stripped of the spoils of office.

BETWEEN LIFE AND DEATH.

A Vermont Woman's Strange Experience While on the Mysterious border Land.

An associated press reporter has investigated the case of Mrs. Lois Bishop, of Readsboro, Vt, who was reported to have come to life a few days ago after having been thought dead by her friends. Her home is with her son, Dexter Bishop, who lives about six miles from Readsboro village.

Mrs. Lois Bishop has been rather feeble since September, when she fell hurting her hip. Of late she has had difficulty in breathing while laying down, and has been obliged to sit up most of the time. It was while sitting thus in an upright position that, calling the family around, she bade them farewell, and then to all appearances died. She was laid out on the bed, her hands and arms turned purple, and her feet become cold. After continuing in that position for a few hours she showed signs of returning consciousness and a quantity of wine poured between her lips revived her, since which time she has been improving.

After recovering she said that she had heard a voice saying, "Mother," and that it was that of her son Franklin, who died in the West about fifty years ago. She also heard a voice saying, "Lois." She said, "What?" and then continued: "I have been greatly afflicted." This speech and the word were spoken while family thought her dead, and the wine was then given her.

The last voice she heard was, she said, that of her husband, who died thirty-five years ago. She is not a Spiritualist, and never was a firm believer in the Bible. The family is one of the oldest and most reputable in the town, and has lived in its present place of residence for more than sixty years.

LETTER FROM BALTIMORE.

A New Brunswicker's Impression of the "Monumental City."

To the Editor of THE GLEANER,

SIR,—As I had never seen a letter from this part of the United States in your valuable paper, and as I thought one might interest some of your many subscribers, I have concluded to give you a short description of the city.

Baltimore is situated on one of, if not the finest, bays on the eastern coast of the Atlantic. At present it has a population of from 400,000 to 500,000, but when extended (which it soon will be) it will contain about 150,000 more people.

Baltimore is the business centre between the north and south, and consequently is one of the busy towns of the east. It is well called "The Monumental City," as you see a monument at almost every turn, the largest of which is the Washington monument. It might also be called a city of medical colleges, as there are a great many here of all grades, the best of which I consider to be the "Baltimore University School of Medicine," on Bond street, near Baltimore, and I would advise any young man wishing to receive a practical medical education to correspond with Prof. L. K. Wiley, the Dean, who will gladly answer any letter to him. We also have a great many churches, common schools, and arts colleges. Among the last we have the John Hopkins University, which is one of the finest in America. In running up the whole I think it is one of the finest cities on the Atlantic seaboard, as the climate is delightful and the thermometer never gets below zero and seldom above 100 degrees, and as yet we have had but little snow, about 4 or 6 inches, which does not come to stay, but then there are no ice rinks or toboggan slides, etc, so you see it has its draw backs.

Yours truly,

H. B. T.

Don't

let that cold of yours run on. You think it is a light thing. But it may run into catarrh. Or into pneumonia. Or consumption.

Catarrh is disgusting. Pneumonia is dangerous. Consumption is death itself.

The breathing apparatus must be kept healthy and clear of all obstructions and offensive matter. Otherwise there is trouble ahead.

All the diseases of these parts, head, nose, throat, bronchial tubes and lungs, can be delightfully and entirely cured by the use of Boschee's German Syrup. If you don't know this already, thousands and thousands of people can tell you. They have been cured by it, and "know how it is, themselves." Bottle only 75 cents. Ask any druggist.
