HINTS BY MAY MANTON

7887 Fancy Blouse, 34 to 42 bust.

WITH LONG OR THREE-QUARTER SLEEVES, WITH OR WITHOUT POCKETS.

The blouse that is made with corded edges is a new and smart one. This pretty little model can be finished in that way or with plain hems but the cords are so pretty and easy to insert that every woman will surely want them. There is the square yoke that makes such a feature of the season with pretty fullness below and, if liked, the pockets can be used but they are not necessary. In this case, the center front portion is of the material but a pretty effect can be obtained by making it of some pretty all-over material or of banding. Such a blouse can be made from the soft silks quite as well as from the pretty voiles and familiar muslins. In the illustration, white crepe de chine is trimmed with collar and cuffs of moiré. The long sleeves are gathered into cuffs that are finished with turned over portions but the three-quarter sleeves are without gathers and are finished with plain cuffs.

For the medium size, the blouse will require 3 yards of material 27, 24 1/2 yards 36 or 13 yards 44 inches wide, with 25 1/2 yards 27 inches wide for the collar and over portions of the cuffs and 1/2 yard 44 inches wide for the center front if contrasting material is used.

The pattern of the blouse 7887 is cut in sizes from 34 to 42 inches bust measure. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of 35 cents.

FIVE THOUSAND ORANGEMEN MARCHED IN DRENCHING RAIN

But Sky Cleared and Afternoon Program Was Carried Thru—Mayor Hocken Says the Orange Order is Broad Enough to Admit People of Any Faith.

Despite the day's terrific rainstorm over 5000 Toronto Orangemen paraded from Queen's Park to the Exhibition grounds Saturday afternoon. Had the weatherman not said his heaviest rainstorm of the year was the Glorious Twelfth, there is little doubt but that Saturday's demonstration would have eclipsed any Orange celebration yet witnessed in Toronto. Just when the mustering at Queen's Park was assuming enormous proportions the rain came down in sheets, and hundreds who proposed marching in line ducked for shelter, and those who did not leg it for home witnessed the parade from the shelter of doorways or umbrellas. On the way down Yonge street practically half the parade left the street and rushed for the umbrella stores, and after the avalanche had passed, not a dealer on Yonge street had an umbrella left, except in the very high priced fancy ones.

"We were worrying about the tremendous stock of umbrellas we had on hand," said one dealer afterwards, "but if we had had twice as many we could have cleaned the lot out to the Orangemen on Saturday. They rushed in here by the score, threw down their money, grabbed an umbrella and rushed back in line. The lowest priced umbrella I have in the store now is $5.00."

At that it was a wonderful exhibition of the enthusiasm with which Orange principles are viewed in this city; the route was lined with thousands, altho the storm assumed such proportions that an umbrella afforded but meagre protection. The parade was five and a half miles long, and took an hour and a half to pass. Last year's parade numbered 7000.

Bad For Drums
The rain played havoc with the drums. Drummers on Saturday had to confine their Orange enthusiasm within certain limits; the regulation Orange Day round arm swing meant a broken drum head, and more than one was put hors de combat.

With the True Blues in the lead, followed by the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association, county Orange lodge officers, Orange Young Britons, and visiting Orange lodges, the parade proceeded from Queen's Park, along Grosvenor street, down Yonge, along Queen to Dufferin and down to the Exhibition. No less than fifty-four bands were distributed thru the procession.

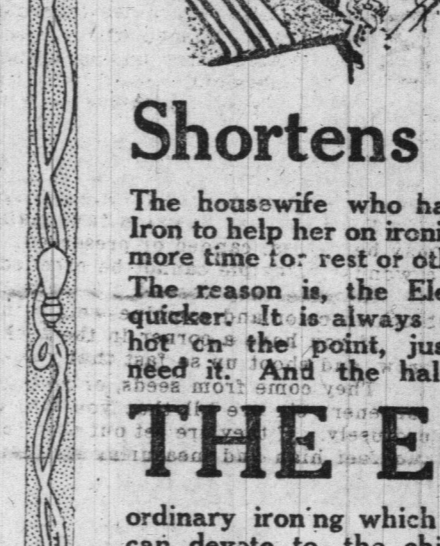

Roughly Handled
Detective Miller was somewhat roughly handled by Orangemen in front of the city hall, in attempting to break thru the lines with a prisoner.

Federal Troops Capture Monclova
Commander Col. Maas Takes Town After Two Hours' Hard Fighting.

MEXICO CITY, July 12.—The Town of Monclova, in Coahuila, was captured by the federal commander, Col. Maas, after two hours' hard fighting yesterday, according to government advices.

No estimate of the dead is given, but it is reported that rebels met with large losses. Monclova has been the headquarters of Venustiano Carranza, the leader of the constitutionalist rebels. Colonel Maas' forces numbered 2500, the rebels, the government estimates at 4000. The artillery is credited with an important part in the battle, at the conclusion of which the rebels fled to the north in disorder, the federal cavalry harassing their rear.

SOCIETY HOUSEKEEPING

The Orange Association has given the ideal of a great united Protestant church. This ideal is strong in Montreal, where its greatest need is felt. Altogether there has been development co-operation in solving the social problems of the day.

The future of the Orange Association and its possibilities will not be measured by strife and battle, but by answering faith in God. Controller McCarthy declared. He concluded with the following stanza:

Our Father God, from out whose hand We meet today united, free And loyal to our land and Thee, To thank Thee for the era done, And trust Thee for the coming one.

The Supreme Grand Master

The Orange Association and its principles, "was the subject of the speech by Lt. Col. Scott of W. D. McPherson, Grand Master. The form of the Orange Association is broad enough for even Roman Catholics to join, and the Grand Master was "cheered." "It is broad enough for every man, no matter what his nationality, sect or creed, to stand upon, and to stand upon it, we must have in one ring, one empire, one school, one language. Up to twenty years our association was not aggressive, but today it has a determined front against the enlargement of the privileges of the Roman Catholics when they go beyond equal rights."

"We Orangemen have no special aim to grind," Col. Scott asserted. "Our endeavor is to help in the building up of Canada and maintaining equal rights to all." (Applause.)

The Mayor in his address upheld the right of every creed and class to follow their own principles.

"We say to those who hold contrary views, 'We cannot see just as you do, but we are able to admire manifestations of sincerity in whatever form they may be given. In this great City of Toronto I hope we will always be able to boast that equal rights are granted to every class and creed. If the Orange Association fails to teach that lesson, both by precept and example, it will fail in its mission. If the order has a better gospel to preach—as it claims—its members must give proofs of it by exhibiting broader tolerance, a more charitable spirit and Christian kindness to those who are not of the household of its faith."

"Because the members of the order are doing this more generally than ever before, our organization is winning the respect of the great unaffiliated public. I would impress upon you to not to abate one jot or tittle of your fervor for the cause in which you are enlisted. Rather, I urge you to greater diligence in perfecting your understanding of your avowed principles, because I know that a broader and cleaner vision of the cause will make you better citizens, better neighbors and better men."

The outstanding principles of the Orange Association are reverence to God, loyalty to king and country and human brotherhood as taught by Christ," said Controller McCarthy in opening his address.

"That the Orange Association has bound more and more firmly together Canadians of the Protestant faith is a part of the history of our country, and so this binding of the Protestants may be largely attributed the onward march of the nation."
